High on the list of suggested means of attaining this right is some form of national health insurance. Wilbur J. Cohen, former secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, has advocated a gradual extension of Medicare to include all Americans, from infant to aged, by 1976, when we commemorate the 200th anniversary of the Declartion of Independence. But national health insurance, desirable as it may be, can only make things worse if other reforms argues Sidney R. Garfield, M.D., a director of the Kaiser Foundation Health Plan and Hospitals.

Picture what would happen to, say, transportation service, he writes in an article in Scientific American, if fares were suddenly eliminated and insurance and by Medicare and Medicaid, are swamp- travel became a right. What would happen to our already overtaxed airports and what chance would anyone have of getting anywhere if he really needed to? National health insurance, if it were legislated today,

What is needed is to devise a new "regulator" to replace the traditional fee for service paid by patient to doctor - one more sensitive to real medical need than to ability to pay and that could help to separate the well from the sick and establish treatr the sick at the economical use of Garfield proposes health-testing and referral services for all patients at the point of entry into the medical system. After clinical testing and diagnosis, tended facility care.

a patient would be referred further along the system as his situation required. There needs to be reform at the other end of the medical system, too - the point where the recovered or recovering patient is ready to leave. Millions of dollars in present Medicare costs could be saved immediately if recuperating hospital patients no longer in need of intensive care could be ransferred to nursing homes for extended care, at about one-third the cost of hospitals, which now cost up to $100 a day, claims Berkeley V. Bennett, executive vice president of the National Council of Health

Yet under arbitrary rulings of the Social Sesecurity Administration, which supervises Medicare thousands of patients are kept in high-priced hospitals much longer than necessary, he says. This has sometimes happened even though a physician may have recommended that a patient be transferred to a nursing home, and despite the fact that under Medicare a patient is eligible for up to 100 days of ex-

Curiously enough, says Bennett, Medicare auterities don't seem to mind continuing to pay the far more expensive hospital bills, even though this keeps other patients in need of intensive care out of hospitals because of bed shortages.

The present health-care system "almost begs for poor management," said a recent report by the Senate Finance Committee. "Unlike most areas in the private economy, no incentives exist to produce or supply a given health service at the most economic price consistent with the quality of care,"

The committee estimated that at the present rate of expenditures, the hospitalization tab to be picked up by Medicare would reach a staggering $216 billion over the next 25 years.

Yet for all these billions, without radical and rational new approaches to medical care, two and a half decades from now - let alone 1976 - the nation could be no closer to achieving the goal of quality medical care for all American than it is today. -Don Oakley, NEA editorialist

Vernon W. Dunn

If ever there was a time when the passing of one man could be properly and factually described as the loss of an unusually dedicated, wise and persistent citizen of Seminole County it is in the case of Vernon W. (Curly) Dunn.

For here was a man who crowned a career as a Naval officer with such service to his chosen home - Seminole County and specifically Fern Park - that what was accomplished in these latter years is a monument which will long be remembered.

His accomplishments should not now be overlooked. We cite one, as an instance, which had its start in the 50s when Mr. Dunn was a Seminole County Commissioner and his perception of future needs sparked the start of the S-436 highway action which today has brought such benefits to the county.

With the full backing of the Seminole commissioners of that day, the persistent Mr Dean for establishing once and for all a base line for this route and finally brought about agreement. Drive along there now and think of Mr. Dunn.

His dedication was such, as his friends knew only too well for their peace of mind, that the Dunn process rested and hard, statistically supported research, sound thinking and a persistonce in what he considered the good of the county which accepted oposition but refused to be stopped. "Curly" Dunn has gone along. It was too soon. It was too quick. But not that his lifespan on earth is measured by the years on which he arrived and the year on which he departed, there remains the comforting and re-assuring thought that what he accomplished and what he did for the good of others, especially Seminolians, remains as his true monument.

On such a monument could well be inscribed a tribute from one of his oldest and nearest friends and associates. Said he: "Seminole County is better off for having Curly live in it!"
