For twenty-five years BRISSON FUNERAL HOME has rendered dedicated service to the families of Sanford and the surrounding communities.

For most of these years we provided 24 hour a day ambulance service. This service was terminated in 1966 as a result of a Federal wage and hour law. At that time a private Ambulance Service was ready to assume responsibility for all ambulance needs of Sanford provided that all Funeral Homes terminate their ambulance service. The local funeral homes agreed before the City Commission to terminate ambulance service as of May 31, 1966. BRISSON FUNERAL HOME honored this agreement and did terminate service May 31, 1966. Others did not honor this agreement and as a result the private ambulance service could not begin their operation.

Much has been said since 1966 about Moral Obligation and duty to the community, etc. We have realized all this time that our primary responsibility is to provide service of the highest quality at the time of death. We have tried very hard to assume this responsibility without fanfare or publicity.

We wish to continue with dedicated service to the families of Sanford and the surrounding communities.

Vice president Hubert H. Humphrey, now backed by an aroused and formidable President Lyndon B. Johnson and enjoying the present approval of Senator Eugene J. McCarthy, liberal Democrat of Minnesota, is driving for a last-minute win in the race for the presidency which ends on Nov. 5.

As this comment is made there are four days to go and the political scene-international and national -is in such a fiux that only the trend as it now exists can be properly used as a subject. In a year that has already produced enough upheavals to make the assumptions of today illogical, even unbelievable on the morrow, there yet remains a political mainstream which is exerting its pressures on all three candidates for the presidency.

Strongest and most persistent of the currents in this mainstream is that coming from our Asian policy which was a headline issue in 1960 when the then Vice President Richard M. Nixon was the GOP presidential hopeful-as he is today-and the off-Formosa

As we write, the possibility of an end of the bombing of North Vietnam and the start of realistic peace talks exists. Blame for this fighting has been a prime argument basic to the GOP campaign. Voters who are weighing their ballots carefully

President and Vice President?

You and every American would normally know the answer to this question. But these are not normal times, and the question of how and under what conditions the next President and Vice President of the United States will be chosen should be a matter of utmost concern to each American voter.

The importance of the popular vote on Nov. 5 looms ever larger with the reported possibility of an electoral stalemate, i.e., where neither Nixon, Humphrey nor Wallace receives on election day the 270 electoral votes needed to be elected. How then would a President and Vice President be chosen? Either by the electors in each of the 50 states or the House of Representatives would elect a President, and the Senate a Vice President.

Procedure for each of these methods is spelled out in the Constitution. It is further governed by laws and historic precedent. Nevertheless, the varying possibilities of what might happen are subjects of extensive speculation, intrigue, political pressure and general confusion.

Your Vote Important

Perhaps this explanation will help you appreciate the importance of your one vote on Nov. 5. Should no Presidential candidate receive the required 270 votes on Nov. 5, the United States-for the first time since 1824-would be without a President-elect and a Vice-President-elect to take office on Jan. 20. The election would have ended in a stalemate-a deadlock! Nothing could be done officially to break the deadlock for at least 40 days, or until Dec. 16 when the electors, chosen by the voters of each state and the District of Columbia, meet in their respective jurisdictions to vote for the President and Vice his state on Nov. 5.

Would Electors Switch?

Unofficially, and behind the scenes between Nov. 6 and Dec. 16, attempts might Unofficially, and behind the scenes between Nov. 6 and Dec. 16, attempts might be made to change the vote contrary to popular wishes expressed at the polls. Normally, the electors' vote would be perfunctory. However, the existence of an 1 electoral stalemate would center national and international attention on their every action. If the electors voted the same as their respective states (only 16 states require this), the Presidential election would remain deadlocked. The scaled results of the electors' vote, state by state, would be officially reported to a joint session of the Senate and House of the 91st Congress on Jan. 6.

270 Electora: Votes Needed

If the joint session were advised that no Presidential candidate had at least 270 electoral votes needed for election, then the Senate would retire to its chambers to elect a Vice President from the two candidates having the highest number of electoral votes. Two-thirds of the Senate would constitute a quorum, with 51 votes required for election. Each senator would cast one vote per ballot, the Vice President in case of

The House would begin balloting immediately to elect a President from among the three candidates having the highest number of electoral votes. In the House eac state, regardless of size or the number of Representatives, would have but one vote per ballot. Two-thirds of the states (34) would have to be represented to constitute quorum. The votes of at least 26 states would be required for election. The vote per state would be determined by a caucus of its House delegation, the majority ruling. If its delegation were evenly divided and unable to reach a decision, that state would cast no ballot.

Minority Can Win!

It is possible that 26 states with a population of 21 million people could outvote 24 states with a total population of 149 million. It is also possible for 76 Represent-atives from 26 states to elect a President in a House of 435 Representatives from the

The balloting would continue, without interruption of other business, until a choice of President is made. The House in 1891 cast 36 ballots before electing Thomas Jefferson. In 1826, John Quincy Adams was elected on the first ballot over Andrew Jackson even though Jackson had received the greater popular and electoral vots. With the House electing a President and the Senate a Vice President, it is pos-sible for each to be of a different political party. This would depend on the political makeup of the Senate and the House.

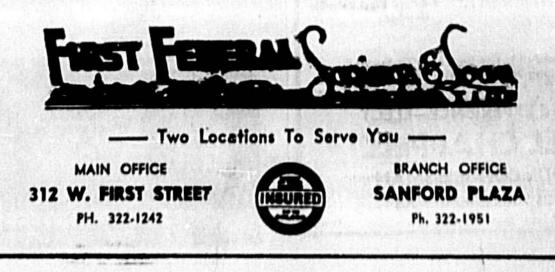

"Acting President" ? ?

If by inauguration day, Jan. 20, no one has been elected President, then the Vice President elected by the Senate would be sworn in and would be "Acting President" until the House did elect a President. If the possibility of either unrestricted electors or the House/Senate electing the President/Vice Presi-ident is not sufficient to arouse in each voter the desire to choose for himself on Nov. 5 the heads of state for the next four years, then consider the effect on our national economy-on our national and wori prestige-on domestic and world conditions IF: • On Nov, 5, the United States of America-the world's greatest democracy-failed to elect a Presiden and Vice President? The United States were without a President- and Vice-President-elect for the period Nov. 6-Dec 16, Nov. 6-Jan. 6, Nov. 6-Jan. 20, or beyond? Without knowing the answers to these questions, it is not difficult to imagine what chaotic condition might prevail—and their effect.

Whatever happens on Nov. 5 or beyond rests squarely with you and all other American voters.

It's Tim's move, and he is taking a long time thinking it over. In chem, if you're a good player, you don't play quickly. If you do, your opponent may outwit you.

Military strategy, they say, is based on the rules of chess. So are many of the "higher games" in business and finance. Yet, when it comes to life itself, the rules of chess apply i- only a limited way. In life, you can't be totally chjective. You can't exist on logic alone

The Church teaches that though we surely need logie in order to live successfully. we also need compassion, tolerance, love, understanding, and the strength that comes with faith.

Although life is not a game, we must have the help and strength of the Church to discover those rules that will determine our ultimate destiny.

By DONNA ESTES Eighty five to 30 per cent turnout at the 33 Seminole County poils tomorrow was predicted today by Supervisor of Elections Mrs. Camilla Bruce. Some 25,474 persons are qualified to cast ballots in the contest tomorrow for offices ranging from that of President of the United States to constables of the various districts. In addition, some 428 new residents of the county are elighle to vote in the presidential contest only through their filing and approval of special applications. More than 2,000 absentee ballots are expected to be turned over to the supervisor of elections by the 5 p.m. deadline

Mrs. Bruce again urged businessmen to give their employes time off to vote at other than the peak hours in early moraing and late afternoon and evening.

Mrs. Bruce further reminds voters to carry their voter registration identification cards with them to the poils to be used in the event their eligibility to vote is challenged. Sample ballots for the election have been placed at all city halls and postolfices throughout the county for the convenlence of voters wishing to study them before tomorrow.
