According to wording in the presentation, it was given, "...to recognize Ms. Amoruso for her willingness to get involved and help stop crime."

Florida police chiefs say fines are too high

By NICK PFRIPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Florida's police chiefs think speeding fines are too high and plan to ask the Legislature to give violators a break.

"This is something we've been working on for the last few years," commented Lake Mary police chief Richard Beary. "Our officers have long been faced with angry people and phone calls to our office, when people find out how costly a speeding ticket becomes."

Ken Howes of the Florida Highway Patrol observed, "There are people in poor economic situations who just can't afford a $175 ticket, and a lot of them won't pay it."

"Very true," Beary added. "Our police officers have hearts too, and you don't know how difficult it is at times, when an officer pulls someone for speeding, and sees a family of four or five in the car. He often knows that a speeding ticket of $160 to $190 is equal to possibly

DNA links inmate to murdered woman

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — An inmate awaiting trial in Seminole County has been charged with the murder of an unidentified woman in Lake County through high-tech computer matching of DNA.

Joseph A. Rolle Jr., 28, Winter Springs has been linked to the torture death more than three years ago of a woman whose body was dumped in a woods off State Road 433 near the Wekiva River. He will make his first court appearance in the murder case at 1:30 p.m. at the courtroom at John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

The suspect was already in jail awaiting trial on unrelated charges of sexual battery, false imprisonment and resisting arrest with violence charges. He is being held without bond.

The link between Rolle and the mystery woman came when Rolle's DNA information was fed into the Florida Department of Law Enforcement crime lab computer and came up with a match.

"This is a landmark case," said FDLE lab supervisor Harry Hopkins. "It is the first cold we've had," using the DNA database.

Classified information cannot be used

MIAMI — Two officials with Teledyne may not use classified information in their defense against charges of involvement in the illegal sale of strontium for use in Iraqi cluster bombs, a judge has ruled.

Jury selection begins Monday in the trial of Teledyne officials Edward Johnson and Ronald W. Griffin. The trial before U.S. District Judge Shelby Highsmith could last more than four weeks.

Johnson, who was Teledyne's sales manager for ordnance grade strontium, faces a conspiracy count. He is accused of heading the company's sales of strontium to Chilean industrialist Carlos Cardoen for use in cluster bombs destined for Iraq.

Griffin, who was a technical specialist for Teledyne, is charged with lying to federal agents.

The defense has charged U.S. government knew about the sales beforehand.

Grand jury investigates prison break

BELLE GLADE — A Palm Beach County grand jury is trying to determine what went wrong to cause the escape of six prisoners from Glades Correctional Institution and some state lawmakers are blaming shoddy management.

The grand jurors will begin reviewing reports and investigative documents Monday to see if there was any criminal or administrative wrongdoing that allowed the killers to escape last month, said Miles Edmondson, an executive assistant at the Palm Beach County State Attorney's Office.

The inquiry will focus on how the killers were able to tunnel, apparently undetected, for three weeks before the escape that set off the biggest manhunt in state history. It will also scrutinize how prison officials handled notification of South Florida law enforcement agencies, he said.

The review could take as long as three months.

Miami hospital to close nursing school

MIAMI — Jackson Memorial Hospital will close its nursing school next year because of the dwindling number of jobs it now offers recent graduates.

Closing the 70-year-old school may indicate an end to the nursing shortage hospitals suffered in the 1980s.

Hospital administrators agreed to shut the school after they couldn't offer jobs to anyone in the past two graduating classes. The move will save the hospital $1.5 million a year, said spokesman Mark Cohen.

Faculty and students were notified that the school will remain open until its freshman class graduates in December 1995. In the meantime, it will take no new students.

Just six years ago, the combined nursing vacancy rate for Florida hospitals was 16 percent, leading to offers of lucrative deals for new hires.

Recent changes in the health care industry, however, have cut the vacancy rates by more than half.

Woman agreed to show breast, not face

TAMPA — A woman who agreed to be videotaped examining her breast for a television news segment on cancer says she was humiliated when an anchor broke a promise not to show her face.

The woman, identified as "Jane Doe" in court papers, filed a lawsuit Wednesday against anchor Barbara Callahan and WTOG-TV over a feature on breast self-examination taped last August during a class at Moffitt Cancer Center.

The woman said she and another student in the class agreed to be taped after Callahan promised their faces and would not be shown and full breasts not shown.

But when the segment aired during a 10 p.m. newscast in October, the lawsuit states, the plaintiff was "flooded with many telephone calls from family members and co-workers stating they had seen her face on the broadcast and were shocked at the public display of her breast."

'Grease' slips through school's hands

JACKSONVILLE — Just one week before Lee High School students were to perform the musical "Grease," they have been told the show can't go on.

Officials at Samuel French Inc., a New York licensing house for plays and musicals, notified advanced drama teacher Susan Reilly this week that a Broadway revival company has the exclusive rights to the musical.

Ms. Reilly said she first contacted Samuel French about performing "Grease" early last summer and talked to woman at French in October.

"She told me to call French about a week before the performance date and they would send me a contract. Then we'd set the royalty fees afterward."

Ms. Reilly said when she called this week, she was told that the exclusive rights to the musical had been sold.

Jim Merrill, who heads the musical sections at French, was unympathetic.

Group unveils tax incentives Effort made to attract manufacturing jobs

By ADAM YERGANIS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Florida must offer tax incentives if it hopes to create manufacturing work because the state's current effort to attract high-paying jobs isn't working, says the leader of one of the state's top business groups.

Jon Shebel, president of Associated Industries of Florida, said the public-private organization called Enterprise Florida, created two years ago to attract more high-tech jobs, has been ineffective so far.

"Enterprise Florida really hasn't been involved in bringing in high-wage jobs that I can see," Shebel said Thursday. "I think Enterprise Florida has been trying to get organized and trying to do that, unfortunately, in a climate where too many in government are telling Enterprise Florida what it ought to be doing."

Shebel unveiled legislation called "The Florida Jobs Act of 1995," designed to help the state compete with neighboring states for manufacturing jobs through a series of tax incentives.

Proponents said one of the measures — the repeal of sales tax on electrical energy used in manufacturing — would cost the state about $35 million in lost revenue. Associated Industries proposed phasing in the repeal over five years to limit the losses to $5 million a year.

Shebel maintained the other proposed tax breaks wouldn't cost the state any revenue because Florida has lost 85,000 manufacturing jobs since 1988 as well as the taxes they would generate.

The tax incentive plan was developed with the help of more than 100 manufacturers in Florida.

"Florida has a very bad image and reputation among national and international business in regard to our business climate," Shebel said at a news conference. "They really don't look at us when they consider putting in manufacturing plants any more."

Bob McKnight, executive vice president of the Florida Chamber of Commerce, which developed the concept for Enterprise Florida, defended the public-private organization, saying it has worked to overcome "communications problems" that have hampered it since it began in 1988.

"This is very difficult. This is cutting-edge stuff," McKnight said. "Does it have potential? You bet it does."

Gov. Lawton Chiles touted Enterprise Florida as a way to bring business and government leaders together to develop a strategy for bringing better-paying jobs to the state. The organization is based in Orlando and has affiliates that handle job training, financing and high technology.

It said it helped create 8,500 jobs last year, primarily through a job training program that provides employers with state subsidies for creating high-paying jobs.

Chiles wants to dismantle the state Department of Commerce and move its business development functions to Enterprise Florida. Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay is in charge of the proposed move.

State counts fewer November tourists, but they spent more

By BILL KROSTOFER
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Travel to Florida this past November slumped 8.9 percent from a year earlier, to 3.1 million people, in the second sharp decline in two months, Department of Commerce figures show.

Dwindling auto travel caused most of the drop, falling 17 percent behind November 1993. But air travel remained virtually unchanged, sagging 0.7 percent, the department said Thursday.

Visitors for the first 11 months of 1994 edged above 36.9 million, still down 2.5 percent from the same period in 1993.

There was one bright spot, said Commerce Secretary

Charles Duseau. "While the number of tourists coming to Florida remains below last year's levels, taxable sales are up."

Taxable sales that the state monitors in tourist and recreational categories were $2.6 billion last November, a scant 0.5 percent increase over the year-earlier period.

But they reached $29.9 billion for the first 11 months of 1994, up 2.6 percent for the same period in 1993.

Those taxable sales categories include hotels, motels and tourist attractions, and also other businesses — such as theaters — that aren't used primarily by tourists.

"It's difficult to say who spent more and why," Duseau acknowledged.

One possible explanation of the higher spending is success of tourism advertising focused on South American markets such as Brazil and Argentina, he said.

Latin American visitors tend to stay longer and spend more, not only on tourist activities but on other purchases, said Duseau.

Florida tourism hasn't been promoted as long or heavily in Latin American countries as in Europe.

That means more first-time visitors are likely from Latin America, and tourists visiting for the first time tend to spend more, Duseau said.

Shuttle thrusters fall after liftoff

By BARBARA BROWN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — Discovery thundered into orbit today carrying the first woman to pilot a U.S. spaceship, and despite a leaking thruster, the shuttle began a three-day chase after a Russian space station. Two of the 36 large steering jets failed shortly after the shuttle reached orbit early this morning, and one of the failed thrusters was leaking slightly.

Shuttle manager Loren Shriver said the leaking jet was the main problem. It could disrupt Monday's planned rendezvous with the orbiting Mir station if the leak continues and the crew has to go to the extreme measure of shutting off all three jets in that section, he said.

"There might be ways to work around that," Shriver said.

Discovery commander James Wetherbee and pilot Eileen Collins turned the leaking jet toward the sun to melt any frozen fuel that might be preventing the thruster valve from closing. This has always stopped leaks before.

Discovery must have all forward- and rear-firing jets working in order to approach within 35 feet of Mir without damaging the station's delicate solar panels. The fact that the two thrusters failed isn't a major problem because they fire up and down.

The leaking thruster, however, is located in the same section as one of the rear-firing jets. Discovery will still rendezvous with Mir if the key thrusters are disabled, but will have to stay at least 1,000 feet away.

The rendezvous is the top priority of Discovery's eight-day mission. It is intended as practice for the first shuttle-Mir docking in June.

Law upheld banning obscene calls

By JACOB HALLIFAN
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The state Supreme Court has upheld the constitutionality of a law that makes it a second-degree misdemeanor to call people at home and use obscene language to harass them.

In Thursday's 5-2 opinion, the high court concluded the law does not bar "pure speech."

"It is the conduct of intentionally making such a call into a place of expected privacy, not pure speech, which is proscribed," Justice Charles Wells wrote for the majority.

But the court narrowed the scope of the law, by limiting it to calls where obscenity is used to abuse, threaten or harass. The justices struck the words "annoy" and "offend" from the statute as too vague.

The case arrived at Florida's high court when a Sebring woman challenged her conviction, arguing the law violated her free speech rights guaranteed in the U.S. Constitution.

The complaint against Sara Gilbreath was brought by Ronald Hegadis, a manager for the U.S. Postal Service in Highlands County who worked with her husband.

Hegadis said he received some 30 phone calls over a two-year period. Thursday's opinion includes an expletive-filled statement by Hegadis as an example of the content of one of the calls.

In a 182-word speech, 37 words are profane or obscene. Mrs. Gilbreath, who denied speaking as strongly as Hegadis alleged, was convicted in county court and appealed the verdict to both the circuit court and the 2nd District Court of Appeal, both of which upheld the verdict.

Gary Cozzett Jr., a Sebring attorney representing Mrs. Gilbreath, said he was disappointed in the high court's ruling and added there was a very good possibility he would appeal the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Chief Justice Stephen Grimes and Justices Ben Overton and Leander Shaw supported Wells' opinion. Justice Major Harding concurred in its result only. The dissenters were Justices Harry Lee Anstead and Gerald Kogan.

Anstead wrote he thought state could outlaw "non-consensual obscene calls made to a person's home with the specific intent to harass the person called."

But, he added, he thought the present statute was too broad to be constitutional and questioned the court's authority to limit it.

Anstead warned the law punished speech that takes place in a consensual conversation if the caller tries to annoy or offend the listener with a dirty word.

"For example, friends discussing politics in a friendly conversation may often violate this statute when they reach a point of disagreement and one uses a 'dirty' word to 'annoy' or 'offend' the other," Anstead wrote in a dissenting opinion supported by Kogan.

A business owner in the 1800 block of State Road 434 reported checks were taken from an unlocked office sometime between Jan. 20 and 31. The theft was discovered when a forged check was cashed at a Longwood bank.

A wallet taken from a car at an auto dealership in the 4100 block of Highway 17-92 Jan. 29 was recovered in Leesburg. A pair of tennis shoes was also taken.

A resident in the 1500 block of Grace Lake Circle, Longwood reported a propeller was taken from her boat inside her fenced backyard between Jan. 24-28.

A vehicle reported stolen from Daytona Beach was recovered in the parking lot of an inn in the 2400 block of Highway 17-92.

A gun found in a wooded area behind Timacuan subdivision by a Lake Mary High School student Sunday has been turned over to the sheriff's office. An argument took place about midnight Wednesday at a fast food restaurant in the 4400 block of West Lake Mary Boulevard between soccer players from Lake Mary and Deltona. An 18-year old student lifted his shirt showing the Colt .45 although he did not point the weapon. A Lake Mary assistant coach learned about the incident from a Deltona coach and asked the youth for the gun. He got it from his car trunk.

A woman shopping in a store in the 3800 block of Greenwood Boulevard in Lake Mary agreed to help a fellow shopper and her wallet ended up missing. The victim was approached by another female who asked if she would hold up a pair of pants she wanted to buy for someone else who was about the same size. After the encounter, the woman discovered the theft.

A homeowner in the 200 block of Pheasant Run Court, Longwood, reported someone entered an open, unlocked garage and took over $300 worth of golf clubs.

A Longwood auto dealer in the 1300 block of Highway 17-92 reported checks were stolen from his business after a man took a test drive while a woman stayed in the office.

A resident in the 2900 block of West 23rd Street, Sanford reported someone stole a bike from a locked shed.

Incidents reported to Sanford police

A man in the 2500 block of South Sanford Avenue said between Jan. 31 and Feb. 2, someone took a boat propeller.

Two separate thefts were reported at a construction site in the 400 block of Lake Mary Boulevard. A four-cycle motor valued at $600 was stolen from a ground compactor, an Orlando company reported Wednesday. The theft occurred sometime between Jan. 27 and Jan. 30. A Tampa company said someone took 90 3-foot-9-inch aluminum framing beams valued at $10,000 from the same site between Jan. 20 and Jan. 24.

A video store owner in the 2900 block of South Orlando Drive reported a patron rented four video games then failed to return them and thinks they may have been pawned. The games are valued at almost $300.

Report: Increase funds to punish kid sex offenders

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A statewide task force is recommending Florida spend some $52 million dollars to implement new programs to deal with juvenile sex offenders since it found the current system isn't working.

Some 2,000 juveniles were arrested for sex offenses in a recent 12-month period, said the task force, which reported to Gov. Lawton Chiles' juvenile justice advisory board. Of those, 800 were in the juvenile justice system — where there are only 23 beds reserved specifically for sex offenders.

The others youths were left in limbo somewhere because of a lack of resources to treat them, said task force Chairman Christopher Card.

"Most of the time they are not in any system," Card said.

The numbers cited in the report — which were compiled by asking state attorney's offices around the state for their data — will provide a blueprint for lobbying efforts during the upcoming legislative session.

Card said he realizes the chances his recommendations will be passed are slim. Juvenile justices got about $7 million in the current fiscal year, he said.

Failure to treat youthful offenders can have grave repercussions later on, Card said, adding that more than 90 percent of adult sex offenders began their crimes as juveniles.

Card said one challenge facing the court system is identifying who the offenders are in the first place since there is no centralized way of tracking them.

Sex crimes involving youthful offenders also can be difficult to prosecute because of the demographics of their victims, officials said.

"When you start with a child perpetrator you can assume that in many cases the victim is an even younger child," said 8th Judicial Circuit State Attorney Rod Smith, who serves on the juvenile justice advisory board. "They're difficult victims to deal with in terms of proof."

The lack of treatment facilities for young criminals is another frustration facing the justice system.

"Very often, the recommendation for what happens to a kid is what is available for that kid," said Circuit Judge Chester Chance.

The task force recommended that reporting of child sexual abuse be centralized with a statewide child abuse hotline, at an estimated cost of $2.7 million.

Convicted young sex offenders should then be evaluated by a psychologist before placement in a treatment program. Such evaluations would cost about $600,000 for 3,000 offenders, the group said.

Treatment facilities for offenders and their victims would consume the lion's share of funds allocated under the task force plan — about $28 million for residential and outpatient facilities.

Law enforcement also needs to be trained in handling young sex offenders, Card said.

"With proper training an investigator can get a confession out of a sex offender more than 90 or 95 percent of the time," Card said.

Two people killed in wreck

BUNNELL — Florida Highway Patrol officers stationed in DeLand, investigated a two vehicle collision on Interstate-95, three miles from Bunnell yesterday. Two persons were killed.

According to an FHP report, a 1985 Ford was traveling north on the interstate, when it attempted to pass other vehicles, and veered onto the median grassy area. It then reportedly crossed into the southbound lane, where it collided head-on with a Kenworth Semi tractor/trailer.

James Dustin Stevens, 21, of Palm Coast, and Rochelle Ann Morris, 23, of Bunnell, were both killed as the result of the collision.

Fred William McSwain, 59, of Cherrylake, N.C., was uninjured. An estimated $9,000 in damage was reported to the truck. The Ford was totaled.

No charges have been filed in connection with the collision.

We need a groundhog

All kidding aside. The Central Florida Zoological Park needs a groundhog. Why not? Punxsutawney, Pa. makes many dollars each year as tourists flock to the small city to watch their beloved Phil.

Television cameras spread what goes on in Punxsutawney clear across the nation. T-shirts are sold, cuddly stuffed groundhogs are sold. Everyone benefits, and the nation hears and cheers about the shadow sightings of this little creature.

Expand your mind. If our zoo had, for example, Sanford Sandy. The national media may be interested to know if Sandy had the same reaction as Phil up in Punxsutawney.

Perhaps another groundhog could be headquartered around Salt Lake City or some other central-western area. Then we would have a triangle of weatherforecasters on Feb. 2 of each year: north, south, and midwest. It would be a two-out-of-three decision on whether or not we will have more winter weather or not.

Not only that, but there will be three cities, rather than one, getting in on the profits from this age-old myth.

We are fully aware of other groundhogs across the nation, which also are touted on Feb. 2. None, however, has gained the prominence of Punxsutawney Phil. Why? Purely a matter of public relations.

If we obtain a groundhog at the Sanford zoo, we would have to launch a nationwide campaign to announce it, and stress that Sanford Sandy is a trained weather forecaster, capable of matching Phil on a one-on-one basis, and willing to join with some westerner.

Lame-brained idea? Perhaps. But people have been laughing at such situations since the beginning of time. Yet after an idea proved to be beneficial, the laughing stopped and the cheering started.

Why not? What do we have to lose?

LETTER

Arrogance

I keep seeing news reports where the Democrats in Congress are blaming last year's loss of the House and Senate on Clinton. What a bunch of arrogant cry babies! In 1992 Clinton was elected because the country wanted change. But, the Democrats in Congress wanted to stay the same. So in 1994, the voters voted out the Democrats, not Clinton.

When I hear the Democrats whine about how Clinton is making them look bad, I think they need to wake up and smell the roses. It's the Democrats that are making Clinton look bad. And when I see Clinton cooperating with Newt, I wonder if Clinton wouldn't be better off dropping the Democratic Party. It's something he should consider.

Booker prays for O.J., Susan, Newt

With so much senseless turmoil in the news, I needed the earthy wisdom of my Harlem friend, Booker Malcolm Bethune. Booker is a deeply religious man, given to writing prayers, more a dialogue with God than a plea for help. But Booker refuses to share his prayers with anybody. After he has gone out to play his daily number, I sneak a look. I don't know whether it's divine intercession, but Booker sure does hit the numbers a lot.

Yo, Lord -- It be me again, Lord, your man, Booker Malcolm Bethune. I hope you be diggin' my name-change. My main squeeze, Beulah, said I was sexist cus all my names be names of black men. So, I now be Booker for Booker T. Washington, Malcolm for Malcolm X and Bethune for Mary McLeod Bethune. At least it shut up Beulah.

But I has to check in with you, Lord, and ax you to comfort me cus there don't be nothin' but bad news in the newspapers and on the television. And I mean, BAD, Lord!

O.J. Simpson be on trial for killin' his wife and her friend, Susan Smith be goin' to trial for killin' her two baby boys. President Clinton dese been put on trial for doin' a worse job than George Bush.

And Newt Gingrich, he dese tol' the whole

Democratic Party they ALL goin' to stand trial for jes' one reason -- Bein' Democrats.

That Newt, he be one mean Bubba. He so mean that when he get up in the morning, the sun ax him if it be OK to shine that day.

And that's what be botherin' me, Lord. Folks dese gotten to be so nasty to each other. When we be chilrin', we treated each other nice. Now, everybody mad. Not just mad, but mad at each other. Mad at they wives. Mad at they chilrin'. Lord.

And then, they kill 'em.

I switch on the television and thought I be watchin' Mr. Clinton tell us how he goin' to do better than the Republicans. Somebody on the floor below

"I don't know whether it's divine intercession, but Booker sure does hit the numbers a lot."

me, Lord, be playin' they record player real loud and they wus playin' the song, "I surrender, dear."

President Clinton's State of the Union was one sorry state of affairs. He stood there so pitiful. It be like he had lost an election to the Republicans and they social "Contract With America."

Mr. Clinton talked about a "new social compact." But he ain't got enough votes to do nothin'. That's all he can do is talk. Bubba be like Gen. Robert E. Lee handin' over his sword.

But that ain't right either cus Newt Gingrich be Bubba, too. I changed the channel and watched a movie.

The next day, Lord, I want to see how they be goin' to put O.J. in prison. But them lawyers got to arguin' and carryin' on and I don't know what all. I found me another movie.

Lord, even if they prove O.J. did it and the jury convict him, it still ain't right cus he don't be gettin' no death penalty. And he oughta. The district attorney be axin' for the death penalty for Susan Smith.

I don't see no difference in what them two people did, Lord. They jes' be doin' it in two different states.

Lord, I know you taught us to "forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us."

Staying in abusive relationship

WASHINGTON — During the first week of the O.J. trial, I didn't expect to be sitting in a stranger's kitchen, listening to tales of abuse from a woman whose scars curl like snakes where her ex-husband wounded her.

There was no way to predict that a friend would tell me about this "nice lady" she knew who'd recently revealed that she and her children had been in hiding for years.

The woman, my friend said, wanted to tell others that "nobody has to stay in an abusive relationship."

That explains how I came to be sitting in the woman's home. What it doesn't explain is her terror, which is so palpable it seems to pulse from her in thick waves.

And it doesn't quite explain the effect of her story — which in some ways is very different from that of the wealthy celebrity wife who was slain with a friend in Los Angeles. Hearing it made taped excerpts from attorney Johnnie Cochran's masterful description of O.J. as a repentant husband sound very different than they had just hours earlier.

I knew that wasn't fair. O.J. must be judged by his actions only, and Cochran raised many valid points and unanswered questions. My encounter with the woman only underscores the obvious:

How things look to you depends on where you're sitting.

Arriving at her home, I found the woman sitting on the floor, drawing pictures with a 2-year-old child whom she was baby-sitting.

Child care has been her salvation. Housing, feeding and focusing on her own school-age children keeps her going. Caring for other people's kids pays the bills.

The woman explains that she can't reveal her name, how many children she has, where she lives or any other identifying detail.

You wonder why she bothers. Because over and over, she says she "knows" he will find her.

He started hitting her even before their decade-long marriage, she says, back when she was a teen-ager.

"I was young, and stupid, to be honest," she says. "You think that's part of love — having a guy show jealousy."

But it got worse after they married. He pushed her down stairs, slammed her into walls, perpetrated a panoply of abuse that's neatly typed in the restraining order that she keeps with her children's custody papers.

Her husband always apologized. She always forgave him. But each incident added to an edifice of fear that now seems impossible to dismantle.

"One day, I will open my door and he will be out there," she says. "I don't care where I go ... I can't forget. Every time I look in the mirror, I see the scars."

She got them one summer day when he attacked her so brutally that she ended up in the hospital for weeks. She recalls the hospital stay as one of the few times when she had no fear. "I knew I was going to die, so it didn't matter."

She didn't die, so she got to see her husband in the hospital — sobbing, professing love. "Can you believe that?" she asks.

Not any more than I can believe that she didn't press charges, didn't even leave him.

She shakes her head. "I beat myself up for being so stupid. ... I didn't press charges because he said, 'I love you. I will take care of you.' Plus, I was told the police had enough to do it without me. ... But they threw the case out of court."

But one day, finally, she says, "I got tired. ... He hadn't touched me. But I knew there had to be something better." When she left home, she says, "I had $23 and my children."

With the help of a shelter, she found her first job and a place to live. Slowly, she increased her belongings from one donated mattress to a houseful of modest furniture.

Looking at her life, at the polite and happy children, she tells herself, "You haven't done so bad."

Now if she could just get him out of her head. She lies awake in bed, jumping at every creak. Walking down the street means constantly turning, searching. The only place she feels protected is in church, "where I say, 'God didn't bring you this far to leave you.'"

She wants to tell that to other abused women who say, "I don't have money," or, "I have no job."

"I left. ... It can be done."

Seeing all that this dignified woman has accomplished, that fear won't let her enjoy, I tell her that over the years her abuser may have forgotten her. He may have remarried or landed in jail. He may even have died.

Her look tells me I haven't a clue, no matter where I'm sitting.

"Even if he was dead," she says, "I still wouldn't feel safe."

"How things look to you depends on where you're sitting."

Challenging role in the U.N.

UNITED NATIONS — At a time when United Nations officials want to expand their "blue beret" peacekeeping operations, they're bound to come up against a Republican Congress in Washington that wants to turn it into a truly "thin blue line."

The new Republican majority has made the National Security Restoration Act a keystone of its controversial "Contract With America." Under the act, contributions to U.N.

peacekeeping efforts would be withheld until the world body recognizes the "indirect" expenditures America makes to its peacekeeping efforts. Republicans argue that these "indirect" expenditures — such as money spent on the Somalia rescue operation and Operation Desert Storm — more than make up for financial shortfalls in other areas.

Passage of the act would codify decades of hostility and distrust of the U.N. among conservatives. Deeply wary of sending money and men to an organization over which America has only nominal control, Republicans want to cut funding and impose greater conditions on American support for future missions. This has alarmed U.N. officials, and sent the Clinton administration scrambling to make amends.

According to officials at the American delegation here, the Clinton administration is planning to launch a full-court press on Capitol Hill and across America against the GOP's plans to cut funding. They're more than a little embarrassed that Republicans succeeded in pushing through a resolution calling for a new inspector general to audit the books at the U.N. in exchange for American funds. Now the administration believes it must act quickly and decisively to halt any further erosion of America's standing in the world body.

White House officials are predicting that Clinton will veto the National Security Restoration Act should it pass as currently written. Moreover, they believe Congress would find it difficult to find enough votes to override.

A high-ranking State Department official at the American mission here told our associate Dale Van Atta that he believes there is a real constituency for the U.N. in the United States, something he predicts Congress will be surprised to learn. He calls the Republican attack evidence of an "extraordinary disconnect" between Congress and the American public.

The GOP challenge comes at a time when the U.N.'s mission is changing rapidly from peacekeeping to peace-enforcing. With more than 80,000 troops currently deployed to 17 missions around the globe, the total tab for these adventures has climbed to more than $3.6 billion annually, compared to roughly $1 billion for all other U.N. operations.

In earlier days, peacekeeping missions tended to be smaller and less dangerous than today. The number of U.N. missions has more than doubled in recent years. These new peace-enforcing missions have seen soldiers sent to places such as Somalia and Bosnia, where there is no peace to keep.

Republicans complain that America has been saddled with a disproportionate share of the bill for these newer missions. America currently pays 25 percent of the U.N.'s regular budget, according to the current formula, but it pays 31.7 percent of all peacekeeping operations. Under legislation passed last year, American contributions to peacekeeping will be unilaterally capped at 25 percent after Oct. 1.

"Passage of the act would codify decades of hostility and distrust of the U.N. among conservatives."

Harvard senior's report on U.S. economy reaches Washington

By JENN BARTON
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Classroom lectures and a dinner-time chat with her parents got Meredith Bagby thinking: Why doesn't the United States issue an annual report to let citizens know how it spends their money?

A year of research and $8,500 later, the Harvard economics student had written and published her own.

Now Rose Perot is hawkling her analysis in Washington. He wove a copy while testifying before the Senate Banking Committee.

"She has done a first-rate job," Perot said. "It is an excellent financial report to the American people. I urge you to study it and consider publishing such an annual report."

The 70-page report, based on information available to the public, is much livelier than the documents Bagby had to sift through. It's loaded with easy-to-read tables and charts.

Sharon Holman, national spokeswoman for Perot's United We Stand America, said copies of Bagby's report have been sent to the group's directors in all 50 states.

Bagby herself has formed a publishing house of sorts — "I'm working off a checkbook" — to distribute the report to schools, public officials and anyone else willing to pay $15 for a copy. Bulk discounts are available.

Stacks of the report fill her dormitory room. Orders have poured in, including some from the Libertarian and Republican parties.

"I really feel we own America. We pay the taxes but we never hear where the money is going or what is happening," the 21-year-old senior from Palm Beach, Fla., said Thursday. "I think people should be shareholders in America like shareholders of a corporation and keep tabs on the spending."

Her report shows the federal government has reigned in its spending habits, but still spends more than it takes in.

In 1993, the federal government raised $1.15 trillion in taxes but spent $1.4 trillion. In 1994, it raised an estimated $1.25 trillion but spent $1.45 trillion. And in 1995, it will raise an estimated $1.35 trillion but spend $1.5 trillion.

Meanwhile, 14 cents of every tax dollar goes toward paying the interest on the national debt, she points out.

The other 86 cents breaks down like this: 23 cents to Social Security; 19 cents to defense; 14 cents to welfare; 10 cents to Medicare; 8 cents to health; 3 cents each on veterans' benefits, education, and agriculture and resources; and 4 cents on everything else.

Abandoned car found submerged

Only an antenna was visible. Robert Vaughn a paramedic with the Sanford Fire Department, in the water this morning, checked to determine that no one was in a submerged Jeep, found by a fisherman near the Sanford shore of Lake Monroe, west of the city. The Jeep, which could barely be seen above the water level, reportedly had no license plate. The Florida Highway Patrol is attempting to learn the identity of the owner. Although Jeeps are listed as the second most often stolen vehicle across the nation, the most recent Jeep theft in the local area was a 1992 Jeep, stolen from a Sanford resident on January 28.

Orange County bankruptcy guts public school activities

By LARRY GREEN
Associated Press Writer

SANTA ANA, Calif. — A poster in the counseling office at Willard middle school tells kids to "join a team, not a gang."

The problem is, Orange County's bankruptcy ended intramural sports. Gangs are still here.

A record 13 people, most of them youngsters, were killed in January in this city of 388,000, compared with seven in each of the previous two years. Police believe nine of the January deaths were gang murders.

Steering a visitor through school hallways Wednesday, counselor Patrick Yrarrasaval said only proper studies could determine if street violence is linked to the sudden cutoff of school programs.

"But I can tell you that up until the new year ... our kids at least had places to be here after school," Yrarrasaval said. No Willard students were killed in January, although one lost a brother.

Up to 150 students used to play intramural sports after class, "and now they can't," Yrarrasaval said. "Now we're sending them out on the street."

The biggest municipal bankruptcy in U.S. history also has ended tutoring for slower students, computer labs, field trips, electives and just about every other nonessential program. The only elective for eighth-graders at Willard is yearbook. Students have to show up at 7 a.m. for that.

The nation's fifth-largest county declared bankruptcy Dec. 6 because of nearly $1.7 billion in losses from risky bond deals made by county investment managers.

County schools, with a total enrollment of about 400,000, had been required to deposit their tax revenue with the county. Now the money — about $1 billion — has been frozen. Water and sewer districts, firefighters, police and hundreds of county creditors all want their money, too.

of Huntington Bancshares Incorporated. "The acquisition of First Seminole is a very good fit with Huntington's existing presence in the Florida market. First Seminole's banking offices in the Orlando area complement our pending acquisitions of Orlando-based Security National Corporation and Reliance Bank of Florida headquartered in Melbourne."

He continued, "Upon completion of these three transactions, Huntington will operate 18 banking offices with approximately $800 million in assets in South/Central Florida. We are enthusiastic about the additional opportunities this combination will offer us as we continue to pursue our niche strategy in select Florida markets."

Huntington will pay cash for shares of First Seminole in this private purchase transaction. The acquisition is expected to be completed late in the second quarter of 1995, after Florida's new interstate banking laws become effective. Completion of this transaction is subject to approval by First Seminole Bank's shareholders and appropriate regulatory authorities.

"We are very excited about joining forces with this premier Midwestern banking company as they expand their presence in Florida," commented Dennis H. Courson, who is president and chief executive officer of First Seminole Bank. "Huntington has been recognized nationally as a leader in banking technology, alternative delivery systems and consumer products; our customers will benefit from a broader range of products and services," continued Mr. Courson.

Huntington Bancshares is an $18.0 billion regional bank holding company headquartered in Columbus, Ohio. The company's banking subsidiaries operate 344 offices in Ohio, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. In addition, Huntington's mortgage, trust, investment banking, and automobile finance subsidiaries manage 75 offices in the eight states mentioned, as well as Georgia, Maryland, New Jersey, North Carolina, and Virginia.

Murder

Beginning in 1990, convicted criminals who committed murder, attempted murder, and sex crimes including sexual battery and lewd and lascivious acts were required by state law to submit blood samples to establish a data bank.

For various reasons ranging from prisoners being released before the samples are drawn to medical work in some counties being contracted out, Hopkins estimated only about 45 per cent of the required DNA samples are being collected.

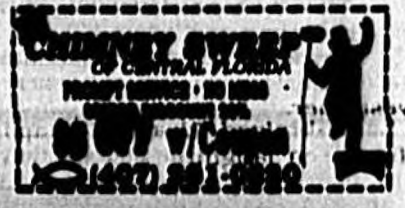

There are 9,100 samples in the DNA database now and about 3,900 samples remain to be entered, Hopkins said.

Sifting through the DNA data last week, lab workers found a match between Rolle and sperm taken from the victim in the three year old case. Investigators said every orifice on her body had been penetrated sexually and bones in her neck were crushed. She was strangled.

Rolle's cases pending in Seminole County were scheduled for docket sounding before Circuit Court Judge Leonard Wood Feb. 7.

Speeding

said. The fine structure is inconsistent and confusing, which gives motorists the impression that officers make up numbers.

The Florida Police Chiefs Association has drafted resolutions urging lawmakers to simplify traffic fines.

"The move is endorsed by all the chiefs of police around this area of Central Florida," said Sanford police Commander Dennis Whitmire. "Those heavy fines have certainly brought a lot of unnecessary criticism against our traffic officers," he added.

The police chiefs also asked lawmakers to require Florida vehicles to display two license plates, front and back, to more easily identify stolen cars and suspicious vehicles. Florida is one of 19 states that require only one plate.

When it comes to speeding, a $63.04 base fine is increased by $4.25 for each mile per hour over the speed limit. So a fine for going 80 mph in a 65-mph zone would be $135.79. Some counties add surcharges up to $12.50.

Beary said there is no specific surcharge in Seminole County. "But we are aware that there is a lot of add-on at various government levels, but it's not law enforcement related."

Beary explained that money received from speeding tickets is broken up between the county, state and city. "It all goes into the general revenue funds," he said.

Money used by various law enforcement agencies for special projects is often taken from "Police Confiscation Funds," which draws funding from confiscated drug money taken during a raid, or other money obtained as the result of a non-speeding violation arrest.

In their 1993 study of speeding citations, the state's various police chiefs concluded the hefty fines caused unjust criticism of law enforcement and the increases were not a deterrent to speeders. The number of traffic tickets in most counties decreased significantly between 1990 and 1993.

They have suggested fine-tuning the rates by eliminating the $4.25 now charged for each mph over the limit. Instead, speeders would be charged a set fine.

"The present system is unfair," said House Transportation Committee Chairman Kelley Smith, D-Palmetto. "I think the rates have gotten out of kilter, but I'm not sure we will be able to look at it this year because we've already got a full plate."

Rep. Lee Miller, a Tampa Democrat on the Transportation Committee, said the issue is worth researching.

"I didn't know that officers have been so reluctant to issue tickets," he said. Information from Associated Press is continued in this report.

When death strikes Who will take care of your children?

If you live to be 100, that's great. But if something happens to you tomorrow, or next month or next year, who would take care of your children? If you have a will, you should designate in that will who you would like to be guardian of your children. If you do not have a will or name a guardian, the choice of who your children will live with will be left for a judge to decide. The judge, most likely, will not know you, your children or the guardian he or she appoints to care for your children. Here are some things to consider when you are deciding who should care for your children.

BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

Think about the needs of your child. Children need love, patience, space, energy, tolerance, discipline, encouragement, security, praise and love. Even though your favorite Aunt Polly is fun and a good cook, she may not have the patience or natural love for children needed to be a good guardian. If your brother loves children but isn't married and travels on his job, he, too, may not be the best person to raise your child.

Finances. The guardian you choose should be someone who is financially secure and able to handle the expenses of raising your child without undue burden. Think about how the person you choose handles his/her own finances. Are they honest? Are they responsible? Do they make sound budgeting decisions for themselves?

Age. You may think that the ideal person to raise your child is the same person who raised you. However ask yourself how old that person will be when your child is a teen-ager. Will this person be young enough to cope? Will your child be placed in a position to lose the love of another "parent" before he/she is an adult? Think about what the years will do to alter the situation.

Relationship. You may think that "blood is thicker than water" but this isn't necessarily true. Think about the relative you select in terms of the other criteria. Most people feel that choosing a family member is best because of the love and devotion that already exists within the family.

Religious beliefs. The person you select to be guardian of your child should have beliefs similar to yours and the beliefs and values you want your child to have. Some religions designate a religious sponsor for a child at an early age. This person (even though you might wish it) is not necessarily the person selected by the court to be guardian of a child unless the person is designated by you in a will.

Acceptance of this responsibility by the person named. Discuss your plan with the person you have chosen to care for your child. Raising a child is a great responsibility. If there is any hesitation on the part of the person you have selected, talk about it. Be certain that this person agrees to be a guardian before you list them in your will.

Select an alternate. Be certain to choose the person who would be second best to raise your child. Consider all the points mentioned here for this person as well. It's important to have a backup in case something happens to the person you have designated first.

Number of children. When your first child is born you should draw up a will. As more children arrive, this will should be revised. The more children you have, the more important it is to make decisions about who you will choose to raise your children. Decide whether the guardian you choose should or can raise all your children or whether you will select separate guardians for each child.

Personal habits and traits. No one is perfect, but you should think critically about the person you select as guardian of your child. Is this person sloppy or neat? Is this person physically fit? What kind of eating habits does this person have? Does this person smoke, drink or have other negative habits? How does this person take care of his/her home? Is education important? What kind of a social life does he/she lead? Remember, the guardian is the person your child will live with, so as she should be a good example. Also, consider that personal habits and traits of other members of that person's household including wife, in-laws, and other children who will influence your child's life.

What if you change your mind? If the guardian you select makes a mess of their life and you want to have someone else raise your child, discuss it with your attorney and have this part of your will revised. Don't leave this decision to a stranger.

Tree planting honors deceased

An east Palatka holly tree was planted on the grounds of the Garden Club of Sanford Inc. on Jan. 30 in memory of the following members who died in 1984: Luella Behrens, Evelyn Lavender, Ida Fauer, Shirley Sims and Bess Varr. Participating are (standing, from left): Richard Sims, Mary MacTavish, Grace Theobald, Rosemary Sims Fowler, Rose MacCormick and Claudette Behrens. Kneeling: Barbara Bradshaw (left) and Betty Avers, club president.

Divorced man can't get ex out of mind

DEAR MARY: This may seem stupid but since my wife and I divorced last June, I've spent more time thinking about her than I ever did during the 10 years we were married. In fact, I really look for reasons to contact her about anything I can find — usually "kid" stuff.

I find myself brooding about the breakup and what I could have done differently to have kept it from happening. This is really ridiculous since I'm the one who left because I just couldn't take the constant squabbling, bickering, and accusations any more. Maybe I'm just kidding myself, but sometimes I think she still has feelings for me too.

The real kicker is that I know that if we got back together we'd be right back where we were before we divorced — great sex but hating each other — otherwise I'm constantly depressed and feel like I'm in a no-win situation. I can't live with her and I can't live without her.

Is it normal to feel this way?

CAN'T GET OVER LOSING HER

DEAR CAN'T: You may be legally divorced, but emotionally, you're still very much attached. You've actually got the most important phase of the divorce process ahead of you — adjusting to the reality of the loss of your marriage and the dream of living happily after.

Yes, it is normal to feel this way — it's natural to grieve over your divorce. Allow yourself to feel sad and talk to people who have gone through it to reassure yourself that you're not alone in your pain.

Be aware that this post-divorce

FAMILY COUNSELOR

time can be a period when people are prone to abusing alcohol and drugs, both prescription and nonprescription varieties. Resist the urge to use chemicals as a way of easing your loneliness unless they are prescribed and monitored by your doctor.

Also, avoid jumping into another relationship too soon. You're still too emotionally vulnerable to risk having to undergo another broken relationship right now.

Many people have found new friends in self-help and social groups designed especially for singles. There are several in the Orlando area. Talk to friends and read the newspaper to find out when and where they get together.

Finally, realize that it takes time to recover from the financial and emotional trauma of divorce. Many experts indicate three to five years is a normal adjustment time. Don't ignore the possibility that you may need some post-divorce counseling to help put your failed marriage into perspective.

Ex-GI searches for New Testament owner

DEAR ABBY: I was a demolition specialist in the 99th Division that held the northern shoulder in the Battle of the Bulge.

Around Jan. 20, 1945, our supply lines had been re-established, and we were on the offensive again. The next village had been taken, and I was clearing the road of mines so our tanks could move up, when shells began to fall nearby. I took refuge in a bombed-out building, where I found a New Testament opened to Psalms 30. There were two bloody thumbprints on the pages. Evidently, the soldier had been reading the Bible when the medics picked him up. An inscription in front says, "From the Young People of Cyclone Union Church." Abby, I have tried for years to find a community called Cyclone, but have been unsuccessful. If any one reading this knows of a Cyclone Union Church that existed in the '40s, please contact me. Someday, whether here on earth or in heaven, I will meet that veteran and return this Bible to him.

E.S. JACKSON, HOUSTON
DEAR E.S. JACKSON: There is a Cyclone, Pa. I found it in my trusty Rand McNally World Atlas. If any reader sends me information, I'll pass it on to you.

DEAR ABBY: I just read your column about blood donors, and I had to write.

In July of 1983, my husband was dying of cancer. He told his doctor that he wanted to see his children (ages 7 and 2) play at the beach one last time, and my parents, who live on Martha's Vineyard, wanted to see their son-in-law once more. My husband was bleeding internally at that point, and could hemorrhage at any time. He was admitted to the hospital and given four units of blood over the next two days.

Thanks to the generosity of four strangers, my family made that last trip to the beach. Ten days after we came home, my husband lost his five-month battle with cancer of the pancreas. He died one month before our 10th anniversary. He was only 43.

Our children still remember their last vacation with their dad. If you use this letter, please don't use my name.

A WIFE TOO SOON
DEAR WIFE: Please accept my condolences on the loss of your beloved husband. Your letter is further testimony to the good accomplished by blood donors. In your husband's case, it bought precious time for him and your family. Bless you and your children and thank you for sharing your experience.

DEAR ABBY: Why don't you — and some of your readers — get off our necks for smoking?

Why don't you stick it to drunk drivers, drug pushers and child molesters?

I know you won't print this, but if you do, I am sure you would find a lot of people who agree with me.

NO NAME, NO TOWN
DEAR NO NAME: You must be a new reader. I have been "sticking it" to drunk drivers, drug pushers and child molesters since I started to write this column in 1986.

DEAR READERS: who said, "The White House is the finest jail in the world?"

Man's ventures in art merely imitate the magnificence of God's designs. No museum can offer a winter landscape to rival God's own etching. The works of the Divine Artist not only bring us beauty, peace and inspiration, but also teach us fundamental lessons for everyday living. The love so evident in nature's beauty is a love we can all share. The orderliness of creation inspires unity, trust and brotherhood. For all our spiritual searching, you and I cannot match the touch of the Almighty. But following lines He has drawn for us - perhaps one day our human scene will look more like something God etched.

Fourth Annual Prayer Breakfast set Commentator — sports legend, Joe Gibbs to speak

By SUGAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Sanford Civic Center will be the site for the Fourth Annual Seminole County Prayer Breakfast on Wednesday, February 15 at 7 a.m. Sports legend, Joe Gibbs, will be the keynote speaker for the event with the theme, True Success in Life.

Gibbs, former head coach of the Washington Redskins, took the team to four Super Bowls, winning three world championships. He was named AP "Coach of the Year" two seasons in a row, a distinction that had not been achieved in over 20 years.

On March 5, 1985, Gibbs shocked America when he retired at what seemed like the pinnacle of his career. He wanted to spend more time with his family and other endeavors, and felt it was time to move on.

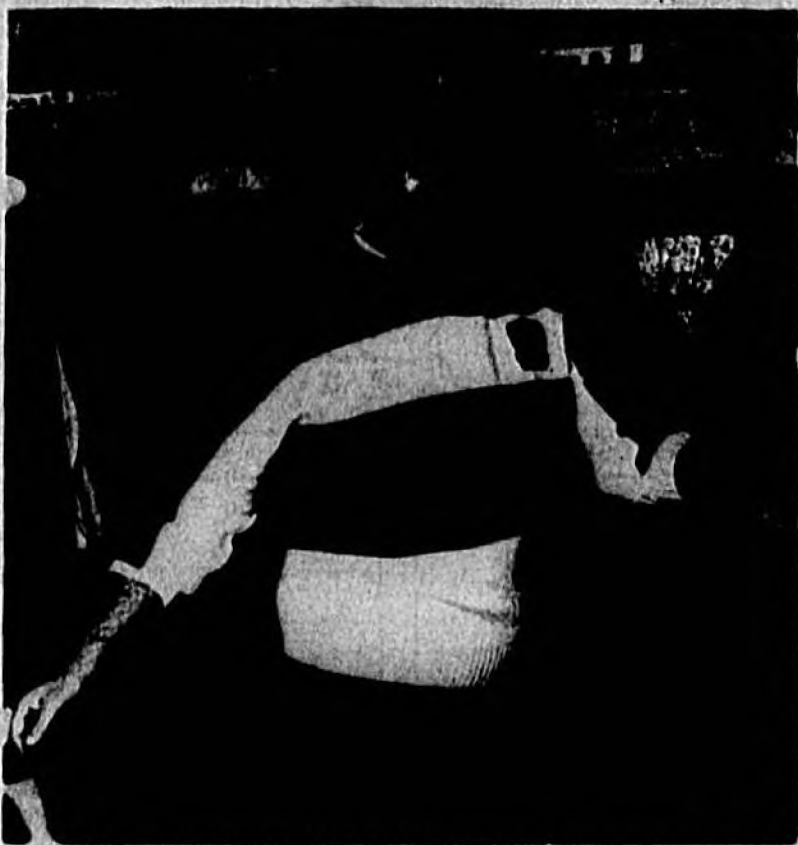

Broadcasting for NBC and NFL games has become his current employment, although helping young people has always been on Gibbs' heart. This led him to establish "Youth for Tomorrow," a home for troubled teens aged 14-18. The facility houses 15-30 children year round, with an extensive staff that schools, cares for them and instills Godly principles that will guide them when they leave the home. Over the years, Gibbs' personal commitment and time at the home has turned hundreds of children away from drugs, alcohol and crime and demonstrated to them that they are each valuable and important in this world. Brian Walsh will introduce Gibbs following a welcome by MC Mayor Bettye Smith. Music will be provided by special taping, Teen Challenge and a song presentation by Dawn Talent. Many will participate in a time of prayer for the community, business and government.

A feast of french egg casserole, hash brown casserole, croissants, bagels, muffins, butter, cream cheese, jellies, fresh fruit, coffee and orange juice will be served for the participants dining experience.

Geoff Koach of Strang Communications discussed the upcoming event and the need for community involvement. "We're really trying to invite elected officials," he said. "We need to share the good news of Christ with others. We want to draw the community in a spirit of unity."

Steve Strang, owner of Strang Communications, was one of the founders of these prayer breakfasts. Koach further shared their hope and purpose of the gathering. "First we hope to challenge men and women in Seminole County with the claims of Jesus Christ in such a way that they will want to accept Jesus Christ as their personal Savior," he said. "Second, we want them to have an evangelistic outreach that will impact the governmental and civic leaders of our city in a positive way so they are aware that the Christian community is alive and well in Seminole County. Third, we strive to provide an opportunity for Christians to be involved thereby working together and in a small way, strengthening the Body of Christ in the Seminole County area."

The cost of the breakfast is $150, corporate sponsorship, for a table of eight or individual tickets at the price of $15. Seating will be limited and a sell out is expected.

Interested parties should make their checks payable to Seminole County Prayer Breakfast. Mail checks to Seminole County Prayer Breakfast, P.O. Box 951446, Lake Mary, FL 32768-1446. For further information call 323-0649 or contact Geoff Koach at Strang Communications at 323-0800.

David Ring shares victory testimony

By SUGAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Nationally known evangelist, David Ring of Orlando, will speak at the Sanford Civic Center on Thursday, Feb. 8 at 7 p.m. The community is invited to attend.

Ring, who was born with cerebral palsy, presents a powerful testimony of how the love of Jesus Christ transformed him from "a cerebral palsy victim into a cerebral palsy victor."

The youngest of eight children and the son of a Baptist minister, Ring has spent much of his childhood days participating in church activities.

Empowered by Jesus Christ, Ring has overcome extreme physical and emotional obstacles to become a messenger of the Gospel. In 1971, Ring was called by God into the ministry; he entered full-time evangelism in 1973.

Ring has been a guest on The Old Time Gospel Hour and the 700 Club and has spoken at numerous conferences, youth rallies and state conventions.

Currently, he is staff evangelist for First Baptist Church of Orlando. Speaking engagements take him to over 200 churches annually.

Ring and his wife, Karen, were married in 1963. They have four children: April, Jane, Ashley Dawn, Nathan David and Amy Joy.

Also appearing in concert is the Wilburns, a nationally known family group from Nashville, Tenn., Merry River and The Boggy Creek Trio from St. Cloud, Fla.

Tickets are available for $6 in advance and $8 at the door and are available at Osborne Book & Bible Store, 2559 Sanford Ave., Sanford. Doors will open at 6 p.m. the night of the event. For further ticket information call 323-4063.

Try physical therapy for pain in the hip

DEAR DR. GOTT: What treatment is best for the pain of bursitis in both hips? The pain followed left knee replacement. Cortisone injections have only provided temporary relief.

DEAR READER: Bursitis of the hips (inflammation of the joint covering) is a common disorder that may result from over-use of these joints. Although it frequently affects people who have not had knee surgery, I have seen it in post-operative patients as well. I believe that there is a simple explanation for this.

Before surgery, pain in the knee may be quite disabling, forcing patients to restrict their activity. After surgery, however, when the pain is relieved, such patients exercise much more strenuously. This places added stress on the hip joints, which then become inflamed.

In my experience, prescription anti-inflammatory drugs (such as Indocin, Feldene, Lodine and others) usually reduce this inflammation and the pain of movement, walking or standing. Ask your doctor for a prescription.

In addition, physical therapy -- such as ultrasound and hot packs -- may help return you to normal.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband burps all the time and almost never stops. Spicy or bland foods all have the same effect. He's a very large man and won't have X-rays because he's afraid of what they will reveal. He also gets short of breath when walking only a few feet. I'd like some answers to what he denies might be a problem.

DEAR READER: If your husband is obese (more than 25 percent above his ideal body weight), as well as being "large," his overweight may be the basis for his symptoms.

As the abdominal wall enlarges with fatty tissue, it can press against the stomach, causing poor digestion, heartburn, gas, and belching. In addition, the excess fat may make breathing more difficult, leading to shortness of breath.

especially during exercise. I'm sorry to learn that your husband is afraid of what medical tests might reveal. This seems a bit self-destructive to me, particularly if your husband has a weight problem that is causing symptoms and could be associated with hypertension, diabetes, heart disease, and other ailments. I really think that he should see a doctor. While he's waiting for his appointment, he should get on a diet: no junk food, sugar or alcohol. Once he starts losing pounds, he may feel so much better that the doctor can minimize the testing.

MEDICINE

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

In "David Copperfield," Charles Dickens defined happiness as having a greater income than annual expenditure -- which is apparent on December 31. In bridge, happiness is winning enough tricks to make one's contract -- which is apparent on or before trick 13.

In today's deal, West has led the diamond king against four spades and East has signaled with the 10. What is the result with best play on both sides?

North's response of two no-trump is the Jacoby Forcing Raise. South's rebid of four spades shows a minimum opening with no side-suit singleton or void.

When the dummy came down, South thought everything was plain sailing. He won the first trick with the diamond ace and cashed the spade ace. When East discarded, the diamond seven, there was a pause. South exited with his remaining diamond, but West, who had seen the diamond 10, played his two. East won with the nine and switched to the club 10, which ran to dummy's queen.

Declarer played three rounds of hearts, yet East won with the jack and returned the club nine. South played low from hand, but West didn't have to play the king: one down.

"You missed happiness on January 1," commented North. "If only you had ducked the first trick, East would have had only one entry. The play continues with a diamond to your ace, the spade ace and three rounds of hearts. East wins and switches to the club 10, but you win with dummy's queen and play two rounds of trumps. West wins and has either to lead a club away from his king or to concede a ruff-and-discard."

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Ouel
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Feb. 4, 1988

Astrologically, the chickens will come home to roost in the year ahead. Fortunately, the stars indicate a number of happy surprises.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A close associate is in charge of a situation that you are better equipped to handle. If encouraged, he/she might step aside today and let you take over. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Watch for opportunities today. You are in a cycle of good luck and you'll probably find yourself in the right spot at the right time.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Being exacting about your goals today could be the principal reason for your success. Friends might also play key roles in bringing this about.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your logic and your intuition will both be accurate today, but if they should oppose one another, give more credence to your intellect than to your hunches.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The lessons that will do you the most good today won't come from books. Someone may share an experience with you that you can share with someone else later.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An objective you've been reluctant to attempt is reachable today, but not necessarily on the first try. If you fail initially, regroup and try again.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Greater strides can be made today through a partnership than by acting as an independent agent. Think of collaborative work as strengthening, not a weakening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Give top priority to objectives that directly affect your work or career today. Not only are they the most important, they're also the most attainable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Conditions will shift in your favor today, resulting in the strengthening of a relationship that is vital to you at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not interfere with an important development that is running smoothly. If you start toying around with changes, you might run it off its rails.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your initial ideas might not be as good as your mate's today, but you can take his/her thoughts and turn them into something better. Work as a team.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) This might be a red letter day for you. Something you've been working on long and hard could finally become profitable.

"Clear and Present Danger"
(Paramount, Rated PG-13)

"Clear and Present Danger," based on the Tom Clancy best seller, brings back Harrison Ford as Jack Ryan. This time around, he's promoted from analyst to deputy director when Adm. James Greer (James Earl Jones) is diagnosed with pancreatic cancer.

While investigating the death of a friend of the president, Ryan discovers the dead man was a money launderer for drug lord Ernesto Escobedo (Miguel Bandolay), and soon is thrust into the "war on drugs."

Only problem: Who are the enemies? In true Clancy style, enemies are both within and without. In this case, the bad guys go all the way up to the White House and back, and pepper the Colombian jungles. Straddling the middle is a former intelligence officer for Fidel Castro, Felix Cortez (Joaquin de Almeida), who has his own agenda regarding the balance of drug power.

As Ryan dives into his own investigation, the CIA's deputy director of operations, Robert Ritter (Henry Czerny), and National Security Adviser James Cutter (Harrie Yulin) launch the president's secret, covert action in Colombia to eradicate drug labs, warehouses and the drug lords themselves.

Heading the attack is a dedicated CIA operative named Mr. Clark (Willem Dafoe), who commands the high-tech raids from his hotel room equipped with computer, transmitters and cellular phones.

Ryan is set up as the fall guy for the armory Ritter and the self-righteous president (Donald Sutherland).

On the action scale, "Clear and Present Danger" rates an eight. There's no high-tech silliness, but some nicely choreographed destruction. A sniper attack in Bogota on a car caravan carrying Ryan and other government officials is superb and will have you on the edge of your seat.

"Color of Night" (Buena Vista, Rated R)

Psy Dr. Bob Case. He's a psychiatric ward as he's used up on his patients — and he's not a patient himself. He's a man who's been put on a psychiatric ward. He's a man who's been put on a psychiatric ward. He's a man who's been put on a psychiatric ward.

worship about on a dark and stormy night.

An act, at least this time, the psychopath is packing a nail gun.

Once in California, Case (Bruce Willis) has to put — and often, he doesn't take up with his psychiatrist buddy, Bob Keesh (Scott Bakula), who is receiving death threats and suspects the culprit is one of the five members of his Monday Night group therapy session.

Keesh's job is to help Case cope with his past, but Case's job is to help Case cope with his past.

Along comes the mandatory counselor, who's a former Marine (Robert Patrick), who wants Case to take over his friend's Monday Night group to help isolate Keesh.

But is it the psychiatrist? The genre-savvy Keesh? The obsessive-compulsive lawyer? The tortured young artist? The cop who's wife and child died under unknown circumstances? Or did the author do it?

And just like in Rome (Lena Headey), the woman who starts her uncensored car into the back of Case's car, the second time they meet, pulls off her dress, revealing — surprise! — that she's wearing nothing but a bra.

Unfortunately, there is nothing erotic in the coupling between Willis and Headey, who repeatedly tear off her clothes in 1993's "The Leaver" to much greater effect.

"Corrina, Corrina" (New Line, Rated PG)

"Corrina, Corrina" is not just a simple love story. It's a love story that finds its inspiration amid the complications of death and bigotry, made even more special by an unusual beauty: supporting Ray Liotta and a sassy but restrained Chi McBride.

The film is the 1988 and Liotta is the newly widowed Manny Singer, a single writer. He must find a housekeeper to care for his daughter, Nanny (Tina Turner), who has decided to sleep with her boss.

Enter Corrina Washington, complete with pointed epaulettes, studded waist and dangling earrings. On her first visit, she manages to get a small view of Manny's empty love life.

She's hired.

But Corrina is no ordinary cook, nanny and housekeeper: She's a college graduate who's trying to create the music industry's pre-hip-hop sound — a blend of funk, soul and jazz — to a music writer and show a particular flair with her notes. She's also bisexual when it comes to jazz, the love (and classical music and poetry — three of Manny's passions) tears down Manny's barriers and helps her conquer her anger and guilt over her mother's death. Manny, in turn, con-up Corrina as a mother figure. But a classroom's meanness seems likely to end school. Corrina allows Manny to play busy for a few weeks and takes her place on her housekeeping job.

Corrina and Manny's relationship grows slowly and quite naturally. It is comfortable and sweet. As they discover just how much they share and have in common. He courts her in his own way and Corrina responds in kind with Manny's love she has kept steady and almost explodes in an angry and racist fit.

But don't worry, there's an unusual ending that makes this a real feel-good film. In the end, "Corrina, Corrina" is not a story of interracial love, but a tale of the human condition.

And if you have stereo speakers attached to your television, pump up the volume because "Corrina, Corrina" has a terrific soundtrack.

Why are films repeated?

By Dick Kleiner

Q. Why do the cable premium channels show the same movies, over and over and over, week after week and month after month? — Steve City, Iowa

A. Like everything else, the newer economics. The cable companies have the rights to air a movie, and these are not cheap, so the cable companies must get their money's worth.

There are just as many movies being shown as there are of four as being shown. So, for both those reasons, the same movies are repeated frequently.

Recently, I saw "Back Street" on the movie "Send Me No Flowers." There was an actor I had seen in "The Godfather Part II." I saw "The Godfather Part II" on "The Godfather Part II." I saw "The Godfather Part II" on "The Godfather Part II."

Q. That was Pat Harrington. While he was never a "Gunsmoke" regular, did he guest on the show several times?

ASK DICK KLEINER

DICK KLEINER

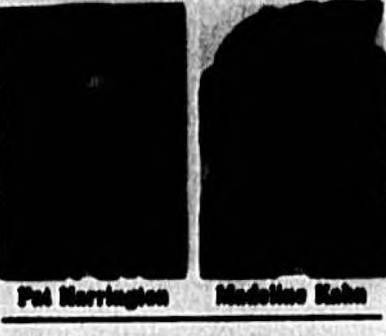

Q. Who played Sir Francis Drake in the TV series? Terence Morgan? Who played the captain of the ship in the TV series "Adventures in Paradise"? McKel? — R.M., Tucson, Ariz.

A. Right on both. Terence Morgan starred in "The Adventures of Sir Francis Drake," and it was Gardner McKay who piloted the ship.

Q. About three or four years ago, I found a movie called "God in My Co-Pilot." Raymond Messer played God, Chansol, but I can't remember who starred in the film. Due to a mistake, the first 15 minutes of the film has been erased. Is a VCR available? — G.R.E., Orange Park, Fla.

A. Dennis Morgan was the star, but there is no VCR available. You'll just have to try to catch it on a late, late show and hope it.

Q. Are there any shows about to have me committed, because while we were playing a board game, I said there was a movie called "Woo Ton Ton, the Dog That Saved Hollywood" (or some other rick). Now my nickname is Woo Ton Ton. Please help erase this stigma. — L.B., Wellerburg, Pa.

A. Dear Woo Ton Ton: That was a genuine movie, called "Woo Ton Ton, the Dog That Saved Hollywood." It starred Bruce Dern and Madeline Kahn. It came out in '78 and was, if you'll pardon the phrase, a dog of a film.

A film by Stone gathers some moss

By Robert Bianco

Has the steam gone out of "Natural Born Killers"? When it opened this fall, Oliver Stone's latest film was the hottest movie in America, embraced by many critics as the last word on America's long-standing love affair with violence. Unlike many critical favorites, it was even popular with filmgoers — well, for a week at least, until they returned to "Forrest Gump" and "The Lion King."

NONE VIDEO

ROBERT BIANCO

Was its equation of murder and the media a pungent comment on modern America, or a ridiculous exaggeration?

Woody Harrison and Juliette Lewis are arrested in the teeth of "Natural Born Killers."

Then, one night, "Pulp Fiction" opened, and suddenly nobody seemed to be talking about "NBK" anymore. In fact, here it is only January, and we can't even count on people remembering that we called it "NBK."

Loosely one's place on the movie "in" list does not, of course, detract from a movie's artistic merit. But Stone's films are more than movies; they're pop-culture events, and when the event's over, the movies themselves seem to diminish. How many people willingly sit through "JFK" these days now that it is no longer de rigueur to do so?

haven't seen it. Goes — remember when the movies used to be a pleasurable experience?

Elsewhere in video: — Looking for something a bit more cheerful to share with your kids? ABC Video and ESPN are releasing three new tapes in their "Let's Play" series: "Let's Play Basketball," with Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski; and "Let's Go Fishing: Beginner" and "Let's Go Fishing: Intermediate to Advanced" with Fische Street, A.J. Pitt and Holly Flanders. The tapes have a suggested price of $14.95 each.

sary, ABC Video is releasing "All About Erica," a salute to Susan Lucci's devil-goddess Erica Kane. She may not have an Emmy, but how many of those Emmy winners have their own tapes?

— If you think "NBK" sounds fright-ening, imagine sitting through another installment of the "Police Academy" series. The seventh movie in the series, "Police Academy: Mission to Moscow" (1994, Warner, no set price) sends series star George Gaynes, Michael Winslow, David Graf, Leslie Easterbrook and G.W. Bailey to Russia to fight Moscow's mafia. As if the Russians don't have enough problems.

Whatever its current status as a pop icon, "NBK" (Warner, no set price) was so thoroughly discussed and debated on its original release that there's little need to re-view it here. If the debate or the kind words from other critics have left you curious, by all means rent it. However, if you're one of those people who steadfastly avoids ultra-violent movies no matter their merit or message, feel free to avoid "NBK" as well. Despite what some critics would tell you believe, your cultural soul will survive.

On the plus side, watching these tapes with your children just might encourage them to turn off the TV and get some healthy exercise. On the minus side, they'll probably expect you to join them, which would be tiring, and with those old tapes, downright expensive. And you thought letting them watch "NBK" was dangerous.

All in all, you might be better off just letting your kids watch other people play basketball. If the idea appeals to you, CBS/Fox Video and NEA Entertainment have two new basketball compilations: "NBA Super Stars 2" and "NBA Below the Rim" ($14.95 each).

— From dunks to divas: In honor of "All My Children's" 25th anniversary,

More kid stuff. MCA/Universal has released "Shelley Duval's Bedtime Stories" ($29.95), an animated collection of six stories narrated by some familiar names. The stories and narrators are "The Little Rabbit Who Wanted Red Wings" (Shelley Duval), "Katy No-Pocket" (Mary Steenburgen), "Bontas Barber Bites" (Rhea Perlman), "Ruby the Copycat" (Shelley Long), "Aunt Ipp's Museum of Junk" (Kathy Bates) and "Uncle Wizmo's New Used Car" (Ed Begley, Jr.). It's something to keep your kids occupied until they grow old enough to prefer complete junk like "Power Rangers."

— I'm a sucker for a catchy slogan. MGM/UA is cutting the price on some of its best movies, and promoting the deal under the name "Gable's back and Garson's got him." But it's still pretty good. Among the films are "Some Like It Hot" (1959), "Diner" (1982), "My Favorite Year" (1982), "Victor/Victoria" (1982), "The Long, Long Trailer" (1954), and the original "Father of the Bride" (1950).

GARAGE SALE GUIDELINES

1. Government will provide a list of homes that are on the market.
2. Make it convenient to check at your garage sale by having a sign on your driveway that says "Garage Sale".
3. Make it easy to find. Have plenty of change and a sign for home. Have a sign on your driveway that says "Garage Sale".
4. Provide prices. Do not make every person ask. "How much is this?" Prices make for quick, effective sales or a good time for customers to start bargaining.
5. Get on early start. Set up display on the evening before.
6. Be courteous. Separate the inconsiderate from the more considerate. Group similar clothing, toys, lawn equipment and other items with similar merchandise.
7. Showings. Split up one area for "under $10" another for "under $1". Consider having a batch of items that are "free" with purchase of $5. Remember the youngsters, too. Be open to the idea of lower priced items that are bargains for the purpose.
8. Time your sale carefully! Have it at a time when most people are home and unoccupied with usual duties.
9. Combine your effort! Increase your sale with a neighbor for more variety and greater impact.
10. Be organized when displaying your sale in the neighborhood. Be neat and clean. Be friendly. Say, "Good morning!" Each time you list an item, you are increasing the list of potential customers.
