

UN BATTLE IN REALTY OFFICE ENDS IN DEATH

Baltimore Milliner Claims He Will Be Admired When Story Of Affair Comes Out

Troubles Started With Realty Deal As Result Of Scrape 4 Persons Are Dead And One Is Injured

NEW YORK, Sept. 7. (INS)—When the real story comes out, I'll be admired by everybody for what I did in protection of my family.

This was all Charles Bernstein, proprietor of a woman's apparel shop in Baltimore, Md., would say today as he was locked up at police headquarters on a murder charge after having "shot up" a New York City law office resulting in the death of four persons and injuries to a fifth.

From other sources, the police were informed that the shooting was the result of a petty real estate transaction involving only a few hundred dollars. Bernstein acted under the belief he was being wronged in the deal, it was said.

The shooting occurred in the law offices of Bijur, Hertz & Steinberg. The dead are: Charles Herkowitz, 38, a real estate broker with offices in Fifth Avenue; Victor J. Steinberg, 29, a member of the firm in whose offices the shooting took place; and Bernstein's lawyer, Henry C. Cohen, 40, lawyer and Robert McGroarty, 29, a stage manager, both of whom were shot in the hallway. Bernstein, sporting a gun in hand after him, Bernstein, the police were told, sent a bullet into the fleeing Herkowitz's back.

Then Bernstein turned and shot Cohen three times. Gun in hand, he fled. Steinberg's body was found in the street. Before he hit the pavement, it struck McGroarty, the stage manager, and crumpled off Steinberg, another pedestrian.

McGroarty sustained a fractured spine and it was said in Bellevue hospital today that he is not expected to live. Steinberg suffered shock and bruises but refused to jump in a panic to escape medical aid.

It is not known whether Steinberg's bullets or whether he was pushed over the ledge.

Expect Willis Case Will Be Given To Jury Before Night

GREENVILLE, S. C., Sept. 7.—(INS)—The long life trial of Mrs. Ethel Willis and Deputy Townsend for the midnight murder June 11 of the former's husband, Sheriff Sam D. Willis, was fast drawing to a close today.

Arguments were commenced in the celebrated murder trial shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, after the state had offered six rebuttal witnesses and the defense lawyer, Attorney General John M. Daniel, of South Carolina, made the first argument for the prosecution.

By agreement between state and defense counsel, each side will devote only four hours to its summation. Four attorneys will make speeches for each side.

As Judge M. L. Bonham was not expected to consume more than 20 minutes, in his charge to the jury, the case will probably be in the hands of the jury at an early hour tonight.

Gold Is Reported Found Near Tampa

TAMPA, Fla., Sept. 7. (INS)—Brookville, a few miles northeast of Tampa, was excited over the possibilities of further gold discoveries today. Fifty citizens have organized a company known as the Florida Research Company, Inc., to begin operations on a tract of land here. Gold in small quantities was discovered several months ago by James McDonald, who sent samples to Tallahassee. The report of the assayers showed that the rock contained $4 worth of gold for every ton, and other efforts produced rock yielding $8 of gold per ton.

SEARCH IS BEGUN FOR STRANGER IN PETTY MYSTERY

Investigators Discover That Petty Had Street Fight With Mysterious Stranger In Few Hours Before He Was Slain

REIDSVILLE, N. C., Sept. 7.—(INS)—Investigation of the gruesome axe-murder of R. Smith Petty, 50-year-old mill fireman, today centered around a search for "a mysterious stranger" one of the last persons seen with Petty.

Petty's 20-year-old daughter, Mrs. Eugene Gatlin, bride of Reidsville's first chief, is held at the county jail at Wentworth charged with murdering her father and concealing his body until it was found Saturday buried in the basement of the home she formerly occupied.

A few hours before Petty is alleged to have been slain, he returned to town from one of his periodical absences and engaged in a fight with "a stranger" on a downtown street, authorities said. The "stranger" was said to have escaped when he was being taken to police headquarters.

Petty disappeared, and was not seen again immediately after the fight. Foul play was not suspected until a few weeks ago when Rev. Thomas Ferdue, primitive Baptist minister, furnished authorities with an alleged confession made by Mrs. Gatlin that she killed her father.

Authorities are probing several obscure angles to the case, and intimated that they were on the trail of several accessories after the fact. They were not inclined to believe the 20-year-old girl could have disposed of the body herself.

It was intimated by authorities that two of the alleged accessories after the fact had been located. They would not divulge names until the arrests have been made.

Unless Governor McLean is persuaded to call a special term of criminal court to try the sensational patricide case, Mrs. Gatlin will not go on trial until the term of court at Wentworth.

Complaint Is Lodged Against Dry Leader Who Jumps Al Smith

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7. (INS)—Secretary of Treasury Mellon today received a telegraphic protest from Rep. John J. Boylan (D) of New York, against an attack made by Assistant Secretary of the upon Gov. Al Smith, of New York, Treasury Seymour Lowman in Buffalo on Labor Day.

Lowman asserted that Smith brought about repeal of the New York state dry laws. Boylan termed his speech a "gross misuse of federal office" Mellon said that he would talk the situation over with Lowman this week.

MELLON SAYS HE WON'T TALK ABOUT POLITICS

Returning From Vacation In Europe Secretary Of Treasury Refuses To Make Any Statement About Campaign

Mellon Is Groomed To Follow Coolidge

Takes President's Statement Seriously But Doesn't Care To Commit Himself On Issue

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7. (INS)—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon declined to discuss national politics when he returned to Washington following a vacation in Europe.

Questioned as to the presidential boom launched for him, Mellon said: "You may simply say that I decline to express myself on the national political situation at this time."

Mellon according to his friends considers himself neither a factor in the presidential situation nor a candidate.

Mellon said that enroute from Europe he had talked the political situation over with former secretary of state Hughes, but added that no conclusions were reached. He added that there were no conclusions to reach. Mellon declined to comment on the statement made by Hughes, that President Coolidge would be nominated, or to say whether it was inspired by the conference with him.

President Coolidge's famous statement was received by Mellon two days after it was issued, when the private yacht upon which he spent most of his vacation, touched at a Mediterranean port.

While regarding the statement as in every way sincere, Mellon reiterated that he would rather keep out of the political situation just now.

Since returning to the United States, Mellon has talked to R. B. Mellon, of Pittsburgh, his brother, who was among those who proposed the secretary for president. Mellon explained, however, that there is no occasion for political conferences in relation to his proposed presidential boom.

While in Europe Mellon said that he had not had an opportunity to study the economic situation, having gone abroad to visit rather than to discuss it. He preferred to discuss Venice, the Greek Isles and the adventures of Ulysses rather than business.

The question of the proposed French refunding loan has not been brought to Mellon's attention but he indicated that a study of the plan would be as soon as it is presented to the treasury.

Young Stribling Arrested For Stalling In Fight With Protege Of "Jack" Johnson

OMAHA, Nebr., Sept. 7. (INS)—W. L. Stribling, Atlanta light heavyweight, Leo Diebel, Omaha heavyweight, and Jack Johnson, former heavyweight of the world, today looked out from the bars of the city police station, having spent the night there.

The charge was "investigation." The arrests were made by the city chief of detectives when the scheduled 10 round fight between Stribling and Diebel was stopped in the sixth round. Referee James Drexel declared Diebel didn't know how to fight and that Stribling wasn't trying to damage his opponent, Johnson who was in Diebel's corner, tried to interfere with officers when they arrested his protege and his arrest followed.

Today an investigation into the affair is to be made by the state boxing commission at Lincoln. Ira Voorhees, a member of the commission, saw the fight. It is expected that police will release the fighters and order them to appear at Lincoln.

Stribling, when taken to the police station, claimed an injured right hand kept him from using that member in the fight. A police surgeon examined the hand and found only an old bruise, which he said should not have bothered the Georgian.

COUNTY CHAMBER CITY COMMISSION TO GET NO MORE TO SELL STREET SEMINOLE FUNDS BOND OCTOBER 5

Commissioners Pay Backbills And Order All Future Claims To Be Denied; Paul Biggers New County Convict Warden

The County Chamber of Commerce was cut off from further support by public funds when the County Commission met Tuesday at the county house instructed its secretary to request that no more bills of the organization be incurred for payment by the county officials.

The board took action after some discussion of bills presented by the trade organization through its executive officers. All of the claims were ordered and further appropriations for this purpose were denied.

Paul G. Biggers of Sanford was appointed county convict warden at a salary of $125 a month. Notary public bonds of O. J. Miller, Alford H. Ford and J. H. Lee were also approved by the commission.

Charles T. Henderson filed a receipt farm and industrial consent with the board giving a consent of Seminole County. The enumeration was approved by a unanimous vote. A mother's pension of $30 per month was voted to Mrs. Laura Carr after some discussion by the commission.

"Old Glory" Is Forced Down In Mid-Ocean, Ships Fail In Rescue

PLANE DESIGNER SAYS "OLD GLORY" WILL BE FOUND

Belleves Plane Can Be Kept Afloat Until Ships Near At Hand Have Had Time To Come To Rescue Of Fliers

HASBROUCH HEIGHTS, N. J., Sept. 7. (INS) Anthony Fokker designed of the monoplane Old Glory, which sent an S. O. S. early today while over the Atlantic ocean enroute from Old Orchard, Me., to Rome, was confident today that the occupants of the plane would be rescued, if their machine could come down on the water.

He believes that the comparative nearness of trans-Atlantic steamships, which have turned off their course to search for the plane, gives a hopeful aspect to the situation.

"If they had a chance to operate their dump valve, which would empty the gasoline tank in 48 seconds, and if the sea is not rough, the 'Old Glory' will float for a fairly long time. Rough waters is hard on a plane, and would break it up after a little while. However, they probably had time to inflate and get into their rubber liferaft, which is like Commander Byrd's and can hold the three men. Their chance will be best if a ship can hold the three men. Their chance will be best if a ship can reach their estimated position before night."

Although there was no information concerning the cause of the air ship's S. O. S. call, Fokker indicated that engine trouble was the most probable reason. Inability to send a longer message may have been due, Fokker said, to the possible fact that the plane was flying low when trouble occurred. They could have dumped enough gasoline to convert the gasoline tank into a buoyant object that would help float the plane.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7. (INS)—"Old Glory" fell very fast, according to the belief of the two radio operators aboard the Lamport and Holt liner Vestris, which arrived today from South American ports. Two messages from the plane were picked up by the ship.

The operator said they first received an "All Well" message which was followed shortly afterward by the distress call. This they said, led them to surmise that something suddenly happened aboard the monoplane and it went down very fast.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7. (INS)—Attorneys for Harry H. Hill, youthful alleged matricide of Senator J. R., announced today that final decision on whether Hill will fight extradition is being held in abeyance until the arrival of Dr. H. C. Hill, father of the accused youth. However, all arrangements for an extradition fight have been completed.

Attorney Lane Summers announced that he had appealed to Governor Roland H. Hartley for a hearing on the forthcoming extradition proceedings, and that he had a formal understanding with the Governor that the hearing would be held Thursday afternoon at Olympia. His request, he said, could not formally be granted until the arrival of the requisition papers from Springfield, Ill.

Four petitions for a writ of habeas corpus, asking Hill's release on each of four grounds, have been prepared and one or more of them will be filed, Summers said, if Dr. Hill gives the word.

Although all official doubt as to Hill's identity has been removed, the prisoner declined to admit when quizzed by Deputy Prosecutor George Ackerman, Hoover's assistant, announced today over long distance telephone.

To wash quilts for summer use, scrub the edges on an outdoor table with soap and a brush, before putting into washing machine.

If your neighbors look into your screen porch too searchingly, a little light paint over the screening will insure privacy.

S. O. S. Call Came In Suddenly Early This Morning And Nothing Is Heard Since

Ships Rushed To Rescue Of Fliers

Liner Transylvania Fails To Find Anything After Hours

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Ships plowing through seas over the North Atlantic in search of the monoplane "Old Glory," this afternoon had failed to find any trace of the plane and its three occupants who, at 4:09 this morning (E.D.T.) flashed out a brief and hurried S.O.S. for help.

Captain David Bone of the liner Transylvania, the ship nearest the point from which the S.O.S. was sent, reported to International News Service by radio that it had covered the area from which the call was sent, searching a 30 mile radius, without the slightest encouraging results.

Finally Captain Bone turned his ship westward, and started looking across back over the sea, east toward the point where "Old Glory" was last reported sighted by the S. S. California, some 300 miles east of New Foundland.

From the time of this morning nothing has been seen or heard of the plane, except the one brief call which covered the area from which the call was sent, searching a 30 mile radius, without the slightest encouraging results.

"S. O. S. Flashed out of New Foundland sea."

With the aid of their radio, several ships which picked up the message estimated that "Old Glory" had encountered difficulties at latitude 49:30 north, longitude 41:00 west, some six or seven hundred miles off the eastern tip of New Foundland. No indication was given as to what had caused "Old Glory" to be in trouble. Hill, the pilot, to name out the S. O. S. but it was believed to have been sudden and perilous, which would explain the fact that no previous or subsequent messages were received. The plane carried Philip Payne of New York as a passenger.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7. (INS)—Three trans-Atlantic passenger steamers are rushing to the assistance of the New York-Boston monoplane "Old Glory" which went out on an S. O. S. message 500 miles east of Cape Race, New Foundland, early today.

The S. S. Transylvania, bound for New York, informed the Radio Corporation of America by wireless at 6:00 o'clock this morning that it had received the "Old Glory" S. O. S., and had set its course to lead the airplane to safety.

The steamers Lapland and Columbia, bound for New York from Europe also received the message for help, and are steaming toward the spot to lead the fliers safely to shore.

"Old Glory" bipped from Old Orchard, Maine, at 11:30 yesterday afternoon on an eight-hour flight across the Atlantic Ocean. The plane carried Dr. H. C. Hill, pilot and navigator, with Philip Payne, managing editor of the New York Daily Mirror and representative of William Hearst, Hearst's sponsor of the flight.

The "Old Glory" is a land plane and is not equipped with parachutes which would make a landing on the ocean if possible. The fliers expressed here that they had been forced to descend, and that the plane hit the water. The radio was put out of operation, which would account for the fact that no further word was received after the appeal call had been sent out.

A message from Captain Bone of the Transylvania, added position of the "Old Glory" when it was sent. The plane was sent west latitude. The plane was sent at latitude 49:30 north, longitude 41:00 west. The plane was sent at latitude 49:30 north, longitude 41:00 west. The plane was sent at latitude 49:30 north, longitude 41:00 west.

The position of the plane was estimated at latitude 49:30 north, longitude 41:00 west. The plane was sent at latitude 49:30 north, longitude 41:00 west. The plane was sent at latitude 49:30 north, longitude 41:00 west.

"I am determined to be the first woman to cross the Atlantic in an airplane," Miss Bells declared. "If I can't go now with Mr. Levine, I will fly back to England and will help pilot the machine if necessary."

"PRINCESS BILLS" WAITS

DUBLIN, Sept. 7. (INS)—Foggy weather and unfavorable winds today threatened further postponement of the flight to Philadelphia by Miss Bells, who is to accompany Captain E. H. Hamilton in the monoplane "Princess Billie."

BOSTON, Sept. 7. (INS)—The liner Transylvania, bound for New York from Europe, today received the message for help, and are steaming toward the spot to lead the fliers safely to shore.

Colts Take Morning Game And Feds Win Afternoon Contest

Kirby Breaks Up Hurling Duel In Opening Affair By Slamming Triple With Three On

Feds Slaughter Barron In Second

Heavy Artillery Makes 16 Hits For 13 Runs; Dunbar Poles Homer

The Celery-Feds and Colts split even on their twin-bill holiday attraction yesterday, the Colts defeating the locals in a pitcher's battle in the morning at Orlando and Sanford administering a drubbing to the visitors in the afternoon game at the Municipal Field. The morning game score was 5 to 3 and the afternoon contest ended 13 to 5.

With the Feds leading by a score of 2 to 1 in the fifth, Kirby, Orlando outfielder, smacked one of Withrow's offerings for a triple with the bases loaded. It was enough to win the game as the locals only threatened once more in the eighth and their efforts were cut short at one run. The Feds out-cut their opponents with Frisbie and Riddle leading with the stick.

In the afternoon game on the local lot the heavy artillery of the Feds was brought into action and bunched hits enabled them to score 13 runs in three frames, seven tallies coming in the seventh when the locals enjoyed a merry-go-round affair. George Cusack, hurling for Sanford, was touched for 11 bingles but he kept them scattered except in the eighth when he eased up and allowed the Colts to tally four runs.

Sanford tallied first in the fourth when four singles, an error, a sacrifice and two stolen bases accounted for three markers. The locals came back in the sixth with three more on three hits a walk and a fielder's choice. Then came the seventh when seven solid base blows coupled with an error produced seven more scores. With this the boys folded their arms and rested for the remainder of the day.

Cusack started the fireworks in the seventh with a slashing single to left field. Hoke Beazley sent a one-timer to left for his third blow of the game, sending Cusack to third. Rollie Tinker sent a ground-er to the Orlando third-baseman who erred and allowed Cusack to score and Beazley to go to second. Beazley and Tinker both tallied when Pug Allen doubled to right for two bases. Allen went to third on a passed ball and scored on Frank Bailey's single.

Rip Dunbar produced a terrific blow to deep center and when the little outfielder had stopped running, he was across the pan with Bailey ahead of him. Mutt Riddle doubled and came home on George Cusack's second hit of the inning. Beazley walked but Rollie Tinker ended the scoring when he fouled out to Lee.

Although the Feds made 16 hits with Dunbar getting three out of four including his four-bagger, Allen and Beazley also got three out of four, the former poling out a double and two singles. Cecil Frisbie, star shortstop of the Sanford team, was presented a $125 watch by Henry McLaulin, jeweler, as a result of his selection as the most valuable member of the team.

NATIONAL FLAG CHASE DRAWING TIGHTER TODAY

Giants Are Separated From Top By Only One Contest By Virtue Of Bucs 2 Losses

BY DAVIS J. WALSH, I. N. S. Service Sports Editor. NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The club that couldn't beat itself earlier in the year is the club that may go into a tie today for first place in the greatest National League race since 1908, if not of all time.

Anything can happen now, after the Pittsburgh Pirates dropped two ball games yesterday to the Cincinnati Reds to draw the finish even finer than it was before, which was entirely too fine to suit gentlemen with hardening arteries. As matters stood this morning, the Pirates were first by the race of a single game; the New York Giants were second by the same margin, and the Chicago Cubs held third place over the St. Louis Cardinals by only one point.

And so it became possible today for the Giants, the team that couldn't beat itself because its members were exchanging random haymakers in the club house making derisive sounds in the general direction of John Mc Craw's retreating form, to get a stand off with the Pirates for the league leadership.

The Giants can do it by beating the Braves this afternoon, providing the Pirates finish second again to the Reds. At the same time the Cubs and Cards will battle for third place.

According to a revered chestnut, anything is possible in baseball. But when I see the hopeless, disorganized, never-do-well Giants of early August going into a tie for the pace in early Sept., I will know that the seemingly impossible not only has been made possible but highly probable. The Giants themselves would cost the dollar when they were some 110 games behind the pace hardly more than a month ago.

But when the Cubs blew like the noon whistle, the Cards folded up under the strain of trying to carry on with a minor league shortstop; the Pirates were an unconscionably long time getting around to playing some baseball, the Giants began to win and the first thing we knew we had a four-team race. We still have it, although some of our more hasty and impetuous young men are a bit inclined to read the Cubs and Cards out of the party without further notice.

Be that as it might, the fact that the Giants are playing all the baseball of their field right now cannot be laughed off with a very sincere guffaw. Any outfit that can win 26 of its last 32 games and 11 of its last 12 can be figured to do almost anything, even win a pennant in the west where its three main rivals lay in waiting.

The Pirates seemed set a few days ago when they jumped the pace on the Cubs and later went more than two games into the lead but that double defeat at Forbes Field yesterday didn't make them look any better than they had any right to feel. The rest of the schedule strongly favors the Pirates, however.

As for the Cubs, they finally broke their losing streak of seven straight yesterday morning when Lefty Weimer, just in from the coast, stopped the Cards in the first game. Whereupon, the Cubs were shut right out in the second leaving them wondering whether they had started on another rampage through the lost column. The Cubs aren't hitting the size of a dwarf's neckband.

The unfortunate Cards, meantime, are doing a lot of stationary running, which will get them nowhere with great haste unless every-one else drops dead. And somehow most people plan to live forever.

Krueger, The Man Dempsey Couldn't Hurt, Is Back To Spar With Champion Again

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—Benny Krueger is among those present at Jack Dempsey's training camp here, which means to those with short memory, that Jack Dempsey merely has a German lightweight among his collection of 12 sparring mates.

But to those whose recollections stretch back to a September day of 1926, the sight of Krueger brings back recollections: Here's the man who broke Jack Dempsey's spirit—and his faith in himself—in his last workout before the Tunney battle of 1926.

It was Krueger who unconsciously dealt to Dempsey, or rather to Dempsey's confidence, a harder smash than any that Tunney delivered in all ten of their rounds of warfare. Krueger, a stocky, stolid German, with little experience then, bobbed into Dempsey's camp 10 days or so before the fight and Jack took him on in a round session. Krueger looked like just another "sucker" and when the mill started it seemed as if he wouldn't last a minute before the then champion of the world.

But somehow, Krueger took all that Dempsey had to offer; took it heel to heel, and was trading swipes with Dempsey with the bell. "Who is that guy anyway?" asked the puzzled Dempsey, later. "Just a bum," was the answer. "Learned something about boxing over in Germany. Came to this country—and here he is."

The champion of the world couldn't drop him. The thing wrong against Dempsey, for his failure against Krueger could mean but one thing—the old wallop was gone. On the last day of public training, Dempsey warmed up with a few other men—and then paged Krueger. Here was the chance to redeem himself. Here was the opportunity to prove to the assemblage—and to himself—that the old punch was still there. Dempsey was out to flatten Krueger.

The champion wildly anxious to land a crushing punch, was over eager. He missed a half a dozen. Then he steadied and began to try with more accuracy. But Krueger without seeming to make much effort, ducked or sidestepped most of them. A few of Dempsey's punches landed—one under the heart, a left hook, crashed into the liver, and several more hit Krueger flush on the chin. Yet the German only winced and fought along in his plodding way.

The round ended. And Krueger was very much up-right. He started to climb through the ropes, thinking his day's work was done. But Dempsey called him back and ordered him to go another round. Dempsey, maddened by his double failure against this "Just a Bum Krueger" went into him like a wild man in the second round. He threw every punch that he knew at Krueger. The German blocked some, ducked others—and took the rest. But beyond a slight gasp when the blasts thudded on his body, or a grimace when a left and right collided with his chin, he showed no visible effect. And again he stood up, fighting to the end. Dempsey went back to his cottage that night a sorely troubled man. He made more inquiries concerning Krueger, again he was informed that Krueger was "just a bum." For a while he was silent. Then came the comment: "If he's a bum, and I'm supposed to be a puncher, what's become of my punch?"

Dempsey worked no more in public. But afterward he brooded. His confidence ebbed. For here he was slated to fight a great man in Gene Tunney and yet was unable, in three rounds of intensive fighting, to drop a man who was a novice—and "just a bum."

That was the big thing that broke Jack Dempsey's spirit, it was said afterward.

Let's Call A Halt

With disaster following in the wake of several recent attempts to cross the Atlantic and Pacific, ocean hopping is beginning to present some difficulties of alarming proportions.

Believing that it is time to call a halt, the Carroll County Times of Georgia attributes the popularity of trans-ocean flying to "the glorious reception Colonel Lindbergh received in Europe."

"Others have followed, two more planes having crossed to Europe and two to the distant Hawaiian Islands showing that it was no-just-happened-so, but that it can be accomplished again."

"But in the California flight three were killed before getting to sea, while two other planes with two people in each were lost, and now the last fatal attempt of Redfern to reach the capital of Brazil, should put a stop to unnecessary efforts when the probabilities of failure exceed those of success."

"There is no occasion for such sacrifices, nor is there sufficient gain from them to justify them. It has been demonstrated."

We agree that something should be done to check the promiscuous flirting with death as practiced in ocean flying. We believe in the development of aviation. We are certain that trans-ocean flights will one day be a common practice.

In answer to this argument, Professor Irving Fisher, head of the Economics Department of Yale University, who has just finished a book, "Prohibition At Its Worst," says "Arrests for intoxication are not really an index of the value of prohibition, but as arrests on this charge become a matter of record within twenty-four hours or not at all, they furnish the most prompt barometer both of internal consumption of alcohol and to a lesser extent of public opinion on the question of prohibition."

In the first place, Professor Fisher contends, the very nature of the law itself, has made it likely that more arrests be made. In other words, while "drunk and disorderly" used to be an offense before prohibition, it is even more so now.

Furthermore bootleg liquor is deadlier than the pre-war stuff. It is far more apt to render its victims "helpless, crazy, and more liable to be taken into custody."

According to Professor Fisher, "the percentage of arrests in cases of public drunkenness, according to the police returns, is somewhere between 50 and 55 percent before prohibition and between 70 and 75 percent since prohibition" showing that prohibition has increased the strictness of the police departments at least.

The tabulation of Professor Fisher's statistics follows:

Table with columns: Population, Year, Total arrests for intoxication, Rate per 10,000 population. Rows from 1915 to 1925.

While admitting that the situation at present is at its worst and that prohibition has not yet been given a fair trial, the Yale professor insists that dry sentiment is rapidly gaining headway in the United States and that the reaction against Volsteadism has about spent itself.

American agriculture is at present languishing as a result, it is commonly understood, of overproduction. American farms produce a surplus which can only be disposed of by exporting it.

With no surplus to beat down the price, farm products, granted the same tariffs which manufacturers' products enjoy, would increase in price in keeping with the products.

UNEASY SLEEP

"Nerves Were All to Pieces," Says Lady Who Tells How Cardui Helped Her When She Was Run-Down.

Hopkins, S. C.—Mrs. G. W. Arrants, of this place, says: "I was suffering from spells of weakness. These would come on me suddenly and I would have to give up and go to bed. For several months I did not sleep well at night and got no rest from sleep. I was very nervous. I could not bear the least noise. The children worried me. My nerves were all to pieces. I had taken Cardui several times before, so I sent at once for some and began to take it again. At the end of a short time I felt much better, so I kept right on taking Cardui. When I would feel a nervous spell coming on, I took it more frequently for a few days.

"I can certainly say Cardui helped me wonderfully, for after a time the nervousness disappeared entirely. I could sleep at night, and my general health was better. My appetite picked up and I enjoyed my meals, too." Thousands of other women have told of the benefit they have received from the use of Cardui. Keep it on hand, to take when needed. A medicine of long-established merit, mild, harmless.

Bick Continues His 'Old Glory' Is Forced Winning Streak In Down In Mid Ocean Picture At Milane Ships Fail In Rescue

Richard Dix has hit a pace that few stars in the history of pictures have been able to approach—he has made 14 big successes in a row. In "Man Power" his new Paramount feature coming to the Milano Theater today he is said to make them laugh, cry and cheer. And what more could be expected of a star?

"It's a film for these boys and girls of all ages who like action. 'Man Power' is no parlor picture; it opens with Dix unshaven and untidy in a box car, but he gets on to his feet in the first reel. The action hits a fast pace when he begins showing up the machinations of a crooked manager of a tractor factory it keeps right on going when it is apparent he intends to win the daughter of the company's president, and it hits the heights of melodramatic thrills when he drives a huge tractor through a driving rain up a mountain to save a dam which is in danger of being washed out.

Frank Heath Passes Through Alabama On Way To Florida To Complete Last Lap; 42 States Are Visited Thus Far

TROY, Ala., Sept. 7. (INS)—Traveling by horseback into every state in the Union, Frank Heath World War veteran, recently passed through Troy enroute to Florida on his last lap in covering each state.

Heath and his horse, "Gypsy Queen," are making a prolonged tour. They left Washington, D. C., the first day of April, 1925, and since that time have traveled constantly with the exception of three months during which Heath was laid up with a broken knee, and two months delay caused by the Mississippi flood.

After the jaunt down into Florida, Heath expects to return to Washington by way of Georgia, South and North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia. This will end his trip into every state.

Alabama is the forty second state he has entered, Heath said. Adventuring "a-horseback" is full of fun and peeps one up wonderfully, the wanderer declared. Heath's average journey off 20 miles per day, with the exception of Sunday, when "Gypsy Queen" is given a rest, would seem like play to an automobile tourist eating up the road at from two hundred and fifty miles up a day, but Heath sees the country as he rides along on the satiny back of Queen, while the mortorist sees and home made cake.

SHE PREFERS TO BE OBSERVED

Watch her. She expects it. This is the ancient and honorable rite of dressing a salad. And she is a past master.

Lightly conversing with her partner she pours and mixes and peppers and stirs.

Two Venetian glass cruets, a silver bowl, pepper pots and shakers. These are her magic tools.

And this is the incantation she is whispering to herself:

"Three parts Wesson Oil—one part vinegar." But sometimes when she wants a tart dressing she puts in two parts of vinegar or lemon juice, instead. If your vinegar or lemons are especially sour, why then use less. Salt it and pepper it and add a touch of paprika.

It is a charming custom to mix French Dressing at the table. It gives your dinner a nice note of individuality. And it means a freshly blended dressing. That is always important.

You can make this pleasant ceremony pleasanter by adding various condiments to this simple Wesson Oil French Dressing. A bit of Chili sauce for a vegetable salad; a few slices of pickles, or a little Worcestershire Sauce for simple salads of greens.

Wesson Oil is very delicate in flavor. It is very wholesome and good to eat in itself and it blends in French Dressing just as you want it to.

YALE LOOKS FOR 126 NEW MEN IN FIRST GRID CALL

Webster Will Lead Blue Team In Schedule That Is One Of Toughest Ever Made For Ells; Veteran Material Is Scarce

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 7.—(INS)—One hundred and twenty six Yale under graduates will gather here in the afternoon of September 11 to enroll as candidates for the University football squad. William A. Webster, of Shelton, Conn., will lead the team as captain, this fall, into a schedule of games that bears the earmarks of being about as stiff a proposition as any team ever was up against. Webster plays guard, having learned the game at Hotchkiss School, and later being captain of Yale's freshman team in the fall of 1924. He has been on the Varsity team for two years.

Varsity Candidates
A fair-freshman squad of last fall will furnish forty-eight candidates for the Varsity this fall. Among those who start the coming season as seniors are thirty-seven men who have had previous football experience, as well as forty-one who will be juniors this fall. To weld this material into a team capable of tackling successfully on successive Saturdays such teams as Brown, Maryland, Dartmouth, West Point, Princeton, and Harvard, the coaches have Malcolm Stevens for the back field; Myron Fuller for the line; Charles A. Comerford for the ends, and Phil Bunnell, last year's captain for the quarterbacks. As general aide to Mr. Jones is Major Pritchard, U. S. A. once famous West Point quarterback.

The new Yale schedule shows a newcomer for Yale to meet in the team of Bowdoin College. Boston University had the place last year. October 1. The next Saturday sees Georgia, always a favorite here, play in the Bowl in what is expected to be a real game.

New Schedule

Then a new arrangement of schedule is introduced. Brown comes early, for the first time, playing Yale on October 15. A year ago Brown's "Iron Men" created their first sensation by beating Yale 7-0. Following Brown, on October 22, comes West Point, bringing recollections of having handed Yale a 33-0 defeat last year.

Dartmouth follows West Point, coming here on October 29. Yale beat Dartmouth 14-7 in an early game last year. After Dartmouth, Maryland on November 5. . . .

Wholesale Prices Are On The Decline In Southeast Part

ATLANTA, Sept. 6.—(INS)—With the decline in industrial production wholesale prices have advanced for the first time since last fall, according to the monthly review of the Sixth Federal Reserve District just issued.

The Review stated that the output of manufacturers declined during July and was in practically the same volume as a year ago, while the production of minerals was at the lowest level since early in 1926, when the anthracite strike was in progress.

Although consumption of cotton was smaller in July than in June, it was considered unusually large for this time of the year.

U. S. IS WATCHING DEVELOPMENT OF RUSSIAN OIL CASE

Controversy Has Arisen Over Sale Of Soviet Products To British And U.S. Companies; Capital Mum For Present

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Although they have adopted a strictly neutral policy in the matter for the time being, government officials here are closely scrutinizing all developments in the controversy which has arisen over the sale of Russian oil to American and British companies.

This dispute arose recently between the British-owned Royal Dutch Shell Company and Standard Oil of New Jersey on one side and Standard Oil of New York and Caccum Oil Company on the other when selling contracts with the Soviet Naptha Syndicate, holder of the Russian oil monopoly, were to be renewed. The former took the position that it would be unethical to buy from Russia until the Soviet Government had compensated foreign companies for the oil properties confiscated in 1920.

Buying From Russia
The latter group replied that it was no more unethical to buy from Russia than it was to sell to that country and pointed out that many foreign houses which had suffered under the nationalization program were now developing markets for their goods in the Soviet Republic.

Official opinion here inclines to the belief that the British position is correct in theory, but it is emphasized nevertheless that the Royal Dutch Shell had been buying in construction of small houses, has caused some unemployment difficulties, but building contracts in July and August continued larger than a year ago. The increase reflecting for the most part an upward trend in awarding of engineering projects.

Naval stores showed receipts at district larger than a year ago, although contrary to the usual habit of the large markets in the mid-summer increase, they were smaller than in June.

Russian oil up until a few months ago and so had not come into the controversy with clean hands.

This official opinion, which will not be publicly acknowledged until an American firm asks the Government to intervene, is predicated on a statement made by the American charge d'affaires in the Netherlands during the 1922 Conference at The Hague. In effect this statement said that "the Government of the United States does not countenance any arguments by its citizens with the Soviet authorities that would jeopardize or prejudice the vested rights of the citizens of other countries in Russia and that the United States has complete confidence that the other governments concerned will adhere to the same policy."

Never Recognized
Moreover, the United States has never recognized the validity of the nationalization decrees and holds that the former owners of the oil properties are the rightful owners thereof. The withdrawal of oil from these wells by anybody but the rightful owners would naturally prejudice "the vested rights" mentioned and a contract providing for the sale of this oil would be considered an arrangement contributing to that prejudice.

This principle has never been put into practice mainly because no American concern has as yet complained that its vested rights were being jeopardized, and it is generally held here, no such complaint will be entered now in view of the fact that most, if not all, the companies involved have been buying Russian oil taken from the confiscated properties.

The American Government is more concerned, however, with the probable consequences of a world-wide petroleum war which is now threatening between the two factions. Knowing full well that recent international complications have all had their genesis in trade disputes, government officials perceive in the present oil war the seed of a struggle that might result seriously for the United States and Great Britain, if it is not kept within reasonable limits.

To make chicken salad, patties, croquettes for a large number of guests, add veal for one-fourth to one-half the meat and no one can detect the difference.
