Teens charged in Jordan murder

LUMBERTON, N.C. — After a weekend of wild speculation surrounding the slaying of basketball star Michael Jordan's father, authorities arrested two teen-agers and said the motive seemed to be simple highway robbery.

The suspects, two 18-year-olds with criminal records, were caught in part through calls they made from James Jordan's car phone over several days following his slaying last month, police said.

The two allegedly had set out to rob someone, never imagining their victim would be the father of the Chicago Bulls basketball star, one of the world's richest and most celebrated athletes.

But on Sunday officials arrested Larry Martin Demery of Rowland and Daniel Andre Green of Lumberton on charges of murder, armed robbery and conspiracy. They were jailed without bond pending their first court appearance today.

"They had conspired to rob before they left home," said Cumberland County Sheriff Morris Bedsale. "I don't know if they knew who, what or where. This is what they ended up with."

Green was paroled in June after serving less than two years for a conviction in Robeson County for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and armed robbery. Robeson County Sheriff Hubert Stone said. Demery was under indictment for armed robbery and out on bond.

Jackpot nearly doubles

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Lotto jackpot swelled to an estimated $30 million Sunday after another weekly game was played out without a single big winner.

The grand prize was standing at $16 million — a result from a rollover the week before — when the numbers 7-21-23-42-44-48 were drawn late Saturday.

The weekly game produced 277 tickets with five of the six numbers, and they are worth $1,519.50 each. There were 15,645 four-of-six winners, worth $64.50 each, and 301,065 three-of-six winners worth $4.50 each.

Jackpot estimates are based on funds from rollovers. Lotto sales projections and projected long-term interest rates with a 20-year payout to one winner.

Quality child care

Need increases as more moms employed

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Child care is an essential, though often expensive, reality of modern day life.

With nearly 70 percent of the women working outside the home, more and more families are finding the need to place their children in the care of others for at least part of the day or for several days each week.

Single parents need assistance as well.

"It's the break up of the traditional family that has caused a lot of this need," said Maria Lorenz, who placed her two-year-old in child care after she returned to the work force recently.

She said she took a year-and-a-half off from her job.

SANFORD — The YMCA of Central Florida in Seminole County offers after school enrichment classes for students at all Seminole County public schools.

Last year, when the City of Sanford Recreation Department made the decision to discontinue the free after school care, parents were offered the "Y" option for $10 per student.

"We wanted to make the transition from free care to paid care a little easier," said Maureen

Local actors revive famous British show

LAKE MARY — The overall concept sounds complex. A British science fiction TV show depicting the universe several centuries in the future has been videotaped locally, using people from Lake Mary.

Julia Langston of Lake Mary, heads a not-for-profit club called "Guardians of Gallifrey" (GOG), which has been in existence for the past seven years.

"We are all fans of the 'Doctor Who' British sci-fi television show," she explained. "Although the show aired for 26 consecutive years, a new episode hasn't been produced in the last four years."

"So we thought we should do something ourselves to keep the Doctor Who program alive," she said.

The group obtained a camera and videotape equipment, and produced their own episode of Doctor Who, called "The New Order," using members of their GOG Productions club. The LAKE MARY — Although Phase I of the Lake Mary Boulevard widening project is considered complete, digging is still underway between Country Club Road and Lake Emma Road.

The work involves the installation of an irrigation system, which will use reclaimed water supplied by Seminole County.

"Many people have voiced objections to the digging now underway on the boulevard, after the $6 million widening project was supposed to have been completed," said Parks and Recreation Director John Holland.

He explained, "When the original interlocal agreement by Lake Mary and Seminole County was made with Mahoney Construction, the laying of irrigation pipes was to have been included, and done at the same time construction was underway."

Altamonte salesman seeks Furlong's commission seat

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Rob Bernys, an Altamonte Springs Republican, has announced his candidacy for the District 4 county commission seat now held by Democrat Larry Furlong.

Bernys, 25, says Furlong is a reactionary that responds to problems rather than prevent them, citing Furlong's school and law enforcement impact fee proposals as an example. "I think that the residents would be better served by me than Larry Furlong," says Bernys.

Furlong said last week he has not decided whether to seek another term, which ends in November 1994.

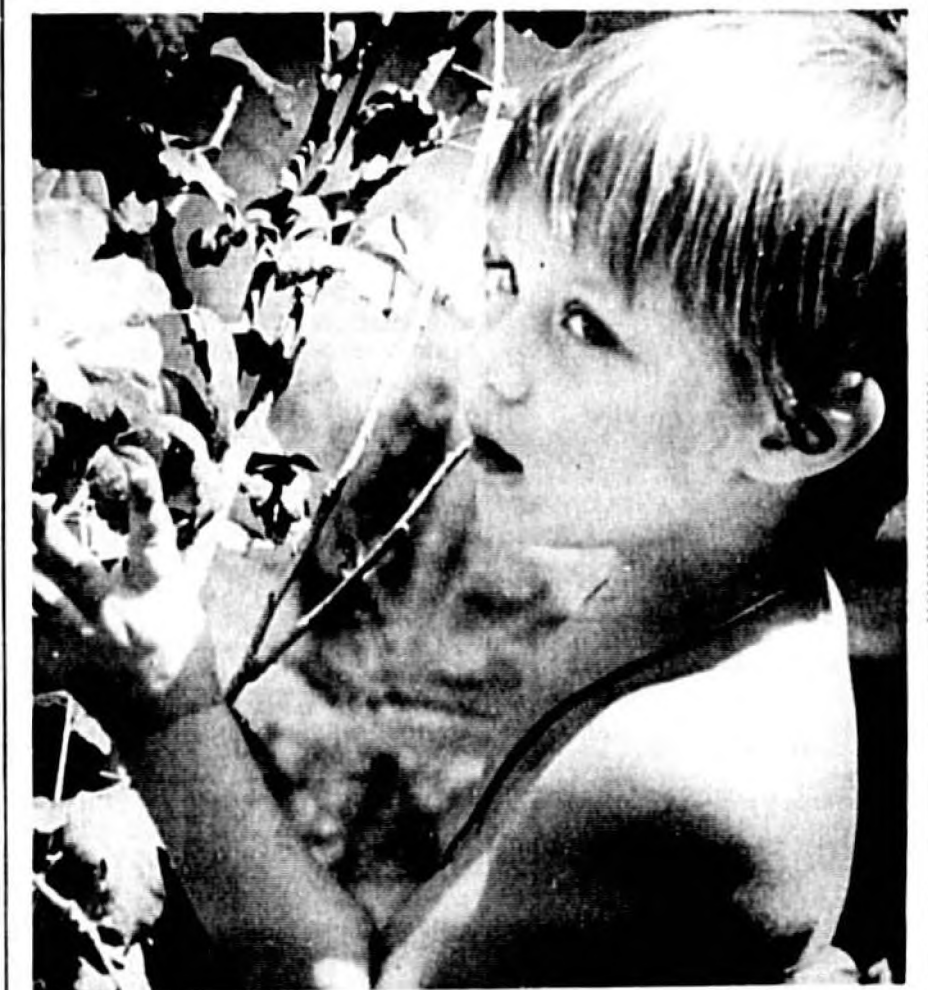

Bernys has been a resident of Seminole County for six years, including five at his present Ridgewood Street address. He previously lived in Orange County and New York State. He has worked as a regional salesman for Ralston Purina products since 1991. Formerly, he studied business at Florida Southern College, in Lakeland. He received a two-year degree from Seminole Community College. Bernys is married to Patricia Aileen Burns. The couple have one child.

Bernys has prepared an eight-point "Action Plan" should he be elected. The positions include seeking to centralize urban areas of the county, infill developed areas and effectively manage growth. Bernys would also establish water and sewer usage "goals" for homes and businesses to conserve water, offer incentives for sensitive-land donations and centralize library book purchases with other central Florida communities to reduce costs.

Oil slick returns to coast

MADEIRA BEACH — Thousands of barrels of oil which spilled during a Tampa Bay collision coated the coast here Sunday, but it should be removed within days, officials said.

The slick fouled mangroves and grounded wildlife when it moved ashore from the Gulf of Mexico, where it had drifted after two barges and a freighter collided.

The accident last Tuesday dumped an estimated 5,000 barrels of oil into Tampa Bay and caused an inferno which raged for 15 hours. No one was injured.

As many as 500 workers are expected to take part in the clean up Monday. It is a job that will take a few days and will probably keep the beaches at Madeira Beach, Treasure Island and Redington Beach closed, officials said.

Two vacuum trucks were expected to work the beaches overnight, said John H. Johnson, president of Bouchard Transportation Co. which operated one of the barges involved in the collision.

Johnson, whose company is paying for much of the cleanup, said other heavy equipment may be used Monday to expedite removal. The sand and oil collected likely will go to an asphalt plant.

The other barge's operator, Maritrans Operating Partners L.P., also is paying for cleanup.

Woman decapitated by boat

MIAMI — A woman was struck and killed by a boat Sunday as she snorkeled in Biscayne Bay without a dive flag, officials said.

The 44-year-old woman, who was not identified, was on the surface of the water off Dinner Key Marina when she was decapitated by the passing boat, said Capt. Mike Lamphear of the Florida Marine Patrol. She died instantly.

The driver of the 26-foot speed boat did not see her, he said.

"The woman was snorkeling without a dive flag which is required by law and which was designed to help others stay away," Lamphear said.

The boaters stopped immediately to lend their assistance to the woman, whose husband and son were in a nearby boat, WSVN-TV in Miami reported.

"They did everything humanly possible to try to help her," Lamphear said.

Woman sought in Disney stabbing

LAKE BUENA VISTA — Authorities said Sunday they had found a knife case but not the weapon or the woman who slashed two men waiting for a tram to the Magic Kingdom at a Walt Disney World parking lot.

"We haven't received any information as to who she is or made any arrest," Sgt. Steve Jones, of the Orange County Sheriff's Office, said Sunday.

William Harris, 41, of Cinnaminson, N.J., was waiting for a tram with his daughter Friday when he noticed Robert Rose, 37, of Miami, had been stabbed, Jones said.

When Harris came over to help Rose, the woman yelled at him and slashed him several times with a 6-inch paring knife, cutting his arm and hand.

Witnesses told investigators the heavyset woman believed to be in her early-30s made a comment to Rose before stabbing him he shouldn't be looking at females that way, Jones said.

Suwannee singing the low-water blues

WHITE SPRINGS — Much of the Suwannee River, that fabled stream memorialized by Stephen Foster, could become a "trickle" if North-Central Florida doesn't soon get some rain.

"It's within tenths of the lowest ever," hydrologist Dennis Price said after taking a measurement at White Springs, 25 miles south of the river's source in the Okfenokee Swamp. "If we don't get any rain, this river really could become a trickle."

The river began dropping this spring and is 3 to 5 feet below normal level, said Price, who works for the Suwannee River Water Management District.

As a result, recreation on the river has been brought almost to a standstill. Boaters are nearly non-existent; canoeists can still navigate the river, but they risk hitting rock bottoms and being forced to portage.

America's sea faces new threat

By BILL KACZON
Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA — Environmental officials hope enthusiasm generated by the just-ended Year of the Gulf of Mexico will continue as "America's Sea" faces yet another threat from flooding along the upper Mississippi River.

Scientists are predicting that a "dead zone" in the gulf off the Louisiana and Texas coasts may double in size to 6,000 square miles because of the flooding, said William Whitson, chief of operations for the federal Gulf of Mexico Program.

"It's natural to be concerned, as we all are, with the human impact and the tragedy of the flood on ... daily lives," Whitson said from the program's office at the Stennis Space Center near Bay St. Louis, Miss. "But the environmental story is the gulf is an end point. This is where it all ends up."

The Mississippi's impact was one of the focal points of the Environmental Protection Agency-sponsored Year of the Gulf that officially ended in July.

Vice President Al Gore joined more than 1,200 students from Louisiana to Minnesota to test the Mississippi and feeder rivers May 12. The students wrote letters to government officials, project sponsors and newspaper editors to tell them what they learned.

Shellfish sleuths eye security device

By Associated Press

CEDAR KEY — The same security device used to protect valuable pieces of art may soon be used by Levy and Dixie county shellfish farms still reeling over this summer's theft of a million seed clams.

The aquatic farmers gathered recently for a demonstration of a system already used to identify some exotic animals and pricey personal property.

The system put through its paces by Dr. Hank Stoddard, a Dixie County veterinarian, allows animals or other marked items to be identified by using low-energy radio signals.

"What this means is that the technology is out there to keep shellfish product under one ownership until it gets to market," Stoddard told The Gainesville Sun.

The clam theft occurred in July.

Captain: Freighter made sudden turn

By Associated Press

TAMPA — A captain of one of the tugboats involved in last week's fiery crash in Tampa Bay said the freighter's captain made a sudden turn that sent two barges and the ship on a collision course.

Mike Panagakos, mate of the Seafarer tugboat, told the Marine Board of Investigation on Sunday that he and Capt. Charles Chapman never had time to approve an agreement with Capt. Thomas Baggett of the Balsa 37 that would alter their original passing plans.

Panagakos inbound Seafarer had nearly overtaken the Bouchard barge rig and was approaching a bend in the channel at the tug's maximum speed of 9 1/2 knots.

But Panagakos testified he saw no evidence that Balsa 37 was starting a right turn at the bend that Baggett had communicated before. This meant that it would likely swing wide, possibly into their path.

A couple of seconds later, Baggett told the Seafarer the vessels would have to switch to two whistles, which means each would veer to the left, the mate said. At that exact moment, Baggett started his move to the left, Panagakos added.

Chapman, meanwhile, had no choice but to do the same, turning hard to the left and throwing the vessel in reverse, Panagakos said.

But that was not enough to stop the momentum of the barge, and the Balsa 37 and Ocean 255 collided amid a shower of sparks and fire, Panagakos said. The mate said he didn't know that the Balsa went on to hit the Capt. Fred Bouchard and its barge, B155, until he saw it two hours later on television.

"The test showed us what we already realized," Whitson said. "There are nutrients coming down the Mississippi River system and they are having an effect on the gulf. To what extent, it's going to take time to bear that out."

The nutrients — from sources that include fertilizers washing off farms and effluent from sewage systems — promote algae blooms that take so much oxygen from the water in the dead zone that fish cannot live there.

The size of the dead zone fluctuates, depending on weather conditions and the amount of water flowing into the gulf from the Mississippi.

The goals of Year of the Gulf included making people aware that what happens upstream has an impact, and realizing the gulf's importance to the nation as a provider of seafood, recreation, commerce and natural resources.

The observance was designed to generate public support that will be necessary to obtain money and pass new laws to clean and protect the gulf.

"Now with the flooding this is even more significant to show again the importance of the gulf," said Doug Lipka, acting director of the Gulf of Mexico Program.

The EPA-sponsored program has two events scheduled next month to keep the focus on the gulf.

A "Take Pride Gulfwide" beach cleanup has been scheduled in the gulf states — Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas — for Sept. 18.

Way Back When

A few weeks ago the Herald published a "Way Back When" story about the A.J. Lossing "Quick Service" Transfer and Storage Company. According to the best information available the company has continued in no less than nine decades under the same name. The firm provided every type of bus and truck service available. Pictured here is Wilmer C. Lossing, brother of A.J. Lossing, at the wheel of one of Lossing's vehicles. Close examination of the photo indicates the picture was taken with the Forrest Lake Hotel in the background which means the picture was made as early as 1927. The hotel may have leased the vehicle to transport guests for downtown shopping, tours, exhibition games at the Municipal Park, golfing at what is now the Mayfair Country Club, and to carry folks from the PICO railroad station or the riverboats that sailed the St. Johns River. It may have also been used as a school bus from time to time.

Governor's Mansion security upgrade embroiled in controversy

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — It seemed like a simple idea to upgrade the obsolete 20-year-old security system at the Governor's Mansion.

It has turned out to be much more difficult: the company that installed and now maintains the current system is protesting the award of a new $123,000 contract to another company.

And that happened after the first set of six bids was rejected by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, which found none met the specifications for the new system.

FDLE has wanted for years to improve the mansion's security system, which was installed during former Gov. Reubin Askew's administration and is woefully behind the times technologically. Some aspects of the system don't even work properly.

"The overall system design is old," said Jamie McLaughlin, director of executive investigations at FDLE.

Several previous efforts to overhaul the system were "put aside when we started having budget problems," he said.

McLaughlin wouldn't go into details for fear of compromising safety, but essentially FDLE wants to improve surveillance, controls on access to the Mansion and ways to monitor the entire grounds.

Besides protecting Gov. Lawton Chiles, first lady Rhea Chiles and anyone else who stays at the mansion, the system keeps an estimated $2 million worth of paintings, antiques and other items safe from harm.

FDLE consulted with the U.S. Marshal's Office and the Secret Service to help design a new system. Now, those specifications are the subject of a dispute between security system companies.

Deputies said the two were cleaning the accounts trailer of the Toyotoland car dealership when they found a money bag used for deposits. Deputies said the girl opened the bag and counted $992 in cash, plus checks. Deputies said Sousa ripped up the checks and threw them away. Game agency has changed focus in Brantly's 33 years

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — The outgoing director of Florida's game and fish department says the agency's focus has expanded to non-game species, though rejection of a bear-hunting ban was the biggest controversy of his tenure.

"There is a large constituency of people not interested in hunting and fishing. They want wildlife observation and hiking," Col. Robert Brantly told The Gainesville Sun for a story Sunday.

Brantly is retiring Oct. 31 after 33 years with the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission and 16 as executive director. He joined the agency in 1957 as a wildlife officer in Orange County.

While he has been executive director, the annual budget has grown from $15.8 million to $56.3 million and the number of employees has increased from 678 to 933.

The amount of land managed for hunting has declined slightly, however, from 5.7 million to 5.6 million acres.

Instead of dealing mostly with hunters and anglers, the agency now devotes more than half its efforts to other activities, Brantly said. "We have been able to place greater emphasis on the non-hunted species without diminishing our emphasis in the hunting area."

The biggest controversy has been the commission's refusal to ban bear hunting in two areas in North Florida, in Baker and Columbia counties and the Apalachicola National Forest.

The bear is listed as a threatened species elsewhere in the state, and hunting is banned.

The commission staff recommended last year that bear hunting be discontinued because of a public outcry over the remaining two areas.

The five-member panel rejected the recommendation in favor of a study on how to manage the bear population statewide.

Commission members have a layman's view, offsetting those of agency professionals who deal with issues daily, Brantly said.

The study will allow a balanced decision, he said. "What we try to do is present to the board all the pertinent information to them and make a recommendation for them to act on."

Decisions made regarding public use of wildlife must have a biological basis, Brantly said.

"If it is detrimental to the species, we're not going to do it," he said. "It is hard to get the public to understand the bear is a threatened species except in Baker and Columbia counties and the Apalachicola National Forest."

Brantly said he plans to retire to Jacksonville, spend time hunting and fishing and traveling in his motor home to Alaska and Canada, and remain active in the Southeastern Association of Wildlife Agencies.

He will be replaced by Allan Egbert, assistant executive director since 1986.

Cindy floods Puerto Rico

By DAVID BEARD
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Tropical Storm Cindy, carrying heavy rains and 40 mph sustained winds, brushed past Puerto Rico's southern coast on a collision course today with the Dominican Republic.

Thousands of Dominicans filled gas tanks and stocked up on bottled water and canned goods ahead of Cindy, which battered Martinique and was blamed for at least one death on the French island.

Since becoming a tropical storm Saturday, Cindy has pelted the Caribbean with steady rains of up to 4 inches and isolated showers of up to 8 inches, said Martin Nelson of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla.

Nelson said some strengthening of Cindy's winds was expected before her touchdown this afternoon on the Dominican coast.

At 8 a.m. EDT, the poorly-defined center of Cindy was located near latitude 17.5 north, longitude 69.3 west or about 65 miles south-southeast of Santo Domingo in the Dominican Republic. Tropical rains extending 70 miles from the center.

Cindy was moving to the west-northwest at 13 mph, pouring rain on the Mona Passage and stirring waves up to eight feet. The channel separates Puerto Rico from Hispaniola, the island that the Dominican Republic and Haiti share.

Dominicans issued warnings along the nation's south and east coasts.

Meeting of the minds

Members of the Westside Community Association met recently at the West Sanford Boys & Girls Club with guest speakers Howard Jeffries, above right, grounds maintenance coordinator for the City of Sanford; Daryl McLain, District 5 County Commissioner; and Frank Shelton, a member of the Markham Woods Homeowners Association, Lake Mary, addressing the crowd. Jeffries updated the president of the club, Anthony Peoples, seated left, and the general membership on upcoming projects to beautify the Goldsboro area. A "Trash Bash" along West 13th Street is planned for Sept. 11. McLain, standing left, introduced Frank Shelton, seated right, to give the association advice on how their homeowners association was formed and pointers on attaining its charter.

Panel, judges clash on detaining youths

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Judges who send youths in detention centers when state rehabilitation programs are full go beyond their authority, says a draft report by a juvenile justice panel.

But those who hear juvenile cases, like Circuit Judge Walter Komanski of Orlando, say the alternatives are equally unacceptable.

For example, Komanski said he ordered a 15-year-old boy convicted of raping two sisters into one of the strictest rehabilitation programs.

But the program had an eight-month waiting list. The teen went home, because rules didn't allow Komanski to put him in a detention center despite a psychological report saying he probably would rape again.

"That's the way the system works," Komanski told The Orlando Sentinel for a story Sunday.

The Commission on Juvenile Justice is to vote Friday in Orlando on whether to approve the draft report on the Orlando Regional Juvenile Detention Center and urge changes in whom is held there.

During a June inspection the panel found youths accused of minor crimes such as trespassing were being held, 84 children were in the 75-bed center, and at least 11 shouldn't have been there.

Child advocates said the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services long ago should have had more children's facilities. The Legislature has appropriated money for programs for juvenile offenders but HRS hasn't used it properly, the commission said.

HRS said it is doing the best job possible. Rick Bedson, HRS juvenile justice manager, said more than 60 new treatment beds will be available by December for the district encompassing Orange and Seminole counties, shortening waiting lists. The Juvenile Justice Commission staff said in the report that judges were violating the law and children's rights, and Orange and Seminole county judges were the worst offenders.

"What the judges are doing is they are stepping outside the statute," said Jerry Wescott, the panel's legislative analyst.

In turn, judges charged their critics are more worried about saving money than children. Keeping a child in detention costs an average of $87 a day, Wescott said.

"It doesn't matter how bad, how dangerous, how drug-dependent (a child is)," Komanski said. "Their No. 1 issue is to get kids out of detention. They (HRS officials) are concerned with overcrowding, not public safety. They are looking for bucks."

And, said Seminole Circuit Judge Leonard Wood, "There is a philosophy permeating out of Tallahassee from people in certain positions of power that kids should never be detained. I don't think these people in Tallahassee understand what's going on in our society."

HRS guidelines say youths can be kept in detention centers if they are unlikely to show up for court or may commit new crimes.

The rules usually limit detention to 21 days, and only 15 days after being sentenced to a treatment program. If the program has a waiting list, youngsters usually return home, or to the streets.

State officials estimate 1,000 Florida children are on waiting lists and experts say 20 percent to 30 percent commit new crimes during their wait.

Wood asked what alternative judges have to detention, knowing that released children will be taking drugs, sleeping on the street and prostituting themselves.

"Yes, I have been forced to bend the rules on occasion," Wood said. "But what are we supposed to do? Just turn our backs on these kids?"

Register now to vote

While we are in the midst of summer, it's time to begin looking ahead. In some cities, municipal election time will soon be here.

With this in mind, preparations need to begin. The first step is to be certain people are properly registered to vote. Several registration days have already been conducted in a number of communities. Others will be held in the weeks ahead.

Registration may also be done at the Supervisor of Elections office in the Seminole County Services Building on E. First Street. The deadline to register to vote in this year's elections is Oct. 4.

Being an odd numbered year, there will be no county or school board elections. City politics however, will be off and running in the very near future.

In Lake Mary, qualifying officials starts at noon Tues., Aug. 31 and runs through Sept. 24. Two City Commission seats will be on the ballot. Dist. 2, presently held by George Duryea, and Dist. 4 held by A.R. "Doc" Jore.

In Longwood, three City Commission seats will be up for grabs. Seat 1 held by Harvey Smerilton, Seat 2 held by Fred Pearl, and Seat 4 held by Rex Anderson. Qualifying time begins at 8 a.m. Sept. 3 and runs for one week through Sept. 10.

Three persons have already indicated they will seek election, one for each seat.

The City of Sanford is free from elections this year. The next election of City Commissioners will be in 1994.

The point is, we are only weeks away from the start of political campaigning for these municipal elections. Voter registration should begin as soon as possible.

In the upcoming months, people seeking election will be taking every opportunity to explain their stands on various issues. Some will attack their opponents. Those in office as well as those seeking to replace them will make efforts to persuade citizens to support them, financially during the campaign, and with their votes on election day.

Even though some people may believe they have better things to do than become involved in political races, feelings can change. After Oct. 4, it will be too late to register for these elections.

The time to begin preparation for Election Day, Nov. 2, is now.

Having informed and prepared voters is the best way to insure a bright and prosperous future for Lake Mary and Longwood.

On teen criminals

Three cheers to the Herald for the editorial "Stop Coddling Teen Criminals." My hats off to you. You hit the nail squarely on the head several — if not "many" times.

The gross — almost guaranteed — lack of effective punishment swiftly and surely administered, first by the parents, then by the law, is the single greatest reason why some — hopefully only a few, teenagers (and pre-teenagers too) go wrong. Most teenagers are great people.

A $4 million fine was set by a couple of teenage jerks. Why? "Aw gee, maw, I didn't know the match was loaded." "Ya jes don't understand. Mawr, da udder guy made me do it." Sure! And ten million other half-donkeyed, cop-out excuses. Why not — society and its screwed up laws and court decisions keep right on accepting those cop-out excuses. Not always, just too damn often.

Let's understand something right here and right now.

When the punishment imposed on the guilty party(ies) for doing something seriously wrong by far exceeds the pleasures derived from the act of doing it, then and only then will those acts come to a screeching whoa. Not a total stop, you understand, but one hellava slow-down.

As implied proof of the foregoing statement, I offer the following:

Quite some number of years ago one of this country's more popular "fun and games" pastimes was sky-jacking airliners' airplanes. Two or three a week. Every week. Nearly everywhere. Then they put some sky-marshals aboard some of the planes. That of itself and by itself accomplished very little, if anything. But, and that's a mighty big but, when those sky-marshals started shooting those sky-jackers right on the spot, what happened to the incidences of sky-jacking? Took a gigantic nosedive didn't it? Punishment was then being administered, wasn't it? It worked, didn't it? No more "fun and games." End of example.

If a person is old enough and healthy enough to do the crime, he/she is old enough and healthy enough to do the time. And I don't give a rat's tush" if that person is pre-teen, young teen, post-teen or "Ovalline" in age. Identify — charge — prosecute — convict — incarcerate — regardless of age. And no early release.

Trumping history with the race card

The Oregon legislature once enacted a law that barred from the state's public schools all American history textbooks that contained criticism of the Founding Fathers and those Americans who fought to preserve the Union. (There could be no mention, for example, that Thomas Jefferson owned slaves.) That sort of history was divisive. History should bring us together.

Listening to Sen. Carol Moseley Braun, D-Ill., squelch both Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and the United Daughters of the Confederacy last month, I thought of that Oregon law — long since deposited in the dustbin of runaway patriotism.

In trying to make offensive history disappear, Moseley Braun so transfixed her colleagues by confronting them with her enslaved ancestors that the Senate reversed itself and denied a design patent — including the Confederate flag — to the United Daughters of the Confederacy. "The Confederate flag," the senator said, "is a symbol of division. We must put it behind us."

A New York Times editorial described Moseley Braun's triumph as "majestic." Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., the Senate's most subtle intellectual, declared that in his 17 years in that not-always-majestic body, he had "not been so moved as by her statement."

Moseley Braun, according to many of her colleagues, had sent a message to the American people. In one respect, the message is similar to human chattel. We were property." She added that the Confederate flag "has no place in our modern times ... no place in our history ... no place in our society."

There could be no mention, for example, that Thomas Jefferson owned slaves.

There could be no mention, for example, that Thomas Jefferson owned slaves.

Does this mean that there should be a recall of books on slavery and on the Confederacy? And should the Public Broadcasting System's documentary on the Civil War not be shown in schools? It has Confederate flags, and through partial public funding, it has the imprimatur of Congress. Even if the Confederate flag were excised from these works, the rest of the material world would inescapably continue to be a reminder of slavery.

Rather than expunge all traces of such evil, might it not be more useful for whites and blacks to be reminded of it "time and time again" — as Jews and non-Jews keep going in large numbers to the Holocaust Museum?

In passing, the senator noted she was not urging that "these little old ladies" not be able to wave the Confederate flag. "It is absolutely unacceptable to me and to millions of Americans, black and white, that we would put the imprimatur of the United States Senate" on this flag.

So it is possible that books on slavery can stay as they are.

Stamp out Postal Service mischief

It is not true that nothing works as it should. It is true that few things work as well as they should as often as they should. As vivid proof of that proposition, there is the U.S. Postal Service.

Aha, you say, that's shooting fish in a barrel. Everyone knows that nothing has gone right with the mails since the post office abandoned twice-a-day home delivery and the three-cent stamp.

Or perhaps your ideology is such that you believe, ipso facto, that nothing the government does ever works. Aside from the fact that I disagree with that as a matter of general principle, specific history is not on your side. Within my lifetime the public mails were reliable, quick and cheap. In a few other nations, that remains true, though these days there seems to be some mysterious malady at loose in the world, working to bring all down to the lowest common denominator. Even in Britain, once the beau ideal of the mails, deterioration has set in.

But I digress. Reflections about universal ills are not the point of today's exercise. Instead, consider this a bellow of personal outrage and frustration, one man's testimony in the ongoing public trial of the post office for lousy service at high cost.

Much of what I do for a living involves writing. Much of the material I depend upon comes and goes through the post office. Most of the money I make also arrives by mail, and like most people, my monthly budget and cash flow are closely linked. Late payment for work rendered can lead to unpleasant complications.

That is why, two weeks before beginning my annual working vacation in Maine (which means I write in the morning and play in the afternoon), I turned in a temporary change of address card at my hometown post office. As required, it gave the date for stopping delivery at my regular address and forwarding it to Maine, and the date later in the month for revoking the change and resuming normal delivery.

I know the card was received, because on the appointed day, two days before we actually left, mail stopped arriving at home. I also know the card was received because shortly after we arrived in Maine, a few pieces of mail addressed to my wife (who uses a different last name), began arriving with the familiar yellow forwarding sticker affixed. But nothing came for me for 10 days, and even in her case, there was only a puny handful of letters instead of the usual torrent of magazines, bills, circulars, catalogs, letters and the like.

So I finally called the post office back home, having first determined that there was still nothing being sent to our old address. It took several conversations before I found a man who could actually help. After checking, he told me our carrier had a ready explanation. While my wife had provided a change of address card, the carrier said, I had not.

To put it as gently as possible, someone at the other end of the problem was either seriously confused or a blatant liar. In the first place, my wife had never given a card to anyone. In the second, I had turned in two, one for each of us, but at the central post office, not to the carrier.

But no matter. This was Friday, July 30, and what did matter was that the error had been detected and corrected the previous Tuesday. As of that day, I was told, my mail had been rescued from limbo — as had that large bulk of my wife's mail that had also not been forwarded. It should be arriving momentarily.

Four days later, still no mail, which brought a phone call directly to the postmaster. All had been taken care of.

he said. The "computer error" had been corrected. Our mail was on its way. And sure enough, it was and had been. The first batch arrived the next day, all of the forwarding stickers dating back to the previous Tuesday and no further.

Which leaves an unresolved problem. There are roughly 100 pieces of mail that simply disappeared. As for what can or will be done about that, the answer thus far has been the linguistic equivalent of a shrug.

I'm telling the story wholesale in this column, but in recounting it retail over the past week, I've discovered that my particular case is not unique. One lady from New York said that six weeks of her mail had vanished once she submitted her vacation change of address card. A male acquaintance, also a writer, said three weeks had been his record.

But if misery loves company, neither company nor misery is of much use. It will take months to reconstruct what is missing, to ask that checks be recut and editorial corrections be resubmitted. Life will not come to an end, but it will be complicated in painful ways. Vacation time must be given up in the frustrating task of undoing the post office's incompetent mischief.

In the meantime, recent headlines indicate that the U.S. Postal Service wants a rate increase to cover the annual deficit.

They shouldn't get it.

It is not true that nothing works as it should.

Rampant Medicaid fraud costly

WASHINGTON — The old adage that crime doesn't pay is put to a severe test by Medicaid prescription-drug fraud. It's one of the hottest scams in which physicians, pharmacists, patients and other Medicaid middlemen collude to loot a program intended to serve the poorest of the poor.

"Many perpetrators of prescription-drug fraud, even when convicted, profit financially from their crimes," concludes a recent General Accounting Office study.

The report states: "Even when pursued, cases drag on for years — half of those we reviewed took more than three years to resolve. Penalties are light: Almost no one went to prison, and many offenders retained their connection with the health-care system — sometimes even continuing as Medicaid providers — with consequent potential for further violations."

Medicaid, the largest government health program for the poor, has been plagued by problems with prescription-drug diversion for at least the past decade. Yet, the Health and Human Services Department's Health Care Financing Administration has failed to create any sort of SWAT team to combat fraud and abuse, according to government auditors. When 80 pharmacists were arrested last year for Medicaid drug fraud — part of "Operation Goldpill" — the FBI warned it was merely the tip of the iceberg.

One of the schemes singled out by government investigators centers on the so-called "pill-mill," which entails the prescription and distribution of drugs mainly to obtain reimbursement and kickbacks. Patients are often knowing participants, and allow use of their Medicaid recipient numbers for billing purposes in exchange for cash, drugs and other inducements. But there are many wrinkles to this fraud.

Texas authorities have discovered Medicaid recipients who paid physicians cash for prescriptions they filled at local pharmacies. They resold the drugs — which can cost the pharmacy less than 50 cents per pill — on the street for as much as $85. In California, doctors were paid by some clinic owners for the use of their provider numbers, and then paid drivers to bring in Medicaid enrollees as patients. Clinics called in prescriptions to participating pharmacies, which arranged for the bulk pickup or delivery of drugs.

Drug diversion is Medicaid's crime of opportunity, and those opportunities are multiplying. By 1996, Medicaid is expected to spend $10 billion on prescription-drug benefits, or nearly double the 1991 figure of $5.5 billion. Part of the problem is overlapping oversight — five or more state, local and federal agencies have jurisdiction. These drug rings often keep law enforcement engaged in a costly and labor-intensive cat-and-mouse chase.

There's a brazenness to this fraud, illustrated by examples unearthed by federal investigators: a doctor wrote 2,000 prescriptions a month; a pharmacist billed for more than 30 prescriptions a day for a single recipient; one recipient had the same three lab tests five times in four days at three different labs and six prescriptions for Zantac in the same four days at six different pharmacies. In sum, Medicaid shelled out more than $3,000 during an 18-day period for this recipient.

Even in the most egregious cases, many of the guilty get off with a wrist slap. The GAO found that the money actually collected in fraud convictions is often a fraction of what was ordered by the court. In more than half the cases it examined, restitution was minimal, amounting to $5,000 or less. When restitution was assessed at $20,000 or more, however, Medicaid recovered only a small percentage.

It's one of the hottest scams to loot a program intended to serve the poorest of the poor.

Thousands love him tender 16 years after his death

By WOODY BAIRD

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Elvis left the building 16 years ago today, but fans keep showing up on the anniversary of his death to pay homage to the king of rock 'n' roll.

Up to 7,000 faithful began a candlelight procession past Presley's grave late Sunday evening, many leaving flowers or other gifts.

"It's just like you would do at your mom's or dad's grave. It's a token of love," said fan Linda Cashion, 42, of Knoxville. "It shows we care."

Police estimated the crowd filling the street in front of Graceland, Presley's former residence, at 6,000 to 7,000 as the procession began.

The vigil capped a week of fan-club parties, concerts and other festivities to mark the anniversary of Presley's death at Graceland on Aug. 16, 1977.

It was common at Presley's concerts for fans to hang around hoping for one more glimpse of him until they heard the announcement, "Elvis has left the building."

Graceland, where Presley is buried in a small garden beside the swimming pool, draws 650,000 visitors annually.

"I feel like if I didn't come, I might be letting him down," said Esther Crain, 55, of Springfield.

Sabina Witzel, 27, of Germany was taking part in her third candlelight vigil "to share the love of Elvis with others. There's a bond of friendship and common understanding that's here."

Dixie Brownfield, 53, of Lafayette, Ind., was a newcomer.

"This is the first time I've been able to come because my husband wouldn't let me," she said. "But he passed away in February."

Mary Powell, 48, of Salina, Kan., couldn't stay away, even though her family's house flooded three weeks ago then caught fire a week later.

"My husband kept saying, 'You know you're going to be miserable if you don't go,'" she said.

Presley, 42, was determined to have died of heart disease, but prescription drugs were found in his body, and it has long been speculated that he died of a drug overdose.

State officials decided last June to let an independent forensic pathologist re-examine his autopsy records in an effort to settle the dispute.

job as a bank teller to be with her daughter for a while after her birth. She now works part time as a clerk at a small store while looking for a job as a teller.

"If, like in the old days, my mom, lived nearby instead of in Nebraska she would be taking care of Gina," Lorenz said. "We've all moved so far away from our families that we have to pay people to do what moms and aunts and sisters used to do."

Lorenz said she is lucky that she is married and can rely on her husband to care for their daughter when he is not at work. Other than that she must rely on paid help for care.

Pella Ortiz said she spent nearly two months trying to select a child care facility for her son.

"I went through the phone book and just started calling. I asked them about price, about the kinds of activities they have for the kids, about any instruction they might have for even the littlest kids," she said. "I asked hundreds of questions and went and visited probably two dozen centers. It was exhausting."

In Central Florida, those who are looking for child care, but don't know how to go about selecting the proper caregivers, can turn to the Community Coordinated Child Care (4C) for assistance.

The private non-profit corporation is funded by the United Way, the county and city governments of the cities it serves, the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, the federal government and various private services.

The 4C suggests that parents shop around for quality child care.

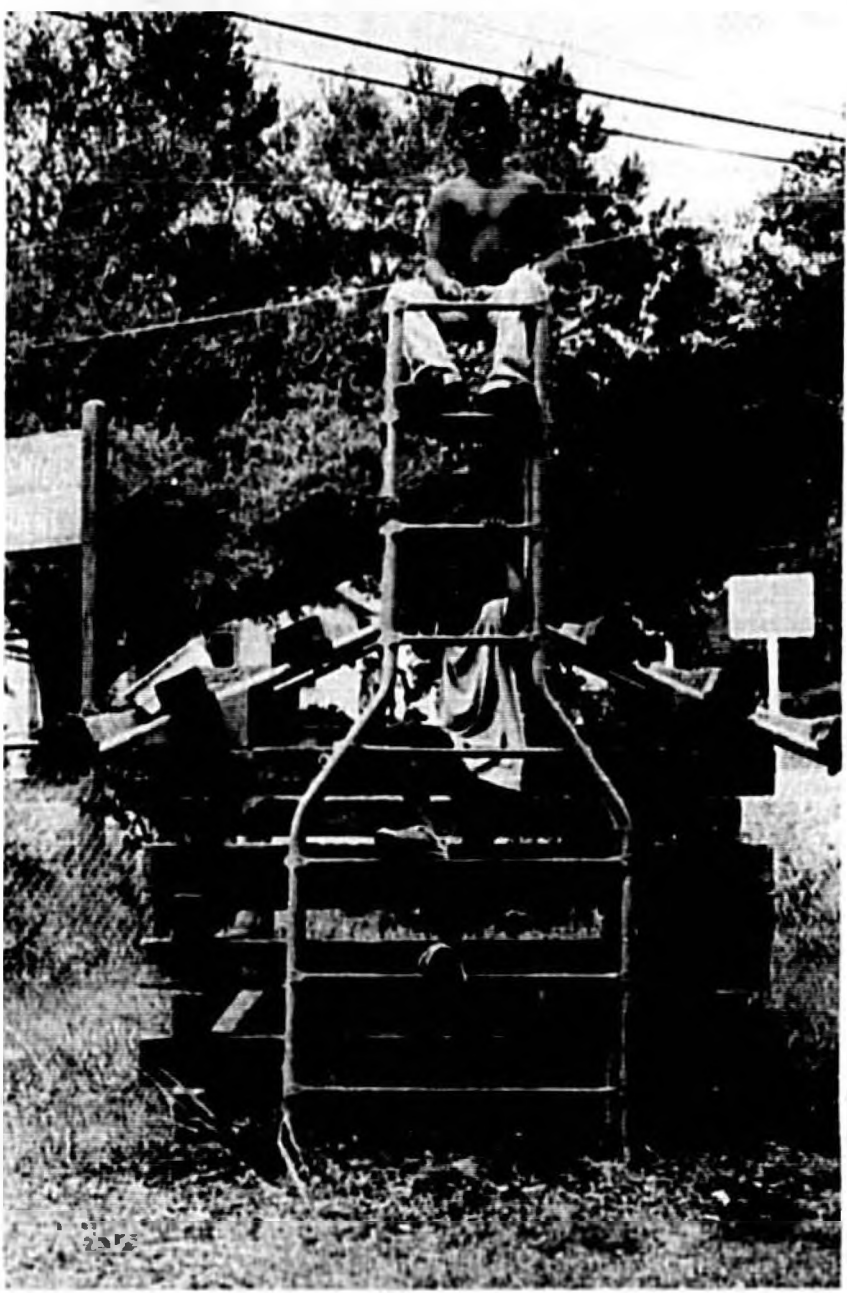

"Parents need to ask questions and get answers that will lead them to the very best care for their children and that they get their money's worth," said Debbie Bourbonnais, resource specialist with 4C.

One woman, who did not want her name used, said that she had quit her job three years ago because she believed it was more cost-effective to stay at home than to remain on the job and spend nearly 80 percent of her salary on child care.

When the single mother of two enrolled in vocational classes at Seminole Community College earlier this year (because she was "tired of living off the government full time and looking to get a good paying job") she said she found out about 4C and that they could arrange a payment scale that would allow her to pay what she could afford for child care until she began making more money.

Bourbonnais said that there have been a lot of people who have given up jobs and opportunities because child care prices were out of their grasp. She said that is not necessary, however.

"We have a sliding scale," she explained. "Families pay between two and 28 dollars a week for the care."

Like these young people, all children need play interspersed with organized activity at child care centers where they stay.

The scale is based on the family's income and the number of people living in the household.

The basic guideline is that families may have a gross annual income that is 150 percent of federal poverty level. (For example, the poverty level for a family of four is $13,949. The qualifying figure for assistance is $20,920.) The federal poverty level is updated annually and, therefore, the qualifying numbers change as well.

"We are able to help many, many people," Bourbonnais said.

Mari Heil, a representative of 4C, said that those who think they might qualify for assistance should call 4C. Counselors there can pre-qualify families over the telephone.

Too often, she said, people are unaware of the assistance that is available. Too often, they give up jobs or opportunities because they feel they can not afford child care.

Others feel they can not afford to give their children the opportunity to interact with other young people because they are not able to afford the care.

"We hate to see something like that happen," said Meta Brooks, owner of the First Impressions Early Childhood Development Center in Sanford. "There is assistance available for people who are working or in school."

While most dual income children with only one child would not qualify for assistance, there are programs to meet the financial needs of almost any family unit.

Brooks said she has "a real good mix" of teen-age parents, dual income families, grandparents who have been given guardianship of their grandchildren and youngsters who, by court order, must be in a care facility because they may only remain in the home eight hours per day.

"The financial situations run the gamut," she said.

The state subsidizes those who cannot afford to pay for the care through vouchers. She said that about 10 percent of her families pay the full cost of the care themselves.

Bourbonnais said that 4C monitors and accredits more than 1,300 programs in Seminole, Orange and Osceola counties.

"We update our lists every month so parents can come in with criteria like price range, size of facility, location and we could match them up with several facilities that they can visit," she said.

Janet Smithfield of Sanford said she found the right facility for her daughter only after visiting eight child care centers and about a half dozen family day care homes.

Hawaii prepares for new storm

By BRUCE DUNFORD

HONOLULU — A hurricane warning was posted for part of Hawaii as Hurricane Fernanda intensified and changed course Sunday, putting it on a path that would take it 100 to 200 miles north of the islands.

"All coastal areas on the east side of the island are on alert for possible evacuation," said Harry Kim, civil defense administrator for the state's Hawaii Island.

The southernmost Hawaii Island was placed under a hurricane warning at 5 p.m. HST (11 p.m. EDT), while the rest of the state — including Oahu, the most populous — remained under a less severe hurricane watch.

Two dozen youngsters with a baseball team were evacuated as a precaution Saturday night from a park at Punaluu, near the southern tip of Hawaii Island, Kim said.

Meanwhile, the approach of Hurricane Keoni toward Johnston Atoll prompted the evacuation of 900 people at the Army's chemical weapons facility 700 miles south of Hawaii.

At 5 p.m. HST, Fernanda was 370 miles east of Hilo on the island of Hawaii, moving west-northwest at 12 mph with sustained winds of 105 mph and gusts to 125 mph, the National Weather Service said. Gale-force winds of 39 to 54 mph extended for 200 miles.

"It's slightly stronger than it was yesterday," said Glenn Trapp, director of the hurricane center here. "We don't expect it to intensify any more and it should stay pretty much the same for the next 24 hours and then start to weaken."

The storm had shifted slightly to the north from its earlier due west course, which would see it pass 100 to 200 miles to the north of the Hawaiian Islands chain, Trapp said.

Woodson, a counselor at the YMCA and coordinator of the after school programs.

This year, however, the YMCA had to take a hard look at the financial situations of the families served by each school.

According to Woodson, the cost of the after school care will range from $12 at Goldsboro and Pine Crest elementary schools to $29.50 at Hamilton Elementary School.

"We just felt there were more affluent neighborhoods in and around Hamilton than around Goldsboro, for example," she noted. "We thought that, overall, the families at Hamilton were better able to afford the $29.50."

Woodson said that they are structured, Woodson said. They are not just "baby-sitting programs."

According to Woodson, the students are exposed to an hour of outdoor play, a half an hour of homework and quiet time and a half an hour of free play indoors.

The program lasts from the time school is dismissed until about 6 p.m.

"It works out quite well for the parents who do not want their children home alone and it gives the students an opportunity to play with their peers and do their homework," she said.

The school district provides the facilities for the programs and the YMCA provides the rest.

"It is a great relationship that the Y has with the schools," Woodson said.

locally made presentation lasts 45 minutes rather than the two hour shows produced by the BBC in London.

Re-runs of the "Doctor Who" show are being presented regularly on WMFE-TV, Channel 24, beginning at 4 p.m. every Saturday.

During the lifetime of the program, over a half dozen different actors have portrayed the doctor. Several passed away, one during actual filming. Others were replaced as the show continued in production during the many years.

In the BBC production, the doctor, who's name is never given is a time traveler. His time machine resembles a telephone booth, but once inside, the booth changes to reveal space the size of a large laboratory, in which he keeps the electronic equipment which guides the location of his travel as well as the year, which is most often several centuries in the future.

The GOG Doctor Who fan club has approximately 40 members. "Many are local people," Langston said, "but we have at least ten people from out of state. Naturally, we would always welcome more members."

To show off "The New Order," the locally produced Doctor Who show, the GOG club has obtained use of the Old City Hall in Lake Mary. They are planning a special showing of their 45-minute long episode, on Saturday, Sept. 11.

"We don't own the copyright on the original show," Langston said, "so we can't use what we've done for profit in any way."

about a year. When it was finally renegotiated by the bonding company with Hewitt Construction, the original completion date of June 14, 1993 was still required. Hewitt said he couldn't have the irrigation work finished on time without an extension of the completion date, which the county refused to grant.

"So it had to be bid out to a separate contractor," Holland said. "Valley Crest Landscaping of Orlando, is now doing the work people see going on."

Holland said the present line installation is not expected to cause any traffic slowdowns as most of the work is being done in the median. "We expect Valley Crest will have all of the installation done within the next three weeks," he said.

The awards will be given to various members of the GOG who participated in producing the local production.

Holland said the cost of the landscaping would receive some financial help from Seminole County.

Both matters are expected to be presented at the next regular meeting of the Lake Mary City Commission, Thursday, Aug. 19, beginning at 7 p.m.

Local minister tames 'Mustang'

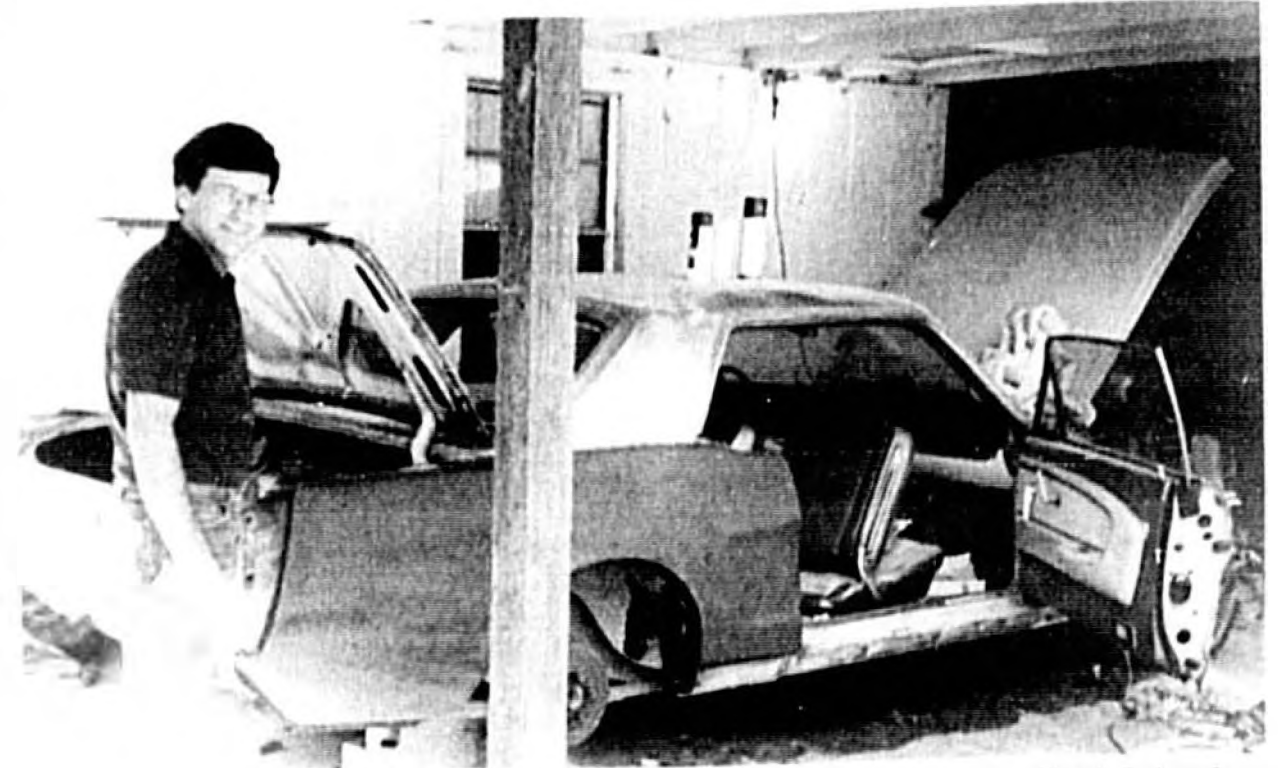

By SARABECA ROSIER
Herald Columnist

Rev. Paul Hoyer of Holy Cross Lutheran Church and resident of Lake Mary is a man of many talents.

The particular talent that this article addresses is his current hobby—his 1966 Mustang. Rev. Hoyer bought this car in the spring of 1991 from his friend Brian Lee, Esq., also of Lake Mary. "I basically work on it one day a week on Mondays. Firstly, I worked on the engine until it was running and then used it as a second car for almost two years with all the trust and holy work still in the need of attention. Then in January of 1993, I took a week's vacation and took all the paint off by hand.

When asked how he came by his mechanical talents, Hoyer replied that "it began when I was 14 and my dad who also was a pastor, took me with him to see a shirt in a man. My dad noticed a 1942 Studebaker coupe parked out in the yard under a tree. Dad told the man it was just like the car he had when he began to drive. When Dad asked if it was for sale, the man said it had been parked under that tree for 40 years. His wife had driven it home without oil and it had set there ever since. So my dad took the car home and it took us two years to repair it. I helped him every chance I could. When I was 16 it was ready and I drove the Studebaker, my first car. Then Dad started picking up old Studebakers in all different states of ill repair. We had 22 in all, and from 16 until 19, I worked with him on them.

I had worked the family car two times and my dad's policy was you broke it, you fix it. So if I wanted a car and wanted to drive, I had to repair the car so I got lots of experience with body work and did lots of repairing. I drove the Studebaker all through college and kept up the maintenance. While I was in undergraduate school in Indiana, I went to a regular school to take a course to become a mechanic as well as attending college for becoming a pastor. So I also have a lifetime mechanic's license from the state of Indiana. I went through spurs of working on cars when it was convenient, and sometimes repairs had to be made when it was inconvenient.

"I bought my first brand new car when I came to Florida in 1984. I was so tired of old cars that always needed repairs and I didn't have the time any more. The Mission Board of Lutheran Churches called me to start a mission in Lake Mary. So for a number of years, the mission work took all my attention and I didn't mess with hobbies and cars for years. I first started in Lake Mary in the Driftwood Center on Lake Mary Boulevard with 1,500 square feet where the Lake Mary Dance Academy used to be. As the congregation grew, all the church members and I worked weekends to build the Holy Cross Lutheran Church where it now stands. We subbed out the work we couldn't do ourselves and we moved in March of 1987. I kept very busy with the church.

"Later on I met Brian Lee through Rotary in about 1991. He showed me the Mustang coupe that he'd had since he was 16. Brian brought it from Washington, D.C. It was the latest car. He had it parked under a tree by his house. We talked about cars and my rebuilding Studebakers, and I got excited about his Mustang. At the time, I was driving a 1978 station wagon and the engine had blown up. It was too expensive to have repaired, so I fixed it. It was the first mechanical work I had done in a long time. I hated the station wagon, but I really liked doing the work. Brian suggested I buy his Mustang. So we came to an agreement and I bought Brian's car and temporarily fixed it for road use. I sold the station wagon and used the money to buy parts to complete the Mustang.

I started working on the Mustang in the spring of 1991. I had only fixed it mechanically so I could drive it, but not appearance-wise or cosmetically. I drove it for a year and had the opportunity to sell it in the fall of 1992. However, my wife Betty liked the car, and in January 1993 I took the car off the road to restore it. I borrowed a pickup truck from a friend to use until the Mustang could be taken fully apart and I started from scratch to fix it both mechanically and cosmetically. I removed by hand all the paint, rust, old deteriorated parts, windows, etc. and restored rebuilt repaired replaced. Some parts I had to build by hand and other I purchased new or used. Another member of the church, Jim Smith, also has a hobby of body work and in January 1993 he helped me with that as he had the tools and expertise that I lacked.

So that is how Rev. Hoyer continued his long standing hobby and has now added even more abilities to his storehouse. The 1966 Mustang coupe was finished around the 4th of July, 1993. Rev. Hoyer is rightly proud of his accomplishment as his wife Betty and children, Sara, Benjamin, Meredith and Jacob.

Fund-raiser aboard Grand Romance

The Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce announces to its members that on Sunday, Sept. 19, the Arthritis Foundation Central Branch will be hosting the Fifth Annual Wine and Cheese Taste aboard the Grand Romance. This year's agenda is filled with lots of fun and southern charm.

Available for enjoyment are splendid wines presented by local distributors. Come along and appreciate the sounds of Dixieland entertainment and a silent auction as we cruise along the scenic St. Johns River.

Moneys from this event will be used for patient care in the local area. Arthritis is the nation's number one crippling disease. It affects all ages including children. One in seven persons are presented with the challenges of managing this disease. You can assist in making this year's event the best ever. By donating $25 to the Arthritis Foundation you can be a Silver Tray sponsor of this event. For your donation you or your firm will receive a business card size ad in the event program, a 20 percent discount for all admissions that you purchase to the Wine and Cheese Taste—that's $20 rather than $25.

It is both interesting and important to note that Money magazine in the December 1992 issue rated the Arthritis Foundation one of the top 10 health organizations for its worthiness as a charity. This was based on guidelines used on how funds are utilized and percentages that

Rock camp

The Sanford Lake Mary Unit of the American Cancer Society asked me to tell my readers about ROCK Camp. ROCK spells Reaching Out to Cancer Kids, a very special American Cancer Society camp just for children and teenagers with cancer.

Located in Lake Wales, ROCK Camp was founded by a Florida Pediatric oncologist in 1976 and has the distinction of being the first program of its kind in the United States.

Every August, approximately 200 cancer patients ages 6 to 18 attend one of two week-long ROCK Camp sessions. Activities include horseback riding, swimming, canoeing, arts and crafts, and evenings around a campfire. ROCK Camp provides the perfect setting for building new friendships and strengthening familiar ties. Perhaps most of all, ROCK Camp helps unite young people with cancer.

Comfortable, air-conditioned cabins provide housing for everyone at ROCK Camp and meals are served cafeteria style in the popular mess hall. Counselors play an important role by organizing the many activities, and some are even former ROCK campers who have also had cancer. Qualified physicians and nurses are on the premises at all times to take care of medical needs.

There is no charge for attending ROCK Camp as it is totally funded by the American Cancer Society. Florida Division Selection of campers is made by the physician and parents.

If you wish to find out more about this camp, contribute to same or any other questions regarding cancer, please call either 1-800-282-3812 anywhere in Florida or the Sanford Lake Mary Unit, 322-0849, where you can ask for Dee Lamar or Emily Hill.

Chairman needed

In order to complete the PTA Executive Board, Lake Mary Elementary School is in dire need of a chairman for Ways and Means and Programs. The committees are already formed. The fundraisers are all set up and each fundraiser has a chairman but there is no contact person. It is possible for two people to co-chair. This person or persons will oversee the committees and will come to the PTA board meetings to report on the events, progress, problems, needs, etc.

Please come forward if you can accept this position and make Lake Mary Elementary School's PTA complete. For further information or to volunteer for these positions, call Donna Lane, PTA president, at 321-4222. Thank you.

AROUND THE NATION

Pirates land Marlins in 11

PITTSBURGH — Don Slaught doubled home the winning run in the 11th inning and Pittsburgh's bullpen pitched five shutout innings Sunday in a 4-3 victory over the Florida Marlins.

Luis Aquino (6-7), Florida's third pitcher, walked Dave Clark on a 3-2 pitch before Slaught doubled into the left-center gap. Center fielder Chuck Carr tumbled as he ran down the ball and was unable to make a play on Clark.

Azinger wins PGA playoff

TOLEDO, Ohio — Greg Norman lipped his second putt on the PGA Championship's second playoff hole Sunday, giving Paul Azinger a major title at last and leaving Norman with an unprecedented Grand Slam of playoff losses.

Azinger, who lost a playoff to Norman in the 1992 Doral-Ryder Open, had long been known as the best player never to win a major.

Norman, despite winning his second British Open title last month, is almost making a career of losing playoffs in majors — the 1984 U.S. Open against Fuzzy Zoeller, the 1987 Masters against Larry Mize, the 1989 British Open against Mark Calcavecchia. This one against Azinger, gives Norman an unwanted full set of playoff losses in golf's most prestigious events.

Martin posts back-to-back wins

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Mark Martin won his second straight NASCAR Winston Cup race Sunday, capturing the Champion Spark Plug 400, and it's obvious his luck has changed.

Despite having one of the strongest cars on the circuit, Martin had gone through the first 18 races of the 30-race season without winning.

"We're on the fortunate side of luck right now," Martin said. "Before we won at Watkins Glen last week, I would have given anything to just win one. But as crazy hard as I was running out there today, I guess you just get greedy for more."

Brown leads O-Cub rout

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Bryant Brown picked up four RBI, including a two-run home run, as the Orlando Cubs beat the Nashville Xpress 11-3 Sunday in the Southern League.

Kennie Steastra (6-2) got the win, while Bill Wissler (7-9) took the loss.

Barons get best of Suns

HOOVER, Ala. — Kinnis Pledger had two hits and scored three runs as the Birmingham Barons defeated the Jacksonville Suns 5-1 Sunday in Southern League play.

Luis Andujar (4-0) was the winning pitcher for the Barons. Kevin Coffman (1-4) took the loss.

Hawks don't go quietly

From Staff Reports

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — After winning their first three games of the American Softball Association 12-and-under girls' national championship tournament, the Seminole Hawks lost two of their next three games and were eliminated.

The tournament, which was played at the Seminole Softball Complex, wrapped up Sunday despite a severe late morning thunderstorm.

Before the rains came Sunday, O-C Waters from Day Minette, Alabama, defeated the Lake Lytal Cougars 7-6 in the winners' bracket final.

After the rain delay, Blue Thunder from Marietta, Georgia, took on Georgia Power from Stone Mountain. The winner was to play Lake Lytal with the survivors advancing to challenge O-C Waters in the finals.

The Hawks — representing the Seminole Softball Club — suffered their first loss Saturday afternoon in game No. 95 of the 58-team, double-elimination draw. Scoring early and often, Blue Thunder whipped the Hawks 17-0 in a game stopped after five innings by the mercy rule.

Seminole managed all of three hits in the loss. Miranda Schultz hitting a single in the first inning, Meagan Dontrich ripping a double in the second inning, and Megan Lewis legging out a triple in the fifth inning.

Dropping down into the losers' bracket, the Hawks put off elimination with a 14-13 victory over the Kentucky Tom Boys Saturday afternoon in game No. 103.

The Hawks struck for five runs in the bottom of the first. After the Tom Boys tied the score with two runs in the second inning, two in the third, and one in the fifth Seminole came back with nine runs in the home half of the fifth. It wasn't over yet. After pushing across one run in the sixth inning, the Tom Boys rallied for seven runs in the top of the seventh. Luckily for the Hawks, the rally came up one

After Dontrich hit into fielder's choice, forcing Smith at the plate, Mary Ann Brown walked to load the bases. An out later, Lindsey Manz hit a singled to plate Wright and Jackie Crispell singled home Dontrich.

Two teens arrested for murder of Jordan's father

By RANDALL CHASE
 Associated Press Writer

LUMBERTON, N.C. — After a weekend of wild speculation surrounding the slaying of basketball star Michael Jordan's father, authorities arrested two teen-agers and said the motive seemed to be simple highway robbery.

The suspects, two 18-year-olds with criminal records, were caught in part through calls they made from James Jordan's car phone over several days following his slaying last month, police said.

The two allegedly had set out to rob someone, never imagining their victim would be the father of the Chicago Bulls basketball star, one of the world's richest and most celebrated athletes.

"What happened to Mr. Jordan was the kind of random violence that all the public are concerned about and afraid of," said Jim Coman, director of the State Bureau of Investigation. "It could have been any one of us."

The 56-year-old Jordan was shot in the chest more than three weeks ago, apparently after he parked his car to take a nap along the gravel entrance to a store on U.S. 74 near Lumberton in southeastern North Carolina, authorities said.

His body, found floating in a South Carolina creek Aug. 3, was not identified until Friday.

FBI agents said Saturday they were looking into the possibility of kidnapping and at Jordan's business interests in South Carolina. Questions also had been raised about the possibility of links between Jordan's death and his son's well-known gambling.

But on Sunday officials arrested Larry Martin Demery of Rowland and Daniel Andre Green of Lumberton on charges of murder, armed robbery and conspiracy. They were jailed without bond pending their first court appearance today.

"They had conspired to rob before they left home," said Cumberland County Sheriff Morris Bedsole. "I don't know if they knew who, what or where. This is what they ended up with."

Has FHSAA bitten off more than it can chew?

Can they do that?

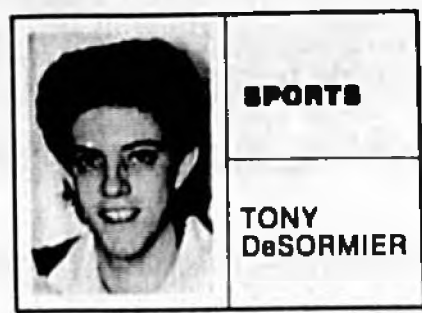

The Florida High School Activities Association has tackled a task that parents have found exasperatingly difficult since James Dean and Marlon Brando defined the soul of rebellion: how to keep teen-agers from acting like teen-agers.

At the heart of this endeavor is the FHSAA's "Thumbs Up to Sportsmanship" campaign.

This year, the FHSAA has published a manual which defines sportsmanship, outlines the responsibilities of all involved in athletic events (even the media), and gives "behavior guidelines."

Can they do that?
 Not "Can they do that?" in the sense that is it the FHSAA's place to define appropriate behavior for those who participate in athletic events, but "Can they do that?" in that it's a task that seems overwhelming in its scope.

The problem is that while the intentions and goals of this campaign are laudable and indisputable, its implementation can't help but border on the extreme. By explaining, defining, and categorizing a philosophy such as sportsmanship, you effectively throttle the liberties it's meant to guide.

SPORTS

Apparently, celebrating the virtues of sportsmanship, which the FHSAA does with its Fred E. Rozelle Sportsmanship awards, isn't enough. It's sobering that the FHSAA believes that the behavior of athletes, coaches, fans, students, et al. has degenerated to the point that such guidelines are necessary.

Are they?
 Sporting events, no matter how cleanly-contested they may be, bear a whiff of mayhem. The passion that drives athletes to compete, the pride fans feel for their schools, the emotion generated by the pursuit of a championship create an intoxicating fever.

That's what athletics are all about. That's why we play sports, that's why we keep score, that's why we hand out trophies. Competition does not exist without emotion. If you didn't care, you wouldn't/shouldn't be there.

It's that caring, a fire kindled by pride and fanned by competition, that the values of sportsmanship try to keep from burning out of control.

I respect the motivation of the FHSAA, but wonder if these efforts are too restrictive. The guidelines published in the FHSAA's manual, if followed to the letter, would make high school athletics a hollow experience and rob the activity of much of its educational value.

No reasonable person could disagree with such common-sense guidelines as "respecting the property of the school" or "showing respect for injured athlete when he/she is removed from the contest," but idiots who violate those tenets aren't going to be dissuaded by anyone's published guidelines.

On the other hand, telling fans not to boo an official's decision or to "refrain from being a second-guesser" concerning a coach's strategy is pulling in the reins a little tight. There has to be room for reasonable human interaction. And that interaction is built on an accepted level of antagonism.

Perhaps what the FHSAA is trying to do with this campaign is reduce that accepted level of antagonism. That way, it takes more for a situation to get out of hand.

Rather than promote sportsmanship by attempting to constrain the human element that makes athletics special, the pursuit of the values of sportsmanship would be better served by the severe censure of the individuals who violate those values and celebrating those who embody them.

Brown walked to load the bases. Megan Lewis then launched a two-run double, scoring Wright and Dontrich. Manz followed with a single that brought in Brown. Lewis scored on a double from Crispell.

Schultz was intentionally walked to load the bases, but that move backfired as Mustakas drew a walk to force in Manz. Duvall delivered a sacrifice fly to bring home Crispell. Smith then cleaned the bases with a triple that chased home Schultz and Mustakas. Heather Krack, pinch-hitting for Wright, then singled home Smith.

Manz led the Hawks in the win over the Tom Boys with three singles, two RBI, and one run scored. Dontrich added three singles and two runs. Smith tripled, singled, scored a run, and drove in three. Duvall and Crispell each had a double, single, one run, and two RBI.

Mustakas contributed two singles, two runs, and an RBI. Lewis had a double, one run, and two RBI. Wright finished with a single, two runs, and an RBI. Brown singled and scored a run. Krack had a single and an RBI. Schultz scored two runs.

Seminole's run ended in game No. 108 Saturday evening. After four innings, the Hawks

High-powered offense, highly-rated kicker give FSU fans hope of finally finishing No. 1

By BRENT KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Bobby Bowden has won, won and won in 17 years at Florida State. But he's never finished one.

Now, for the third time in the last six seasons, most preseason forecasters are pointing at another of Bowden's gifted teams to bring Florida State its first national title.

"There's no room for error when you're picked No. 1," said Bowden, whose 1988 and 1991 teams also began their seasons as the favorite to win a national title.

"This summer, the fans would all tell me, 'We know this is the year, coach,'" Bowden related. "They want to know if we've got a kicker and how about Charlie's shoulder."

Quarterback Charlie Ward, last year's Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year, has recovered from April surgery to repair an injury to his left (non-throwing) shoulder suffered during the basketball season.

Freshman Scott Bentley of Aurora, Colo., is being counted on to reverse the school's recent kicking woes.

Missed field goals probably cost the Seminoles successive national title in 1991 and 1992 and also in 1987.

Last season Bowden became the first college coach to take a team to at least 10 victories in six straight years. During that run, the Seminoles have lost just nine games - five to Miami and one apiece to Auburn, Clemson, Florida, and Southern Mississippi.

Florida State's traditionally rugged schedule doesn't get any easier this time around. Bowden will not only seek to extend the Seminoles' unbeaten mark in ACC games, but must somehow get past Kansas, Miami, Notre Dame and Florida in non-conference tests.

"We've made our name playing tough schedules, and if we ever win a national championship one of these years, no one will be able to say we backed into it," said Bowden. "If we end up doing it, it will be with a great ballclub."

The November schedule appears particularly difficult. The Seminoles sandwich road games at Notre Dame and Florida around a home ACC contest against North Carolina State in the final three weeks.

But by that time, Bowden is hopeful defensive coordinator Mickey Andrews will have rebuilt a unit hit with the loss of six starters.

The Seminoles have nearly everybody back off an offensive team that averaged 61 points and more than 600 yards in its final three games last year after junking Bowden's traditional offense for a "fast-break" attack to take advantage of Ward's basketball demeanor.

"I hate going back to the huddle and taking a long time," admits Ward.

"We think we found ourselves last year when we began to feature the shotgun formation," continued Bowden. "As long as you have Charlie Ward, you have to think shotgun."

In his first year as a starter, the 6-foot-1, 185-pound Ward passed for 2,647 yards and 22 touchdowns and ran for another 504 yards and six more scores to lead Florida State to an 11-1 season and a final No. 2 ranking.

He will also benefit from the presence of a half dozen veteran receivers led by sophomore Tamarick Vanover, the ACC's Newcomer of the Year in 1991 when he caught 42 passes for four touchdowns and scored twice on kickoff returns.

Seniors Matt Frier, Kevin Knox, and Lonnie Johnson and Juniors O'Mar Ellison and Kez McCorvey will also be busy in an eight-man rotation planned by Bowden to keep fresh receivers on the field.

Tailbacks Sean Jackson and Lake Howell High School graduate Marquette Smith will try to pick up some of the slack created by a preseason knee injury to last year's leading rusher, Tiger McMillon. Fullback William Floyd will handle short yardage situations.

Junior guard Patrick McNeil is the headliner on an experienced offensive line which lost veterans Robbie Baker and Robert Stevenson.

However, a host of new faces will find playing time on the defensive side where All America linebacker Marvin Jones - the fourth player taken in the NFL draft - and a trio of second round picks, Dan Footman, Carl Simpson and Reggie Freeman, have departed.

"Defensively we do not have the depth we had a year ago, but they should improve each week if they can stay healthy," said Bowden.

Senior Todd McIntosh and sophomore Derrick Alexander are being counted on to lead the defensive line while outside linebacker Derrick Brooks and cornerbacks Corey Sawyer and Clifton Abraham give the Seminoles three of the best in the country at their positions.

Sawyer and Vanover give Florida State two of the best return men in the nation while redshirt freshman Sean Liss is the likely punter.

BIG 2 DAY CO

Reporter's Notebook

Call pope 'Lalek' to get his attention

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

DENVER (AP) - Bits of confetti found scattered along the papal path during his four-day visit.

What's one sure way to get the pope's attention? Call him "Lalek."

It's the childhood nickname of Pope John Paul II, who was born Karol Wojtyla. It means "tiny Karol," and Roy Kerr, a Las Vegas man of Polish extraction, called it out as the pope was leaving the St. Malo retreat house after hiking in the woods in Estes Park, outside of Denver, on Friday.

The startled pontiff immediately turned and grasped him with outstretched hands across the crowd control barriers.

If Monsignor Stanislaw Dziwisz, the pope's personal secretary, briefed his boss on the content of the local papers after his respite in Colorado's high country, His Holiness might have done a second take at a Denver Post headline: "BEAR APPARENTLY KILLS LOGGER. EATS BODY."

Less than 100 miles from the papal hiking trail, a logger cutting fence posts was mutilated by a black bear. It was "the second Colorado incident in recent weeks in which a bear ate a body," said the newspaper, which provided readers with some tips on "what to do if encountering a bear."

There was one bit of sacred turf at Mile High Stadium where the thousands upon thousands of papal pilgrims were forbidden to tread during a welcome for the pope on Thursday night. Groundskeepers cordoned off the infield where the baseball expansion team the Colorado Rockies play catch (and sometimes miss) before record crowds.

Since the pope borrowed their playground, they have performed some minor miracles on the road, winning six a row.

Archbishop John Foley, the Vatican's communications director, thought the security guards were "certainly thorough" at Denver's Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, where the pope said Mass for church hierarchy Saturday morning.

"They made the cardinals and all several hundred of us bishops remove our pectoral crosses before going through the metal detectors. But it was no big deal. I got the same one back." Members of the episcopacy hang the large crosses, usually made of a gold alloy, from a chain around the neck.

At Cherry Creek State Park, site of a huge papal slumber party before the pope said Mass there Sunday, security had a decidedly Western flavor. Police rode the ridges on horseback and patrolled the woods on trail bikes.

They had few problems with lost youths, but they did have to track down several lost buses. Many drivers of the 1,700 chartered buses transporting the papal pilgrims to various events came from out of town, some from out of state.

Police division chief Miriam Reed, who monitored goings-on at the park, was among many who were full of praise for the behavior of the youthful throng: "What a wonderful bunch of kids. They're so polite."

A high school gym teacher called a radio talk show with the suggestion that "we keep these kids around for a couple months to teach our Denver youth some manners."

Denver Post columnist Chuck Green wrote: "The week provided a welcome relief after a summer of violence in Denver when gunfire ricocheted off the nightly TV news."
