Land Purchase Review Finds No Wrongdoing

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Acting Department of Natural Resources Director Jay Landers says he has reviewed some of the land purchase projects being investigated by the FBI and has found no evidence of "intentional wrongdoing" on the part of the staff.
In every instance, says Landers, the state got full value for its money. Landers was named to run the department after the governor and cabinet suspended Director Harmon Shields, reportedly the target of an FBI probe of alleged payoffs in the $240 million land acquisition program. Shields has denied any wrongdoing and no charges have been filed in the probe.

Legal Advisor Irks Lawyers

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Can a lay person charge for dispensing advice and preparing simple divorce papers for people who otherwise could not afford an attorney?

That question will be decided by the Florida Supreme Court which on Friday heard oral arguments in the case of the Florida Bar versis Rosemary Furman. The court is deciding the case since it handles administrative matters of the Bar.

For several years Ms. Furman, of Jacksonville, has helped women draw up the papers to initiate simple uncontested divorce proceedings. She charges $50 a crack, far less that the average attorney.

The Florida Bar says Ms. Furman i practicing law without a license and wants the Supreme Court to keep her from doing so.

Virus Or Poison Killed Tots

ATLANTA (UPI) — A mysterious illness that killed 60 Italian infants and infected 400 others may be caused by a viral infection or possibly an envorinmental toxin, a federal health official said Friday.

National Center for Disease Control epidemiologist Dr. William Baine, a specialist in discovering the source of diseases, said also more than one illness may be involved in the rash of infant deaths in Naples, Italy. He said, however, some type of virus is the leading suspect while an environmental poison was the second strongest possibility

Polio Vaccinations Set

ATLANTA (UPI) - Federal health officials have begun massive vaccination campaigns in two mid-Atlantic states after a 22-year-old woman from an Amish community in Franklin County, Pa., was stricken by paralytic polio.
Dr. Larry Schonberger, a virologist at the national Center for Disease Control here, said Friday over 4,100 persons in Pennsylvania and Maryland had been inoculated against the crippling disease in the past two days.

In addition, Schonberger said health authorities in Ohio, Vermont, New York and Ontario, Canada, had been advised to review their polio situation and increase their sur-

Elementary Student Tests Hit By Parents, Teachers

"PERSONALLY, I'D LIKE TO SEE REPORT CARDS BANNED — I FEEL STRONGLY THAT MANY OF THEM ARE UNSUITABLE READING FOR which elementary students are tested in Seminole County have planned a meeting to discuss their complaints and eventually develop recommendations to revise that system.

Spreading the effort is Nancy Perryman, the mother of two Bear Lake Elementary students, who has termed the Feb. 19 meeting a "hash session between teachers and parents." The levels test is used to determine how a first through fifthgrade student is progressing in math, language and reading replacing the conventional promotions from first grade to the second grade, etc. Now a student is in the first year or second year of school but is at different levels according to his abilities in the three areas. So, a student can be at one level in math and another level in language. Going from one level to the next depends on whether he or she passes that particular test for the level. The test was given on a pilot basis last year and this school year is being used countrywide during the fourth and ninth week, to the approximately 16,000 elementary school students.

However, Mrs. Perryman of 3141 Cecelia Drive in South Seminole County says there are changes which need to be made in the test and how it is given to students.

"I don't think the leveling test should be the only criteria used but there should be some teacher judgment used as well," she said. Teachers should have the discretion to give the tests whenever they feel the student is ready to move to a different evel instead of having to just give it the fourth and ninth week."

"If parents have some idea they could be more supportive and ask the students if they understand the work and offer support at

The idea for the meeting began several weeks ago when "I started hearing complaints from fellow parents and teachers and I started calling around and found there was widespread

She said she has contacted people at almost all the elementary schools except three and expects to have at least two representatives from each school at the most all the elementary tatives from each school at the meeting. At the meeting, Mrs. Perryman will encourage parents and teachers to "Go home and back to the school, talk with the other people at the school and then come up with suggestions which can be submitted to the county and the state.' Mrs. Perryman has also met with Gene Grooms, executive director of the Seminole Education Association (SEA) to express their ideas and found him supportive, she said. The meeting was arranged with Grooms and not administrators because, "We wanted to get the teachers point-of-view and he represents the teachers," she said. "The teachers also deal with the children every day and the administrators do not and probably don't have the understanding the teachers do," Mrs.

Several changes have recently been made in the levels test as a result of a meeting between Superintendent William Layer and an eight-member committee appointed by Laver to study the test. Mrs. Perryman, a member of the school PTA, also said parents to teachers at the school and eventual establishment of an area at should have the opportunity to read the test. "I have never seen each elementary school where information on the different skills test and I think if percents have that opportunity it could required on the test will be available.

Firebrand Vs. Reason In Iran

When the plane bearing Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini from his 15-year-long exile in Paris touched down in Tehran, it was as though a firebrandhad been dropped into a tank of gasoline.

Some two million Iranians surged out for a frenzied welcome for their highest holy man whose leadership they had followed through months of revolutionary violence that toppled the ruling Pahlavi dynasty.

The moment he arrived on Iranian soil Khomeini quickly confirmed the worst of Western fears about his intentions: He threatened to arrest Premier Bakhtiar and his government unless they surrender control to him and he pledged to drive out foreigners - particularly Americans declaring "I beg God to cut the hands off all those foreign advisers.'

He told his disciples that the United States had tricked Iran.

To his credit Bakhtiar has stood his ground, trying to inject reason and common sense into the equation. He has called for general elections to let the people themselves decide what and whom they want to govern them. We applaud Mr. Bakhtiar.

The only real barrier for Khomeini now is the military, particularly the senior officer corps and elite units such as the Imperial Guard.

The danger of civil war arises from a plausible conclusion by some in in the armed forces that they have more to lose by surrendering to Khomeini than by fighting him. As staunch defenders of the shah's regime, the

'Gas Wars' New Meaning: The Most Not The Least

A "gas war" used to mean a competitive battle between service cents a gallon by opting to pump the gas themselves rather than stations that brought the price of gasoline down to rock bottom. Today it's a race to see who can hike prices the fastest and a UPI survey reveals jumps as high as 4 cents a gallon in one day. In Tampa a large independent station hiked prices a penny Saturday, then another 4 cents Thursday — to 65.9 for regular, 70.9 for unleaded and 72.9 for premium at the self-service pumps. gas sales alone to stay in business. SHS Students Answer Teen-Age Pregnancy Query

By LEONARD KRANSDORF Herald Staff Writer

Do you think teen-age pregnancies are a rarity? If you do, think again. It is estimated that half of all U.S. teen-agers are sexually active and more than one million girls under 20 get pregnant each year, according to the National Alliance for Optional Parenthood And Seminole students seem to be aware of how sexually active teenagers are, at least according to a Seminole High School health class surveyed today. One question asked of the class was: Do you think teen-age pregnancies are rare? "No, teen-age pregnancies are not unfamiliar because if you look around school, one out of 20-30 girls is pregnant,"

Another 16-year-old girl said, "No way! Half the people you see are either pregnant or have been pregnant and will not get pregnant' and then they turn around and get pregnant," said a 16-year-old girl. "Most teen-agers do not think ahead," said a 17-year-old female. "Some just think it's fun," said a 15-year-old

"At this age, boys have a feeling of proving themselves and the girl wants to have a boy to feel wanted and do things because of love," said one 16-year-old female. said one 16-year-old girl, when asked if pregnancies are There were mixed reactions from the students as to one 18-year-old girl. "Some of my friends are shy about it. some don't care who knows, so it's both ways, really." "Most of my friends don't talk about it, we don't see why we should share this information. We feel its personal," said one 16-year-old girl expressing another point of view. Some of the students believe the fault rests with the

"Yes, the parents say how bad it is, and it just makes the child go out and try it more," said the 17-year-old girl. "If the mothers weren't so strict, then I don't think most of the children would go out and get pregnant," said

Another 17-year-old girl said, "I think the parents should talk to their children more about sex and the do's and don'ts. If children understand the chances of pregnancy, then maybe they will stop and think. Parents should be more strict."

"From the parents' view, being strict on a child is the best way of her not getting pregnant," said one 18-yearold girl. "But, on the teen-agers view, she has not been in the world and she wants to know what goes on, then she has several contacts with some male and gets pregnant. Then when she tells mom, she figures it is because she has let her out of the house and can't trust her, but it's the mother's fault for withholding her," the girl added.

However, a different view was shared by another 16year-old girl: "I know of some parents who are very bad on their children and so they do things to get back at their parents. But for me, if I wanted to do this I could, but I don't feel it is needed. I think more about school and life
