

About 2,000 spectators and news media personnel lined the Kennedy Space Center runway to see the first Florida landing from orbit of a space shuttle.

landing strip when it soared into view, trailing twin white contrails and quickly banking to begin a sharp left turn over the ocean to begin its final approach.

About 2,000 applauding VIPs at the landing site spotted the ship four minutes before touchdown. A half minute later, two sharp, thunder-like sonic booms swept over the area.

The shuttle began its descent when its twin braking rockets were fired over the Indian Ocean. The astronauts sliced into the upper fringes of the atmosphere over Hawaii, crossed Mexico and then raced across the Gulf of Mexico, passing 140 miles south of Mobile, Ala.

"Doing great," reported Brand as the ship sped over the Gulf at 11 times the speed of sound.

Challenger crossed 110,000 feet over the Florida west coast north of New Port Richey and telescopic television cameras picked up the ship. It zoomed high past Orlando, and flew over Lake Mary and Mosquito Lagoon before arcing over the Atlantic and making its landing approach from the northwest.

The Challenger was scheduled to land at the Cape last June, but dense clouds forced its crew to divert to a landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California's Mojave Desert. Eight of the nine previous shuttle missions ended in California. Columbia landed once at White Sands, N.M.

Mission controllers told the astronauts that some patchy ground fog was drifting over portions of the Kennedy Space Center runway 1 1/2 hours before landing time, but astronaut John Young, flying a jet, said the shuttle would be able to land through it.

The astronauts had buttoned up the winged space freighter at 3:15 a.m. by closing the doors over the ship's 60-foot-long cargo compartment.

The astronauts turned in for the night an hour early at 3:07 p.m. Friday — flight controllers wanted them to get a good rest for today's return to Earth.

They woke up shortly after midnight and enjoyed a finger-snapping instrumental version of "In the Mood" that was beamed up from Houston. The tune was recorded by amateur musicians at mission control.

Packed away in Challenger's cargo bay were the two jet-propelled backpacks that McCandless and Stewart used Tuesday and Thursday to fly free in space for the first time.

Left behind, stranded in space, were the two $75 million communications satellites that suffered apparently identical rocket failure after the astronauts launched them.

Lake Mary Businessman Killed In Motorcycle Wreck

The vice president of a Lake Mary company was killed Friday evening when the motorcycle he was riding went off the road and struck a pine tree.

Dead is David W. Blount, 43, of 103 Toula Ave., Longwood, who Florida Highway Patrol investigators said was riding his 1982 Yamaha motorcycle north on Markham Woods Road, three-tenths of a mile north of Lake Mary Boulevard about 6:05 p.m. Friday when he apparently lost control of the bike, and it left the road then struck the tree.

FHP investigating trooper, Mike Tindell, said Blount was pronounced dead at the scene.

Blount was, according to his partner in their Lake Mary business, Shower Safety Seal, Tony Liberatore, on his way to Liberatore's home when the mishap occurred. Liberatore said they were each riding their motorcycles on Markham Woods Road shortly after leaving their firm on Lake Mary Boulevard, and passed two joggers along the way. "then we came up onto a curve, David was in front of me, and he just seemed to lose it at the curve ... I don't know how, I saw him hit the tree."

Blount's death brings to five the number of traffic fatalities recorded in Seminole County this year.

Blount joined the shower seal firm several months ago as executive vice president in charge of operations and public relations. He is one of the founders (Liberatore is as well) of the recently organized Sanford Chemical Awareness Network drug fighting group.

Blount is survived by his wife, Sonia; two daughters, Beth Ann Brooks, 21, now seriously ill in Jackson Hospital in Miami; and Brenda Lee Hyland, Phoenix, Ariz.; five grandchildren; a brother, Jerry, Arkansas; parents, Dr. and Mrs. Gene Blount, Apopka.

When he arrived in the area three years ago, he was employed by Sonny King Buick and was a Gold Star salesman, later joining Zerkoff Pontiac, Casselberry, according to Liberatore.

Born June 3, 1941, in Youngstown, Ohio, Blount had an engineering degree from Toledo University in Ohio.

Funeral arrangements are pending.

...Schools Seek Far-Reaching Legislation

He added, however, that he doesn't see any need to ratify the elections of the past unless there is a court challenge. "The best thing is to pass a general law giving counties the option of having non-partisan elections for school board," he said.

State Rep. Bobby Brantley doesn't like the idea of shifting appeals to the governor and the cabinet when those decisions can be made locally.

"Unless the School Board can show some dire need of transferring that authority from the local level, I would not favor the proposal," he said.

The Longwood Republican added there may be some merit to granting the school board authority to borrow money in one fiscal year and repaying it in the next.

"The chances are slim that the Legislature will convene in January rather than April," Brantley said. "It's not going to happen because it is cold in Tallahassee in January. He said he would like to hear the arguments on changing the counties' and cities' fiscal years.

"That's an issue I haven't heard before," said Brantley, chairman of the Seminole County Legislative Delegation.

Of placing cities and counties under the administrative procedures act, Brantley said unless the School Board can show making that change would give them some benefit, "it is a waste of their time and effort and an irresponsible position to take" trying to put cities and counties under the act.

"I would rather see the school board take a positive position. I would rather see them ask that the law be changed for themselves if they can show just cause," he said.

County Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff, noting citizens and groups whose zoning requests are turned down by cities and counties, usually after public hearings before planning and zoning boards and governing bodies have the right of appeal to the courts, asked whether cities and counties, under the school board proposal, would get the right to appeal to the governor and cabinet, too.

"The governor is a very busy man with many jobs like helping Cardinal Industries build their modular homes," Kirchhoff said. "He is already over-burdened."

As far as fiscal years are concerned, Kirchhoff said they are often changed.

"I would like to hear the arguments for and against," he said.

State Rep. Carl Selph, R-Casselberry, said of the right to appeal to the governor and cabinet, "I don't know why they should be able to appeal to the governor and cabinet. Everyone else has to live with the zoning and planning laws. I don't know why the school board shouldn't have to. The governor and cabinets are not aware of local zoning concerns like the people here are."

The School Board told Carey Ferrell, their legislative lobbyist, it would only be a good business practice for all governments in Florida to have identical fiscal years.

investigator for the Seminole County sheriff said.

"People who intentionally pass bogus bills usually hit poorly lit businesses at their busiest hours, so the cashier won't have time to take a close look at the cash they are taking in," Gilbert said. "They stay away from banks and business that might take the time to check. In the past three weeks, besides the Arby's incident we've handled counterfeit bill reports from about four other Seminole County businesses — gas stations, other fast food places and the House of Babes. All of the places hit got with one to three of the phony bills.

"Every once in a while we get a rash of these things and it seems to be happening now. Some of the cases are related, because the bills are from the same series. Volusia County is also seeing some of these," Gilbert said.

Twenties are most frequently duplicated by forgers, because, Sweat said, "People accept them without looking. If it's a 50 or a 100 they are more likely to check the bill. And if they did look and compared a suspect bill with a genuine one it's pretty easy to spot a phony.

"The quality of the printing is usually poor on a counterfeit bill. The lines will run together in the screen pattern behind the portrait and the images will be less clear. The color will probably be off and the phony bill will have a different texture, because real bills are printed on a high quality paper that is imbedded with tiny blue and red fibers. That paper can't be duplicated," Sweat said.

"We had never seen a counterfeit bill before, but as soon as I saw the one Martin took Sunday I knew there was something wrong," Gelb said. "He — Penhaligan — hadn't noticed it. But after I spotted it we tried to test it to see if it was real or what. We thought it might have just gotten wet, so we soaked another bill and dried it to see if it would look and feel the same. It didn't. We reported it to the sheriff. Then when we called about the second bill the deputy said he thought we were just counterfeit happy," Gelb said.

The two Casselberry women who were arrested in that Arby's case were released from the Seminole County jail on Feb. 2. Patricia Ann Aron, 29, and Joyce Elaine Pilkerton, 21, both of 1001 Epanada Way, charged with forgery, are now being held by U.S. Marshals in an undisclosed location, Gilbert said.

"Anyone caught passing counterfeit money faces up to 15 years in federal prison for each bill they pass, if they are convicted," Sweat said. Producers of phony money receive the same punishment as those who pass the bills, he said.

When sheriff's deputies arrested the women they initially reported not

Healthcare Express Coming To Hospital

Special to the Herald
It's a robot. It's a talking computer. It's a road show. It's a classroom. It's the Healthcare Express!

A traveling exhibit the Healthcare Express... It will be open to the public from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., and it is free. Star of the Express is "HICA," a four-foot robot, and he is backed up by five talking computers. Theme of the traveling exhibit is "Human Energy," and visitors will learn about the human machine, how it functions, what makes it ill and what keeps it well.

Displays on the circulatory system, the brain, the respiratory system, diet and fitness teach through illustration. The displays are interactive — a visitor must touch them to make them work. The five computers talk, thus visitors can test their healthcare knowledge. And every 20 minutes, a lively audio-visual program chronicles the history of hospital care. Another feature is "The Wish," a fast-paced informative audio-visual documentary on the evolution of healthcare. It is shown simultaneously on six screens inside and out of the Express. Ideal for students and school groups, "The Wish" is pertinent to health careers.

The Express has been touring the western United States, stopping at every hospital owned by Hospital Corporation of America. Thousands of children and adults have viewed its displays, toyed with its talking computers and chatted with "HICA." "HICA," (pronounced Hicka) the Express's most celebrated passenger, will greet guests and invite all to also visit the many other exhibits and to tour various departments within the hospital. Physicians and hospital staff will be on hand to answer questions. CFRH is an affiliate of HCA and is one of many Express stops in Florida. HCA converted their World's Fair exhibit, a 29-foot tall Healthcare Pyramid, into a traveling exhibit to share with its hospitals and their friends in the community. There will be balloons, refreshments — fun for the whole family while they learn how to be healthy. There will be many things to do, see and hear about healthcare.

The theme for the fair was "Family and Community in History," and all categories were related to this topic.

In the Project section, Jennifer Durak took first place with her project entitled "Europe-Asia Communities."

The Speech Contest was led by Seminole with Jerry Walsh and Kenny Eckstein placing first and second, respectively. Finishing in first place out of 40 students in the Extemporeous Essay Contest was Rita Wesley, with Debbie Dudley placing fourth.

The team of Tina Larson, Sue Bisign, Jill Janak, and Liz Prior took first place in the Debate competition.

Though it didn't place, the Current Events Bowl team of Mike Brooks, Tammi Basso, Steve Boney and Jeff Giordano, did an excellent job of exhibiting its wide spectrum of knowledge.

Congratulations and much thanks to all the students who participated and council and committee members who made it all possible. Special thanks go to Mrs. McCarthy, Mrs. Bales and Mrs. Jones.

Child's Respirator Will Be Disconnected

TAMPA, (UPI) — A court-appointed guardian for a 14-month-old boy who is virtually brain dead says he agrees the child's respirator should be disconnected because, "I don't want him to suffer."

Andrew James Barry, born Christmas Day 1982 with a severe brain defect, may become the first child in the nation to have his life support system disconnected under an appellate court order.

The ruling, issued Jan. 27 by the 2nd District Court of Appeal at Lakeland, goes into effect Sunday. But Leroy Merkle Jr., the child's legal guardian, said no date had been set to disconnect the respirator.

Hospital officials refused Friday to discuss the date or any other aspect of the case.

Soviets Leaderless; Reagan Won't Attend The Funeral

MOSCOW (UPI) — Millions of Soviets today began four days of mourning for President Yuri Andropov, whose death from kidney failure left the Soviet Union leaderless for the second time in 15 months and raised the possibility for a power struggle.

Andropov, 69, will be buried Tuesday.

His 455-day term of leadership ended with his death from kidney, heart and lung failure Thursday. A medical report disclosed he had been on dialysis for one year.

His body will lie in state in the white columned House of Unions a block from the Kremlin from today until Friday, the official TASS news agency said.

No official biography ever included references to his family, so the mourning period was expected to provide a view of survivors and resolve the question of whether he had a wife or was a widower.

The Kremlin flag dropped to half staff Friday and about 60 soldiers worked during the night to chip ice from the Red Square reviewing stand where dignitaries will gather for his burial.

President Reagan, who was vacationing in California, named Vice President George Bush to head the U.S. delegation to the funeral, ending speculation Reagan might himself go to Moscow.

Some lawmakers and administration officials had pressed Reagan to head the delegation as a gesture of conciliation toward the Soviets.

In Washington, Secretary of State George Shultz relayed Reagan's condolences to the Soviet Union and expressed the administration's readiness to work with Moscow to make the world a safer place.

There was no indication when a successor to Andropov would be named. The announcement could come any time after the selection process is conducted in secrecy among the 12 surviving full members of the ruling Politburo. Their choice, whether one man or a collective leadership, will be submitted to the 300-member party Central Committee that will report the customary unanimous approval.

Konstantin Chernenko, 72, the rival who lost the struggle for Soviet Communist Party general secretary to Andropov after Leonid Brezhnev died in November 1982, emerged as a strong candidate for the Kremlin leadership.

The white-haired Chernenko, a Russian who rode Brezhnev's coattails into the Politburo, was named chairman of the funeral commission — the same role Andropov assumed when Brezhnev died.

Other leading candidates were Mikhail Gorbachev, at 52 the youngest Politburo member, and Grigory Romanov, 60, whose power base is Leningrad, the country's second largest city.

Police Nab Kiddie Theft Ring

TALLAHASSEE, (UPI) — Police say the Oleson Road Playboys — a group of young boys who had worked out a surprisingly sophisticated theft ring — were ultimately foiled when the group's youngest member asked his elementary school teacher how to operate his new calculator-watch.

Police said school officials were suspicious and called in the Tallahassee Police Department and the Leon County Sheriff's Department. Within hours, deputy Leslie Kitching had confessions in hand.

The group, which called itself the Oleson Road Playboys, was led by a 14-year-old. The other members included three 12-year-olds, an 11-year-old and a 10-year-old.

Police spokesmen gave the following account of the boys' activities:

The boys formed the club in late 1983, meeting in an abandoned house which they still refuse to identify. They also kept elaborate records of items they wanted to steal and of fights they planned to have with other "clubs."

The list of desired loot included watches, a stereo, hats, video games, shirts and shoes. An "x" was marked beside some of the listings to indicate they had gotten what they wanted.

The boys apparently began their activities by stealing candy from a gas station. Later they hit another gas station for six baseball caps.

Finally, they stole seven watches, a stereo and two video games — plus batteries — from a local Kmart, with three of the boys distracting store employees while the others stuffed the items into their coats.

Police spokesman Dick Simpson said the total haul was about $250.

Three of the juveniles were charged with conspiracy to commit grand theft; the other three were charged with grand theft. Simpson said if found guilty they would be sentenced to some type of community service and would have to undergo counseling.

Ms. Kitching said the parents had been cooperating in the case but the children had been close-mouthed, refusing to even disclose the site of their club meetings.

She said one of the suspects told her: "Man, I don't know about these other charges, but I didn't conspiracy to nothing."

Seven Indicted In Scam

MIAMI (UPI) — Seven lawyers, mortgage brokers and title company employees have been charged with bilking banks and elderly widows out of $550,000 in a real estate scam, FBI agents said.

The suspects were indicted Friday on charges of conspiring to misapply money from bank loans. They are accused of filing false statements concerning the purchase of three Coral Gables residences in 1981 and 1982.

Old And Ugly
Women Dress Down For A Night On The Town

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

When Jay Lee and her gang of old and ugly women invade a bar, all attractive women there are transformed into instant wallflowers.

"Normal women become envious when we arrive dressed old and ugly and kiss every man in the place. We're kissing here. We're kissing there. It's bedlam," Ms. Lee said.

And that bedlam is created twice a year when Ms. Lee loads up about 50 women, who have spent hours making themselves look old and ugly, and takes them barhopping in a trolley.

"Society doesn't let ladies get crazy. I always say if I can't get crazy, I'd probably go insane," Ms. Lee, 32, said. But she preserves her sanity and that of other women who are too shy and reserved to aggressively go after a man, any and every man.

Some women who take Ms. Lee's trolley ride to fun are married, including her mother, Barbie Morrison of Sanford, and her sister, Lori Robbin of Winter Springs. The idea for the two nights of craziness, one in April and the other in October, developed about 10 years ago when Ms. Lee wanted to get together with her school chums who were all married or were involved in serious relationships.

"I figured the only way I could get them out of the house was to dress them up old and ugly so their husbands and boyfriends couldn't get jealous. A lot of husbands who find out how obnoxious we are won't let their wives back out. Now I try to include the husbands too and invite them to be at the last stop. Not only does that help enable the girls to gather, it also keeps them from driving home after having a few drinks. One time I went out with 35 girls and came home with about seven. I mean somebody had fun. Either that or they did have rides home. I hope they had rides.

"It's contagious. It's a night of your life when you can cut loose and laugh so hard that your sides split and your knees give out. If you don't want to participate you can watch, but most of the women really get carried away when they realize that they can't be recognized," Ms. Lee said.

"I tell them before we leave, your husband isn't here, your boyfriend isn't here, your children aren't here and your typewriter isn't here. It's your night. If you're 45 and you see a 22-year-old sweet little thing and you want to kiss him on the cheek, go kiss him on the cheek. And they do."

"A lot of the men are kidnapped and taken along on the trolley to the next stop. But they don't know what they're in for. We had one fellow who barely got out of there with a stitch on. The girls were passing him around the trolley. I mean actually picking him up and passing him around. He had this big old grin on his face," Ms. Lee said.

Ms. Lee's brother, Jack Morrison, and "Good Old Sam," the trolley driver, are the only men who start out with the group. Ms. Lee's 12-year-old son Chad helps the old and uglies park their cars when they arrive at Ms. Lee's Winter Springs home. Chad garners a lot of kisses from the women and vows that his mom promised he will get to go along for the party sometime soon.

But his mom said, "No way. There's no way, because that would defeat my whole purpose. You can be crazy and wild or you can be a mother. I also have to watch out for the girls."

After a certain point in the parties "the girls don't have any respect at all for me because I'm just as rotten and obnoxious as they are," Ms. Lee said.

"But we're on a tight schedule and I'm paying $40 an hour for the trolley. We've got so many places to go and so much to do if one of the girls isn't on the trolley in time, my brother just goes in and throws her over his shoulder and carries her out of the bar. He'll be throwing one on and another one will be jumping off."

The finale of the evening is an ugly contest. Three men from the audience at the final stop are dragged onto the stage by the women to serve as judges.

Among the old and uglies at the last contest were Phillis Diller, Dolly Parton and Olive Oyl look-alikes. Ms. Lee, who said she is too busy planning the party to put a lot of thought into her costume, dons a Groucho Marx rubber nose, moustache and glasses, sprays her ash blonde hair gray and puts on red and white striped bloomers. She straps a look-a-like "grandbaby" doll on her back and joins her gang, who pays $10 each to join in the fun.

Ms. Lee serves wine and snacks before they leave her home and drinks are half price for the women at the three bars they patronize.

The next old and ugly party is scheduled for April 13 and although the schedule isn't complete, Ms. Lee said the party will end at J.J. Whispers, Orlando.

In response to potential critics, Ms. Lee said, "I don't want to offend the elderly. A lot of my friends are very old people from the office (Ms. Lee is a dental assistant for her father, Dr. Jack C. Morrison, Sanford). I just love them to death. I hope to be old someday and I'm not trying to offend anyone."

When Ms. Lee does get old the parties will continue, but she said they will then be come as you are.

"We have women in our group from 19 to 90. At the last party there was a 70-year-old woman who had more fun. She didn't wear her teeth. She only had one tooth in the front of her head; she had the best time."

SCC Brain Bowl Team Off To District Competition

Sponsors are standing, Dr. Harry Stafford and Lucinda Coulter. Art Taylor is also an alternate.

Special To The Herald
"Which crusade was the most successful in achieving its objective of regaining the Holy Land?"

"Which of the three types of earthquake waves may be propagated through the earth's core?"

Buzz. The audience held its breath as the thoughtful student released the button and correctly answered the questions.

There were cheers from the audience.

Pat Schiner, a student at Seminole Community College had won a $50 credit at the bookstore and a potential place on the SCC Brain Bowl team to enter the Regional Competition.

Brain Bowl is an annual competition sponsored by the Florida Division of Community Colleges. Four person teams compete at the regional and state level to find the best team in the state. Teams compete by answering questions on the subject matter taught in Humanities, Science, Math and Social Science in state community colleges.

A quick response and broad knowledge are necessary for success.

A preliminary competition at SCC this year pitted 28 students in a one-on-one tournament. Second prize of a $35 certificate went to sophomore Steve Roberts. Sara Welgard and Frank Dailey tied for third place receiving $20.

"This year's crop of Brain Bowl contestants is the best yet," declared Dr. Harry Stafford, Brain Bowl sponsor. "With a bit of luck, it's the best in the state."

"Bright students get few chances to show off their accomplishments," Cindy Coulter, also a sponsor stated. "This society goes into hysteria over sports but rarely recognizes those capable students who accumulate knowledge."

In an effort to build up academic recognition, this year the state is awarding five $1,000 awards to the top team from a community college. Most schools start early with team drills on rules and practice questions. Spirit is high as students respond to questions on Humanities, Science, Math and Social Science with a five second limit to begin an answer.

"When I first entered, I never thought I had a chance to win, said one of the contestants, "but it is fun to compete, and it gave me a chance to go back and review what I have learned. I also learned a strategy that gave me an edge: Be quick on the buzzer."

"We set up the competition in the commons area in front of the library," said Coulter. "It was noisy and filled with traffic, but we wanted to see how contestants would perform under pressure."

"Practices have been continuing," says Dr. Stafford. "We expect to put in five or six hours a week on drill until the Regional Meet Feb. 17. Then, we hope, it's on to state."

The last prize at state is $250 each.

Dr. Stafford, who also is the Honors Program Coordinator added, "We have some very bright students here at Seminole. They are enrolled in demanding classes. Most relish the opportunity to show what they've learned."

Would you qualify for the Brain Bowl team? Well if you gave the "first Crusade" as the answer to the first question in this story and "P or Primary Waves" as the answer to the second question, you might qualify for the team. If you will be an SCC student in term II, call Dr. Stafford for information.

Parents' Love Should Be Seen And Heard By Kids

DEAR ABBY: This is not a major problem — just an irritating one. My husband refuses to kiss me in front of the children. I know he loves me, but he bends over backward to hide it when the children are around.

I think children should see their parents express a little affection for each other once in a while — not go overboard, just an occasional kiss.

My 4-year-old made me realize that children do notice things like that when he crawled up onto my lap, gave me a big hug and kiss, and said, "I'm the only one around here who will give you a kiss — huh, Mommy?"

FAITHFUL READER: Children most certainly need to witness expressions of affection between their parents. And fortunate are those who can recall such sweet memories. Psychiatrists' couches are wet with the tears of patients who remember only the fights their parents had.

DEAR ABBY: I am at a loss for a good answer. In the last few years I have been embarrassed by a waitress, a salesclerk and a good friend because I look so young.

First, my husband's boss and his wife invited my husband and me to a fancy club for dinner. The waitress asked the boss's wife if I was her "daughter." (We are the same age.)

Then I was shopping with a good friend (also my age) when the salesclerk asked me how my "mother" liked the dress I was trying on.

Yesterday it happened again when a friend (my age) and I went to a crowded tearoom, and another friend asked if my "mother" and I cared to join her.

I suppose I should feel flattered, but I know it must have hurt these women.

Please give me a good answer so I won't feel hurt by my friends.

OLDER THAN I LOOK IN TUCSON

DEAR OLDER: There is nothing you can do about what other people say, so please don't search for a "good answer." (In this case, there is none.) Your friends are surely aware that you are not as young as you appear to be, so they may not be as "hurt" as you think they are.

P.S. The only person I know who isn't as young as she looks is Loretta.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I recently took our two boys (ages 9 and 12) to visit some friends in Minnesota. (We are from Virginia.) We raised our boys to always say "Yes, sir" and "Yes, ma'am" when speaking to adults.

The people we were visiting have children about the ages of ours, and they never addressed anyone as "sir" or "ma'am."

A visiting neighbor remarked on how "nice" it was to her own sons say "Yes, ma'am" and "No, ma'am." Our Minnesota host said, "Oh, we don't use that kind of talk — it's too military."

Abby, do you think it's "too military" or do you think as we do — that it shows courtesy and respect?

VIRGINIA FATHER

DEAR FATHER: Do I think it's too military? No, sir! Do I think it shows courtesy and respect? Yes, sir!

...Old And Ugly 9

"Most girls are scared when they first hear about this. They're used to spending hours making themselves look natural and they don't want to go out on the town looking disgusting. But there's safety in numbers and this really works."

"The guys are always a little shocked when we show up but you'd be surprised at how many girls have ended up with lasting relationships from this. One of my best friends met the man she's been with since June at the last one and he adores her."

"My philosophy is that women 20 years ago may have been happy slaying home and raising babies. Twenty years from now they may be happy being equal with the men. But now we're not either and this is a frustrating time for women. Men are intimidated by us but they're not the least bit intimidated when approached by the old and uglies."

"I started this again about three years ago when I was really depressed after my second divorce. I just wanted to laugh so bad I couldn't stand it. I thought what makes me laugh? This is it. I get a lot of calls from mothers who feel sorry for their divorced daughters. This is something these women really need.

"Everyone is out there looking for the perfect person and he or she isn't there. So when the stereotype bull is gone and all that's left is people having a good time, not to take someone home, but to laugh and have fun the guys sense it too and the barriers are gone."

"A guy can come up and grab a girl and drag her to the dance floor. Try that on another night and he'll be lucky to keep his teeth. Believe it or not I'm basically a shy person. But I see what this does for these people. I always go for the guys who aren't so gorgeous, who've probably never been asked to dance. They love it and have the time of their lives with a girl who is really a little timid."

"Everything in my background led to this. It's just typical," Ms. Lee said. "The acting normal part is probably the fallacy."

WIN AT BRIDGE

South wins the heart lead with his ace over East's king, leads the jack of clubs and lets it ride. It holds the trick, and now South goes into a real huddle. West has played the deuce and East the seven. South knows that East would duck that first club with Q-x, Q-x-x or Q-x-x-x. If he holds Q-x-x-x, the contract is doomed. If he holds either of the other combinations, a second club finesse will lose and South will be down several tricks. An ordinary South in an ordinary game would simply repeat his finesse to guard against Q-x-x-x in the West hand.

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby
'When Greek meets Greek, then comes the tug-of-war' is the start of an old college song. In rubber bridge the real tug-of-war comes when expert friends gather for a rubber bridge game and everyone is trying to out-smart everyone else. In today's hand we find expert South playing three no-trump against expert East and near-expert West.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Mobilite Corp. Building Headquarters In Sanford

ORLANDO — The Industrial Development Commission of Mid-Florida, Inc. has announced that Mobilite Corp., the second largest manufacturer of homecare beds, is building a new headquarters facility on a 12-acre site in Sanford. The Ohio-based company, owned by Invacare Corp., the largest U.S. manufacturer of durable medical equipment primarily for home use, is relocating to accommodate its 35 to 40 percent annual growth rate.

Mobilite ships to about 24 warehouses throughout the U.S. for sales through a dealer network and currently employs 80 people.

"The Sanford area is fast becoming one of the focal points — a new 'hot spot' — in the Central Florida area," said IDC President Roy Harris. "Companies such as Mobilite have demonstrated keen interest in this burgeoning area, both for major relocations and for expansions of existing firms."

IDC also announced that Trusso Manufacturing of Florida, a supplier of lumber and components to the modular home industry, is leasing 45,000 square feet at the Sanford Airport, forming its first Florida-based office. Trusso's largest customer is Cardinal Industries, located in Sanford. Trusso employs 12 people and expects to expand to 30 employees within six months.

Dogwood Tree Giveaway

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Forrest Greene, Inc., Realtors, will be giving away Dogwood tree seedlings on Friday. The trees are grown in Florida so they are accustomed to the Florida climate.

Over the past thirteen years, Forrest Greene, Inc., Realtors, has given away approximately 30,000 trees. Two thousand trees will be given away this year on a first come-first served basis.

The trees will be available from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. or as long as they last at 106 Forest Ave. in Altamonte Springs. The office is located just behind the Altamonte Chapel.

Fourth Store For Domino's

The newest Domino's Pizza opened in Sanford last Jan. 31, at 1910 French Avenue (305/321-5000). This is the fourth Domino's Pizza location in the Orlando area.

"Free Delivery is Domino's Pizza trademark and delivery within 30 minutes is guaranteed," company officials say. "It is this commitment to service combined with top quality, fresh ingredients and real cheese, that has made Domino's Pizza the largest pizza delivery company in the country and the largest pizza sauce buyer in the world."

Based in Ann Arbor, Michigan, Domino's Pizza has opened nearly 1,200 restaurants across the country.

Taylor Join Travel Agency

Mary Taylor has joined the Altamonte Travel Agency as an account executive as of Jan. 5, 1984. A graduate of Indiana University, she worked with Allied Stores Corp. for eight years. Mrs. Taylor was a buyer for misses' sportswear at Wm. H. Block in Indianapolis for six years, and most recently held the position of divisional sales manager at the Altamonte unit of Jordan Marsh.

Her responsibilities at Altamonte Travel will include corporate travel, meeting planning, conventions, and incentive travel for local and national businesses.

Medicine In The Mall Big Hit With Public, But Conservative Doctors Shaking Heads

By Toni Cardarella

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Doctors and dentists have found a ready market in one of America's favorite gathering sites — the shopping mall.

Because the industry of retail medical and dental services — labeled "doc in the boxes" by a few — is so young, a count of the participants is hard to locate. But most figures indicate more and more patients are finding convenience in "mall medicine."

An American Dental Association spokesman says half of the people in the United States do not visit a dentist within a given year, and the main reason involves "accessibility."

"The whole focus is to deliver quality dental care but we also want to make it more convenient and accessible to the consumers, make it easier for patients to take care of their dental needs," said Roger Ledebuhr, marketing director for Retail Dental Centers Inc., one of at least eight franchisers of dental services in the country.

And although statistics indicate that Americans visit a physician 4.6 times a year and spend about $1,215 per person on personal health care expenses, many believe medical services also need to be more accessible.

"We're tapping a segment of the population out there that really has no care," said Dr. Charles Ricks, a retired dentist who is spokesman for three shopping mall medical facilities operated by Shawnee Mission Medical Center in suburban Kansas City.

"They walk by and say, 'Hey, I haven't had a checkup in years. I'm going to go in.'"

"We've tried to take quality medical care out to those patients who need it. We're just trying to meet John Q Public where he's at."

The major advantages of retail centers are location, longer hours — including Saturday and Sunday hours — and in many cases the acceptance of credit cards in addition to traditional payment methods. Patients at the centers are charged the same, if not lower, than traditional office fees.

However, there are some dentists and doctors who believe storefront medicine is not ethical and might hurt the prestige of the profession.

"There is some concern among traditional dentists that the development of franchised dental operation has had a negative, deleterious effect on the professionalism of dentistry," said Jim Berry, spokesman for the 140,000-member American Dental Association in Chicago.

But there is nothing that suggests patients are receiving better or poorer quality care from retail dental centers, he added. A spokesman for the Missouri Dental Board said there are "several" dental service retailers whose operations in the state are under investigation.

Consumer response to the centers, which Berry said will determine the success of franchised retail dentistry, apparently is high.

"The number of new patient visits to each Retail Dental Center is approaching 100 per month," said Retail Dental Center's Ledebuhr. He estimated the "typical" dental practice averages 15 to 30 new patients a month.

"The patient acceptance of the RDC concept is very high," he said. "I would say it has exceeded expectations."

RDC presently has six centers in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, where the company is based, two in Chicago and

Japanese Firms To Fight Unitary Taxation System

By Hidetoshi Sakai

NEW YORK (UPI) — Japanese companies operating in the United States are awaiting with great concern a report on the controversial worldwide unitary taxation system which, if upheld, could have a dramatic impact on their nearly $7 billion in investments here.

The report, to be submitted late this month by a cabinet-level working group comprised of federal, state and private business officials, concerns a controversial tax that has been introduced by California and 11 other states.

Japan's Federation of Economic Organizations (KEIDANREN), the nation's biggest business group, is sending a mission to the United States to campaign against the taxation system.

"A Sony Corp. of America executive says the system is 'unfair, inequitable and unconstitutional,'" adding "Sony is determined to fight up all the way to the Supreme Court, if necessary."

Under the system, multinational corporations with subsidiaries in those states are taxed not on the books of the subsidiaries alone, but on the basis of their consolidated, worldwide profits.

In California, the only state to actually try to collect the tax on foreign business, they are required to release figures not only on property, payroll and sales of California businesses but on total worldwide business. The ratios of subsidiary property, payroll and sales to the corresponding overall figures are computed. Taxable income is determined based on the average of these three ratios, regardless of actual income in the state.

The system also has been criticized by European countries and Canada.

But Japanese government and business circles have been especially concerned, saying it will be a stumbling block to efforts to shift production to the United States, reduce the heavy U.S. trade deficit with Japan and create jobs here. The Japanese also argue that the system is a sort of double taxation which runs counter to international custom.

Japanese corporations had 238 U.S. subsidiaries as of June 1982.

two in Kansas City. Ledebuhr said RDC will add one to Chicago in February and another three to the Minneapolis area and three in St. Louis in the next three months.

An additional six facilities are planned for the Kansas City area within six months and by the end of this year RDC has slated another three or four for St. Louis, he said.

Other expansion plans include opening centers in San Diego, Phoenix and Denver.

The corporation opened its first center in July 1982 in Minneapolis.

The largest dental service franchiser, according to early 1983 figures, is the Phoenix, Ariz.-based DentalHealth of America. The company currently has 32 "dental group practices" in Arizona, Colorado and Oregon but plans to open dozens of offices this year in other areas, including Seattle, Kansas City, St. Louis, Atlanta, Salt Lake City and Tucson.

Mike Faber, DentalHealth marketing director, said the company by the end of 1984 will open 20 facilities in St. Louis and 16 in Kansas City.

Although patient response is high, Berry pointed out that "alternative delivery systems" only represent about 2 percent of the dental care in the country and the association does not predict any major change.

"Traditional family dentistry will remain the backbone of the profession," he said.

Spokesmen for Menorah Hospital of Kansas City, which is credited with opening the nation's first health care facility in an enclosed shopping mall, defended criticisms that retail facilities may lower the quality of care.

"Basically what we want to do is put ourselves out there where the consumer is, make health care available to the consumers as economically and as conveniently as possible," Rick said. "That does not mean that the care they get there is any less than the care they would get anywhere else."

The American Academy of Family Physicians, which has 57,000 members across the country, said although it supports "freedom of choice for both physicians and patients in selecting health care delivery," it does publish a list of pros and cons in retailing medicine.

A major concern was that the patient may never establish or be delayed in establishing a comprehensive relationship with the doctor.

Spokespeople for the retail operators either said their facilities are set up so patients see the same doctor every time they come in, or if that's not possible, a list of area private practice physicians is offered to a long-term relationship can be established in the future.

Although advertising by professionals has been legalized by a Supreme Court decision and subsequent FTC actions for more than six years, Dr. A. Billingsly of the Kansas City suburb of Overland Park, Kan., has not quite accepted the concept.

"I'm older and I was trained during the time of very strict ethics. And advertising is one of the things I don't approve of," the 60-year-old dentist said. "I fear some might be tempted to be more commercial-oriented rather than profession-oriented."

'Best Kept Secret'

Governments' Trade Adjustment Center Helps Business Combat Foreign Competition

By Ellen Debenport

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Manufacturers fighting for their lives against competition from foreign imports may be saved by an obscure government agency that will diagnose their trouble and help pay for the cure.

The Trade Adjustment Assistance Center has been in existence since 1978, but one regional director called it "one of the government's best-kept secrets."

Companies that can prove they are losing money and workers because of foreign imports are entitled to an "adjustment plan" from the agency with matching federal funds to help pay for it.

"We've prevented plants from being shut down totally," said James Ott of Little Rock, Ark., the TAAC director for a six-state area. "We have worked with a firm (a Louisiana jeans factory) that has been down to 20 people in its factory and is back up to 140."

In Providence, R.I., TAAC helped turn around Anson Products, a jewelry company, that had dropped to 125 employees but was back at 300 by Christmas, said Lyle Ryter, who runs the TAAC program in Washington.

TAAC's work can keep distressed plants from folding or moving out of the United States, he said. Where once the emphasis was on smokestack industries or garment and shoe factories, TAAC now finds computer and electronics companies asking for help in their battle against imports from Japan, Taiwan and West Germany.

"We now range from computers to textile machinery to breweries to steel mills," Ryter said. "We're increasingly getting into those sectors where you're seeing a tremendous amount of import challenge in the machinery and machine tool areas."

Other clients manufacture telephone pagers, stuffed toys, artificial flowers, farm implements and pipe couplings.

The 13 TAAC offices in the United States and Puerto Rico are working with about 600 companies and have identified thousands as likely to be hurt by imports, Ryter said. Nine thousand potential clients are in Texas alone, so TAAC has most recently opened a branch office in Dallas.

Another new office covers the "industrial heartland" of Michigan, Ohio and Illinois, he said.

The agency has not pushed for new clients because Congress budgeted just $25 million this year to operate

'We've prevented plants from being shut down totally... We have worked with a firm (a Louisiana jeans factory) that has been down to 20 people in its factory and is back up to 140... Congress keeps on thinking we're a good investment.'

the program nationwide. President Reagan, in fact, wants to do away with the agency on the grounds that the private sector should not be rescued by government, Ryter said.

"The Congress keeps on thinking we're a good investment..." said Ryter, a Reagan appointee.

Companies don't have to be on the verge of bankruptcy to get help. The government will certify them for assistance if their sales or profits have dropped in the past three years, their employment has decreased and their deteriorating condition can be attributed to foreign imports.

Ryter said the agency is finding each company has its own series of problems — and often management is one of the problems. "You'll find many firms ... exist from instinct," Ryter said.

"We find the best thing we can do is sit down and look at their strengths and weaknesses," Ryter said, and help them work out a plan.

The TAAC staffers, who sometimes defer to private consultants, might recommend plans for higher productivity, better inventory control or market penetration studies.

The plan must be approved by the firm and the federal International Trade Administration. Then the company pays for the turnaround, whatever it entails.

Ryter said banks which may have turned their backs on a company they thought was a loser, will make funds available once they see it has a game plan.

Ryter said TAAC has streamlined its process to six to eight months. It used to take two years, and many companies were "dying while they were waiting to receive aid," he said.
