Zoo celebration

SANFORD — It's time to celebrate Saturday at the Central Florida Zoo as good time girl, Maude the Elephant, marks her 21st birthday with a hay cake topped with carrot candles. Don't expect any apple or dandelion wine nipping to toast the big day, despite the party pachyderm being "legal" now.

Maude and Mary, the zoo's other elephant will munch hay "cake" and apple slice icing while their two-legged friends sing "Happy Birthday" and eat slices of birthday cake designed and donated by Kaah 'n Karry in Orange City.

Guest also may participate in the "Zoo You Know" game show that will test the players' elephant knowledge. The community party from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. will also emphasize the plight of elephants worldwide through educational displays. Other activities include elephant demonstrations, face painting, coloring activities, door prize drawings and a slide show, said public relations manager Cindy Baker.

Admission to the zoo, including Maude's birthday party is $7 for adults, $3 for children ages 3-12, $4 for seniors 60 years and over. Children age 2 and under are admitted free.

American General Finance and its subsidiaries are engaged in the consumer finance and related credit insurance business.

Krystal robbed

FERN PARK — A Krystal Restaurant on U.S. Highway 17-92 in Fern Park was reportedly robbed at gunpoint this morning. Seminole County sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough said two black males wearing black ski masks walked into the restaurant at approximately 4:30 this morning, armed with 45 caliber handguns.

He said one of the men ordered the manager to walk back to the office and open the safe. The second man reportedly stayed up front and watched the employees and customers.

The men escaped on foot with an undetermined amount of money. No one was injured.

Correction

In the headline on Page 1 of Wednesday, Aug. 16 Sanford Herald, the wording stated that 25 charges had been filed in the theft of an auto in Lake Mary. The information is incorrect as is clarified in the report. The actual charges in connection with the auto theft were 10. The additional charges were made in an unrelated case investigated by the Lake Mary police. The Herald regrets the error.

Cool! Heat subsiding

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Soaring temperatures have sent Seminole County residents scurrying for cover and cool glasses of their favorite beverages, but the number of heat-related illnesses has not been unusually high.

Although Orlando has felt some record-breaking heat, temperatures in Seminole County have not broken any records. The temperatures peaked at 97 degrees in Sanford earlier this week and only reached the 95 degree mark yesterday.

Jim Davis of the Southeast Regional Climate Center said temperatures have probably reached their highest point for the year and will probably begin to lower to the lower to mid 90s. They are expected to remain there for at least another month.

"I guess you could say that things are cooling off a little," Davis said. "Now, this is all relatively speaking."

Central Florida Regional Hospital has not seen more than the average number of heat-related illnesses in the emergency room this year.

A spokesman said the emergency room treats several cases of heat-related exhaustion a month. That number, she said, has not increased.

Smith, 39, is an auto mechanic. He was taking the vehicle for a final test drive when the accident occurred, police said.

Police said Haynes, 14, was riding his bicycle westbound on County Road 427 when the accident occurred. They said that Smith was also headed westbound.

Beating the odds: Boy survives cancer battle

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The rain created a feeling of deja vu.

She remembered driving from her Sanford home toward Gainesville in a storm a few years ago, as her son was being airlifted to Shands Hospital. The night the doctor told her, her seemingly healthy 15-month-old baby was going to die.

It was raining again August 3 as the mother and her son returned to their Lake County home after doctors released the now nine-year-old boy, declaring him cancer free.

After anxious years, over 100 hospitalizations, intensive chemotherapy and radiation and developing a seizure disorder, the little boy overcame acute lymphoblastic leukemia. As they drove farther, the sun came out.

"I still get goose bumps thinking about it," Kathy Flowers recalls. The driving rain on the trip to Gainesville with her parents and then in-laws, she later told her son, was God crying because a toddler was so sick. After doctors released the cancer-free boy a few days ago, the rain was God crying with joy, she told her son, Tony. When the sun broke through the clouds, God was smiling.

"He overcame it all," Flowers said.

The disease and long-term treatment took its toll on Tony and his family. As one of the youngest patients treated at Shands with the aggressive form of leukemia, doctors were formulating the treatment as they cared for the toddler. When initially diagnosed at Central Florida Regional Hospital with leukemia, Tony's cancer cell count was 148,000 but in the time it took to fly him to Gainesville, the count jumped to 198,000.

"The doctors said he had no chance," Flowers said. "But they were wrong."

The treatment worked, but Tony suffered a relapse at age 2 1/2 with the disease showing up in his spinal fluid and brain. Although chemotherapy and radiation were successful in treating the cancer, the radiation affected a portion of the brain controlling behavior. He attends a Leesburg school for children with behavior problems. With an IQ of 70, doctors say he will always be about four years behind his age peers.

However, after beating the disease many thought would claim his life, Tony's mom is optimistic he will overcome the behavior problems as well.

"They also said I'd lose my son, but I didn't." See Flowers, Page 8A

Fee refund deadline extended

TALLAHASSEE — The deadline to apply for the $295 vehicle impact fee refund has been extended to Oct. 2. Circuit Judge Lawrence Kirkwood on Wednesday moved the deadline from Sept. 1 to give the state more time to contact more than 82,000 people who have not yet submitted refund claims.

The toll-free number for the Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles is 800-299-8247.

The Oct. 2 deadline applies only to motorists who have not already returned a form or postcard to the highway department.

About 475,000 of 648,000 eligible refunds totalling about $186 million have been approved for payments.

Those waiting for refunds will have to wait awhile longer. The state Supreme Court still must rule on attorney's fees in the case. Oral arguments are scheduled for Aug. 24.

Man charged with ripping off clients

TALLAHASSEE — A West Palm Beach man has been charged with ripping off elderly insurance customers under the identity of an Illinois man who died in 1982.

William John McKernan, 48, was arrested Monday after being stopped on a drunken driving charge in Lantana. He's been licensed under the name of Raymond McGrath as a Florida insurance agent for four years, according to J. Cameron Thurber, an investigator with the Department of Insurance.

The department suspects McKernan stole at least $6,000 in premiums from five people in Palm Beach County, Tampa Bay and Central Florida over the last couple of years, Thurber said.

"The actual figure could be much higher," Thurber said Wednesday. The agency said McKernan could have been involved in scams for a decade and has linked him to more than a dozen aliases.

Most of the people who thought they were buying coverage from McKernan were elderly.

McKernan was being held in Palm Beach County Jail on a bond of more than $50,000 Wednesday. He faces charges of misappropriation of premiums, grand theft and organized fraud, all third-degree felonies that carry a possible five-year prison sentence.

Man indicted on mail fraud charges

MIAMI — A man is accused of collecting more than $380,000 in application fees for loans that were never made, according to a federal indictment.

David Brodsky, of North Miami Beach, was indicted Wednesday on 26 counts of mail fraud, postage fraud and money laundering for the loan scheme, which lasted between 1991 and 1995.

According to the indictment, Brodsky, 48, mailed out thousands of flyers advertising "self-liquidating" loans of up to $1 million, which never had to be repaid.

In order to secure the loans, people had to submit application and processing fees ranging from $49.95 to $995.95. For the duration of the scheme, no one ever received a loan, prosecutors said.

"The only thing that self-liquidated was the money belonging to 4,000 victims who were taken in by this charlatan," U.S. Attorney Kendall Coffey said.

The indictment also alleges Brodsky used nine stolen postage meters to produce the counterfeit postage stamps used to mail out the flyers.

Deputy contradicts statements

DELAND — A sheriff's deputy contradicted earlier statements when he testified Volusia County's Interstate 95 drug squad targeted blacks and Hispanics for traffic stops.

But that shouldn't make him liable for prosecution for perjury, a special prosecutor has decided.

Gov. Lawton Chiles asked Duval County State Attorney Harry Shorstein to investigate whether deputy Lou Garcia committed perjury when he testified in March 1994 about special instructions given to Sheriff Bob Vogel's unit.

There was inconsistency in Garcia's statements that could lead to perjury charges, Shorstein wrote to the governor on Tuesday.

However, he wrote: "I believe a much greater issue exists and that is whether or not in 1989 Deputy Garcia may have been upholding an officer's 'Code of Silence' and, therefore, in 1994 telling the truth."

To prosecute Garcia could intimidate other deputies from "ultimately telling the truth," Shorstein wrote.

Garcia, who has been on suspension with pay since May 1994, wants to return to work. But Vogel hasn't responded to the request.

Garcia was one of the first deputies to speak out about Vogel's program, which confiscated drugs and more than $8 million in cash from drivers allegedly suspected of running drugs along I-95.

Contaminated juice

Salmonella poisoning sickens 63 at Disney

By KIRK FLORES
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO — An outbreak of salmonella food poisoning sickened 63 visitors to Walt Disney World in May and June has been traced to unpasteurized orange juice labeled "Florida's Own."

Only eight of the victims were hospitalized and are believed to have recovered, state and local health officials said Wednesday.

The production plant, Florida's Own Juice Co. in nearby Winter Haven, was shut down Aug. 5 and will remain closed until the source of contamination can be identified and corrected, said the Florida Department of Agriculture & Consumer Services.

A "vast amount" of the unpasteurized juice was recalled and destroyed, the department said, but 3,495 gallons remain in the marketplace. Consumers are warned not to drink any of the juice coded with the words "Use by 8/17 or 8/20."

Salmonella poisoning can cause fever, nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain and diarrhea. Symptoms usually last for several days. It is rarely a cause of death, but salmonella may occasionally lead to serious complications.

Those who became ill were unrelated travelers — not members of any one group — who stayed at various Disney hotels or visited the tourist complex's three theme parks and other attractions, said Disney spokesman Bill Warren.

"We had several reported cases in early June, and we reported it to the health department and very aggressively helped them try to get to the bottom of it and find the source," Warren said.

Dr. Virginia Mesa, medical director of the Orange County Public Health Unit, said all salmonella infections are reported, by law, to public health authorities.

These officials then began an investigation with the State Health Office of the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, assisted by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Mesa said.

Warren said when the cases began trickling in, "We had no idea what it was. It was not easy to define a pattern. People went to doctors, got tested and reported back."

Finally, the CDC put out an alert and notified Disney that it appeared to be the unpasteurized orange juice.

"We pulled the juice on July 26. We did a property-wide recall," Warren said.

The Agriculture Department did not say why it did not previously announce the outbreak and its source. Authorities did not furnish any of the victims' names.

Products clearly labeled as pasteurized are not suspect since the process effectively kills salmonella and prevents food poisoning, the department said. A small but growing proportion of orange juice sold in stores or served in restaurants is unpasteurized.

Water main burst

Sanford Utilities employees were called to repair a water main that burst about 5 p.m. Tuesday on Oak Avenue near All Souls Catholic Church. Workers were concerned that the churning water would damage the historic brick street which has now been repaired.

Toxins in ditch traced to factory

By Associated Press

ARCADIA — Children play regularly in a drainage ditch that may have been contaminated by chemicals left behind when a transformer factory closed down three years ago, state officials say.

The state Department of Environmental Protection has been negotiating a cleanup plan with Coltec Industries, owner of the shuttered Central Moloney Transformer plant.

The company produced pole-mounted transformers for electrical companies for more than 30 years before closing in 1992.

Testing of groundwater and a drainage ditch leading from the plant has found high levels of two chemicals used to degrease the electrical transformers before they were painted, officials said.

Though the tests were concluded five months ago, Coltec officials have not posted signs or passed along other warnings to people living along the ditch, officials said.

"I never thought it might be contaminated," said Bobbie Richardson, who has lived in public housing about 50 yards away for six years. She said her young son, Anthony, "doesn't have anything else to do. He goes down in there and catches crawdads."

Though it is unknown how the solvents reached the soil around the plant, they have slowly leaked into the ditch, state environmental specialist Sandra Tippin said.

Initial tests by Coltec, which was required by state law to assess environmental damage left behind by the closed factory, showed the groundwater contained tetrachloroethene at a level of 140,000 parts per billion, state records show. The acceptable standard for that solvent is 3 parts per billion.

Another suspected carcinogen, trichloroethene, has the same standard. It was found at a level of 50,600 parts per billion.

Two other solvents, one a possible carcinogen and the other a toxic substance, also were found at levels 4 to 15 times above acceptable groundwater levels.

In February, the company tested the adjacent ditch, which drains stormwater from city streets and runs through public and low-income housing before emptying into the Peace River a mile away.

Outside the plant, tests showed nine times the acceptable tetrachloroethene level and 1.3 times higher for trichloroethene. A follow-up test three weeks later was even worse, showing 20 times the tetrachloroethene maximum.

Tippin said she had not planned to ask for sign postings until she inspected the ditch herself. She never visited, and finally asked a county health officer to do the job in July.

She saw children playing there, so Tippin asked Coltec to put up signs. The company tested again, and after finding lower but still unacceptable concentrations, said Tuesday it would post the warnings.

Tippin said the state has proposed Coltec pay $165,094, a combined amount that includes the cost of the cleanup and some fines.

However, Coltec says it owes nothing beyond the cost of the cleanup. A company spokesman said the pollutants posed no health risk, even though they exceed allowable levels and are classified as probable human carcinogens by federal authorities.

Tippin said her department will continue to work with Coltec to reach an appropriate cleanup plan.

"It's not going to be fast and it's not going to be inexpensive," she said.

New research: Rapes in America Estimate is double number reported

By MICHAEL J. SHIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The government's yearly estimate of rapes and attempted rapes has more than doubled to 310,000 — not because of an increase in attacks but because there's finally a direct question about rape on the government's biggest crime survey.

The new research was hailed by leaders of women's groups. "We've been saying the figures were underreported because the stigma of being labeled a rape victim is no little thing to a woman," said Eleanor Smeal, president of the Feminist Majority Foundation. "I'm glad they're finally asking more specific questions."

And the data could go a long way toward resolving a dispute between government and private researchers that President Clinton wandered into in March when he said 700,000 women are raped each year.

In the first major report on data from the newly designed survey, the Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics estimated Wednesday that there were 500,000 sexual assaults on women, including 170,000 rapes and 140,000 attempted rapes, annually in 1992 and in 1993.

Previously, the bureau had estimated that there were 133,000 total rapes and attempted rapes a year and had no data on other sexual assaults. The most recent FBI figures show that 104,800 rapes and attempted rapes were reported to police in 1993.

"When you ask directly, you get more information. That doesn't mean this level of rapes didn't exist before," said Justice Department statistician Ronet Bachman, co-author of the new report. "We have no indication of an actual increase in rapes. This is just better reporting ... through changes in our interviews and asking direct questions."

The new data come from the government's National Crime Victimization Survey, which annually interviews 100,000 Americans aged 12 or older. The survey is designed to uncover the crimes that are not reported to police, as well as more details of reported crime.

The new estimates apply to 1992, when half of those interviewed were asked specifically for the first time if they were raped or sexually assaulted, and to 1993, when everyone surveyed was asked those questions. Previously, the survey only asked about attacks of any kind without mentioning rape or sexual assault.

Clinton drew criticism in March when he cited numbers that exceeded the Justice Department's estimates. The president's numbers were taken from a private 1992 study. Rape in America, which had been endorsed by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

That study estimated that 683,000 women were raped each year. The study was based on telephone interviews and on a survey of rape crisis centers by the National Crime Victims Research and Treatment Center at Medical University of South Carolina and by the National Victims Center in Arlington, Va.

Even though the government estimate is 170,000 rapes a year, compared with 683,000 in the private study, government and private researchers agreed they are not so far apart as the numbers might suggest.

"If you allow for standard statistical error and the effect of different methodologies and different questions, the two estimates are probably not that far apart," Bachman said. Benjamin E. Saunders, a co-investigator of the private study, agreed.

The reasons for the disparity include the government's use of the word "rape" in questions, other differences in the phrasing of questions and differences in who was present during interviews.

"It's well known among researchers that if the questioner uses the word 'rape' instead of just physically describing forced sexual intercourse, the number of positive responses goes down by about 50 percent," said Saunders, a psychiatry professor at the Medical University of South Carolina.

"That's because many women don't identify forced sex by their husband as rape although it meets the legal definition," he said.

China explodes nuclear test bomb

By CHARLES HUTZLER
Associated Press Writer

BEIJING — China exploded an underground nuclear test bomb today, its second in three months, upsetting nations that had appealed for a moratorium on nuclear testing.

The announcement of the blast in a two-sentence report by the official Xinhua news agency was immediately denounced by Australia and New Zealand.

Prime Minister Paul Keating said Australians were angry because despite the end of the Cold War and the extension of the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty this year, both China and France had decided to continue testing.

In Wellington, New Zealand Prime Minister Jim Bolger expressed "serious concern" at China's latest nuclear test and said, "This is all the more reprehensible in the light of the current widespread protest at France's decision to resume nuclear testing in the South Pacific."

The Australian Seismological Center estimated today's blast magnitude at 5.6 and said it occurred at China's usual desert testing site, Lop Nor, 1,500 miles west of Beijing.

Despite worldwide criticism, China's repeated nuclear tests reflects the government's determination to build a credible deterrent against what it perceives as threats from the West.

"China stands for the complete prohibition and thorough destruction of nuclear weapons," Foreign Ministry spokesman Chen Jian told Xinhua. "Its possession of a small number of nuclear weapons is solely for the purpose of self-defense and poses no threat to any other country."

China's military activities this year, however, have created unease among neighbors. It has built permanent facilities suspected of having military use on the disputed Spratly Islands, tested an intercontinental ballistic missile and is testing missiles off Taiwan for the second time in a month.

Today's nuclear test was conducted two days after Greenpeace activists held up a banner in Beijing's Tiananmen Square calling for an end to testing. China detained the activists, questioned them for 12 hours and expelled them Wednesday.

The test was China's fourth in 14 months. China is expected to hold three more before the end of 1995.

China has refused to join other nuclear powers in an underground test moratorium that began in 1992, instead beginning a series of several tests each year. France announced this year that it too would resume testing in the South Pacific.

France's announcement met with heavy world condemnation. Until today, China's testing has been criticized in a more low-key way, mainly by Asian neighbors. After China's last test, on May 15, Japan said it might reduce aid funds if tests continued.

China maintains it has conducted fewer tests than the four other acknowledged nuclear powers — Britain, France, Russia and the United States.

Greenpeace says China has detonated 42 nuclear blasts since 1964 and Western estimates place China's nuclear arsenal at about 450 warheads. That nuclear force, according to Greenpeace, is 16,000 times greater than the U.S. bomb dropped on Hiroshima, Japan, to end World War II.

Do your part to save our energy

We're all in this together. The sultry tropical weather is taking its toll on the community's energy's resources and power company officials are asking all of us to do our part to conserve energy.

We think everyone should do their part to conserve the non-renewable energy resources.

But why should it take a crisis like the current tropical weather patterns to get our attention?

It shouldn't take the threat of rolling black-outs to get us to turn our thermostats up a couple of notches.

As more and more people crowd into Seminole County, it's difficult for the power companies that serve this area to keep up with all the new houses and businesses sprouting up everywhere.

If you were to go for a walk at the peak of the afternoon, wouldn't that task become even more unbearable if you were asked to carry a couple of bags of groceries, a purse, a baby and, oh yeah, the dog? (Mothers will understand this analogy.) Wouldn't you say that the task would be easier if there wasn't so much to carry?

The power companies are similarly burdened. We should each offer to take one of those packages.

Lightening the load just a little isn't as difficult as it may appear. If the power company, burdened with all our demands for energy, falters, she will fall on us.

Would you rather have it a little warmer in your home or businesses, or suffer hours or days with no climate control, no electronic appliances, no energy at all?

Besides, why not look at it as a chance to kick back and take it a little easier?

It shouldn't take threats to get us to occasionally cut out the A/C altogether, fling open the windows and sit back with a large lemonade.

Let the heavy work wait until tomorrow. Let's conserve energy today.

Board should hear people

I read with much interest the letter from John Prokosh about the castle on Lake Mary Boulevard. First it got me to checking on the cost of the castle. It seems the original bid was "seven million" dollars. You can be very sure it will cost much more.

I do not understand why the school board would build this castle when the voters of Seminole County have voted it down. The school board could have spent this money to repair the existing school buildings. They leave the kids in temporary wooden buildings. Does the board think they need plush offices and perfectly controlled heat and air conditioning (which will cost more to operate than an entire school building).

We cannot stop it now but we can go to the polls next election and elect a new group on the school board that will listen to the people. I know a lot of people who feel the same as I do about this castle.

Treaty would buoy U.S. shipbuilding

The Civil War is remembered for its legendary land battles, but at least one momentous battle was waged on the water. It pitted the Merrimack against the Monitor. It was the first time in history that ironclad warships met in battle.

Well, civil war is being waged once again for domination of the American waters. But the combatants this time around are the American Shipbuilding Association, which represents six large, primarily naval, shipyards (including National Steel and Shipbuilding here in San Diego) and the Shipbuilders Council of America, which represents 17 smaller, primarily commercial, shipyards.

The smaller yards favor an end to foreign and domestic shipbuilding subsidies, whether they are direct or indirect. They support a treaty that the United States worked out last year with other shipbuilding nations, under the auspices of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. And they want Congress to ratify the treaty this year.

The larger yards are diametrically opposed. They argue that if the United States signs on to the OECD treaty, the American shipbuilding industry will be placed at a decided disadvantage to foreign competitors. They note that most other leading shipbuilding nations provide their yards with substantial subsidies.

But that's precisely the point of the shipbuilding treaty. It requires foreign nations to phase out direct and indirect subsidies to their shipyards by 1999. It also sets down standards for determining whether foreign shipyards are selling vessels on the world market below cost. And it creates a mechanism for resolving such disputes.

What ratification of the OECD treaty means is that, within four years, U.S. shipyards will be operating on level waters with foreign yards.

The smaller U.S. yards, which derive most of their business from ship repairs, welcome subsidy-free competition because they believe they can match the bids of foreign yards.

The larger U.S. yards would just as soon forget about competing against foreign shipbuilders since they have their Navy contracts and their government loan guarantees.

Within four years, U.S. shipyards will be operating on level waters with foreign yards.

But the best interests of the U.S. shipbuilding industry are hardly served by almost exclusive reliance on Navy contracts. In a given year, 1,000 to 2,000 new ships are built around the world. American shipbuilders account for only four or five of those new vessels.

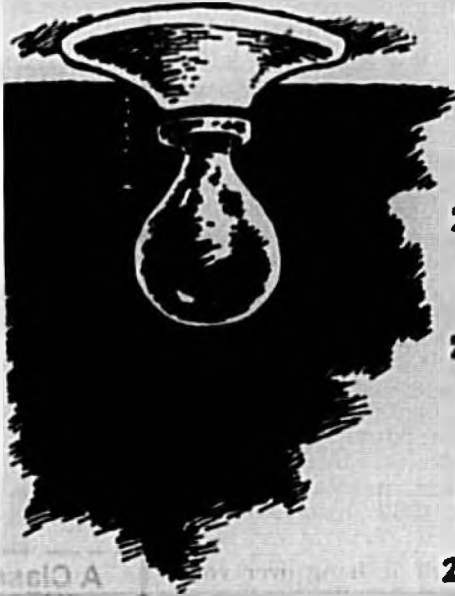

It's not that U.S. shipbuilders cannot compete with foreign yards. In fact, the hourly labor costs for U.S. shipyard workers are roughly half that of their counterparts in Japan and Europe, which account for roughly 60 percent of world shipbuilding orders.

Where U.S. yards fall short of foreign shipbuilders is in efficiency. For instance, if a U.S. yard were to build a medium-size oil tanker (with 40,000 dead weight tons) it would take 600,000 to 800,000 labor hours. It would take the Japanese and the Europeans half that time because their shipyards are automated.

U.S. yards could easily achieve the same efficiency if they went to automation. But with the entire U.S. shipbuilding industry turning out only four to five vessels a year, it doesn't make much sense.

This is why the OECD treaty is so vital to the future of American shipbuilding.

Pro-life GOP wants it both ways

"We're better off to have the right to have an abortion in the circumstance of rape and incest.... If you're going to have a majoritarian right-to-life position, it's going to accept that that's a reality." - House Speaker Newt Gingrich on CNN's "Late Edition," Aug. 6

"My wife was attacked eight blocks from where we are. It was a vicious rapist.... (If she had become pregnant) it would be vicious and monstrous to say she had to carry that baby to term." - Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., on the Senate floor, Aug. 5

The majority of Americans more or less agree with the above statements. According to the National Opinion Research Center, 84 percent of Americans say that abortion should be permitted in the case of rape. This is why the Senate recently revised a bill that bans coverage of abortions in federal employee health plans. The original bill only allowed abortions when the mother's life was in danger. It was passed after exceptions for rape and incest victims were added.

Right-to-lifers would have us believe that the abortion debate is about life and when it begins. This is a worthy concern, certainly, one that has generated a lot of interest and controversy. But it is not the issue with which our representatives in Washington are engaged.

The majority of U.S. politicians, like the majority of U.S. citizens, do not believe that life begins at the moment of conception. If they did, they could never abide the "except in the case of rape or incest" clause. If a 2-week-old fertilized egg is to be considered a full-fledged human being, then it should make no difference whether that fertilized egg is the result of marital love or rape. If aborting the result of a one-night stand is the moral equivalent of killing a child, then so is aborting the result of a rape.

Of course, some people do hold this position. They believe that abortion is murder in every instance. And though I do not agree with this stance, I can respect it, provided it is expressed without the aid of firebombs, submachine guns or butyric acid.

But I cannot respect the wigglers, the people who want to add little modifying clauses once the questions get tough. Anyone who agrees with Sen. Conrad that forcing a rape victim to carry a resulting pregnancy to term is "monstrous," thus relinquishes their right to call abortion murder. You can't have it both ways.

Of course, having it both ways is exactly what Republicans in Washington want. They are not really pro-life. They are pro-pro-life votes. They do not really want to take a sincere right-to-life position, they want to take, in Speaker Gingrich's revealing words, "a majoritarian right-to-life position."

They want this because they need to keep the support of ultraright-wing religious groups like the Christian Coalition, which has said it will only back pro-life candidates. Right-wing religious zealots may be relatively small in number, but they are, unfortunately, large in resources. They are extremely well organized and well funded, and they vote in rock-solid blocs.

So members of Congress must scramble for ways to appease this powerful minority without losing the votes of the majority. You see, they are pro-pro-choice votes, too.

They do this by creating paperwork. The Congress that said it wants to get the federal government out of people's lives is spending an inordinate amount of energy meddling with women's wombs. It wastes good taxpayer time fussing over bylaws and amendments that limit the availability of abortion.

In June, the House voted to ban abortions at overseas military hospitals. Early this month, the House passed a resolution that would permit states to deny abortions to Medicaid recipients. And we all remember the Henry Foster furor, where the Senate managed to block the surgeon general nomination of an obstetrician-gynecologist because he had performed abortions.

With each of the measures comes the bristling insistence that the debate is not about abortion - it's about taxes, states' rights, credibility. But let's just look at the Foster nomination. If you think that he was denied the surgeon general post because he misreported the number of abortions he performed, as Senate Republicans contend, then ask yourself the question my colleague Sandra Smokes asked her readers: What if Foster had goofed on a different record, say the number of ovarian cysts he removed? Would anyone care? Would anyone even ask the question?

Of course not. Because the Foster rejection, along with the recent House and Senate measures, ARE about abortion. What they are not about is life.

Right-to-lifers would have us believe that the abortion debate is about life and when it begins.

JOSEPH SPEAR

Flash: Sen. Byrd has good idea

Robert C. Byrd, one of the most portentous and self-infatuated gasbags in the Senate, has come up with an idea that could be of great benefit to the entire nation. This is highly unusual, as he customarily concerns himself with the seizure of vast quantities of taxpayer monies, which he then reinvests in projects that benefit his West Virginia constituents.

Byrd thinks journalists who cover the Senate should be required to file financial disclosure statements, detailing their sources of income. He is particularly interested in the "honoraria" they receive for speaking before groups whose activities they might cover. He recently introduced a "sense of the Senate" resolution to this effect. It passed 60 to 39, with nary a word being uttered in defense of the Fourth Estate.

I generally agree with this sentiment, and I'll detail the reasons in a moment. But first, there are some things that need to be said in the interest of truth and fair play. It is a fact that the House in 1989 and the Senate in 1991 curtailed the practice of accepting fees for speeches - which, when you think about it, was sort of like paying sharks to swim in the first place. But both Houses liked their pay 35 percent before they did it, and arranged for an annual cost-of-living adjustment.

And of course, Bobby Byrd didn't mention a little conflict of interest he has, to wit, he hates the media. Last year, an ABC "PrimeTime Live" crew confronted him outside his Virginia home, and he took his revenge on the Senate floor, denouncing his tormentors as "vultures," "buzzards," and "predators."

And of course, there's the little matter of the First Amendment, which has been interpreted to mean the press is not accountable to the U.S. Senate and that if the U.S. Senate doesn't like what the press does, the U.S. Senate can just stick it in their ear. Indeed, if the media had any moxie at all, they would quit covering the posturing and prancing in that baronial body for a month or two and see how the polis like that.

But all this is beside the main point, which is that Byrd has come up with a good idea. The holier-than-thou motormouths in the media ought to tell us who is tickling their palms and let us decide whether it diminishes their credibility.

Hundreds of Washington journalists, print and broadcast, speak for money. One of the hottest gabbers on the lecture circuit for the past few years has been ABC's Cokie Roberts. Why this dispenser of cliches and nuggets of extremely mediocre conventional wisdom is regarded as a sage worthy of $35,000 fees, I'll never be able to understand. According to Chicago Tribune Washington bureau chief James Warren, who maintains a "Cokie Watch" in his weekly column, the ABC correspondent and her husband, U.S. News & World Report senior writer Steve Roberts, once pulled down $45,000 to host "forums" for Chicago bankers.

Cokie is only the most egregious example. Among her ABC colleague, Cam Donaldson gets as much as $30,000 for a speech, and David Brinkley pulls down $18,000. A year ago, the network was getting so much grief about its well-paid correspondents getting big bucks for talking that it banned paid speeches to trade associations and for-profit corporations. But there is no rule forbidding them from taking large sums from organizations which are then reimbursed by lobbyists and businesspersons.

But all this is beside the main point, which is that Byrd has come up with a good idea.

Entrance exams scores below average

TALLAHASSEE — Scores for Florida college freshmen have slipped below the national average for the first time, according to results released by Education Commissioner Frank T. Brogan.

The average 1995 score on the ACT was 20.7, down from 20.8 in 1994. Nationally, scores were unchanged from last year, at 20.8.

"With a composite score a fraction below the national average, it's clear Florida needs to focus on high standards and ensuring that our students take challenging courses," Brogan said Wednesday.

Brogan is pushing for higher academic standards for students and for the elimination of level one or introductory type, lower level courses.

Florida students scored above the national average on the math section (20.4 versus 20.2) and below the national average on reading, English and science reasoning sections.

Results in Florida showed an average score of 21.2 in reading (21.3 nationally), 20.0 in English (20.2 nationally), 20.6 in science reasoning (21.0 nationally).

Florida scores for minority graduates remained steady, except for Asians, whose scores declined, from 22.1 to 21.9.

Some 35,500 high school graduates took the test in Florida. Either the ACT or Scholastic Aptitude Test is required for admission to state universities.

Heat

According to Davis, Floridians are well-prepared for the heat.

"You have air conditioned houses, air conditioned cars and air conditioned businesses," he explained. "Often, in places like Chicago, there isn't much in the way of air conditioning. There's no place to escape the heat."

Experts all agree that the best way to avoid heat-related illnesses is to avoid the heat as much as possible.

Staying in air conditioned buildings whenever possible and consuming a lot of liquids (not alcohol, which has a dehydrating effect) is the best way to fend off the effects of the heat.

The worst of the heat is over, but it is still not a good idea to stay out in the elements for extended periods of time if it can be avoided.

Ants

Erin, has sent the little six-legged creatures scurrying for cover.

"Ants are like people," Susan Kirkpatrick, public relations coordinator for Orkin-Rollins Pest Control, said. "They don't want to be out in the damp and the rain."

Kirkpatrick said the months of June and July are typically bad months for the ant population inside homes.

The season has extended longer this year because of the hurricane, she noted.

Pest control experts say that the ants are not more populous when they become visible in the home, they have just come in from the outside. While hot weather does trigger their reproduction, they would remain outside if the weather were drier, Kirkpatrick said.

While the types of ants that typically inhabit the southeastern region of the country are seemingly endless, she said, the biggest problems are caused by carpenter ants and by fire ants.

Carpenter ants (Camponotus) are among the largest ants. They nest in the wood of trees, but when they are flooded out of their homes by rain, they fall onto the roofs and bore their way into the house where they dig caverns through the wood as they search for the food, preferably sweets, they enjoy eating. They do not eat the wood, but their digging will damage the wood.

Fire ants (Solenopsis invicta) usually remain outdoors, but often are swept into homes in low-lying areas that easily flood. Outdoors, they nest in homes that are up to two feet in diameter and one and a half feet high. Once inside a home, they will nest in walls.

Fire ants are very aggressive and will sting any intruding animal or person repeatedly.

Orkin has published a booklet that includes many suggestions homeowners can use to reduce the threat of ants in their homes. Among the suggestions are:

- Correct moisture problems, such as leaking roofs and blocked gutters.
- Correct poorly ventilated attics or crawl spaces.
- Store garbage cans in dry places (not under the sink); empty often and keep clean.
- Trim tree limbs so they don't touch or hang over your house.
- Consider replacing or re-storing rotted or water damaged wood.
- Inspect possible entry spots

- Keep cupboards clean
  - Inspect plants for ants before you bring them inside.
- To receive a copy of the booklet, call 1-800-583-HOUSE. The ant invasion should begin to subside in the drier weather, Kirkpatrick said.
- "Just keep an eye out for the ants and try to take precautions to make sure they stay out," she said.

Health department veteran, pioneer dies at her home

By Marva Hawkins
Herald Correspondent

Violetta Gregory King, Sanford pioneer and well-known community servant, passed away Sunday, Aug. 13 at her home on west 12th Street.

To those of the community of Sanford who were privileged to know her, she will be greatly missed.

Mrs. King, for 47 years, was a career veteran of the Seminole County Health Department, having joined the department in 1933 and retired in 1980.

She was indeed a part of the formative years of the Seminole County Health Department. She served as the only smiling clinic aide, always greeting patients and greeting the small kids with that pleasantness never to be forgotten even when they were afraid.

Mrs. King's faithful service is still being remembered by those who worked with her in the health department. They respected her guidance given to the department over the years. She not only served as a friend but was a counselor to all of her fellow employees, and all who were affiliated with the public health movement in Seminole County.

Her kind manner and calmness in all situations lingers on in the hearts and minds of all who knew her.

She leaves a loving and devoted husband, Samuel, stepdaughter Mary King Raines, Eatonville, a host of nieces, nephews, cousins, and friends.

She was an ardent member of Allen Chapel African Methodist Episcopal Church.

The services for Mrs. King will be held today at 3 p.m. at Allen Chapel AME Church.

County Chamber President Wayne Weinberg said he is extremely excited about the entire day's events, especially the tour. "While some of the people who will be participating have seen some of these areas before," he said, "this will be the first time for others, and afford everyone to get a total overview of the entire northern Seminole County area."

The program is expected to last through the better part of the day, until all of the tours have concluded.

Anti-Gingrich protests attract House members

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Newt Gingrich, who preaches reform of the "welfare state" wherever he goes, draws protesters the way trees on a golf course attract lightning. But a new breed of opponent has surfaced in recent demonstrations — fellow House members.

Congressional Democrats usually respond to Gingrich in the traditional forums of press releases, speeches and news conferences.

But this month, as the speaker traversed the country to promote his ideas and to sign copies of his best-selling book, Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., and John Lewis, D-Ga., became part of the protests.

Lewis spoke to protesters in Atlanta, but said he didn't know they would force their way onto a hotel stage and delay a Gingrich speech for several hours. Schroeder had her staff organize an anti-Gingrich demonstration in Denver, but did not attend because she was in Washington.

In interviews, both lawmakers defended their roles, but Gingrich.

NOTICE OF LAND USE CHANGE, DEVELOPMENT OF REGIONAL IMPACT (DRI) SUBSTANTIAL DEVIATION DEVELOPMENT ORDER, AND AMENDMENT TO PLANNED UNIT DEVELOPMENT (PUD) FINAL MASTER PLAN FOR THE OVIEDO CROSSING DRI PUBLIC HEARING TO BE HELD AUGUST 22, 1995

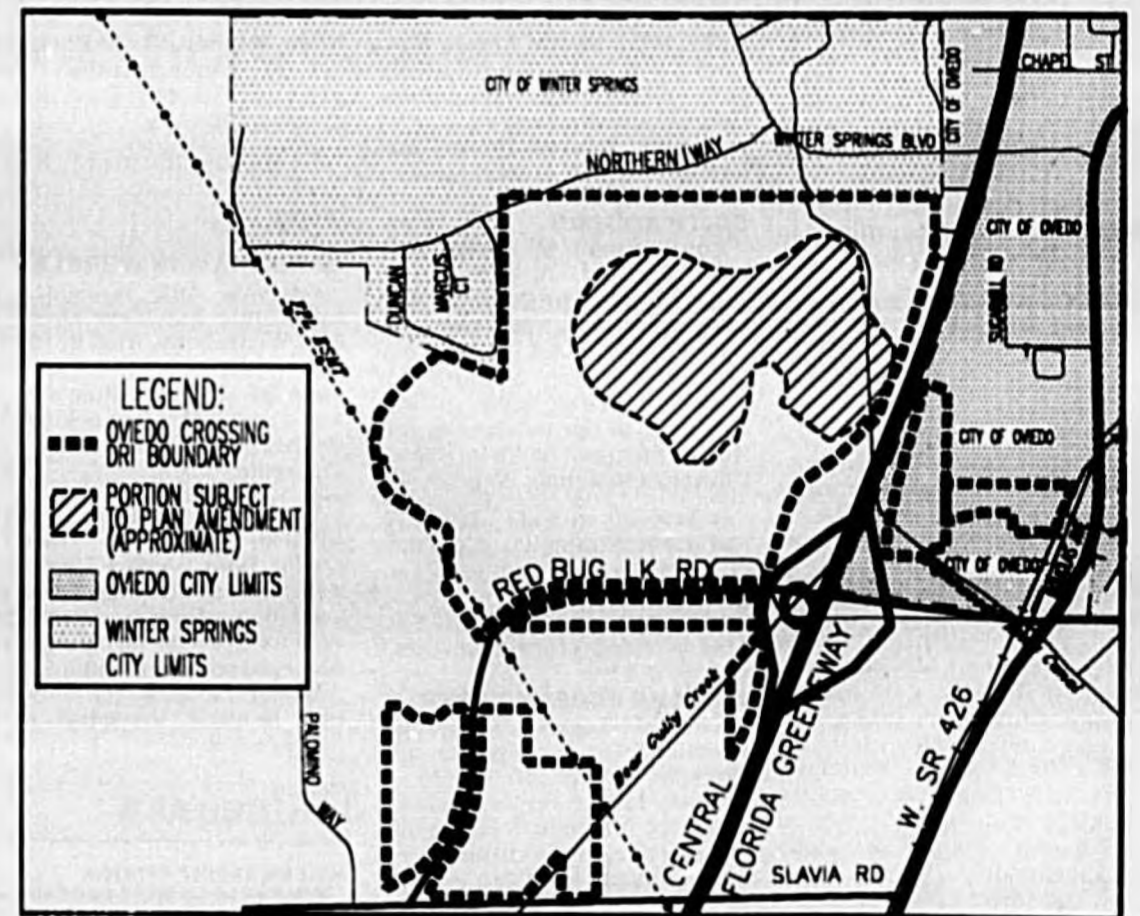

The Seminole County Board of County Commissioners (the Board) proposes to adopt the following by ordinance:

AN ORDINANCE FURTHER AMENDING ORDINANCE NUMBER 91-13, AS PREVIOUSLY AMENDED, KNOWN AS THE SEMINOLE COUNTY COMPREHENSIVE PLAN; AMENDING THE FUTURE LAND USE MAP OF THE SEMINOLE COUNTY COMPREHENSIVE PLAN BY VIRTUE OF AN AMENDMENT RELATING TO A DEVELOPMENT OF REGIONAL IMPACT; PROVIDING FOR LEGISLATIVE FINDINGS; PROVIDING FOR SEVERABILITY; PROVIDING FOR EXCLUSION FROM THE SEMINOLE COUNTY CODE; AND PROVIDING FOR AN EFFECTIVE DATE.

The purpose of the Ordinance is to adopt a requested Large Scale Development Amendment to the Seminole County Comprehensive Plan as described and depicted below.

On August 22, 1995, the Seminole County Board of County Commissioners (the Board) will conduct a public hearing (Adoption Hearing) in the County Services Building, 1101 East First Street, Sanford, FL, Room 1028 (Board Chambers) beginning at 7:00 P.M., or as soon thereafter as possible. The purpose of this hearing will be to receive public input, consider comments from the Florida Department of Community Affairs, and any local government or other agency, on an amendment to the Seminole County Comprehensive Plan to change the land use from Higher Intensity Planned Development (Transitional) to Higher Intensity Planned Development (Core) and from Planned Development (Office) to Planned Development (Retail Services/Office and Wellness Center) on approximately 94.4 acres of the Oviedo Crossing Development of Regional Impact (DRI) property. The Board will also consider a Development of Regional Impact Substantial Deviation Order and amendment to the PUD (Planned Unit Development) Final Master Plan for the Oviedo Crossing DRI.

The County has received a Development of Regional Impact - Application for Development Approval (Substantial Deviation) application for the Oviedo Crossing DRI from the Viera Company (the Applicant) to undergo development-of-regional impact review, as provided for in Section 380.06, Florida Statutes. The proposed Substantial Deviation would amend the approved final master plan for the Oviedo Crossing DRI to permit a regional shopping center and medical campus/wellness center as a part of the overall DRI development plan, and would delete the approved multi-family residential use. The request also includes an amendment to the approved PUD (Planned Unit Development) Final Master Plan. The Oviedo Crossing DRI is located in the immediate vicinity of the Central Florida GreenWay (S.R. 417)/Red Bug Lake Road Interchange in unincorporated Seminole County, with a portion of the proposed development being located in the City of Oviedo, and contains approximately 435 acres (see map below) (BCC District 1).

The general public is encouraged to appear at this hearing and present input in accordance with the procedures used by the Board or submit comments to the Comprehensive Planning Office, 1101 East First Street, Sanford, FL 32771, telephone (407) 321-1130, extension 7371. This hearing may be continued from time to time as found necessary by the Board. The proposed Substantial Deviation Development Order, Comprehensive Plan amendment, amendment to the PUD Final Master Plan, complete legal description, proposed ordinance, and related information, including any comments received, are available for public review at the address above, Room 3156, between the hours of 8:00 A.M. and 5:00 P.M., Monday through Friday, excluding holidays. Please note that land use amendments on property containing flood prone and wetland areas remain subject to the applicable Conservation land use designation and various overlay zoning classifications and the provisions relating thereto.

Persons with disabilities needing assistance to participate in any of these proceedings should contact the Employee Relations Department ADA Coordinator 48 hours in advance of the meeting at (407) 321-1130, extension 7941. Persons are advised that if they decide to appeal any decision made at this hearing, they will need a record of the proceedings, and for such purpose, they may need to ensure a verbatim record of the proceedings is made, which record includes the testimony and evidence upon which the appeal is based, Section 286.0105, Florida Statutes.

Early evidence of walking upright

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — It was probably hairy like a chimp. It weighed maybe 120 pounds. And most importantly, it walked upright about 4 million years ago.

That's the picture scientists draw of a previously unknown human ancestor revealed by a new fossil study — one that says our forerunners were walking like people nearly half a million years earlier than has been shown before.

Until now, the oldest direct evidence of upright walking had been a set of famous footprints left in wet volcanic ash 3.8 million years ago at Laetoli in Tanzania.

Now the record-holder is an incomplete shin bone from the hairy creature, which lived in northwestern Kenya, researchers said in today's issue of the journal Nature.

Details of the bone indicate upright walking, because they suggest the bone had adapted to bearing more weight than it would have if the ancestor had also used its arms to get around. For example, below the platform-like top of the bone, the shaft narrows less abruptly than it does in a chimp. That makes it stronger.

In addition, the bone indicates that the ancestor did not climb trees much because it shows the creature lacked powerful, chimp-like muscles that would let it use the big toe for grasping, said researcher Alan Walker.

The bone is among a collection of fossils that researchers say reveal the newfound ancestor, which they named Australopithecus anamensis. They say the fossils, which were discovered between 1965 and this year, are between 3.9 million and 4.2 million years old.

The fossil trove is described in Nature by Walker, a professor of anthropology and biology at Pennsylvania State University. Meave Leakey, who is head of the paleontology division at the National Museums of Kenya, and others.

Eric Delson, a professor of anthropology at Lehman College in New York, agreed that the shin bone probably indicates that human forerunners walked upright about 4 million years ago.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Felix is dawdling

MANTEO, N.C. — Hurricane Felix dawdled off the North Carolina coast today, slowing from a creep to a near-halt in a slow dance that infuriated those who remained in the storm's path.

"We're ready for this storm to come already — and leave," said Fran Crutchfield of Nags Head. "We've had our excitement."

In Nags Head, people spray-painted slogans on the plywood boards they used to cover their windows. One, spread across three sheets of plywood, read: "Felix — You Cat — Scram."

The huge storm, never a fast one, slowed from 14 mph to a virtual standstill. At 2 a.m., it was about 150 miles east of the long, skinny Outer Banks islands.

Emotional meltdown

LOS ANGELES — After a year of mounting tensions, the O.J. Simpson trial at last reached emotional meltdown.

It showed Wednesday in the pained expression of murder victim Ronald Goldman's father, Fred Goldman, who spoke of Simpson's lawyers in a voice mixed with hurt and anger: "Do they take us all for morons?"

It showed as defense attorney Robert Shapiro alleged in clear, slow, unemotional tones that Christopher Darden is a prosecutor so reprehensible he should be reported to the State Bar.

It showed in the incredulous look on the face of Darden, who responded that the defense attorneys are so vile that he is sickened to even have to share a podium with them.

And it showed in the haggard faces of jurors, sequestered since Jan. 11, locked in a room for hours on end with only their paperbacks and knitting while attorneys argued over issues the jury knows nothing about.

When testimony resumed Wednesday afternoon with the head of the police crime lab, Michele Keatler, being grilled on paperwork procedures, it was so boring and repetitious that none of the jurors took notes. Some appeared on the brink of dozing off.

Packwood may have altered diary

WASHINGTON — The Senate Ethics Committee has evidence that Sen. Bob Packwood altered diaries that he was forced to surrender under court order, contradicting the lawmaker's assertion that the material was not changed, sources familiar with the panel's Packwood investigation say.

On Wednesday, Packwood for the first time publicly denied that diaries turned over to the committee were changed — as the committee has charged.

In an interview with The Associated Press on Wednesday, Packwood, R-Ore., asserted, "No altered diaries were ever given to the committee. The committee never received any altered materials."

The sources, speaking only on condition they not be named, said Packwood voluntarily provided unaltered versions of portions of his diaries to the committee, which was looking into allegations of sexual and official misconduct on Packwood's part.

But later, Packwood was forced by a federal judge to provide all diaries sought by the committee, and those diaries had evidence of alteration, the sources said.

The committee in May found "substantial credible evidence" that the senator altered the diaries when he learned the committee might subpoena them to seek evidence of improper conduct.

The committee issued the same finding for allegations that Packwood made unwanted sexual advances toward 17 women in 18 instances between 1969 and 1990 and that he sought jobs for his wife, while the couple was divorcing, from lobbyists and businessmen with interests in legislation.

Nip that craving

WASHINGTON — Most people enjoy a chocolate bar with just a twinge of guilt and go about their day, but for women who binge eat, cravings for such concoctions can be overwhelming.

A University of Michigan nutritionist is out to change that, hunting for a drug to nip those cravings at their source in the brain and thus battle certain eating disorders.

"It's possible that we may be able to control the onset of binges," said Adam Drewnowski.

At issue are not people who just need to shed weight, but sufferers of medically defined disorders that cause severe food cravings and huge eating binges, often followed by vomiting or laxatives to fight the resulting pounds. About 1 million Americans, mostly women, suffer from one such disorder, bulimia.

Anti-depressants that affect the brain chemical serotonin offer help to some binge eaters, but not all, and they can cause side effects. So doctors are looking for better alternatives.

Women who binge most desire foods high in fat and sugar — chocolate is No. 1 — while men crave foods high in fat and salt, nutrition surveys show.

Now Drewnowski has linked those chocolate cravings to a brain chemical that gives women physical pleasure from the sweet, and found that blocking production of those chemicals may also block the binge.

Faulkner still ill, tests today

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. — It took 2 1/2 years of fighting for Shannon Faulkner to get into The Citadel's cadet corps, and now her father says she may be just too tired.

"I think she's worn out mentally from the court fight," said Ed Faulkner.

Ms. Faulkner remained bedridden in the college's infirmary today after becoming ill Monday while marching in 100-degree heat — the first day of a rigorous training session the cadets call "hell week."

School spokesman Terry Leedom declined to discuss Ms. Faulkner's condition, citing privacy rules, but said she would be taken to a hospital today for tests.

"Our goal right now is to get her well," he said. "We want to get her back to duty as quickly as possible."

One of Ms. Faulkner's lawyers, Bob Black, also would not discuss her condition.

Her father said the family had not heard from doctors. He noted his daughter had worked out in the heat at home before reporting to The Citadel last Saturday.

The Citadel had cited her physical condition in trying to keep her out. Leedom has said she was more than 20 pounds over U.S. army weight standards for her height.

But a federal judge ruled the college had no objective policy that would keep her out based on her physical condition, and the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed.

Citadel lawyer Dawes Cooke said the college can discharge students for medical reasons but the court would be consulted if that became an issue with Ms. Faulkner.

Meanwhile, nearly 600 other new cadets were out before dawn Wednesday, doing sit-ups, push-ups and a two-mile run around the campus as part of a fitness test. One of them became ill in the mid-70s temperatures and was treated at the infirmary and released.

Ms. Faulkner must meet U.S. Army physical requirements for women, including running two miles in 18 minutes, 54 seconds — 3 minutes slower than for men. She must do 18 push-ups and 50 sit-ups in two minutes each; men must do 42 push-ups and 52 sit-ups.

Gingrich

grich, R-Ga., was outraged. He derided the Atlanta demonstration as "the mindless protest," and facetiously said he had "no problem" with Schroeder being "maniacally negative."

Schroeder and Lewis said they wouldn't rule out future involvement of House members in anti-Gingrich demonstrations.

"I think sometimes it's necessary to take extraordinary and unusual measures to communicate the importance of and dramatize an issue," said Lewis, who spoke at an Aug. 7 rally protesting GOP plans to reduce Medicare costs.

Lewis, who went to Congress after being a leader in the civil rights movement, said, "Protests have a legitimate and appropriate place in our society. In another period, people criticized sit-ins and freedom rides. It took those necessary acts of protest to help educate and inform citizens of this country."

"The speaker is a symbol. He's the personification of what the Republican revolution is all about. People have to find different ways — if necessary, nonviolent protests — to dramatize dissatisfaction," Lewis said.

Schroeder directed her staff to send faxes to groups interested in joining an anti-Gingrich protest Aug. 10 at a Denver bookstore where the speaker was signing his book, "To Renew America."

The demonstrators chanted outside the store against Gingrich's stands on the environment, civil rights, women's rights, student loans and job safety, among other issues. One demonstrator told people leaving the store with the book to "use it as toilet paper."

"My constituents said, 'Can we get into see Newt?'" Schroeder said, referring to those who wanted to protest the speaker's policies, not buy his book. "My staff said, 'Here's a big (newspaper) ad about Newt. He's going to be in town.' All these groups wanted to get a message to him. So I said, 'Let them know he's coming.'"

Gingrich responded, "If she is using her office staff and her office" to organize a demonstration against him, "it's a violation of House rules."

The rules do not specifically address staff roles in organizing demonstrations. Congressional employees cannot perform nonofficial, personal or campaign duties during their official work time. But the definition of "nonofficial" is not always clear, and Schroeder said she considered the coordination work for the demonstration to be official. Lewis said his staff wasn't involved in the Atlanta protest.

Schroeder's staffers weren't the only congressional employees who involved themselves in the Denver demonstration. Counter-demonstrators included a field representative of Sen. Hank Brown, R-Colo.

"I went down on my lunch hour for the book signing," said the Brown staffer, Andrew Merritt. Unable to wait in the long line, Merritt said he joined pro-Gingrich demonstrators and held a banner that said: "Republicans: Promises Made, Promises Kept."

Gingrich has had his own problems with misuse of his office and staff.

In 1990, he was rebuked by the House ethics committee for improper activities of his staff.

On March 8 that year, the committee criticized two letters sent by Gingrich's office on official letterhead about a senior citizens' cruise sponsored by a travel company.

Kremlin tightens grip, Russians fear KGB comeback

By DEBORAH SEWARD
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW — Four years, five bosses and six name changes since the 1991 coup that broke Soviet power, the dreaded KGB is alive, well and making a comeback under the protection of none other than Boris Yeltsin.

Last month, Yeltsin promoted the chief of the Kremlin guards, a close friend, to head the Federal Security Service, his latest move to tighten his grip on the old KGB.

Many Russians, including opposition politicians, businessmen, bankers, former dissidents — even some of Yeltsin's top advisers — are jittery about the president's growing ties to the secret police.

With the campaign for parliamentary elections about to start, opposition politicians have voiced concern the secret service will be used to manipulate the December vote on Yeltsin's behalf.

"In my position, I know the capabilities of various special services," Yeltsin's national security adviser, Yuri Baturin, told the Obshchaya Gazeta recently.

"So I made a rule for myself, I don't say anything in the office, or on the phone, or anywhere else that I wouldn't say on live television," said Baturin, reflecting widespread fear of the growing power of Gen. Alexander Kozhakov, who as Yeltsin's bodyguard and companion exercises growing influence over Russian security services.

Despite all the name changes, many Russians still refer to the secret police as the KGB. The organization's critics say it is stronger than at any point since the 1991 effort to overthrow former Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, which the KGB and other top Communist Party officials masterminded.

Wary of the role the KGB played, Yeltsin seems to want to preserve his power by ensuring the secret police remain loyal to him.

The appointment of Gen. Mikhail Barsukov, who commanded elite troops who attacked the parliament to oust Yeltsin's foes during the October 1993 political violence in Moscow, is a key element of that strategy.

Barsukov, a Kozhakov ally who has the president's ear, has said one of his main goals is to consolidate the sprawling network of organizations that emerged after the KGB was reorganized in 1991.

But the secret police under Barsukov is likely to be less fearsome than its predecessors, which under Soviet rule were the "sword and shield" of the Communist Party and brooked no opposition.

The long arm of the secret police stretched across the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, claiming millions of victims in Siberian labor camps, suppressing dissidents and brutally squelching any kind of independent unsanctioned activity.

The latest changes in Russia's post-Soviet secret police do create a powerful, centralized security apparatus. Several elite anti-terrorism units that were once under the Interior Ministry have been transferred to the Federal Security Service. More changes can be expected. Reformers have been ousted.

In addition to personnel changes, Yeltsin earlier this year signed a new law giving the secret police vast powers, which allows the service to run its own prisons and enter a private business or residence without a warrant.

"This law strengthens their powers. It hurts civilian control," said Boris Pustynsev, the head of a group called Civilian Control that tries to monitor the KGB's activities. "This service has so many powers it is a direct attack on human rights."

Russian lawmakers acknowledge they have very little control over what goes on at Lyubyanka, the big yellow building that houses KGB headquarters.

"Control is narrow. In reality, we only have financial control and then just on the budget in general," said Sergei Boskhov, deputy chairman of the Committee on Security in the Duma, Russia's lower house of parliament. "We are not permitted to have control on which operations the money is spent."

The secret police is believed to employ fewer people than the old KGB, but the number of employees and its budget remain a secret.

KGB officials still like to refer to themselves as "cheekisty," in honor of the name of the first Soviet secret police, and they scoff at fears the KGB is becoming more powerful.

"It's like the dragon in a fairy tale. They cut off his head, and it's a wonder how it's still barely alive," said Vladimir Tomatovsky, a security service spokesman.

In fact, although the KGB was revamped after 1991, there were no real efforts to dismantle or reform it similar to those that took place in most of the rest of Eastern Europe after the fall of communism.

While Yeltsin banned the Communist Party and partially opened its archive, nothing of the sort occurred at the KGB. The shadow organization's archives remained tightly shut to the public and there has been little attempt to bring former KGB officials to justice.

she said smiling. "I'm pretty proud of the little guy. He's been through a lot. The whole family's been through a lot."

Personal problems in addition to the stress of Tony's illness contributed to his parents' divorce. The Flowers' daughter, Viviana, now 12, was shuttled between various relatives while she was growing up as her mother attended to her son's treatments and hospital stays, straining the mother-daughter relationship. Flowers and her two children now live together in Lake County, moving from Sanford. The brother and sister are extremely close.

The support of her parents, Vickie and Tony Getman and former in-laws, especially her ex-mother-in-law, Betty Flowers helped the family through the ordeal.

"I'd like to thank everyone," Kathy Flowers said. "the hospital staff and doctors and my ex-husband's mother, Betty Flowers. I wouldn't have made it through this if it wasn't for her. She was there for me."

The two have been estranged since the divorce, Flowers added.

Through the tough times, Flowers earned a GED and weathered an HRS investigation of suspected child abuse before the leukemia was diagnosed.

Child welfare workers were called when bruises were discovered all over the little boy.

Before we knew he had the disease, you could just barely touch him and he would get a bruise," his mother recalled. One night, Tony bit his tongue while jumping on the bed, and the bleeding would not stop, continuing through the night.

Not a particularly religious person, Flowers said her life changed after meeting a woman who advocated positive thinking brings positive actions.

Through his illness, I'd had very negative thoughts and feelings," Flowers said, "but that changed in 1988."

After being released by all the doctors overseeing his care, Flowers said she has been asked to call once a year and tell them how he is doing.

The smiling, sandy-haired boy who beat the odds will be doing just fine.

Department explained "the boy turned quickly left, right into the path of the car."

Whitmore said the preliminary investigations have ruled the incident an accident.

Just as standard procedure, blood was drawn from Smith to check for the presence of alcohol or drugs.

"We don't suspect that there were drugs or alcohol involved," Whitmore said. "It's just routine to do that when there is a fatality involved."

The accident occurred at 3:48 Wednesday afternoon, the second bicycle fatality in as many days.

Smith was not injured in the accident.

Longwood Preps head to North Carolina today

By GARY COATOAM
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — With four tournament championships under its belt and a 13-1 record, it seems that not even a hurricane scares the Longwood Babe Ruth Prep 13-year-old All-Star team.

Hurricane Felix may make landfall in North Carolina in the next few days, but the Longwood squad still plans to fly to Kinston for the Prep World Series today. Longwood manager Andy Westervelt points out that the local nine won the Southeast regional in Hendersonville, N.C. by playing in between rain delays caused by the remains of Hurricane Erin.

"I think Hurricane Felix is probably a good omen for us," Westervelt said. Longwood will represent the Southeast Regional in the eight-team double-elimination World Series and open tournament play against a team from Taylor, Indiana on Sunday.

Westervelt is excited about the team's chances. "I feel our offense is tremendous," Westervelt said. "We can hit with anyone. Our pitching is as good as anybody's. I feel we have a very good shot at it."

Making it to the World Series seems like a fitting end for this group of 13 year olds, who were within one victory, one out actually, of making it to the Major Division World Series last year, but lost a doubleheader, one game going into extra innings, and missing the opportunity.

Since the start of All-Star play the team has been virtually untouchable, rolling through district (Altamonte Springs, Sanford) and Area play 6-0 and then winning its first two games of the state tournament 18-4 and 10-1 before suffering its lone loss, 3-2 in nine innings to Miami-Latino Americana.

Longwood came back to pound Miami 12-2 in the championship game the next day.

Longwood racked up four wins in the Southeast Regional by scores of 16-5, 9-4, 5-1 and 14-0, a difference of 44-10.

The team is led by Kevin Graves, who won two game and saved one on the mound in the Southeast Regional and has allowed just one earned run in 34 innings of All-Star play.

Longwood outfit its four opponents 60-20. Leading the way was catcher Chris Westervelt, who collected nine hits, including a double.

Other top hitters were Justin Hawarah (nine hits, two doubles), Eric Schmoek (seven hits, three doubles), Graves (seven hits, two doubles), Jose Rosado (seven hits), Anthony DiFonzo and Jeff Epperson (each with four hits, two doubles) and Kevin Melillo (four hits).

Also on the team are Tommy Harris, Mickey Kallm, Matt Matr, Richardo Montalvo, Mike Puzozalski and J.T. Williamson. Assistant coaches are John Melillo and Rick Hawarah.

Rock L's-Mice rule Winter Springs

From Staff Reports

WINTER SPRINGS — If you are going to be a championship team, you have to be ready to play, no matter what the circumstances.

Despite playing without four regulars and having to play lefthanders at both second base and shortstop, Rock L's-Mice waltzed to a 10-5 victory over T's Angels to clinch the championship of the Winter Springs Recreation Department Women's Monday Night Class C Summer Slowpitch Softball League at Central Winds Park Wednesday night.

The regular season actually came to a close last Monday, so the game was moved to Wednesday night so the league can get rain outs made up before the start of the Fall season.

"I had four girls call this afternoon who couldn't make the game for various reasons," said Rock L's manager Mickey Norton. "So I wasn't so worried about winning the game as I was about filling the positions. But it obviously worked out well."

The Mice are now 7-2 on the season and will complete the season with an 8:30 p.m. game against Bill's Elbow

Mackey, "Guns" now 3-0

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — A star is born? For the third straight game Jermaine Mackey scored 15-plus points to lead the Young Guns to another crushing victory, as the undefeated league-leaders cruised to a 59-35 triumph over the Sanford Magic in the Sanford Recreation Department 16-18 Summer Basketball League in the Dan Pelham Gymnasium at Sanford Middle School Wednesday Night.

In the other game, the Sanford Celtics stayed right on the Young Guns' heels as they edged the Sanford Expos 54-51 to improve to 2-0 on the young season.

The Young Guns are now 3-0 on the season, with the Celtics standing 2-0. Calvary Apostolic Temple is 1-0, while Sanford A.A.U., the Sanford Magic and the Sanford Expos are all 0-2. The Sanford Rebels and First Shiloh Church have not played yet.

Tonight at Sanford Middle School, the Sanford Expos take on the Sanford Rebels at 6:30 p.m. and First Shiloh Church battles the Young Guns at 7:30 p.m.

Mackey poured in 16 first half points as the Young Guns took a 23-18 lead at intermission. Nate Hillery then took over in the second half, netting 16 second half points as the Young Guns scored 36 points to pull away.

Mackey finished with 20 points, while Hillery chipped in with 19 points. Bobby Anderson and Calvin Copeland added eight points for the winners and Mike Morley completed the scoring with four points.

Terry Patrick was the only Sanford Magic player in double figures with 15 points. Also contributing to the Magic attack were Marcus Beasley (nine points), Zeke Seymour (four points), Tim McCloud and Derrick Jones (three points each) and Elgin Holloway (one point).

The second game featured a lot of team play as 13 of the 17 players on the two teams scored at least one point.

Anton Floyd tossed in 11 points for the Sanford Expos, while Titus Waldo scored seven points and Elrem Williams six points for the Sanford Celtics as the two teams were tied 26-26 at halftime.

Is sperm or blood donation good idea?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a healthy 28-year-old male who works full time, but I can't seem to make enough money. What is your opinion of donating sperm and/or blood plasma? Is this a reasonable alternative to supplement my income?

DEAR READER: You could certainly supplement your income by donating blood and/or sperm. To determine the need for such services in your community (and, hence, the amount of reimbursement), call your nearest teaching hospital or university-affiliated health center.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've suffered with chronic back pain for several years. My diagnosis was a degenerative and ruptured disc at L5-S1. I had back surgery and my doctor inserted pedicle screws, facet nuts and attached a rod to the screws in my back. Since then, I've had severe pain and other complications. My doctor now says if he removes the hardware, some of my symptoms might be relieved. My problem is that most of my pain was there before the surgery and mentally I'm unable to accept another procedure because of other health problems. Do you have any advice on this complex issue?

DEAR READER: You are in a bind. Because you had a ruptured disc, you required surgery. However, the operation left you with more pain. Naturally, you are unwilling to undergo another procedure that may or may not help you.

Not being a neurosurgeon or orthopedic specialist, I am not qualified to advise you about a specific approach. Therefore, I urge you to obtain a second opinion from super-specialists in a teaching center. Perhaps your pain could be controlled by a TENS unit, a small machine that administers tiny electrical shocks. Or, maybe, acupuncture or hypnosis might assist you. At the very least, you should be actively pursuing a program of physical therapy and rehabilitation. Finally, the super-specialists could resolve the issue of whether or not to have additional surgery.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach to Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Most of the time we look only at full deals. But there are many single-suit situations that keep players thinking. Suppose, for example, you have the A-8-5-3 in the dummy opposite Q-10-9-8 in your hand. How do you play this suit to best advantage?

Today's deal occurred during a tournament in Spain and caught many players off guard. North's double was negative, promising four hearts.

West led the spade king; four, jack, three. West continued with the spade eight; five, six, ace. Several declarers, knowing that the percentage play in hearts was to take two fineses, ran the heart eight. However, East won with the jack, played a club to his partner's ace, and another spade promoted a second trump trick for the defense.

One South tried the heart queen at trick three: king, ace.

two. Now came a low heart from the dummy, but East went in with the jack, played a club to West's ace and overruffed the dummy on the next spade. Again, one down.

Another declarer tried playing the ace and another heart, but that didn't work either.

There was one successful declarer. At trick three, he played a diamond to dummy's jack. Then he called for a low heart, finessing his eight when East played low. Here, that drew West's king. South ruffed the next spade with dummy's ace, played a heart to his nine, drew East's last trump and claimed, conceding one club trick. This line of play loses when East has the doubleton seven-four or seven-two of hearts. (If East has a low singleton heart, the play is complicated.)

Phillip Alder's book, "Get Smarter at Bridge," is available.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 18, 1995

Constructive developments could be in the offing in the year ahead if you become involved with persons who share your ideals and standards. Seek meaningful alliances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do not give your friends any valid reasons today to think you're manipulating them. It could jeopardize the association. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that govern you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Make sure to state your zodiac sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) To succeed today, you must have a good sense of timing and not launch projects prematurely. If you do start things and they fail, you might not get a second shot.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you get off on the wrong foot today by making a mistake, you may compound it instead of correcting it. Have someone you trust check your efforts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not bank too heavily today on financial possibilities that haven't been proven. What you're counting on might not come as soon as you anticipate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This will be a good day to try to resolve problems with others, but don't make all the concessions yourself. Compromise is a two-way street.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Use common sense regarding health matters today. If you know there are things you shouldn't eat or drink, avoid them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Treat all of your friends equally today so that your behavior does not generate hard feelings. If you don't, some form of payback is indicated.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

Your reputation could suffer today if you tell others you've taken care of something, but in reality, you haven't.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Pretenses will not enhance your standing in the eyes of others today. In fact, it might do just the opposite. Avoid all forms of affectation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do not let anyone handle delicate matters for you today unless you have complete confidence in his or her abilities. It could cost you money if things go wrong.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This will be one of those days when those you delegate assignments to won't perform them half as well as you can. Try not to invite mediocrity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Matters that require immediate attention should not be postponed today regardless of the reasons you find for delaying them. Rationalizing could cause trouble.
