Barney Buettner, 512 Myrtle Ave., Sanford, is home for the holiday, the Halloween holiday that is. Buettner adorned his home with the spirits of the season, including bats, ghosts and glowing jack 'o lanterns to light the way for little goblins trick-or-treating tonight.

SANFORD — "Apparently, there just aren't any ghosts in Sanford," said Sanford Museum Curator Alicia Clarke. "Either there are none, or no one wants to admit it."

Clarke said every Halloween, people contact the museum to determine if there have been any ghost stories connected to homes and/or businesses in Sanford. She indicated that two buildings where people gathered in years past, such as the abandoned Ritz Theater or the old fire house, have been rumored to have harbored ghosts, but nothing concrete has ever been proved.

"People often come into the museum to research a house or building they just bought," she said. "From time to time they may mention that they want the information because they have noticed something like a door which won't stay closed or noise in an

Dilemma: When nature meets progress

Residents nix lake damage

SANFORD — It's not just a matter of being left in the dark.

Bothersome though that may be, the residents of the idyllic oasis near the shores of DeForest Lake and the Crystal Lake chain on western boundary between the city of Sanford and Seminole County, are more concerned with the damage that could be done to their lake in order to save costlier homes further down the chain of lakes.

So displeased are the homeowners in that area that they have scheduled a Wednesday evening meeting for all lakelakefront property owners with county commissioner Daryl McLain and Charles E. (JR) Ball III, the stormwater programs manager

Water woes: Reforms likely

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

FALLAHASSEE — Judy Williams said her family realized a dream when they renovated a house on a small lake in the suburbs north of Tampa four years ago.

But shortly after moving in, she watched the water virtually disappear. "Our lake got so dry you could walk across it."

Williams discovered the same thing happening to other lakes and wetlands near well fields that pumped millions of gallons of water a day to urban areas in Pinellas and Hillsborough counties.

Today, she said the lake has rebounded with the increased rains of the past two years. But for many others, the water woes persist.

A-buzz over Halloween

The youngsters at Idyllwilde Elementary School in Sanford were all buzzing about the Halloween parade and party at their school this morning. Little honey bee Lauren Brooks and her kindergarten classmates donned their costumes, ranging from fairy princesses to witches, from Power Rangers to pirates, and marched through the halls of the school to the delight of teachers, students, administrators and even parents who came to watch the march. Following the traditional pass through the school, the students got plenty of treats to bring home.

Quebec vote: Canadian visitors speak

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — For many Canadians, central Florida is home from September to March.

Some of those who winter here in Sanford believe the vote yesterday that nearly made

Quebec a country unto itself by a 506 to 494 percent margin said that might have changed everything.

Even now the tight vote leaves many things up in the air.

The Canadian currency could be devalued and we don't know if we will have our own currency, said David Pierre of Laval, which is near Montreal. "I don't know what this will mean for us."

Pierre said he regrets not studying the matter further and not returning home to cast his ballot.

"I never really thought much of it," he said. "I see Quebec, Page 2A

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Ten days in space

CAPE CANAVERAL — Space shuttle Columbia's astronauts marked their 10th day in space by conducting laboratory experiments on their relatively trouble-free mission.

"The science continues to press right on ahead," NASA mission operations representative Bob Castle said Monday. "I think the crew has gotten into the groove as far as their workday, and they seem to be well rested as well as working hard."

Castle said there have been only "very, very minor" shuttle problems during the mission. The science equipment also has worked well, for the most part.

One snag Monday involved a fire study: Crewman Fred Lesie could not ignite heptane fuel in an enclosed chamber because of a tool problem.

Columbia and its seven astronauts are due back at Kennedy Space Center on Sunday, 16 days after taking off.

Fish are biting, fishermen are not

DESTIN, Fla. — The fish are biting, but the fishermen are not.

Charter boat captains say Hurricane Opal blew a bonanza of fish into Florida Panhandle waters, but they claim overly dramatic publicity about the storm has needlessly scared off anglers and other tourists.

The Oct. 4 hurricane failed to stop the monthlong Destin Fishing Rodeo, the major event of the year for this self-proclaimed "World's Luckiest Fishing Village" and its fleet of about 100 charter boats.

"There are a lot of fish out there," said charter captain Mike Woodham. "There just aren't a lot of people coming to catch them."

Woodham said he usually makes 15 trips into the Gulf of Mexico every October but this year he had only two.

"Because of the misinformation, a lot of captains had instant cancellations," said rodeo weigh master Bruce Cheves.

Midway grocery store robbed at gunpoint

From staff reports

SANFORD — Family Grocery, 3300 E. SR-46 in Midway was reportedly robbed Monday night. Two men were said to have escaped with an undetermined amount of money.

According to Seminole County sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, the robbery occurred at approximately 8 p.m., when owner Insan Muhammad, 64, and Kevin Butler, 16, an employee, were closing the store for the evening.

McDonough said two men, armed with what appeared to be a short-barreled shotgun, told Muhammad, "give it up, give it up." The money bag containing the store's receipts was subsequently turned over to the pair.

As they left the store, Butler reportedly gave chase but was unable to catch the men. The weapon, dropped to the ground during the chase, proved to be an air rifle designed to appear like a shotgun.

The suspects were described as black males, approximately 20 years of age. One was reportedly wearing a white ski mask and the other a black hood.

Neither Muhammad nor Butler was injured in the incident.

Reforms

private wells have dried up, cypress stands are dying and lakes have fallen to perilously low levels.

Thousands of homeowners in Hillsborough, Pasco and Hernando counties have banded together to try to slash the amount of water pumped to the Tampa/St. Petersburg area. But officials in those cities say groundwater is a public resource and they have a right to their share.

Williams, a chairwoman of the Coalition of Lake Associations, said she doesn't disagree.

"But it doesn't mean they have a right to come in and destroy our lakes," she said. "I realized if I didn't do something the lake would dry up."

The dispute between urban and rural areas in west Central Florida is but one example of the growing fight over the state's most precious resource:

freshwater.

With 80 percent of Florida's 13 million residents living in coastal areas that don't have adequate freshwater, state officials say water woes won't go away with the rains of this hurricane season.

"I don't care if it rains like Noah's Ark. We need to address the water problems," said Rep. John Rayson, chairman of the House Select Committee on Water Policy. "We're trying to prevent more serious problems from occurring."

Lawmakers are approaching the issue on two distinct tracks for their 1996 session: developing an effective statewide water policy; and reforming the state's five water management districts.

Rayson said he wants to update the state's 1972 water resources law to develop a policy that takes into account supply and demand and the environment.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Remedial courses needed for college?

By The Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH — Because math, reading and writing didn't sink in during high school, graduates are finding it isn't easy to get into Florida's community colleges.

A majority of community college applicants have to take remedial courses even though they have just graduated from high school, according to state estimates.

And that is costing Florida millions in tax dollars.

"It's preposterous that we're graduating so many students who aren't prepared for anything," said Rep. Debbie Wasserman-Schultz, D-Davie, who is chairman of the House Higher Education Committee. "It puts them on a track to nowhere."

The percentage of community college students needing to take a remedial course directly out of high school has been steadily rising — from 54.4 percent in 1991-92 to 58.9 percent in 1993-94.

The figure for all community college applicants having to take remedial courses is even higher, probably because it includes people who have been out of high school for years and have forgotten much of what they learned.

At the request of The Palm Beach Post, education officials made a special computer run and determined that 62.6 percent of all students entering the 28 community colleges in 1994-95 had to take at least one remedial course because they flunked a college placement test.

In a state where English is a second language for many of the people who come from families of immigrants from Latin America, many of the older students have to take remedial courses in English.

That's the case of Jorge Sarmiento, 50, of Miami.

He took a computer technician course at one of those professional schools seven years ago but has been unable to find a job in that field.

"I had to take a job as a waiter to feed my family," said Sarmiento, who has to care for a family of four on $13,000 a year.

He is taking remedial English two mornings a week at Dade Community College and works 3 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Miami.

State legislators are more concerned about the recent high school graduates because they are responsible for most of the $51.4 million spent last year on remedial courses.

The legislators are looking for ways to get high school students better prepared for college.

Among the ideas being considered: requiring all high school students to take algebra. Another proposal is to have high school pupils pass the college placement test to receive their high school diploma.

Passing the test requires a 10th-grade knowledge of English and math.

Math is by far the most troublesome section of the placement test, tripping up four of every five students who fail. Knowledge of Algebra I, a one-year high school algebra course, is essential for passing the test as well as for preparing students to take the college-level algebra course required of all students.

State University Chancellor Charles Reed has urged for years that all high school students be required to take a year of algebra. Only 8 percent of students applying at state universities in 1993-94 needed remedial courses.

clear thinking people wouldn't let this happen."

Sherry Linebrand of Colbrook, N.H. lives within 15 miles of the border with Quebec.

"Maybe I should look into learning French," she said. "It would really seem like we have another country over there. I mean, Canada is another country, but it doesn't seem so foreign."

Monique Fitzpatrick is a first generation Irish-French woman who lives in Charry, near the capitol of Quebec. She is in Sanford visiting her grandmother.

"Grandmere has supported the secession movement for years," she said. "She will only speak French. She would not speak to my mother for many years because she married someone from another culture," she said. "Me? I think we should be proud of our heritage, but I don't want to be struggling to get a new country going."

Fitzpatrick did not believe the economic changes that would have occurred would have prevented her grandmother's return to Sanford next year.

Laurence d'Aumont of Anjou said he didn't care what country he comes from.

"Canada, Quebec. I don't care. As long as I spend summers on the (St. Lawrence) river and winters on the lake (Monroe), I could be from Bosnia for all I care," he said.

Lake

for Seminole County. The lake's sparkling waters have long been home to wild birds, fish and other indigenous creatures.

On a crisp morning, owls swoop back into their trees, calling to one another before settling in for the day. A frog croaks, then is silent, then croaks again.

As the day wears on, other animals scamper to and from the shore, playing, drinking, dining.

It has been so for years. When humans began moving into the area three or four decades ago, they did what they could to live in harmony with nature.

House in the area are smaller and on larger pieces of property than in other parts of the county. Residents have fought long and hard to keep developers from building irresponsibly on the land along the shores of the lakes.

Recently, backed by the signatures of more than 1,000 neighbors on a petition, Kathy Shaw successfully kept developers from over-building on the shores.

Now, again, progress is butting heads with nature and those who would preserve the natural beauty and the quality of water in the lakes down stream from the flooding Timacuan Country Club. Nine holes of the course are underwater and the management company successfully petitioned the St. John's River Water Management District (SJRWD) for an emergency order to lower the level in Lake DeForest in that area.

Shaw said tests have shown that the quality of water there is much worse than in the other lakes.

"They want to pump this nitrogen and phosphorus rich water into these lakes," she said. "We just don't want them to destroy what we have here."

The water from Timacuan, high in fertilizer nutrients which have run off from the manicured lawns in Timacuan, will cause grass, weeds and fungi to thrive in the lakes, she noted.

The emergency order will allow SJRWMD to pump water from Lake DeForest into Lake Monroe, via the Crystal Lake chain and the south canal.

"I just think they should have built more sensibly," she said. "If they had, we wouldn't have these problems."

Many who have lived their lives along the shores of the lakes have seen a historic ebb and flow in the water levels in the lakes. This has been an exceptionally rainy year, following on the heels of near-drought conditions.

Some homeowners recall a time in the early 1970s when Crystal Lake homeowners didn't have waterfront property at all. Now the water shimmers less than 100 feet from their back door.

"The water is at its highest point," Shaw explained. "It's not a change in our water level that concerns us. It is a change in the quality of our water. We don't want the lake so choked with weeds that you can walk on it."

The public is invited to attend the meeting with the homeowners and county representatives. Public input will be limited to five minutes per speaker.

The 7 p.m. meeting will be at Idyllwild Elementary School, 430 Vihen Rd., Sanford.

POLICE BRIEFS

Back in town

Arthur Barnhill, III, 20, of Winter Springs, was returned to Seminole County Friday from the New York City Correctional Institution on Riker's Island. New York City police arrested him this past summer, after he was found driving a car reported stolen.

Friday, Barnhill was charged by Winter Springs police in connection with taking the 1984 Ford from the Winter Springs man. According to the arrest report, he had driven the vehicle, with a number of friends, to locations in Sanford, Lake Mary and Oviedo, before leaving for New York, where he was apprehended in Central Park.

Don't take a chance

Tonight is the night when our little ghouls and goblins hit the streets, knocking on doors, suggesting, "trick or treat." Probably most of the adults they visit will have some type of goodie to give out.

Most youngsters will be very pleased with the evening's event when they will be handed something delicious at practically every door opened to them.

As in the past years, hopefully, the youngsters will be carrying a bag or plastic pumpkin in which to hold their loot. It is normal for everything to be obtained prior to the start of munching-down on any of the goodies.

But keep in mind. A single piece of candy, depending on its size, could cost only fractions of a cent. A homemade cupcake also isn't worth any large amount of money.

It therefore becomes evident that tossing one of these in the trash can isn't going to bring about a financial hardship to anyone. But we highly suggest giving everything a close look. If there is even the slightest doubt about something obtained by the children, toss it out. While organizations, mostly hospitals and medical centers, often offer to X-ray candy or sweets on Halloween, we suggest you not even bother. A trip to a hospital for such a check will cost more in gasoline than you will save in proving a piece of candy is not contaminated.

Let's face facts. There are some extremely sick-minded individuals in today's society who will contaminate some goodies on purpose. Why would they do this? It's not for us to determine, but nonetheless it is done, and we hear about it every year.

Then there is an accidental problem. A few homemade goodies could contain something which should not have been used as an ingredient. Probably even the people who made the items were not aware. Yet, if there is any question regarding taste or odor, again, toss it out.

In past years, we have heard of instances where pins or pieces of glass have been purposely inserted in some of the Halloween treats. If any of this is found after tonight's trip around the neighborhood, save it, and turn it in to the proper law enforcement authorities.

It is unfortunate that even something as enjoyable as a trick-or-treat night called Halloween, is harmed by the actions of a few, a very few people, but it has happened before and it will probably happen again.

If there is any doubt about the candy and other items handed out tonight, don't take a chance. Our children are too precious to be placed in such jeopardy.

Business item

In your Sunday, October 29, 1995 edition you published that "reportedly" the new owner of Seminole Printing & Copy Center had difficulties and that Rod Layer had "repossessed" the business. This information was not only incorrect but it was also damaging to my reputation as the former owner of Seminole Printing & Copy Center. This is irresponsible journalism. This is the facts of the situation:

1. The equipment leased to me by Mr. Layer was under lien by Ray Valdez, Seminole County Tax Collector for unpaid personal tangible property taxes for 1992, 1993 & 1994 and under threat of seizure when the business was closed.

2. Days after the decision was made to close the business, because of this threat, the equipment was seized by Ray Valdez' office. Mr. Layer was the responsible party for paying the taxes and had refused to cooperate with me in the resolution of this problem.

3. The management is not new and happens to be the same as I was using at the time of closing.

4. There was no repossession as there was never an actual lease or any procedure of foreclosure by Mr. Layer.

Until now, your publication has only demonstrated to me its biased support of its chosen few, therefore, I have come to expect partiality in your coverage. That is irresponsible enough. Slander, however, is inexcusable and you should not publish hearsay and information from such unreliable sources as this.

The information you published has already damaged my reputation as a business person in Sanford and I demand that you correct the statements reported.

Respectfully
David L. Paul

A high school class in banned books

In his chambers, Justice William Brennan once wondered how it might be possible for students to "take the words off the page of the Bill of Rights -- including the First Amendment -- and make them part of their lives."

The First Amendment part of that goal is being achieved in an unprecedented high school course in the small town of Dallas, Ore. (population 10,500). Freedom of expression is studied, and argued, by reading books with formidable rap sheets.

In no other public school in the country is there a curriculum based on such works as Alice Walker's "The Color Purple" (which uses the "f" word), Jean Auel's "Clan of the Cave Bear" (accused of graphic sexual content) and Lois Lowry's "The Giver" (in which infants are murdered by members of a cult).

Each student in the class -- as reported by Bill Graves in the Portland Oregonian -- selects a book "that has been challenged or banned somewhere in the country in the past two years." The student has to justify banning -- or not banning -- the book. One student reader of "The Color Purple" has decided that it should be removed from reading lists in at least elementary schools.

The town of Dallas is an unlikely setting for the free play of the First Amendment. Its citizens are predominantly Republican and, as the Oregonian notes, three-fourths of the elementary school pupils are released for an hour every week "to attend Bible study in nearby churches and homes."

In the past, the school district kept students away from an Anne Frank exhibit in the town because parents objected to its inclusion of material of homosexuals. Currently, parents have challenged a showing of "Schindler's List" by an English teacher because of inappropriate language, inappropriate nudity and a scene of the sexual act.

But there have been no complaints about the occasional raw language and scenes in the First Amendment course taught in Dallas High School by 27-year-old Keith Usery.

The teacher, expecting considerable resistance when he proposed the course, spent a year in preparation for that resistance. "First of all," he told me, "I offered it as an elective. Therefore, no student was forced to take the course. Then I sent out a permission letter that each parent had to sign. And I called a parents' meeting before the beginning of the course, inviting any questions they had. I also told them they could visit the class any time they wanted to."

Usery believes he has been able to teach these embattled books "because from the very beginning, I've been up front with the parents and the administrators. I told all of them I was not going to sugar coat for kids the controversial issues we'd be dealing with." How else, he added, would the students learn to think for themselves?

What did surprise him was that "some of the parents were more interested in taking the course themselves instead of denying me the opportunity to teach it."

Usery wants his students to examine their own beliefs about censorship.

Freedom of expression is studied, and argued, by reading books with formidable rap sheets.

Drinking gods and other reliefs

One of the things that has sometimes kept me awake at night is wondering what happens to milk when it is poured into the mouths of sculpted Hindu gods.

Oh, come on. Tell me you haven't pondered this, also. It's a heck of a relief to have the answer. I'll tell you.

What happened is, this past September, the nation of India was awash in reports that statues of the elephant-headed Lord Ganesha, a round-bellied god of wealth and power, were drinking milk poured into their trunks. Thousands of Indians rushed to temples to dribble milk down the gullets of the god, and e-mail flashed the news to Indians in the United States, and many rushed to see if Lord Ganesha would drink milk in America, also. He did.

It's a heck of a relief to have the answer. I'll tell you.

The Washington Post, the intrepid newspaper that brought down a president, sent a reporter to investigate the matter. This is an excerpt from his dispatch:

"A Washington Post reporter held a teaspoon of milk up to the statue's trunk and observed the fluid being absorbed into the statue, which temple officials said is made of marble. There were no visible holes in the statue. But the stone could be porous, because when the reporter carelessly spilled milk on Ganesha's potbelly, it quickly disappeared as well."

I realize I go on too long about this, but having the matter settled of whether Lord Ganesha would drink milk gave me such relief that I put the stories in my Roloids file, along with clippings about weeping Madonnas. Now when I wonder whether statues can exhibit lifelike characteristics, I turn to this file and read it and I am suddenly awash in relief.

Many stories have this effect on me, and I save them for when I need a lift. I was very relieved, for example, to learn that the city of Seattle is sending used toilets to Latvia. I had not even realized that I had been worried about the toilet shortage in Latvia, but I felt such relief when I read this story that I am now certain that I have been fretting about it.

I was equally pleased to learn that Oprah Winfrey will be keeping her talk show on the air, thus guaranteeing her daily contribution to our general knowledge. And how nice it was to hear that North Korean President Kim Jong Il, despite the demands on his time, has perfected his golf game and last year shot five holes in one in a single round. This gives me reason to hope that if I apply myself, my weekend game can be improved.

I will give you some other examples from my Roloids file:

-- A New York cosmetic surgeon has invented a snap-on hairpiece. Yes, it's true, and isn't it delightful news? What the surgeon does is implant tiny metal pegs into the skull, so when the follicularly disadvantaged get up in the morning, all they have to do is snap on their toupees. And they no longer have to worry about slipping and sliding and heavy winds.

-- For those who have longed to smell like the great tenor Luciano Pavarotti, there is now a perfume on the market called "Luciano Pavarotti." No, I am not joking.

-- Truck drivers across the nation now have Sunday services to attend, if they want to. Truck-driving ministries, mostly evangelical, are popping up at truck stops everywhere. USA Today peeked into one mobile chapel on a Sunday morning and counted two drivers in attendance.

I don't know about you, but it's a relief for me to know that God may be riding with the cowboy in the 18-wheeler that just sped by at 75 miles per hour and swerved in front of me.

Is the new man a partner?

BOSTON—Here are two vignettes from the new men's movement—if I new "is the right word for it.

A young convert back from a gathering of his brethren vows to be caring, engaged, responsible to his family and community. He promises to be the upright head of his household.

A woman who stayed on the sidelines is asked by a television reporter what her role is in the future of this movement. She pledges, unselfconsciously, to stand behind her men.

Both these scenes came in the aftermath of the Million Man March. But they could just as easily have been culled from the annals of the Promise Keepers crusade.

Last week, Louis Farrakhan brought together some hundreds of thousands of black men on the Washington Mall. Last summer, Bill McCartney brought together that many men, mostly white, in a series of stadium revivals and plans his own million man event in 1997.

There are two wings to the mass men's movement now in America. One called by the Fruit of Islam, the other led by conservative Christians, both sounding similar themes. Atonement. Family. Healing. Responsibility. Fatherhood.

Can you tell the rhetoric without the score card? Which speaker at which gathering said, "This is a generation of desperately wounded, broken men who must heal themselves, their families, their communities?"

On the Nation of Islam web site, Louis Farrakhan writes, "Allah says in the Koran that men are a degree above women. Anytime you have a woman that does not look up to you, brother, you're in trouble."

In the handbook of the Promise Keepers, author Tony Evans writes, "I'm not suggesting that you take your role back. I'm urging you to take it back. ... Treat the lady gently and lovingly. But lead ..."

In advance of the Million Man March, women helped organize buses and schedules. In the minutes before the Promise Keepers revival, women made the rounds of stadium seats, praying and anointing them with oil. At neither rally were they welcome.

This is not your father's men's movement. This is not John Ely's men's movement. These are not wild men seeking mythological roots in wooded weekend retreats.

The men who assembled under these banners and T-shirts have been called from the disappointments of their lives. They've been called back by Farrakhan "to accept the responsibility of being heads of our households" which include women who are told by Evans to "let your man be a man."

Listening closely to the messages, I am reminded of the postwar years when men came home from fighting and Rosie put down her riveting tools. In those days, women were exhausted from carrying the double burden and grateful for the dangers that men had faced. They were sent back to their domestic place and many went without a fight, perhaps even with a sigh of relief.

Is it like that now? Are women in this generation, single mothers especially, tired enough of carrying the load to trade off their weary independence and take on their designated role as "promise reapers?"

Are black women in particular so anxious to get their men back from the deadly war zone of the streets, so tired of being the primary everything -- wage earner, parent -- that they will step back behind their man to save his hide and soul. And is this the only deal that a mainstream of men will cut? Head of family or no family? Is this new deal blackmail?

For a long time, women wished that men would share truth and sorrow with other men the way women have with each other. They wished that men would become more attentive fathers, tender husbands. They wished men would deal with their anger. Many have.

But be careful what you wish for. The mass men's movement in this country now carries all these texts to men. Under the tutelage of anti-abortion, anti-gay leaders. It also carries a subtext: female submissiveness.

As Marcia Gillespie, the editor of Ms. magazine and an African American describes it, "They are telling men, 'We've been bad masters, let's now become better masters.'"

Today, Americans talk about families and communities in chaos. The absence of fathers is described as a national disease. The return of fathers as a cure. But in any chaos it's easy to give up on the democracy of relationships, the give and take of equality. It's easy to long for control, for authority figures, for old icons of manhood, like the bow-tied Fruit of Islam sentries posted around the Washington Mall.

I know that every Promise Keeper is not coming home to re-enact a traditional male role. Nor was every black man on the mall touched by the cry of male supremacy. But after all this time, all this change, the new man being molded by this movement doesn't sound much like a partner. He's just a kinder, gentler patriarch.

This is not your father's men's movement.

In Washington, D.C., said this is one of only two cutbacks in the entire state. "The other one is combining what used to be Amtrak bus service in Clearwater and St. Petersburg into one facility at Pinellas Mall," she said. "We don't have train service there but by moving these bus facilities, we hope to save some of our expenses."

"As for Sanford, she said, "Reservations may be made by phoning Amtrak, toll-free, at 1-800-USA RAIL, or through one of three travel agents in the immediate Sanford area."

Tickets may be purchased in Sanford, but only in advance, and only at the AutoTrain Terminal. Tickets may also be purchased from the conductor on board a train, but again, not without advance reservations.

"As for baggage," she said, "if you take it on the train at Sanford, it will have to be carried. The only way you could have baggage checked in or use the package express, is to go to the Amtrak terminal in Orlando, which is probably the closest to the Sanford area."

Larson said only two employees at the Sanford facility were dismissed.

Shortly before the arrival time of a train passing through Sanford yesterday morning, the depot was completely empty in waiting rooms as well as behind the station.

While a rapid-rail system throughout Central Florida is being considered, any routes through the Sanford area may be a decade or more away. In addition, there is little chance the CSX tracks currently being used by Amtrak in Sanford could be used for the high speed facilities.

Department Of Transportation officials however, say there is always that possibility. Larson observed, "If that happens, and it would involve our terminals, I assure you, the operation of the Sanford station would come back to Amtrak for further discussion and consideration."

upstairs area, but no one ever gave any specific details."

Lake Mary City Planner Matt West said he has only heard of one story which may have ghostly connections. "Many years ago," he said, "a house burned in the older section of the city, and when firemen went to fight the blaze, they said they thought they saw someone looking out a window in an upper floor, but there was no one ever found in the house."

He added that a person who was supposed to do a meter reading at the house following the fire, refused, saying he believed the house was haunted. "But nothing has ever been mentioned after that," West said, "and that was a number of years ago."

Clarke said the museum would appreciate hearing from anyone who has any information about a possible haunted structure in Sanford. "Of course there was one woman, a long time ago," she said, "who didn't want it to be known that she thought her house may be haunted, because she didn't want everyone driving by to look at it on Halloween."

Phone calls from the Sanford Herald to a number of old-time residents of the area failed to produce any additional information regarding this official ghost haunting season.

Around the rest of Florida however, for a state whose European roots stretch back half a millennium and whose Indian occupation touches the dawn of civilization, the state's poltergeists are a motley bunch.

Fort Clinch on Amelia Island in North Florida has an assortment of ghosts, including one on sick call. The 1847 fort has a cadre of volunteers who dress up in Civil War costume to re-enact the period for visitors. Their work forces them to spend entire weekends in the fort — all day, and all night, too.

And that's not just near Halloween.

"A fellow was asleep in a bunk one night. He was awakened by approaching clomp-clomp-clomp of boots. The sound stopped at his bedside. He was sure someone had come to wake him. He rolled over — and nobody was there," Ranger George Berninger said.

"One of our women volunteers who lived in the hospital says she has seen a figure in all white, like a nurse, carrying a lantern," Berninger said.

There also is the tale about how two volunteers one full moon in July saw four ghosts in Civil War garb come out of a tunnel and then over a wall.

"The next year, the volunteers made sure they were there again during the July full moon," Berninger said. "Sure enough, three ghosts came down the northwest bastion tunnel, across the parade ground and started up the ramp." "The volunteer called to them: 'There were four of you last year. Where's the fourth man?'"

"He's sick tonight. Couldn't come," one of the figures called back.

Down in the Florida Keys, the depths of Fort Zachary Taylor are filled with cool blue shadows even at noon. Set ponderously athwart the sand and coral at Key West, the 1845 behemoth of brick has a cellarful of noisy ghosts.

"This place is haunted, I'm not kidding," insisted Ruby Sieglinger, assistant park manager who has worked at the fort 15 years.

"Haunted how?" "Well, first, when you're walking through here by yourself, you can always see movement out of the corner of your eye," Sieglinger replied. "And when you turn to look, it's gone. Vanished!"

If that's not enough to scare you, then beware of the wild man in the woods.

In Jonathan Dickinson State Park in Martin County, more than one campfire chat has been interrupted by the sounds of Trapper Nelson still working his traps along the Loxahatchee.

The famous recluse was found shot dead in mysterious circumstances on his riverside porch nearly 30 years ago. Some say it was a suicide, but the gun was never found.

At night, unwary campers can hear the low, inexplicable, rhythmic rustling of the underbrush, as if someone were tramping through it. At times the rustling is accompanied by a faraway voice, calling through the creaking bamboo from just across the river, by the old cabin.

"You hear it, and it almost sounds like a voice, almost makes you think someone is there," said park ranger Bob Schuh, who has heard it.

"Or maybe it is just the sound of the bamboo."

One of the most enduring ghost stories of modern times started with the ferry crash of a Miami-bound Eastern L-1011 in the Everglades in December 1972.

Four members of the crew became so preoccupied with a malfunctioning landing gear indicator that they lost track of the brand new aircraft's measured descent into the inky blackness of the swamp. The aircraft cartwheeled into the Everglades and erupted into flames.

There were 100 who perished, among them Don Repo, the well-liked flight engineer on Flight 401.

After the crash, Eastern installed some of the plane's equipment in other planes. Like a mist, the memory of the tragedy spread through Eastern's fleet of L-1011s, wherever the spare parts were used.

Stories of Repo's reappearance formed the basis of John Fuller's book Ghost of Flight 401.

"After the book was published," said Elizabeth Fuller, the author's widow and research assistant, "we got dozens and dozens of reports from people who had seen Don Repo. One Eastern executive said he was on a flight, looked over, and there was Don in the seat next to him — a full body apparition."

Information from Associated Press is contained in this report.

received today were required to be based on a minimum speed of 125 miles per hour, and include the number of stops, trip time, and other proposals. "This was an RFP (request for proposal)," he said, "but at this time we aren't asking for any financial statements on it."

Homan expects four proposals to be received. "Two are the steel-wheel types which are presently being used in Europe, such as the X2000," he said. "One is the Maglev which is presently headquartered in Daytona Beach, and the fourth is Magplane."

"Both Maglev and Magplane have no wheels, and operate on an elevation supported by magnets," he continued. "But in any case, I highly doubt they would use any of the existing train lines which we have in place at the present time."

He explained that the rapid-rail system, with speeds possibly as high as 175 to 200 miles per hour, could not be operated with present rail crossing designs. "It would just be impossible to have a street with a present crossing be converted for something coming through at that speed," he said.

Homan expects the routes to be suggested would be parallel to Interstate-4, but that particular corridor may not be ready for rapid-rail use for possibly another 20 years.

"But even if we accept any of these," he said, "we're still not talking about anything which would be operating until after the turn of the century, then, if there was any future expansion planned, that would be many years more, so I don't seriously expect a high-speed system through Sanford at least in this decade."

More may be known after the bids have been opened and examined. Homan said the DOT hopes to be able to award a franchise by February.

Bidders on high-speed rail service linking Tampa, Orlando and Miami have been given flexibility in designing a system to pick routes and stations.

"I think we're going to have a pretty good head-to-head competition," said Nick Seranni, who oversees public transportation for DOT.

It is expected proposed stations will serve the Tampa Bay and Orlando areas, Lakeland and Southeast Florida with stops in Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties.

Estimates to build the Tampa-Orlando-Miami system range from $2 billion to $5 billion. The state is willing to contribute $70 million a year.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Peacekeeping force

WASHINGTON — On the eve of critical negotiations among the warring parties in Bosnia, the House is warning the Clinton administration that it hasn't made a strong enough case for committing U.S. troops to serve as the backbone of a NATO peacekeeping force.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich called the vote Monday night "a sad vote" and said it was a message telling the president, "You have not convinced us this is a good policy."

Speaking to the Nixon Center for Peace and Freedom an hour after the vote, Gingrich, R-Ga., said, "I don't think any of us should feel gleeful or partisan or happy about this."

On a roll call of 315 to 103 the House passed a nonbinding resolution declaring "there should not be a presumption" that enforcement of a peace agreement "will involve deployment of United States armed forces on the ground in the territory of the Republic of Bosnia."

Overhauling Medicare

WASHINGTON — The Republican overhaul of Medicare would let the elderly choose a new type of managed-care plan — one run by local doctors and hospitals instead of big insurers and health maintenance organizations.

Physicians weary of battling with managed-care firms over patient care could find themselves in the driver's seat under the GOP remake of Medicare.

They would be allowed to form networks with other providers, bypassing insurers and HMOs, to compete directly for the business of the 37 million elderly or disabled Medicare beneficiaries.

Like other private health plans in the GOP's new "Medicare Plus" arrangement, they would be paid flat annual rates set in advance to meet all the health care needs for those who signed up. No longer would they be paid for each service they ordered.

Ear for extraterrestrials

HARVARD, Mass. — Scientists have developed quite an ear for extraterrestrials: an 84-foot radio telescope with a billion channels tuned to finding intelligent life elsewhere in the universe.

About 250 physicists, astronomers and curious stargazers from Harvard University and beyond gathered Monday to watch and listen as one of the Earth's largest receivers was turned on.

"No one knows the likelihood that we will find a civilization," said Paul Horowitz, a Harvard physics professor who directs the telescope. "But we won't know if we don't try."

The Billion Channel Extraterrestrial Assay, or BETA, is a 300-fold upgrade of the first telescope dedicated to listening in on aliens, activated nearly a decade ago on the same hilltop in this rural town 20 miles west of Boston.

IN BRIEF

LOCALLY

PDS-Hackers double-up Angels

WINTER SPRINGS — The PDS Hackers got back on the winning track Monday night, beating the J & J True Value Angels 20-10 in Winter Springs Fall Women's Slowpitch Softball League action at Central Wmids Park.

The Hackers (6-1) outlit the Angels 22-15. PDS plays Soap Box, which trails the Hackers by one game, at 8:30 p.m. next Monday.

Hitting for PDS were: Teresa Walburger (3-for-4, two runs, four RBI), Terri Mann (3-for-4, two runs, two RBI), Tami Chesser (3-for-4, two runs), Juanita Johnson (3-for-3, two runs, three RBI), Estelle Norvell (two doubles, three runs, three RBI), Karen Kohls (two singles, two runs, two RBI), Jackie Janowiak (two singles, run, two RBI), Phyllis Baynes (two singles, three runs), Jane White (triple, run, two RBI) and Kristy Kessinger (single, two runs, two RBI).

AROUND THE STATE

Sheffield shot

TAMPA — Florida outfielder Gary Sheffield was shot when he stopped at a traffic light on the way to pick up one of his children.

Sheffield, who was wounded — not seriously — in the upper left shoulder and treated and released from St. Joseph's Hospital.

Marlins ink outfielders

MIAMI — The Florida Marlins said Monday veteran outfielders Tommy Gregg and Russ Morman agreed to terms with their Charlotte affiliate, and both players will be invited to the Marlins spring training camp.

Gregg hit .237 with six home runs and 20 RBI in 72 games with the Marlins after his contract was purchased from Triple A Charlotte in May.

Morman hit .278 with three homers and seven RBI in 34 games with the Marlins.

ELSEWHERE

Bullets get Pack

LANDOVER, Md. — The Washington Bullets, attempting to fill the void left by the injured Mark Price, obtained guard Robert Pack from Denver for forward Don MacLean and guard Doug Overton.

Pack averaged 18.0 points and 5.4 assists in eight exhibition games and 8.9 points and 4.4 assists in his four-year career. The Bullets also will receive future considerations.

Sandberg back with Cubs?

NEW YORK — Ryne Sandberg, the All-Star second baseman who returned in the middle of the 1994 season, will return to the Chicago Cubs, The Associated Press learned.

Sandberg's comeback will be announced today, a team management source told the AP. Terms were not immediately available.

Sandberg, 36, was placed on the voluntarily retired list on June 13, 1994, after his sudden retirement. The 10-time All-Star is a career .289 hitter with 245 homers and 905 RBIs.

NBC in baseball TV running

NEW YORK — NBC, after saying it would not be involved in baseball until at least 2000, was closing in on a five-year contract.

Under the deals being discussed, NBC would televise the World Series twice during the next five years and Fox would broadcast three World Series. The two both would broadcast part of the playoffs each year.

NBC would televise three All-Star games and Fox would have two along with a game of the week package. ESPN and TNT also would be part of the package, with each televising first-round playoff games.

Television executives said the deal would be worth more than $1 billion, with NBC and FOX each paying more than $100 million a year.

Johnson takes Orioles helm

BALTIMORE — Goldenrod's Davey Johnson got the job he coveted, and the Baltimore Orioles signed the manager they rejected a year ago.

Johnson, who guided Cincinnati to the NL Central title, received a three-year contract from the team he played for from 1985-72.

After Baltimore fired Johnny Gates last October, Johnson applied for the opening. But the Orioles chose Phil Regan.

Knight new Reds manager

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds introduced Ray Knight as their manager, completing a transition that started a year ago.

Knight, who has never managed at any level, replaces Davey Johnson, who led the Reds to the NL Central title.

Rams reap reward

Lake Howell's Chris Cantrell goes high to slam a spike past a Lake Mary block attempt during the championship match of Volleyfest '95 Saturday at Lake Mary High School. The host Rams tripped the Silver Hawks 15-8, 15-9 to claim the title and finish the season 23-1.

Lake Mary tops Hawks to claim Volleyfest '95

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — The top two boys' teams in Seminole County turned out to be the top two teams in Central Florida as Lake Mary topped Lake Howell in the championship match of Volleyfest '95 at Lake Mary High School Saturday evening.

Tournament Most Valuable Player Darrell Dilmore scored two of the final three points as the Rams knocked off the Silver Hawks 15-8, 15-9 in the finale.

The victory was the 20th straight match win for Lake Mary, which finished the season with a best ever record of 23-1. The Rams, under coach Bill Whalen, had lost the fourth match of the year at Dr. Phillips, way back on September 8th.

Lake Mary had advanced to the final by beating Boone (15-2, 15-6), University (15-8, 13-15, 15-4) and Dr. Phillips (15-9, 15-13).

Lake Howell (18-5) had the tough road to hoe as it won its opener over Colonial (15-10, 15-10), then lost to Dr. Phillips (12-15, 15-8, 13-15) to fall into the loser's bracket. But the Silver Hawks, under first-year coach Lenny Grace, came back Saturday to eliminate Boone (15-12, 15-5), University (15-11, 15-5) and Dr. Phillips (15-5, 15-13) to earn a shot at the Rams.

Making up the Lake Mary squad were Andrew Clark, Darrell Dilmore, Mark Hornreich, Amrit Gill, Adam Messier, Devin Hale, Erik Larsen, Jeremy Dilmore, Adam Sewell, Ryan Mau, Sean Whitman, Jason Hawkins and Tony Citerella.

Home remedies don't do the job

DEAR DR. GOTT: You have a tendency to discourage the use of home remedies. Recently, you put down a person who asked about vinegar and honey for arthritis.

Why don't you offer natural remedies for asthma? Also, I have giant cell arteritis and am anxious to try a home remedy.

DEAR READER: In general, I discourage people from using home remedies because, quite frankly, they can't hold a candle to standard medical treatments.

For instance, no one has ever shown that vinegar and honey have the slightest effect on arthritis. Why suffer and waste precious time by fooling around with ineffective cures when there are so many alternatives available for arthritis? These alternatives range from over-the-counter compounds, such as aspirin and ibuprofen, to prescription drugs (Voltaren, Naproxyn and others).

Asthma is a stunning example of a disease that is readily and safely treatable with a variety of medications, ranging from inhalers to potent drugs, such as cortisone. So-called natural remedies just don't help asthmatics. More important, asthma is potentially fatal, so relying on ineffective therapy means that the asthmatic risks respiratory failure. In the presence of a life-threatening disorder, it would be unconscionable to recommend therapy that is so obviously inferior.

As to your last point, giant cell arteritis (or inflammation of the temporal artery) is a potentially serious disorder that can lead to blindness. Conventional therapy with cortisone drugs is universally successful. There is no useful "natural" cure for arteritis. Why, then, risk further health problems -- even disability -- by hoping to find a home remedy and disdaining therapy that has been proved again and again to be effective?

I'm sorry that I have to disagree with you over this important issue. I don't have a problem with home remedies for trivial disorders, such as colds and common sprains, but when it comes to serious diseases, why compromise?

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Fads II: Herbs and Other Healing Fads." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Philip Alder
Jeff Rubens is co-editor of The Bridge World magazine (with Edgar Kaplan, who is also the publisher). Six of his articles have been combined into a 40-page book, "The Useful-Space Principle and Transfer Advances of Overcalls" ($8.50 from The Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025-7124).

When you know the right final contract, you should bid it forthwith. But when you still need to exchange information, the more bidding room you have available, the better. Rubens considers some situations where he feels you can increase efficiency. It is useful -- if you'll excuse the pun -- for ambitious pairs who want to improve their constructive bidding.

In today's deal, North used a

Rubens transfer advance of his partner's overall.

North has these options: one spade, one no-trump and two hearts are normal; two clubs shows diamonds; and two diamonds is a good heart raise. South cue-bid three clubs to show extra values.

East took the first two tricks in clubs, then switched to the diamond 10. With the spade ace missing, South had to avoid losing a heart trick. With nine trumps, the a priori percentage play is to cash the ace and king. But as South was missing only 13 high-card points, he felt sure East would have the heart queen. After winning trick three with his diamond ace, South played a heart to dummy's king and a heart to his jack. When the finesse worked, South drew the last trump and claimed, conceding one spade trick.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Nov. 1, 1995

Partnership arrangements might prove more successful in the year ahead if you take the helm. Try to be a leader, not a follower.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Relax and enjoy yourself when socializing with friends today. Stifle the temptation to talk shop with people even if they can help your career. Scorpio, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10150. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Although the end result might not be perfect, vexing situations will still work to your advantage today. Try to remain hopeful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Compassion and generosity are two of your marvelous attributes, but today, beware of someone with ulterior motives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your evaluation of a financial matter may be more accurate than the opinion of your advisers today. Have the courage to stick by your decision.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) People with similar opinions will be regarded warmly today while those who disagree with you might not see your pleasant countenance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You might be lucky again today in an area where you were recently fortunate. However, this should not be viewed as an opportunity to take frivolous chances.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Involvements with friends will be pleasant today if you are appropriately cooperative. A self-serving attitude, however slight, could destroy the mood.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to treat everyone with respect today. If you're nice only to those who can help you, your actions will betray your true motives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you participate socially in a competitive sport today, avoid placing wagers on the outcome. Betting could dampen everyone's mood.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Financial indicators continue to favor you again today, especially in joint endeavors. Selfishness could cut down your margin of profit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today, you may have to deal with someone whom you have yet to forgive for a past transgression. For your own peace of mind, let bygones be bygones.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your financial interests may be augmented by some good luck today. However, you will not be as fortunate in your love life.
