

Clean-Up Underway Rats! Cry Residents

By MAX ERKLETTIAN
Herald Staff Writer

As the result of efforts by residents of Country Club Manor subdivision, located between 30th and 25th Streets, county health officials and Sanford city officials have begun cracking down on junk cars and a trash and rat problem in that area.

Some neighbors have complained that people in the area leave their trash out several days in advance of garbage pickup. They contend that allows time for animals to spread the garbage over lawns.

Valda Robbins, director of the county health department's sanitation division, said his division will begin making more frequent inspections of the Country Club Manor area.

A group of about six Country Club Manor residents took their complaints to Sanford City Manager Warren E. Knowles about a week ago. Knowles and police officials have begun efforts to have junk cars removed from several houses in the area. Six citations ordering junk cars to be removed have been issued, according to Knowles.

If a car has not been properly registered and impounded, it is considered a junk car, according to city officials.

Knowles commented the garbage and rat problem is a public health concern and therefore the responsibility of the county health department.

Some people in the area tell horror stories about the local rat population. They feel if the garbage has the garbage," said Mrs. Andry Corso, 127 Gerrit Drive.

According to Mrs. Corso and Mrs. Dorothy Mayo, 138 Rays Drive, the problem has improved since city and county health officials took action.

"In the last three weeks we have seen a great deal of improvement," said Mrs. Mayo.

Assurances that public officials have been contacted and that the trash is causing a problem has helped correct the situation, according to Mrs. Mayo.

Both Mrs. Mayo and Mrs. Corso relate the story of a child who brought a rat home as a pet. He thought the rat was a hamster, according to the women.

"There are people here who are afraid to let their children out to play," said Mrs. Corso, "because of the rats."

There is also concern about the effect of the was picked up the rats would not be attracted to the area.

"I have seen rats come out in broad daylight and to let their children out to play"

Winter Springs: Pellerin Recall May Be Voided

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

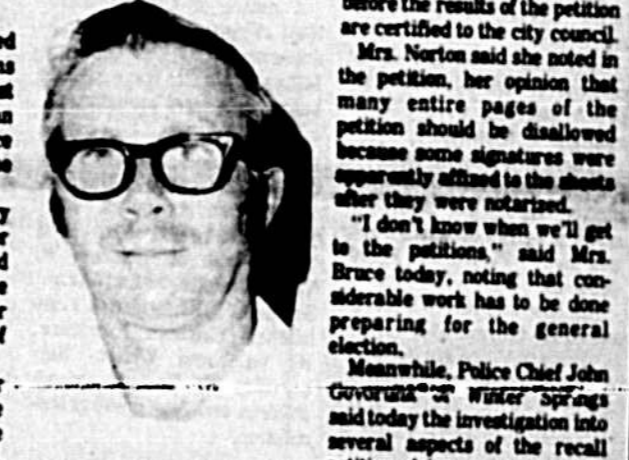

The petitions signed originally by 222 persons seeking a recall election to oust Winter Springs Councilman Laurent Pellerin from office may have died over the weekend.

According to City Clerk Mary Norton, Pellerin brought to her office this morning notarized statements from signers of the petition making removal of their names. The total number of statements were 25.

In addition, Pellerin earlier cited three duplicate signatures, and one signature from a person who is not a U.S. citizen.

The state law on recall requires a minimum of 300 signatures in Winter Springs come before the chief judge of the 13th judicial circuit (Seminole and Brevard counties) Robert McGrew can be requested to call a special recall election.

If the 300 signatures are deemed the petition will be voided.

fewer than needed for the recall election.

The petition against Pellerin and another against Councilman John Daniels were delivered to Seminole Election Supervisor Camilla Bruce Friday, said City Clerk Mary Norton. When they are returned to the city, she said, those names in the notarized statements will be removed before the results of the petition are certified to the city council.

Mrs. Norton said she shelved the petition, her opinion that many entire pages of the petition should be disallowed because some signatures were apparently affixed to the sheets after they were notarized.

"I don't know when we'll get to the petitions" said Mrs. Bruce today, noting that considerable work has to be done preparing for the general election.

Meanwhile, Police Chief John Govortz said that Winter Springs said today the investigation into several aspects of the recall petition drive are continuing. He declined to say how he is handling the investigation, called for by a sworn complaint signed by council candidate, John Van Espool.

Van Espool, who said he is a personal friend of both Daniels and Pellerin, after a visit to State Attorney Douglas Cheshire's courthouse office filed a sworn complaint with Govortz claiming fraud was practiced in gaining signatures on the petitions. He said he had an effort to deceive the people of Winter Springs.

"I've been around coloreds all my life."

LILLIAN GRIFFIN

Mrs. Griffin: Didn't Mean It As Slur

Lila Mary City Councilman Lillian Griffin feels a comment she made about black people possibly moving into a neighborhood in Lila Mary has been misunderstood.

Mrs. Griffin made the remark while supporting a site between Floyd and Frederick avenues on Country Club Road for a new city hall. She asked a group of citizens opposing the site: "If a colored family moved in, then where would you people be?"

Several citizens expressed shock at Mrs. Griffin's remark. City Councilman Cliff Mason said he had pulled the comment out of his memory. He said the same view as Mrs. Griffin.

Mrs. Griffin said she was trying to warn residents of the Country Club Road area that if housing developments they did not favor moved in their neighborhood, they could not come to city hall to stop the project.

Mrs. Griffin said she did not mean her remark as a racist slur.

"It was not meant for that kind of remark. It was referring to a housing project," said Mrs. Griffin.

Asked if she felt people living in that area would oppose a public housing development, Mrs. Griffin replied: "well, they've opposed to everything for a new city hall."

Mrs. Griffin further said she is not "against any race."

"I've been around coloreds all my life," she said. "I'm not against coloreds. My father had a market over on Sanford Avenue in Sanford in the heart of the colored section. He had a wonderful colored trade."

Mrs. Griffin also added she would not oppose blacks moving to Lila Mary. She also noted she trades trucks with a black salesman and has a black maid.

"I'm not prejudiced. If I was prejudiced, I would not be that much involved with coloreds," said Mrs. Griffin.

Art Program Pushed For County Schools

FRAN KEMP EXPLAINS ART BOOK TO FUTURE ELEMENTARY FACULTY.

By LEONARD ERANDORF
Herald Staff Writer

More and more Seminole County elementary school children will within the next month be receiving an art education if Fran Kemp has her way.

Armed with a new book, "Art in Elementary," Mrs. Kemp, art consultant for the school system, is making the rounds to all elementary school faculty encouraging them to order the book and then to begin a detailed art program in the schools.

Currently, there are four art teachers, one each in four schools. In the other schools, art is now done or taught, is incorporated into the regular curriculum.

"There is really no set curriculum at these schools without art teachers," Mrs. Kemp said. "The teachers are using some type of art book or referring to magazines such as Home and Garden to get their lesson and as there is really no sequential program to build on," she added.

The new book, authored by two Club educators gives a detailed program that teachers could follow in teaching art to their students.

The book is made up of different lesson levels which range from pre-kindergarten to the fifth grade, according to Mrs. Kemp. Each level has an average of 10 specific activities.

As an example, Mrs. Kemp noted that in the pre-kindergarten level there are various activities dealing with developing hand-eye coordination, developing vocabulary, matching and identifying objects and simple problem solving.

Ordering the $25.00 book is required for the teacher. Thus far, Mrs. Kemp has spoken to the faculty of eight schools and has received 50 orders.

Forgotten Baby Dies In Incubator

SÃO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — Hospital obstetrics staff say they put a premature baby boy in an incubator and the child died because a Garmentini malfunctioned, police said.

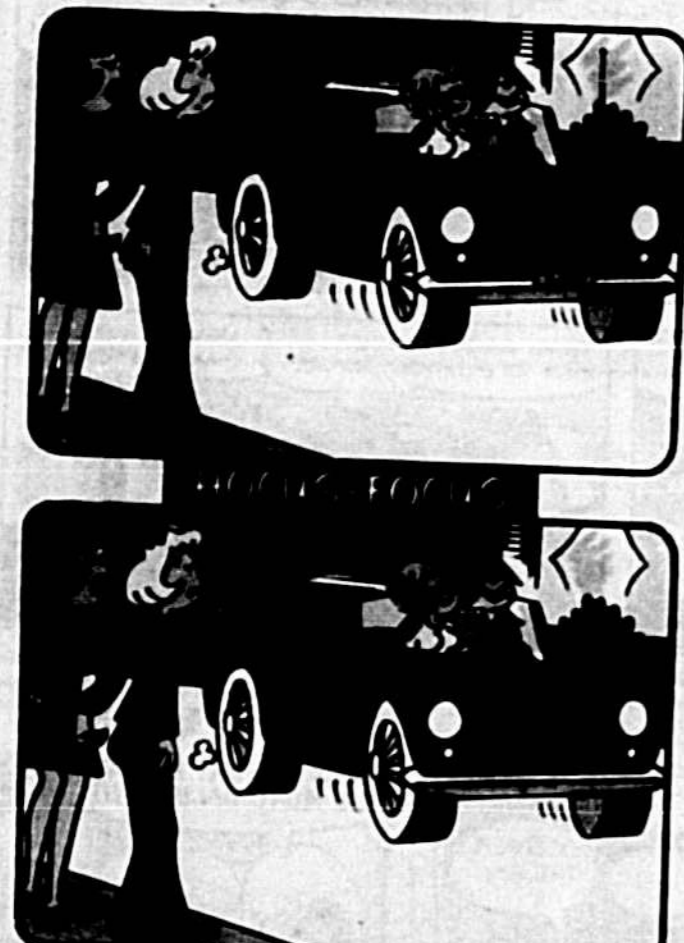

Hospital officials in Santos, 50 miles east of São Paulo, reportedly tried to cover up the death by concealing the infant's body.

A police spokesman said the baby, 28-day-old Nelson Innocencio, failed to breath Thursday night in an incubator at Hospital Santa Margareta Hospital. The incubator's Garmentini apparently failed while the boy was left unattended.

When the baby's parents came to visit Friday, hospital officials told them the child died of natural causes during the night and refused to let them see the body, police said.

Instead officials asked the parents to sign a release form stating they knew from the time of the baby's birth that he was in poor health.

The parents refused to make their own and finally head the infant body to the hospital morgue.

Moving Closer To Energy Plan

Five years after the Arab oil embargo and a four-fold increase in the price of imported petroleum that stood the economy on its head, the United States is getting closer to a national energy program.

The Senate's recent 57-42 vote in favor of a natural gas deregulation compromise effectively breaks a logjam that delayed adoption of a much-amended version of the Carter administration's comprehensive energy package for nearly a year.

It won't be the moral equivalent of war proclaimed by Mr. Carter 17 months ago, but he is certain to sign it anyway.

The energy legislation coming out of Congress won't be especially brilliant either.

It will involve 10,000 employees of the Department of Energy in a tangle of day-to-day decisions on production, pricing and distribution of energy resources.

Controls and regulations will continue to hamper the workings of the energy marketplace. The price of natural gas shipped across state lines will continue to be controlled by the federal government until 1985.

Even so, enactment of this imperfect program does represent the first successful and comprehensive effort to align Washington's existing interference in the energy market with post-1973 energy realities.

And that, as the President and Congress can attest, is no small achievement.

However clumsily, the emerging energy policy will encourage conservation of energy resources, particularly oil.

It will in some cases require and in other cases encourage a greater reliance on coal, which constitutes 90 percent of our domestic energy resources but only 18 percent of our energy use.

It will increase the supply of natural gas by permitting its price to rise in stages.

The collective effect of all these measures holds forth the ultimate promise of a long-awaited reduction in the nation's reliance on imported oil.

This dependence on foreign oil, which has grown from less than 20 percent at the beginning of this decade to nearly 50 percent today, has undermined every effort to right our balance of trade and strengthen an increasingly anemic dollar in foreign money markets.

It is no exaggeration to say that enactment of this energy package is, with the possible exception of a credible attack on inflation, the single most important measure Washington could take to bolster confidence in our will to set our own economic house in order.

ANGIE WALTERS Michigan Taking Initiative

DETROIT — The tax-cut fever which broke out in California three months ago and then spread swiftly across the nation has reached epidemic proportions here, much to the dismay of the political establishment.

When Michigan voters go to the polls on Nov. 7, they will find on their ballots not one, not two, but three separate initiatives aimed at slashing both taxes and government spending.

No other state will offer so many opportunities for taxpayers to vote their opinions against Big Brother and his hand-in-the-pocket. But by the same token, no other state is in such imminent danger of finding itself in fiscal chaos because there is nothing to prevent Michigan voters from approving all three constitutional amendments — an outcome that would probably keep the state in court for years to come.

Michigan, unlike California, has no fat surplus to cushion the effects of any tax or spending cuts the voters might adopt, a point stressed repeatedly by those urging defeat of the three initiatives.

This is no guarantee, however, that the threat of service cutbacks will deter voters from approving any or all of the amendments. Two years ago, an initiative to clamp a spending ceiling on state government was only narrowly defeated — and that was in a much less agitated political climate.

A slightly modified version of that proposal, which would limit any increase in state and local government spending to the growth of overall personal income in Michigan, is on the ballot again this fall.

This time, politicians who opposed the measure in 1976 and flocked to endorse it — largely because it is the mildest of the three initiatives.

A second proposal, and one which gives the establishment considerably more concern, would chop the property tax in half while allowing the state to raise its income tax by 1 percent in order to make up for part (less than half) of the revenue lost.

The third, and most radical, plan would eliminate the property tax as a source of financing, direct the state legislature to figure out another means of supporting public education and give parents a voucher which could be used to pay for public, private or parochial schooling.

Early polls indicate a stable plurality of voters are inclined to support the first two amendments, while the third is significantly less popular. The AFL-CIO, the United Auto Workers, the Michigan Education Association, the League of Women Voters and a host of other groups oppose all three.

What is interesting, however, is the fact that even the leaders of groups that stand to lose the most if the tax-cut and spending-limit amendments should pass remain convinced that the initiative process itself is a good idea.

"We do not mind it; we like it," said George Brown, of the Michigan Education Association. "We've seen some ourselves in the past, and will again."

Michigan is one of 25 states (plus the District of Columbia) that permit voters to petition substantive proposals directly onto the ballot, bypassing the state legislature.

It is time for me to tie a couple of loose ends together. There are several items I've been meaning to write about, but something else has always cropped up.

First of all, my compliments to the teacher and people of the Lake Mary Elementary School who took time to compile a book thanking the Lake Mary City Council for a water fountain the city installed on the school grounds.

The book is complete with drawings of the fountain and "Thank you" signatures from students. Having held the crown for "World's Worst Speller" longer than anyone in recorded history, I could not help but feel a pull at my old heart strings when a page was turned to reveal Mayor Walter Sorrenson's son had left a letter out of his name when he signed the book.

Sorrenson did not seem concerned about the error. "I think this is the first thing I've been involved in doing as an official of the city that my son has actually thanked me for," quipped Sorrenson.

Usually judges are referred to in almost reverent terms. However, one local barrister was overheard not too long ago mispronouncing the name of Circuit Judge Kenneth Lettier.

Lettier was awarded several months ago for dumping leaves in an area not provided for dumping. The charges were dropped.

The attorney, who may have been disgruntled over a ruling by Lettier, was heard referring to the judge as "Judge Lettier."

Recent rumors forwarded by the State Attorney's office to city officials concerning the police department have city officials wringing their hands in Sanford.

City Manager Warren E. Knowles complained the information is so vague and unsubstantiated he doesn't know how police officials will be able to do anything about it.

Source in the state attorney's office has conceded there is little reason to believe the information sent to city officials is such that it can be proven or should be taken seriously.

Knowles refused to take seriously a suggestion that the rumors be forwarded to Circuit Court Judge Alan Dickey.

When you dial a certain number in Knoxville, Tennessee, a female voice delivers a three-minute pitch detailing ways teenagers and children can cope with sexual abuse.

"You may feel scared," the voice says, "but help is available." The caller is urged to stay on the line to talk to a trained counselor.

The voice is an around-the-clock taped message that's getting many Knoxville teenagers to seek help for sex problems. It is part of an $85,000, one-year experiment financed by the federal government's National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect. It could be the prototype for similar services in communities across the nation.

Sexual abuse is a hush-hush subject. But it exists and most experts agree the best way to deal with it is to confront it — face-to-face if possible.

So George Thomas, president of the independent Regional Institute for Social Research, Athens, Ga., proposed the Knoxville test, getting the Tennessee Department of Human Resources to cooperate and assigning the work to Child and Family Services of Knoxville, Inc., a private agency.

The taped phone message service began Feb. 1 and in the first month drew 1,200 calls. Since then, calls have averaged 600 to 800 a month.

But the important figure is the follow-through — the number of people who stayed on the line to talk to a counselor. In the first four months after the system began, 225 callers spoke to counselors; 130 wanted to complain of sexual abuse; the other 95 wanted more general sexual education.

Of the 130 complainants, 77 were adolescents, aged 12 to 18.

That says one of the most surprising findings was that half of the sex abuse calls were from adolescent boys, contacted by a mother, a stepmother or a neighbor into sexual relations.

The message makes it clear that anonymity will be preserved if the caller wants, and this anonymous system is the follow-through — the number of people who stayed on the line to talk to a counselor. '...In My Blood Until The Day I Die'

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Jim "Junior" Gilliam once said baseball was in his blood and would stay there until the day he died.

The Los Angeles Dodgers' first base coach died late Sunday night from the results of a massive brain hemorrhage suffered Sept. 15. He was 60.

Gilliam underwent more than seven hours of brain surgery last month and a spokesman for Daniel Freeman Hospital said Gilliam died at approximately 10:35 p.m. PDT without ever regaining consciousness from the coma he lapsed into following surgery.

The Dodgers, who clinched the National League pennant Saturday, have said they are dedicating the "World Series" to Gilliam, who spent 20 years with the team in various capacities.

Although never an overpowering hitter — his career batting average in 14 seasons was only .285 — Gilliam was a versatile player who could handle second and third base and then move with equal skill to the outfield.

Gilliam came to the big leagues out of Nashville, Tenn., where he began playing in the Negro leagues.

He broke into the Dodger minor league organization in 1961, playing two years in Montreal before joining the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1963, when he batted .305 with 178 hits and 102 runs scored.

Leo Duracher once praised Gilliam as the man who "does everything right" — he never misses a sign.

The Dodgers kept trying to retire Gilliam, who would keep in shape by taking infield practice regularly. So when the team would call him back to active duty, the player was ready.

He first retired in 1962, then returned to the active list May 25, 1963. He was made a coach again the next year, replacing the fiery Leo Duracher and becoming the third Negro coach in the major league.

Gilliam was made a player-coach in 1968, a position he held for two seasons before being named first base coach. He was made a batting coach in 1977.

But even after he retired from active playing and was coaching players less than half his age, Gilliam refused to let back on a hardy 20-year career. He always preferred to look ahead — especially in 1977 and 1978, when he was proud to watch the Dodgers move to the top.

Although he had as much Dodger blue in his blood as the great Jackie Robinson, Gilliam last year said that if he was offered a managing position with another team, he would probably take it.

Gilliam had managed the San Juan team of the Puerto Rican League in the 1975-76 winter season, then returned to the Dodgers in the spring. One year ago, in an interview with UPI, Gilliam said the joy of baseball was still there, and said it always would be.

"It's in your life," he said. "I've been playing this game since I was a kid. I didn't know I'd have the kind of success that I've had.

Jackie Robinson from second to third base. Perhaps his biggest asset to the Dodgers of the 60s was hitting in the second spot behind Manny Williams, protecting the speedster on the bases.

He played in seven World Series, three in Brooklyn and four in Los Angeles, with perhaps his best year in 1956, when he batted .305 with 178 hits and 102 runs scored.

Todd Merritt and Dwayne Johnson each ran for two touchdowns Saturday to lead the South Seminoles Hurricanes to a 60-10 victory over the Jackson Heights Bobcats in a Pop Warner League midweek game.

Jim Bradley, Ralph McCall and Lamar Smith also had TDs for the winners while Jody Higgins had the losing TD.

The Seminoles trimmed the Bobcats' Williams, 8-0, as Byron Martoreto, Tom Bell, Tom Gordon, Robert Hillman and Willie Ross scored touchdowns.

Toussaint middleweight lost to Milton 6-4, as John Lami scored for Toussaint.

In Waterpocket action, Toussaint defeated Milton, 10-0, as Rick Vandervelde, Brian Scarry and Todd Cancellone scored TDs.

The South Seminoles waterpocket blanked the Jackson Heights Bobcats, 60-10, as Bill Leonard scored twice, and Curtis Thomas, John Alexander and Jim Handfield added one TD each.

Handfield and Milton led in a scorching lightweight action while Toussaint Robinson edged Wayne Henderson, 10-13, with the Seminoles scoring their record 6-0.

Also in lightweight action, Milton Rams trimmed Turnbull Cowsboys, 6-0, with Charlie Bailey scoring the winning TD, and Toussaint Johnson, Heights Bobcats, 21-14 as David Gordon scored twice and Pat Murray once for the winners.

Benjamin weight play saw English Means using a Mark Fontaine TD for a 6-0 win over the Red Jay Vikings. Forest City Oilers seeking N to Eastwood Brown, 5-0, as Jimmy Yelch scored twice.

Money Incentive For World Series

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Smith, right fielder for the National League champion Dodgers, "is that when I was in my first World Series — in 1957 with the Red Sox — the owner shares that year was $5,000 and the winners got $25,000. Last year, we got $2,000 for losing. I'm glad the Yankees are back in it again because it gives us the opportunity to make more money because of the size of their ballpark."

"Believe me, money is the reason I play this game."

"Last year, I was able to pitch against them all in the World Series because of trouble with my finger," he says. "I never pitched against the Dodgers but I know a lot of them, Garvey, Cory, Ferguson and Lacy, pretty good from facing them in the minors. They were with Albuquerque and I was with Phoenix."

Figueras had his differences with Billy Martin but when he received a 20-game suspension for the first time two weeks ago, he received a phone call from the former Yankee manager, who told him how happy he was for him.

A year ago this year, Lou Piniella said he wanted out from the Yankees if he had to put up with another year of interminable turmoil such as the one he had just finished. Now, he says, everything's fine. "The big difference is that this year we just played baseball," he laughs.

Tim McCraw conceded himself in the Phillies' playoff loss to the Dodgers by falling back on something Chuck Tanner once told him. "He has a good way of looking at something like this," McCraw said after the Phillies were eliminated. "What he's saying is that all you had the opportunity to compete. You other clubs in our league never even got to the playoffs. I know it's a bummer to say and it's a cliche, but all you can do is your best and after you do that and don't win, the sun still comes up the next day."

Robin Roberts, who pitched the perfect clincher for the Phillies against the Dodgers in 1955, was talking about the way Eddie Sawyer, the manager at the time, designated him for that assignment. "Eddie was a very distinguished man and before that game, he handed me the ball and all he said was, 'good luck,'" Roberts recalled. "That was the first time he ever did that. After the game, when all the celebrating was going on in the clubhouse, he grabbed me and kissed me. He never did that before. When he did, I know how happy he must have been."

Sent back to the minors in mid-summer after taking a beating from the Red Sox, rookie Jim Boutlier figures to pitch one of the Dodgers' games although he has never faced the Dodgers in his life. "I've never seen them except on TV and I don't know much about them," says the big right-hander from Darmouth. "Thurman (Mason) has, though, and that's all that really matters. He'll carry me the way he always does."

Through the briefing, Bell asked most of the questions and, on occasion, made deft references about his friends Kirby and Jordan. It was clear he did not believe his friends were guilty of wrongdoing. The Justice Department officials must have been impressed and influenced by Bell's attitude.

Nevertheless, Civilti seemed to "give us the information and we'll pursue it. At least some people, maybe four are involved in crime. The FBI and investigators will take it wherever it leads."

Prevent Fires: Smoking Leads List Of Causes

DEAR READERS: It's Fire Prevention Week again, and I have had so many requests to repeat my column on fire prevention that it has become a tradition. So here it is, with updated figures:

Last year, 16,874 Americans perished and 23,000 citizens, plus 141,100 firemen were seriously injured in 3,233,000 fires in Canada, 287 deaths were caused by 65,021 fires.

A large percentage of the dead were children, elderly persons and invalids who had been left alone "for just a few minutes."

The chief causes of fires, in order of the tall tabes, were:

1. Smoking
2. Electrical wiring
3. Heating and cooking
4. Children playing with matches
5. Open flames and stoves
6. Flammable liquids
7. Suspended wires
8. Chimneys and flues
9. Lighting
10. Spontaneous ignition

Some excellent smoke and fire-detection systems are available to homeowners. They are not expensive, and you can save your money.

NOW, in case of fire:

If you suspect fire, alert the rest of the household. But first test the top of the door. If it's hot, do not open it. Escape through the windows.

If you can't open the window, break it with a blunt object, such as a hammer, and use long hanging outside and use long, and use long.

Don't try to extinguish a fire over radiators where they may get damaged. Replace a cord if it is frayed.

Never leave small children or invalids alone in the home. Not even for a few minutes.

Have your wiring and electrical installations done by a professional.

Store oily rags and paint in a cool place in tightly sealed metal containers.

Never use flammable liquids for drycleaning indoors.

Never smoke in bed.

Never leave a fire unattended. Keep it handy in your kitchen, or in a bedroom, and use one for your cottage, car, boat and the back bedroom.
