BUNGAL-ODE

There's a jingle in the jungle,
'Nuth the jumbie and pin,
They are mangling the tangle
Of the underbrush and vine,
And my blood is all a-jingle
At the sound of blow on blow,
As I recant each single shingle
On my lanky bungalow.

There's a jingle in the jungle,
I am counting every nail,
And my mind is bungalowed,
Bungalooping down a trail,
And I dream of every angle
Where I angle at my ease,
Naught to set my nerves a-jingle,
I may bungle all I please.

For I oft get bungalowed
In the mingled human grove,
And I long for bungalowed
In some bungalow grove;
In a cooling bung location,
Where all troubling trials intrude,
'Nuth some bungalow rooftruss
In east-bungalowitude.

Oh, I think with bungalowing
Of the strangling social wangle;
Where they range after bangles,
Or for some new-fangled whine,
And I know by bungalowing
That is all my bungalow,
That a little bungalowion
Mendeth every mortal man's.

Oh, a man that's bungalowing
For the single and the loan,
Is a very bungalowion,
If he dangles on at home,
Catch the bungalowionotive;
If you want to fare the best,
Why, a bungalowion will do it,
You can borrow it of me!

There was some considerable blind tigers in the court the other day and the sight of so many give rise to the thought that the present system has been set upon the man or woman who becomes obsessed with the idea of selling booze in a dry territory. It is my humble opinion that the law should allow the mayor to levy a fine of $100 for the first offense and after that there should be no fine whatsoever but the culprit for the second offense should go on the roads for one year of hard labor. If that does not cure them give them two years, and they would at least stop selling booze until their two years was served. As it is now, the city seems to want the money and by giving a man a ten spot for finding a booze seller places a premium on the crime. They come up before the mayor and he can only assess a small fine, which is invariably paid and the offender goes right on selling again. In the Orlando court the other day a batch of prisoners were turned loose because the informers were found to be professional spotters and the justice held that these informers were no better than the sellers and were just as reliable in their testimony. This blind tiger business is enough to worry the officials to death for it is here always and will be, the person who sells blind tiger booze always voting and working for a dry town in order to ply their trade without a license.

I really believe, though, if the laws were amended to place all the tigers on the roads for at least two years and no fine that the practice would be stopped.

William Allen White, the well known newspaper and magazine writer of Emporia, Kansas, recently expressed his views of the influence and effect of prohibition in the Sunflower State. He said:

I have grown from infancy to the age of forty-two in Kansas, and I am greatly prejudiced in favor of prohibition. From the time I was sixteen years old until I was twenty-two I never saw an open saloon. I know of thousands of children who never yet have seen a saloon. We have never had any trouble to keep our town and county and state going. The town of Emporia is being paved from one end to the other with brick and asphalt without a dollar's worth of liquor money in it. The revenues of Kansas for nearly thirty years have been raised without liquor licenses and we have built the best system of schools in the world. Taxes are low because the average working man owns his own home, and thus taxes are spread out upon thousands of working people who are thrifty, honest and hard working, rather than upon hundreds of landlords who are taxed to maintain the criminal costs in the courts. And it costs no more to enforce the prohibitory law than it does any other law on the statute books.

The Judge's charge doesn't always affect a man so much as the charge his lawyer is going to make.

It's the man of many parts who sometimes goes all to pieces.

Delightful Confection
in Black and White.

FRENCH MODEL OF CHIFFON AND SATIN

Black and white were never more popular in the costume world than they are this summer. And the slouchy fashionable silhouette of the pictured black and white gown is beautifully preserved. The materials used are satin-in-black for the slit underkirt and bloused bodice and white chiffon for the crossed over skirt and the tunic. The Balkan sash is of black chiffon with ends of white satin and ornate motifs of braid in both tones.

SONG TO MISS WILSON.

Miss Nevin, Aunt of Mr. Bayre, Writes Verses to Prospective Bride.

Miss Blanche Nevin, the sculptor, has composed a song of welcome to Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the president, who is to become the bride of Miss Nevin's nephew, Francis Howes Bayre, which was recently given out for publication. It is as follows:

Fling the door open, swing the gate wide
Welcome the entering feet of the bride,
Eager the groom on the threshold stands,
Holding his arms and his outstretched hands.

Blessed are you who true love win,
Jessie, come in, come in!
In heat of summer, in winter's cold,
This roof shall shelter young or old,
Come wail, come woe, what a'er betide,
Palm to palm and side by side,
Into the house of your true love's kin,
Jessie, come in, come in!

Sweet pink clover bloom over the grass,
Welcome the lover's feet with his lass,
Pride of the golden hair and eyes,
Blue with the lustrous hue of the skies,
Blessed are you who true love win,
Jessie, come in, come in!

It was at Miss Nevin's home that Miss Jessie Wilson met Mr. Bayre, and following a recent visit there of the pair the engagement was announced.

taates, but the chief characteristics of the old piece of headgear are clearly seen.

The puffed crown is of bright green silk and the brim of gray straw. About the crown is a band of black velvet dotted with green silk roses. The veil is of white washable chiffon cloth.

A Good Suggestion.

When you go on your summer trip have four or five pieces of mat or straw board cut the size of the inside of your trunk, so that they will slip in easily. Wrap dresses in tissue paper and tie to these boards with tape. You can pack or unpack and nothing need be disturbed until it is ready to be worn. You may almost live in a trunk with such an arrangement.

A sheet of glass large enough to hold two handkerchiefs on each side is a convenient article to put in the trunk. It can be easily exposed to light and air and iron handkerchiefs better than a windowpane or mirror.

THE KUDZU VINE

One Of The Best Forage Crops
Raised In Florida

This remarkable vine gives promise of being one of the leading sources of wealth in the southern states in future. It is really a pea vine that springs up from the roots when the first warm days come in the spring of the year and grows vigorously until a killing freeze comes in the fall. This gives a growing season of at least eight months in the year during which several cuttings of hay can be made (some instances are known where four cuttings of hay, averaging two and one-half tons per cutting and making a total yield of ten tons per acre in a single season, have been made). This hay is of the highest quality, being equal to cow pea or alfalfa and much richer than timothy.

The analysis made by the state chemist of Florida shows protein 17.43 and starch and sugar 30.20 being a somewhat richer food than wheat bran. Another remarkable feature is that although the hay is as rich a food as alfalfa, yet it is entirely free from the tendency to cause loose bowels and bloat in horses and other live stock that interferes so seriously with the use of alfalfa. When moistened kudzu hay becomes almost like fresh foliage again and makes an excellent green ration for poultry in winter. It is well adapted for use in making mixed feed stuffs and for all other purposes that alfalfa can be used for.

The hay cures very quickly, retaining its leaves and bright green color instead of shedding as cow peas and velvet beans do; in fair weather it requires only one day before it is ready to put into the barn. For this reason it can be easily cured in the fields in stacks under duck covers, thereby avoiding the expense of building barns and saving labor by using sweep rakes instead of hauling the hay on wagons, after first cutting it with a mowing machine and raking it into windrows with a common horse rake. The hay worth about $20 per ton and up, making the product of an acre yield $200 or over.

Kudzu is of even greater value for grazing purposes than for hay, as it requires no cultivation after the first season and will thrive upon land that is too poor and rough for any other crop. It has been carefully tested on all the types of soil found in Florida and found to do well on all of them from purest sand to the stiffest clay, provided the land is sufficiently drained to admit of growing corn or velvet beans, where the soil is too wet to grow these successfully it is also too wet for kudzu. Like any other crop kudzu will make a stronger growth on rich land, but it does well on land that is too poor for other hay crops and rapidly improves the soil by drawing in nitrogen from the air through its leaves and fixing it in the soil by means of the bacteria in the tubercles on its roots, for it has the same power that cow peas and other legumes have in this respect. This addition to the soil and the protection from washing rains and the beating heat of the sun afforded by the dense growth of vines, causes rapid improvement in the quality of the land planted in kudzu, even poor, worn out land soon becomes like the rich soil that has been recently cleared from the virgin forest. Yet, although poor land becomes rich within a few years, when planted in kudzu, it is advisable to use some fertilizer on such soil the first season in order to hasten the growth of the kudzu until it can draw in this atmospheric nitrogen. After this it will not require fertilizing, for its deep root system draws potash and phosphoric acid from the sub-soil while its leaves draw all of the nitrogen needed by the plant from the air. In this way the soil becomes richer every year instead of becoming exhausted as from growing grasses or hay. These deep roots live to a great age and become stronger and more vigorous as the years pass by.

One planting is permanent and the yield of hay increases as the ground becomes more thickly set with plants from the vines, taking root at the joints. The great number of vines struggling for air and light have a tendency to become more slender and leafy also, and this improves the quality of the hay by eliminating any coarse vines, thereby enabling horses and other live stock to eat it up cleanly without swasting any of it. The vines that run along the surface throw out roots at the joints that become new plants and bind the soil firmly together, thereby preventing the washing and erosion of hillsides by heavy rains. While this improvement of the soil is taking place the field is giving fine returns to its owner by the immense supply of rich green forage, on which the cattle, horses and other live stock can graze, thereby keeping fat and in fine health at a very small cost for eight months in the year.

The roots of the kudzu penetrate so deeply as to make it proof against any dry weather that is ever likely to prevail here. This feature and its peculiar habit of neither blooming or bearing seed causes the vines to remain green and growing during the entire term from spring to fall. The hay can accordingly be cut at any time that is convenient when weather conditions are suitable for curing the hay, as kudzu does not become injured by waiting for good weather as other hay crops do. This feature gives an immense advantage over any other hay crop. Kudzu is propagated by means of the plants that have rooted from the joints of the vines and when transplanted carry with them on their roots the tubercles that are needed to inoculate the soil for fixing the nitrogen from the air into the soil.

In planting kudzu, first plow the land deeply and harrow it, then check it into rows 8 1/2 feet apart each way, setting a plant at each check. Lay tap roots along the bottom of the furrows with crowns slanting upwards to within two inches of the surface, covering them with loose earth to the level of the surface. This requires 1,018 plants to the acre. Give them level cultivation during the first season. A row of cotton may be grown between each row of kudzu the first season if desired. After this they will need no further cultivation, as the vines will run all over the ground the next season and take root at the joints, growing so rapidly as to choke out all other plants (even such pests as nut, Johnson and Bermuda grasses), yet, it is an easy matter to get rid of kudzu if desired, for the plants will only sprout from the crowns and can be killed by cutting off these crowns with a disk plow in hot, dry weather in summer. For this reason there is no danger of kudzu ever becoming a pest.

Kudzu will be an excellent crop to replace cotton in boll weevil sections; the demand for the hay is strong and there is no danger of raising too much, as it can be sent to all parts of the world for market. After the first season there will be no expense except for harvesting the hay, which requires much less labor than making cotton, and it will enrich the soil instead of making it poorer as cotton does; this will avoid having to grow fertilizers. It is free from insect enemies and diseases also, and for these various reasons will be far more profitable than cotton.

Agricultural scientists have been searching in vain for such a plant as kudzu and it will fill a long felt want among our farmers; unfortunately, however, the supply of plants is very limited and the demand for them cannot be fully supplied for many years to come.

Kudzu is perfectly hardy all over the United States and endures the winters as far north as Nova Scotia. It will therefore be a valuable crop in the northern states as well as in the south, although the longer growing season south will be an advantage. Hon. E. B. Eppes, in Florida Quarterly Bulletin.

HUMAN NATURE

Being A Treatise On The Follies And Foibles Of Mankind In Sanford

By R. J. HOLLY

Gentleman in to see me this week wanted to know what I intended to do about the Orlando sewerage and I answered him in words that were not exactly printable but were most emphatic. The Herald has said all it will ever say about that sewerage question. This paper pointed out the real facts in the case in a clear and concise manner and there was so much stir made about it in the state that The Herald was accused of being so sore on Orlando that we would not even allow them to put down sewerage in that city without fusing about it. There was much discussion in the state papers about the matter but very little about it in Sanford and as usual the people have preferred to let the paper fight it out. We do not propose to say anything more about it.

The President of the State Board of Health in a telegram stated that he would not grant permission to any city in Florida to dump their sewerage into deep wells and it is up to the President and the city council of Sanford to see that his ruling is enforced. Those questions can be discussed just so long in the newspapers and then they become tiresome. An editor is only human and his well of good humor runs dry at times just as any other human being. It is human nature to expect the editor to fight other people's battles and bear the brunt of the engagement and while I never yet ducked the blow there are times when even the people's interests pall upon our gizzard and we feel like chucking the job.

It is human nature to cuss the editor if he does and cuss him if he don't and it is just as human for the editor to climb on the men who are directing the wheels of government, cursing them when wrong and commending them when right. The only difference between the attitude of the public and the editor is that the editor is never praised and the men in public life sometimes receive bouquets.

I hear from time to time what this individual or that one who holds an exalted position in the city's affairs or the county's or the state's said about me and how he expected to fix me at some future time and the chances are that the same individual who made the threat was one who at election time had received my undivided support to the detriment of my paper and the loss of friends. And yet on account of his dereliction to his public duties he was censured by this

I have never set myself up on a pedestal as a criterion for the public morals, public turpitude or public men and it gives me greater pleasure to praise men than to censure them, but rest assured that I can do both and will do both as long as I am in the newspaper game.

Only I will not make a song about the shortcomings of any section, city, individual or any municipal government. It is tiresome to me and the readers.

Let's go fishing!

Some day a better pen than is now rampant will write of the psychology of fishing. Straightway seekers after perpetual life will throw away their butter-milk and Bavarian elixirs and take the proper attitude towards life, an attitude that requires certain tools and accessories such as a 4-multiple reel, a mile or so of silk line, a basket of bait and an ice chest. Then the race will grow younger, more agreeable and there will be less competition in the business of getting dollars. When that time comes old Dick Calhoun will be the patron saint of the new party. For many years we have marveled at his craft in hooking the bass, we have been awed by his knowledge of the river depths, and frequently flabbergasted by his information of weather, fish appetites and whatnot.

The English people are all right and second cousins of mine, being next door to Ireland and I would not throwoff on them for the world, but here is one that is too good to keep.

Jack Davison of the Sanford Furniture Co. engaged a new man the other day and he was right from England. He wanted to work and was willing to work. He wanted to work so bad that he got on Jack's nerves after he had engaged him, for he was eternally asking what he should do next.

Bringing in a load of curtain poles from the depot he rustled up to where Jack was busy with a customer and asked what he should do with the poles.

Jack replied off hand, "Throw them in the lake."

Shortly afterward needing a curtain pole Jack asked the new man where he had placed the poles and he informed him that he had thrown them in the lake.

Of course there was a scene at once and as the Englishman sadly departed he was heard to remark:

"These bloody Americans never say what they mean and are blooming fools anyhow."

Mayor Kills Ordinance

Mayor Spencer exercised his prerogative yesterday when he vetoed the ordinance coming up for his signature regarding the new tax on dogs.

But Mayor Spencer and a majority of the people of the city thought the excessive tax would only be a burden falling heavy on dog owners but that no heavier tax would keep the dogs off the streets or prevent them from biting people in case they should have rabies.

Dogs can be kept at home if they are valuable or made to follow their owners. Vicious dogs should not be made to run at large in the city at any time and precautions can be taken to guard against the rabies during the months of July, August and September.

Anyhow, Mayor Spencer saved the dogs and bologna sausage will not be any higher this winter.

Near Drowning at Daytona A party of Orlando boys who went to Daytona Beach Sunday had a thrilling experience in the surf and four of them came so near being drowned that they consider themselves fortunate in being alive today.

The party was composed of Carl Jackson, Leslie Allen, Thomas Langford, Marcus Ford, Arthur Newett, H. D. Ferguson and Wm. Brown. They went in an auto driven by Mr. Brown. Shortly after their arrival they were in the water, but hadn't been in long before Langford got in water too deep for him and called for help and Jackson went to his assistance. By the time Jackson had gotten Langford on his feet Brown was in trouble and Jackson started to rescue him and was joined by Ferguson. There was a strong tide running and the undertow added to this proved too much for them, although they succeeded in getting Brown, who was in a bad way, to the end of the pier. Here they were compelled to stop and their bodies were badly cut by being lashed against the piling which were encrusted with barnacles.

They were finally rescued after several vain attempts by a party of men who were fishing Orlando Sentinel.

GENEVA JOTTINGS

The best entertainment ever seen in Geneva was given Thursday night August 28th at the town hall by the Geneva Mixed Minstrels under the management of Mrs. Endor Curlett. After the opening overture by the Geneva orchestra the curtains rose on a very fine circle of "Niggers" in white costumes, red ties and black belts, with Mrs. Curlett as interloper. The choruses were all new, catchy rag and the jokes good, some being quite personal. The solos were exceptional. Bert Pattishall's "The Pastime" was heard to a good advantage. You're My Girl, A. P. Curry, tenor soloist of Orlando who so kindly came to assist Mrs. Curlett was heard for the first time in Geneva. Mr. Curry sang Rose of My Heart, a solo which gave full play to his beautiful tenor voice, responding to a hearty encore with Daddy. The solo by Miss Agnes Muschbach of Orlando was one of the hits of the evening. This little play is a comedy with a dramatic talent in The Ghost of The Goffin Man, and was so persistently applauded that she was obliged to respond giving Don't Walk so Fast. Mrs. Curlett sang Wipe Your Eyes My Honey, a lullaby which was just suited to her sweet, flexible voice, but her greatest hits were in You're a Great Big Blue Eyed Baby and Salvation Nell, where her winning personality brought down the house. Considering the lack of preparation and the rough, unfinished condition of the hall, one wonders at the beautiful scene effect produced in the choruses. The cotton plantation scene in Geneva, land and the lily pond in You're a Great Big Blue Eyed Baby were greeted with applause on the rising of the curtain. One of the best received numbers on the program was the monologue by Miss Blanche Pattishall on Woman's Rights. Miss Pattishall not only has a perfect negro dialect but she is a good imitator as well and in listening to this monologue it was hard to realize that it did not come from the genuine article. Her response to a hearty encore was short and to the point. The monologue by William Adams, claiming that man is superior in every way to woman was exceptionally good. Many complimentary things were said of the Geneva orchestra, for which credit must be given Mr. Dooley, whose patience in copying and arranging music, brought forth such satisfactory results. This organization is as yet in its infancy, having but recently organized with M. E. Dooley as director. All honor of producing this successful entertainment belongs to Mrs. Curlett, although ably assisted by those taking part. It was she who planned and arranged everything. Those assisting were Misses Blanche Pattishall, Marian Tarbell, Addie Gresham, Jeannette Sheldon, Thelma Tarbell and Agnes Muschbach; Messrs. H. H. Pattishall, H. Burley, W. Adams, Bert Pattishall, A. Hill, A. P.

Curry and the Geneva orchestra. Mrs. Curlett wishes to express her thanks to Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Weeks, who so kindly loaned her the use of the hall. Mr. V. Weeks and Mr. Daniels for the use of and Miss Mabel Daniels for printing placards. The performance will be repeated in Orlando at the Lucerne Theatre Tuesday, Sept. 2nd.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chilson were guests of M. and Mrs. R. O. Gresham.

Mr. and Mrs. David Speer and Mrs. J. V. Weeks and son, Culver have gone to Americus, Ga., for an extended visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Endor Curlett entertained as dinner guests Messrs Robinson, Phillips and Curry of Orlando last Thursday.

L. A. Brumley, the Celery avenue grower has harvested 2,000 bushels of the finest corn grown as a summer crop after celery and other crops were grown on the same land throughout the so called cropping season through the fall and winter. Nearly all growers have fine crops of corn. All could if they would.

All through the celery delta it has been successfully demonstrated that this is a great corn country as well as hay and other forage crop, and any farmer with a little management can grow all the corn, hay and forage crops needed for all the stock it needs to run his farm. The good manager has hay, corn, etc., to sell.

Gettes McClelland is at home from a two weeks' visit at Ft. Christmas.

Published Every Tuesday and Friday Morning by THE HERALD PRINTING COMPANY... W. M. HAYNES, Business Manager... Subscription Price, $2.00 a Year in Advance...

Sanford needs an Optimists' Club composed of twenty-five members who will do nothing but push for the good things that should come to Sanford.

Hugh Sparkman is the Congressman from the Fourth District while Claude is taking his "bawths" and it seems that Hugh is presenting as many bills or more than Claude did when he was on the job.

The sweetest music in our ears this week is the big press grinding off the edition with the same smooth motion as of yore. Our thanks are due to J. H. Schroder & Bro., who heeded our call for succor and sent their best man here to put their press in shape.

The game warden of Escambia county is so disgusted with the new game law for Florida he has resigned. According to the Pensacola News, he has been an exceptionally vigilant officer but objects to serving under a law that does not provide for taking care of the game except by fees which he asserts must naturally lead to much perjury.

The Record of Harry Brownville is just fifteen years old and is receiving congratulations of the state press. There is no more popular editor among the boys than Harry Brown and his paper shows the scintillating sparks from a real live wire. The Herald sends love and kisses to the fair maiden of ye ancient city and next year when she is sweet sixteen Harry Brown is due a box of Sanford cigars for staying in St. Augustine so many years.

TOO MUCH BUSINESS - The other day an advertising man from the Banner office approached one of the business men of the town and asked him about an ad. "No," said the business man, "business is too dull just now."

THE LAW IN THE CASE - During the past two weeks we have dropped the names from our subscription list of all those who were one year arrears, as the rules of the Postoffice Department provide we should do.

SENDING OUT NEWSPAPERS - The Herald spoke a parable when it said that "newspapers are the best means of advertising any city." The plan of sending out copies of the Valley Gazette was inaugurated by the county commissioners nearly five years ago, and proved so successful in inducing persons from the north and west to come here and locate, that it has become a fixed practice.

WHY IS JACKSONVILLE? - A visitor to the city this week asked a merchant about the price of a certain commodity and was surprised at the price. Said he could buy it in Baltimore for so much less.

IN THE MATTER OF DRESS - This paper is glad that it does not occupy a lonesome position in its ideas of the decency and good taste in the present style of women's dress. Arranged in their nice, close-fitting garments, the women and young girls find their detractors and critics as a rule only among the coarse and abnormally constructed in the opposite sex.

RETURN TO SANFORD - Vacationists Get Back to Look After Celery Crops - Celery growers are returning from their annual outing, either to the mountains or to the seashore, and as fast as they arrive and get settled their attention is turned towards the celery fields, which will require so much working before they will be in shape for planting.

FERTILIZER OFFICIALS HERE - E. S. Whittle of Jacksonville and R. C. Sams of Savannah, officials of the Virginia Carolina Chemical Co. are in the city this week looking after their interests here in company with the local manager, E. B. Brown.

NOTICE HORSE OWNERS - I have a first class expert horse shoer. Give him a trial. W. H. Underwood.

CLOSING OUT ALL POPULAR MUSIC AT 10c PER COPY. S. Maxwell.

NOTICE OF INCORPORATION - Notice is hereby given that the undersigned will apply to the Governor of the state of Florida, at Tallahassee, on the 25th day of September, A. D. 1913, for letters patent, incorporating Seminole County Bank under the following proposed charter, the original of which is now on file in the office of the secretary of state of said state of Florida.

understand is why this commodity should cost more to ship from Jacksonville to Sanford than from Baltimore to Jacksonville, when the distance from Jacksonville is ten times greater. They could hand the interior cities the old gag about transportation facilities but they can't hand that to Sanford because we have the St. Johns river and the Clyde line of steamers and should have a much better rate than now predominates.

THEN AND NOW - Man drinks whiskey and that clogs the valves; he drinks beer and that clogs the wheels; he drinks lemonade, ginger ale, buttermilk, ice tea, coffee and what-not and then wonders why the boilers do not burn. If you should take an ox and put him through a like performance he would be dead in a month. The simplest laws of health are outraged every day by the average man.

Did Adam smoke? Did Eve wear a corset? Did Solomon chew tobacco. Did Ruth chew gum? Did the children of Israel make for a beergarten after crossing the Red Sea? Did Rebecca chew chocolate bonbons and ice cream and call for soda water?

Adam was the first man and he was made perfect from head to foot. How long would he remain so after eating pie and cheese before going to bed? Suppose he had slept in a bedroom five by seven, with the windows closed and two dogs under the bed?

Supposed Eve had been faced up in a corset, worn tight shoes, hobble fig leaves and sat up all hours of the night eating chicken salad and Welsh rarebit, smoking cigarettes and drinking red wine or pale beer or sizzling champagne, hugging up to a drunken man in a speeding automobile and trying to keep on four pounds of dead people's hair?—Tampa Tribune.

TO TOLD YOU SO - Seminole county is in danger of a whiskey invasion. As we suspected during the late unpleasantness between the divisionists and anti-divisionists, the saloon interests had their eye on the sale of Red Eyes in the new county.

Should the courts decide in favor of the "wets," an election will then be called to determine what the county be. Here again we trust the "drys" will win out. For whatever difference of opinion we may have had with our friends over the law about county division matters we wish them nothing but good along all lines and especially in the matter of good morals, for we believe that should the saloon interests secure a hold on them it would be disastrous.—Orlando Citizen.

A PROMOTION - On the first of September The Times will lose a valued member of its staff. On that date Frank L. Huffaker will pass into the employ of the Jacksonville Metropolitan in the capacity of political editor and editorial writer.

It is with regret that every member of the Times staff bids "Frank" farewell. We have known him for many years; his big brain has earned our respect while his big heart has endeared him to us. He goes from us with cordial and sincere good wishes for a successful career with the Metropolitan, which is now owned and edited by George McClellan, owner of the Indianapolis Sun and other prominent papers in Indiana. Mr. McClellan is one of the most successful and politically progressive owner-editors in this country and has never displayed his good judgment and sagacity more conspicuously than by placing Frank Huffaker in the prominent and responsible position that he will hold with the Metropolitan.

The paper has before it one of the best openings and widest fields for usefulness and influence in the state, as a progressive, Democratic paper independent of control and free from factionalism.

Frank Huffaker has a wide and intimate acquaintance with the politics of the state, is master of a vigorous and virile style and is absolutely fearless in the advocacy of any cause that he believes to be right. We rejoice at the wide opportunity of usefulness and distinction that opens before him.—Tampa Times.

lowing article concerning this now much discussed subject. "It seems to me that the girls of the present moment are dressed more tastefully than their mothers or their grandmothers were at the same age. Possibly this is because dresses show more of the woman and less of the dressmaker. It is no doubt less true of the hats.

"About more taste it is idle to dispute. Decency is a different matter. When people say that the present fashions are indecent it only means that they are new. In regard to the exposure of the person, what is decent or indecent varies from generation to generation and contemporaneously among different nations. In one of Mr. Labouche's paragraphs lately reprinted in Truth, he pointed out that in the past it is indecent to expose the feet, while Turkish ladies thought it no shame to pull up their trousers and exhibit their legs in public.

"I remember my grandmother telling me that in her youth it was considered immodest for a girl to show her ears in the street; they should be covered with her hat or bonnet strings. Yet at the same time women damped their clothes to make them cling to the figure—precisely the sort of thing that is now considered so shocking by those who see it for the first time. At the seaside women can appear before a crowd in bathing costumes without reproach. For a woman or a man to walk down Bond street in a bathing dress would be considered so indecent that the police would probably interfere. Yet if it became the fashion to walk about London in bathing dresses nobody would see any harm in it after the first week or two. In the abstract, there is no such thing as decency or indecency in dress.

"A point which does not seem to be noticed is that the present fashions must bring enormous profits to the dress-makers. A woman's dress today contains but a fraction of the material that it did 20 years ago, yet the price is the same, or higher—probably higher. The loss on petticoats must be inconsiderable besides the increased profit on the outer garment."—Ocala Banner.

RETURN TO SANFORD

Vacationists Get Back to Look After Celery Crops

Celery growers are returning from their annual outing, either to the mountains or to the seashore, and as fast as they arrive and get settled their attention is turned towards the celery fields, which will require so much working before they will be in shape for planting. Most growers arranged to have their seed beds planted before their return.

The average will be about normal, although some believe that it will show a considerable increase. However, it is too early yet to get any definite information. There will be a good many new growers added to the large number already engaged in the celery culture and they are pessimistic as to the results of their first attempt to raise celery successfully. Some have their own ideas as to the way celery should be grown, although they are their first season in Florida and are absolutely ignorant regarding the cultivation of crops in this country. It remains to be seen what the outcome will be.

The average in lettuce promises to be about as usual, but much depends on weather conditions at the time of planting. The new crops of eggplant and peppers are looking well and growers anticipate good yields. —Produce News.

Fertilizer Officials Here

E. S. Whittle of Jacksonville and R. C. Sams of Savannah, officials of the Virginia Carolina Chemical Co. are in the city this week looking after their interests here in company with the local manager, E. B. Brown. They have gone over the field very thoroughly but are not prepared to say at this time just what the company will do regarding the erection of a new factory. The large building on Oak avenue formerly occupied by Keely's garage has been rented and will be used as storage rooms and all orders will be filled as formerly until some arrangements for rebuilding either a new factory or a storage warehouse on the company's land.

Making Two Ears of Corn Grow Where Only One Grew Before

Not getting the right amount of rain at the right time, is one of the principal causes of crop failure. This is past history, however, on thousands of profitable farms throughout the country. These farms use Electric Power, and motor driven pumps allow irrigation in the right amount and at the right time.

There are suitable G-E Motors for running the machines in the Barn, in the Dairy, and in the Field. Almost every task and chore on a farm can be done more rapidly, more economically and more safely with Electric Power, than in any other way.

Don't Have Roaches In Your Home

They crawl through sewers and drains and then over dishes and eatables and scatter disease germs and a filthy poisonous odor.

Don't use a paste for killing roaches for roaches travel through it trail it about your home on their wings and legs, and the least speck of phosphorous paste will kill a person. Many persons die in this way and it never known what killed them.

You do know that if a chicken eats an insect that has been killed with a paste, it is a dead chicken, and if a dog eats the chicken it is a dead dog, and if a buzzard eats the dog it is a dead buzzard.

FOR GOLD OR LOVE

But as is Usual, the Latter Triumphed After a Sacrifice of the Former.

By AUGUSTUS GOODRICH SHERWIN.

"I'll outlive the three of you!" shouted old Jasper Wriothlesey—"I'll dance on your graves yet!"

It was an outburst unworthy of a rational man, but Jasper Wriothlesey was an evil-hearted money grubber, and his love for gold caused him to shut out from life the only three men he had ever got very close to in human sense.

For ten years the firm of Wriothlesey & Co., founders, had done a thriving business in Ironton. Each year had been seen the head of the establishment grow more narrow and grasping, the fact deplored most especially by Robert Morton, the last accession to the firm. It was during the temporary absence of the head of the house that Morton had induced the two other partners to make a settlement with a creditor in desperate straits, out of pure sympathy. When old Wriothlesey returned to find that the firm had lost several thousand dollars that he in his hard, cruel way could have ground out of the unfortunate debtor there was a big row. In the heat of passion the firm broke up. In adjusting affairs his partners got justice where Wriothlesey had craftily hoped to squeeze them. Maddier than ever, he made his wicked vow.

He took in his son as his partner then, and had just one motive in life—to make of young Rupert as hard a penny saver and slave-driver as he had been himself. In part he succeeded. It was not easy for Rupert to give up his pleasant social life in Ironton. He rebelled somewhat when very definitely his father threatened to disown him, if he ever even so much as recognized any member of the families of his former partners. Pretty Edna Morton was the last one of his old friends Rupert was induced to drift away from. His father so speciously inculcated the principles of self interest, however, so liberally added to the wealth of his only son, that Rupert at length gave all his mind to business.

"I'll Outlive the Three of You!"

Old Jasper Wriothlesey carried out his evil boast. When one of his partners died he actually traveled fifty miles to go out to a quiet cemetery, and, unseen, by any one, sprang madly above the ashes of the man he hated. A second partner died. Again the impish instinct, the weird self glorification of the old man's nature, drove him to keep his throat. He died himself two days later.

Then Rupert became sole owner of the business. For a time in settling up the affairs of the estate he was entirely engrossed. Then he drifted naturally into assuming the proprietary responsibilities thrust upon him.

His trafficking had made him practical and sombre. It was only when away from the hard grind of business that a longing for companionship came over him. Then the duties of the ensuing day chained him down once more to the exacting routine of money making.

More than once he had seen Edna Morton at a distance. He had evaded her, for somehow he felt that his father had not acted quite square with his old partners. More than that, he learned that the Mortons were not in the best of circumstances owing to an unwise investment of Mr. Morton, and that Edna was teaching school.

"I'm tired of it all," he told himself one day. "There is neither heart nor hope to this life. I'm going to sell out."

More than once in the course of a few months he made this decision, but something always interfered. Every thousand dollars he had acquired had made his heart the harder. He began to liquidate in a way, however. He changed considerable into cash and securities. He winced as he found he entertained a great and glowing interest in the treasure box he so often visited. Was he getting miserly? Had he followed the severe training of his father too long? Would he end as the old man had done, with only one sordid purpose in view, storing up a wealth which would buy nothing he could enjoy or cherish?

The adamant, persistent influence of his father seemed to pursue him. At times it almost frightened Rupert Wriothlesey, as he actually felt the presence of the old business tyrant, urging him to make, to hoard gold—always gold! Gold!

"I'll make the break," he told himself positively one day. "I've written to a city firm, and have offered the works at a fair price. Another week, then for a rest—a change, a getting back to real, rational living."

And then—circumstance, accident, fate, precipitated where Rupert Wriothlesey had procrastinated—the great flood at Ironton.

For years after that eventful period, old men told of the great flood that had swept down the valley, bringing devastation and ruin in its train, and young auditors marvelled and shuddered.

It was every man for himself when the great volume of water began its warning encroachment. Rupert was at his home, and the leaping overflow from the swollen river first attacked that part of the town. He drove to the works—that treasure box in the vault was his first thought. He was forced to abandon his vehicle one-half way to the plant. When he reached the works there were two feet of water in the office.

Hastily Rupert packed the bulk of his ready resources in a satchel. The workmen were fast abandoning the place. Rupert struck across the factory yard to find himself hemmed in near some sheds. A break in the river banks had brought a raging torrent down the valley at cyclone speed.

It was a moment for rapid action. Everywhere was confusion, alarm, peril. Ten minutes later Rupert Wriothlesey saw the great plant tottering to ruins, swept off its foundation, and he was floating along, holding to the roof-tree of a shed with one hand, the other holding the satchel with its precious contents.

Others clinging to planks to cooep, to barrels and boxes drifted by him. The terror of storm and flight drove the floating refugees desperately forward. Rupert doubted if the frail shed would long remain intact. Its timbers were already parting. Then as a raft formed of a frail platform, some sidewalk section, passed thirty feet away, he thrilled.

Upon it just faintly from terror and exhaustion, was a familiar form—it was Edna Morton! It seemed as though the veil of years was pierced at a touch, and he recalled the golden hours of the far past. Edna was helpless. At every toss of the waves she slipped nearer and nearer to the edge of the frail float.

He could reach her, he saw that, but in that terrible flood he must be unhampered. Her sweet white face appealed to him. Rupert Wriothlesey gave the satchel a fling with almost a curse, leaped into the water, and reached Edna Morton just as she was slipping overboard.

It was two hours later, ashore and safe, that Edna heard how nearly she had drifted into the jaws of death. And then there, his great sacrifice seeming a joy and relief, Rupert Wriothlesey told of the love that came to his tired spirit like a sweet soothing balm at last.

Co-operative Charity.

It is not often that charitable institutions are able to pay their own way and have profits to expend upon the beneficiaries. There is such an institution in Italy called the Laboratorio della Consolata. This was started by some charitable ladies to rescue working girls from the temptations of factory life and to save them from being swayed. Apprentices are paid enough to live on, and women workers make as much money as, if not more than, if they were employed by ordinary dressmaking establishments, says the World's Work.

During the dead seasons when girls employed in other dressmaking places are discharged the Consolata girls are still employed. Work is done at lower prices, ladies bring odd pieces of material to be made up, and everything is done to "keep things going." Thus, while every other dressmaker is out of work in February and August, the Consolata girls are provided for. Also, the working day is one hour shorter than that of other workrooms, and each girl goes for a fortnight in the summer either to the country or to the sea, in each case free of expense.

Jones Cracks a Joke.

"On Henry Arthur Jones' last visit here," says John Drew, "his play, 'The Evangelist,' did not receive the welcome that was expected. He was in New York, stopping at the Hotel Gotham—in the twelfth floor, I think. Anyway, my apartment was some floors beneath his, and I had come up to call on him. I found him gazing out of the window across our wonderful New York.

"Drew," he said, 'do you know why my play failed? Well, it was because of the total lack of reverence among New Yorkers.'

"Why, no," I replied. 'Look out of these windows; everywhere you gaze you look down upon church spires.'

"That's just it," replied the dramatist. 'In this city of altitudinous buildings you look down on the churches, and that's why there isn't a d— bit of reverence in all America.'

Learned a Lesson.

"Yesterday," said Jobson, "I refused a poor woman a request for a small sum of money, and in consequence of my act I passed a sleepless night. The tones of her voice were ringing in my ears the whole time."

"Your softness of heart does you credit," said Mabson. "Who was the woman?"

"My wife."—Tit-Bits.

Protection at the Beach

The accident at Daytona Beach on Sunday in which four young men escaped watery graves by a very narrow margin should serve as a warning to the owner of Keating's pavilion, where bathing suits are to be let. The law provides that life lines shall be run and the fact that there is not a life line or life preserver to be found anywhere should deter bathers from entering the ocean at that point. Keating, the owner of the pavilion where the young men secured their bathing suits, has been indicted, we understand, for failure to comply with the law. The case is now in court. It may be years before it is settled. In the meantime the lives of those who avail themselves of the bathing at this delightful resort are in imminent danger. Long lines and life preservers should be kept on this pier at all times. The cost would be comparatively little when compared to their need. If the proprietor of this resort refuses to supply these lines he should be compelled by law. What is to be done in the matter? Reporter-Star.

Meeting Charity Association

The executive committee of the Associated Charities has called a meeting of the executive committee which will be held in J. N. Whelan's office this afternoon at four o'clock. Any others who are interested in the work will be welcome at this meeting, as it will be for the purpose of devising ways and means for keeping up the work. During the last few weeks there have been very few calls for help from strangers, but Sanford has a few dependents who will either have to be cared for in the city or sent to the almshouse. The Associated Charities will do its best to do this systematically.

Clever Scheme of Two Young People to Get Free Summer Vacations.

By HAROLD CARTER.

"You wish to speak to me, Mr. Galbraith?" inquired young Mr. Allen, looking up from his seat in the swinging hammock. Half a dozen girls were grouped about his feet, in attitudes of worship, while Mr. Allen slowly fanned himself with an imitation palm leaf.

"If I might take the liberty for an instant, sir," replied Cyrus Galbraith, the proprietor of the fashionable summer mountain hotel.

"Excuse me, girls," said Mr. Allen jauntily, and stepped out of the hammock. He followed the landlord till they were out of sight of the women guests, around the corner of the porch. Then the landlord turned on him.

"Now, see here, Allen, I'm not going to stand for any more of this confounded nonsense," he said. "You go back to that infernal bureau of yours and tell 'em I won't you back because you didn't do your work satisfactorily."

"Why, what's the matter, Mr. Galbraith?" inquired the other, in surprise.

"Matter, sir!" thundered the landlord. "Everything's the matter. Last month I got a circular from the Summer Hotel Improvement society in which they offered me an Adams, six feet tall, handsome, athletic, good at swimming, good at talking, good at dancing, sailing, golfing, tennis, quills, pool, skittles, bowling, and with a brand new stock of drawing room stories. Ain't that so?"

"That's me," answered the other, proudly.

"Terms, fifteen dollars a week and board for as long as the season lasted," pursued the irate landlord. "And you was to take each girl out in turn for a moonlight sail, to build up my business and prevent Walt Smithers getting all my young women away from me, as he did last summer. And what happens? Miss Jones left last evening because she said it was dull here. I know she's fifty and has red hair and an inward squint. But what of that? Weren't you paid to take Miss Jones moonlight sailing, and each of the rest of them, no matter if they had blue hair and three of them wall eyes? And instead of that you've spent the last two solid days with Miss Moon, a young woman I've never seen here before and never want to see again. You took her sailing Monday night and Tuesday night and last night, and if I hadn't butted in, you'd have taken her tonight, I know.

"Now You Cut It Out."

"Well, Mr. Galbraith," replied Mr. Allen deferentially, "wasn't I entertaining six of your young ladies out on the lawn? Didn't I occupy the hammock, and let them fan me and bring me ice water? Don't you suppose I know the game, even if I did go sailing?"

"Now you cut it out," cried the other. "You can pack up and get out this afternoon. I've spent fifty dollars on you and lost my best customer—Miss Jones."

"Oh, very well, if you look on it that way," replied the young man, curtly, and turned on his heel. Galbraith, smiling, went back into the office of his hotel.

It must be confessed that Bossie Moon was a remarkably beautiful young woman. Though she had been at the hotel only three days, she had already won the masculine hearts, and great had been the jealousy, when she was monopolized by the handsome Arthur Allen on three successive evenings. When Mr. Galbraith sat moodily at his desk, wearing away the last vestiges of his rage, the office door opened and Miss Moon stepped in.

"You may order a carriage for me at half past three," she said coolly.

"Why, certainly, Miss Moon," replied the proprietor, rubbing his hands. "You contemplate visiting the renowned sulphur spring of course?"

"No, I contemplate visiting the railroad station," answered Miss Moon. "I understand that you have mentioned my name in a conversation with my friend, Mr. Allen."

"I," stammered Galbraith, and before he had recovered his speech, Miss Moon, instructing him to send her bill up to her room, had left the office.

She went away on the same train as Mr. Allen, and the hotel grew very lonely. On the morning two sour-visaged splinters packed up and left, on the next day three young ladies withdrew to Walt Smithers' place, within a week Galbraith was cursing his fate for the worst reason that he had had in years. At last, overcome by his pride, he had his horse saddled, and rode over the ten miles of trail that separates his hotel from his rival's. He dismounted and walked into the office. The hotel looked like an undertaker's shop. Galbraith brightened.

"Morning, Smithers," he said, extending his hand cordially. "Seems to me," he continued, "that your business is about as bad as mine this year."

"What, your business bad, too?" shouted Smithers, exultantly.

"Never was worse," answered the other, "and I don't mind telling you, Smithers, that I thought I'd got the best of you. All's fair in trade, and I guess there won't be any bad feelings if I admit that I hired a young man to keep the ladies entertained. I'd heard it was done, but this was my first experience with the Summer Hotel Improvement society, and—"

"What!" shouted Smithers, leaping up. "You hired a young man from the Summer Hotel Improvement society?"

"Now, don't take it hard, Smithers," began the other soothingly. "He wasn't—"

"Take it hard!" roared Smithers. "Why, I'm nearly bursting my sides from laughing. I hired a young woman from them."

"A young woman!" exclaimed the other.

Smithers snatched up a paper from his desk.

"Listen," he said, and began reading. "The Summer Hotel Improvement society has listed your name as that of a possible patron. We understand that Mr. Galbraith of the Sunnyside hotel, has hired a young man to entertain his women guests. Hand some, athletic, six feet tall, a regular Adams, good at swimming, good at talking, good at dancing, sailing, flirting, golfing, tennis, quills, pool, skittles, bowling, and with a brand new stock of drawing room stories. Post five engagements guaranteed all clients staying three days or over."

"That's him," said Galbraith, bitterly. "Well—"

"We offer you the services of a young lady of superhuman beauty to stay at Galbraith's hotel and wear the same dress as you from the other guests, thereby spoiling his business for the season. Our Miss Moon—"

"Moon?" called the other. "Moon? Why tell me the name of that society again?"

"The Summer Hotel Improvement society," said Mr. Smithers. "What's the matter? Aren't you feeling good?"

"No, no, no, no. Why, they both came from the same shop."

"Darling," said Arthur Allen, "we shall go for our vacation next year. Do you think the Adams and the Moon are played out yet?"

"I guess not," answered Bossie, snuggling up to him. "Perhaps we might try the Catskills, though, this year. Isn't it glorious having free summer holidays, Arthur? I don't know what we'd have done without them, and we'd never have gone away since our honeymoon."

England's Second Oldest Judge

The oldest of the land and the second oldest of the bench completed his thirty-second year on the bench and his friends claim that as he is only three years of age he is the second oldest judge in the empire. The premier honor being held by Lord Halsbury, the ex-lord chancellor. During his long career on the bench Judge Greenhow has never interrupted an advocate, has only missed a sitting of the court on one afternoon, has lived a simple, unpretentious life in a cottage, and he has always gone to and from the court either on foot or, by the train.

In his day his lordship was a great sportsman and athlete, and was a swimmer of remarkable strength and endurance. So popular was he in the water that on one occasion he undertook at York to break salmon tackle attached to a band round his forehead for a bet. The whole circuit turned out to see the fun. He "played" like a salmon in the River Ouse, broke the tackle two, if not three times, and won his bet.

This arrangement of rooms presupposes the plan of making the high school, like the community, an aggregation of every sort of people doing every sort of work.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Editor Willing to Retract.

"Look here, Mr. Editor," exclaimed an irate caller, "you referred to me yesterday as a reformed drunkard. You must apologize, or I'll sue your paper for libel." "Very well, sir," replied the editor. "I'll retract the statement cheerfully. I'll say you haven't reformed."

Resented the Secrecy.

A new little brother had come to small earth, and it was observed that he looked suspicious. Being asked if he were healthy, or what would him, he said: "I'm just the new kid well enough for a while, but I think I might have been a little better off. How do you feel?" "I'm just the new kid well enough for a while, but I think I might have been a little better off. How do you feel?" Outspoken Intelligence.

A letter addressed to the best God in Heaven, was recently posted in a Russian townlet. As the address was written in German, the Russian post authorities forwarded it to the German frontier post office at Tilsit. The postmaster of the latter place returned it to its place of origin with the following superscription: "To be returned. The addressee is in Heaven, with which Germany has no communication."

Wanted One of Her Own.

Dorothy loved her baby sister dearly, and taken it quite hard that she is not allowed to play nurse often. The other day, being asked what mamma should bring her back from a visit to the city, she made a gentle request: "Please, mamma, a great big doll dressed like a real baby. I want one of my own to play with, since you won't let me have any fun with yours."

Not Hardly.

Doctor (to anxious husband and father): "All the baby wants is some good milk, and take care that it always comes from the same cow. As for the mother, there's nothing really the matter with her, only a little weakness, that's all. And she'll soon pick up if she has every day some underdone beefsteak." Anxious Husband: "From the same ox, doctor?"

Learned Language During Trance.

The Arabic language was learned in a trance by a youth named Querquellie at a hospital at Cherbourg, France, recently. The youth, after having been in a trance for two months on awakening, repeatedly addressed his nurse in a phrase which was discovered to be Arabic, a language of which he never had any knowledge.

Why Do We Not Shout for Joy?

Robert Louis Stevenson used to sit at night on the platform of his house at Sillside and listen to the song of the crickets, and wonder why those creatures were so happy, and what was wrong with man that he also did not whirl up his days with an hour or two of chirping. John Keegan.

First Facto Wish.

When his mother grandma grasped ends of the broken wishbone, and made wishes. "The bone flew apart, and Helen dashed around the room crying: 'I'll get my wish! I'll get my wish!' 'What did you wish, Helen?' asked her mother. 'Withered grandma's nose!' 'Has she got her wish?' asked her mother.

His Future Assured.

"Does my boy," inquired the parent, "seem to have a natural bent in any one direction?" "Yes, sir," said the teacher. "He gives every indication of being a genius of industry, and he gets the most of his time to do as he wishes to."

WILL MEET IN SANFORD

Moving Picture Men Will Come Here Next Year

At the morning session of the Florida Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitor's League, Sanford was chosen as the next meeting place and April 15, 1914, chosen as the date. Another matter that came up for consideration was for protesting against the high license of $400 a year charged moving picture shows. The exhibitors will seek to have the license reduced by circulating petitions in various theatres.

Part of the afternoon was devoted to a demonstration of the "Mutual Film Service," given in the Majestic Theatre under the direction of J. T. Cheatham.

Last night the delegates were tendered a banquet at the El Pasaje Restaurant, concluding the most successful gathering of picture men ever held in the state.

The officers had been reelected for the ensuing year. They are E. O. Griffith, of Tampa, president; Carl Kettler, Jr., of West Palm Beach, vice president; A. H. LaBelle, of Tampa, secretary and treasurer. The board of directors are Louis H. Kalbfeld, Palatka; S. J. Harvey, Milton; Thornton Parker, St. Petersburg; S. P. Davis, Arcadia.

Members of the league who were in attendance included: Harry Wadham, Bradentown; E. O. Griffith, J. S. Matthews, C. F. Tarbell, Antonio Juran, B. A. Lasstraps, West Tampa; Thornton Parker, St. Petersburg; L. H. Kalbfeld, Palatka; S. J. Harvey, Milton; Carl Kettler, West Palm Beach; Att. McGinnis, Key West; Mrs. A. R. Tucker, Plant City; B. W. Polica, Tampa; J. F. Karnatz, Sanford; S. P. Davis, Arcadia; Mrs. Emma C. Bender, Kissimmee. Names of twenty-five or thirty others, who could not be present, were enrolled at their own request.—Tampa Tribune.

Seminole's New Jail

The county commissioners of Seminole county following their usual policy of saving the taxpayer's money have decided that the county needed a jail and needed it now and to save the money that is now being spent in other counties to house and feed our prisoners the new county will build a new jail at once.

Pursuant to this policy the commissioners will purchase the Hill property on Palmetto avenue next to the city hall and now occupied by E. E. Brady's livery stable and on this property a new jail will be constructed. According to plans and specifications the new jail will cost about $10,000, as the building is already on the ground and with a few changes can be made to fill the wants of the county.

Bids for the jail work will be advertised at once and the work will start within the next thirty days. The building to be used is a very good one, being looked best for the proposition and was purchased, or will be, at once.

The county will save money by the transaction as a jail of the size needed by our county would cost new almost twice as much, and regardless of where the new court house will be built will be needed and the county will have it ready.

SANITATION AT HOME

A clean home is more to be desired than great riches, for uncleanness and long life don't travel far together.

Every Florida home-keeper would prize with indignation at the suggestion that her house was not a model of cleanness. Most homes are clean, to the non-medical observer. The floors are swept and the bric-a-brac is dusted; there is the regular cleaning day for the sleeping rooms each week; the dining room and living-room get theirs every day. The good woman of the house delights to tell of the heavy burdens she bears, many of them entirely unnecessary and self imposed, in keeping her indoor kingdom in fit condition. Then there is the annual "house cleaning" time, which brings sadness to mankind, and a kind of imperial joy to womankind, for it is then that she asserts her royal prerogatives and makes home a bedlam while it lasts.

But, (and how many stories have a "but" as a sort of disfiguring sequel to spoil them) with all the scrubbing and sweeping and dusting, many, too many, homes are not clean, sanitarily clean. In the hidden corners which are reached once or twice a year, perhaps never reached at all, thin layers of dust accumulate, where disease-bringing germs love to congregate and multiply until a sudden draft gives them opportunity to accomplish their death dealing mission in the world.

The kitchen is clean, scrubbed until the paint is scrubbed clean on baseboards and door frames, but the flies are free to enter through the unscrubbed windows from the garbage can just outside, or from places even more disgusting. They are free to alight on uncovered food and to leave on it unmentionable filth that has clung to their feet from previous and recent wanderings. They come in at the open and uncovered pantry window to pollute tonight's dinner or tomorrow's breakfast.

The living room, the library and the bedrooms, ablaze with light, invite the mosquito to enter from the darkness of the outside night and to infect the household with the poison of malaria. Many good housekeepers, even in enlightened Florida, fail to see the necessity of window screens and screens for outside doors. To them screens over the beds are sufficient and they are put up to avoid the discomfort of an all night fight with mosquitoes and hot for sanitary reasons. To them the screened porch is a luxury, not a necessity.

And when in the absence of screens about the earth closets outside but near the house, of screens on doors and windows and, sometimes, over the bed, disease and death come into these screenless homes, they are resignedly taken as mysterious dispensations of an all-wise Providence, a kind of discipline which in the end, somehow or other, works out a higher individual spirituality. The worst of it is that the poor housewife does not realize that she has the whole blame. Perhaps it is fortunate, after it is all over, that she does not know. It would add to her sufferings and, goodness knows, she has enough without that.

It is the aim and purpose of the modern sanitarian and sanitary boards and organizations to educate the housewife, to show her how to make her home clean in the scientific and safe meaning of the word. With the homes of Florida scientifically clean, the death rate from typhoid fever would fall close to the vanishing point. Malaria would diminish to the degree of becoming a medical curiosity, and most of the deaths of Florida's residents would be the result of unavoidable accidents or of old age.

What applies in this respect to the home, has an equal significance for those other places where people live and eat and sleep. The Florida Legislature of 1913 created a hotel commission, whose duties were made to include inspection of the public houses and boarding houses of the state. This commission must see to it that every bed sheet is not less in size than certain prescribed dimensions; that the time honored roller towel is banished from public lavatories and that individual towels are substituted; to see that screens are provided for windows in accordance with certain prescribed rules, and to have a general supervision over sanitary provisions necessary to public health and comfort.

This commission has a large value for the traveling public whose wanderings include the smaller towns of the state that are not blessed with energetic and active health officials. It is important to the comfort of the traveling man that the bed sheets should be at least ninety-nine inches long, and not ninety-eight, especially in hot weather when he never draws one over him except to smother under it in the attempt to ward off the attacks of the blood thirsty mosquito, and it doesn't make much difference what is the length of the sheet on which he tosses.

This commission is not a department of the State Board of Health, although at the direction of the board, and not on its own initiative, it may perform certain functions to regulate sanitary matters.

Florida should be one of the most healthful states in the Union. It stands high in the list, and its location in a balmy climate, which favors outdoor life through all the year, gives it large advantage from the health viewpoint. But natural advantages are not sufficient. There is a science of living and it is just as much a science as is mathe-

Daytona Beach Man Arrested Again For Failure

Other News of the State at Large Fresh From the Wires Today

Taking the experience of the Orlando boys who came near to drowning at Daytona Beach last Sunday for a text, the Gazette-News of Daytona, in its Friday issue, says: For the second time within a month, Thomas H. Keating, owner of Keating's bathing pavilion at Daytona Beach will be arrested, probably today, and charged with maintaining a bath house and renting bathing suits without complying with the law and providing proper life lines and life rafts.

Marshall to serve as policeman for sixty to ninety dollars a month? When you can find a man learned in the law and thoroughly familiar with the official duties imposed upon him by that law, who will stand on guard day and night to protect life and property, and that in consideration of ninety dollars a month payable in scrip worth eighty cents on the dollar—when you find such a man, let's elect him governor or president immediately.

PRINTERS COST CONGRESS

Employing Printers Will Get Together In Ocala In November

A decision has been reached as to the dates for the holding of the first statewide Printers' Cost Congress in Florida. Authority for the holding of such a congress was given at the last meeting of the Florida Press Association, held at Tampa in June, and Harry L. Brown of the Record Company, St. Augustine; Robert J. Holly of the Herald, Sanford, and J. M. Burrow of the Burrow Press, Pensacola, were appointed members of a special committee to make all the arrangements.

Ocala was selected as the meeting place, and for some time past negotiations have been in progress with Col. Frank Harris of the Ocala Banner, P. V. Leavengood of the Ocala Star, and Secretary J. D. Rooney of the Ocala board of trade, for the purpose of definitely deciding on the dates.

A considerable variety of Cost Congress literature has been prepared, and will be mailed to the owners of every print shop in the state of Florida.

The Ocala board of trade, through Secretary Rooney, is going to see to it that the visitors to the "Brick City" are given a good time.

The sessions will open Thursday night, November 13th, with a general mass meeting, when an address of welcome will be given.

It is expected that every newspaper in the state will give considerable prominence to the coming congress, as the widest publicity is necessary in order to arouse the proper degree of interest.
