By FRANK CAREY AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Stormy political weather is whirling around the nation's 25-year-old cloud-seeding and related programs aimed at large-scale tampering with the weather. Scientists say there are promising leads in the quest to enhance rainfall wherever and whenever it's needed - and to "tame" hurricanes, Great Lakes snowstorms, hailstorms

But they say the federal budget doesn't provide enough money for faster research. The National Academy of Science, among others, says $50 million annually should come from the U.S. government for weather

The Nixon administration budgeted $19.5 million in fiscal 1973 and reduced this to $15.3 million in fiscal 1974. For the budget period starting July 1, the proposed amount is $15.4

Dr. Ronald Lavoie, director of the division of weather modification for the Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), put it this

"Progress has been slow, but it has to be slow because of the very nature of the problem, including the high variability of natural weather which necessitates repeating experiments many times (to rule out the effects of chance).

"Money always helps, cerress has been restricted by the need for developing certain instruments ..."

So far, Dr. Lavoie adds, significant successful results have been demonstrated in only two kinds of situations.

One is the ability to clear socalled "cold fog" from airports in wintertime, especially in Midwestern and Western states. This is to be distinguished from the more prevalent "warm fog" which weather modifiers have so far found tough to dispel.

The other is the ability to increase the snowpack in mountainous areas of the West by seeding winter storms peculiar to the mountains. This increases springtime run-off to the Colorado and other rivers. which in turn provides increased water for irrigation and for power company reservoirs. Most research for this program was done by the Bureau of Reclamation under Project Skywater.

Lavoie says there is pretty good evidence from studies in the Western United States, Israel and Australia that rainfall from certain other types of winter storms can be enhanced through cloud seeding. This offers an additional potential boon for power company reser-

But he adds that the toughest kind of cloud seeding to evaluate is that designed to increase rain from summer shower clouds - the rainfall farmers and ranchers in the arid Western and Southwestern states depend upon.

Sharp criticism of government policy on weather modification's peaceful applications has come from two sources. The National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere (NACOA) and a special panel on weather and climate modification of the prestigious National Academy of Sciences

Train Kills Boy

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) - A 14-year-old boy was killed when an Amtrak passenger train hit him as he sat on a railroad track just outside Clearwater, the Pinellas County sheriff's office said.

Deputies said Shawn Lee Mizell of Largo was sitting on a rail with his chin cupped in his hands Thursday when the train's engineer first saw him about 500 feet away. The engineer, Lawrence Johnson of Lutz, said he blew his horn and applied brakes but could not stop before hitting the youth.

The top sports job at CBS Television, from which Till McPhail was eased out, was offered to veep Chet Simmons of rival NBC, but Chet, once an ABC hireling, too, spurned the chance to go around the horn.

Q. My grandfather, a football fanatic, is always putting down baseball. I say there was one World Series game, either the Reds-A's or the Mets-A's, that had a bigger radio-television audience than any Super Bowl game. He disagrees and states football is America's No. 1 sport, followed by basketball. Can you clear this up? - Kathy Gallo, Pleasant Hill, Calif.

Gramps is right, up to a point. Every Super Bowl since Super Bowl II has led the nation as the No. 1 TV audience attraition, according to the Nielson Company report. The 1973 ratings were led by Super Bowl VII, which went into an all-time high (for sports) of 27,670,000 homes. The third game of the World Series was second with 22,310,000 homes, wthe only non-football or baseball event in the top 10 was the Riggs-King tennis joust, at No. 9. Basketball has never been up there as a TV sport.

Q. In boxing, can blood brothers compete against each other in a championehip match? Also, is Max Schmeling, the ex-heavyweight champ, still alive? - Tom Mootz, Chatsworth, Ill.

According to old-timers, the brother issue never has come up, although it could have several times with such concurrent sibling gladiators as the Zivics, Dundees, Fullmers and Baers (Max and Buddy). Theoretically, there'd be nothing against it. I remember the late Rocky Marciano once staged a series of exhibition bouts through Maine against younger brother Lou - except that Lou had a different name in each town. Yes, Max Schmeling is still with us, healthy and thriving as a soft drink executive in Ha Durg, Germany.

Q. Do you think that Walt Frazier will conside becoming a coach after he retires from basketball and when will his book, "Rockin' Steady: A Guide to Basketzall and Cool," be published? -Theresa Edwards,

This spring, "Clyde" was in his home town of Atlanta watching his younger brother compete in a state high school tournament, his face impassive as always, when he turned to Ira Berkow, his collaborator on "Rockin" Steady," and said, "This is the reason I'll never coach - I get too nervous." The book, incidentally, was published ast January and can be found in most book stores.

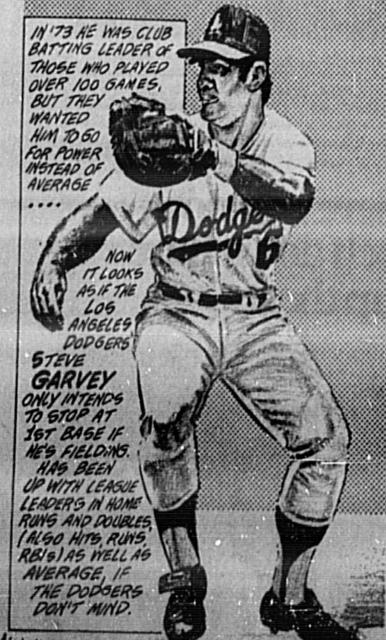

Dick Anderson, now working with several pro teams, including the Denver Broncos, stresses stretching muscles. I was hoping you could inform me as to how to acquire any book he may have written on the subject. -N.A.P., West Village, Colo.

The muscle-stretcher's name is Bob Anderson and he's in the process of writing a book on exercises and general nutrition. Bob's also partners with linebacker Mike Simone of the Denver Broncos in the International School os Stretching in Englewood, Colo. Simone first came in contact with Anderson when the latter introduced his stretching exercises to the Broncos' training camp in '72, and Mike had a bad hamstring pull which cleared up. They've worked their theories on the University of California football team this spring and the Los Angeles baseball Dodgers have invited them for a June session of stretching, which is the "in" method of conditioning.

Q. Could you please tell me what the home run record was when Babe Ruth entered professional baseball and who the holder of the record was? -Pat Trestler, Hayward, Calif. Depends how far back you want to go. When the Boston Red Sox paid $2,900 for 19-year- old pitcher George

Herman Ruth to Baltimore of the International League in 1914, he most home runs ever hit in a season since the alignment of two leagues in 1901 was 21 - by Frank Schulte of the Chicago Cubs in 1911, Wahoo Sam Crawford had led the American League with 17 in 1908.
