Pearl Harbor day observed
 Several former servicemen from the Sanford and Central Florida area will be going to Jacksonville tomorrow for the annual Dec. 7 observance. An expected 300 men and women will be in attendance.
 The day is the 52nd anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor which brought about the immediate U.S. entry into World War II and a declaration of war requested by President Franklin D. Roosevelt. The request was approved by Congress on Dec. 8, 1941.
 According to Jim Smith, Commander of American Legion Post 53 in Sanford, "Frank Voltaire and I will be representing the Sanford area at the observance and the other attendees including about six members of the Fleet Reserve, who will be going to Jacksonville."
 Smith said the former service personnel will board a U.S. Navy Frigate, and go several miles offshore, where they will throw bouquets of live flowers into the ocean.
 "This has been going on every year," Smith said. "We have always thrown wreaths overboard until last year when the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) told us to stop the practice because the wreaths were not totally biodegradable."
 The annual observance is conducted by the Jacksonville Fleet Reserve Association.

Police launch investigation over graffiti

By NICK PFEIFAU
 Herald Staff Writer
 SANFORD — Graffiti appeared on windows at the State Attorney's office, 100 E. First Street, in downtown Sanford yesterday. Sanford police have launched an intensive investigation into the matter.
 According to Sanford police Commander Dennis Whitmore, "Sometime between Friday afternoon and Sunday morning, someone painted the words 'Child Molester Release Center' on the glass on south and west side windows with a white material."
 Whitmore said that while it appeared to be paint, it had not been verified as of this morning.
 Chris White, chief of operations for State Attorney Norman Wolfinger, said the lettering had been smeared over by this morning, so it is not readable. He believes the spraying may have been done sometime Saturday night or early Sunday morning.

Law: Clients equally guilty as prostitutes
 By VICKI DeSORMIER
 Herald Staff Writer
 SANFORD — Sanford police "gall" took to the streets in an effort to rid the downtown historic district of the prostitutes who are making a living there.
 Instead of arresting the hookers, however, police focused their attention on their customers, the men who come to the area, often from outside Sanford, to pay for sexual services.
 "We want to give everyone equal access to the law," said Sanford Police Commander Dennis Whitmore. "We don't want to just arrest the ladies."
 Several times this year, the Sanford Police have targeted the customers rather than the "business."

Longwood seeks personnel, retirement changes

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
 Herald Staff Writer
 LONGWOOD — Changes in the city personnel policy and a request that the city be allowed to withdraw from covering future employees in the Florida Retirement System top tonight's city commission agenda.
 The proposed personnel policy changes came about as the result of union negotiations and bargaining with the city. The change affords an internal method of promoting and recruiting from within the organization. It precludes a mandatory external recruitment, with its associated costs, should a current employee(s) be qualified for the position.
 In other matters concerning city employees, the commissioners will consider a resolution requesting the legislature allow municipalities to withdraw from adding future employees to the Florida Retirement System.
 When the program initially began, the city and employees each contributed a portion of revenue to the retirement program. The city paid four percent of a worker's gross salary to the program and the employee a like amount. Through the years, the legislature changed the program making it non-contributory for employees and the cost to the city has escalated. The city is required to contribute 16.99 percent of gross salary for all its general employees and 26.83 percent of gross salary for all its high risk employees.

 The city has no control over additional increases, benefits and additional contributions. Under a cost sharing agreement, city leaders think the city can provide the actuarially equivalent to the state retirement system at less cost.
 The city claims much of the current contributions being made by Longwood are being allocated to pay for actuarial deficits and unfunded liability created prior to the city's

7 changes in government?
 Commission to take public testimony

By J. MARK BARFIELD
 Herald Senior Staff Writer
 SANFORD — Members of the Seminole County Charter Review Commission will take public testimony on seven areas of possible change to the county's government.
 The commission will meet next week to decide hearing dates, likely to come early next year.
 Topics will be: partisan vs. non-partisan elections; single-member commissioner districts; term limits; who the county attorney serves, the commission or county manager; commission reviews of senior staff; elected vs. appointed officers, such as sheriff and elections supervisor; and partisan vs. non-partisan school board elections.
 The topics apply only to countywide offices and do not directly affect the seven cities. Speakers at the hearings may suggest their own topics.
 The CRC was created in the voters-approved Seminole County Home Rule Charter to periodically review the document, the county's constitution. The CRC has reviewed the current charter and several major topics of interest, such as single-member district elections.
 Rather than taking a position on the topics as yet, they decided to listen to the public, cities and special-interest groups to see what changes, if any, are sought. The CRC will then draft ballot wording and direct the county commission to place the items on the Nov. 1994 ballot. The commission must do so without changing the wording.
 One set-aside topic which may return is the idea of a growth management commission. Such a commission, as exists in Broward, Pinellas and Volusia Counties, reviews and must approve both city and county land use plans to assure they are consistent with each other. Such bodies typically arise from conflicts between cities and their counties.
 The growth commission, depending on its make-up, can allow cities greater control over their county, a powerful role.
 Review commissioner Andrienne Perry, county commission candidate and former Longwood mayor, has promoted the growth commission and though the CRC voted last week not to take the idea before

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Jaycees name outstanding Americans

TULSA, Okla. — The head of a Florida consumer interest group joined actress Shanna Reed and former New York Jets defensive lineman Dennis Byrd as a recipient of this year's Ten Outstanding Young Americans awards.

Dominic M. Calabro, 36, of Tallahassee, president and chief executive officer of Florida TaxWatch, a non-profit public interest group, was honored by the U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The award honors 10 Americans who exemplify the best attributes of the nation's young people, ages 21-39. They will be presented during a Jan. 15 ceremony at the group's headquarters in Tulsa.

Byrd, 27, had his neck broken in a tackle during a Nov. 29, 1992 game, but has made a near-miraculous recovery from his injury.

He wrote a book about the experience, "Rise and Walk," and recently signed with CBS to cover this year's NFL season as an analyst.

Ms. Reed, 38, of Burbank, Calif., plays Polly Cooper on the CBS situation comedy "Major Dad."

Also named as a recipient was Dr. Rhonda Cornum, of San Antonio, Texas, was the first woman shot down and taken prisoner in the Persian Gulf War.

The 36-year-old is a helicopter pilot and paratrooper and holds a doctorate in biochemistry.

Other winners include Jolita V. Kohnleidy, Gerald Ford, Ann Bancroft, Gale Sayers, Elvis Presley, Bill Clinton and Jeanna Yeager.

Gunmen open fire at flea market

MIAMI — One man was killed and three other people wounded when police say several people armed with guns opened fire into a crowd near a flea market in southwest Dade County, police said.

Jose Martinez, 19, of Miami, died at the scene Sunday of at least two gunshot wounds, according to a release from the Metro-Dade police department.

Tavis Miller, 17, was in good condition Sunday night at Jackson Memorial Hospital with gunshot wounds, hospital officials said. Jose Zapeta, 20, and Mauricelo Alaniz, 15, were treated and released.

Metro-Dade police said at least two suspects fled the scene before officers arrived. There were no arrests late Sunday, but police were questioning several witnesses to the shooting.

The motive was unknown, police said.

Records of AIDS patients stolen

MIAMI — Computerized records of at least 6,000 people served by the South Florida AIDS Network have been stolen from a hospital.

Metro-Dade police and the Florida Department of Law Enforcement are investigating the theft of three personal computers and diskettes from Jackson Memorial Hospital.

Police said the break-in discovered Nov. 15 may have been an inside job, noting burglars got by double-locked office doors to reach the equipment.

"This is really disturbing," said AIDS activist Jim Pruitt. "People are really fearful about their confidentiality. Some of the people who receive services are acutely sensitive to this, and understandably so."

Jim Towey, secretary of the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, noted several codes protect the information from easy access.

"Even if the possibility is extremely remote, I won't feel comfortable until this crime has been solved, and we're doing everything we can," he said.

The agency has copies of all of the stolen records, said Barbara Loyd, the network's administrator.

The theft prompted Towey to send inspectors to check security at 35 county health departments and AIDS agencies across the state.

Records of HIV-infected people are protected by a state law making unauthorized disclosure illegal.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

AT&T helps build young minds

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The students at Goldsboro Elementary School are getting more chances to work on their computer skills thanks to a new cooperative effort between the school and AT&T.

The company recently donated 10 machines to the school's computer lab.

But the gift didn't stop there.

Several AT&T volunteers are taking the time to write specialized courseware to help teachers not only learn the many uses of the equipment but to also show how to better teach the students.

The volunteer instructors will also help teach the students throughout the school year.

"We at AT&T have a major stake in the students of this area," said Norm Cody of AT&T who spearheaded the program. "They are our future employees."

Cody, who has a background in education and who is married to a third grade teacher at Goldsboro, said the mastering of computer skills is as important to today's student as reading, writing and arithmetic.

"This is an essential skill," he said.

Cody said he and his wife Anna Marie moved to the Sanford area three years ago from the AT&T facility in Fairhaven, Mass. and, because of their connection to education they began to see what AT&T could do to help improve learning conditions for one of the local schools.

"I brought a proposal to the (AT&T) Council on Education that we help Goldsboro achieve some of the goals of the Blueprint 2000," he said. "We asked for eight or 10 AT&T 630 PCs."

Their wish was granted and Goldsboro has started their computer lab with 10 although, used, but still current, PCs.

The school plans to purchase additional personal computer with school money at a later date.

"We aren't just stopping with the computers," Cody promised. "We are doing everything that we can to be sure that the students are prepared for the real world starting at the earliest grade levels."

Beginning with the kindergarten, the students at Goldsboro are getting instruction on how to operate state-of-the-art computer equipment.

"It's very exciting to see how these students take to the computers," Anna Marie Cody said. "I'm glad that we were able to form a partnership with AT&T."

AT&T officials hope they can help the teachers and then the students learn as much as possible about computers and their applications. They hope also to get parents into the act.

"We want to eventually be able to give parents some computer training as well," (Norm) Cody said. "It's an important skill for all of us."

He said AT&T is pleased with the response they have received from the school to their donation. Teachers and students are enthusiastic and eager to learn, he said. He believes everyone will benefit from the exchange of knowledge.

"We are very happy in this relationship," he said.

Way Back When

Pictured here is a 1928 kindergarten class in which Dorothy Cox Duffy was a member. Only two boys are identifiable Tommy Cobb and Mike Sous. Mrs. Duffy went through the first and fourth grades in Tallahassee, the fifth through the 10th in Sanford, and the 11th and 12th in New Smyrna Beach. Mrs. Cox's father was a projectionist, a stage director when vaudeville shows came to town; he posted "bills" on buildings advertising the shows; when the movies were over he would rush them to the railroad station so they could be sent to other cities for showings the following nights. At times he had to take up tickets and usher folks to their seats.

Spacewalking astronauts ditch bent solar wing, install new

By MARCIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Astronaut Kathryn Thornton, lifted high by a shuttle crane, held a 400-pound twisted solar panel from the Hubble Space Telescope over her head, let go and watched it slowly drift away as space debris.

Thornton and her spacewalking partner, Tom Akers, then installed new solar wings on Hubble today.

The discarded wing — a thin blanket of plastic — began flipping as space shuttle Endeavour backed away. Sunlight glinted off the golden surface of the panel as it floated like a lost kite, dramatic with the blue ball of Earth in the background.

"It looks like a bird," Thornton said as the shuttle moved farther and farther away.

Installing new electricity-generating solar panels was the purpose of today's spacewalk, the second of five to correct Hubble's bad vision, jitters and other problems. The $1.6 billion telescope got two new pairs of gyroscopes and new fuses during Sunday's spacewalk by two other Endeavour astronauts.

"We've been up to bat twice, and the crew has hit two home runs," said Joe Rothenberg, NASA's associate director of flight projects for Hubble.

Despite the astronauts' accomplishments, NASA officials still were anxious about the upcoming spacewalks to install new optics, extremely delicate tasks. Both excursions so far required extra, unexpected work: tossing the solar panel today and fusing over a misaligned telescope door on Sunday.

The discarded panel joined 6,700 other pieces of space junk being tracked by the U.S. Space Command and was expected to stay in orbit for a year before falling through the atmosphere and burning up.

"Just to watch that thing floating through space was just like '2001.' Some day somebody's going to put that to music," Rothenberg said. In the film "2001: A Space Odyssey," objects drift majestically through space to booming music.

Hubble's old solar wings shook every time the telescope moved in and out of daylight. The one that was scrapped was badly twisted and could not be rolled up for transport home. It retracted about a third of its 40-foot length and then stopped.

POLICE BRIEFS

Robbery, battery charged

Charley Harris, 42, who told police he was homeless, was charged with attempted strong arm robbery and battery on a law enforcement officer by Sanford Police on Friday.

Police said he attempted to purchase $10 of crack cocaine from an undercover agent. The report stated when the undercover agent showed him the crack, he tried to grab it while he hit the undercover agent in the mouth and attempted to escape.

The suspect was stopped by police and taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $2,000 bond.

Cocaine possession charged

He went to his home, but refused to exit the car. Police took him into custody and took him to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. Bond was not set.

James Marcus Christopher, 23, 19 Castle Brewer Ct., Sanford, was charged with a warrant for selling cocaine. He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $5,000 bond.

Hopper Academy getting restored

Hopper Academy, stripped bare. Crews have nearly completed the demolition of the second floor of Hopper Academy, the former school for the Sanford's black community. Partitions and other additions were removed to reveal the original walls of what was once known as "Harper Academy" in 1915, the earliest known reference of the building. Members of the Community Improvement Association of Sanford are seeking early photographs of the building to aid with their renovations. Call president Charles Rowe at 330-5665. The association is also seeking contributions to help complete the $250,000 effort.

Abortion trial focus shifts to press issues

By BILL KACZON
Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA — The focus in abortion doctor David Gunn's murder case has shifted to free press-fair trial issues as the news media battle for access to court documents.

A judge has made limited investigative material public, but it contains little new information about the slaying.

Further requests to disclose more are expected. Also at issue are limitations on media coverage of jury selection.

The trial, which had been set to start today, was delayed last week until Feb. 21.

Circuit Judge John Parnham agreed Tuesday to open about 200 of 675 pages of documents, but left the rest of the material and 45 sworn statements sealed.

A lawyer for Michael P. Griffin, the man accused of shooting Gunn outside a Pensacola abortion clinic March 10, had argued against release of the material on grounds it would prejudice potential jurors.

After reviewing the items in private, Parnham granted a protective order sought by the defense, except for the material he deemed safe to make public. The judge wrote he was particularly worried potential jurors would be asked questions about abortion during the selection process.

"Because of the controversial nature of this issue and the passionate responses it sometimes ignites it is imperative that all prejudicial pretrial publicity be minimized," Parnham wrote.

At a hearing last Tuesday, he said another factor in his decision was that reporters had waited until only three weeks before the previously scheduled trial date to request the information.

But because the trial had been delayed, Parnham gave the news media time to submit written arguments to release additional material.

"My goal would be to continue to ask for all of it," said Mike Vasilinda, Tallahassee bureau chief of Capitol News Service.

Vasilinda said he will not decide how far to pursue that goal or whether to fight limitations on jury selection coverage until he consults this week with his lawyer and his clients, NBC-affiliated television stations across Florida.

The Pensacola News Journal sought only nine items, including statements from certain witnesses. Parnham declined to release any witness statements as well as most of the other documents the newspaper wanted.

The News Journal's lawyer, William Clark, said he intended this week to renew a motion to deny the protective order.

Pensacola station WEAR-TV, an ABC affiliate, made no specific request for materials but has been represented in court by a lawyer.

The station's news director, Peter Neuman, said a "workable plan" is being sought on the media issues.

"I think there will have to be compromise if there is going to be a fair trial," Neuman said.

Vasilinda said he was most worried about coverage limits for jury selection that Parnham has not yet finalized.

Defense lawyer Robert Kerrigan and Assistant State Attorney James Murray each asked Parnham to bar the public and press if and when potential jurors are asked sensitive questions such as about abortion.

They said they had changed their minds about an earlier agreement to let reporters listen on an audio hookup. Murray also asked that transcripts of the closed-door questioning be permanently kept from the public.

The judge already has said he plans to prohibit photographing jurors and potential jurors and require they be identified by number rather than name to protect their privacy.

Vasilinda had appealed similar restrictions in the retrial earlier this year of William Lozano. He is the suspended Miami police officer who was acquitted of manslaughter in the fatal shooting of a motorcyclist and the death of a passenger in the resulting crash.

Brady Bill spurs Florida gun boom

By Associated Press

MIAMI — Weapons dealers say that Floridians are cleaning out gun shops in the wake of the passage of the Brady bill — a piece of federal legislation that will have little effect on the state.

"Some people think Brady is just the beginning, that enforcement will get stronger," said Tony Gutierrez, general manager of Tamiami Gun Shops in Miami, said Sunday.

Tamiami reported sales close to double and had run out on some assault rifles.

Another federal crime bill is waiting in the wings that would ban certain types of ammunition and 19 types of assault weapons such as Colt AR-15s and AK-47s. A House-Senate committee is considering the restrictions.

The Brady bill doesn't affect Florida because the state has its own three-day waiting period and background check, and therefore is exempt from the new federal law. But gun sales are shooting up anyway, dealers say.

In Florida, gun-sale background checks soared as Congress considered the Brady bill, finally passed Nov. 24 and signed Tuesday by President Clinton.

Florida Department of Law Enforcement officials said they expect 1993 background checks will beat last year's 272,746, based on increases of 14 percent in September and 23 percent in October.

The trend is especially strong in south Florida, dealers say.

The sales spurt has made it harder to get popular guns. Wholesale prices for Smith & Wesson, Beretta and imports by Taurus have increased 10 percent, said Jeff Hawkins, owner of Bull's Eye Pawn and Gun in Belle Glade.

"I'm sold out of every assault weapon we ever had," said Mike Caruso, owner of the Delray Shooting Center. Caruso and some other shop owners reported gun sales increases of at least 50 percent.

The dealers say one reason their sales are up is that customers are misinformed about the Brady bill.

"We have people coming in here to purchase guns who have never owned guns in their lives," said Patrick Hayes, manager of Trail Guns in West Palm Beach. "They're afraid they're going to ban guns. You try to explain to people that this is not the case, but a lot of people don't understand."

Family and a friend go to court for custody of orphaned baby

By Associated Press

ELYRIA — An uncle, an aunt, a cousin and a family friend are competing for custody of a 1-year-old boy who survived a boat explosion that killed his parents, his maternal grandparents and an uncle.

Lorain County Domestic Relations Judge David A. Basinski, in proceedings scheduled to begin today, must decide who gets custody of Charles Hoffman III.

Those vying for custody are William Moss of LaGrange, the boy's maternal uncle; Lawrence Morgan of Strongsville, Charles Hoffman's friend and former business partner; Theresa Hall of Brooksville, Fla., the boy's maternal aunt; and Patrice McMontigle of Colorado, Charles Hoffman's cousin.

The trial is scheduled for three days this week and is to conclude Jan. 13-14. The judge has ordered the trial closed to the public and news media.

The boy's parents, Charles and Maria Hoffman of Cleveland, his maternal grandparents and an uncle were killed in the May 9 explosion alongside a waterfront restaurant in the Flats nightclub district of Cleveland.

"In my mind, the case has kind of gotten down to reality," said James A. Deery, an Elyria lawyer appointed the child's guardian. "We sometimes get so calloused to the fact that five people died, it's easy to forget that there are family members and friends and business associates who are left behind."

At least two parties in the dispute said the Hoffmans asked them to take care of the boy if anything happened to them. However, nothing was put in writing, and the couple left no will.

The baby was slightly burned when his family's 33-foot twin-engine cabin cruiser exploded. Investigators believe leaking fuel fumes caused the blast.

What owners on historic home tour did

Hundreds of people enjoyed a walk into the past on the Sanford Historic Trust annual Tour of Homes last weekend.

And for those opening their homes for tour, a special thanks: not just for promoting the resurgence of Sanford's historic district nor for your generous hospitality, but for your steadfast belief that there is more to life than the high tech, state-of-the-art speed down the information highways on which we live.

There is also elegance. And charm. Eight homeowners acted as hosts Dec. 4 and 5 in the primary fund-raising event for the Sanford Historic Trust. Money raised is used for projects in the downtown district, including grants for homeowners in need and revitalization projects such as the Duany Project. The trust paid a major portion of the fee to develop a strategy for preservation.

These homeowners scrubbed, polished, scraped, painted and wallpapered in an effort to provide curiosity seekers with a view of the lives of preservation buffs.

It's a life with feet planted firmly in two worlds, one that appeals to about 5 percent of all homebuyers who realtors say seek homes over 100 years old.

Like the eight tour hosts, Sanford's historic district is filled with homeowners who travel the fast-paced computerized information highways daily, only to come home to gleaming burnished oak floors, ceilings too tall to touch on tiptoes, the warm glow of a fire in the fireplace, rich tapestries and velvet covered antique furniture nestled in parlors painted crimson or rose or midnight.

We thank these tour hosts for sharing the myriad ways they have preserved fine, old things holding fine old memories. They have proved there is much to see when you leave the daily, high-tech, fast-paced information highway.

On historic district streets, the speed limit is 25.

Free speech and women judges

Law professor Nadine Strossen, president of the American Civil Liberties Union, is also an active member of Feminists for Free Expression. That group of writers and scholars vigorously disagree with Catharine MacKinnon's dismissal of the First Amendment in her Jihad against pornography, very broadly defined. In her new book "Only Words," MacKinnon attacks the notion "that we must protect ideas regardless of the mischief they do in the world."

Last year, Strossen was invited to speak at the 1993 convention of the National Association of Women Judges. (Also in attendance would be women lawyers not on the bench.) This summer, when Strossen called to double-check the date, she was told she had been disinvited.

It is Strossen's indignant belief that she was turned away because the women judges had been able to engage another law professor, the renowned Catharine MacKinnon. Why not have a debate between the two? Through the years, MacKinnon has made it clear that she will not share a platform with feminists placing free expression above the pervasive dangers to women of pornography.

MacKinnon has turned down an offer from a lecture agency to debate Nadine Strossen on college campuses, and she has declared that attempts to have her exchange views with First Amendment feminists is "the pimp's current strategy for legitimizing a slave trade in women."

I do not need to be sucked into the pornographers' strategy.

In a letter circulated to a number of women judges Nadine Strossen knows -- including Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg -- Strossen said she was "distressed that such an important and influential group (as was at the convention) should hear only one feminist position on pornography and censorship."

"Too many people," she added, "assume that

MacKinnon speaks for all feminists. It is particularly unfortunate that this misconception should have been propounded among your members, given their elevated stature and significant power in our society."

Organizers of the convention deny that the judges, star struck at the prospect of seeing and listening to MacKinnon, decided to jettison Strossen. There had simply been a misunderstanding, they say, and in any case, MacKinnon had placed no conditions on her appearance.

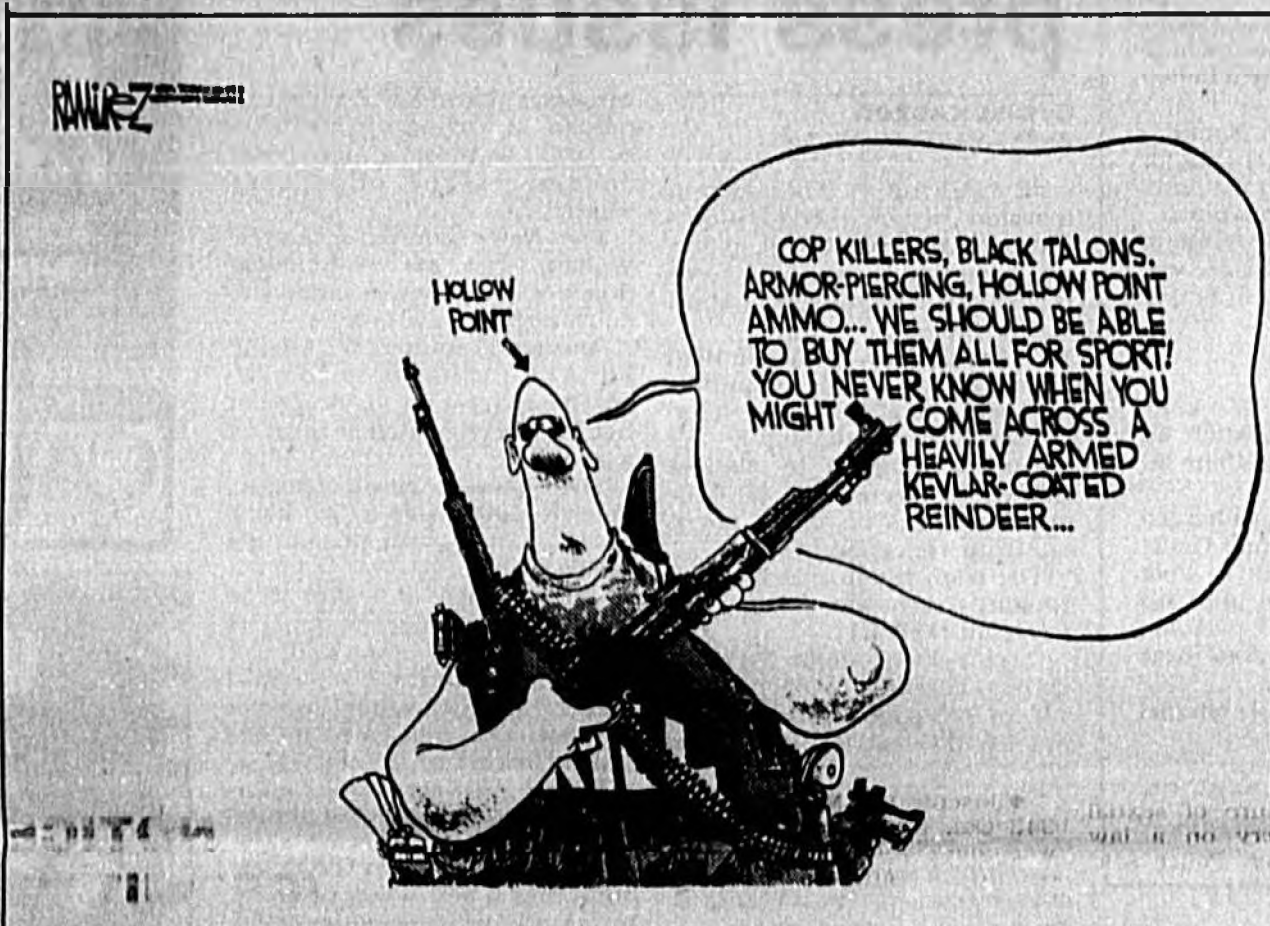

Yet, one of the judges on the committee to select the speaker appeared to have given the game away when she told David Margolick, a law reporter for The New York Times: "I had heard that she was not very receptive to be with women who disagree with her. The general feeling was that MacKinnon would be less than pleased to be on the program with Strossen, so we had a choice."

The judges chose to do without Strossen and her contrary views.

Another judge on the selection committee, insisting on anonymity, told me, "I didn't attend most of the meetings of the committee, but had I known that MacKinnon would inhibit a free exchange of ideas, I would have argued against her appearance." She paused. "I am distressed." And she paused again, "I am highly distressed."

MacKinnon attacks the notion that we must protect ideas regardless of the mischief they do in the world.

Will history really repeat itself?

The temptation to see history as a closed circle of repetitive cycles is sometimes as overwhelming as it is simple-minded. Forcing current events to fit pre-cut patterns risks losing sight of fact in the pursuit of theory.

Despite that caveat, I can't escape a growing apprehension about the flow of events in Europe. Every now and then, and never more strongly than on the morning after Italy's elections last week, my concerns take the form of a scene from the movie "Cabaret."

It comes in an outdoor beer garden/restaurant where a freshly scrubbed young blond male is sweetly singing an evocative song. Then, as the camera slowly pulls back, you begin to realize that his arm comes complete with swastika armband. One-by-one, and then in clumps, many of the other patrons, no longer the picturesque German provincials they originally seemed, rise or jump to their feet, mimicking the youthful party cheerleader as he gives the Nazi salute.

A logical retort to that image is a sharp, "Nonsense." The fact that the political center disintegrated in Italy, leaving the stage to former communists and their allies on the one hand and rightists, separatists and neo-Nazis on the other, is a specific, almost inevitable response to the endemic corruption of the Christian Democrats and their socialist allies. Something so rotten at the core was bound to implode. It can be argued, and the extremes are always the first, though not necessarily the lasting, beneficiaries. It is not, however, necessarily or even probably the precursor of a new fascist takeover.

Unfortunately, Italy is only an extreme manifestation of a more generalized European disease. Its causes include:

A stagnant economy from the Atlantic to Siberia, enervated or irrelevant parties of the center-left and center-right almost everywhere, seismic shifts in the political landscape of the old Warsaw Pact from Moscow to Germany, and an immigrant tide of dissimilar folk across national borders unknown in Europe for hundreds of years.

These early warning signs should not be exaggerated, but they must not be ignored. "It can't happen here" is a familiar, and usually wrong, refrain. Democracy is sustained by shallow roots in much of the new Europe. It would be idiotic to mimic the Marxist-Leninists who pretended to scientific certainty about the triumph of communism right up to the point that it collapsed.

There is, however, a certain predictability about human nature. People created the state to promote, protect and preserve their well-being. When a state falls in that mission, the people look to leaders, parties and philosophies that promise to restore order and prosperity. That brings us back to Europe, where optimism has given way to pessimism, and economic opportunity and social stability are in short supply. In Central and Eastern Europe, the heady days following the fall of communism and the rollback of Soviet control are already hazy memories. There is no silver bullet or magic potion for economies that are adrift. The new democratic parties have no experience in governing, and even if they did, the mess they inherited defies overnight solutions. Bad as the old communist regimes were, some of their former subjects view them nostalgically as models of stability compared to their successors.

In Western Europe, the picture is less bleak but the short-term prospects are not inspiring. Put Italy aside. The Conservative government in England teeters on the edge of irrelevance and collapse. The Kohl government in Germany presides over an economy marked by heavy unemployment and a newly unified nation that in many ways is as divided today between East and West by economic disparity as it once was by the Berlin Wall. The new French government has yet to find its way, the voters having renounced soft-edged socialism without embracing a coherent alternative.

And everywhere, from Russia to the English Channel, the search for scapegoats has taken a violent turn. The hundreds of thousands of refugees and immigrants fleeing civil war and poverty in the old communist bloc countries face rising hostility, violence and, in some places, murder. Pictures of skinhead thugs waving Nazi banners have become commonplace. More ominously, fascist politicians masquerading as populist defenders of "national integrity" are no longer confined to the fringes. Their emergence in Italy is echoed in Russia, to mention only the most obvious.

So far, what is happening is more of a wake-up call than advance notice of a tidal wave. Most Europeans, whether they live in Poland or Germany, Russia or Italy, remain bitterly opposed to the reimposition of totalitarian rule, however their present unhappiness.

But democracy is not some permanent state of political grace. It must deliver domestic tranquility and security to survive.

Forcing current events to fit pre-cut patterns risks losing sight of fact in the pursuit of theory.

Native Americans hurt by old law

GTON — This fall, Albert Hale nearly decided to make what he regarded as the ultimate sacrifice for his beloved wife of five years: divorce her.

"I don't want my wife to go to jail," says Hale. "If I can save her from going to jail by divorcing her then that's a real option."

The possibility made the Hales heartsick, and left their young daughter — who overheard one of their hushed discussions — distraught. But a 160-year-old federal law offered little latitude. The Trading with Indians Act of 1834 carries a six-month jail sentence and/or up to $5,000 fine, and the "case" against Regina Hale appeared to be open and shut: If there is a lesson, it may be that old and obsolete laws die hard.

The law prohibits all "commercial" trading with American Indians by Indian Health Service or Bureau of Indian Affairs employees or "in the name of a family member or spouse" of an employee. An IHS official told us there weren't many violations of the law until the government started hiring greater numbers of Native Americans whose spouses often work on the reservations and own businesses. The two main employers on most reservations are the tribal government and the federal government.

Albert and Regina are American Indians who were born and reared on the Navaho reservation in Window Rock, Ariz. She is now employed as a personnel staffing assistant for the IHS. He has practiced law on the reservation since 1972. They are raising Regina's 9-year-old daughter in their own house on an acre-and-a-half sized lot on the reservation, because that's "where we're from."

There they lived as a normal happy family until one morning when Regina opened the mail and discovered that the marriage rendered her in "violation" of the Trading with Indians Act and would be "cause for severe disciplinary action, as well as criminal penalties."

"We were appalled by the letter... but what do you do? How do you as a married couple resolve this? Maybe the best thing to do is get divorced," Albert Hale told our associate Andrew Conte.

When the law was enacted, Congress feared that non-Indian officials of the War Department would set up shops on the reservations to fleece Indians of the funds they received from the government. Nearly 160 years later, this dusty relic is haunting Regina and Albert Hale, as well as other Indian couples who work for the IHS or the BIA and who own businesses on reservations.

In another case, Karen Arviso, who worked last summer in Crownpoint, N.M., as a community outreach worker to help locate the causes of a mysterious fatal virus in the Southwest, almost lost her job because of the law. When her husband applied for a loan at the BIA to open a gas station on the Navaho reservation, IHS informed her that she would have to resign if he started the business.

"This is one of those anachronisms," Rep. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., told us. "The law was needed back 150 years ago, but now you don't need it. This is just one of those things we ought to get off the books because unfortunately real people are in violation of real law and we don't intend for that situation to exist." Kyl and Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., are leading the crusade to repeal the law in Congress.

Though the law has seldom been enforced this century, the few instances where it has been invoked caused inconvenience rather than imprisonment.

Albert Hale nearly decided to make what he regarded as the ultimate sacrifice for his beloved wife of five years: divorce her.

White said he would not speculate on the matter at this time, or comment on who may have been responsible.

Whitmire said police have not immediately determined why the lettering pertaining to child molestation cases was sprayed onto the building. "There have been several cases recently," he said, "and right now, we can't be sure which one it may have been related to."

This past Monday, former Lakeview Middle School band instructor Stephen A. Paterson was sentenced to one year in jail for molesting four male students. At that time, assistant state attorney Stewart Stone requested a motion to set aside the negotiated plea and set all four cases for trial. The request was denied by Judge O. H. Eaton.

On Nov. 24, ex-Sanford police patrolman Guy Brewster was found guilty of eight sex charges. Originally, a total of 78 charges had been placed against him, but he was acquitted on 70 of the counts.

Parents of the four youths reportedly expressed anger at the results of the trial, and several vowed to take the case to other courts.

"While we aren't certain at this time," Whitmire said, "we have a tendency to believe the graffiti was sprayed in connection with the Paterson case, because that one actually got to the sentencing stage."

Brewster is not scheduled for sentencing until late January.

the public, invited Perry to gather more information for them.

Another topic which may return to charter review commissioners is a countywide water and sewer rate commission. Review commissioner Jerome McDonough, of Maitland, said unincorporated residents served by city utilities are furious about a 25 percent surcharge they must pay.

The state allows cities to charge up to 25 percent, and in some cases, 50 percent, more than city rates to compensate for any added expenses of serving non-city residents. City and county utility rates are un-governed, although the rates for most private companies such as Southern States Utilities or Sanlando Utilities are governed by the Public Service Commission.

County Attorney Bob McMillan said the surcharge was allowed by the Legislature and to reduce or eliminate it, the state law must be changed. The CRC directed McMillan to determine if the county can give the power to review city rates.

women," with some success.

"After all," Whitmire said, "if it weren't for the customers, the prostitutes would not be in business."

Whitmire added that most people forget that it is illegal for someone to solicit a prostitute just as it is illegal for the prostitute to perform her services.

"We want them to be prosecuted for their crimes as well," Whitmire said.

The reverse sting operation involves female police officers posing as prostitutes. Potential customers who approach them must make it clear they are hoping to purchase sex from the woman they believe is a prostitute.

When they do, they are arrested.

On Friday evening, the Sanford Police Special Investigations Unit concentrated their efforts in the area between Third and Fourth streets and French and Laurel avenues.

The following men were arrested:

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Pollard gave document that cost billions

WASHINGTON — One document that convicted spy Jonathan Pollard passed to the Israelis may have cost the lives of informants and rendered useless information that cost billions of dollars to gather, Time Magazine said.

The Time report, in its Dec. 13 edition, came as the Clinton administration considered a request from Israel to grant clemency to the former U.S. Navy intelligence analyst now serving a life sentence.

The document, which is thought to have unintentionally landed in Soviet hands, was a huge National Security Agency compendium of frequencies used by foreign military and intelligence services, it said.

U.S. officials assume that countries knew their frequencies had been discovered and used them to spread disinformation.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin has asked President Clinton to grant clemency to Pollard, who has admitted passing massive amounts of U.S. military and defense intelligence information to Israel in 1984 and 1985. Pollard is asking Clinton to commute his life term and release him from prison.

Clinton has said he will not make a decision until he receives advice from the Justice Department. The U.S. attorney's office that prosecuted the Pollard case has told Attorney General Janet Reno it opposes clemency.

Town mourns for abducted girl

PETALUMA, Calif. — Gloom fell over this quiet farming town when the news hit: Polly Klaas was dead.

The body of the 12-year-old was found in a roadside thicket, two months after a knife-wielding stranger snatched her from her bedroom during a slumber party.

Townfolk walked around Sunday with reddened eyes and sober faces, their hopes crushed. Churchgoers hugged and cried on street corners. Dozens of candles flickered in a chill wind outside the headquarters volunteers had established to help in the search.

"We did everything that was possible to humanly do to find our little Polly," said resident Dalton Sellinger, his eyes bleary.

Prime suspect Richard Allen Davis, 39, was held without bail in the Sonoma County Jail after being booked Sunday for investigation of kidnapping and murder. An arraignment was scheduled for Tuesday morning.

"There are a lot of broken hearts here," said Gary Judd, one of the people who helped organize the volunteer search and distribute handbills that showed the photograph of a fragile girl with a dimpled smile.

FBI agents searched the area 30 miles north of town where Polly's body was found late Saturday. They looked for clues to how she was killed, who did it, and whether she was still alive when Davis was briefly confronted by deputies about an hour after her abduction.

U.S. may stop aiming missiles at Russia

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States and Russia are discussing a plan to aim nuclear missiles at desolate ocean spots instead of each other to reduce the dangers of accidental launchings, The New York Times reported.

Under the draft plan from the Pentagon, American missiles would be aimed at coordinates in the ocean instead of missile silos and military bases in Russia.

The change would be largely symbolic, but some Pentagon officials believe it also would reduce the chance of an accidental nuclear war.

Officials from both countries have discussed the idea recently, and the Pentagon was waiting for a detailed plan from Russia on how that country would gain its missiles, the Times said today.

Frank Zappa dead at 52

LOS ANGELES — Frank Zappa, whose compositions stretched the boundaries of rock, jazz and classical music, and tested the limits of free speech, has died of prostate cancer. He was 52.

Zappa died Saturday evening, and was buried Sunday in a private ceremony in Los Angeles, said family friend Jim Nagle.

"Composer Frank Zappa left for his final tour just before 6 p.m. Saturday," the family said in a statement released Sunday night.

Zappa's wife, Gail, and four children, Moon Unit, 26, Dweezil, 24, Ahmet, 19, and Diva, 14, were with him when he died at his Los Angeles home.

Zappa's long illness rarely stopped him from composing, recording and performing, or trying to defend lyrics against censors.

"As a musician, as a composer he was absolutely driven, relentlessly driven. The man lived to create art," said journalist and longtime friend Rip Rense.

"If he loved anything better than art, it was his life, it was his family," Rense said.

Nation of immigrants concerned about influx of foreigners

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Immigration made America. Now, it's making America grow much faster than many people think is healthy.

U.S. Census figures and projections by demographer Leon Bouvier show that the U.S. population — now 257 million — will skyrocket to nearly 400 million by the middle of the next century if immigration continues at current rates.

Demographers believe the U.S. population would never have exceeded 247 million if net immigration had stopped in 1970.

"If immigration, fertility and mortality rates remain unchanged, the United States population explosion will resemble that of the most chaotic of underdeveloped countries," said Don Beck, Washington editor of a quarterly journal on immigration issues, "The Social Contract."

Scores of bills to reform immigration laws are pending in Congress. Several groups actively oppose policies that have doubled U.S. population growth in the last two decades. Demographers, economists and social scientists also are raising alarms.

In addition to the more than 800,000 legal immigrants accepted each year, immigration officials estimated that as of a year ago 3.2 million illegal aliens lived in the United States.

Some of the concern is among longtime black and Hispanic citizens, who see their economic gains eroded by new immigrants who take low-paying jobs.

"Everything we fight for ... is compounded and made worse by this question of immigration," said former Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm, referring to a long list of social, environmental and economic problems linked to population growth.

Lamm said the immigration reform movement is not an anti-immigrant movement. "We have to make sure that people who are here become part of our community," he said.

Increased immigration into the United States also has a bad impact on developing countries, because of a brain drain of their "most resourceful and energetic citizens," Beck said.

Beck and Lamm were among speakers at a recent Capitol Hill briefing on immigration sponsored by the Federation for Immigration Reform (FAIR), which supports 44 bills in Congress to strengthen immigration laws. A key measure would cap legal immigrants at 300,000 a year.

Book debunks myths about Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A new book based on a treasure of Japanese documents challenges widespread rumors that U.S. officials knew in advance about the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Historians Donald Goldstein and Katherine Dillon tell — from the Japanese point of view — how the Dec. 7, 1941 attack was accomplished.

Americans believe all sorts of myths to try to explain how the Japanese could have achieved such a feat, steaming nearly 3,000 miles without being detected and using weapons technology the United States didn't have, Goldstein said in a recent interview.

One myth was that President Roosevelt, using American pilots, had secretly staged the attack to overcome opposition to the war and get America into the Asian conflict, he said.

Pearl Harbor Papers, the 11th book on World War II coauthored by Goldstein, a

"The truth is that the Japanese Navy had the best and the brightest minds. Of course, now Japan doesn't have much of a navy, and the brilliant people are in business."

— Donald Goldstein

professor at the University of Pittsburgh, suggests it was Japanese brilliance and tenacity, not any whacky quirks that made the attack a success.

The book is a compilation of extracts from wartime diaries, journals, letters, documents and cables of Japan's top navy officers — supplemented by postwar interviews.

Much of Goldstein's work is based on Japanese documents he inherited from Gordon Prange, who was historian for Gen. Douglas MacArthur following World War II.

Prange died in 1980 without ever writing a book based upon the 20,000 pages of Japanese documents interviews with high ranking Japanese naval officers.

Many of the documents have never been published before. Another first in the book is the map of the Pearl Harbor expedition that was used to brief Japanese Emperor Hirohito.

A prominent belief about the attack was that the Japanese fleet had broken radio silence and that the U.S. Navy knew the warships were steaming toward Pearl Harbor.

"There is absolutely nothing in the documents to show that anyone broke radio silence," Goldstein said in an interview.

Documents from Minoru Genda, the architect of the attack, and from diaries of fleet commanders, show that all of the ships' Morse code transmitters had their keys sealed, and that those seals were still unbroken until after the attack, Goldstein said.

For the first time, majority of Rhodes scholars are women

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — A record number of women are among the 32 Americans who will head to Oxford University next fall on prestigious Rhodes scholarships.

Seventeen women won the academic honor this year, compared to 16 last year, officials announced Sunday. Women became eligible for the scholarship in 1976.

Harvard University led the nation with five Rhodes Scholars, who are selected to study at Oxford University in England. Next came Rutgers University with two — the school's first — and 25 other universities with one each.

"Oh my God! Oh my God! We won!" screamed the answering machine message of Matthew B. Boyle of Shaker Heights, Ohio, and Alexander Johnston of Amherst, Mass., Harvard roommates who both won scholarships.

Boyle, 21, a social studies and philosophy major, said, "I'm thrilled. I'm stupefied as well. I had applied for a job at the Lil' Peach convenience store in Boston, but they rejected me."

Another winner, straight-A student Dana Brown of Maple Shade, N.J., studied in Russia, supporting herself by working as a cocktail waitress. The Rutgers student has done extensive research and study abroad into Eastern European culture, including work at Moscow's Exeter University.

The Brown family found out about the scholarship on Saturday.

"We just screamed for about 15 minutes," said her mother, Mary Brown. "It was really a surprise to her, but it's something she really worked for."

Serious crime declines slightly

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — FBI statistics show violent crime is declining a little this year, but law enforcement officials say neither they nor the public take much comfort in the numbers.

Violent crime during the first six months of 1993 decreased 3 percent from the same period in 1992, while the number of property crimes dropped by 5 percent, according to preliminary findings of the FBI's Uniform Crime Reporting program.

"The small reported declines may be positive, but I doubt most Americans will draw much comfort from them because the levels of violent crime and drug trafficking remain so staggering," FBI Director Louis J. Freeh said in a statement Sunday.

The number of murders remained stable while all other reported violent crimes went down: Robberies by 5 percent, forcible rapes, 4 percent, and aggravated assaults, 1 percent.

Reported property crimes, meanwhile, were down across the board, with burglary declining 8 percent, motor vehicle theft, 5 percent, and larceny-theft, 4 percent. Arsons, which decreased by 15 percent, are not included in the FBI's determination of the overall crime index.

Dennis R. Martin, president of the National Association of Chiefs of Police, said the FBI figures are "seriously flawed" because many police departments yield to local pressure and downgrade crimes or "deliberately alter their numbers to make their communities appear safer than they really are."

Sailfest reaches new heights

By TONY DeSORMIER
 Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — If there's a problem that goes with the perfect execution of a task, it's figuring out how to improve on it the next time. That's the unenviable task of the organizers of the Seminole County Florida Citrus Sailfest, who were already thinking about improvements for next year while still collecting kudos from competitors for this year's event.

Not only did the three-day event run like clockwork — a Sailfest trademark — but for the first time in anyone's recollection, the weather cooperated perfectly for the entire weekend.

"Every class got in its full complement of races," said Sailfest executive director John Gardiner Jr. "We had a total of 649 boats registered, which may be a record, and they were all in the water yesterday (Saturday).

"We had ideal sailing conditions all weekend and we were able to take advantage of it."

Each class was supposed to sail five races (three Saturday, two Sunday). Not only did every class

Registration in this year's Sailfest reached what was believed to be a record of 649 boats, every one of which took to Lake Monroe at one time or another Saturday and Sunday. Blessed by ideal weather conditions all weekend, each of the 50-plus classes was able to get in all five races for the first time in anyone's memory.

High school athletes also serve as role models

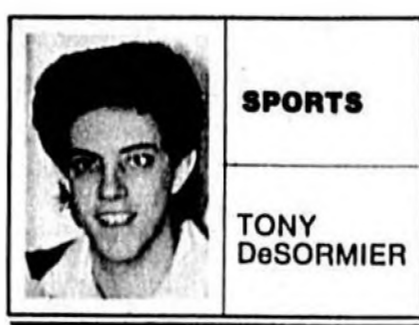

Let's talk athletes, image, and role models for a minute.

I'm not going to waste your time and this space discussing how or why professional athletes serve as role models in our society. That's a subject for another day.

Instead, I'd prefer to look closer to home. What, if any, role do scholastic athletes play and is image something with which they have to be concerned?

Admittedly, it's not something I'd given much thought to until I watched the interactions between high school athletes and young fans at several events recently. What I witnessed caught me by surprise.

While professional athletes are the stuff of dreams for young fans, local athletes, like those at the high school level, are more immediate and accessible to young fans. Instead of the passive activity of watching their idol on television, young fans can interact on one level or another with local athletes.

SPORTS

That immediacy is powerful. Don't think so? Watch a young boy or girl in the presence of an athlete. Watch how a young fan follows every action. Watch how they try to emulate the athlete.

Imitation is supposed to be the sincerest form of flattery. It's also how young children do much of their learning.

What lessons are they learning by imitating athletes? Obviously, it depends on the athlete.

Are they noble in defeat, gracious in victory? Do they play hard?

Many do. Some don't. The thing is, like the proverbial squeaky wheel, those are the ones that attract attention.

There seems to be a distillation process where boorish behavior by athletes is concerned, progressing from acceptable at one level to mildly distasteful to completely appalling.

For example, as poorly as some pro athletes act, it might be loosely rationalized as being part of the entertainment of pro sports (where would pro wrestling be without villains?). And since it's done at the professional level, then it's a legitimate part of the sport, right?

As a result, what's done by the professionals is emulated by the college and high school athletes. What college and high school athletes do is imitated by young children. And the further down the line you get, the less appropriate it becomes.

Then there are basic personal habits, like the use of indulging in products like snuff or chewing tobacco. Again, understandable and acceptable for adults, less so for college and high school students, disgusting when done by children.

It's not fair to ask adults to abstain from activities that are within their rights, nor is it reasonable to expect college and high school athletes to be the break in the chain.

What we can ask of those individuals who have the honor of being in the spotlight — be they professionals, weekend jocks, or high school students — to honor the responsibility that comes with it, namely, be aware that you are being watched by young, impressionable eyes and to act accordingly.

Quintet helps Pats win two dual meets

From Staff Reports

ALAMONTE SPRINGS — Led by the quintet of Skip Sorenson, Steve Snow, Tim Meredith, Brad Tripp, and Shaun Glynn, the Lake Brantley High School wrestling team evened its record at 2-2 with a pair of dual meet wins Saturday.

After ripping the Candler-Lake Weir Hurricanes around and bested the Lake Howell Silver Hawks 53-25 in a Seminole Athletic Conference match.

The wins provide a much-welcomed boost for the young Patriots after a pair of season-opening losses.

"The kids needed to see that kind of success," said Lake Brantley coach Kevin Carpenter. "They need to believe in themselves. Last year, when we started 0-5, it was tough to keep the kids up. You know they're improving but when they look at it in terms of wins and losses, it's demoralizing."

Sorenson (who wrestled in the 125-pound class), Snow (130), Meredith (135), Tripp (180), and Glynn (189) each won both of their matches Saturday.

Snow and Glynn each won both of their matches with pins while Meredith registered a pin and a technical fall. Tripp scored a pair of unusual victories, winning both of matches when his opponents were disqualified.

Lake Brantley will wrestle again Tuesday at New Smyrna Beach.

Balanced attack propels Lake Mary past DeLand

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — With a lot of players doing a little bit of everything, the Lake Mary High School boys' basketball team held on for a 76-72 win over the visiting DeLand Bulldogs Saturday night.

DeLand earned a split on the evening, winning the junior varsity contest 69-60.

"Everybody did a little bit," said Lake Mary assistant coach Mike Gaudreau. "We had 10 players who scored points.

In the second quarter, we had a chance to go up by 15 points. But then we got sloppy for a spell and they came back. We had a chance to take the game away from the them and let it get away. After that, DeLand kept the game close."

Jimmy Newberry led Lake Mary with 30 points, nine fe-get in all five races, the conditions were so ideal Sunday that some were able to run additional heats.

This year, the Sailfest's biggest class of the Sailfest was the Laser class, with 83 registrants. Orlando's Andy Fox, 36, topped the field, winning three of the five races to beat runner-up Peter Truflow of Fort Lauderdale.

The Laser class featured several celebrity skippers, including Brad and David Dellenbaugh and Peter Johnston, president of the Sunfish/Laser manufacturing company.

"This is one of the events that I look forward to," said Brad Dellenbaugh, 38, who is a member of the U.S. Sailing Team and the head coach at the Naval Academy.

"Normally, when you go to a regatta, it's for one class of boats and you see the same people all the time. This regatta is a chance to catch up with people you haven't seen in a while and to meet new people who race other classes of boats."

Dellenbaugh said that what makes the Sailfest unique is the balance of social and competitive pursuits available to participants.

"It's run great, the whole organization, the races on seven different courses, all the classes... it's super," Dellenbaugh said. "And the atmosphere is a little looser here. The social is as important as the competitive."

"It's not like at nationals, where everyone's uptight and tense. And that encourages the sailors who aren't the rock stars of the sport to come out and race. For me, it's a reward to come to this event."

After a day of clinics, seminars, and special events on Friday, the regatta field took to Lake Monroe Saturday morning. By noon, it looked like you could almost walk across the lake from one boat to another.

What appeared to be a logistical nightmare actually went off without a hitch.

"This was probably the easiest it's ever gone," said John Gardiner III, the associate director of the Sailfest. "We had great help from the Seminole Power Squadron to all the volunteers. There were no 'fires.' If there was, the people on the scene took care of it and we went ahead."

Going ahead now means meeting and, if possible, improving on the standard set by the 1993 Sailfest.

"It seems that every year for the last five years, we tell ourselves that it can't get any better," said John Gardiner III. "And some how, we always manage to do that. Like any business, you can always be better. You can make the quality better or you can add new features."

"Every year, we send out surveys after the race to all the registrants. And we get response rate of about 40 percent. They tell us what they liked, what they didn't like, and what they'd like to see changed or added. Then we analyze the results. That's what we tackle at our first committee meeting."

"That's what makes this event so successful. We listen to the competitors. After all, the event is for them, not for us. And if you listen to your customers, you will do well."

Try traction to relieve bone spurs

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 50-year-old with spurs on my spine. I suffer with extremely painful bouts of pain in my shoulder and arm. I've been put in traction and placed on anti-inflammatory drugs. Both appear to work, but I'm concerned about what's happening.

DEAR READER: Bone spurs often appear as part of the aging process. When these spurs rub or pinch a nerve, pain develops. Spurs in the upper spine cause arm and shoulder discomfort; those in the lower spine, back and leg pain.

Traction (techniques of stretching the tissues around bones and joints) may relieve symptoms by releasing pressure on the nerves. This is a useful, non-surgical method of obtaining relief -- although it doesn't completely solve the problem because the spurs remain. Traction is often used with anti-inflammatory medication (such as Motrin), a good combination.

If this therapy works for you, stick with it. You'll be able to feel better, function more normally and avoid surgery, which is a last resort. As long as you are pain-free, the spurs will do no harm.

DEAR DR. GOTT: After testing, I've been told I have a tumor on my ear nerve. I have no hearing in the ear and am told a hearing aid won't help. Is surgery necessary? What are the side effects as opposed to no surgery?

DEAR READER: Surgery is necessary.

If the tumor is not removed, it will grow, causing worsening symptoms, including vertigo and ringing in the ears, not to mention the very real potential for spread, if the tumor is malignant.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Ear Infection and Disorders."

Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Robert Frost supposedly said, "A jury consists of 12 persons chosen to decide who has the better lawyer." Who cares about the Law of the Land?

There are many laws -- well, rules -- that we learn for application at the bridge table. However, it's no good knowing these rules if we don't apply the right one at the appropriate moment.

How should the play go in today's deal after West has led the spade seven against four hearts?

Declarer had one spade loser and could afford two club losers. But if East held the club queen and ace, could South avoid three losers in the suit?

At trick one, South played a low spade from the dummy. East won with the queen and switched to a diamond. Declarer won with the ace, drew trumps, cashed the diamond king, played a spade to dummy's ace and ruffed dummy's last spade in his hand. Now South played a club to dummy's jack.

East won with the queen but didn't enjoy the experience. A spade or diamond return would concede a ruff-and-discard. And cashing the club ace was equally hopeless.

Well played by South, but East had only himself to blame. If West's opening lead was from shortage, South had the K-J and East's play was probably irrelevant. But if the seven was fourth-highest, East could apply the Rule of Eleven. There are four spades above the seven in the other three hands -- and East could see them all. So East should play the spade two at trick one. With luck, West will switch to a club at trick two and the contract can be defeated.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Dec. 7, 1993

Your fondness for travel looks like it might be gratified in the year ahead. Numerous short trips are indicated, as well as one journey of considerable time and length.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Persons with whom you're associated might try to tell you today you're unduly optimistic regarding your expectations. Don't buy what they're saying because you're right. They're wrong. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed stamped, envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will be much more effective today if you keep your intentions to yourself. Plan your objectives, but don't discuss them with others until you've done what you have set out to do.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This could be a very interesting day where you might learn two valuable lessons from your personal experiences. What you discover will be put to use soon.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If your goals are clearly defined today you should do exceptionally well in competitive developments. However, if they are fuzzy or distorted, the opposite could be true.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Discussing complicated issues with associates could work out well for you today. You might find some exceptional counselors at your disposal.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may have a special knack today for helping others sort out their financial dilemmas. If they follow your suggestions, it could put them back in the black.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your probabilities for success look very good today, because you'll realize it is people, not things, that makes the world go around. Getting along with others is your strong suit.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today you can enhance your efficiency by selecting tasks or assignments you truly enjoy performing. It's the sense of accomplishment that provides gratification.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be selective regarding persons with whom you choose to socialize today. If you pick people who don't think as you do, the day could be a bummer.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This might be the right day for you to go bargain hunting, especially if you're looking for a big ticket item that fills a pertinent family need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You could have an abundance of good ideas today that shouldn't be kept to yourself. Bright thinking friends will appreciate and perhaps even improve upon your offerings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If something profitable develops for you today, and there is an excellent chance it might, it is likely to be engineered by a friend working on your behalf behind the scenes.
