2 out of 3 win in election

LAKE MARY — A select few percentage of Lake Mary's over 4,000 voters turned out yesterday to decide on three community improvement projects. As a result, Proposition 1, pertaining to $2,025,000 revenue bonds for sewage and drainage projects and proposition 2 for $1,710,000 in bonds for a public safety facility were approved. Proposition 3 for $280,000 in bonds for community center renovation went down to defeat.

Both propositions 2 and 3 were defeated with only a few dozen votes. A voter initiated referendum approved back in 1991 prevents the city from borrowing money of this nature without bringing it before the voters. Mayor Lowrey Rickett indicated he believes that 1991 referendum may need amending.

Blood bank needs help

SANFORD — Linda Decker, director of the Central Florida Blood Bank admits she is scared. "We are so low on our blood inventory now, I don't know what we will do if this fourth one presents any serious problems." Decker pointed out that the Central Florida Blood Bank is the backup center for Broward County, expected to receive much of the storm. "If they are forced to close because of the storm," she said, "we will be called on to be the main supplier, and we just don't have the blood to give."

Decker said if the local units were forced to close, Tampa would be the backup center for this area.

A special donor drive was scheduled for today until 4 p.m. at the Semmes Stromberg Carlson facility on Birchard Road in Lake Mary. Tomorrow, blood will be taken at Ace Hardware on 25th Street in Sanford from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Decker pointed out that people need not place themselves in danger going out during the storm. "Any time within the next few days will be a help," she said.

For information on the blood donor emergency drive, contact Linda Decker at 260-2088.

Erin pummels county with rain, gusty wind; more expected today

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Hurricane Erin just went during the night and morning. It may have been caught in that zone.

The Seminole County Sheriff's department maintained a double shift during the hurricane threat period from 10 p.m. Tuesday until 8 a.m. this morning. There were 60 patrol cars on the road during that time.

The sheriff's office had organized a special unit to deal with the guard response throughout the county during the storm. Sheriff's deputies were patrolling through the county to assist the family.

After the storm, the sheriff's department had 36 deputies. There were no reports of burglaries or looting during the storm.

The single shift patrols have now resumed operating, and the sheriff's See Storm, Page 3A

SANFORD — Sue Sessions was awoken by a crashing sound at 4 a.m.

As she prepared for the arrival of Hurricane Erin, she worried about the towering pine trees in her back yard. She never gave a thought to the huge Chinaberry trees in the front.

"I just had them back of," she said. "At 4 they were fine. They looked themselves, and said they were solid. The branches were fine. They wouldn't fall."

Her front yard was a mess. The trees were uprooted and the limbs were scattered everywhere.

The next day, she said, "I was surprised."

The trees fell just inches from her house on Hays Drive in Sanford. A few swags scraped by. See After, Page 3A

Smith plans to move from S.C.

PENSACOLA — David Smith, bitter that his ex-wife will not be put to death for drowning their two sons, will move from South Carolina, possibly to Pensacola, his father says.

"He's definitely going to leave the two kids and his memories," the father, also named David Smith, said Monday after returning home to Pensacola from Susan Smith's trial in Union, S.C.

"But he hasn't decided where he's going. He's got a grandfather in California, an uncle and two aunts in Michigan and me down here."

Smith said his family, including his son, was "overwhelmed with grief" last week when a South Carolina jury refused to sentence Susan Smith, 23, to death for the Oct. 25, 1994 murders of sons Michael, 3, and Alex, 14 months. She received a life sentence.

The father, who lived in Union for 23 years, said his son would have left Union regardless of the sentence but may have remained in South Carolina if the penalty had been death.

"But what do you expect from that state?" he asked.

Businessman sentenced

JACKSONVILLE — A Destin businessman and former vice president of an Alabama oil company has been sentenced to two months in jail and two months of home detention after pleading guilty to submitting false documents to the Internal Revenue Service.

Charles H. Ritchey also was required to pay $35,025 in restitution to the IRS and will be on probation for three years.

Ritchey pleaded guilty before U.S. District Judge Harvey Schlesinger Tuesday to one count of a six-count indictment charging him with submitting false documents to the IRS during an audit in an attempt to reduce his tax liability for the years 1980 and 1981.

Ritchey is former vice president of the Marion Oil Corp. of Mobile, Ala.

Suicide suspected in deaths

PENSACOLA — Police suspect a double suicide in the shooting deaths of a Pensacola couple who owned a downtown jewelry store.

A family friend Monday found the bodies of Jack Thomas Brown, 52, and his wife, Ann, 54, in their home on the north side of this Florida Panhandle city.

Investigators have ruled out foul play because there was no forced entry and nothing in the house appeared disturbed, said police spokesman Brian Barton. He said they were shot with separate guns that they owned.

Barton said other evidence also supported suicide, but he declined to elaborate.

Friends said they knew of no reason the Browns, who were high-school sweethearts, would take their own lives.

"They were madly in love with one another," said Tony Riha, who opened his barber shop next door to the Browns' store in 1962, a year after the jewelers went into business. "He was her only boyfriend ever."

Mom, friend charged with child abuse

TAMPA — A mother and her boyfriend are charged in a child abuse case that officials say left a malnourished toddler critical with internal bleeding from beatings.

A neighbor noticed the 3-year-old boy, with bruises and a swollen belly, curled up in a fetal position on a couch Thursday and rushed him to University Community Hospital. He underwent emergency surgery to stop abdominal bleeding, authorities said.

The child was listed in serious but stable condition Tuesday. He has been taken into protective custody by the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

Scott Hansborough, 25, has been charged with aggravated child abuse. Kimberly Jo Norton, also 25, has been charged with child abuse for failing to seek medical attention for her son.

Police believe the child was beaten over several days and that the mother was not at home at the time.

2 escape new, state-of-the-art jail

BRADENTON — The officer in charge of the nightly lock-down at the new, $39 million Port Manatee Central Jail saw the lumps under the covers but didn't bother with a standard voice check.

That lapse afforded escaped prisoners Robert Morse and Donald Price — who had stuffed their beds with pillows and towels to make it appear as though they were sleeping — at least two more hours of undetected flight.

The two men remained at large early today after using a hacksaw smuggled into the jail to flee away at a 10-foot-high wire fence in one of the jail's exercise yards, said Maj. Newton Murdock, who oversees the jail.

They slipped out of the yard about 9:30 p.m. Monday, and then sawed through a thick chain securing a heavy padlock to a gate on the outer fence, Murdock said.

Insurers lashed by Andrew dread repeat blow

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Insurance companies ran radio spots alerting policyholders to take storm precautions and had adjusters waiting for assignments as Hurricane Erin bore down on Florida.

The swirling storm stirred memories of the still-lingering blow Hurricane Andrew dealt homeowners, businesses and insurers three years earlier.

"We're chewing our fingernails and waiting," Sam Miller of the Florida Insurance Council said Tuesday.

The state Department of Insurance opened a toll-free information line: (800) 528-7094.

"While Erin doesn't appear to be another Andrew, we will be prepared to assist anyone who needs help with insurance matters," Commissioner Bill Nelson said.

Homeowners are protected by a state-backed insurance pool and catastrophe fund formed to prop up the industry as it reeled from more than $16 billion in claims from the August 1992 disaster.

But a major storm could test the pool's reserves, setting back efforts to revitalize the private industry and get customers out of the state-created joint operating agreement that has become Florida's third-largest insurer.

Insurers kept their Florida personnel in place and brought in adjusters from other parts of the country for reinforcements wherever needed.

Allstate brought in 100 adjusters to stand by for hurricane duty, said spokeswoman Leslie Chapman Henderson in Boca Raton.

State Farm assembled a natural disaster team of nearly 40 for hurricane assignments, spokeswoman Lori Leonard said.

Allstate and other insurers ran radio spots to urge customers racing through storm checklists to grab policy numbers, inventory possessions if possible, and protect their homes with safeguards such as hurricane shutters.

The state-created joint operating agreement has about $250 million on hand for immediate claims — for emergency repairs or living expenses — and is scheduled to complete arrangements for a $1.5 billion line of credit by the end of the month that could cover further claims.

If damages wipe out both the cash and credit, state law calls for every private insurance company selling homeowners insurance in Florida to be assessed for the additional losses.

Assessing companies would take additional time, said Miller, but "one way or another those JUA claims are going to be paid, especially — knock on wood — if this is a weak hurricane."

If damages soar over the $3 billion range, the hurricane catastrophe fund comes into play.

That fund has about $640 million in cash — mostly paid by insurance companies — and bonding capacity expected to be up to $4 billion depending on market conditions, said its chief operating officer, Jack Nicholson of the state Board of Administration. Cash on hand is expected to approach $1 billion by year's end.

With those safeguards in place, said Miller, "we should be able to handle an $8 billion storm in residential damages."

Of Andrew's more than $16 billion in insured losses, about $10 billion involved damage to homes.

Seniors' driving made easier

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Since more than two million of Florida's motorists are over age 65, the state is making driving a little easier for them.

Crews have painted extra-wide stripes, installed more reflectors and increased the size of road signs to make its highways friendlier for senior motorists.

Over the past four years, crews have been making changes on the 36,220 miles of state-maintained roads as part of the Elder Roadway User Program for the state's 2.9 million senior drivers.

"We decided to become the first state in the nation to stop designing our roads for 20-year-olds and design them for 65-year-olds instead," said Dave Anderson, deputy state traffic operations engineer.

The state has added two inches to the width of highway stripes to make them 6 inches wide, placed reflectors every 40 feet instead of every 80 and painted road signs with 30 percent larger letters on 30 percent larger signs.

Crosswalks also have been emblazoned with huge solid white rectangles instead of two skinny parallel lines.

The next step is to redesign intersections. Congested ones already have been equipped with advance street signs and overhead street signs with 10-inch letters instead of the old six-inch size.

Florida is among a handful of states that issues driver's licenses to residents with 20/70 vision, meaning those with the weak eyes can see at 20 feet what healthy eyes see at 70.

Nurse probed for keeping 2 reports on sick toddler

By Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE — A former Coral Springs Medical Center nurse could lose her license after reports she kept two sets of records on the treatment of a toddler who died after slow attention in the emergency room.

A complaint with the Florida Board of Nursing was filed by the state Agency for Health Care Administration against the nurse, Deborah Hebert, who could also be fined up to $1,000.

Hebert cared for 2-year-old Alexandra Silverman when she was admitted to the hospital Feb. 12 for nausea and vomiting. Throughout the night, the girl became worse and was placed on life support. She died Feb. 15.

Hebert's original notes said the girl was "lethargic" when checked at 5:30 a.m. on Feb. 13. The nurse changed the notes to say "patient continues to sleep soundly," Broward Medical Examiner Joshua Perper said in his autopsy report.

Alexandra's death drew national attention after her father called 911 from the hospital parking lot and complained about a 65-minute delay in the emergency room. A federal panel found the hospital violated its own policy of requiring emergency room patients to be seen within 15 minutes.

The complaint against Hebert, filed July 20, charges her with falsifying records.

"(Hebert) falsified patient records, adding and deleting information therein, and placed the original patient records in her personal locker," the state Agency for Health Care Administration said in the complaint. The agency regulates health care in Florida.

hood of her car resting under the carport, but no damage was sustained that couldn't be buffed out.

"What really scared me, though," she said, "was the police banging on my door at 4 in the morning."
The law enforcement officers were just checking to see if she was all right.

Despite swirling winds and continued drizzle, the entrepreneurs with chainsaws and an eye to a quick buck were out in force.

"I'm amazed at the number of people who have come to my door since daybreak to ask if they could cut it down for me," Sessions said, pointing at the trees. "I'm not doing anything until the insurance company sees this. But they keep coming looking to cut it apart for me."

While Sessions mourned the loss of her two "perfect shade trees," others crammed into shelters around the county.

At Sanford Middle School, the Red Cross Disaster Relief team oversaw a crowded cafeteria overnight. Many had slept upright in chairs or on counters after all the cots had been assigned.

Red Cross workers refused to give out statistics on how many had sought and received shelter at that facility.

"They didn't turn anyone away, but there were lots of people who slept sitting up in chairs last night," said Juanita Slinnett, who travelled to the shelter at Sanford Middle from Volusia County with her husband and daughters as the storm approached.

The Slinnetts just moved into a new mobile home on the shores of the St. Johns River. They didn't want to risk the dangers of the storm in that home, so they came to Sanford at about 10:30 last evening.

"It just started rocking and I didn't want to dance to the music," she said.
Her older daughter Lynn reported the shelter workers were "very good" to them.

"They gave us food and some stuff to drink," she said.

As daylight brightened the skies, most left the confines of the shelter to return to their homes. Despite the steady wind and rain, which was as bad as it had been all night, those who had spent the night in the school cafeteria went home to assess the damage there.

Few streets were flooded, though most were littered with leaves and twigs. The heavy rainstorms in recent weeks have produced more severe water problems than last night's rain.

Awnings, however, had been ripped from their frames and danced in a Martha Graham-like free-form ballet, shreds of cloth twisting around one another or flattening themselves against windows and walls.

Few cars or people went to the downtown business district in the morning. Government offices, banks and most stores remained closed. Some business owners ventured from their cars to assess if there was any damage to the buildings.

In south Sanford, near the shores of Lake Jesup, water rose in ditches and gullies along the road, though none of it flowed over into the street.

Mike Cameron of Florida Power and Light stood in the bucket atop an aerial truck and surveyed a slack power line near the Orlando Sanford Airport. Shaking his head, he lowered the bucket and made a few notations on a soggy pad on his clipboard.

"I has been busy out here today," he said. "Everybody, and the employees, are out here working on the problems."

Overall, the damage across the city of Sanford and across portions of northern Seminole County seemed minimal.

to a tropical storm and continues to move away from Central Florida. Its effect on Seminole County is expected to diminish as the day progresses.

The location of Erin as of 10 a.m. this morning was 28.4 degrees north latitude and 82.6 degrees west longitude, about 30 miles north-northwest of Tampa, moving west-northwest at 17 miles per hour. Highest winds were clocked at up to 50 miles per hour.

Anyone experiencing an emergency as a result of the storm should phone 9-1-1.

Non-emergency inquiries, such as downed trees and blocked roadways should be directed to the Emergency Management Division, at 322-4795. Calls regarding power outages should be directed to the applicable power company.

office reports all major roadways in the county were open as of early this morning.

Sanford police also reported an unusually quiet evening. "We had our emergency units activated," said Commander Dennis Whitmore, "but now that the evening is over, I'd say this was an extremely uneventful night in so far as crime is concerned."

A big problem caused by the hurricane was power outages, rather than what was expected to be unusually heavy rainfall. A majority of the outages were caused by trees or branches hitting lines.

A few emergency crews from Florida Power and Light and Florida Power Corporation were out shortly after daybreak this morning. Most of their crews were not expected to be in full repair mode until noon today.

Between the two companies, power was reportedly disrupted for as many as 21,000 structures in the Central Florida coverage areas.

All county facilities are closed today, as are a number of businesses. The Sanford City Hall however, is conducting business as usual.

Lake Mary did not open City Hall as usual this morning. A city employee said the main reason was possible difficulty for persons driving to work. At the police department, non-essential personnel were not called in, although regular police and fire service are being maintained. A dispatcher said Lake Mary had no serious emergency calls during the hurricane. Most of the calls were regarding fallen trees.

A re-evaluation of the situation was to be held later this morning, with the possibility of opening City Hall later in the day.

The Sanford Fire Department was prepared to handle any emergency during the night. A number of firefighters spent the entire night at the stations, but no serious problems were reported. Most of the calls received by the fire department concerned downed trees and power lines.

One firefighter said he expected calls to begin increasing as the day progresses with more and more motorists on the road possibly faced with trying to dodge fallen trees or branches or standing water.

Gusting winds and rain are expected to continue today, with more rain tonight, subsiding by Thursday morning.

Enforcing codes, displaying wares

The complexity of creating a workable ordinance regarding outdoor displays at storefronts in Sanford is dragging the matter on and on. It's no wonder.

The city is faced with so many separate situations, approving one set of rules for some businesses will cause problems for others.

Some matters are difficult to determine in compiling the actual wording of an ordinance. For example, who is to decide what displays are antiques, and what are considered junk (or old items not truly classified as an antique).

What area should be involved? Should the rules only pertain to downtown Sanford? If that is the case, it would be taking away this opportunity to downtown merchants, but allowing those outside the downtown area to display what they want.

Another question still not answered is restrictions on displaying items, versus storing items. Rules pertaining to one of these may cause problems for others.

Setting a limit on heights of displays is also a problem. Some people involved in providing input to the city have suggested eight feet. City Manager Bill Simmons is proposing four feet maximum.

Then there is the question of how much space can be utilized. Should up to 25 percent of the frontal area be allowed for this display use or should it be limited to a certain number of items per front door?

Then too, would a row of display in front of a store give the image of a wall as has been suggested?

Drive through Sanford. Take a look at the downtown storefronts. Drive in other areas outside the downtown area and look at what some merchants have on display in front of their business.

People often refer to downtown Winter Park (Park Avenue) as an example of what they would like to have in Sanford. Yet very few merchants in other parts of that city are allowed to have any outside displays.

If, as is being proposed, any outside display requires a site plan to be approved, that will cause a great deal of time to be expended during Planning and Zoning Board or City Commission meetings. No doubt, any refusal would be forwarded on appeal.

If Sanford is to have an ordinance regarding outdoor merchandise displays, we believe it should pertain to all merchants in the city. Then, when in place, we would like to see code enforcement to be certain the rules are obeyed.

Yes, we know, we've heard it many times, there are not enough code enforcement personnel to do this job. But enforcing only one per day over a time period would eventually cause people who may not be within code to change their displays.

Creating and approving such an ordinance is going to be difficult. If we have one, it will mean enforcement will have to be maintained. If we don't have one, we believe enforcement will have to be maintained. Doesn't give us much choice, does it?

Paying taxes

Don't balance the budget on the backs of children, the old, the ill, the handicapped, the poor and the middle class. Extract it from those who aren't paying.

Of all foreign companies doing business in the United States, 74 percent paid no income taxes from 1987 to 1994.

Small businesses pay a higher percentage of taxes than do some Fortune 500 companies. You pay a higher percentage of taxes than do many millionaires.

In 1966, 155 people earning above $200,000 paid no income taxes. In 1974, 244 paid no income taxes. In 1986, 659 paid no income taxes. In 1989, 1,081 paid no income taxes.

In 1989, more than 5,000 people earning over $200,000 paid less than 5 percent in income taxes. Over 6,000 paid between 5 and 10 percent. What percent did you pay?

Corporate tax incentives are corporate welfare in forms of exemptions, deductions, subsidies and loopholes that steal billions of dollars from the budget. Examples: From 1989 to 1992 Royal Caribbean's total income was more than 3 billion dollars. They declared a net profit of 158 million dollars. They paid no income taxes. From 1991 to 1992 Chase Manhattan Corporation declared a total income of 1.5 billion dollars. They paid 1.7 percent in income taxes. What percent did you pay? How about other giant corporations?

Preferences harm black students

In one of his more memorable sermons, "A Knock at Midnight," Martin Luther King noted the resiliency of the black community even during the time of slavery.

An example of this, he said, is how the black slaves took a Biblical scripture and made a spiritual out of it. The scripture originally read "Is there no balm in Gilead?" But, said King, the slaves turned the question mark into an exclamation point, singing out optimistically, "There is a balm in Gilead!"

I was reminded of this sermon as I observed the sound and fury that accompanied the decision by the University of California Board of Regents last week to end its policy of race-based admissions. Much of the black leadership responded with predictable outrage. But the decision could turn out to be a blessing in disguise for the black community.

Affirmative action may have been well-intentioned, but the results in higher education have been deleterious for black collegians. By holding blacks to lower academic standards for admission to college, blacks are relegated to second-class student status.

It's tough enough for any student to make it through college. But it's even tougher for young black students who labor under the stigma that they do not measure up to their white and Asian classmates, that they would not have been admitted to, say, a University of California school were it not for their skin color.

The biggest victims of this stigma are the black students who actually are admitted on their academic merit (they make up half of black enrollees in the University of California system). Although they are quite capable of competing on equal footing with white and Asian classmates, they too are viewed as second-class students.

If this stigma ended the day a black student received his or her diploma, it might be a reasonable burden to bear. But the stigma carries over into the professional world, where whites and Asians who viewed their black classmates as academically inferior are inclined to view their black colleagues as professionally inferior.

This stigma which blacks all too often confuse with racism is eliminated in a fell swoop once racial preferences are eliminated. With blacks and whites and Asians and Hispanics competing for college admissions on a truly level playing field then no race of students can question the merit of another.

Of course, this places blacks at a disadvantage in the short run, because comparatively few black students meet the exacting admissions requirements for many of the leading colleges and universities in this country. But the way to address this dilemma is not with racial preferences, by holding whites and Asians to one standard and blacks to a lower standard. It's by enlarging the pool of academically qualified blacks.

The colleges cannot do this. By the time black students get to them, seeking admissions to their campuses, the die already has been cast. The place to begin is at the elementary and junior high school levels.

If we can reach black kids then, encourage and motivate them to keep up with their studies, there will be fewer black high school dropouts.

ELLEN GOODMAN

Kissing kids or kissing them off

BOSTON — The grown-ups are talking about the kids again, pinning their politics on the next generation.

All year long, the conservatives and the remaining liberals have fought their last-ditch battles as if they were in a custody dispute. In the scramble to stake out the higher moral ground in any debate, each has sworn that their policies are in the best interests of the next generation.

Every day now, some leader insists that the budget should be balanced because, as Newt Gingrich said last weekend, "We owe it to our children and grandchildren." Others trying to protect the programs on the congressional chopping block are saying, "We can't balance the budget on the backs of our children."

The kids have become the reason we should be for or against welfare reform. They've become the reason we should be for or against government regulations, the reason why we should dump or support everything from public television to environmental laws to defense funding.

In the argument about regulating meat, it isn't the adults who have provided the photo-ops of E. coli victims. In the argument about slashing arts funding, Rep. Lousie Slaughter of New York talked about "the children in every nook and cranny in the United States who will not have any opportunity to develop who they are."

Well, in any custody fight, I worry that the parents are more interested in winning and wounding each other than in helping the kids. That is especially true right now during furious argument about how we'll spend and save money. If patriotism is the last resort of the scoundrel, talking about children can be the last hiding place of skulduggery.

It's not a coincidence that "children" have become the buzzword of left, right and center. Wherever we sit on the political spectrum, the language resonates.

We have come to share a guilty unease about children. The generic worry that the next generation of Americans will not be as well off as their parents, has settled down around us like a heavy fog. It's hard to see any distance ahead.

There is, after all, a sadness in any society that no longer believes it's making life better for its children. That may be especially true in a nation built by immigrants, people who, by and large, chose opportunity over continuity, the future over the past, their children over their ancestors.

The baby-boom generation was an anomaly, a blip on the demographic landscape, a boom time that we didn't suspect would bust, or even slide. Boomers now look back at their own childhoods with nostalgia and at their children's with concern.

That worry takes many forms: latchkeys, drugs, schools, TV. Our kids are less vulnerable to such plagues as polio and more vulnerable to violence and to the forces that no V-chip or childproof software can totally block.

We have finally realized that we haven't behaved like responsible grownups. In the '80s we ran up the debt, buying Cold War weapons and giving tax cuts to the rich. We did it while the schools ran down, the poor grew poorer, and the environment became a paler shade of green.

We've acted rather like the drivers with those cheery bumper stickers proclaiming that they're spending their grandchildren's inheritance. We haven't been steward of our children's world.

When Clinton came into office on a theme song, "Don't Stop Thinking About Tomorrow," many of us thought that tomorrow was a synonym for children. Now, in the Republican epoch, we are told that the choice is between leaving the children in debt or slashing the investments in their future.

I wish we were judging every policy through the long-distance lens, putting a kid-grid over each piece of legislation. A wise jury of elders judges the actions of one generation by its effect on the next.

But in this custody dispute, where one side claims that we will balance the budget, for the kids and the other side protests cuts, for the kids, the choices have a false, childish ring.

No good parent wants to leave children in debt. But no Congress that — for starters — gives the Pentagon more money than it asks for, has the right to cut the children's allowance and say that it's good for their own good.

"Children First" is not a policy, it's a slogan. It's the verbal equivalent of kissing babies. In these rushed days of Congress, make sure you know when they're kissing the kids and when they're kissing them off.

The grown-ups are talking about the kids again, pinning their politics on the next generation.

JOSEPH SPEAR

Insecure machismos rail on Burke

There are times, I must admit, when I miss the Old Dole.

You know the one I mean — the nasty Bob, the snarly Bob, the bitter Bob. The one who accused the Democrats of starting wars. The one who told George Bush to quit lying about his record. The one who said he might have won the presidency in 1988 if he had kept the press off the plane.

The New Dole, of course, is the Far Right's Bob Forehead, the candidate who will do or say anything, will prostrate himself before any conservative tribune who demands obedience, will declare himself foursquare again anything his masters don't like, from abortion to "Pulp Fiction," to get their support. Notice I did not say I liked the Old Dole, only that I would like to see his occasional reappearance. Like now, when right-wing zealots are giving the New Dole substantial grief about the woman who runs his senatorial office. I would like to see him draw a line in the sand, say enough is enough, and tell them where to go. It won't happen, but it would be fun to see.

If you haven't heard of the Sheila Burke brouhaha, it doesn't mean you are out of touch. It's such inside-the-beltway foolishness that I hesitate even to bring it up, and I wouldn't if it were not so illustrative of the simple-minded games the conservative purists play. First, a review:

Sheila Burke, married to a former Reagan administration aide and the mother of three children, is Majority Leader Robert Dole's chief-of-staff. She has worked for the man 18 years, half of it in her current capacity, and she enjoys his complete trust — an amazing achievement, given Dole's leery nature.

Burke is, by all reports, an intelligent, industrious and thoroughly competent individual who knows where Dole stands, knows how he thinks and represents him very well in the daily commerce of the Capitol's backrooms. She is precisely what all proficient Hill staffers are — a deft factotum and technocrat with opinions and feelings that almost always get suppressed in deference to the boss' own. The government could not function without these people — especially not the U.S. Senate, and most especially not Bob Dole, who has the management skills of a house painter and is notorious for his inability to delegate.

But to her conservative critics, who have been after "Evil Sheila" for years, she has two failings: She is a political moderate, i.e., a communist; and she is a woman, i.e., someone who should make homes, bake bread and let the menfolk lead.

For proof of the former, consider the fact that she is from San Francisco (gasp), was schooled at Berkeley (gurgle) and also went to Harvard (faint dead away). When she went to work for Dole, she told U.S. News & World Report, she was a Democrat with a "bias on the liberal side." She remains pro-choice but strives to comport herself as a neutral "staff person."

For proof of the latter, consider the misogynist nature of the latest assault on Burke. It began with an attack by right-wing waterboy Robert Novak, who accused "the queen of the Senate" of trying to push through watery welfare legislation. Then the Wall Street Journal kicked in with a lamentation of this awful woman's "absolutely astonishing" domination of Dole. Then came ideologist Paul Weyrich with a televised commentary and a Washington Times column praising Dole as a "patriotic American" who is caught in the clutches of a Madame Mao.

You know the one I mean — the nasty Bob, the snarly Bob, the bitter Bob.

Chapel

In evaluating the property, Stevens says she found it is one of the more historically important residences in Sanford. "With our location in the historic district," she wrote, "we would help to bring into our area, young couples looking for homes and those couples in their 40s looking for the home and security of their youth. They and their guests would find the enchantment of Sanford's older homes, the shops and antique stores on First Street, and the pull of Lake Monroe and the zoo irrealizable."

Linda Stevens and Howard Thomas say they purchased the building on June 23, 1995, and have been working diligently on improvements since that time, with their aim to establish the chapel.

According to what must of ficially be requested however, the actual application is for a church, with the primary activity being a wedding chapel.

Director of Planning and Development Jay Marder has outlined a number of stipulations and conditions which must be met in order to approve the request. If the request is denied, he has suggested reasons for the denial.

The matter is listed at the beginning of this Thursday night's P&Z meeting agenda.

Other items scheduled for the P&Z meeting are as follows:

• Public hearing to consider a request for conditional use for property at 1600-1688 W. Airport Blvd., for the purpose of an additional free standing sign.

• Public hearing to consider a request for dimensional variance for property at 1600-1688 W. Airport Blvd. for a detached sign setback and additional sign square footage.

• Public hearing to consider a request for dimensional variance for property at 200 Northstar Court, for the purpose of a chain link fence in the front yard.

• Site plan for Steak 'N Shake, a proposed restaurant to be located at 40 Towne Center Circle.

• Additional business from the floor or commission members.

The Planning and Zoning Commission meeting will begin at 7 p.m., this Thursday, August 3, in the commission chambers of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

Classes resume Thursday

All elementary and middle schools were closed today due to Hurricane Erin. The make-up day for those students who had the day off will be on Thursday, Oct. 12.

High school students do not start classes until next week, so they will not be affected.

It is expected that weather conditions will improve steadily today and classes will resume Thursday morning for elementary and middle school students.

Democrats to meet

LONGWOOD — The monthly meeting of the Seminole County Democratic Executive Committee has been scheduled for Thursday, Aug. 10, at the Hunt Club Branch library, 215 N. Hunt Club Blvd., Longwood. The upcoming Florida Democratic Party Convention is to be the subject of discussion.

Registration is now being accepted for persons wishing to become a delegate to the convention this year. Interested persons are urged to attend this meeting.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. For additional information, contact Phyllis Smith, 339-2949.

POLICE BRIEFS

Traffic stops

• Nicholas James Schwandt, 20, of Orlando, was stopped by Longwood police on U.S. Highway 17-92 Thursday. He was charged with driving with a suspended license, possession of cannabis under 20 grams, and possession of drug paraphernalia.

• Geoffrey D. Yockey, 19, 1114 Groveview, Sanford, was stopped by Lake Mary police on Greenleaf Friday. He was charged with driving with a suspended license. Police found he was also wanted on an active warrant for failing to appear to pay a fine.

• Elwyn Billy Birdwell, 36, of Baldwin, Florida, was stopped by Sanford police at 25th Street and Mellonville Avenue Friday. He was charged with driving with a suspended/restricted license, and having the attached tag not assigned.

• Randall Lee Jones, 34, of 4500 Canal Drive, Sanford, was stopped by Longwood police on U.S. Highway 17-92 Friday. Police were asked to look for Jones' vehicle by Winter Springs police reporting it had been involved in an auto accident in that jurisdiction. Jones was charged with leaving the scene of an accident, careless driving, and driving with a suspended license.

Excerpts of 35,000-word manifesto by Unabomber

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Following are excerpts of the portions of the Unabomber's 35,000-word manifesto, "Industrial Society and Its Future," published in today's Washington Post.

(Two psychological tendencies that underlie modern leftism we call feelings of inferiority and oversocialization. ... By "feelings of inferiority" we mean ... low self-esteem, feelings of powerlessness, depressive tendencies, defeatism, guilt, self-hatred, etc.

Words like "self-confidence," "self-reliance," "initiative," "enterprise," "optimism," etc., play little role in the liberal and leftist vocabulary. The leftist is anti-individualistic, pro-collectivist. He wants society to solve everyone's problems for them ... The leftist is antagonistic to the concept of competition because, deep inside, he feels like a loser. ...

His feelings of inferiority are so ingrained that he cannot conceive of himself as individually strong and valuable. Hence the collectivism of the leftist. He can feel strong only as a member of a large organization or a mass movement with which he identifies himself.

One of the most important means by which our society socializes children is by making them feel ashamed of behavior or speech that is contrary to society's expectations. If this is overdone, or if a particular child is especially susceptible to such feelings, he ends by feeling ashamed of HIMSELF. ...

The majority of people engage in a significant amount of naughty behavior. They lie, they commit petty thefts, they break traffic laws, they goof off at work, they hate someone, they say spiteful things or they use some underhanded trick to get ahead of the other guy. The oversocialized person cannot do these things, or if he does do them he generates in himself a sense of shame and self-hatred.

Human beings have a need (probably based in biology) for something that we will call the "power process." This is closely related to the need for power (which is widely recognized) but is not quite the same thing. The power process has four elements. The three most clear-cut of these we call goal, effort, and attainment of goal. (Everyone needs to have goals.) The fourth element is more difficult to define and may not be necessary for everyone. We call it autonomy and we will discuss it later. ...

We divide human drives into three groups: (1) those drives that can be satisfied with minimal effort; (2) those that can be satisfied but only at the cost of serious effort; (3) those that cannot be adequately satisfied no matter how much effort one makes. The power process is the process of satisfying the drives of the second group. The more drives there are in the third group, the more there is frustration, anger eventually defeatism, depression, etc. ...

In modern industrial society natural human drives tend to be pushed into the first and third groups, and the second group tends to consist increasingly of artificially created drives.

We suggest that modern man's obsession with longevity, and with maintaining physical vigor and sexual attractiveness to an advanced age, is a symptom of unfulfillment resulting from deprivation with respect to the power process. The "mid-life crisis" also is such a symptom. So is the lack of interest in having children that is fairly common in modern society but almost unheard of in primitive societies.

The two main tasks for the present are to promote social stress and instability in industrial society and to develop and propagate an ideology that opposes technology and the industrial system. When the system becomes sufficiently stressed and unstable, a revolution against technology may be possible. ...

We have no illusion about the feasibility of creating a new, ideal form of society. Our goal is only to destroy the existing form of society. ...

The kind of revolution we have in mind will not necessarily involve an armed uprising against any government. It may or may not involve physical violence, but it will not be a POLITICAL revolution. Its focus will be on technology and economics, not politics. ...

The revolution must be international and worldwide.

FBI hopes terrorist bomber recognizable to a university prof

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Washington Post and The New York Times on Wednesday published excerpts from a "manifesto" written by a terrorist known as the "Unabomber" and sent to them in June with a proviso that if either paper published the 35,000-word document, he would not kill again.

Both newspapers published 3,000 words of material excerpted from the manifesto in connection with stories saying the FBI has mailed copies of the documents to dozens of university professors in the hope one of them might be able to identify a former student or colleague from the writing.

The publishers of each paper said they haven't decided yet rather to print the entire 35,000-word document, titled "Industrial Science and Its Future." But they indicated that the decision to publish the excerpts was made jointly and in consultation with government officials.

"We are continuing to talk it over with people at the New York Times and are consulting with responsible public officials," Post Publisher Donald E. Graham said in a statement.

"The document that we received was postmarked June 24, and said that first the Times and then the Post would have three months to think it over," Graham said. "And quite obviously it takes some thinking about. It is not an easy decision."

Times Publisher Arthur Sulzberger Jr. said the story and excerpts published in his paper "represent the judgment of our editors as to what is newsworthy."

"The tough decision of whether we publish the entire document is still ahead," Sulzberger said in a statement. "As I've said before, the demand that the Unabomber have access to our pages for three years is especially troubling. There's no easy way to open negotiations with this person and for the moment we're stymied."

In his June letters to the two newspapers accompanying the manifesto, the Unabomber also conditioned his pledge not to place any more bombs on either of the newspapers publishing his annual follow-up treatises for three years.

Both newspapers quoted FBI officials as saying that the document has enabled them to trace a pattern of academic involvement by the elusive serial bomber. Since 1978, the Unabomber is believed by authorities to have planted 16 bombs killing three people and injuring another 23.

AAU ready for Orlando move

ORLANDO — The Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) has finalized plans to relocate its national headquarters to Walt Disney World Resort. Disney plans to open a multi-million dollar sports complex in 1997 that will initially host 25 AAU events, expanding to 50 events by the year 2000. The 200-acre site is just five miles from Disney's theme parks and recreational areas. The organization was founded in 1888 in New York and since 1970 has guided its program of 32 sports, 1,500 sanctioned events and 112 national championships from Indianapolis.

Marlins best Perez

MONTREAL — Andre Dawson, just off the disabled list, went 3-for-4 and drove in two runs Tuesday night as the Florida Marlins handed Carlos Perez his first loss at home in a 5-2 victory over the Montreal Expos. Terry Pendleton also had three hits and Charles Johnson went 2-for-3 with two RBIs as the Marlins won their fifth straight. Pat Rapp (5-6) allowed a run on five hits, struck out three and walked five in 5 1-3 innings. Robb Nen recorded his 10th save.

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — Moments after he pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor battery stemming from a school fight, West Virginia prep football player of the year Randy Moss said Tuesday he would play at Florida State. Moss was sentenced to 30 days in the South Central Regional Jail in Charleston, with three to be served beginning Tuesday night and the rest within 18 months. Moss pleaded guilty to two counts of battery for twice kicking fellow DuPont High student Ernest Johnson during a fight involving a third student. Johnson spent several days in the hospital with head, kidney and spleen injuries. Moss, 18, was a Parade magazine All-American wide receiver last season.

Penske appeal denied

TROY, Mich. — The decision that deprived Al Unser Jr. of a victory and practically ended any hopes he had of repeating as IndyCar champion has been upheld, IndyCar announced. Unser was disqualified from the Budweiser-G.I. Joe's 200 in Portland, Ore. on June 25 when a post-race inspection revealed his Penske-Mercedes had less than the required 2 inches of ground clearance. The victory was taken away three hours after the race and awarded to Jimmy Vasser.

Strange play gives West North Carolina the title

Dwayne Driggers went 2-for-2 but Altamonte Springs was eliminated by South Carolina and wound up third in the Southeast Regional.

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Sometimes it's not how hard you hit the ball, but where you hit it. East Randolph, representing West North Carolina, scored three runs on a ball that did not go 15 feet and completed an undefeated run through the Babe Ruth Baseball Bambino Majors Southeast Regional Tournament with a 3-2 victory over the Northside Bandits from Greenville, South Carolina at Eastmonte Park Monday afternoon.

East Randolph will now be the southeast representative to the World Series, which will run from August 12-19 at Abbeville, Louisiana. The tournament field will be made up of eight regional champions and a host team.

Trailing 1-0 with runners on first and second with one out in the top of the fifth inning, Tyler Clapp hit a dribbler off the end of his bat down the first base line. The South Carolina pitcher fielded the ball but threw wildly past first base and the ball went all the way into the rightfield corner, allowing all three runners to score on a four-base error.

Earlier Monday, Tankersley and Brian Wham had combined to drive in 10 runs with three home runs as South Carolina ousted host Altamonte Springs 12-2 in four innings.

South Carolina took a quick lead over Altamonte Springs as three consecutive one out singles by Todd Roper, Chris Bryant and Wham scored one run, and with two outs Tankersley blasted a shot over the pavilion behind the left field fence that carried at least 300 feet to give the Bandits a 4-0 lead.

Altamonte Springs looked like it might be able to get back in the game against Wham as Dwayne Driggers led off with a single and the next two hitters also hit the ball hard, but all the hosts got for their effort was a force out and a double play.

In the second inning, Ian Clark flew out against the rightfield fence and Hans Haina cracked a shot that was run down at the centerfield fence to keep Altamonte Springs off the board.

South Carolina then put the game away by sending 12 batters to the plate and scoring eight runs in the third inning. Highlights of the outburst was another Tankersley homer that landed on the pavilion roof in left and a grand slam just over the leftfield fence by Wham, giving both young men five RBIs each for the game.

Altamonte Springs' runs came in the third inning as Chris Scott reached on an error and Austin Willis and Driggers singled to load the bases before Paul Wojtowicz drove in both runs with a single to right.

The championship contest featured a pitchers duel between Tankersley, a 6-foot-2 righthander, and thin James Lowe.

Lowe was outstanding in striking out 10 of the first 14 batters he faced, including eight of the first 10 in hurling a perfect game through three innings.

But Lowe found himself down 1-0 as Todd Roper walked on a full count pitch to end the perfect game and, after a wild pitch, Bryant singled to center to plate Roper.

Tankersley, meanwhile, was also pitching well, giving up just two hits and no runs through four innings. But in the fourth, with one out, Matt Clapp reached on an infield single and Stefan Brower walked, setting up Tyler Clapp's heroics.

With two out in the bottom of the fifth inning Bret Youngblood and Kyle Sizemore walked, chasing Lowe in favor of Mickey Burgess, who came on to give up a run-scoring double to Matt Kirkpatrick before retiring the next four batters to secure the victory and the save.

Preps headed to North Carolina

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald Sports Editor

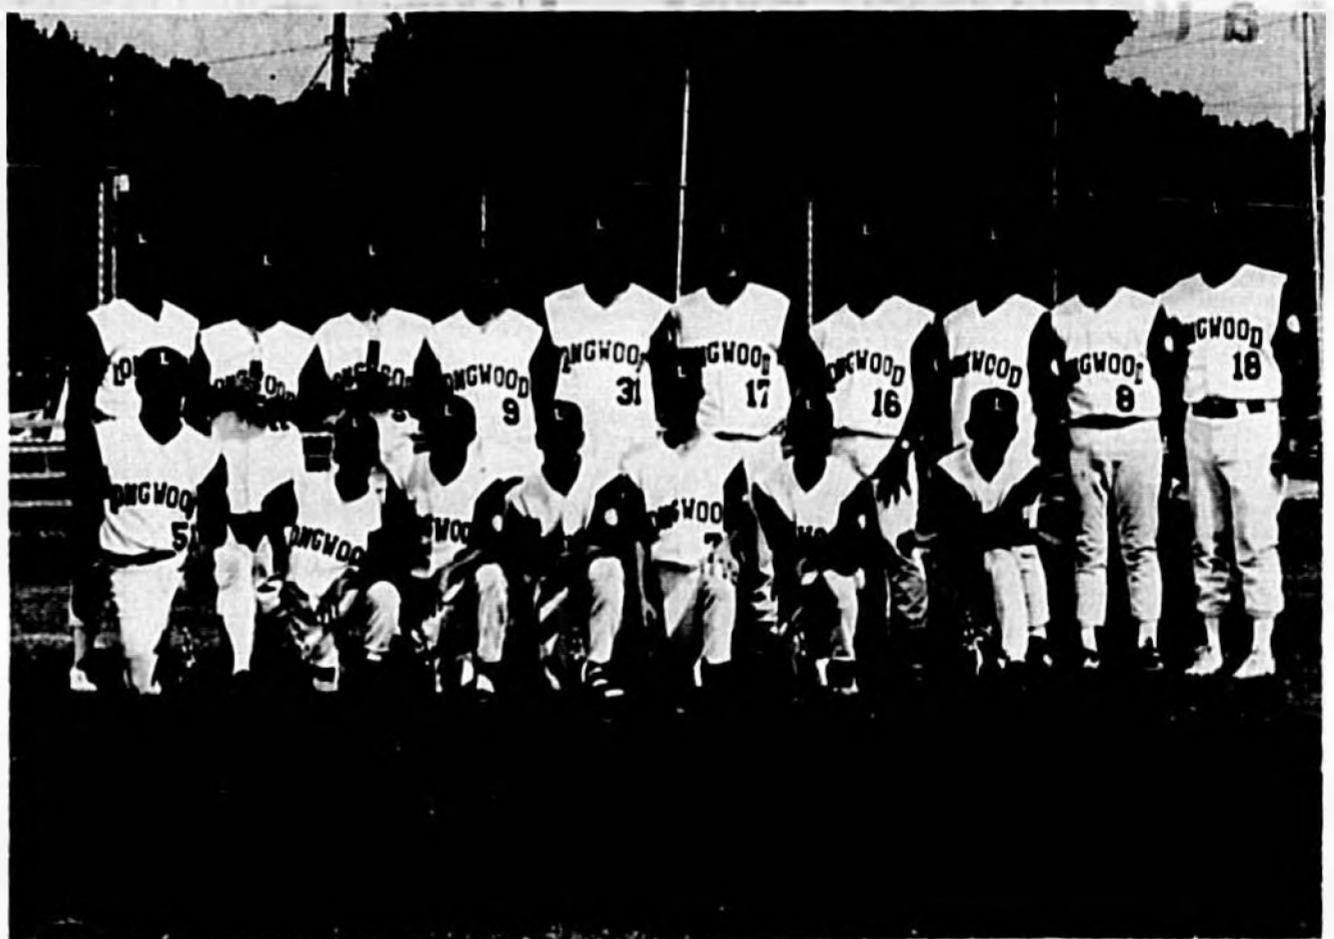

LONGWOOD — Seminole county's last shot for a baseball world championship this year heads for North Carolina early Thursday morning.

The Longwood All-Stars are ready to show its stuff to the world as the Florida state champions in the Babe Ruth Baseball Prep (13 year olds) Southeast Regional Tournament at Hendersonville.

Longwood has to be at the tournament headquarters by noon Thursday, but has a bye in the first round of the 10-team event and will not play its first game until 11 a.m. Saturday against the winner of a Friday game between the teams from Virginia and West North Carolina.

This is the second straight year that the Longwood squad, which has compiled a 9-1 record since all-star play began, has been the Florida representative to the regional. But this team is made up mostly of players who were on the Bambino Major team that came within one out of winning the Southeast Regional and a berth in the World Series last year.

The team has been virtually untouchable since the all-star season began, cruising through district (Sanford, Altamonte Springs) and Area play with a perfect 6-0 record.

The state tournament proved to be a little tougher, but just barely, as the local nine won its first two games 18-4 and 10-1 before dropping a 3-2, nine-inning decision to the Miami-Latino Americana squad. But they got their revenge, burying Miami 12-2 in the final.

The team is led by Kevin Graves, who has allowed only one earned run in 25 innings of pitching in all-star play. He also had two three hit games in the state tournament, including a 3-for-3 performance with two doubles against Miami in the championship game.

The Longwood team is managed by Andy Westervelt and coached by John Mellillo and Rick Harawah.

Other team members include Mike Pagozalski, Mickey Kallin, Jeff Epperson, Eric Semook, Justin Hawarah, Matt Main, Chris Westervelt, Ricardo Montalvo, J.T. Williamson, Kevin Mellillo, Tommy Harris, Jose Prado and Anthony DiFonzo.

Cancer spreads to Mickey Mantle's lungs

By STEFANI G. KOPENEC
 Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Mickey Mantle's doctors plan an aggressive treatment to battle the spread of cancer, which moved into his lungs from his diseased liver that was removed.

The 63-year-old Hall of Fame slugger, whose liver was ravaged by hard drinking, hepatitis and cancer, underwent a full-body scan three days before the transplant to see if the cancer had spread. At the time of the transplant, doctors said he would not live more than a few weeks without a new liver.

"If we had found any evidence of cancer outside the liver before we did the transplant, we would have backed out," Dr. Robert Goldstein, Mantle's transplant surgeon, said.

Mantle's gastroenterologist, Dr. Daniel DeMarco, said doctors suspect the cancer was in the lung before the June 8 transplant, but was so small it was undetectable.

Mantle's doctors said they will push chemotherapy, a treatment the ballplayer began the day of his operation. No surgery is planned.

"If he had a liver that wasn't working very well, it would be a different situation in that we could not use as much of the chemotherapy as we'd like," Goldstein said. "But now with him doing as well as he is from the transplant standpoint, we have a fighting chance."

However, DeMarco said the "chances are real" that the cancer might spread to other organs.

"At the same time, we're giving him systemic chemotherapy so if it is present, I hope we're having an effect against it," he said.

Mantle's cancer is a potentially aggressive form known as a hepatoma. It can easily recur in his new liver or migrate to the lungs or bones because even after a transplant, cancerous cells can remain in a recipient's bloodstream and lymphatic system, doctors said.

Doctors wouldn't predict Mantle's chances for survival as they had after the initial transplant, when they listed his five-year survival expectancy at about 60 percent.

"It's very early and we're still taking it day by day," Goldstein said. "We are still hopeful that this will respond to therapy."

Overweight patient needs special care

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 38-year-old son is 6'8" tall and weighs about 800 pounds. His blood pressure ranges around 125/75 and his cholesterol around 120. He has at least five severely damaged discs in his back, and four years ago he had a severe infection of the panniculus. Since then, the area has filled with fluid and sags near his knees. Aside from being extremely uncomfortable, infection occurs or threatens constantly, necessitating vigilant care. We've made inquiries regarding help with the obesity, but the local diet clinic doesn't take anyone weighing over 500 pounds and the cost is too prohibitive anyway. You represent our last resort for help.

DEAR READER: Although your son is tall, he suffers from massive (morbid) obesity. In particular, the collection of fat over his abdomen (called a panniculus) has become a source of continuing infection. Fortunately, his blood pressure and cholesterol levels are normal; nonetheless, this amount of weight is certainly dangerous because of stress on the cardiovascular system.

In my view, your son needs to be under the care of metabolic specialists. If he does not qualify for admission to the diet clinic at your local hospital, ask your family doctor to refer you to a teaching center.

I am especially concerned about your son's panniculus infection. To rid him of this dangerous complication, plastic surgeons may have to perform liposuction to reduce or remove the panniculus, along with an operation to get rid of the sagging skin. Such considerations should be part and parcel of his evaluation in a medical center.

Because your son's treatment will eventually include a diet, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Winning the Battle of the Bulge." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to my attention at P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
We all love to act like Monday morning quarterbacks. In particular, if you dabble in the stock market, it is so easy to say what you should have done after the stock you held has gone down or the stock you sold ran higher. In bridge, though, the cards are more predictable than stock prices. You should be able to find the winning play more often than not.

In today's deal, South had decisions to make in both the bidding and play. First, despite holding 20 high-card points, he opened only one heart — correctly in my opinion. (This type of hand is why strong-club systems were invented.) Then, after North had made a limit raise of three hearts, how should South continue? The scientific action is a cue-bid of three spades, hoping to hear partner cue four clubs. But here that wouldn't work well, because East would double four clubs, getting the best opening lead. Then South would have to guess hearts to win 12 tricks. At the table, South made a quantitative jump to six, giving nothing away.

After winning the opening spade lead, South played a heart to dummy's king. When East discarded, South eventually had to try the club finesse, but it lost and he was one down.

Was South unlucky or wrong? Both! It is right to start with the heart ace. Suppose West discards. Then declarer can lead a heart to dummy's king, cash his second spade winner and play on diamonds. If East never ruffs, he is thrown in with his heart queen, forced to lead a club into dummy's ace-queen or concede a ruff-and-discard.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 3, 1995

You might be more fortunate than usual in fulfilling your material expectations in the year ahead. Avoid being wasteful or extravagant, however.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Guard against inclinations to do things that go against your better judgment. Avoid turning potential successes into failures. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone who helped you in the past, but who you failed to acknowledge might put obstacles in your path today. Profit from this lesson.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Try not to be stingy with your friends today, but also make sure that your expenses aren't greater than theirs on group activities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Personal gains are possible today, but your achievements might exact a price. Make sure your rewards are greater than your entry fees.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Something important to you today might not be of equal concern to your associates. You shouldn't count on them to do what you should do yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Luck will be on your side today at the very times you think you need it least. You mustn't take your good fortune for granted, though.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) When negotiating an arrangement today, think everything out down to the last detail. If you don't, small burrs under your saddle could get you thrown off.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not volunteer to take on an assignment you're not qualified to handle just to impress authorities today. Do not let your ego paint you into a corner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will fare better in the long run if you don't take yourself too seriously today. Regardless of the hand you're dealt, be a good winner or a gracious loser.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) By putting yourself in the other guy's shoes today, you can enhance the benefits from your personal relationships.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) For your plans to be effective today, they must not be implemented in a piecemeal manner. Maintain the vision of the big picture at all times.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your best possibilities for financial gain could be through usual channels today. Losses are more likely when gambling on the unknown.
