Trust plans candidate forum

SANFORD — Just when everyone thought the elections were over, another one is looming. The Sanford City elections are coming up Dec. 8.

In preparation for the campaigning, the Sanford Historical Trust has planned a political forum, and invited all persons who have qualified for election, including Bob Thomas, who is seeking re-election to Dist. 2, unopposed.

Persons expected to be on hand for the debates include Mayor Bettye Smith, and her opponent, Sara Jacobson. Also, candidates for Dist. 1 City Commission: incumbent Lon Howell, Jordan Beckner, Bob Church, and Bill Kirchner.

"This is open to the public," said Trust spokesperson Carmen Nestl. "We want as many Sanford voters as possible to turn out and hear what the candidates have to say about the various issues that are now and soon will be facing the City Commission."

The forum is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 19, at the meeting room of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, 400 E. First Street, in downtown Sanford.

Bozo to Clinton: Keep laughing

LOS ANGELES — Bozo the clown has some advice for Bill Clinton, who President Bush dubbed a latter-day "Bozo" during the campaign: Just keep laughing.

Larry Harmon, who played Bozo on television, sent Clinton a telegram on Wednesday congratulating him for winning the presidential election.

"I feel it's an honor to have been so recognized and wish you all the best in the days to come," wrote Harmon, who noted he'd been Bozo for 43 years, since Clinton was 3.

"And remember what your ol' pal 'Bozo' always says, 'Just keep laughin'!"

Movie filmed here opens

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — Dozens of local residents and thousands of Central Floridians will crowd theaters beginning tomorrow to see Passenger 57, the film shot largely at Central Florida Regional Airport earlier this year.

The film will show locally at Lake Mary Centre 8 at Lake Mary Boulevard and Lake Emma Road.

For 10 weeks between January and March, Sanford's airport played host to a make-believe airline hijacking starring Wesley Snipes, who grew up in Orlando. Snipes plays a hijacking expert who is a passenger in an airliner that is hijacked. The airport panorama was also strangely altered by a carnival, which plays a key role in the movie.

Bob Kahn, a partner in Extras Only Inc., said about 3,000 Central Florida residents were cast as extras in the movie, many from Seminole County. Up to 1,000 extras were cast in some of the carnival scenes, he said. Kahn's company cast extras for the film.

Several Seminole County extras were cast in featured roles, Kahn said. A pilot, a stewardess and a mother with child are locals, he said.

Kahn said the production company had an extras budget of at least $250,000. In all, the company spent $15 million in Central Florida, he said. The featured extras qualify for the film.

Video campaign sells merits of Sanford area

SANFORD — Regardless of how movie critics feel, Mayor Bettye Smith and Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce executive director Dave Farr hope their film performances will get the thumbs up from state businesses.

The two are part of a six minute self-Sanford video campaign, contracted by Melvin Simon and Associates, developers of the Seminole Towne Center Mall. The video is being produced by Steven W. Fussell and Associates of Orlando.

"The Simon people want a video to show to prospective clients the benefits of the mall," Fussell said. "While they already have several major stores agreeing to locate at the mall, they want to show it to several others."

He added, "It will certainly be less expensive to show them a video than to bring them to Sanford for a personal visit, and probably more convincing than trying to explain verbally the benefits of the area."

Both Farr and Smith were videotaped for the video. See Video, Page 5A

LAKE MARY — In an effort to speed resumption of the widening of Lake Mary Boulevard, Seminole County is considering releasing over half million dollars owed sub-contractors since the project's halt in May. Merchants concerned with the halt will meet again tonight to continue pushing for a quicker resumption of the project.

"The County Commission has already approved a tender agreement," said County Manager Ron Rabun. "It completely removes the original contractor, Mahoney Construction, from the project and allows us to deal directly with the bonding agency, Insurance Company of North America."

He continued, "At Tuesday's commission meeting I'm going to ask them to approve an amendment to the agreement, which would allow us to turn over $515,248 to the bonding company to forward to sub-contractors. Many of them haven't been paid since the project stopped in May."

Lake Mary may grow with annex of land

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Lake Mary's boundaries may grow, possibly adding to its tax base when the city commission considers tonight annexing an additional 23 acres for industrial use.

The land is at the southern end of Skyline Drive, and is adjacent to Interstate 4. It is presently vacant, and designated for industrial land use.

City Planner Matt West expects no problems with the request to be annexed into the city limits. West and the city staff have determined it is within the provisions of the city's comprehensive plan.

The Planning and Zoning Board has previously recommended approval on a unanimous vote, and suggested it be designated for M-1A zoning, for industrial use.

"One good point about it," West said, "is that it has already been determined that there will be no initial costs to the city's Public Works department." His recommendation to the commission concludes that the existing water and sewer systems are already adequate to serve any future industrial development.

The application for voluntary annexation was submitted by the property owner, Jack H. Bray of Tampa, who has not revealed what plans he may have for industrial development at this time.

The land is in a growing industrial area with surrounding property consisting of TV Channel 35 studios, Maynard Electronics, and the Suntech Commerce Park.

"This is the first land addition we have had to the city this year," West said. "Last year, we added only eight more acres."

He added, "We don't aggressively go out and try to persuade people to annex into the city, but we are always willing to accept them if they request it."

Harassment suit

Orlando woman among 3 students suing professor

By Associated Press

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — An Orlando woman and two others who took broadcasting classes with a Marshall University professor filed a lawsuit against him Wednesday, also naming the school and its president.

The complaint alleged Charles G. Bailey, an assistant professor in the speech communications department, "subjected numerous female students, including the plaintiff, to unwanted and inappropriate sexual touching, comments and harassment in violation of the West Virginia Human Rights Act."

student radio station WMUL, did not return telephone messages at his home and office Wednesday afternoon.

The plaintiffs also alleged the university, the University of West Virginia system board and President J. Wade Gilley did not follow university policies for dealing with sexual harassment complaints.

Debbie McGraw and Kristi Stratton, both of Huntington, and Jennifer T. Qualls of Orlando, Fla., said Gilley failed to discipline Bailey even though an investigating committee found he had "engaged in verbal and physical sexual harassment."

The women took broadcasting classes with Bailey and worked under him at WMUL, said Deborah McHenry, a Charleston attorney for the women.

"Part of the problem here was he was the only person teaching those courses, and he also was the supervisor of the campus radio station, where they all needed to work," McHenry said.

The investigative committee appointed by the university's affirmative action officer, Edouard Prou, found that at least five students had complained of harassment by Bailey, according to the committee's report, which was filed with the lawsuit.

The committee recommended that Bailey be removed from his position as director of WMUL, be given an office in a public place and prohibited from being alone with a student with the door closed, and be told to take sexual harassment workshops.

Fuchs named revenue director

TALLAHASSEE — Deputy state comptroller Larry Fuchs will head the state Department of Revenue beginning Nov. 16. Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet decided Wednesday.

Fuchs will replace Tom Herndon, who left the revenue director's post in August to become Chiles' chief of staff.

Chiles and the Cabinet selected Fuchs in a 5-2 vote from four finalists chosen by a search committee.

James Zingale, who was Herndon's assistant executive director and is serving as acting director, received the other two votes.

Fuchs was interim director of the Department of Revenue for three months in 1980.

The other finalists were Larry Durrance, executive director of the Florida Taxation and Budget Reform Committee, and William Taber, director of the state Division of Pari-Mutuel Wagering.

The search committee had started with a pool of more than 450 applicants for the directorship.

Voters overturn gay rights law

TAMPA — Voters overturned Tampa's gay rights law following a bitter yearlong battle.

The vote in Tuesday's election was 88.5 percent in favor of repealing the sexual orientation amendment to 41.5 percent who wanted to keep it on the books.

David Cates, head of Tube Bank Tampa which led the repeal movement, said the outcome showed that voters "will not tolerate politicians who endorse the use of anti-discrimination laws to promote sexual behavior."

Susan Olickman led the movement to keep the Human Rights Ordinance that protected homosexuals from discrimination in jobs, housing and public accommodations, such as restaurants.

She said she was disappointed Tampa "has shut the door on many of its most productive, contributing citizens."

Twenty-one gay rights activists met and protested in front of City Hall late Tuesday. At one point, they burned President Bush in effigy, but police quickly put out the blast.

Florida Steel settles suit with state

JACKSONVILLE — Florida Steel Corp. settled for $9 million with the state over a shipment of unapproved epoxy-coated steel for bridge construction projects, federal officials said.

The Wednesday settlement ended an 18-month investigation by the U.S. Attorney's office in Jacksonville, the U.S. Department of Transportation and the Florida Department of Transportation, said U.S. Attorney Robert Gensman.

As a result of the settlement, no criminal charges will be filed, Gensman said.

The probe revealed that Florida Steel's plant in Jacksonville supplied some 17 million pounds of epoxy-coated steel that didn't have approval or meet with specifications for bridge projects throughout the state between January 1987 and October 1980, officials said.

Epoxy-coating is used in bridge construction to retard corrosion.

Prostitute jailed for violating probation

FORT LAUDERDALE — Kathy Willets was back in jail for violating conditions of her three-year probation term for prostitution.

Willets, 34, was arrested Tuesday and held without bail in the Broward County Jail. Her husband, Jeff — a former sheriff's deputy — also is in jail for violating probation on his December conviction for molesting his wife.

The Willetses' latest arrest comes after they were arrested for prostitution and found to have violated some of her terms, including the former vice mayor of Fort Lauderdale.

She initially claimed that having sex with men was a treatment for her hypertension.

The warrant for Kathy Willets' latest arrest cites eight violations of her probation, including attending a counseling session while intoxicated and using intoxicants to cause others to work diligently at a lawful occupation; failure to complete her community service work; and failure to pay restitution to the court and the Broward Sheriff's Office.

State attorney loses re-election bid

GAINESVILLE — The state attorney in charge of the Gainesville slayings case lost his bid for re-election.

Republican Lon Register received 48,378 or 43.8 percent of the vote to Democrat Rod Smith's 60,698 or 57.3 percent, according to the state elections office in Tallahassee.

Register's office accused the indictment last fall of Danny Harold Belling on first-degree murder charges in the 1980 slayings of five Gainesville college students.

It is not known how Register's loss might affect preparations for the slayings case. Register did not immediately return a phone call and Smith's office said he was in Atlanta until later this week.

Legislator reprimanded by state bar

By Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD — U.S. Rep. Larry Smith has consented to a public reprimand on charges he violated Florida Bar rules by leaving his name on the law firm of a former partner after going to Congress.

The consent judgment still must be approved by the full board of governors of The Florida Bar and by the state Supreme Court, Kevin Tynan, staff counsel for the Bar, said Tuesday.

Even if the agreement is approved, there are other elements of the matter that still must be resolved, Tynan said. "We are still waiting for others to act and I cannot talk to you about that pending case," Tynan said.

The Florida Democrat agreed to a public reprimand, which would require him to appear before The Bar's Board of Governors. Such an action is considered a great embarrassment in the legal profession and would become part of Smith's Bar records.

Smith said the submission was based on a mutual decision with the Bar. It was hand-delivered amid the hubbub of Election Day. Smith announced in April that he would not seek re-election to a sixth term.

"The Bar felt it should have been settled with a public reprimand," Smith said. "The Bar is not singling me out, but because I am a public figure, in effect I already have received a very public reprimand."

The 10-page plan submitted by Smith reads, in part: "The violations were not knowing or intentional, and were caused solely by a lack of knowledge and understanding of the provisions of the rules."

A grievance committee in August found probable cause to think Smith, D-Hollywood, violated Bar rules by leaving his name on the letterhead of Brian Berman's law firm after going to Congress. Berman was disbarred in 1991 for misusing clients' funds.

The Sun-Sentinel of Fort Lauderdale disclosed in April that Smith's name remained on his old law firm's letterhead until 1990, long after the congressman said he had sold the firm.

Former tax collector pleads guilty in embezzlement case

By Associated Press

FORT MYERS — The former Lee County tax collector pleaded guilty to charges of mail fraud, money laundering, embezzlement of public funds and filing a false income tax return, authorities said Wednesday.

Richard Steele, 53, of Fort Myers, entered four guilty pleas before U.S. District Judge Lee P. DeGard, U.S. Attorney Robert W. Gensman said in a statement.

Gensman said that between December 1987 and November 1991, Steele defrauded Lee County and several other counties of nearly $235,000.

Steele faces up to 36 years in prison on the four federal counts and more than $1 million in fines when he is sentenced Feb. 1.

Gensman said Steele obtained personal ownership of recreational vehicles purchased with about $80,788 in Lee County funds, plus used about $14,861 from county coffers to purchase two vehicles for his own use.

In the plea agreement, Steele also admitted he pocketed money from Putnam, Martin and Clay counties by falsely representing the cost of certain recreational vehicles purchased by the tax collector offices of those counties.

Gensman said Steele overcharged the tax collector offices and pocketed about $46,472.

Prosecutors also accused Steele of issuing 14 checks from the tax collector's office totaling $62,523 made payable to a John Davis, who in turn cashed the checks, kept a percentage and gave the remainder of the cash, about $78,123, to Steele for his own use.

The checks were for work that had not been done or had already been paid for by the tax collector's office, prosecutors said.

Steele also pleaded guilty to filing a false federal income tax return for the year 1989. The return reported total income of $73,182, although he actually had an income of $276,373 that year, Gensman said.

Former inmate tries to get on with life

By The Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH SHORES — James Richardson still has nightmares about his 21 years in prison, including five years on death row, after his seven children were poisoned in 1967.

"I wish it would go away so I can get on with my life," Richardson, 56, said in an interview with The Tampa Tribune published today.

The fruit picker from rural DeSoto County was imprisoned after his seven children and stepchildren died following a poisoned meal.

In 1989, his conviction was overturned. A special prosecutor assigned to review the case determined that Richardson did not get a fair trial. He was freed and officials decided there was inadequate evidence for a new trial.

Richardson thought his ordeal was over.

But last week, former U.S. Attorney Robert Merkle issued a report again accusing Richardson of killing the children and suggesting he be tried once more.

Gov. Lawton Chiles appointed Dade State Attorney Janet Reno to review Merkle's report and make a recommendation.

Although now a private Tampa attorney, Merkle still carries the nickname "Mad Dog Merkle" for his days as a conservative, aggressive prosecutor. He was hired by the state to review the Richardson case after the former convict filed a $35 million federal lawsuit in 1989 claiming he was wrongly accused of the crimes.

Richardson said it came as a great shock to read in the newspaper that he is being accused again.

"No, I did not do it," he said without hesitation when asked if he poisoned his children. "This is just ridiculous."

Richardson said a baby sitter, Beasle Reese, poisoned the children. Reese, who died last week, confessed to killing the children but prosecutors believe she was senile and never charged her.

"This whole thing is absurd," said Richardson's Washington-based attorney, Mark Lane.

"We have something called the United States Constitution which says a defendant is entitled to a speedy trial. I have never seen a ruling that says 25 years after the state has all the evidence that it can bring charges against a defendant."

This week, a lawyer for Richardson filed a defamation suit seeking at least $15,000 in damages for Merkle's report. Among those named in the suit is the former prosecutor, who declined to speak on the matter with the Tribune.

If he faces a jury again, Richardson said, he's not afraid he'll be convicted. His wife Linda said she's not as confident.

"I think about it a lot," she said. "I think about how unfair and how unjust it was then, and I think about them doing the same thing over again today."

"It makes me angry," she said. "Twenty-one years of James' life has already been taken away from him and he's suffered enough. Now they're talking about him being tried for the deaths again."

Sniper attacks prompt warning

By The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Sniper and rock-throwing attacks that have caused death and injury on Interstate 295 have prompted an unprecedented warning from the American Automobile Association to avoid the highway.

The bypass around Jacksonville carries about 80,000 vehicles a day and is the No. 1 entryway for southbound tourists. State officials are concerned that the warnings — on the eve of winter tourist season — will harm Florida's image.

But after three unprovoked attacks in the past two weeks, the AAA has decided to stop routing motorists onto I-295, and AAA travel counselors are warning callers to use extreme caution on Interstate 95, the more crowded route through downtown Jacksonville.

"This is the first time in our 90-year history that we've issued a warning to motorists because of acts of violence on a highway," said Tom Schroder, spokesman for the Florida branch of the AAA.

"We are not trying to create hysteria, but we are in the business of making sure our members have safe, enjoyable trips," Schroder told The Miami Herald for a story in today's edition.

Last year, more than 1.3 million AAA members requested the association's "triplet" maps that included the Jacksonville area, where some motel owners said the warning will be a blow.

Mandate for change Clinton's challenge

About two years ago, the political writer for Scripps-Howard wrote a book entitled "Minority Party." Peter Brown's view was the Democratic Party had been effectively shut out of the White House because of their leftist surge in the past decade.

Most of the leftist views espoused by many Democratic special interest groups were repugnant to the majority of Americans, the author realized, so he predicted Democrats would be losing future presidential campaigns too. However, the author made one exception: he said the Democrats could win if they nominated a moderate and if the economy went south.

On the back of the book, where the publishing house puts praise by commentators and other writers, the book was complimented by a number of writers and Democratic politicians. Among those politicians who read and liked the book was the then-governor of Arkansas, Bill Clinton.

Clinton ran the type of campaign advocated by "Minority Party." He distanced himself from the most extreme positions in his party and attacked the Republicans on the economy.

Now Americans can hope that President-elect Clinton can read the lessons of the economy as well as he read the lessons from Peter Brown's book.

Clinton should be congratulated for his win and all Americans should wish him well. He came across as both an average man and as a leader.

Perhaps one of the major events in this election was the number of hours candidates spent on the talk shows. Phil Donahue and Larry King had more time with candidates than did most of the Press and other news shows. Clinton spent the most time on these shows.

The election has made the "grassroots" in Washington. Now one party in the executive office will not be able to blame all problems on the other party in Congress and vice versa. Democrats now control both the Congress and the presidency. People will know who to credit if things go well during the next four years, but they will also know who to blame if things go badly.

Clinton emphasized he and running mate Al Gore were a "different kind of Democrat." They will have a chance to put that difference into action.

The new administration must deal with the deficit, with the health care crisis, crime, mass, the bureaucracy, welfare and a host of other issues.

Clinton and the new Congress have been given a mandate for change. Now the nation must wait to see where that change will take it.

Pat on voters' backs

Seminole County voters certainly did their part in Tuesday's national, state and local elections. Approximately 86 percent of registered voters cast ballots.

Each of these citizens should be congratulated for doing what they had a right to do. However, it must be noted that civic responsibility does not stop when election day is over. Each citizen must keep informed during the next few years concerning what their representatives are doing in office.

The school board, the county commission and several state legislative posts will soon be filled with new people who will affect these voters that put them in office.

What can easily be said is that, with the high turnout in Seminole County, Tuesday's elections were a success. Seminole County citizens can be proud of themselves.

Conservatives are as strong as ever

Strictly from the standpoint of the Republican Party, of course, the election was a disaster. Any election the party doesn't win — especially a presidential election — is by definition a disaster. But it's hard to remember any presidential election in modern times when there was less at stake. The voters didn't hate George Bush; they were merely a little tired of him. In choosing Clinton, they weren't voting for a galvanizing new hero or policy; they were just hoping against hope that a change might be for the better, especially economically.

Least of all is there any mandate (though the media will quickly claim one) for a return to liberal policies. Luckily, Clinton knows this very well. Throughout the campaign he avoided the "liberal" label like a vampire avoids garlic, and carefully described his vehicle as "the new Democratic Party," to distinguish it from the "old" one.

As a matter of fact, conservatism emerged from this election with its recent prestige virtually intact. Significantly, a majority of American voters this year preferred candidates (Bush and Perot) who were well to the right of conventional liberal policies. No sensible politician is likely to forget that.

There is, however, one respect in which President-elect Clinton is in a brand-new position. On the day after his inauguration he will find himself facing the largest, best organized conservative opposition that has ever confronted an incoming Democratic president.

When Jimmy Carter entered the Oval Office in 1976, the conservative movement was only in its infancy as an organized political force. Today it is lean, mean — and huge. There are conservative think tanks and legal foundations all over the place, and a conservative pressure group aimed squarely at every major foreign and domestic policy. There are pundits galore to express its views, and not only candidates and managers ready to wage conservative campaigns but training schools to teach them how. There are even schools for aspiring conservative journalists. Funding for all of these is already available, and will grow exponentially as conservative mailing lists spring to life under the impact of Democratic policies.

Moreover, the conservative movement will benefit enormously from a spell back at the drawing-board. Its two most pressing objectives — victory in the Cold War, and for the free market over all forms of socialism — have been achieved, and at the moment the movement is in slack water. Conservative positions on such issues as environmentalism, the underclass and the nihilistic attack on Western culture must be hammered out, and political support for them organized and brought on line.

In this process we can expect the Republican Party to continue to be an appropriate vehicle. No doubt the liberal media will quickly anoint some supple Republican politician as a promising alternative to continued conservative dominance of the GOP. But the great majority of aspirants for the 1996 presidential nomination are, and will remain, comfortably conservative.

So let there be no moaning at the bar as a result of the 1992 election. In a two-party democracy the voters have no choice but to "throw the rascals in" every once in a while.

A good message, a wacky messenger

What I am about to write concerning H. Ross Perot may constitute a breach of promise, as I recently vowed I was done with politics until the campaign cacophony had diminished.

I would argue with you that this column is not about politics but about health — as in the soundness of the stuff between Perot's ears and how he might affect the vitality of the nation itself.

The problem with Perot is that he has been saying things of crucial importance that need to be pounded into our collective brains over the next few years, but the man keeps getting in the way of his own message. This nation needs to address its deficit problem and runs a great risk of economic collapse if it does not. That is what Perot has been saying, and if that cardinal point gets crowded out by his daffy demeanor, it will constitute a tragedy almost beyond measure.

I would argue with you that this column is not about politics but about health.

Three times now, the hantian billionaire has stood at center stage and lapsed into routines that prompt rational people to wonder when he last checked his circuit breaker. First, he whipped up a crowd to beg him to run for the presidency and then promptly dropped out. Then he whipped up the crowd to beg him to get back in. And recently he went on CBS's "60 Minutes" and informed the nation that the reason he dropped out in the first place was that all sorts of mysterious and nefarious plots had been hatched to destroy him.

And who the hell had the right to doubt him, anyway? "I am sick and tired of you all questioning my integrity without a basis for it," he later told a group of reporters. "I am sick and tired of you ignoring the people who can confirm the articles when you print or run your stories."

Was there a seasoned journalist in America who — knowing a paranoid when they see one, and knowing of Perot's conspiratorial bent — did not at that point silently implore him not to embarrass himself by telling us that he's hearing the Top 40 in his mouth because his fillings have been wired by the CIA?

And how does all of this affect the message that is inextricably bound up in the Perot persona? Will the public begin to think, perhaps subconsciously, that his economic prophecies are as wacky as he is? Pray not, else we perish.

We are currently staring at an annual deficit that is nearly $300 billion and would have been $400 billion had Congress not gotten the election-year fixers and postponed the closure of bankrupt S&Ls. We are staring at an accumulated debt of $4.1 trillion — on which we are paying interest of $200 billion a year, and if each year's family share is about $28,000.

And here is the bad news: Even the roughest economic scenarios predict it's going to get much worse. By 1996, if we are lucky, we will be staring at a national debt of $5 trillion. If we are visited with moderate inflation, this figure could soar to an inconceivable $8 trillion, interest: $600 billion.

Ross Perot says, and many astute economists agree with him, that there is a way out. It would be painful — covers cuts in government programs, higher taxes on the wealthy, higher Social Security taxes, higher taxes on unions, higher taxes on gasoline, higher mortgage deductions, lower capital-giving deductions for government and military retirees.

What Bill Clinton must do is lead

We have just participated in a rare event — a realigning and redrawing election that's right up there with 1860's FDR triumph that brought New Deal liberalism, and 1980's Reagan Revolution that brought out first modern conservative reign.

Early has a mandate rung as clear as ever. Clinton did not wait Tuesday to return the presidency to a Democrat. America voted, mandatorily, to entrust the presidency to a New Democrat — or, as Bill Clinton began calling himself this year, "a Different Democrat."

In this year's exit polls and primary votes, in interviews and caucuses, in their large voter registration and their aggressive early entrance of mass "New-of-the-America" Party, Americans made two things clear:

1. They are no longer intimidated by Republican trickle-down promises that always come up dry.
2. They don't want to return to the tired congressional Democratic paradigm for just spending new money on old big-government deficit programs.

And so, Clinton must claim by 1994, not just a mandate but a new paradigm. He must lead in the next few years. He must be engaged with his promises, promises that he has not kept.

If Clinton makes his own, old Democratic mistakes and repeats the same old mistakes, then we'll know, really, as for Democrats, to please-to-usual, the trade-and-barter, non-promising of congressional Democrats. And we'll know that Clinton will have changed his mandate.

But don't let us think. After a lifetime of preparing to cash in on his political moment, Clinton knows that he is lucky to have come to the right place at the right time.

But Democrats must know, too, that Clinton may be the only Democrat who could bring the party to the right place at the right time. For Clinton does not understand the old central and left-of-center middle-class Americans, a majority of our nation, which had been voting Republican — until Tuesday.

What these Middle Americans sought was, in a word, security. National security, in a world of nuclear superpowers.

Economic and job security in hard times. Health-care security when they lose their jobs.

Financial security when they retire. And personal security in their homes, courts, schools and cars.

The Reagan-Bush presidency bequeathed to Middle America only the loss of them. That simply was not good enough. The unexplained mystery of George Bush's presidency is why he simply did not care enough to lead us toward real solutions — and his policies did not care how his political career, too.

Clinton will have no shortage of bold, innovative ideas to choose from. Among the more impressive is a campaign being compiled into a book — "Mandate for Change" — by the Progressive Policy Institute, a moderate think tank whose experts have argued for Clinton's wing of the party. I've got more than a passing familiarity with these ideas. I'm serving as consulting editor of the book. Its ideas include a new market-based enterprise system to empower firms and workers; a health-care blueprint that builds upon managed competition; streamlining the bureaucracy; scrapping and replacing welfare; strengthening families; reclaiming streets from criminals; revitalizing schools and making college available to all who agree to enlist after graduation in a national service corps.

Tuesday night, Clinton claimed the presidency by heralding "A New Beginning." Now he must be tough and bold enough to claim the mandate of the common people — and lead. "Democracy," H.L. Menckes observed, "is the theory that the common people know what they want, and deserve to get it good and hard."

We have just participated in a rare event.

'Frank' wasn't funny

I'd like to address those comments to the "pranksters" who thought it was very funny to send Halloween treats from my three-year-old granddaughter on Halloween night. I checked the dictionary for the exact definition of the word "prank." The definition is "playful trick." The word played brings to mind laughter and humor. Well, there's absolutely nothing laughable or humorous about stealing!

With all the problems our country is facing today this problem seems very small but to a little person this is a very big problem. Besides, some of the problems we have today grew from small ones. It's time we quit using the term "childish prank" and call it like it really is, and deal with it.

"This isn't a waste of money," Rabun explained. "We owe that money to them, but we've been holding off on it to avoid having to go through Mahoney Construction. We'll deal directly with the bonding company now."

Rabun said the county is still holding back on $1.63 million. "So we are still financially stable with this project," he said.

Meanwhile the Lake Mary merchants plan to meet tonight. Rather than just boulevard area merchants, the meeting is open to the general public.

The group has been holding early morning meetings for the past month, discussing problems caused by the stalled construction project. Many have complained about the loss of revenue because of difficulties customers have in gaining access to their businesses over the construction area. Some have objected to piles of dirt hiding their business signs.

Some have even suggested their loss of trade could even put them out of business if the problems are not resolved soon.

"We want everyone who is concerned with the boulevard problems to join us at this night meeting," said John Emanuel, one of the group's organizers. "That includes people who frequently drive on it and hit those bumps or feel threatened with the steep drop-offs."

"We will be talking about the latest stall tactics on the widening project," Emanuel said. "The bonding agency says the County is stalling, and the County puts the blame on the bonding agency, making it look like nothing can be done to get the project back underway before the first of next year."

Earlier this week, Rabun met with Ken McDonald, who has organized the group along with Emanuel. McDonald is scheduled to report on the discussions during tonight's meeting.

"As the project stands now," Rabun said this morning, "the bonding company is seeking bids from Florida certified firms. They expect to open the bids during the first part of December, and the County will be involved in the selection of the prime contracting firm."

He added, "I expect if everything continues as it has been going, a new contractor can be hired and the work resumed by shortly after the first of the year."

The project will originally be completed by June of 1983. At the time work came to a standstill in July, County officials had estimated it was approximately 75 percent complete.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. tonight, at the Abundant Life Christian Fellowship building, Unit 108, on Commerce Street, west of Lake Emma Road and across from the St. Croix apartment complex.

Fussell also spent time taping in the downtown area and several historical homes on Mellonville Ave.

"The thing we are trying to stress in this tape," Fussell said, "is the difference Sanford has to offer, and the advantages of locating a store here."

He explained, "It's not like a mall in Orlando where there are a cluster of houses nearby. This mall will be in an area by itself, but with easy access from the Interstate, Autotrain, and other facilities."

Simon and Associates has already contracted for four major stores in the 1 million square foot mall. They include J.C. Penney, Parisian, Burdines and Dillard's. Two additional core stores are being considered including Montgomery Ward.

In addition, the mall will have possibly 150 additional smaller stores. Near the mall, hotels and office complexes are also proposed for the future.

"I don't know if anyone in the Sanford area will see the video," Fussell said, "but I think Sanford is a great place, and we are doing our best to make this commercial type production really work for the Simon people."

The mall, to be built southeast of the S.R. 46 and Interstate 4 intersection, is expected to provide between 1,600 and 2,000 new jobs in the area. University of Central Florida finance expert Dr. William Weaver has predicted it will generate possibly $12.5 million in sales taxes and $11.4 million in property taxes when fully operational.

Overweight teens face extra health woes into old age

By DANIEL G. NANEV
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — Being a chubby teen-ager may play a role in lifelong health problems, contributing to heart disease, cancer and other ills well into old age, a study published today shows.

Obesity in adolescence appears to be especially dangerous for males. The study found that men who were fat as boys begin to die at an unusually high rate by age 45. By age 70, their risk of death is twice that of those who were normal size as teenagers.

While overweight teen-age girls appear to go on to have normal-length lives, they are more likely to suffer a variety of medical conditions, such as arthritis.

Many studies have shown that being obese during adulthood is bad for one's health. But until now, there has been little clear evidence that being overly chubby as a teen-ager also spells trouble later on.

The new study found that overweight adolescents often go on to have poor health later in life, regardless of whether they became overweight adults.

"It says there is something critical about adolescence that increases the likelihood that obesity will be associated with consequences independent of adult weight," said Dr. William H. Dietz of New England Medical Center, a co-author of the study.

The study, directed by Dr. Aviva Must of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Human Nutrition Research Center in Boston, was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

It was based on a follow up of 506 youngsters who participated in the Harvard Growth Study, conducted on school children in the Boston suburbs between 1923 and 1935. In 1968, researchers interviewed the participants and checked death certificates of those who had died.

The study is also unique because of its long follow-up. Researchers looked at what became of people 55 years after they were weighed as youngsters.

Among the findings: —Overweight teen-age boys were twice as likely as thin adolescents to die by their 70s. Heart disease accounted for most of the deaths.

—Both overweight boys and girls were twice as likely to suffer heart disease later in life.

—Obese boys were five times more likely to have colon cancer and twice as likely to get gout, while overweight girls were 80 percent more likely to have arthritis.

pled for professional wages of nearly $400 per day, he said.

Steve Cooke, airport director, said the movie may represent the last photographic record of the 50-year-old airport tower featured in several scenes. The tower is located atop a building with structural problems. Cooke said if the tenants can be moved out by early next year, the structure may be torn down.

Cooke said he was looking forward to seeing the movie with his wife and their two children.

"I'm kind of looking forward to seeing that old tower," said Cooke. "We've been calling every two or three months to see how things were going."

Cooke said the airport netted about $45,000 for space lease. Several airport companies also collected rent for use of their facilities, he said.

Another Sanford-based movie production, Wilder Naples, is now scheduled for a Spring 1983 release, said Jeannie Gerden, film coordinator for the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce. The carnival set of the production became a familiar scene for local folk passing by its Sanford Plaza location earlier this year.

It's all in the wrist

Envious eyes scan the creative works of crafters and artisans

By WEST BUCHANAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Athletes are not the only ones taking part in the Golden Age Games.

Crafters and artisans created an exhibition of their finest works that were judged for their beauty and originality. The Hobby and Photography Show will be on display at the Sanford City Hall throughout the week.

"These are simply wonderful," said Mildred Linebaugh, 65, of Kings Pointe. "It's like stuff I could do so I really enjoy seeing it and getting ideas."

Linebaugh didn't enter any of her needle work in the competition/show.

"I didn't know about this," she admitted.

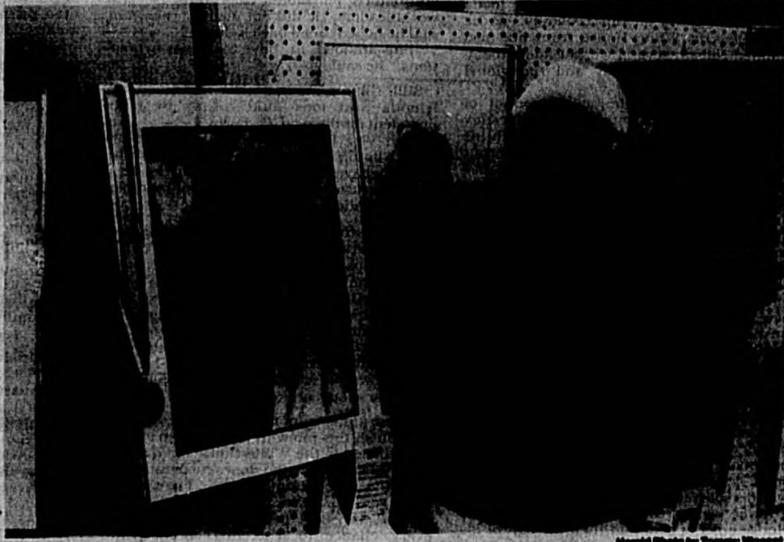

Linebaugh was particularly interested in a series of saw blades that had been painted with colorful figures.

"It's so simple, but I sure would like to have something like this in my living room," she said.

Lynn John, 21, of Sanford said she is a big fan of the Golden Age Games, but she really enjoys looking at the crafts.

"I want to find things that I can do with my grandma," she said. "She doesn't get out too much anymore so I like to find crafts for her to do."

the exhibit. "My daughter is really involved in quilting projects and it looks very interesting to me," he said. "I haven't really tried anything beyond little pillows myself." He said that he is considering making something to enter next year.

Greta Schmidt, 55, of Sanford did not enter the Golden Age

Games, though she is eligible to do so this year.

"I didn't think there was anything for me that I could do," she said. "Maybe I could do this next year. I can crochet."

Seniors swing out in the dance competition

By WEST BUCHANAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — One of the largest crowd draws in the Golden Age Games was held yesterday. Dance competition was featured at the Sanford Civic Center.

With music by the 13 piece Delonians, it was the music they had heard when they first fell in love. These were songs they may have danced to at their senior proms such as "The Mood," the "Pennsylvania Polka," and many others.

Only 15 couples had registered to participate in the competition. Many won ribbons in several different dance categories.

Each routine, the polka, fox trot, swing, rumba, cha cha, and others, were played for first, second and third place winners.

Judges included several who are involved in the dance professions.

Civic Center workers estimated the onlookers at over 300 people. The reason for the large turnout was the music between each competition number. Members of the audience were invited to dance, and dance they did. A number of visitors were not even involved in the games, but the music couldn't prevent their feet from moving across the dance floor.

The dance competition is one of the few events where contestants are not grouped into age categories. It is also one that is not part of the national senior games and a local win leads only to a ribbon, plus the pride that comes in winning dancing competition.

Athletes gather for friendly conversation

By WEST BUCHANAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — They say that breakfast is the most important meal of the day, but few of the athletes signed up for the Golden Age Games in Sanford this week are taking advantage of the free meal offered by the Over 50 Club.

"I think most of them don't know about the breakfast," said Ethel Freid, a member of the Over 50 Club.

Freid, who said she has the art of serving cereal down to a science, has been serving about 50 breakfasts a day each week.

Lorna Florio, 77, of Kinto, Mo., said that she enjoyed the social aspect of the breakfast more than the food.

"I like the talking and the gossiping," she said with a giggle. "The food is just cereal and fruit and things like that. I could get that at the grocery store. I can't get friends at the grocery store."

Florio said she has been coming to the Golden Age Games in Sanford for three years so she has made some friends who she likes to visit with during the week and the breakfasts are a great place to do that.

"On the playing field we're not friends," she said, "so we like to come in here and chat."

Freid said that the volunteers from the Over 50 Club work hard to ensure that the breakfasts are nice and that the athletes have plenty to eat.

"I have to get up at quarter after five to get going on this," she said.

Election '92: Government in transition

Clinton pledges focus on economy

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

President-elect Clinton promised to "focus like a laser beam on this economy" as he assembles his White House team but also planned calls to several world leaders today to discuss foreign policy and the global economy.

"There is just an immense amount of work to be done," Clinton said Wednesday night after his first formal meeting with his transition team. The Arkansas governor called the session "mind boggling" because of the number and range of the decisions he faces as president-elect.

"I haven't made a decision about what Cabinet members to name in which order," he said. Other aides said some key roles likely would be filled by week's end, with a permanent transition director expected first.

As Clinton prepared for the beginning of a new Democratic administration, President Bush returned to the White House for the final two months of his stay in office.

Clinton, in an interview broadcast Wednesday night on ABC-TV, said the enormity of becoming president was "beginning to sink in."

"I have more responsibility now, I have a higher sense of obligation," he said of his personal transformation, overnight, from small state governor to president-elect of the world's sole remaining superpower.

As he picks a transition director, a White House chief of staff and then the rest of his team, Clinton said he would be guided just as he was during the campaign.

"I am going to focus like a laser beam on this economy, and foreign policy will come into play in part as it affects the economy," he said.

As he slept after a grueling final campaign day capped by his electoral landslide Tuesday, Clinton said he received congratulatory telephone calls from several world leaders. He did not identify them but said he hoped to call back today.

"I'm anxious to have some conversations," he said.

Still, Clinton made it clear to "America's friends and foes alike" that Bush is president for the next 77 days.

With Vice President-elect Al Gore at his side, Clinton delivered an afternoon statement designed to reassure world leaders, and American and global financial markets, of his intentions.

"I want to reaffirm the essential continuity of American foreign policy and my desire to seek bipartisan support for our role in the world," he said. "Even as America's administrative change, America's fundamental interests do not." The greatest mistake any adversary could make would be to doubt America's resolve during this period of transition.

Bush was heading to Camp David Md. today for a long weekend.

"I can think of nothing other to say than let's finish this job with style," Bush said as he returned to the White House on Wednesday. "Let's get the job done cooperatively with the new administration. The government goes on, as well it should, and we will support the new president and give him every chance to lead this country into greater heights."

Clinton has said very little about how he wants his White House organized, let alone who he wants to fill key roles.

But among those most mentioned to lead the transition is Los Angeles attorney Mickey Kantor, the Clinton campaign chairman. Other possibilities include Eli Segal, the Massachusetts businessman who was the campaign's chief of staff, or a member of his transition board.

That group includes several Clinton candidates likely to play major roles in his administration: former Urban League director Vernon Jordan, mentioned as a possible pick for attorney general and Madeleine Kunin, former Vermont Gov. Madeleine Kunin, former Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, and former San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros.

Another decision facing Clinton, when to resign as governor. A court case on the legal requirements for state transition is pending, and Clinton will await its results.

As Clinton began to shape his team, Hillary Clinton met with the Secret Service to deal with another new twist in the next few days: arranging a security detail for 12-year-old daughter Chelsea.

And campaign workers, many bleary-eyed from victory parties, met at the campaign headquarters to discuss what was ahead. Senior Clinton aides handled out informal job applications to mid- and low-level campaign workers, telling them they would be considered for government jobs, and asking them to detail their interests and attachments.

For Clinton, the advice came from all quarters, some of it solicited and some not.

A group called itself the Citizens Transition Project, many of its members Clinton campaign advisers, sent the president-elect a 1,200-page report proposing changes in virtually every facet of the federal government.

A primer on what Bill Clinton stands for

By TERENCE HUNT
AP Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Americans demanded change when they picked a new president, and that's what they're about to get. If Bill Clinton has his way, assault weapons will be banned, family leave will be guaranteed and so will a woman's right to abortion.

Across the board, Clinton is preparing a big shakeup in policy.

Executive orders signed by George Bush and Ronald Reagan are up for review. Bills they vetoed are being resurrected.

Republican efforts of 12 years to restrain Washington's power are giving way to an activist government under Clinton, who takes office Jan. 20.

"Clinton is a young leader who has a clear message about solving some problems in society," said James Thurber, director of American University's Center for Congressional and Presidential Studies. "That alone will bring a great sense of change. This is a historic election."

The economy was issue No. 1 and the centerpiece of Clinton's campaign was a stimulus program built around a $20 billion-a-year spending plan for highways and bridges to create jobs. In the longer term, he'll seek investment tax credits for new plants and equipment and a capital gains tax cut for new business.

He wants to raise taxes on Americans with household incomes over $200,000 and cut taxes for middle- and lower-income workers.

Beyond Clinton's well-known promises on the economy and health insurance, though, are numerous other unequivocal positions that lay a blueprint for his administration.

He is pledged to sign the Brady bill requiring a waiting period for handgun purchases. He wants to ban offshore oil drilling where rigs are not already in place. He wants a law to prohibit companies from hiring permanent replacements for strikers.

Clinton says homosexuals should be allowed to serve in the military. The number of American troops in Europe would be cut to between 75,000 and 100,000 under Clinton rather than the 150,000 ceiling set by President Bush.

Democrats regain the middle class

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton's victory has shaken the foundations of the Republican coalition that Ronald Reagan built. He drew the middle class back to the Democratic Party and also welcomed new voters.

With a victory that cut across most demographic and geographical boundaries, Clinton scored important gains among suburban and middle-income voters that had abandoned Democrats for Reagan a dozen years ago and had stuck with George Bush in 1988, according to surveys of voters as they left their polling places.

Running as a more moderate Democrat than his recent predecessors, Clinton paid a price by faring worse among liberals than Michael Dukakis did four years before him.

But clearly it was a trade worth making. Clinton benefited by leading Bush among both the well-educated and the uneducated, the young and the old, and among all but the wealthiest of Americans.

"What you read out of the exit polls is that Bill Clinton learned the lesson of the 1980s — that in order to win you have to be able to speak to the mainstream of Americans," said Democratic pollster Geoffrey Gartin. "He did much better with middle class voters."

Against Bush in 1988, Michael Dukakis won heavily among the poorest Americans but won just half the vote among those earning between $12,500 and $25,000 a year. He lost substantially among Americans earning more than that.

This time, the income fault line was much more favorable for the Democrat.

Not only did Clinton win among Americans earning up to $50,000, he held his own among those earning between $50,000 and $75,000.

It was only at the highest income levels, those earning above $75,000, that Clinton fell far behind. He won just better than one-third of those voters.

But again, it was a trade worth making for Clinton. Only 13 percent of voters said they made more than $75,000. Two-thirds of all voters said they earned $50,000 or less.

And looking at education levels, Clinton's improvements were equally impressive. Even with a three-man race, Clinton won a larger share of the vote among college graduates and those with post-graduate degrees than Dukakis did four years ago in a two-man race.

Such gains made Democrats' thoughts turn to the possibility they have both broken the so-called Republican electoral lock on the White House and laid the foundations for a new coalition of their own.

IN BRIEF

Gators lose Rushing

GAINESVILLE — Sophomore tight end George Rushing's season is over because of a broken foot that will require surgery Monday, Florida Coach Steve Spurrier said Wednesday.

Spurrier said Rushing re-broke his left foot, which he also broke during spring practice, earlier this week during practice.

Rushing, 6-foot-3, 223 pounds from Miami American, had been the Gators' starter until dislocating a shoulder against Louisiana State last month. He finishes the season with one reception for 6 yards. It was on that play against LSU when Rushing first was injured.

Rushing's place in the lineup has been taken by juniors Charlie Dean and Greg Keller.

FSU's Jones a Lombardi finalist

TALLAHASSEE — Florida State inside linebacker Marvin Jones was named one of four finalists for the 23rd Annual Rotary Lombardi Award Wednesday, the second straight year Jones has made the final cut.

Named for the legendary Green Bay Packers coach Vince Lombardi, the award honors the college football lineman of the year. Other finalists are center Mike Compton of West Virginia, Alabama defensive end Eric Curry and Washington offensive tackle Lincoln Kennedy.

Jones who missed the Virginia game with a sprained ankle but is expected to play this Saturday against Maryland.

Jones leads the Seminoles with 50 solo tackles and has 79 total stops on the season. He has four tackles for loss, a quarterback sack and two passes broken up on the year.

In less than three years, the Miami native has 337 career tackles and ranks third on Florida State's career tackles for loss chart with 25. Last year, he was the first sophomore ever named a Lombardi Award finalist.

The 1992 Rotary Lombardi Award winner will be announced at a black tie dinner in Houston on Thursday, Dec. 3, 1992.

Heat waive Ogg

MIAMI — The Miami Heat reached the regular-season roster limit of 12 Wednesday by waiving center Alan Ogg.

Second-round draft pick Matt Geiger of Georgia Tech beat out Ogg for the backup center job. Ogg, 25, averaged 2.5 points and 1.7 rebounds in 43 games for Miami last season.

The Heat opens the season Friday at Orlando.

Rheume signs with Knights

ATLANTA — Manon Rheume, pro hockey's first female goalie, on Wednesday signed a three-year contract with the Atlanta Knights of the International Hockey League.

Terms were not disclosed. Rheume, 20, was listed as the Knights No. 3 goalie, but hadn't traveled with the club or suited up for home games.

However, she was moved up to the No. 2 goalie on Monday when the parent club, the Tampa Bay Lightning of the NHL, called up goalie David Littman.

Rheume will travel with the team to Cincinnati on Friday.

Listach top A.L. rookie

NEW YORK — Milwaukee shortstop Pat Listach, who hit .290 with 47 RBIs and 54 stolen bases, was selected AL rookie of the year.

Listach received 20 of 28 first-place votes and 122 points overall in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Cleveland outfielder Kenny Lofton was second with 85 points, followed by Seattle pitcher Dave Fleming with 23 and Milwaukee pitcher Cal Eldred with 22.

Esposito charged with assault

TORONTO — Phil Esposito, general manager of the Tampa Bay Lightning, walked into a downtown police station Wednesday to answer a charge of assault.

Detective constable Joseph Page said Esposito showed up voluntarily at 52 Division, was charged and released. Page said he didn't know the date of Esposito's court appearance.

Esposito was charged with assaulting Toronto Star reporter Bob McKenzie after an Oct. 15 game against the Toronto Maple Leafs. McKenzie said Esposito confronted him as he tried to interview players in the Tampa dressing room following the NHL game, which Toronto won 5-3.

Top seeds advance in 4A-Dist. 9

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — Everything went true to form during the quarterfinal round of the 4A-District 9 girls' volleyball tournament Wednesday evening at Lake Mary High School.

And if everything continues to run true to form, then things could get very interesting during this evening's semifinals and championship matches, which will also be played at Lake Mary.

On Wednesday, all four of the top-seeded teams advanced: No. 1 seeded Oviedo swept No. 8 Lake Brantley 15-3, 15-0; fourth-seeded Lake Howell ousted fifth-seeded Mainland 15-3, 15-4; No. 3 Deltona outlasted No. 6 Spruce Creek 16-14, 15-10; and second-seed Lake Mary thumped seventh-seed Lyman 15-4, 15-2.

This evening, Oviedo and Lake Howell will play in one semifinal match at 4:30 p.m. with Lake Mary and Deltona scheduled to battle at 6 p.m. The two survivors will then meet at approximately 7:30 p.m. to decide the championship.

Lake Mary coach Cindy Henry said that the seedings will mean nothing today, as any of the four remaining teams are capable of winning the championship.

"We've played Deltona before and we won in two games, but it wasn't easy," said Henry. "They're a good team. They do have a very nice attack. They run plays out of the middle and have some big girls. That concerns me."

"What's really going to be difficult is playing that match, staying up for the match and, should we win, getting up again for the finals."

The district champion will advance to the 4A-Region V championship match next Tuesday, which will be played at the site of the District 10 (Orlando) champion.

Megan Hay (No. 14), Jill Jasewic (No. 34) and Christy Oliver (No. 10) led Seminole into today's 4:30 p.m. semifinal match against Edgewater in the 3A-District 9 girls' volleyball tournament at Flagler-Palm Coast.

Seminoles move into semifinals

From Staff Reports

FLAGLER — With one goal secured, the Seminole High School girls' volleyball team can now turn its attention to other tasks, specifically, winning the 3A-District 6 tournament championship.

On Wednesday night at Flagler-Palm Coast High School, the Seminoles (seeded fourth in the seven-team field) swept to a 15-11, 15-10 win over No. 5 seed Leesburg.

Not only did the win advance Seminole into this evening's semifinal against top-seeded Edgewater (4:30 p.m.) and give the Tribe a shot at copping the district title, it gave the Seminoles an 8-6 record, guaranteeing them their first winning season in four years.

"It was a good team effort," said Seminole coach Beth Corso. "We haven't had a winning season since Liz Long (now at Stetson University) and Adrian Hillsman were seniors. And now those girls will be graduating from college."

Megan Hay led the Seminole attack with five kills and six other good spikes while Dawn Burks contributed four kills, two other good spikes and a pair of digs. Christy Oliver collected 13 assists and 16 other good sets. Catherine Foye and Yuleyma Otero each came up with one dig on defense.

If the Seminoles beat Edgewater (13-5), then they will come back and play in the championship match, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. tonight.

No matter what lengths first baseman Scott Williams (No. 6) and his Hellig Meyers teammates went to, they couldn't keep Nick Ferpes (No. 9) off the bases. Ferpes, who plays for Touchdown Pub, went 3-for-3 with a run scored. But it didn't help as Hellig Meyers rallied for a 6-4 win and a tie for first place with Touchdown Pub.

Hellig Meyers catches Touchdown

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — It was a night of firsts Wednesday at Chase Park in the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Slowpitch Softball League.

To begin with, league-leader Touchdown Pub lost for the first time since opening night, dropping a 6-4 decision to Hellig Meyers and falling into a tie for first place with Hellig Meyers.

Then, in the nightcap, Beer: 30 won its first game of the season, outslugging Crazy Wings/Lambert Erectors 14-10.

In the first game of the evening, DeLand Nissan bested Bamboo Cafe 9-2.

With one week to play, Touchdown Pub and Hellig Meyers are tied for the league lead at 7-2. They are followed by Bamboo Cafe (5-4), Crazy Wings/Lambert Erectors (4-5), DeLand Nissan (3-6) and Beer: 30 (1-8).

Next week's schedule has Hellig Meyers playing Bamboo Cafe at 6:30 p.m., Crazy Wings/Lambert Erectors taking on Touchdown Pub at 7:30 p.m. and

Bamboo Cafe	000	110	0	-	2	0
DeLand Nissan	114	102	x	-	9	10
Touchdown Pub	000	201	1	-	4	13
Hellig Meyers	000	042	x	-	6	13
Beer: 30	502	003	4	-	14	17
Crazy Wings/Lambert Erectors	013	101	x	-	10	10

DeLand Nissan tangling with Beer: 30 at 8:30 p.m.

DeLand Nissan, playing with only nine men on the field, used inside-the-park home runs by Mike Mawby and Dave Jones to knock off Bamboo Cafe. Mawby's dash was a two-run poke that highlighted a four-run third inning that gave DeLand Nissan a 6-0 advantage.

Jones, who also hit two singles, finished with two runs and two RBI. Mawby had a single and scored another run. Brian Curtis added a triple, double, one run and three RBI. Gary Stephan contributed a double, single, two runs and an RBI.

Magic entering Shaq era

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

ORLANDO — The Orlando Magic's 7-foot-1, 300-pound blueprint for success is looking better and better every day.

And, Shaquille O'Neal won't be happy until he and Central Florida's fledgling NBA franchise are the best.

Often criticized for emphasizing winning with veterans over building with youth, the Magic struggled to 21 victories last season — 10 fewer than the previous winter — and was rewarded with what amounts to a reprieve for past mistakes.

O'Neal is not only the top prospect to enter the league since David Robinson turned the San Antonio Spurs around as a rookie; he generally is regarded to have the potential to be the most dominating big man in the game since Wilt Chamberlain.

"The guy is awesome," Orlando point guard Scott Skiles said. "He's as good right now as any big guy in the league. He's going to be unreal."

Probably not right away, though. Although the former Louisiana State star averaged 17.8 points and 10 rebounds per game during the preseason, his supporting cast could be the key to Orlando's chances of improving on last year's seventh-place finish in the Atlantic Division.

Dennis Scott, back after missing all but 18 games of last season with a leg injury that required off-season surgery, is one of the players that coach Matt Guokas is counting on to take the pressure off his rookie center.

"All the power in the world inside does you no good if you don't have a good outside shooter to spread the floor," Guokas said.

"Dennis makes the floor bigger for us when he steps out and hits from around the 3-point line. We definitely would like to see a lot of that this season."

Others who will be keys are Nick Anderson, a fourth-year pro who developed into the Magic's best player last season, and second-year

Even raunchy speech needs protection

DEAR ABBY: I have no opinion about foul language on television because I no longer watch television. Withdrawal was painful, but after a year or two, it became a liberating experience.

As for foul language in movies and other media outlets: Art imitates life, there are rude and crude people among us, and a writer or director must have the freedom to depict them.

Moreover, the only alternative to foul language is censorship. Movies are rated; if foul language is a problem for someone, that person should see only G-rated movies. The ratings do provide a clue to the content; and reviews often go beyond this, with such a line as, "...rated R for violence and nudity."

Unrestricted freedom of speech is important. In George Orwell's "1984," he depicts a society where a new language was implemented specifically for the purpose of restricting the range of ideas that could be expressed, along with active programs to restrict thought by other means.

Movies, other media outlets, and especially rock and rap lyrics are testing the limits of freedom of speech daily.

While we may occasionally feel that freedom of speech is carried to extremes in the United States, we must realize also that there are some people trying to curtail our liberties, and we must stand up to them.

DOUGLAS CAMPBELL, CLEVELAND, OHIO
DEAR DOUGLAS: You make some excellent points. If you don't like what you hear on TV and radio, you can always turn them off — or walk out of a movie. However, freedom of speech is still protected under the Bill of Rights.

Last May, a reader complained in my column about foul language in some of our "best" movies and TV shows. I told her that I agreed, and asked my readers to let me know how they felt about it.

At last count, 67,783 readers felt many movies and TV shows today insult our values, intelligence and morals. Only 213 readers disagreed.

Perhaps the key word here should be "responsibility." Let's hear it from Phil Boatwright, who reviews films for a living:

DEAR ABBY: I'm afraid I'm a perfect example of why Americans put up with obscenity in films and on TV. I've had your address, but I have continued to put off writing. We all just get too busy!

I would encourage others of like mind to respond to Hollywood's disregard for morality. Profane language, exploitative sex and extreme violence seem to be in almost every film released these days. Surely it is the right of filmmakers to show such material, but Hollywood should exercise more responsibility.

Parents also need to show responsibility and concern. I review films for a living, and I can't tell you how often I see kids in PG-13 and R-rated films. Their heads are not only filled with crudity, but with cynicism, racism and a disregard for life.

If we are concerned about saving Mother Earth, shouldn't we also be concerned with nourishing the spirit of man?

PHIL BOATWRIGHT, THOUSAND OAKS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: We hear about how terrible teen-agers are, but I want to share what I saw this afternoon.

While looking for some greeting cards, I noticed two boys about 14 or 15 going through the "cards for all occasions."

One boy asked his friend, "What kind of card are you looking for?" The friend replied, "I want to get a card for my mom."

The first boy asked, "How come? It's not Mother's Day."

"My mom is having a bad day," his friend replied, "and I want to find something to cheer her up."

Abby, I could have hugged that kid! He must have been raised by someone very special to have turned out that way.

A.L. RESVES

DEAR A.L.: What a heartwarming scene you observed. You're right; children learn compassion and sensitivity at their mother's (or father's) knee.

How doctors interpret result of mammogram

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please explain what increased density on a mammogram is all about.

DEAR READER: When X-rayed, all tissues give characteristic patterns on X-ray film. The pattern depends on the density of the tissue being examined. For example, bone is extremely dense and will, therefore, absorb more X-rays, leading to a white image on the film. On the other hand, fat is much less dense; more X-rays pass through it to expose the X-ray film and cause a darker image.

The breast is composed of tissues of varying densities: fat, glandular elements, cysts and, in some cases, calcifications. Thus, the X-ray pattern in a mammogram reflects the structures within the breast.

It's the radiologist's job to interpret the shadows on the X-ray film and tell the patient's physician whether the images are normal or suspicious. In general, breast cancer is more dense than normal breast tissue -- and may contain tiny flecks of calcium that tip off the radiologist to a potential problem.

The fact that you had an "increased density" on your mammogram is not necessarily worrisome: it simply means that you have some dense tissue in the breast that is probably normal -- but should be followed up with either a repeat mammogram in a few months or a biopsy. Ask your doctor about this. Perhaps a mammogram that is focused on the area in question will give a more defined picture and spare you the need for biopsy.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Breast Cancer and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

By Phillip Alder

As I have mentioned before in this column, forcing an opponent to make a lead that helps you is a situation devoutly to be desired.

Today's deal from the NEC World Team Olympiad, held two months ago in Salomaggiore, Italy, is a good example. How would you play as South in four hearts. West leading the diamond queen?

Most South players actually didn't bid a simple four hearts. Instead, they used Stayman or a transfer-bid sequence and reached four spades. This contract required finding the spade queen for success. All the declarers failed -- except one who was favored by an ill-advised trump lead from West.

In four hearts, given the three certain trump losers, it seems as if you will have to locate the spade queen as well, but that isn't so.

You should start by eliminating the minors. You win the lead in hand with the diamond ace. Next, you cash dummy's top clubs, discarding a spade from hand. Then you ruff the club eight in hand, play a diamond to dummy's king and ruff dummy's last diamond in your hand. Finally, you lead a trump. When West plays the 10, you duck in the dummy. Unless the hearts are 4-0, East will have to win the trick and give away the contract.

What can he lead? If a trump, you lose only two heart tricks. If a spade, he finds the queen for you. And if a minor-suit card, it concedes a ruff-and-discard. You throw a spade from hand and ruff in the dummy, no longer having a spade loser to worry about.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Nov. 6, 1992

The aspects indicate your earning potential is likely to be greater than usual in the year ahead. Find ways to market your knowledge and skills to those who need what you have to offer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 23) Your earning potential looks good today, but your performance might not justify the compensation you anticipate. Be fair to the guy who signs your paycheck. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences governing you in the year ahead. Send for Scorpio's Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Before volunteering to participate on a committee at work or in a social setting today, be certain you know what you're getting into. This situation might be much more complex than you realize.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Left to your own devices, you'll know how to get things done today. But where you're overly concerned about pleasing those who peer over your shoulder, you might not do such a good job.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Too much worrying about what might never occur could severely impede your progress today. Do what needs doing, and if a problem arises, deal with it then.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Share with others today, but try to restrict your generosity to the deserving. Let those who are not entitled to your help feather their own nest.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A matter you hold a very strong opinion about might be seriously contested by another today. Be open-minded; each of you could be both partially right and wrong.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Treat everyone you'll be involved with today with consideration, but, by the same token, don't set yourself up to be used. Someone with ulterior motives might attempt to do so.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Use discretion in social situations today, and try to behave in a manner that cannot later be condemned by gossip. Even your smallest acts might be scrutinized.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your successes might be limited today in endeavors where a second effort is required. Therefore, if your initial attempts fail, don't get discouraged and quit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In a conversation with friends today, you might be tempted to embellish the truth a bit. Unfortunately, false claims or exaggerations will be readily discerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This might not be a good day to invest your time or resources in people or things you know little about. Either one, or both, could do you in.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Appreciate your own views today but not to the extent where you block out more profound suggestions. Leave space for the ideas of others. (C)1992. NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.
