Cop squad continues to fight drug trade

By NICK PPEIPAUP Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD + Four officers on the Sanford police department QUAD-Squad have logged over 200 arrests since the drug task force was Implemented this past September.

QUAD stands for Quick Uniformed Attack on Drugs. Officers are on immediate call, and travel on bikes, in vehicles, or any other mode of transportation which is called for on a particular

Most of the QUAD-Squad calls are in direct response to phone calls made to Sanford police by citizens who are helping support law enforcement in the crackdown against drug sales and abuse.

Police Chief Ralph Russell presented the Sanford city commission with a summary report of the first four months' activities Monday night. The commissioners were impressed.

Russell's statistics showed a total of 352 phone calls received from citizens, and 1,796 situations

DiLisio says he lied in '76 murder trial

By IKE FLORES Associated Press Writer

Taking the witness stand again.

almost 20 years after the murder trial. DiListo told a judge that police coerced him into lies that sent Spaziano to the shadow of the electric chair.

"I built up the courage to face this and deal with it out in the open," Dillisto, 38, said Tuesday, explaining his newfound religious faith.

Spaziano, a former Outlaws molorcycle gang member, was convicted in 1978 of the knife-slaying of Orlando hospital clerk Laura Lynn Harberts, 18, whose body was found at a rural dump site and his father had duped and in Seminole County in August

DiLisio testified in 1976 that Spaziano had shown him two bodies at the dump site and bragged about torturing and killing women. Prosecutors said then that without DiLisio - an Outlaws aspirant who hung around with Spaziano - they could not have obtained a conviction.

On Tuesday, Dillisto solded and said he was righting a horrible wrong by recanting his testimony. "I don't know whether Joe Spa-ziano is innocent or guilty," he said at the hearing to determine whether Spaziano gets a new trial.

"That's not my motive at all," DiLisio replied when asked if he was changing his story to save the 50-year-old Spaziano's life. "I just want to set the slate clean for what I did.

Butch Strine tapped Employee of the Year

By NICK PPEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Lloyd N. "Butch" Strine has been named Employee of the Year for the city of Sanford. The presentation came at the start of Monday night's city commission meeting.

Strine has been employed by the city for over 15 years. He started as a maintenance worker, and progressed through the ranks to his present position as facilities maintenance superintendent.

Mayor Bettye Smith read the official proclamation. "This continued advancement is due to his continued pursuit of training, education, and especially the friendly and willing attitude he brings to his Job." she said.

"In reviewing his record it was surprising how many letters of appreciation were there. These are from various community groups and individuals, as well as several internal memos, all conveying appreclation for assistance in varied tasks, often under difficult eircumstances," she continued,

Smith said Strine's safety record and that of his department is exemplary, even though his crew works in dangerous situations including work with high voltage equipment, high-pressure gases, and heavy traffic. She said there have been no injuries during his tenure in the department.

"I would say," Smith added, "that being associated with Butch Strine and the others like him, is one of the most rewarding aspects of being mayor, and I know I speak on behalf of the others on the city commission as well."

Strine was selected from the dozen Employee of the Month recipients of this past year. For his top award. Strine receives a certificate, plaque for outstanding service, the city hall parking space of his choice for one year, an additional day off work with pay, and a See Strine, Page 5A

Senate GOP: Jennings next leader

By ADAM YEOMANS Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Sen. Tont Jennings of Orlando, who also represents portions of Seminole County, has been tapped as the first Republican woman to lead the Florida Senate after her GOP colleagues named her as the next president.

Jennings, who was first elected to the Legislature 20 years ago, will assume the post in November if Republicans hold their majority in this year's election.

The GOP became the Senate's majority party after the 1994 election for the first time in more than a century. The party holds a 22-18 edge over the Democrats.

Proposed city charter changes to be studied

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Study plans have been mapped out for the Sanford City Commission regarding proposed changes to the city charter. A special work session has been called for on-January 29.

Following a brief discussion on the way to approach the recommendations, Mayor Bettye Smith suggested the matter beundertaken during a work sesston, but not as part of the normal session held prior to regular commission meetings.

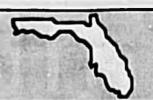

"We need to discuss this by itself," she said, "so I would prefer to have a session devoted to just this one item." January 29th was suggested because it would not interfere with other regular meetings and Martin Luther King Jr. Day which would fall on the next Monday without a scheduled meeting.

Much of the lengthy charter change document contains deletions. A dozen pages have been allocated for the description of the Sanford city limits. These have been suggested to be deleted. In place of the lengthy description, the charter study committee has recommended the wording be. "The corporate limits of the City of Sanford, Florida, shall be those in effect on the date this Charter is ratified by Jennis was involved in a drug scheme organized by the Call cartel of Colombia, Belgian authorities said.

Hollywood restaurant: drug site

FORT LAUDERDALE - Eight people have been charged in a drug conspiracy in which a Hollywood restaurant was used as the dealing site, federal prosecutors said.

Four of the eight, Paul Sanzaro, Frank Schiero, Anthony Robert Caucci and Anthony Lawrence Caucci Jr., were forced to turn over to the government their interests in the restaurant. Hemmingway Restaurant & Lounge.

U.S. Attorney Kendali Coffey said a judge would decide the future of the restaurant, which was closed Tuesday for an inventory by federal officials. It could be closed permanently or turned over to new management.

In addition to the four owners, Victor Davanzo, Obi Afulezi, John Revello and a man whose name was given as Gordon. were charged with conspiracy and importing cocaine or heroin or both into the United States.

Neglect charge could bring $500 fine

JUPITER - A nursing home has been charged with negligence in the death of an 86-year-old woman found with unexplained bruises on her arm and chest and several fractured ribs.

Jupiter Care Center could face a fine up to $500 if convicted of the misdemeanor in the death of Nina Arnold on Aug. 23. Court documents name the center and its parent company. Beverly Enterprises, also known as Beverly Gulf Inc.

Arnold was a patient from Sept. 23, 1994, until Aug. 19, when she was admitted to Hospice of Palm Beach.

The county Medical Examiner's Office reviewed her medical records but could not find any incident that explained the injuries, according to a police report. Nursing home attorney Jack Goldberger filed a written innocent plea Monday in Palm Beach County Circuit Court. "Beverly Enterprises is deeply sorry for this woman's passing but our investigation has revealed no wrongdoing on the part of the Jupiter Care Center or anyone associated with Beverly Enterprises," Goldberger said.

Still no leads on missing teen

BUSHNELL - After sifting through some 200 tips, police have come up with no leads to help them find teen-ager Cheryl Ann Barnes who disappeared last Wednesday.

Barnes. 17, was last seen at an ATM machine in a shopping plaza close to South Sumter High School. Authorities said she withdrew $100, which they believe she planned to use for a class trip. Then she vanished.

A woman who called 911 Saturday night to report seeing Barnes' car, later admitted she made up her story, investigators said.

The teen's grandparents, William and Shirley Barnes, said the family met Monday with John Monti from Dunedin who has helped other parents locate missing children.

State pushes for cell phones to get help to battered women

From staff and wire reports

TALLAHASSEE - Theresa Huff lives with fear around the clock since a man began stalking her last April.

Two months later, she got a free cellular phone in a program designed to make victims of domestic violence safer.

It doesn't eliminate the fear. But it does ease it.

"As long as I have that phone with me, I know I'm not alone," the West Melbourne woman said Tuesday after Attorney General Bob Butterworth released guidelines for local law enforcement agencies interested in starting up a domestic violence cellular phone program.

Flanked by executives from four big cellular companies that are donating phones and free air time. Butterworth talked about the program to get free cell phones into the hands of battered women threatened by boyfriends or husbands.

Ms. Huff, 47, said she couldn't discuss many details about the case against the man charged with aggravated stalking because it was pending. She said she's called 911 only once when her stalker blocked her car in a shopping center parking lot. However, Ms. Huff said several times she's been stalked on the road and after she picked up the phone to use it. the man has sped away.

"I know it's been a deterrent," she said, adding she always has it with her.

Besides Brevard County. Seminole, Polk, Sarasota, Lee, Volusia and Pinellas have programs. Butterworth said he wants to see cell phones available statewide.

"It's been successful in the short time we've had it in place," Undersheriff Steve Harriett said. "It hasn't been in place too long in Seminole County."

"Through this initiative, we hope to provide what could really be a lifeline to potential victims throughout our state." he said.

One of the first things a man who batters his wife or girlfriend does is rip the phone out of the wall, said Patricia Grogan, who heads the Governor's Task Force on Domestic Violence.

Trish Hinton, executive director of the Florida Coalition Against Domestic Violence, said battered women are most likely to be neriously hurt or killed when they're trying to leave an

"By providing immediate access to 911, this program can help save lives," Hinton said. The phones are programmed to restrict incoming calls and allow only emergency calls out. Decisions about who gets a phone would be made at the local level by the agency running the program: state attorneys, police departments. sheriff offices or domestic abuse shelters.

Phones would go most often to women who have been abused in the past or who have gotten court orders directing their abusers to stay away, Butterworth anid. In 1994, 120,000 reports of domestic violence were made in Florida. Of those, 240 were fatal. in the first half of 1995, 113 domestic violence killings were reported. Participating phone com-panies include AT&T Wireless, BellSouth Cellular Corp., GTE Mobile Net and Sprint Cellular.

Company representatives could not estimate how many phones they would donate, but Butterworth predicted they would total at least a few thou-

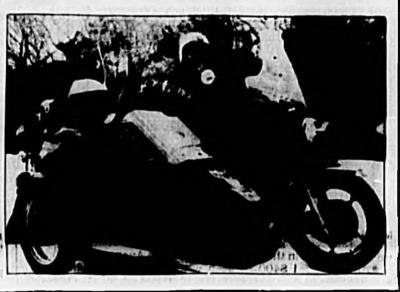

Butterworth also said individuals and businesses could donate old phones to their local shelters or law enforcement agencies.

About 80 phones are currently being used in Pinellas, Polk and Sarasota. Brevard and Seminole have 11, while Palm Beach will have 100.

Getting ready for Bike Week

As Bike Week 1995 nears in Volusia County, Sanford is becoming a popular stop-over point for motorcycle enthusiasts. On Saturday, more than 150 bikers over age 40 stopped in for lunch at the Lake Monroe in. The bikers, all members of the International Pletrands, a motorcycle club for aging riders, spent the afternoon enjoying funch at the lakefront restaurant. Bikers came from all over Central Florida Including George and Elaine Rajswasser, below, who rode their bike and side-car from Summerfield. Jeanne Sullivan, of Leesburg, at left, also led a group of bikers from her home to Sanford.

Legislative panel keeping weights in state prison exercise rooms

By ADAM YEOMANS Associated Press Writer

Herald Photos by Regar Harnach

TALLAHASSEE - Florida legislators may not like muscle-bound inmates pumping Iron, but a House committee rebuffed a measure to remove weight-lifting equipment from prisons by year's end.

Instead, the House Corrections Committee approved a proposal to take away the weights when state officials decide prisons are adequately staffed. That scenario won't happen anytime said Fiorida would make prisons more dangerous and find itself facing the same publicity as Georgia if the state took away the weights. In Georgia, inmates started lifting each other when the state removed barbella from its prisons last fall.

'They're lifting each other. They're still lifting weights." said Crady, whose amendment eliminating the deadline to remove the weights was approved by the panel Tuesday. 'it's an embarrassing situation. and you know your news media are going to be in prisons watching these inmates lift each

Rep. Mark Flanagan, R. Bradenton, proposed the bill (HB 95) requiring the Department of Corrections to remove all weights from prisons by Dec. 31 and donate them to public schools, another government agency or a charitable organization.

Flanagan said he hoped to restore the original deadline in the "Prison Safety Act of 1996" as it works its way through the Legislature. He said he is trying to find a Senate sponsor for the

"Not having weights in prison will make prison sater for inmates and guards," he said.

But most House panel members, Corrections Department officials and a union representative for Florida's 16,000 prison guards said the measure would have the opposite effect.

They said prisons already are understaffed, and the weights are one of the ways guards manage inmates. Take away the weights, and that will only give inmates more time on their hands because there's not enough work to keep all of them

Guards hampered by low pay, short staffing

By ADAM YEOMANS Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Low wages, lack of staffing, management favoritism and undependable security equipment are top concerns of the guards who watch over Florida's 64,000 inmates, a new report

The state's prisons rarely operate at their authorized staff levels because so many guards leave for higher-paying jobs with counties or other states, according to the House Corrections Committee's report on prison staffing released Tuesday.

The situation poses a threat to prison staffs, correctional institutions and potentially the public, the report said.

The findings come at a time when lawmakers have toughened sentencing laws and taken many recreational amenitles away from inmates. Florida's prison population also has soared since 1985 and is expected to go even higher over the next 10 years.

We've known for the last few years it's at a critical level," said corrections committee Chairman Bob Sindler, D-Apopka. "And a lot of things that the public wants us to do, we have to have the officers in order to make it happen."

Florida's prison population has soared from 28,310 in 1985 to 64,000 today and is expected to exceed 110,000 by the year 2005. The cost of operating the prison system has quadrupled from $310 million in 1985 to $1.3 billion last year, the report said. As a result, the number of attacks on guards and inmates by other prisoners has increased. on officers increased 250 percent from 397 in 1987 to 993 in "This is a dangerous job. Our staff sees more felons on a daily basis than the average person sees in their whole career," said Corrections Secretary Harry Singletary.

The report noted that Florida has been free of major riots or hostage situations and the number of escapes has declined. primarily due to increased security measures.

But the report said the Legislature and Corrections must deal with the problem of turnover among prison guards.

"The popular fixation with getting tough on crime' by getting tough on inmates will make prisons more costly, more difficult to manage, and more hazardous for correctional officers," the report said.

In a survey of 220 guards, the report found low pay was the leading reason for guards to seek work elsewhere, followed by a lack of promotional opportunities, perceived management favoritism and deficient facilities and equipment. The state has about 16,000 guards.

Lawmakers should approve a competitive pay plan in order to reduce turnover, the report said. The department said turnover increased more than 300 percent from 1991 through November 1995.

A guard's starting salary is $18,109 a year compared to the average starting salary for all correctional officers in state and local governments of $18,899.

The Legislature created a step-pay plan to pay more ex-perienced officers more but lawmakers have never funded the plan. As a result, many experienced guards are earning The number of inmate assaults close to today's entry-level wages, the report said.

Contractor sues Jett Aire

SANFORD - Spolski General Contractor, Inc., has filed a lawsuit against Jett Aire Group. Inc., and its president, Bobby D.

The suit, filed in Seminole County Circuit Court last Friday, contains three counts, relating to the payment for construction of the Jett Aire facility at the Orlando Sanford Airport by

One count, labeled as "Fraud in the inducement against Jett

SUNLAND PARK, N.M. -Maria De Franco has heard the reports about Mexican criminals slipping over the border to rob trains and sell drugs.

Still, she's not thrilled by a 1.3-mile-long steel fence the U.S. Border patrol to secting to stop them.

"It's not necessary," De Franco said Tuesday as the agency began building the fence. "The majority of people who committing crimes."

Authorities have attributed burglaries and larcenies in Sunland Park, a town of 10,000 located on the Mexican border. to criminals coming into the United States from nearby

Anapra, a section of Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

The Border Patrol says the $150,000 steel fence also is needed to help deter illegal immigration. The region became particularly volatile after the Border Patrol blockaded a section of the Rio Grande in nearby El Paso. Texas, pushing many illegal crossers west into New Mexico, authorities have said.

"It's a problem area, to make a long story short," said Border Patrol spokesman Doug Mosier. "We hope this fence will gencrally make the area more manageable."

Expected to be completed in about a month, the 10-foot-high fence will seal off a desert plain bordered by a steep mesa and Mount Cristo Rey, a craggy mountain with a large cross on

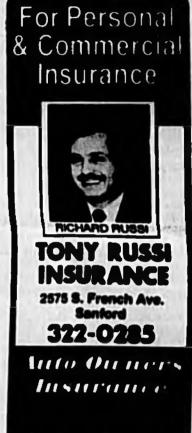

It will be the first of its kind in New Mexico. Similar barriers have been constructed along the border in Arizona and California.

Moster said the fence will funnel illegal immigrants to rougher terrain outside town where they will be easier to apprehend, and will make it harder for criminals to come and go as they do now. Police Chief Lalo Medina said he is grateful for the assistance the fence will provide, although he noted that border crossers account for only a small portion Sunland Park. "I'm delighted," he said.

Not everyone is as enthuslastic.

"It's contradictory to the climate of cooperation and friendship that has been developing between the United States and Mexico," said Manuel Hernandez, spokesman for the Mexican Consulate in El Paso. "It sends a very negative

Men at the top juggle work, family

By MAGGIE JACKSON AP Business Writer

Bill Galston quit a high-flying White House post to spend more time with his son. Rayvon Williams found a way to leave work by 4 p.m. and still win two promotions at Tandem Computers in a year.

Unlike executives of a generation ago, many ambitious men today are refusing to spend years as exiles from home. They're yearning for family time, grappling with the desire for it and taking sometimes dramatic steps to get it.

In one of the most high-profile cases, American Express Co. president Jeff Stiefler resigned in September to spend more time with his family.

"It's similar to the path that women were breaking 10 or 20 years ago," said Kathleen Gerson, author of "No Man's Land," a book on how men balance work and family. "Men are breaking down barricades, and there's not a lot of support for them.

Of course, women also are juggling the demands of work and home and dealing increasingly with challenges ranging from aging parents to child care. Still, men in top posts — who still make up the large majority of executives - face special challenges in their quest for balance.

At a time of increased downsizing, global competition and demands from boards and investors, executives face growing pressures at the office. Family relationships suffer more than ever.

Yet men are still expected to live for work, and indeed many would feel naked without their job titles.

"If a guy says he's reducing his commitment to work, people say 'That's wonderful.' But there's always a twinge of 'Does he still have what it takes?" said James Levine, director of The Fatherhood Project at the Families and Work Institute in New York.

There's also of course a reluctance by high-ranking men to delve deeper into the world of domestic life - a distant realm where fawning associates and luxurious perks are absent.

As a result of such influences, men don't often use the growing number of leave programs or support systems geared toward family needs. More men do than in the past, but far fewer than women.

Special thanks to law enforcement

Florida residents may not have liked the lower-than-usual temperatures Monday, but it had a marked effect on crime. Not only were fewer persons arrested, but the wind and cold temperatures were probably responsible for a low number of residential burglaries and auto thefts as compared to normal days.

As a result, it was a relatively slow day for area law enforcement officers. The cold weather apparently kept criminals and lawbreakers off the streets for at least that one

No one reported being mugged by a robber as they walked the streets at night. There were very few vehicular burglaries, and drug sales and solicitation for prostitution, which generally calls for people to be out on the streets, was virtually at a standstill.

The effect of the weather on crime was very evident at the Seminole Towne Center. Only two retail theft arrests were made. In both cases, items persons attempted to take from stores without paying, a pair of gloves and a man's jacket, were clearly needed as protection against the cold weather.

Very few traffic stops were made. Possibly the traffic was lighter because of the cold weather.

Domestic violence cases were also at a low Monday. Normally, officers respond to five or six calls on the average day. Only one arrest was made. Perhaps more time was spend by couples in cuddling than arguing.

Even with the cold weather however, our law enforcement officers were out in full force. While some of their uniform clothing is appropriate for low temperatures, much is not. Yet they patrol their beats, and possibly cover up the fact that they are shivvering under

It would be foolish to believe that we are going to see any continuing reduction in crime, but this one day was certainly refreshing.

At least we have that to be thankful for. However, lest we forget, our law officers have to be out regardless of whether it's in the 80s or in the 20s, whether it's pouring rain or scorching heat.

We believe they deserve our thanks. They perhaps weren't directly responsible for a low crime rate Monday, but they were just as available then as they are any other day.

What we are teaching

I've often asked myself just like others, what is wrong with today's generation. They don't seem to have that moral fiber prevalent in past generations.

The fault doesn't rest on the kids but instead the teachers, not the academic teacher but that individual who teaches them how to say thank you or please, when to be strong or show compassion. how not to worry about keeping up with anyone. but to look and discover what's inside of themselves.

I read an article in the paper about some rhinos that were being killed on a game reserve in Africa. They found out that a pack of young bull elephants were catching the lone rhino and stomping it to death. They noticed in this particular herd of elephants there was no adult male bull elephant. These juventles had no teacher.

We as teachers need to re-evaluate ourselves and look at what we are teaching.

Rubin raids federal pension funds the "original intent" of certain ambiguous sections and clauses that the Founders included in the 2-century-old document.

For instance, there are some (including yours truly) who argue that the "presentment" clause, which appears in Article I, Section 7, gives the president line-item veto authority.

And there were some (not including yours truly) who suggested last winter, during debate on the Congressional Coverage Act, that the "speech and debate" clause, which appears in Article I, Section 6, granted Congress immunity from the laws of the land.

But there is one clause that is as straightforward as any appearing in the Constitution. Article I, Section 8 clearly states that only "Congress shall have the power ... to borrow money on the credit of the United States."

This occurred last Nov. 15 when Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin raided two federal pension trust funds. First, he took $21.5 billion from the federal employees Thrift Savings Plan.

is not "borrowing" the money, they say. Rather, the money taken from the federal Thrift Savings Plan was merely a "conversion to cash." The funds taken from the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund was simply a "disinvestment.

This rarely evoked clause has suddenly been thrust to the center of the ongoing federal budget battle.

But this is just the usual Washington doublespeak. The fact is that the government is required to replace the pension funds it converted to cash and disinvested, while also making up any lost interest. To the minds of most Americans, when you have to pay back money with interest, that means you borrowed

There is another aspect of the Treasury Department's pension raid that should give pause to the nation's nearly 3 million federal employees. Secretary Rubin thought nothing of taking $39.8 billion out of the civil service trust fund even though the White House knows that it is underfunded by more than $500 billion.

The hypocrisy of this is that the Clinton administration is cracking down on private employers who raid their own pension funds. "I want to send a very clear and unambiguous message to employers," said Labor Secretary Robert Reich (barely two weeks after Rubin's pension grab). "Hands off. This is not your money. This money belongs to employees.

Errant gene or remote clicker

WASHINGTON .- Scientists say they've isolated the gene that makes people impulsive. novelty-seeking and fickle. The gene, identified in separate studies in Cincinnati and Jerusalem, is thought to instruct cells to manufacture a peculiar type of dopamine receptor, a part of the brain's communication system. People who have this gene, according to a report in this month's issue of Nature Genetics, also record higher novelty-seeking scores on personality tests.

I don't want to start a fight with the highly respected academics who identified this suspect gene, but I respectfully suggest a follow-up study: Check to see how many of the "impulsives" happen to have cable and remote channel selectors for their TV sets.

It is my theory after two years' intense observation of one otherwise normal subject (me) that the cable/clicker combination is at least as likely as any errant gene to produce the fickleness these scientists describe.

I haven't published my findings, but I don't mind sharing my notes:

Bubject sits down with spouse in front of giant screen to watch movie. Commercial comes on. Subject clicks to basketball game. Spouse, inexplicably, develops attitude. Subject apologizes, noting that he didn't know she was interested in commercial. Clicks back to movie until next commercial, then absent-mindedly clicks back to basketball game. Spouse leaves room.

Or this entry: Subject and sports-loving son are watching Washington Bullets basketball game when, during a 20-second timeout, subject clicks to bowling and then to football and then to tennis. Before subject can check the hockey scores and click back to the Bullets, son leaves room.

Or this one: Subject discovers how to program remote-control device for all channels then carrying shows he's interested in. Learns that pressing a single button will allow him to keep up with Redskins football game. "In Living Color" rerun. Discovery Channel piece on competition between jackals and vultures on the Serengett Plain and a Poirot episode on PBS series "Mystery!" Subject heard to mutter 'Who needs family?" or words to that effect.

Serious business: I have noticed and been alarmed by my growing intolerance for slow-moving stories or games. Or data bits, for that matter, since it was while I was using my personal computer that I first noticed my new impatience.

I cut my journalistic teeth in the days when searching for a specific piece of information (What is Newt Gingrich's mother's name, and where does she live?) meant walking to the "morgue." finding the right file drawer, thumbing through scores of Gingrich envelopes, and trying to figure out which one might contain the needed information. Twenty minutes work, unless you happened to strike up a conversation with a colleague looking up something else, in which case a half-hour was pretty good time.

Now I call up "PostHaste," our library program, and type in "FI Gingrich and mother and Chung." And then 1 drum my fingers and grit my teeth while my antiquated PC consumes 9, 10 or a maddening 12 seconds to locate the appropriate story.

Why don't the scientists tell me why I find it more frustrating to wait several seconds for a computer to do its thing than to waste half an hour doing it myself? Back to cable and the remote: What technology has provided is both an unprecedented menu of choices and the unprecedented ability to (in today's impatient parlance) "cut to the chase." The combination is a potential disaster.

The cable-

clicker combination is at least as likely

as any errant gene to produce

these scientists

the fickleness

describe.

It may be a disaster already. Our growing ability to eliminate the slow-moving aspects of our entertainment lives and go hopping from one peak to another is not without cost. Stand-up comics, movie makers and others who earn their living entertaining us no longer "waste" time with setups and plot develop-ment lest we reach for the remote and click them right off our screen.

The result is a loss-even in books and newspapers-of subtlety, anticipation and nuance and, in the process, a coarsening of our discourse, our relationships, and our society. The researchers think it's caused by an errant gene. I say the culprit may be much closer to

Free speech for the obnoxious

There's a great "Saturday Night Live" sketch that begins with a family sliting down to dinner. Someone takes a swig of milk and starts to gag, realizing it's sour. But instead of throwing away the rancid liquid, he asks his loved ones to taste it to see just how bad it is. Eager to oblige, everyone in the family takes a big, nauscating gulp. Yes, they all agree, that milk sure is disgusting.

A similar story is playing out on the internet these days. A lot of people are coming across words and images that deeply disturb them. But instead of clicking the mouse or hitting the escape key, they are spreading the vulgarity to their friends and family.

Consider the recent case at Cornell University. Four freshmen created a list called "75 reasons why women (bitches) should not have freedom of speech" and e-malled it to their friends.

the escape key,

vulgarity to their

they are

Their reasons ranged from the merely offensive "She doesn't need to talk to get me a beer" to the downright despicable "If she can't speak, she can't cry rape." Though the list was originally sent to a small group of frat-boy types, it was forwarded many times and eventually wound up in the electronic mailboxes of people who found it deeply offensive. And, as the old commercial goes. they told two friends. And they told two friends. And so on. And so on.

Pretty soon women's groups were urging the university to reprimand the "Cornell four" for sexually harassing Cornell's female students. The problem was, the boys' deed did not fit the legal definition of sexual

The mere fact that something is obnoxious is never proof that it is harassment." says Nadine Strossen, president of the American Civil Liberties Union. Strossen, who writes about this and other feminist issues in her recent book. "Defending Pornography: Free Speech, Sex and the Fight for Women's Rights" (Scribner), says that contrary to popular bellef, sexual harassment is very difficult to prove in a court of law.

Expressive conduct can be used in a way that does constitute harassment," she says, but it must meet some very exacting criteria. It must be severe and repeated. It must be targeted to a particular individual or group of individuals -- who find it offensive, are a captive audience and are on the lower end of a hierarchal structure. And the perpetrator must have consistently refused to change his or her conduct after being informed that it was offensive.

The Cornell case didn't come close to meeting the legal definition of sexual harassment, and yet it certainly fit the cultural one. And that, says Strossen, is why the sexual-harassment issue is such a minefield. Misunderstanding of this charge -by people on all sides of the issue -- has led to widespread paranola in workplaces and campuses, and it has trivialized genuine harassment cases.

Cornell did not help this muddle. Although it conceded that these young men were not guilty of sexual harassment, it still punished them, requiring the infamous four to attend sensitivity classes and do 50 hours of community service work.

That to me is Orwellian newspeak to say we are not going to discipline you and then enact a punishment," says Strossen.

Why should feminists like Nadine Strossen and myself be upset that a bunch of Neanderthals had to go to sensitivity classes? Because feminists, of all people, should never allow the right of free speech to be compromised.

Former cigar capital of world enjoys resurgence in smoking

By LIGA HOLEWA Associated Press Witter

TAMPA — Josephine Puerta's hands are knotted and wrinkled. Her nails are painted a soft shade of pink that stands out sharply against the brown tobacco leaves staining her Angertipe.

At 85, her fingers are too rigid to roll the leaves as quickly as they once did, and the palms of her hands have lost some of the sensitive touch that tells her exactly how much tobacco she needs for each cigar.

But she has experience on her side. Since 1928, Puerta has been rolling eights in a city once considered the eight-making capital of the world.

After years of decline, her handmade longfellows and furnas are more in demand today than they've been in decades, thanks to an unexpected resurgence in eight smoking. "It used to be that only old men smoked ciers, and they didn't spend much money," said Stanford Newman, president of the Cigar Manufacturers Association of Tamps.

"But now what's happened is intelligent people, young people - I won't call them yupples, but young people who are affluent -started smoking cigars. And when they go into cigar stores, they want good products. So a handmade cigar has become a status symbol.'

In 1994, sales of cigars increased 9.3 percent, marking the industry's first increase in the United States since 1970. according to the Cigar Association of America. Sales increased again about 9 percent in 1995.

The popularity, however, is elative. The 2.3 billion cigars pold in the United States in 1994 are less than a quarter of the 8 364, at the height of cigars' And even today, most of the es come in the cheap cigar legory: those made by thine, wrapped in paper and They sell for about a They sell for about a erter each and account for more than 90 percent of sales. But most of the growth has come in the premium end, cigars that sell for anywhere from $1 to more than $20 each.

Demand for those c which are filled with half tobacco leaves and then wrapped with half leaven, often all by nang - has been increasing by about 40 percent a year since 1992, when 100 million were sold. Fifty million premium cigars were sold in 1974. "We have people who come in here, and we just don't have the ciders to sell them. The demand to incredible," said Mario Garrido, part owner of Vincent & Tampa Cigar Co., a tiny cigar factory known as a buckeye (no-called because they once used tobacco from Ohio, the Bucheye State). There, Puerta is among seven workers who hand-roll about 275,000 cigars

Its cigars all are sold to walk-in customers or by mail order and the shop doesn't advertise, except for a small ad in the telephone book which reads: HANDMADE CIGARS. TOURISTS WELCOME. Its owner, Vincent Ruilova, has been running the factory since

To keep costs low, Vincent & Tampa cigars are packaged in a simple, two-color cardboard box and often sold without a cigar

But the company will have to raise prices by $5 to $7 a box in 1996, Garrido said, because the demand for cigare has pushed the cost of tobacco to twice what it was just a few years ago.

in that sense, Garrido believes, buckeyes may become the victime of the cigar's success. The demand has driven the price of tobacco so high that it is tougher for smaller operations to even get a steady supply of tobacco, which is bought quickly and in huge quantities by large fac-

"Small buckeyes like this can't survive more than a year or two," Garrido predicted.

"The trend indicates that more men are stepping up to their parental responsibilities. but it's clear that men have more than a mile to go before approaching parity," he said, adding that he thought the balance would change when younger executives with working wives reach the topmost

For now, many men still work doggedly on - until their home lives explode. Robert Mobley reached his limit four years ago after a failed marriage and years of working 80-hour weeks as a partner for a real estate firm. He guit and has been home since managing his investments.

"I began to look back and there was a blur in there. There was a blur with my children," said the 45-year-old Atlanta father of three. "But I realized that what I could do is not let that blur take over my life."

His colleagues reacted with disbelief and some envy. Many people - including his wife think it's odd for a father stay home. But he's insistent that he'll never go back.

Luckily, Mobley had the money to walk away. Other executives who quit, at least temporarily, often have a spouse with a career who supports the change, or find work at home or in less rigorous fields.

Stiefler, who reportedly earned a seven-figure salary, declined to be interviewed. But a statement from Harvey Golub, chairman and chief executive officer of American Express, said he resigned to "spend more time with his family" and would pursue other "business opportumittee."

Such statements don't always tell the full story. Stiefler quit a week after the company said it might sell the banking unit he managed and when it became clear that he was not first in line to succeed Golub.

Still, executives undoubtedly would not cite family reasons for such dramatic decisions if they didn't feel comfortable with that Rayvon Williams, director of investor relations at Cupertino, Calif.-based Tandem, said it took years of tinkering before he found a solution.

At first, he worked from home more, but found himself answering e-mail at breakfast or logging in from the backyard and spending even less time with his two some.

Her GOP colleagues praised her ability to work with both parties and help build consensus on complicated issues.

"Politics is the art of compromise," said Sen. Bill Bankhead, R-Ponte Vedra Beach. "Time and again our president has shown that she can find the middle."

Jennings comes from a long line of politicians, including a great uncle who served as governor of Pennsylvania. She served in the state House from 1976 to 1980 when she was elected to the Senate.

Dillisio said he was manipulated by police and pressured by his late father, Ralph DiLisio Sr., into testifying against Spaziano. He said his father was angry at Spaziano for having an affair with his wife, Anthony DiLisio's young stepmother.

Dilisio then tearfully recounted his father's abuse and rejection.

'All my life I wanted to get his approval as a human being," he said. "I wanted him to love me and I would have done anything for him to love me."

Ralph DiLisio Jr. has said he doesn't believe his brother's new story, noting that Anthony had waited until after their father's death to implicate him in the case. Ralph Jr. has called Anthony "a pathological liar."

The handcuffed Spaziano hunched over the defense table and looked intently at DiLisio when the witness pointed an identifying finger at him.

DiLisio was on the witness stand for four hours and was carefully led through a recital of his troubled life and recantation by Spaziano lawyer James Rusa. DiListo admitted he believed then he could be charged with perjury if he told the truth.

"I was scared to confront the truth ... afraid I would lose my house, my business and my daughter," he said.

Why did he come forward now after 20 years? Russ asked. "I don't want to may it'n a selfish reason, but in a way it is: I've got freedom now. God detests a false witness."

Spaziano has survived five death warrants.

Judge O.H. Eaton Jr. is to determine whether there is new evidence, whether DiLisio is telling the truth now or whether there is no basis for a new trial.

Snow shutdown

WASHINGTON - Snow shutdown, Day 3.

After three weeks of slippery budget politics and a two-day snow delay, federal employees in Washington were ready to return to work today - until roads proved too treacherous to risk the commute.

New snowfall Tuesday on the heels of a record blizzard forced officials to reverse a back-to-work order and declare today the week's third snow day.

The reversal came after local authorities reported that Tuesday's precipitation left snow-removal crews behind schedule, according to Office of Personnel Management spokeswoman Janice Lachance. Residential areas remained blanketed and commuter routes were too narrow and slushy to handle a morning rush hour.

Easterners emerge from hibernation

With much of the snow pushed to the side and the white beauty turned into a towering mess. Easterners are emerging from their hibernation and struggling to get back to life as it was before the blizzard of '96.

"I've been cooped up too long with my husband and I needed to see somebody else's face," said Billie Maven, who finally was able to get out of the house and drive to a video store in Stafford, Va.

But for a region that had been paralyzed from a storm that caused at least 96 deaths and dumped 1½ to 3 feet of snow, the respite may be brief.

Already, light snow fell overnight in New York. Massachusetts and Maryland. And forecasters say more snow could arrive in a storm this weekend, but it was too soon to predict how much.

Clinton vetoes welfare reform bill

WASHINGTON - Asserting that the Republican welfare overhaul bill would do little to move people from welfare to work. President Clinton vetoed the measure but pledged to work with Congress on a version more acceptable to him.

He had promised to veto the final Republican plan to overhaul the nation's primary welfare programs and end the federal guarantee of aid to the poor, although he had given tacit support to a similar version that passed the Senate with 87 votes. He said in his veto message Tuesday night that he was determined to work with Congress "to enact real. bipartisan welfare reform."

The veto was Clinton's 12th, and Congress was unlikely to override it. The final welfare bill, a melding of earlier House and Senate versions, cleared both chambers in December by margins smaller than the two-thirds majorities needed to override a veto. Only one of Clinton's previous 11 vetoes has been overridden.

Clinton charged that the bill was designed to meet an arbitrary budget target rather than to achieve serious welfare reform. He said it would make structural changes and budget cuts that would fall hardest on children and undermine states' ability to move people from welfare to work.

Budget talks at an impasse

WASHINGTON - With budget talks broken off again. Republican congressional leaders say they may try to bypass the White House and pass veto-proof spending legislation with the help of conservative Democrats.

President Clinton and the Republicans declared an impasse Tuesday following another lengthy budget assisten at the White House that failed to resolve major differences over the future of Medicare and Medicaid spending and the size of a tax cut.

In the absence of a budget agreement, there's a possibility that many government offices once again will be forced to close on Jan. 27, when the latest temporary federal funding measure expires. There already have been two government shutdowns since the budget talks began in earnest in November, furloughing some federal workers for a record total of 27 days.

Lack of a quick breakthrough also increases the danger the parties will give up any hope of an agreement and let the voters decide next November, effectively paralyzing many federal programs in the coming year.

Adjusting census figures

WASHINGTON - Federal funds and election districts nationwide are at stake as the Supreme Court examines the government's decision not to adjust 1990 census figures to make up for an undercount of minorities.

The Clinton administration and the states of Wisconsin and Oklahoma are asking the high court to rule that the government need not change the census results. But local governments including New York City, Chicago and

Los Angeles say the admitted undercount violates their residents' right to equal representation. The government should have to meet a high legal standard to justify its decision not to adjust the census count, they contend.

Chechen rebels head home

KIZLYAR, Russia - With local officials, 160 hostages and two dead comrades in tow, Chechen rebels headed home today after freeing up to 3,000 people they had held for a terrifying day in a southern Russian hospital.

The raid on the town of Kizlyar, in which at least 23 people were killed, seemed intended to bring home to the Russians that Chechen fighters are far from defeated and are capable of unleashing surprise terror attacks outside their war-ravaged republic.

Abdul Musayev, the spokesman for the Interior Ministry of Dagestan - the republic where Tuesday's raid took place told The Associated Press that at least six Dagestani officials and 160 hostages departed with the rebels.

The column of 11 buses and two trucks stopped about 6 miles from the border with Chechnya, apparently because a bridge they needed to cross had been blown up. The rebels demanded the Russian Interior Ministry allow them to use another route and guarantee safe passage through Chechnya. news reports said.

Peace in Bosnia suffers setback

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina - Peace in Bosnia suffered yet another setback when an anti-tank rocket fired from a Serb suburb slammed into a Sarajevo streetcar, killing one woman and wounding 19.

Officials of the NATO-led force policing Bosnia blamed rebel Serbs for Tuesday's rush-hour attack, the worst cease-fire violation since the Oct. 12 truce that led to last month's peace agreement. In Washington, the White House announced that President Clinton would travel to Bosnia this weekend to visit U.S. troops, but Bosnian Foreign Minister Muhamed Sacirbey suggested he skip Sarajevo.

Sacirbey said his government would meet with Clinton in the northeastern city of Tuzla, headquarters for the U.S. troops in

Clinton's sexual harassment case

Appeals court allows suit against president to proceed court's ruling that a sexual harassment case against President Clinton can go to trial has set the stage for a possible Supreme Court

The case has a few more steps before it can get to the high court, but Clinton's attorney, Robert Bennett, said, "It is a case I would expect they would hear. ... You have some very important constitutional issues

The case was brought by Paula Jones, a former Arkansas employee, who alleges that Clinton sexually harassed her during an encounter in a Little Rock hotel suite in 1991. She has said she rejected Clinton's suggestion that they engage in sex.

Bennett argued that Clinton should not be questioned under oath on such matters while serving as president.

But a three-judge panel of the 8th Circuit

if the full appeals court agreed, Bennett and Davis would get to re-argue their cases - a process that could take months.

If the 8th Circuit court declined to hear the case. Bennett then would have 90 days to file an appeal with the Supreme Court.

If the top court did agree to take the case, there's virtually no chance a trial would start before the 1996 election. The Supreme Court would not hear arguments on it until October at the earliest, and a decision would not be expected until sometime next year.

But if the Supreme Court does not take the case, the last 8th Circuit ruling would stand.

Jones told CNN through the intercom of her Long Beach, Calif., condominium: "I'm thrilled. I think the right thing has been done." And her husband, Stephen Jones, told The Press Telegram of Long Beach: "It's a real simple case of 'He says, she says,' and we believe we can prove our claims are true."

Attacks on Dole as 'November loser' could hurt GOP chances

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON - To Bob

rivals are "a bunch of kids playing under the dining room table." But the constant portrayal of him as a November loser is playing into Democratic hands.

Some Republicans dismiss the bad table manners as standard rough-and-tumble primary politics. They say strident attacks on the GOP front-runner will have little impact on the nom-

But the attacks go beyond the usual intraparty thrusts of who is the more conservative or who wants to cut taxes the most.

The daily hits are corrosive and go to the very heart of Dole's qualifications. And they give voice to reservations that many voters may harbor towards the 72-year-old candidate.

Some examples:

-"People are focusing on whether Bob Dole can beat Bill Clinton and whether Bob Dole should be the first president of the next century. ... He is not the right man," former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, campaigning in New Hampshire.

-"Bob Dole lost his nerve. ... This is not the time to start straddling," Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, at a weekend campaign rally, hitting Dole for a budget compromise with the White House.

-"Bob Dole ... has managed to change the last hurrah of Bill Clinton into night of the living dead ... a Republican leadership (without) the guts to stand for what we really believe in," former talk-show host Alan Keyes, in a debate in South Carolina last Saturday.

-"Clinton held firm (on the

him. That's not leadership." former commentator Pat seniorcitizens." Buchanan, on CNN's "Larry King Weekend."

This is the kind of footage that will show up in the general election campaigning on the Democratic side," said Larry Sabato, a political scientist at the University of Virginia. "The Republican candidates are saying the things that Clinton might like to say, but which might appear mean. So the Democrats can simply quote the Republicans. It's an old technique and it frequently works."

Nixon commercials against 1972 Democratic contender George McGovern used attacks on McGovern by Democrat

Hubert Humphrey. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's spirited effort to steal the Democratic nomination from President Carter in 1980 helped speed Carter's demise. Some of Kennedy's criticism found its way into Reagan ads.

George Bush's 1988 New Hampshire depiction of Dole as "Senator Straddle" has been revived by Gramm - and may become a factor in the general election.

Dole retains a dominant GOP lead. But many Republicans remain less than enthusiastic about him.

The repeated depiction of him by other Republicans as a relic of another era and one unable to beat Clinton must be a nightmare for Dole campaign aides. "It's something Dole will have to overcome, frankly - his age and the perception that he's a Washington insider," said Stuart Rothenberg, who publishes a political newsletter. "Older people tend to be skeptical of older candidates anyway.

That's a problem Republicans already have with Medicare and While Dole's numbers have risen in recent polls, perhaps in response to his budget role, most polis show he still trails Clinton in a head-to-head contest.

After Saturday's presidential debate in Columbia, S.C., which Dole passed up. his campaign spokesman Nelson Warfield said Dole rivals "acted like a bunch of kids playing under the dining room table while the adults dealt with serious matters."

Michael Baselice, a GOP pollster in Houston, said the chipping away at Dole "gives us a preview" of Democratic attacks to come. But he said GOP assaults on Dole "are not as damaging as when the candidate himself says something that the Democrats can hit on.'

He said the Republicans would pull together once the nomination is nailed down. But the discordant melody may linger on, long after the GOP primary song is ended.

Particularly .damaging are some of the remarks of Alexander, even though the former Education secretary isn't known for bomb throwing.

"We need to bring ourselves to say as Republicans to Senator Dole: With respect, we appreclate your long service in the Senate, but you are not the right man to be in that debate next October with Bill Clinton," Alexander said in the South Carolina debate.

The remark provoked much general applause, even though many Dole supporters were in the room.

Sen. committee approves sex bills

TALLAHASSEE - Bills that outlaw sexual relations with corpses and make it a felony for men over 21 to impregnate girls under 16 are on their way in the Senate.

After unanimous votes of approval Tuesday in the Senate Criminal Justice Committee. both measures will go next to the Ways and Means Committee.

One bill makes it a thirddegree felony child abuse offense for a man over 21 to impregnate a girl under 16.

Florida has a statutory rape law that makes it a crime for someone over 21 to have sex with teen-agers under the age of 16, regardless of the teen's consent. But as a practical matter, prosecution requires the cooperation of the minor. Warner said.

The bill will solve that dilemma because the existence of a pregnancy would enable prosecutors to go forward despite any resistance on the part of the girl, he said.

The necrophilia bill was sponsored by Sen. Pat Thomas. D-Quincy, after Leon County law enforcement officials discovered this summer they couldn't charge a murder defendant with raping the corpse of his victim.

'I can't believe this isn't already against the law," Sen. Charlie Crist. R-St. Petersburg. said before the Senate Criminal Justice Committee approved the legislation.

Leon County Undersheriff Larry Campbell told the committee Florida used to have a law against necrophilia but it was overturned by a South Florida court.

Leon officials discovered that after investigating the murder of Kathryn Moore. Autopsy results showed Mrs. Moore was sexually assaulted after her death.

Presidents have feelings

WASHINGTON — Franklin D. Roosevelt once invited a reporter to put on a dunce's cap and stand in a corner. He verbally awarded another a German Iron Cross for giving aid and comfort to the enemy through his typewriter.

FDR's fifth cousin, President Theodore Roosevelt, also expressed ire at the press. Of powerful publisher William Randolph Hearst he once said: "He preaches the gospel of envy. hatred and unrest. ... He cares nothing for the nation, nor for any citizens in it."

Harry Truman wrote, by hand. in ink, to a music critic who panned daughter Margaret's professional singing career: "I never met you, but if I do you'll need a new none and a supporter below."

Critic Paul Hume had written. in The Washington Post in 1950. that Margaret "cannot sing with anything approaching professional finish.

Sooner or later, almost every president flashes public anger with a reporter. It seems to go with the marriagy.

Bill Clinton's turn came this week, when, according to press secretary Mike McCurry, the president was irked by New York mes columnist Saftre's conclusion that Hillary Rodham Clinton was, in matters concerning Whitewater. "a congenital liar." "The president, if he were not the president, would have delivered a more forceful response to that on the bridge of Mr. Safire's nose," said McCurry, deftly changing the subject from whether Mrs. Clinton lies to whether her honor needed presidential protection. Replied Safire: "Mike McCurry has a nice instinct for the jocular." As for Clinton, he didn't disavow his spokesman's comment, saying with a laugh: 'If I were an ordinary citizen, I might give that article the response it deserves." It wasn't the first irritation the current occupant of the White House had shown a newsperson. in a long-distance news conference in 1994. CNN correspondent Christiane Amanpour, speaking from Sarajevo. suggested the administration had constantly flip-flopped in its Bosnia policy. Clinton flashed with anger.

"There have been no constant flip-flops, madam." he said

FDR had warm relations with the press, but he hated it when columnists "interpreted" his actions. One of them was Hugh Johnson, who had served Roosevelt as head of a New Deal agency but by 1937 had broken with Roosevelt and was writing a column for Scripps-Howard newspapers.

When Johnson wrote that FDR had reneged on a promise to appoint Senate Democratic leader Joe Robinson to the Supreme Court. Roosevelt summoned Johnson to the White House and said: "You know what loyal old Joe Robinson would have said about this? He would have said, 'Hugh, You are a liar, a coward and a cad."

Then, according to FDR biographer William Leuchtenberg. Roosevelt recorded that Johnson's face slowly grew red and the president repeated it: "You are a liar, a coward and a cad.

Richard Nixon's relations with reporters were always edgy. especially during the Watergate scandal. At a 1974 news conference, applause broke out when CBS newsman Dan Rather stood to ask a question.

GAINESVILLE - Money and the challenge of building the NFL's losingest franchise into a winner weren't enough to shake Steve Spurrier's allegiance to the Florida

The architect of one of college football's most explosive offenses spurned an offer to coach the Tampa Bay Buccaneers on Tuesday, saying he hopes to remain at his alma mater for years to come.

"I guess my roots are awfully deep here," said Spurrier, who won the Heisman Trophy at Florida in 1966 and has enjoyed unprece- Bandits in the mid-1980s, but dented success since returning to the school as coach six years ago.

"I doubt I will ever get another NFL opportunity. But I'm not looking for one," he added. "I'm looking to coach the Gators. The lifestyle here living in Gainesville is a wonderful situation.

The Bucs reportedly offered Spurrier a financial package that included a salary of about $2 million per season, plus part ownership in the team, which hasn't had a winning season since 1982.

The 50-year-old coach acknowledged a longtime "fascination" with the Bucs Job, dating to his days as coach of the USFL's Tampa Bay decided to reject the offer early Tuesday. Spurrier was the Bucs quarterback during the team's inaugural season in 1976 and was passed over twice when the club made coaching changes in the past 11 years.

Since returning to alma mater in 1990. Spurrier has compiled a 61-13-1 record and led the Gators to four Southeastern Conference championships. He led Florida within a victory of its first national title this season and surprised many by giving serious consideration to Tampa Bay's offer.

Although he had resisted the temptation to listen to pro offers in the past six years, Spurrier sensed it was finally time to finally explore his options after the most successful season - 12-1 with a No. 2 final ranking - in Gators history.

"I felt maybe this was the time to either jump or not jump. ... I've had my fling, and that's it. I'm a Gator and don't see myself having another one of these news conferences in the near future." That came as a relief to Florida fans and Gators athletic director Jeremy Foley, who cut short his stay at the NCAA convention in Dallas to return to Gainesville for every five minutes crying." Bucs general manager Rich McKay is conducting Tampa Bay's search for a new coach.

Spurrier's announcement. "To be honest, last night I slept like a baby," Foley said. "I woke up Bee Spurrier, Page 2B

"I fully understand and respect Steve's decision to not take our conversations to the next level," McKay said. "He has had tremendous success at Florida, and I have no doubt that he will continue to do so.'

Tampa Bay also has had discussions with former Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson about the vacancy created when Sam Wyche was fired Dec. 27. A second tier of candidates for the job reportedly includes Wisconsin's Barry Alvarez, San Francisco 49ers defensive coordinator Pete Carroll, Minnesota Vikings defensive coordinator Tony Dungy and Chicago Bears offensive coordinator Ron Turner.

Spurrier has a rollover clause in his contract that extends it through 2002. A renegotiated deal that would make him one of the highest paid college coaches at about $1

than a month but remains unsigned. The coach declined to discuss specifics about Tampa Bay's offer and would not say if Bucs owner Malcolm Glazer had assured him the team million per year has been on the table for more would remain in Tampa if Spurrier took the job. Glazer, who purchased the Bucs for a record $192 million last year, fired Wyche after a 7.9 season and is exploring options to move the club because plans for a new stadium in Tampa have not come together.

Spurrier reportedly rejected Tampa Bay's initial offer, then reconsidered after the Bucs made a second proposal Monday.

"The money was extremely good - what they were talking about if we did it. But that was not a factor," he said, adding the Gators' 62-24 loss in national championship game also did not play into the decision.

"The bottom line was do you want to couch at Florida or do you want to try to coach in the NFL. ... I just think this is what excites me the most. This is the best job for me."

Star running back to stay at FSU

By BRENT KALLESTAD Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Florida State's tailback Warrick Dunn figures there's nothing like nothing.

"I haven't had any money for 21 years. What's another year?" Dunn said Tuesday as he announced his plans to remain in college for his senior season. "It was tough when someone says you're going to get $1 million a year.

Dunn, who was projected to be a first-round or high secondround pick in the upcoming NFL draft, said he had always leaned toward coming back to school and completing his degree.

Dunn said he wasn't worried about getting injured.

"If I ras going to get hurt it's going to happen no matter 3.769 career rushing yards, al-where I am at," said Dunn, who runs track in the spring instead of playing spring football.

'I don't think the great players think about that," Billy Sexton, running backs coach for the Seminoles. "He's the best running back

I've ever coached." Sexton added. "He is a true running back. Give him the ball, like Barry Sanders, and let him go." A dozen Florida State players have left school early since 1989 to pursue professional football.

including seven first-round picks. The 5-foot-9 Dunn said he hoped to add some weight to his 178-pound frame and increase his strength and speed before the 1996 season begins.

Dunn. who needs 1,191 yards to surpass leader Greg Allen's ready owns the season mark and is the only Seminole to have two seasons exceeding 1,000 yards. Dunn rushed for a school-record 1,242 yards this season. averaging 7.5 yards a carry. Through three seasons, Dunn has rushed for 2.779 yards. averaging 7.2 yards a try. He also has caught 102 passes, and his 35 career touchdowns rank third on the school's list. He excelled in big games. In four games against Florida.

including the 1995 Sugar Bowl. Dunn totaled 571 yards. Dunn ran for 151 yards in Florida State's 31-26 Orange Bowl victory over Notre Dame, a team that he gained 163 yards against a year earlier. "He's got some magic to him."

said Notre Dame defensive coordinator Bob Davie. "He just gets you in so many ways."

To Be An

Read on: The stew pot thickens

By Marialles Calta NEA Food Writer

We live in a culinary age of trendy cookery, exotic cuisines and far-out flavors, but almost nothing beats a pot of stew. Stew is like soup: a work of art in progress, a mixing of flavors that can be as simple or as pungent as your taste buds desire. Stew is yummy and comforting and makes the kitchen smell great. Kids like stew, especially if it is the kind served with dumplings tor, I should say, SOME kids like stew: others don't like anything but plain noodles or peanut butter, but you and I don't know any children like THAT). Dinner guests, overwhelmed by the latest in Albanian-Himalayan-Japanese fusion cuisine, will get down on their knees and thank you for a plate of stew.

That is not to say that stew has to be bland, or boring, or plain-old-stewish. (Although I will defend to the death a plain old stew.) When making stew, you can take advantage of plenty of interesting and tasty ingredients. (You can also do all the work the day before, which is another great reason for loving stew; there's nothing last-minute about it.)

The two stews below raise "plainold" to the level of plain wonderful; they are both from Susan Wyler's new book "Simply Stews." There are 98 other recipes in the book, and after you taste these, you may want to try every one.

MEDITERRANEAN BEEF STEW WITH OLIVES, SUN-DRIED TOMATOES AND FRESH BASE

cup sun-dried tomatoes,

Pat the mest dry. In a large flameproof casserole, heat the olive oil over moderately high heat. Add half the meat and cook, turning, until nirely browned, about 5 minutes. Remove it to a plate with a slotted spoon. Repeat for remaining meat, removing that to a plate when it is cooked.

Add the onions to the casserole and cook, stirring occasionally, until they are golden and beginning to brown around the edges, about 5 minutes. Add the garlic and cook until softened and fragrant, about 1 minute. Pour in the vermouth and boil until reduced by half, 1 to 2 minutes. Then add the chopped tomatoes and their juices, the vinegar, black pepper, hot pepper, and 1-1, cups cold water.

Add the meat to the sauce, along with any juices that have collected on the plate. Bring stew to a boil, reduce the neat to low, cover and simmer 1hours. Add the olives and simmer 20 to 30 minutes longer, or until the meat

Add the sun-dried tomatoes and simmer 5 minutes. (The stew can be made to this point up to 2 day in advance.) Just before serving, stir in the fresh basil.

Note: Stored in a tightly covered container, this stew will freeze well up to 6 months, though the basil will darken in color. You might want to freshen it up with some fresh shredded basil or chopped paraley.

Yield: 6 to 8 servings. - Recipe from "Simply Stews," by Susan Wyler (HarperPerennial, 1993).

Remove the pork from the marinade and pat dry on paper towels.

In a large flameproof cusserole, heat the remaining 2 tablespoons olive oil over moderately high heat. Add half the meat and cook, turning, until nicely browned, about 3 minutes. Remove it to a plate with a slotted spoon. Repeat for remaining meat, removing that to a plate when it is cooked.

Pour off all but I tablespoon fat from the pan. Reduce the heat to moderate. Add the cumin seeds and remaining 2 cloves minced garlic and cook, stirring, until the cumin is lightly browned and fragrant, 1 to 2 minutes. Add the chicken stock to the pan and bring to a boil, scraping up the browned bits from the bottom of the pan. Add the tomatoes, remaining I teaspoon oregano, cinnamon and chipotle chile.

Return the pork to the pan along with any juices that have collected on the plate. Cover and simmer over moderately low heat I hour, or until the pork is tender. Taste after 30 minutes and remove the chipotle chile if the stew is beginning to taste too hot. When the pork is tender, add the peppers and simmer 5 minutes, until the peppers are just tender but still firm. Season the sauce with additional salt and pepper to taste, if needed. If the chiptole is too hot for your taste, discard it. Otherwise, remove it from the pot, mince it, and return it to the stew.

Note: This stew reheats well after a day or two in the refrigerator. Stored in a tightly covered container, it will freeze well for up to 3 months.

Common heritage of Christians kinship and Jews is cause for

DEAR ABBY: The Long Island woman who was devastated because her Jewish daughter indicated she may become Catholic should take comfort that Catholics are free to do whatever Jesus did. Jesus of Nazareth was a Jew who regularly went to synagogue and often led the services. He strictly observed the commandments and celebrated all the Jewish holidays. Any Catholic may go to temple, join the Hanukkah festivities, host or attend a Seder, etc.

In so doing, the Catholic is not "being Jewish." Catholics have not traditionally celebrated the Jewish holidays because for centuries Jews and Catholics saw one another as adversaries.

Today Jews and Catholics realize that they share the heritage of the Hebrew Scriptures and that they can best resist the rapid disapearance of all religion from public life by working in harmony. It is Catholic to celebrate the miracle of the temple lamp, and much more so to celebrate the time when Jews were saved by the body and blood of a lamb, a foreshadow of the Lamb whose body and blood redeemed us

When this woman's granddaughter asks her mother, "Why are we going to Grandma's for Passover if we're not Jewish?" the answer should be: "God calls us to honor our father and our mother; they celebrate Passover and we honor them by being with them on important occasions. Also, because we are celebrating the Passover as Jesus did each year of his incarnate life. Finally, because Jesus instituted the sacrament of Holy Communion at his last Passover Seder."

MARTY BARRACK, BURKE, VA.

DEAR MARTY: Thank you for an excellent letter. I was touched by the number of readers who reached out to help "Devastated in Long Island" come to terms with her daugh-ter's decision. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in response to the Jewish mother who was devastated by the prospect of her daughter's conversion to Christianity, and therefore her grand-daughter's religious uphringing. I'm a Christian and would love to be able to say I'm Jewish - but I can't.

Jewish history is Christian history. That's what the Old Testament is. I feel a kinship with Jews because we worship the same God and study the same people: David, Isaiah, Moses, Noah, Daniel, etc. This is my heritage as well.

I would love to celebrate the Jewish holidays because I believe they are important. We should remember that God spared the firstborn of Israel when the Angel of Death passed over the homes whose doors were marked with the blood of the lamb.

This young granddaughter will be blessed to have the opportunity to learn her full religious heritage.

To a Christian, Jesus is the Christ who fulfills all -lewish prophecy.

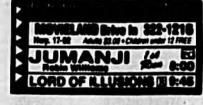

Where does that leave the grandparents and uncles who are committed to Judaism? Honored and loved, and just as much a part of her life as the other side of the family. ENCOURAGED AND DELIGHT-

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Hurt Mother-in-Law": I was married in 1967, and I clearly remember my new mother-in-law taking me aside and saying, "You already have a mother, so let's figure out a name for you to call me that you are comfortable with. I'm comfortable with Doris."

She set the stage for a wonderful relationship. My father-in-law did his part, too. He introduced me to his friends as "my daughter." That always got a laugh from them, and it made me feel warm and accepted. In loving memory of Doris and Armand Roth

Tremor is no threat to health

DEAR DR. GOTT:I'm a 71-year-old female. A neurologist diagnosed my occasional headshaking as essential ative. Should I be concerned about tremor. He said the cause is unknown. Can you give me some information on this condition?

benign essential tremor is, as you were told, unknown, but this annoyance will not affect health. The disorder, which customarily begins in childhood, is hereditary and causes a slow shaking of the hands, head and voice that may be absent at rest and intensified by performing skilled acts. Stress and anxiety can also worsen it. The condition tends to become more noticeable with age.

Ordinarily, no treatment is neces-nosed as having alopecia, a stress disorder where one loses all his hair. Can you explain this disorder and what can be done to regain a healthy head of hair?

DEAR READER: Alopecia simply means hair loss for whatever reason. In rare instances, hair loss can result from stress, although by far the most common causes are hereditary baldness and skin diseases (such as eczema or psoriasis) of the scalp.

Many people with alopecia can be helped by using Rogaine, a prescription compound that is applied to the scalp and promotes hair growth. In my opinion, your son should be examined by a dermatologist. As a general rule, stress alopecia is not permanent; with time, new hair grows in.

Nonetheless, the specialist will be able to advise your son about potential therapy.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Eczema and Psoriasis." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, selfaddressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: In a television show, the heroine starts acting strangely. She has suddenly lost her memory and has amnesia. Is it really that easy to suddenly lose your memory?

DEAR READER: Amnesia has many causes, ranging from head iniury to stroke. Emotional shock can also cause a person to lose memory.

In literature, sudden memory loss is a facile gimmick to aid the plot. In most instances, there is little, if any, medical justification for the sudden, unexpected amnesia.

Most bona-fide cases of amnesia result from a catastrophic event that is easily identified and usually produces other health problems, such as paralysis or coma.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have blood in my urine and all tests have been neg-this? What are my options? DEAR READER: Blood in the urine (hematuria) is always abnormal and DEAR READER: The cause of should be investigated, using tests such as a urine culture (for infection), kidney X-rays (for stones or tumors) and cystoscopy is technique of examining the lower urinary tract with a lighted instrument).

> You don't mention what tests you have had but, in my opinion, you should be under the care of a urologist, who can review your medical record and perform the cystoscopy.

If you've already had all this testing, sary. You can safely disregard the return to the urologist for a discussion or seek a second opinion from DEAR DR. GOTT: My son was diag- another urologist. In my view, you need to know what is causing the bleeding and what needs to be done about it.

To give you more information, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports "Kidney Disorders" and "Bladder and Urinary Tract Infections." Other readers who would like copies should send $2 for each report plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. WIN AT BRIDGI

The odds hold up

By Phillip Alder

When a declarer makes an unusual and successful play in a suit, even though he had the percentages in his favor, we hear about it. And sometimes the play has so much appeal that it wins a prize. Frenchman Philippe Cronier won the award for the best declarer-play of 1995 from the International Bridge Press Association for this performance.

Cronier's double showed short spades and a willingness to bid higher. North, Maurice Salama, offered a choice of contracts via four no-trump. Cronier went with his long suit.

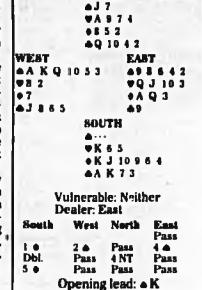

Cronier ruffed the opening spadeking lead, played a heart to dummy's ace and called for the diamond eight. East rose with the ace and returned the heart queen. After winning with rionier exited with u heart. East won with the 10 and continued with the heart jack, ruffed by South. West discarded two spades on these tricks.

Cronier paused to take stock. The trump position was clear tunless West had made a strange play of the diamond seven from the doubleton seven-three). West was marked with six spades from his two-spade weak jump overcall. And West was known to have started with two hearts. This meant that West had four clubs.

As East was four times more likely to have a low club than the singleton jack, Cronier immediately played a club to dummy's 10 - a first-round finesse against the jack despite holding all the other honors! When it held, Cronier led a diamond to his jack, cashed the diamond king and claimed.

HOROSCOPE

Thursday, Jan. 11, 1996

Your chart indicates that in the year ahead you might start weeding out a few unproductive relationships. These will be replaced by new associations that offer greater possibilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today, for the sake of your image, don't exaggerate your accomplishments even if the people around you are doing the same thing. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper: P.O. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In regard to an important matter today, it will be imperative to grasp the big picture. Pay attention to details, but do not exclude other information.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Moneymaking ideas used by a successful friend may not work as well for you today. because you will lack his or her expertise. Do not gamble.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The allegiance you expect from an associate might go to your opposition today. His or her positions will be more compatible with the competition.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Those who labor at your side will not cover for you loday. Do not wander away from your work. You must remember your responsibilities

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone you think is wild about you does like you, but not to that extent. It will be best not to boast that you have him or her wrapped around your little finger...

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you entertain at your place today, don't averinduige your guest with too much food or booze. Remember that they still have to drive home safely

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You would be wise at this time to take your assignments as seriously as your boss does, or else he or she may question your value to the organization. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not freat your monthly budget as merely scribbling on a scrap of paper. You could regret your actions later if you have a financial shortfall.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today try to avoid getting involved with a person who makes big promises, but seldom keeps them. This individual is still looking for gulfible people.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You must guard against the tendency to underestimale your adversaries in commercial, social or political situations today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do not hang your hopes for happiness on the acquisition of material goods. Life's true offerings are priceless intangibles like loving and being loved. 01986 by NEA Inc.
