Historic district asks: If Disney town has it, why can't we?

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Residents of the downtown residential historic district have a gripe with the Sanford Post Office they hope they can resolve amicably.

A well-publicized dispute attracted the attention of Gary Wain, president of the Central Florida Letter Carriers, the union which represents the postal employees in Sanford.

Wain believes the residents of the historic district have misinterpreted the intent of correspondence from the post office which encourages residents to switch their mail delivery from door-to-door to curbside.

Residents feel the letter is misleading, as it encourages them to accept a curbside (traditional rural) delivery box free of charge.

County balances billboards and beauty

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Balancing efforts to make Seminole County a more attractive place to live while allowing the private sector to continue making money from billboards is the focus of a morning work session by the Seminole County Board of Commissioners today.

Billboards may be nonconforming due to height, construction, size or they may be located in a zoning classification which does not permit billboards. There are 125 total billboards in unincorporated portions of the county. Only 12 are conforming. The deadline for bringing all nonconforming signs into compliance was June 1, 1995.

While every currently nonconforming billboard was in conformity with county regulations at the time it was constructed, the billboards have become nonconforming as the result of adopting zoning classifications which prohibit boards in agriculture areas or as a result of a 1990 ordinance establishing revised construction, size and height standards.

A total of 52 billboards are nonconforming due to construction standards, size and height while 61 are nonconforming due to changes in zoning or construction standards, according to a staff

Crocodile attacks alligator trainer

ST. AUGUSTINE — An alligator trainer lost part of his left arm after being attacked by a crocodile while trying to feed it. Arthur Clements, 37, remained in fair condition early this morning after being attacked Monday by a 6-foot Cuban crocodile at the St. Augustine Alligator Farm, said Carol Boling, spokeswoman for University Medical Center in Jacksonville.

Doctors were trying to reattach the arm, she said. Clements was attacked while leaving the pond after feeding the reptiles, police said. Crocodiles are generally more vicious and active than their cousins, the alligators. Alligators also have broader snouts. Both reptiles tend to be more hostile in captivity than in the wild.

Toddler ingests cocaine accidentally

ORLANDO — Doctors are trying to determine whether a toddler who ate some cocaine will suffer any long-term health problems. The 15-month-old girl picked up what turned out to be a small quantity of the drug while playing outside her Cocoa apartment and popped it in her mouth, according to a baby sitter.

The child began trembling and losing her balance about two hours later, and the baby sitter took her to Westhoff Hospital in Rockledge. Tests detected the cocaine in her system, and the youngster was transferred to Arnold Palmer Hospital for Children and Women in Orlando.

She was listed in stable condition Monday while doctors tried to determine how much cocaine was ingested and what the long-term results might be.

Police were investigating but believed it was accidental. "We don't think anybody fed the child anything," Cocoa Police Lt. Mark Klavman said. "It just looks like she found something on the ground and put it in her mouth."

The child's mother, Tomika Marten, 23, had left her at the sitter's home early Sunday before going to work, police said.

Officer loses 2 children, niece in wreck

ORLANDO — The mayor, police chief and several other members of the Orlando Police Department have spent several days consoling an officer who lost two of her children and a niece in a car accident.

Terrell Hughley, a police aide to Mayor Glenda Hood, lost her 14-year-old son Maurice and 3-year-old daughter Destiny in the accident Saturday near downtown Orlando. Their 16-year-old cousin, Crystal Davis, also died.

Police said Latrice Hughley, 17, the officer's other daughter, lost control of her car and it was broadsided by another vehicle. Latrice broke both her hips.

"This is a tragedy beyond what is imaginable," Police Chief Tom Hurlburt said Sunday.

He joined about 20 officers at Orlando Regional Medical Center with officer Hughley on Saturday and Sunday. Her daughter was in serious but stable condition Monday. The mayor also visited.

Floridian confesses to murder

MONTREY — A local man crashed his car into a funeral home and died after being chased and repeatedly shot by a jealous husband from Florida, police said.

Harvey Glenn Blubrey, 48, a mechanic, was dead at the scene Sunday after his car crashed into Goff Funeral Home. George Lynn Faulkner, 33, of Apopka, Fla., surrendered the murder weapon at the funeral home and was arrested, police said.

"I can't believe I killed someone," Faulkner was quoted as saying when he handed over the gun, according to Jerry Abston, Putnam County sheriff. Faulkner was charged with first-degree murder.

He and wife Nancy were in the process of getting divorced, Abston said. She had apparently been seeing Blubrey in the meantime.

Mrs. Faulkner got down on the floor board of the car when the shooting started and was not injured by bullets or the crash.

Monterey is on the Cumberland Plateau in eastern Middle Tennessee.

Doctor's body found in river

JACKSONVILLE — Police are awaiting autopsy results to determine the cause of death of a Jacksonville doctor whose body was found in the St. Johns River.

The body of John Decker Fraser, 53, a gynecologist and osteopath, was discovered about 2 p.m. Sunday. It was taken to the Medical Examiner's Office for an autopsy.

Fraser's wife, Jan, had reported him missing to police Saturday evening. She said she had not seen or heard from him since midnight Friday.

She told police Fraser's wallet and beeper were left at home.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Abuse registry Child-care workers won't be screened

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A list of suspected child molesters will not be used to check job applicants at child-care centers under a law that takes effect Sunday.

Since 1985, state officials have disqualified "confirmed" but not convicted abusers on the state's child abuse registry from jobs at day-care centers, summer camps and runaway shelters. The registry includes complaints investigated and verified by the state.

A law quietly passed in May eliminates checking names on the registry as part of the required applicant screening process. State officials will continue to run criminal background checks on potential hires.

The law tries to balance the rights of people accused of being molesters and the rights of innocent children. It also tries to shift the task of labeling pedophiles from HRS to the justice system.

But some day-care owners and children's advocates said the abuse registry has served as a valuable safety net in job screening. They said some child molesters won't appear in criminal records because the private nature of the crime and the young age of the victims makes prosecution difficult.

"It could be a clear-cut case without a conviction yet, and as of Oct. 1, we won't know about these perpetrators," said Mark Mendel, co-owner of KidStop child-care centers in Boynton Beach and Lantana.

About 200 of the 250,000 background checks conducted each year turn up suspected abusers on the registry, according to the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

More than half of the 200 file appeals challenging the list's accuracy. Officials said it costs HRS more than $1.8 million to classify abuse complaints on the registry either as unfounded, confirmed or closed.

"I felt it was a lot of bureaucracy and not much benefit," said Rep. Lois Frankel, D-West Palm Beach, who chairs the House Select Committee on Child Abuse and Neglect. "Our resources are precious."

Frankel said the law offers employers more information on potential hires, including personnel records from prior jobs and more detailed criminal records. Within two years, day-care centers will receive rap sheets on potential hires instead of just relying on HRS' say-so that the person committed a crime.

The child abuse registry still is available to HRS employees, foster care homes and adoption facilities to help them place children in safe homes. Officials will continue to rely on the registry to flag people suspected of abusing adults who seek jobs caring for the elderly or disabled.

Critics of the registry, most notably Sen. John Ostalkiewicz, R-Orlando, view it as a blacklist.

"I'm opposed to keeping secret records on individuals who are denied their due process," he said. "There's too many innocent people being put on this list and disqualified from employment."

Reversing course, Perot vows to form new party

By JOHN KINGS
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Shaking the American political system anew, Ross Perot is pledging to form a new party that will nominate a 1996 presidential candidate and use the ballot clout of independent voters to sway congressional races.

Perot, whose 19 percent showing in the 1992 presidential race exposed deep discontent with the two major parties, said he had no plans to run as the new party's candidate. "This is not about me running for president," he said Monday night. "The last thing I want is for this thing to be about me."

But he did not flatly rule it out. Perot said organizing the Independence Party would begin this week in California and move next to Ohio and Maine, all of which have 1996 deadlines to qualify for 1996 ballots. He said the party's platform would mirror that of his United We Stand America group, including dramatic campaign and lobbying reforms, as well as a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

He said he had no candidates in mind. When asked about retired Gen. Colin Powell, who is considering a 1996 run as a Republican or independent, Perot said: "Certainly we want people of that stature and quality."

Others who have voiced interest in an independent or third-party candidacy include retiring Democratic Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey and former Connecticut Gov. Lowell Weicker, a former Republican senator who founded a new party and went on to win the governorship.

State leaders of United We Stand America said they took Perot at his word, but nothing precluded them from drafting the Texas billionaire as the new party's candidate.

"It might be Colin Powell, it could be Sam Nunn, it could be Bill Bradley, it could be Ross himself," said Don Torgersen, the Illinois United We Stand executive director. "He certainly didn't preclude a candidacy," said Steve Boat, the Maine executive director. □ See Party, Page 8A

Appointments to boards

Our many local governments have a great deal of support from members of the public who are appointed to boards and committees. They perform vital functions which may affect the lives of local residents and in some cases their properties as well.

It becomes necessary therefore, to have the best possible persons serving in these capacities. Of utmost importance is the need to have people with proper knowledge and background appointed to these boards. After all, few people would ask, for example, a TV repairman to give advice on how to repair a broken lawnmower.

Possibly of equal importance is the willingness and ability of a person named to a board, to serve. He or she must be willing to donate time in attending meetings, doing study and research, and at times, travelling to another area.

The Sanford City Commission has had problems in the past. It is not uncommon for a commissioner to unexpectedly suggest making some board appointment to a person not known to the other commissioners.

The result is that the others take the word of the commissioner making the recommendation, and agree to the appointment. Who knows under what circumstance that appointment may have been made. Could it have been in return for a personal or political favor, could it be because of some other hidden motive?

While this is not to suggest any specific case of this being done, we must, nonetheless, acknowledge that it can and probably does occur from time to time. There is the possibility that it could happen more than some of us could ever imagine.

Some cities require citizens who are willing to serve on particular boards or committees, to fill out an application form. They list their education, background, qualifications, and reason for wishing to serve.

The commissioners often make their decisions from these lists. In this way, everyone on the commission has an opportunity to know who wants to serve and why. We believe this is a logical approach to this problem.

Regarding people being asked to step down from boards and committees, we believe the method of establishing a maximum of unexcused absences should be the criteria. It should serve all appointments equally, not be different with each separate entity.

The key word here of course is "unexcused." There are many reasons for excuses such as illness, family illnesses, or business travel requirements. By contacting the chairman of a committee or board, excused absences should be no difficulty.

What we suggest, regarding all of these proposals, is to have board appointment specifications put into writing, and followed equally for every such organization.

Yes, boards and committees give valuable support to a city and/or county. They are very important, and persons who serve on them deserve the appreciation of every citizen in the area.

But service must be the reason, not ulterior motive.

Let's formalize all board and committee appointment rules and regulations, hopefully in a similar manner for all of our government bodies. It's the only fair thing to do for those who truly want to serve their communities, as well as the people they represent.

Protest x-rated viewing

Last Thursday night I could not sleep after 2 a.m. so I got up, went into my living room and turned on my TV. It was already on WESH Channel 2 as I watch it a lot.

It was about 3 a.m. and what I saw was shocking, disgusting and made me very angry.

Several girls with barely enough strips and clothing on just to cover the parts of their bodies that you do not expose on TV. I guess it would have been OK on an X-rated station.

The girls were standing with legs straddled out and doing body movements very suggestive to men. Then on the bottom of the screen running all time an 800 number you could call for $50 and they would tell and show you how to have a happy party time in your home.

After a few minutes a very sexy voice of a girl would come on and urge you to call this number. She would tell you how to have a happy party time. I had always thought of Channel 2 as a decent family channel but even at 3 a.m. stuff like this makes it an X rated channel to me.

I think the good people of Sanford, especially church people, should call this station and protest X-rated viewing even if it is shown at 3 a.m.

Would Hippocrates assist a suicide?

In November 1994, the voters of Oregon approved Measure 16 (51 to 49 percent). It was the first -- and only -- law in the United States that allowed physicians to assist patients to commit suicide. Among the guidelines were that the patient have "an incurable and irreversible disease" that will, "within reasonable medical judgment, produce death within six months."

Around the country, advocates of "death with dignity" -- the new inalienable right to be helped to commit suicide -- rejoiced at the prospect that other states would soon follow Oregon. Eleven states began to consider physician-assisted laws, but the momentum has slowed considerably.

The primary reason has been the decision of Federal District Judge Michael Hogan to declare Measure 16 unconstitutional. (Lee v. State of Oregon.) In addition to the constitutional grounds, the judge also focused on the fact that the law permits a doctor to provide a patient with a lethal prescription, but it absolves the doctor from being present at the suicide itself -- "the most critical time, that of death." Nonetheless, in the Netherlands -- where physicians have been permitted to directly euthanize patients for more than 10 years -- there is now a move among doctors toward assisted suicide rather than having the doctor actually administer the final potion. Some of these practitioners of euthanasia are becoming queasy at being the immediate agents of death.

The final burden, therefore -- as in Oregon's Measure 16 -- will be entirely on the Dutch patient, left all alone. He or she, if very sick or distraught, can spill the medicine or fall asleep before taking all of it and wake up unable to move. Or the patient suddenly may want to avoid going through the final exit but doesn't know how to stop once the potion has been taken.

As for the constitutional issue in physician-assisted suicide, Judge Hogan ruled that the Oregon statute violates "equal protection of the laws." Most Oregon citizens, he pointed out, can be protected from doing themselves in by the laws of the state that require, for example, psychiatric evaluation for those found to be a danger to themselves. If they are found to be suicidal because they are clinically depressed, for instance, that condition can be treated.

But people seeking physician-assisted suicide under Measure 16 did not have those protections. "There is no requirement," said Judge Hogan, "that they be evaluated by a mental health specialist." Furthermore, under this law, "contrary to the physicians' reasonable standards of care for other patients, there is no bar to a physician acting negligently."

Arguing for Compassion in Dying, a Seattle euthanasia group, Kathryn Slak Tucker said that the Fourteenth Amendment prohibits the government from denying personal liberty without due process.

As reported in The New York Times, she noted that "just as the Supreme Court had set a limit on when a woman has the right (the personal liberty) to an abortion," the appeals court could limit physician-assisted suicide "to the very last stages of a person's life."

Judge Milton Pollack asked her: "Aren't you ascribing to the doctor the privileges of the executioner? All that doctors are certified to do is to treat. They are not certified to assist to kill." So, too, said Hippocrates.

It's a consensus that says: A mother's place is in the work force.

Powell disappoints the right wing

For two years, right-wing Republicans have been rubbing their hands and chortling among themselves in anticipation that Colin Powell would be the heavy hitter that would carry them back to the White House for only the second time in 64 years.

Eisenhower? Hell, Ike was a mugwump who played too much golf. Nixon? He was a moderate, for heaven's sake, and not only that, he ribbed elbows with the Chinese communists. Reagan was the only true-blue conservative to be elected since Hoover.

They wanted another real one, and all the better if it was a black guy, to demonstrate that bootstraps are neat things to pull yourself up by and to prove that the right isn't racist.

Now it turns out that Colin Powell has not been practicing his hitting. He's been working on his pitching, and he's got a beautiful, sneaky curve ball that has them swinging in the dirt.

I love it. The 58-year-old former national security chief and chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is off on a 20-day, 23-city tour to promote his new autobiography, "My American Journey." He will also, he says, be taking the public's pulse to see whether a run for the presidency would be feasible.

Until the book was published, Powell kept his political feelings to himself. Then he started talking -- to Time magazine, to the New York Times, to the Washington Post, to ABC's Barbara Walters, to NBC's Tom Brokaw. And, guess what, folks?

We've got a genuine, gilded, polished-and-waxed, four-star middle-of-the-roader on our hands. A man of humble origin and stubborn determination, a living example of the American Dream realized. A man who leans toward the "sensible center." A forthright, principled, political and moral force who believes pretty much as two-thirds of all Americans believe.

Hallelujah. I was beginning to think that moderates, and especially moderate Republicans, were going to have to be listed as an extinct species to ensure their survival.

Powell says he believes in balanced budgets and lower taxes. Most of us would agree. Powell says he believes the government should not be telling a woman what to do with her body. Most of us feel the same way. Powell says there's nothing wrong with laws that keep guns out of the hands of wackos and convicted criminals. Most of us would sign on to that.

Powell says he supports a regimen of silence to begin the day in public schools, but he is opposed to organized prayer. Most of us concur. Powell says he believes in affirmative action laws. I personally think their time has passed, and I suspect many of you do, too. We can allow him one mistake.

But the right wing. Oh, my, the right wing. The folks who think government ought to stay out of everything except school prayer, and abortion, and free markets, and tax breaks for quadrillionaires. The folks who believe you ain't living if you ain't polarizing. How hurt and resentful they are that Colin Powell lets his head be ruled by common sense.

Phil Gramm: "I think his views in some way reflect more the views of the Democratic Party than the Republican Party."

Jesse Helms: Powell's nomination "would be a mistake, because I think it would split the party."

Anti-abortion activist Patrick Mahoney: Pro-lifers are planning to "get in his face." I am elated, however, that Colin Powell may give political moderates the courage to come out of their cubbyholes.

Hell, Ike was a mugwump who played too much golf.

DONNA BRITT

Now, blackgirl hair is serious

WASHINGTON -- Since I hadn't laid eyes on my friend Lele since winter -- and had spent months coordinating our schedules so we could have lunch -- there was plenty on the "Girl, have I told you?" agenda when we met weeks ago over Indian food:

Her new book contract. My pregnancy and its symptoms. The latest scoop on our jobs, men, families and O.J.

So why was it that three minutes into lunch, we were talking hair?

Although she hates having her hair chemically straightened, Lele confessed she'd resorted to a mild relaxer because to do otherwise in the Washington humidity was to look "droopy, frizzed and frustrated" despite hours of styling.

I had so long avoided unbraiding my plaits -- and then sitting for hours as a stylist rebraided them -- that I had more new growth than a greenhouse. I fantasized about grabbing some scissors and whacking off all my hair. Would resembling Charles Barkley, I asked, be worth being free?

We laughed, but knew the truth: Being free of one's hair is hardly a blackgirl option. Even for a species in which every culture's interest in the waves, curls, kinks and straight strands that burst from our scalps borders on obsession, blackgirl hair is serious.

I think of how some folks wonder whether Winnie Mandela is "selling out" when she dons a wig. I think of the child whose link to her dreadlocks was so organic she feared that if she cut them, they'd bleed.

Among African Americans, hair is like skin color -- a feature that so distinguishes us from the white majority that its appearance once helped determine quality of life. Blackhair's complexity inspired Washington filmmaker Ada M. Babino to direct a half-hour film on the subject, "Middle Passage-N-Roots."

"Hair is our most personal attire; people are judged based on it," says Babino, 31, who has gone "from buns to braids to perms and gotten very different reactions. Depending on your hair, people approach you differently."

And unpredictably, I have a friend who observes that whenever she wears her thick hair in a TWA -- teeny, weeny Afro -- white men are intrigued. When she sports a long weave, brothers seek to tiptoe through her tresses. The one time in the last few years that I straightened my own shoulder-length hair provoked a yawn from my husband. The look was "too common," he said.

Some 20 black men, women and children tell their hair tales in Babino's film. In which interviews are intercut with clips of six dancers representing hair follicles and shots of a woman having her hair done.

"She goes through the process -- wash, rinse, sitting under the dryer, straightening," Babino says. "But when she goes outside, it rains -- and the fair follicles laughingly go back to their original state."

Deciding whether to fight or work with that state is a major decision for black women. We've never had more options.

The same media that once depicted all sisters in Afros and then in weaves has begun to depict other options: the wigs, braids and bobs sported by sisters on the Fox sitcom "Living Single"; the nearly bald look of funk singer Me'shell Ndegeocello; Oprah's sophisticated straightness; the flurry of braids worn by Angela Bassett in the upcoming movie "Strange Days."

Clearly, more blackgirls are like my Post co-worker Gwen Crump, 24 -- who within months went from a short bob to a "That Girl" flip to a Naomi Campbell waterfall. "People have asked if I have an identity crisis," Owen says. "But hair is an accessory. ... It should be fun."

For some, the not-yet-abandoned view that wavy or curly blackhair -- hair that's more like white folks' -- is "good" and the nappy type is "bad" makes all straightened hair seem like a sellout.

Re-enter Lele. Actually, there's nobody better with whom to discuss blackhair than my lunch partner, aka A'Lelia Bundles, great-great granddaughter of turn-of-the-century hair straightening maven Madam C.J. Walker.

Recently, Lele attended a lecture at the Smithsonian by African American author Tyana Vanzant. Standing atop an escalator as dozens of sisters descended, Lele was struck by the variety, textures, the "array of what we do without hair. It was -- glorious. ..."

"And while Madam is associated with straightening, she said her real interest was in (black) women being better groomed. She predicted that one day, we'd have a variety of styles -- not straight, but not kinky either. ... That's what I saw on that escalator."

By the way, Lele solved her blackhair dilemma by adopting a short, bi-level bob she finds "liberating"; I exchanged my braids for bouncy twists.

My husband loves them. But he, like any smart person associated with a woman with blackhair, knows the one standing rule about any given style:

Don't get used to it.

Being free of one's hair is hardly a blackgirl option.

report scheduled for presentation this morning.

Billboard standards adopted in 1990 called for monopole construction, minimum spacing of 2,000 feet apart and 400 square feet of advertising surface.

Tony VanDerworp, director of planning and development noted in his report, "The issue of regulating billboards is a community standards issue. The visual quality of the county to it's residents and for visitors and the tradeoffs with private enterprise is a somewhat subjective but important community issue."

The staff met with the representatives of billboard companies on several occasions to discuss various options.

Those issues were to be discussed at a 10:30 a.m. work session in commission chambers, room 1028 of the County Services Building.

The regular commission meeting is scheduled to begin at 1:30 with public hearings at 7 p.m., including adoption of millage and the county budget for 1996-97.

Party

Speaking on CNN's "Larry King Live," Perot said: "We are going to start the process of creating a political party for the independent voters. It will not be owned by the special interests."

Perot said he was leaving open the slim possibility that the effort could stop at the end of the year — if polls now showing 60 percent of Americans open to the idea of a third party suddenly shift and indicate growing satisfaction with Democrats or Republicans.

The new venture would be named the Independence Party, or the Reform Party in states such as California, where a conflict prevents use of the independence name.

If the new party qualifies nationally, Perot said it would open its presidential nominating process to anyone with the backing of 10 percent of party members.

"We want world-class people," he said. "Some weirdo is not going to get 10 percent of our votes."

The organization then would choose a presidential nominee through a convention process, beginning next spring. Perot said it was possible, but highly unlikely, that the party could back one of the major-party candidates.

He said the new party would not field congressional candidates, at least not on any widespread basis, but would endorse candidates from the major parties.

Perot said he would financially support the early work, but the venture ultimately would have to raise its own money. United We Stand will continue to operate separately as an issues group.

Not since the Republican Party was established in 1856 has a new party been able to push aside a major existing party and establish itself as a national force. Like the Whigs did then, Perot predicted either the Democratic or Republican party would disappear if his effort is successful.

Gary LaPaille, chairman of the Illinois Democratic Party, said Perot's 1992 showing proved "no politician, Democratic or Republican, should take him lightly." Still, he predicted Perot would find it difficult to build a viable new party.

Sanford police have made arrests at that location approximately a half dozen times in the past few weeks.

"For a limited time," the letter informs residents, "we can provide and install a curbside box at no cost to you."

Wain said the residents might feel they are being forced to move their box.

"No way!" Wain said. "There is no way we can make curbside delivery mandatory."

The desire to move the boxes to the curb is purely an economic one, he said. Curbside delivery reduces time spent on the route, thus reducing the cost of delivering the mail.

While the Sanford Post Office might save a few dollars by making the move, the aesthetic loss to the historic district might be more costly.

That, said Karen Ratliffe-McNeil, of the Sanford Historic Trust, is the whole point of their dispute.

"We want to maintain the integrity of the historic district," she said.

Wain said he believes though the U.S. Postal Service must do all it can to cut costs while maintaining the level of service, exceptions to regulations must sometimes be made.

"Look at Disney's Celebration community," he said of the new 18,000 home residential community being built by Disney to resemble a 1940s American town. "They have door-to-door delivery. They had to have gotten an exemption for that. Disney should not have more clout than a group of concerned citizens."

In a letter to Vikl Brennan, customer service district manager for the Central Florida postal district, Wain noted the inconsistency.

"It seems inconsistent to me that this community (Celebration) with approximately 18,000 residents and far more potential for delivery saving would receive an exemption to allow door to door delivery (more costly) while the Sanford Historic District attempting to preserve essentially the same community feel has up until now been unsuccessful obtaining approval to convert curbside back to door to door delivery," he wrote.

Wain does not believe all communities should be given an exception from the cost saving curbside delivery system, but he feels the post office should allow the historic district to maintain the look and feel of a turn of the century community.

Brennan referred all calls made to her by this reporter to Joseph Breckenridge, a representative with the corporate relations office of the U.S. Postal Service in Atlanta. She would not comment personally on the situation. Breckenridge has said in the past residents would not be forced to take the curbside service. He did not return calls Monday.

"I hope this matter can be resolved quickly and to everyone's satisfaction," Wain said.

He is confident that once a dialogue is opened, the dispute will be put to rest.

Ratliffe-McNeil said she will make every effort to work with Brennan to rid the historic district of the curbside boxes and maintain the traditional historic beauty of the district.

signs calling for such an investigation.

A week ago Monday Katina Campbell was injured in a scuffle with an officer as he tried to restrain her in a domestic dispute with the father of her child. A tender spot, skin still a bit tattered and blue, mars the right side of her face. No other marks remain.

Jackson is hesitant to use the term "brutality," but he said he was trying to "get someone in and look at the (Sanford Police) department."

Jackson said he was trying to "advertise" for the FBI to come to Sanford to look into the policies and procedures of the department.

"Justice is not being distributed equally in Sanford when it comes to filing a complaint," Jackson said. "There is no due process."

According to Jackson, Campbell's injuries indicate that she may have been held by her ankles and struck on the sidewalk.

The arrest report indicates that Campbell and the arresting officer, Robert Curtin, scuffled as he tried to take her into custody. Both fell to the ground and, at that time, police said, she sustained the injuries to her face and to her right arm.

"There were no injuries below her waist," Jackson said. "That seems to indicate to me that she was held off the ground and hit on the sidewalk."

Campbell, 22, is still shaken by the incident.

She stood, without a sign, among those picketing at the police station.

"Me and my boy's father was in a pushing and shoving fight," she said, picking at her neatly manicured green and gold nails. "We had split up by the time the police arrived but we were still arguing. The police grabbed me from behind and slammed me into the sidewalk."

Cmdr. Dennis Whitmire of the Sanford Police Department said a complaint has been filed regarding the incident. He indicated that it is being investigated.

"These things take time," he said.

Jackson is impatient for results. He said he has already checked with the Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE).

"But they said they don't police the police," he said of the FDLE response. "Who does police the police?"

spokesman for the group at last night's commission meeting said situations such as this "are going to cause major problems in the city."

Jackson said he had filed complaints about Sanford police tactics with the Department of Justice and governor's office and had been told they are looking into the possibility of an investigation.

"We had to do that," he said. "Once people go to the police and get no respect, they have no place else to go. But we're done with that, we're tired of this kind of treatment," he continued. "We need change."

Jackson said he had signatures of 15 people who say they don't get fair treatment by the police.

He recommended that the city commission schedule the matter on a work session agenda. "I think it would be appropriate," he said, "especially since the FBI office has indicated this matter warrants an investigation."

While Jackson alluded to responses from the FBI, Department of Justice and governor's office, and the list of 15 citizens, none of the materials had reportedly been submitted to city officials.

City Attorney Bill Colbert commented, "What I suggest is that you submit any of this data directly to the city manager, which would prevent anything from having to go through the police department. The city manager, in turn, can give me copies, and distribute the information to members of the commission."

In addition to Jackson, Emmett Kelt, identifying himself as the uncle of Katina Campbell, also addressed the commission.

"What Mr. Jackson says shows the concern we have," he said. "This must be investigated and taken seriously."

Kelt added, "We don't have the kind of money O.J. Simpson has to fight this in court, but we just don't have room for this kind of thing in our community."

"This isn't a white thing, this isn't a black thing," he added, "this is a wrong thing."

Regarding Jackson's request for the matter to be discussed during a work session, Mayor Bettye Smith responded, "Let us receive the information first, then decide. I'm not ready to commit this to a workshop at the present time."

Lake Mary takes SAC lead; Seminole sweeps

From Staff Reports

WINTER PARK — The senior trio of Darrell Dilmore, Erik Larsen and Will Lipcomb took matters in their own hands Monday night and carried Lake Mary to a straight game victory over Lake Howell in an important Seminole Athletic Conference boys' volleyball match.

The Rams outlasted the Silver Hawks 17-15, 15-10 to improve to 10-1 overall and 5-0 in the SAC. Lake Howell fell to 5-1 overall and 4-1 in conference. Both teams will open the second half of SAC play Wednesday, with Lyman at Lake Mary and the Hawks at Lake Brantley.

The junior varsity contest went to Lake Howell. The Rams jumped out to a 13-3 lead in the first game, but the Silver Hawks battled back to take a 15-14 lead before Lake Mary regained the momentum and the win.

"It was typical Lake Howell tenacity," said Lake Mary head coach Bill Whalen. "They kept fighting back and fighting back. It was good to see our kids suck it up and pull out the win.

"Darrell Dilmore was a force at the net, he had a great blocking night. Will set them up and Darrell and Erik (Larsen) killed it. They carried us, they showed great senior leadership and it made all the players step up and play better."

Dilmore had 13 kills and eight blocks, while Larsen had 10 kills and four blocks and Lipcomb 13 assists, three kills and three blocks.

TRIBE SWEEPS

SANFORD — The resurgent Seminole High School boys' volleyball team took another step toward joining the elite teams as it swept a doubleheader from Spruce Creek and Lake Brantley at Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium.

The Tribe junior varsity split its two matches, beat Spruce Creek in three games and losing to Lake Brantley in three games.

Seminole improved to 5-2 overall and 2-2 in the Seminole Athletic Conference. The Tribe will host Oviedo on Wednesday.

Chris Louwman paced the SHS attack with 21 digs, 28 kills and 17 service points on the night.

"We tried to control the rhythm and play our game," said Seminole head coach Beth Corso. "We're learning and growing every game, we only have three returning players and have eight new position players. They really kicked it up on the blocks in the second game after we made a defensive adjustment."

Stay on top of drug facts

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can you inform me as to the availability of a reliable listing of drugs and their interactions when taken simultaneously, written in layman's terms, that is available commercially?

DEAR READER: There are several publications that supply the information you request.

Most medical libraries contain the Physicians' Desk Reference, a compendium of drugs that is updated annually. The same company (Medical Economics) also has begun publishing a companion text called PDR Generics. Both these resources are excellent.

In addition, "Best Drugs, Worst Drugs" has been a popular reference book.

Finally, don't forget to question your doctor or pharmacist about drugs and their interactions. These professionals usually welcome such opportunities.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 74-year-old person in good health who underwent hip replacement surgery in 1986. Now my dentist requires me to fill a prescription for amoxicillin in order to avoid possible destruction of the replacement due to the release of bacteria from my mouth into my system. What basis of fact or research is known for this surprising cause and effect problem from teeth cleaning?

DEAR READER: Prosthetic devices anywhere in the body can become easily infected when bacteria invade the bloodstream and are carried to the artificial joint, heart valve or other implant.

Certain procedures are known to release showers of bacteria into the blood. Such procedures include cystoscopy (examination of the bladder), flexible sigmoidoscopy or colonoscopy (to examine the colon) -- and professional dental cleaning.

Consequently, your dentist is absolutely correct: You should take antibiotics at the time you have dental work.

DEAR DR. GOTT: If a doctor does his own blood work and cardiograms, shouldn't they cost less than in a laboratory atmosphere?

DEAR READER: In theory, yes. However, because of high volume, labs often offer tests at discounted rates to insurance companies, HMOs and even the public. On the other hand, if a doctor is willing to make less profit, he, too, can discount lab fees.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Lisa and David Berkowitz, of Old Tappan, N.J., have won several national bridge championships. They have two children, Dana, 10, and Michael, 8, who are champions in the making. And although they have attended several nationals, the one in New Orleans last summer was the first in which they had played. Over the first weekend, they competed in side games with their mother.

On this deal, Michael showed his innocence.

The opponents cruised into four hearts. Lisa, West, led the diamond jack and the dummy was tabled. Michael started laughing.

"Why are you laughing?" asked the declarer.

"I don't have any diamonds," Michael replied, "and I have lots of trumps."

After ruffing the first trick,

Michael imaginatively switched to the club queen. Lisa overtook with the king and returned the diamond 10. Correctly reading this as a suit-preference signal for spades, Michael, after ruffing, led back a spade. The defense continued with a spade ruff, diamond ruff, spade ruff. That was the first six tricks and they should have collected a seventh with the spade king, but a wheel fell off a moment later.

The declarer took it in good spirit, saying that she would never forget the deal.

When should children learn to play bridge? As early as possible, but I had always thought that only once they are 10 do they really assimilate the basics. Yet Michael Berkowitz is picking up the game quickly at the tender age of 8. Maybe it has something to do with his genes.

Phillip Alder's book, "Get Smarter at Bridge," is available, autographed upon request, for $14.95 from P.O. Box 169, Roslyn Hts., NY 11577-0169.

SANFORD — A computer software company and a conveyor systems firm are relocating in Seminole County from neighboring counties, thanks in part, to $350,000 in incentives from Economic Development Funds.

Seminole County Commissioners Tuesday

approved $300,000 of incentives for HTE to move its computer software company to a building to be constructed in the Heathrow International Business Center. HTE employs 200 people in Orlando with subsidiary offices in Franklin, Ohio and Arlington Heights, Illinois.

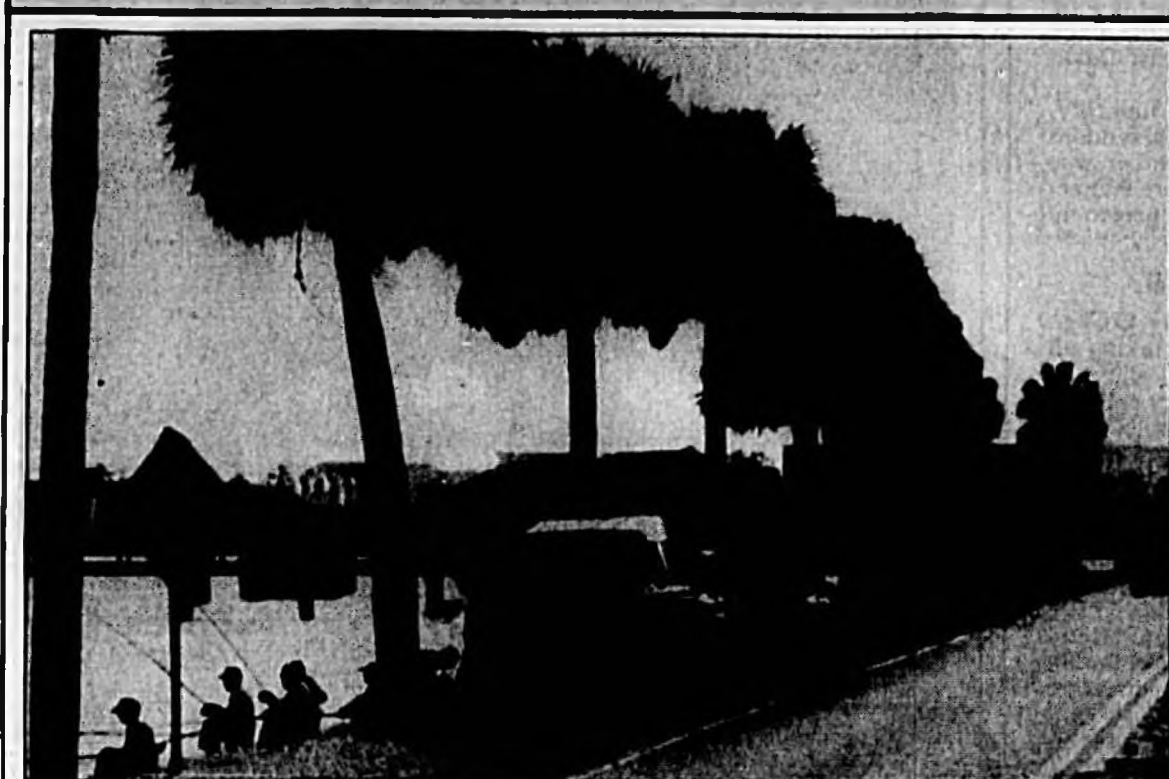

The commissioners also agreed to allocate $50,000 to Conveyor Systems, Inc. in DeBary as an incentive to relocate the Volusia County

Cities, county weigh merits of fire departments responding to calls

By NICK PFERPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The question of who will be operating ambulances in the local area in the near future remains unanswered. The Seminole County Fire Chief's Association is recommending that each city and the county change from using Life Fleet Atlantic ambulances, to ambulances already on hand at the various fire departments.

The matter was brought up for extensive discussion Monday afternoon, during the Sanford City Commission work session meeting. On hand to join in the discussion were Dr. Ron Brown, medical director of Seminole County EMS services, and fire chiefs from Sanford, Lake Mary, Winter Park, Lake Mary, Oviedo, and Seminole County.

The Caselberry fire chief arrived late. Caselberry is presently the only municipality not using Atlantic. "Caselberry had a rough start at first," Dr. Brown commented. "But they're doing this now for five years, and they are doing an excellent job now."

Brown explained that with both medical personnel from fire departments and ambulance personnel arriving at injury scenes, "often, the fire people, knowing that the ambulance people are on their way, may have a tendency to hesitate or hold back. Where if the fire departments were handling these calls, they would arrive at the scene, determine the problem, load up, and be on their way immediately."

Brown admitted he had no complaints with AMS (Atlantic Medical Service) operations, but he See Ambulance, Page 5A

Cops say boy, 15, to be tried as adult for attempted murder

By NICK PFERPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — A 15-year-old boy has been arrested for attempted second degree murder after police say he allegedly shot another man in the mouth earlier this month.

Sebastian Salkind, 20, of Longwood, was reportedly shot in the mouth on Monday, Sept. 4.

According to Seminole County sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, the incident occurred as Salkind was sitting in his car, allegedly attempting to purchase crack cocaine at the intersection of Jackson and Merritt Streets near Altamonte Springs.

McDonough said Salkind had given a man money for the crack, but the man apparently had no drugs to sell. He grabbed Salkind's money, and when Salkind protested, shot him in the mouth with a 22 caliber revolver.

Now, Moesha Antwan Coleman, 15, of 607 Lake Mobile Drive, Altamonte Springs, has been charged in connection with the case. Charges include one count each of attempted second degree murder, aggravated battery, shooting into an occupied vehicle and possession of a firearm by a minor.

Coleman's case was reportedly transferred yesterday from the Seminole County Juvenile Court to the Circuit Court where he is to be tried as an adult. He was scheduled to make his initial court appearance this afternoon.

Coleman is being held under $25,000 bond in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Salkind has recovered from his wound.

Predators cheer their fans

Mike McBass, co-owner of the Orlando Predators and receiver Herkie Walls went to Wilson Elementary School in Sanford Tuesday to cheer on the parents who work so hard to help teachers and students in the business of getting an education. The school's PTA invited the Predators, who are committed to doing what they can to be sure youngsters in the community stay away from drugs and stay in school, to speak to their members. Visits, such as this one, to schools are one way they are trying to serve as role models.
