More Friends, Increased Business.

We all like to do business with the wide-awake, progressive up-to-date merchant. We all like to be greeted with a cheery "Good Morning" upon entering a store to make a purchase, and it pleases us to think that our business is considered valuable and worth some person's time and attention. As a rule we make it a practice to go back to the store where the clerks are on to their jobs and where real service is given. The merchant who insists that his customers and friends are taken care of promptly gets our business. It is this class of merchant who continually finds it necessary to build additions to his store, to make improvements, to add afraid of no man, any issue or more clerks and who is prospering above his competitors.

But there is another variety of store-keeper in almost mies, and may be proud of them every town. He, of course, wants business, some business, all. He tells you he doesn't want too much for if he had much more he'd have to go to the expense of hiring more help and that wouldn't be wise. He doesn't go after new customers, not being much of a believer in advertising the goods he has to sell. This class of merchant always tries to give the impression that he is independent and doesn't need more business. Neither he nor his clerks seem to care whether customers are waited upon promptly or not. Frequently his stock is incomplete. Unknowingly we sometimes go to his store to BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY. make a purchase but when we stand around first on one foot That forced the investigation. and then on another waiting for someone to take our order, we get disgusted and resolve to hunt up a more progressive and up-to-date concern.

Sanford is indeed fortunate in that it has many live wire feat his own party? Or will he merchants doing business here. Sanford has progressive continue working inside the party. business men. As a whole the stores in this city are as good as a fighting senator? Wisconsin if not better than those found in many other cities of much larger size.

Sanford merchants seem to realize that slip-shod methods in business soon make themselves felt. People will soon shun the store that is careless and unreliable. The business that is conducted on a loose and lax scale in this age of timesaving methods does not command much respect in the community nor does it earn big dividends for its stockholders.

Big business institutions are constructed on service and it is those merchants who put special stress on giving service to their patrons, who are the biggest successes. Without service of a first class order a big business cannot be secured.

Pick out the stores that give their customers good service. Pick out the smaller, less progressive merchants and you will select those who care not for service.

Real honest-to-goodness service is worth many dollars to any business man. It means more friends, increased busi-
