Suspect Accused In Assault Of Child

Man-Hunt Ends In Surrender

A 28-year-old Apopka man, subject of an intensive man-hunt after the assault of a 9-year-old girl July 29, surrendered to investigators at the Seminole County sheriff's headquarters in Sanford Thursday.

Thomas Francis Gildart Jr., a self-employed landscaper, turned himself in at 4:05 p.m. and was booked into Seminole County jail. No bond was set.

He is charged with sexual battery on a child under 11-years-old and kidnapping.

The sexual battery charge carries a maximum sentence of death, according to a spokesman for the State Attorney's office.

The kidnapping charges carries a maximum life sentence.

Seminole County Sheriff's Department spokesman John Spolski said Thursday Gildart said he turned himself in because he was tired of running and hiding.

Investigators questioned the man for about 45 minutes Thursday, Spolski said.

According to sheriff's reports, a man lured a 9-year-old girl to the back door of her home in the Longwood area at about 10 p.m. July 29, grabbed her and dragged her to an open field behind the home where he sexually assaulted her.

The girl screamed, the man released her, and she ran home and told her parents of the attack, reports said.

The girl picked out Gildart's picture and identified him as her attacker after looking through a file of photographs, reports said.

Sheriff's investigators had appealed to the news media and the public for help in locating Gildart, whose last known address was 2125 Kilmer Lane in Apopka.

The Florida department of corrections released Gildart on parole Nov. 30, 1982, after serving two years of a five-year sentence for an aggravated assault in Orange County in May 1980.

A the time he was charged in that case, Gildart was already on parole from a 1976 five-year term for burglary and a 1978 one-year term for escape, both cases in Orange County.

School Board Answers Parents' Pleas For Rosenwald Kitchen

By Michael Beha
Herald Staff Writer

A decision to construct a full kitchen at Rosenwald Exceptional Child Center has left at least one parent whose child attends the school with a strong sense of accomplishment.

Dick Skaggs, one of several vocal Rosenwald parents who have pushed for Seminole County School Board members to include a full kitchen at the Rosenwald facility, said he's pleased that the Board has finally addressed the problem.

"I am truly impressed and astounded. I'm awfully surprised, but need for a full kitchen. He contends that the School Board has not adequately dealt with the needs of Rosenwald students.

But the decision has altered Skaggs' viewpoint. "This is the first indication that the administration has acknowledged there's a need to consider things out there."

The School Board voted this week to spend $33,400 to install a full kitchen at the school this year. The board had planned to spend $7,000 to install only a finishing kitchen at the school, which would have supplemented its existing food service system. Meals for the 225 students at Rosenwald have been prepared at Lyman High School in Longwood and then transported to the school. The intent of the finishing kitchen was to ensure that the food was warm when it was served. But with the full kitchen, all meals will be prepared at the school.

School Board members voted to pay for construction of the kitchen from a $98,000 grant from the state. That grant and another $290,000 grant from the state are designed to help the district deal with increased needs from students transferred to the school when the state's Sunland Centers closed.

Still undecided is the staffing for the new kitchen. School officials are unsure how they will fund a manager (between $12,000 and $15,000) for the full kitchen. Because the kitchen would only serve about 165 meals a day, paying a full time manager would not be cost effective, according to Assistant Food Service Director D.K. Kirkpatrick. He said a school needs to serve about 300 meals a day to pay a manager's salary.

School Superintendent Robert Hughes said staffing of the kitchen will be addressed at a September Board meeting.

Dick Skaggs

"I'm pleased too," he said. "I guess a little pushing and shoving does sometimes work."

But Don Ricci, director of exceptional education, said today, the board wanted to provide the kitchen all along.

"The board wanted to do all it could for kids there but they thought $7,000 for a finishing kitchen was all the money they'd have," he said. "But when $98,000 became available from the state the board decided to see if they could find money there for the full kitchen."

Skaggs and members of the school administration have clashed publicly over conditions at the school and particularly over the

County Democrats Pledge To Support Askew At Meet

Delegates pledged to the presidential candidacy of former Florida Governor Reubin Askew were elected by the Seminole County Democratic Executive Committee Thursday night. They will attend the state party's mini-convention to be held Oct. 21-23 in Hollywood.

Delegates from around the state will select their favorite presidential candidate at the convention.

Elected from the committee itself were: Ken Beven, David Chafin, Sandra Gaines, Lisa Glascock, Jerry Hester, Willie King, Laney Maia, Virginia Mercer, Ken Pepper, Eliza Pringle, Roland Williams and Aletha Williams. Non-committee members elected were Terry and Bill Beckett, Lenora Mobley and Frances Oliver.

AIDS

Hate Calls Swamp Central Florida Blood Bank

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

The Central Florida Blood Bank is being swamped with "hate calls" resulting from its decision early this week to stand by national policy and refuse the father of a seriously ill baby the right to donate blood specifically for his child.

Richard Studer of St. Cloud asked for the privilege because he was fearful that his 11-month-old son, Robert, might contract the dreaded and fatal acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) if he received blood from an unknown donor.

At the same time, Orlando Regional Medical Center, has been deluged with calls of support for Studer's position. Young Robert has been hospitalized at the center for the past two months suffering with chronic malnutrition because his body refuses to absorb nutrients into his blood stream. The child's blood count is low and he is susceptible to infection because of the illness.

Robert's condition is listed as "fair" by doctors at the hospital and he was removed from protective isolation Wednesday.

Because of the much publicized and newly identified disease — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — and the suspicion that it may be transmitted via blood transfusions, Robert's father, Richard, asked the Central Florida Blood Bank to permit him or the baby's grandfather to donate blood specially for use in transfusions for the baby. Studer's fear was that his son, already in a weakened condition, would die if he were transfused with blood which might have been donated by an AIDS sufferer.

Ed Carr, executive director of the blood bank, based in Orlando, and president of the American Association of Blood Banks, said blood banks must stick with the policy or the voluntary blood donation program nationally could fail.

The case received nationwide attention when Studer appeared at 8:10 a.m. Thursday on the CBS Morning News and explained his fears and the policy.

The father vowed to fight until the blood banks policy is changed, even if the fight entails legal action.

"I feel it should be the right of the family to decide on the blood transfusion," he said.

"People are calling and saying they'll never donate blood again," Carr said Thursday, adding if he had granted Studer's request it would set a "bad precedent" that could ultimately cause the collapse of the nation's voluntary blood donor system.

He added that the national organization and the local blood bank have a rule against direct donation of blood.

While Studer opposed transfusions using others' blood, he did grant permission for transfusions Monday and Tuesday "to sustain the baby's life," said Cynthia Sucher, public relations director for the Orlando hospital. "Studer is very protective of his son," Miss Sucher said.

The Central Florida Blood Bank provides blood to 24 hospitals in seven counties and its policies set the rule in most of those hospitals.

If a request similar to Studer's were made at Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford, it is likely that it would receive the same response.

Ann Cole, laboratory manager at the hospital said, "Since we get all of our blood from the Central Florida Blood Bank, we must abide by their policies. We have no choice. We are not equipped to draw donor blood."

Carr said there is no evidence that blood donated by family members is safer than that collected by the blood bank and the chance of contracting AIDS from a blood transfusion is one in a million. In addition, he said there was no medical reason why the baby should have received blood only from his father or grandfather. "If they had phoned in with an order directed by their doctor for a good reason, we would have done it immediately."

See BLOOD, page 7A

Blood supplies such as these at Central Florida Regional Hospital could dwindle, blood bank officials assert, if directed donation is allowed.

Seminole Free Of AIDS...So Far

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) is not a public health problem in Sanford or Seminole County and there is "no great risk here yet," according to two local physicians.

"No cases have been reported in Seminole County," Dr. Jorge Deju, director of the county's department of health and human services, said.

But cases of the dread disease have jumped 27 percent in Florida this summer, making the state third in the nation in the number of cases reported.

And the disease could develop here given the right circumstances, according to Sanford surgeon Dr. Kenneth Wing who recently attended a seminar on the subject in Asheville, N.C.

AIDS is an immunological problem, Wing said, and research is being conducted into its exact cause. AIDS is believed to be restricted to a small segment of the population who have a deficiency in their bodies' immune systems. It occurs primarily in male homosexuals, he said.

"There are no means, at this time, of AIDS victims battling infection," Wing said. "Their immune systems have been destroyed. There are no cases on record of AIDS victims living beyond four years. There have been some survivors for one or two years."

Wing said the problem appears to be concentrated in cities like San Francisco which have large male homosexual populations.

He said that some researchers believe that male homosexuals who have anal intercourse with large numbers of sexual partners — the number mentioned at the seminar was more than 1,000 — and who already may have weakened conditions because of the use of illicit drugs are prime candidates for the disease.

Wing said since the protein in the seminal fluid of every male is different when it is absorbed through the anal walls, the male's immune system is ultimately destroyed or altered in its battle against those foreign proteins.

In addition, the wife of a bisexual who has anal intercourse with her husband is also subject to the disease, as are hemophiliacs, who may be heterosexual, but by necessity often have blood transfusions. Also on the list of possible AIDS victims are homosexual Haitians or the sex partners of homosexuals.

Wing said female prostitutes who engage in sexual activities are not subject to AIDS unless they are involved in anal intercourse. The vaginal walls do not absorb the proteins in seminal fluid, he said.

Deju said a number of precautions are being taken locally with blood transfusions because of the AIDS scare. And physicians are asked to report any suspicious case as soon as possible. Physicians are being cautioned by the county's health department to take proper precautions with hypodermic needles and to disinfect clothing worn in laboratories.

Wing said the Central Florida Blood Bank is being very careful to screen out as blood donors male homosexuals and Haitians and others who might be transmitters of the disease. —Donna Estes

Restitution

Judge Orders Teenage Burglar To Pay $8,100 To His Victims

Several burglary victims in the Longwood area could hardly believe their eyes and ears Thursday when sheriff's investigators knocked on their doors and handed them checks to repay them for their losses.

Eventually nine victims will receive $8,100 in payments, according to Seminole County sheriff's investigator Allan Hetzel.

Authorities said the nine were victims of a burglary ring operated by three Lake Brantley High School boys who have been linked to 81 burglaries which cost southwest Seminole County residents about $100,000 in lost property and damages.

The money the boys received from pawning the stolen goods was used to buy cocaine, marijuana and alcohol, Hetzel said.

The checks which Hetzel delivered Thursday ranged from $10 to $2,000.

Only one member of the gang has been sentenced and all the restitution money came from him.

Two other gang members have pleaded guilty and are awaiting sentencing. A fourth person has also been charged in connection with the burglaries.

Circuit Judge C. Vernon Mize Jr. Wednesday ordered Anthony Raponi, 18, of 201 Green Lake Circle, Longwood, to pay back some of his victims.

Raponi, who pleaded guilty to 12 burglary counts, was also sentenced to 10 years probation with the condition that he serve one year in the county jail.

At least two other Lake Brantley High School students were involved in the thefts.

John Frederick Clifford, 18, of 959 Apple Lane, Altamonte Springs, had pleaded guilty to four counts of burglary, two counts of grand theft and one charge of petty theft. Sentencing is set for Sept. 22.

Kevin Stuhre, 17, of 193 Bristol Point, Longwood, pled guilty to two counts of burglary and two counts of grand theft. Sentencing will be Aug. 24.

A fourth person, Michael David Lewis, 17, of Clay Court St., Longwood, was arrested last week on one charge of burglary. He has not entered a plea yet.

Most of the 81 burglaries occurred in to residences in the Sweetwater Oaks, Sweetwater Club, Sabal Point and Wekiva areas. A few cars and businesses were also robbed, authorities said.

Usually the burglars took handguns, jewelry, alcohol, and video recorders. Entry was usually gained through sliding glass doors or rear windows and the thieves wore rubber or cotton gloves.

IN BRIEF

Lavelle Faces Charge Of Lying In EPA Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rita Lavelle, cleared of one charge stemming from Congress' investigation of the Environmental Protection Agency, now faces new charges she lied about her management of the EPA's toxic waste cleanup program.

Miss Lavelle, 35, faced arraignment today for allegedly lying to Congress and the government about manipulating cleanup funds to help Republican candidates and about her role in a toxic waste case involving her former employer.

A federal grand jury last week indicted the former chief of the EPA's $1.6 billion Superfund toxic waste program on five felony counts, including perjury and obstructing a congressional proceeding.

If convicted of all the charges, she faces up to 25 years in prison and $21,000 in fines.

The new charges followed her jury acquittal July 22 on a misdemeanor count of contempt of Congress for failing to appear at a congressional subcommittee hearing.

Strike Talks Stalled

United Press International

Informal talks have produced no breakthrough to settle the 6-day-old telephone strike, but the largest union involved in the walkout says it is willing to continue meeting without bringing in a federal mediator.

"We've told them (Bell System executives) we're available for serious negotiations," a Communications Workers of America spokeswoman said Thursday night. "There've been some informal talks, but there is no movement."

Scattered incidents of sabotage and violence have been reported since the walkout began on Sunday.

Managers and company supervisors have been filling in for operators, technicians and installers since the walkout began at 12:01 a.m. Sunday. Direct-dialed calls are going through smoothly, although delays have been reported on operator-assisted calls.

Big Apple Asks For Help

NEW YORK (UPI) — The city's largest shopping and clothing manufacturing area was blacked out for the third day today and Mayor Edward Koch called President Reagan to seek federal aid for businesses faced with millions of dollars in losses.

Some power was expected to be restored in the 12-block area today, but Con Edison spokesman Dan Walden offered "no assurances."

The utility still hoped to have full service by Monday, but it is possible it could take longer, Walden said.

The affected area, which includes Macy's and Gimbel's flagship stores, was blacked out Wednesday by a fire in an underground Con Ed substation. The blaze, which burned out of control for 15 hours, was sparked by a watermain break that flooded the vault and short-circuited equipment.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT: Severe thunderstorms in the East flooded New York subways with ankle-deep water and tornadoes ripped through four states, wrecking a Pennsylvania airport, knocking out power to thousands of people and injuring at least four. Near-record temperatures baked the northern Rockies and the southern Plains — Wichita Falls, Texas reported 103 and Havre, Mont. and Tulsa, Okla. each had 102 — but the Midwest and Northeast got a break from the heat wave blamed for nearly 200 deaths since July. The Great Lakes' cool front moved east Thursday, whipping up winds as strong as 93 mph and creating a tornado that tore through the Allentown, Pa. airport. The twister knocked out power and radar, forcing the facility to close for the first time in 30 years because of a summer storm. Heavy rains were reported throughout the East, with 2 1/4 inches at Islip, N.Y. Iowa finally got relief from 12 straight days of 90-degree plus temperatures.

AREA READINGS (9 a.m.): temperature: 82; overnight low: 75; Thursday high: 93; barometric pressure: 30.08; relative humidity: 82 percent; winds southwest at 9 mph; rain: none; sunrise 6:53 a.m., sunset 8:07 p.m.

Wholesale Prices Inch Upward

Food Prices May Soon Begin Rapid Rise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wholesale prices edged up only 0.1 percent in July, held in check by less expensive food and only slightly more costly gasoline, the Labor Department said today.

The slight increase kept the 1983 inflation rate for business heading down by 0.7 percent when figured yearly, a remarkable declining trend that has survived for seven months.

But one Labor Department economist, noting the figures did not reflect any effects on food prices of the summer drought, said the report "may be the calm before the storm."

Food prices were down 0.6 percent, the third consecutive month of decline and largely the result of sharp drops in meat and vegetable prices.

But after farmers sell off animals that are no longer profitable to feed at higher corn prices, the food index may well begin to take off, government economist Craig Howells indicated.

Home heating oil and natural gas got cheaper in the latest report and gasoline prices went up only 0.9

percent, compared to 5.1 percent in May and 2.3 percent in May.

The overall energy index was up only 0.2 percent, the lowest for any month since October 1981. All energy prices lag by a month in the report, reflecting June price trends which apparently became even more favorable for dealers later on.

The Labor Department's Producer Price Index was 285.7 in July, equivalent to a price of $2,857 for goods that cost business $1,000 in 1967. Wholesale price trends generally influence consumer prices after a few weeks to months.

The July report followed a 0.5 percent increase in June, the biggest of the year caused almost entirely by more expensive gasoline and home heating oil.

Declines in the index in January, March and April counterbalanced all the increases to keep the business inflation rate sinking.

Without the decline in food prices and the gentle increase in energy prices the price index for nearly 3,400 commodities would have risen 0.5 percent.

EPA Officials Cleared; Report Called Whitewash

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three House subcommittee chairmen are attacking as inadequate a Justice Department report that cleared former EPA chief Anne Burford and five aides of criminal wrongdoing in the controversy that drove them from office.

Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., said Thursday the report by the department's Public Integrity Section is a "transparently political document ... and carries the aroma of freshly applied white paint."

Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., said such a probe of an administration by its own Justice Department creates "the appearance of a whitewash." And Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., called the investigation "inadequate and incomplete."

In the 53-page report released by Attorney General William French Smith, the department said FBI agents conducted more than 400 interviews to try to trace 20 allegations of criminal wrongdoing at the agency.

It cleared Mrs. Burford of charges she stalled release of EPA Superfund money for cleanup of a hazardous waste site in California to keep former Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. from claiming any of the credit in his Democratic senatorial campaign. A federal statute makes it a misdemeanor to take official actions to harm a congressional candidacy.

The Justice Department said it could not prove Mrs. Burford remarked at an Aug. 4, 1982 luncheon aboard the former presidential yacht Sequoia that she planned to block the release of $6.1 million in Superfund money or that she actually did so.

However, the report made no mention of allegations by EPA career employees that Mrs. Burford ordered an unnecessary legal study that halted the cleanup of the Stringfellow Acid Pits.

The release of the report left Rita Lavelle, former head of the $1.6 billion Superfund toxic waste cleanup program, the only agency official facing prosecution in a controversy that forced the departures of 21 EPA executives.

Ms. Lavelle, whose firing by President Reagan last Feb. 7 triggered the purge, faced arraignment today on a five-count felony indictment that includes three charges of perjury.

Smith said in a statement that criminal allegations against at least four other officials still are being investigated. Sources said they include a review of possible perjury by former deputy administrator John Hernandez. Law enforcement officials said, however, no further EPA indictments are likely.

It recommended, however, the government seek to recover up to $528 from Horton for personal long distance telephone calls on his office phone.

In Illegal Computer Raid

'WarGames' Dozen May Face Charges

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — A group of young technical wizards, drawing inspiration from the movie "WarGames," had little trouble tapping in to the computers of banks and a nuclear weapons laboratory in New Mexico, one of the suspects said.

At least 12 people, ranging in age from 15 to 22, may face federal charges for illegally using their home computers, authorities said Thursday.

"My friends and I are in a lot of trouble for it," said a 21-year-old allegedly involved in the computer raiding. "It got out of hand, but it's not all our fault either," he said. "There's no security in it or nothing. It didn't take too much intelligence to get into the things."

The suspects gained access to the computers at the Los Alamos, N.M., National Laboratory, which is operated by the University of California for the U.S. Department of Energy, and at a Los Angeles bank, the Milwaukee Sentinel said.

They also allegedly broke into a dozen other computers owned by firms in the United States and Canada, the newspaper said.

FBI agent Gary Hart said his office was investigating evidence may be presented to federal prosecutors.

U.S. Attorney Joseph Stadtmueller said the computer raids might fall into the criminal categories of wire fraud or theft of government property.

The suspects used their home computers to dial into the memories of commercial and government computers about the time the movie "WarGames" was released in June, the 21-year-old involved said.

The movie is about a teenager who uses his home computer to gain access to a Defense Department computer controlling nuclear weapons. The result is nearly World War III.

"It's really easy to do," said the 21-year-old. "It didn't take too much intelligence to get into the things. We came up with a lot of our own ideas, and the movie just added to it."

"We didn't do it to steal information. We hear the FBI is angry."

He said 11 other people besides himself were involved.

"The computer, which processed only unclassified data, was accessed from Milwaukee by an unauthorized person," said James Breen, public affairs officer for the Los Alamos nuclear weapons research laboratory.

"The access was detected in late June by the laboratory and reported to the Department of Energy," Breen said. "The incident is currently under investigation by the FBI. No classified or sensitive data was compromised by the incident."

The Los Alamos Chronicle said the lab has changed its security code because of the incident.

Authorities declined to say how they tracked down the Milwaukee people.

The Security Pacific National Bank of Los Angeles computer was also broken into, a bank spokesman said, but no accounts were affected.

Some of the people investigated were members of an Explorer Scout post that meets at IBM Corp. The 21-year-old said, however, the raids were accomplished on home computers and not connected with the Explorer post or IBM.

The 21-year-old said he and his friends called a local TELENET telephone number to gain access to the computers. He said besides having computers at their homes, each had a modem — a device that enables a computer to transmit and receive information by telephone.

Strikers Deny Phone Vandalism

By Micheal Deha Herald Staff Writer

Striking communications workers are not responsible for vandalism to area Southern Bell telephone lines, according to local union president Robert Headrick.

Headrick said members of Local 3113 of the Communications Workers of America have denied turning off air lines which protect underground cables from water seepage.

On Wednesday, Southern Bell's Sanford Manager Larry Strickler reported vandalism to five lines, saying that the air lines had been turned off or cut, allowing water to seep into the lines and causing telephone service interruptions to several areas.

Strickler did not accuse any union members of being responsible for the vandalism. But Headrick said union workers had documented many cases of vandalism to the same lines before the strike began six days ago.

Workers kept a log of such incidents, he said, in case they were accused of sabotage by company officials.

Strickler said today that he has received several complaints from customers who claimed they could not get through picket lines to pay their phone bills at the Sanford phone center, 2200 Southgate Drive.

But Strickler said the people were "probably just intimidated at the sight of the picket lines."

He said the strikers have "been acting like professionals throughout the strike."

Union members set up picket lines in Sanford at the phone center store, Southern Bell business offices on 9th Street and switching operations on Country Club Road, at the Highland Work Center near Winter Springs, and at operations centers in Oviedo, Deltona and DeBary.

Southern Bell serves the Sanford, Lake Mary and Oviedo areas along with southwest Volusia County. The remainder of Seminole County is served by United Telephone Co., an independent non-union firm.

Burglary Suspect Collared By Intended Victims

Two Longwood men chased a burglar out of their home Thursday night, captured the suspect and held him until police arrived.

Later, the suspect tried to escape from a police officer at a hospital but was recaptured.

David E. Smith, 23, and Alfredo Crespi, 26, both of 630 S. Grant St., said they saw a man in the laundry room of their home at about 10:30 p.m. They chased the man out of the house and captured him in the driveway, pinning his arms behind his back until police arrived.

When Longwood police officer Gene Webb arrived, the suspect complained that his left leg was hurt when he fell while being chased, police said. Webb took the man to Florida Hospital—Altamonte where an emergency room doctor treated him for cuts and scratches and released him.

The suspect promptly darted into a bathroom in an attempt to elude Webb, a police report said. But Webb caught the man and transported him to the Seminole County jail.

Entry was gained to the laundry room of the home through a window after the screen had been bent upward, a report said.

Charged with burglary to an occupied building is Charles Ashford Stanley, 25, who lived at the Stanton Motel, 974 U.S. Highway 17-92 in Longwood. Stanley remained in jail today in lieu of $8,000 bond.

RIFLE STOLEN

A .22-caliber rifle, valued at $105, was taken from a Sanford man's home between 4 and 10 a.m. Tuesday.

David King, 67, of 1713 W. 14th St., said entry was gained to his home through a southeast window.

HELPING HAND

A Sanford man said someone grabbed his wallet and ran when he pulled out the wallet to pay two men who had helped him move his car.

Paul Davis, 41, said the incident began when he ran out of gas at 10:40 p.m. on W. 13th Street.

Davis said two men helped him push his car off the street and he pulled out his wallet to pay them and another man snatched the wallet, which contained $60 in cash, and fled.

BATTERY HEIST

Three 12-volt batteries, worth a total of $110.70, were taken from vehicles parked in a fenced-in compound at the City of Sanford public works department, 700 Fulton Ave., between 4 p.m. Aug. 5 and 7 a.m. Monday. Police don't know how the thieves entered the compound.

MARINA HEIST

A video cassette recorder, worth $1,099, was removed from the front seat of a vehicle parked at the Lake Monroe Marina in Sanford at about 11 a.m. Wednesday.

Howard R. Braver, 42, of 242 W. 19th St., Sanford, was the victim.

MELONS MISSING

Someone stole 15-25 watermelons from a pickup truck parked in the front yard of an Oviedo man's home between 3:20 and 10:20 a.m. Wednesday.

Eugene Linehouse, 63, who lives on Queens Road in the Johnson Hills area, said the melons were worth $75.

Chad Troops On The Run In The African Desert

N'DJAMENA, Chad (UPI) — Libya suggested moves were under way to settle the civil war in Chad where rebels backed by Libyan jets, tanks and troops seized a key northern town and drove government troops into the scorching desert.

The strategic oasis town of Faya-Largeau, 500 miles north of the capital of N'Djamena, fell to Libyan-backed rebels Wednesday in a seven-hour battle — a serious setback to the pro-Western government of President Hissene Habre.

Western diplomats said they did not know how many of the 2,000 army troops managed to survive an onslaught that peaked with napalm and phosphorous bombs being dropped by 50 Libyan fighter-bombers.

The government troops had been fighting desperately for 11 days and finally were cut off from supply routes to Faya-Largeau, which commands access to the two roads leading to N'djamena.

Libya's state-run news agency JANA hinted Thursday in a dispatch from Paris that peace initiatives already were "under way," but did not say who made the offer or what it contained.

Lebanon Nearing War

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Druze Moslems shelled Lebanese army outposts and the Beirut airport for a second straight day, killing eight people, wounding 64 and edging the government closer to full-scale war with opposition forces.

The Druze, who refuse to recognize President Amin Gemayel's Christian-dominated government, released three kidnapped Cabinet ministers Thursday but the two days of inter-Lebanese fighting raised fears of a new civil war.

The Druze, a secretive Moslem sect that ruled Lebanon's mountains for centuries, demanded the removal of army guns aimed at Druze areas in the Shouf Mountains east of Beirut. They claim the army supports the rival Christian Phalange Party, which is headed by Gemayel's father, Pierre.

Druze gunners Thursday pounded Beirut International Airport, which remained closed, killing two Lebanese soldiers and wounding 26 others, officials said.

They also traded heavy artillery fire with Christian forces and battled Lebanese troops in the Shouf before a cease-fire ordered by Israeli occupation forces was negotiated, state-run Beirut radio said.

Inmates On Hunger Strike To Protest Stifling Heat

TITUSVILLE (UPI) — A hunger strike at the hot Brevard County Jail today entered its second full day, officials said.

Seven prisoners were refusing meals to protest stifling conditions in the facility, where temperatures soar up to 95 degrees during the day, said Brevard County sheriff's spokeswoman Maude LaPlante.

The inmates were demanding a fourth fan for their cell block.

Two fans already were in the cell block and jail officials added another, but said a fourth was not available. Sixteen inmates are held in the block.

The facility is not air conditioned, and conditions in the cell block that houses the striking inmates are worsened by its location over a laundry room, said Ms. LaPlante.

Sheriff Jake Miller said he was satisfied with the efforts made by chief jailer James MacDonald.

Reagan: U.S. Won't Be World's Policeman

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With U.S. troops deployed in three world trouble spots, President Reagan denies adopting a more militaristic foreign policy, but insists the United States must recognize threats that "could involve our own security."

Reagan, seeking to calm fears stirred by talk of "gunboat diplomacy" in Central America and conflict in the Middle East and Africa, said Thursday he does not intend for the United States to "play policeman" around the world.

At the same time, he said, recent projections of military power to Central America, Africa and the Middle East — in the form of military exercises and personnel — "recognize that the threats can be that widespread."

"This is all based on what could be — what could involve our own security," Reagan said.

The president was inundated with foreign policy questions during a 10-minute news conference that coincided with escalating tensions in Chad and Lebanon and with rising public anxiety about his course in Central America.

Reagan said the Libyan-backed rebellion in Chad,

Heat Could Further Damage Corn Crop

WASHINGTON (UPI) — This year's drought-stunted American corn crop — estimated to be 38 percent smaller than last year's record harvest — could shrink further as the dog days of August increase the damage inflicted by July's heat wave.

"It is not the final word by any means," Richard Lyng, deputy Agriculture secretary, said Thursday after release of the season's first corn estimate, which put the crop at 5.24 billion bushels, the smallest in nine years.

He said the largest acreage cutback in history reduced this year's corn crop by about 2 billion bushels, and the drought so far has cut it another 1 billion bushels below last year's record crop of 8.4 billion bushels.

The national average corn yield was estimated at 99.9 bushels per acre, down from a record 114.8 bushels last year.

Already the drought has pushed up feed prices, reducing margins for livestock producers. In the short-term, producers might send more animals to market, lowering food prices, but ultimately there will be less meat available — and at higher prices.

Arrest Of Libyan Students 'Possibly Improper'

MIAMI (UPI) — Immigration officials say nine Libyan students arrested in a statewide sweep are charged with "various immigration violations," but a university official says at least two may have been arrested improperly.

Federal policy revoking the immigration status of Libyan students enrolled in aviation or nuclear-related studies was cited as the authority for the arrests when they were announced Wednesday night.

But at least two of the students, Murad Hamima and Sallehdin Ehmayma, do not fall into those classifications, said Robert Rockett, dean of student affairs at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University in Daytona Beach.

Hamima had applied for entry into the computer science program, and Ehmayma was studying for a master's degree in business administration, Rockett said. The other Embry-Riddle student arrested was Faisal Lel-Baruni.

"All nine are at Krome (Avenue detention camp near Miami). They are all charged with various immigration violations ranging from out-of-status visas to violation of the federal notice which prohibits them from various courses of study including nuclear studies," said INS spokeswoman Beverly McFarland.

President Reagan

...says the continuing violence in Chad will not prompt him to send in U.S. combat troops

Teachers Enter Fight Against Juvenile Crime

Seminole Circuit Judge Dominick Saffi will be among the participants in the second annual Law Institute scheduled to be held Monday and Tuesday at Valencia Community College.

The program is designed to show school teachers how they can help combat the growing problem of juvenile crime.

Of the more than 76,000 juveniles arrested in Florida last year, almost 16,000 aged 14 or younger were arrested for violent crimes such as murder, rape, burglary and aggravated assault, according to Cynthia Gross of the Orlando Crime Prevention Commission, which is sponsoring the two-day seminar open to Seminole and Orange County teachers.

Teachers have been proven to be a significant force in preventing youth delinquency, she said.

The seminar will provide teachers an opportunity to meet with leading local criminal justice experts, law enforcement professionals and community service representatives to get a better understanding of local juvenile crime problems and services available to help troubled youth and their families.

The teachers will hear remarks from Saffi, state Health and Rehabilitative Services District Administrator Paul Sneed, Orlando Jones High School Principal Clara S. Walters, State Rep. Thomas Drage and several local judges, prosecutors, public defenders, and police.

Also included in the schedule for the two-day workshop is a tour of the Seminole County jail. The teachers will also visit the Orange County jail and Great Oaks Village, an Orlando home for wayward children.

Discussions are planned on child abuse detection, spouse abuse and Orange County Sheriff Department's Victim Advocate program.

The Law Institute offers 12 in-service points for teachers and is open to public and private school personnel.

Registration is available by calling Valencia Community College, (305) 299-5000, or at the performing Arts Center at VCC on Monday.

Racket Busting

Organized crime endures like a stubborn weed in the republic's garden. Weedlike, it spreads, using dollars collected from trafficking in drugs, gambling and prostitution to buy its way into legitimate businesses. It controls unions, buys out firms, arm-twists politicians.

The Commission on Organized Crime, established the other day by President Reagan, is just the latest in a series of official efforts dating back a half-century to do something about the problem, and unless it takes a different tack, it is no more likely to be successful.

It is widely anticipated that the commission will journey around the country, holding hearings on the scope of organized crime.

That makes for good TV news and serves a useful purpose — the glare of the publicity generated by the investigations into racketeering conducted by Sens. Estes Kefauver and John McClellan in the 1950s and 1960s forced the mobsters to lie low for a while.

Yet exposure only achieves part of what needs to be done.

To crimp the mobsters, a new law enforcement approach is needed that can break the back of organized crime by destroying the crime organizations themselves.

With the Racketeer Influence and Corrupt Organizations Act on the books since 1970, the government has the needed legal authority but it hasn't yet done the job.

RICO gives Washington's law officials unprecedented powers to combat mobsters — indeed, the law tests the limits of the constitutional commitment to protect the rights of criminal suspects.

RICO broadly defines conspiracy, making it easier to hale conspirators into court before the fact. Under RICO, the Justice Department can appeal too-lenient sentences, asking that they be lengthened.

It can bring civil suits, enabling the government to seize control of legitimate organizations, such as unions, from the mobsters.

And it can claim not only the lucre from illegal deals but also the assets of the respectable businesses purchased with the profits of mob crime.

The problem is that these tactics haven't been much relied on by government, which has concentrated on the first part of the job, catching the mobsters, to the detriment of the rest of the job — putting them out of business for keeps.

Why this is so is far from clear, for there has been no careful examination of how RICO works in practice.

The organized crime commission ought to look systematically at the government's courtroom campaign, with an eye to turning Justice Department lawyers into better legal strategists.

Such an analysis would help government to do a more effective law enforcement job.

Whatever this commission has to say on the topic, organized crime isn't about to disappear. Racketeers have gone genteel, insinuating themselves into the highest reaches of American life.

Just one of the numerous cases in point occurred just a month ago when President Reagan praised the "integrity and loyalty" of International Longshoremen's Union President Thomas W. "Teddy" Gleason, a man who has refused to fire six of his union's own leaders despite their convictions for racketeering and extortion.

But the law can be deployed more effectively against the killing weed of racketeering.

If the Commission on Organized Crime does its work well, it can point the way.

SASEBO, Japan (NEA) — The Japanese navy has returned to this base, once its equivalent of Pearl Harbor.

It was from Sasebo that the warships of the Imperial Navy set out for the Tsushima Straits and the rout of a Russian flotilla in 1905 that catapulted Japan into the ranks of the world powers.

And it was from Sasebo that Japanese seapower laid claim to the Western Pacific in the heady days of conquest early on in World War II.

When the war ended, there weren't many Japanese warships still afloat and the victorious American Navy moved into this complex of docks and supply facilities stretching down both sides of a deep, narrow bay on the northwestern tip of Kyushu.

Sasebo was an Asian Pearl Harbor during the Korean and Vietnam conflicts, home port for swarms of warships and home base for thousands of American servicemen.

Not anymore. Sasebo is still an American base, but staffed by fewer than 300 Americans. It is home port for one submarine at the moment and an occasional port of call for passing fleet units, such as, in early August, the recommissioned battleship New Jersey.

But much of Sasebo is excess now, and has been turned over to those who can make the best use of it.

The Japanese navy, more precisely, the Japanese Maritime Self Defense Forces.

Japan denies itself conventional military forces with offensive capability under Article 9 of the post-war constitution, dictated by Americans, if technically not written in the United States.

So when Japan did initiate a modest rearmament effort in the '60s, the services were set as adjuncts of the police forces, technically without offensive capabilities.

It is a technicality carefully observed ever since, although that might not be obvious from what can be observed at Sasebo.

A gray DDH — destroyer fitted for helicopters — is at anchor a few hundred meters out from the heart of downtown Sasebo, flying the flag of the Rising Sun at its stern. On the base, in India basin, still under American jurisdiction but available to the JMDF whenever needed, two conventional destroyers are tied up, undergoing retrofitting.

Flying the Rising Sun. Many of the base facilities are shared, technically at the discretion of the American command. But numerically, the Japanese presence at Sasebo is now clearly predominant.

It remains, however, a politically low-profile presence. Back in Tokyo, the size and capability of the military forces, and military spending, are sensitive issues. The next budget is being readied for its trial by Diet. It calls for an increase in fiscal 1984 of 6.88 percent, consistent with the 6 percent to 8 percent range of recent years.

Henry Pushes High-Tech For China

WASHINGTON — Henry Kissinger played a key role in the behind-the-scenes machinations that led to a recent change in U.S. policy toward China. Hereafter, the Chinese communists will be able to purchase high-technology equipment of potential military value.

The former secretary of state, meanwhile, has turned up as a consultant to a Hong Kong company that will buy high-tech items for the People's Republic of China. In fact, he made a special trip to Peking last April to help launch the company. Kissinger assured me, however, that he has "absolutely no business connection, no financial relationship" with the new firm.

The company, Everbright Industrial Corp., is a front for the Peking regime. It is run by Wang Guangyin, a polite, portly businessman, who was sent to Hong Kong by China's highest authorities to seek high-tech and other imports that are urgently needed on the mainland.

In a trans-Pacific telephone interview, an Everbright executive told my associates Jack Hatfield and Donald Goldberg, that Kissinger had been retained as an "employee" of the company and would go on the payroll at the end of this month. But Kissinger swore to me that "this is absolutely untrue."

A business associate acknowledged that Kissinger had flown to Peking to advise Wang on setting up Everbright and will continue to counsel the company. But an associate said that Kissinger would offer his advice strictly as "a friend of China" and would not accept any remuneration.

Here is the backstage story: Kissinger came back from Peking last October convinced that the United States should sell high-tech equipment to the mainland. He began lobbying Secretary of State George Shultz and national security adviser William Clark for a change in U.S. policy.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger opposed any relaxation of export rules that would allow the Chinese to pick our technological brains. He warned that the acquired U.S. technology could be used by the Chinese to modernize their military forces.

all the better.

● Humane Society — Volunteers needed to investigate animal abuse complaints, educate pet owners, make posters, help with educational presentations and do telephone work from their homes.

● Hospice — Volunteers provide assistance to the terminally ill and their families.

● Central Florida Zoo — Persons to conduct tours of the zoo are needed in an effort to make visits to the zoo by children and adults an educational as well as recreational experience.

● Seminole County Courthouse — A receptionist is needed to help answer the telephone and perform other office duties as required.

● Fern Park Development — Volunteers needed to provide assistance to mentally handicapped adults at the residential center.

● Guardian ad litem program — Persons needed to represent abused and neglected children throughout judicial proceedings.

● Substitutes — Fill-ins needed at information desks at the Seminole County Courthouse and Sheriff's Department.

ROBERT WALTERS

It's An Incoherent Deluge

PORTLAND, Maine (NEA) — When the National Governors' Association met here recently, the executives regaled their colleagues with tales of how they handled some of the most celebrated catastrophes of recent years.

There were compelling accounts of the Mount St. Helens volcanic eruption in Washington, the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant crisis in Pennsylvania, toxic chemical contamination in Missouri, prison rioting in New York and flooding in Arizona and Utah.

In virtually every case, the governors described how they called upon the federal government for assistance, but most of them discreetly avoided any reference to the dirty little secret of the disaster-relief business: The federal-state alliance often produces considerable stress and strain because both partners routinely act in a less than exemplary manner.

States anxious to receive an official presidential disaster declaration routinely exaggerate their plight when requesting aid from Washington. Louis O. Giuffrida, director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, noted during an interview here that almost half of all state requests for disaster designations are rejected by FEMA or the White House.

"One of the points that comes up in connection with every disaster is the tendency to overestimate (its) extent," says John W. Macy, a FEMA director. "We find we can always divide the estimated cost by at least three in getting close to what the actual amount is."

Electoral politics too often play a major role in determining the extent of assistance offered. The most notorious example occurred following the 1980 Mount St. Helens eruption, which killed 60 people, destroyed 200 homes and devastated 150 square miles of forest.

Those adversely affected by the catastrophe undoubtedly deserved assistance, but Senren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., facing the toughest re-election campaign of his long political career, abused the relief effort to demonstrate how much federal aid he could deliver to the state.

As chairman of the Senate appropriations Committee, which must approve the annual budget of every federal department and agency, Magnuson had the power to muster a phenomenal $946 million worth of aid from 12 different federal agencies.

The Small Business Administration appropriated $430 million for the disaster — but was able to spend only $66 million. Magnuson campaigned for re-election by boasting that he had produced almost $1 billion in disaster relief — but was defeated at the polls.

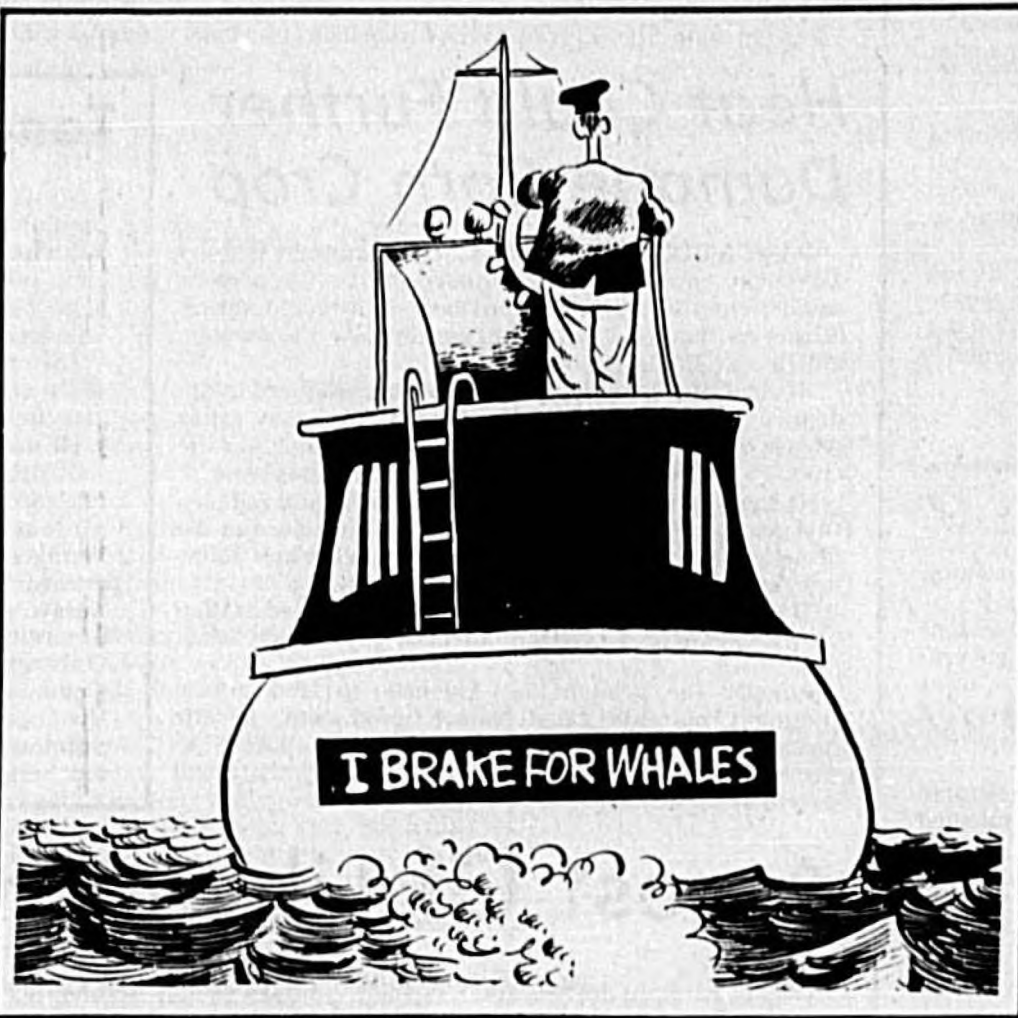

The inherent problems faced by the federal government are aptly described by Edwin G. Warner, a political analyst and former journalist, writing in a recent issue of The Journal of the Institute of Socioeconomic Studies:

adopting the policy change that Kissinger wanted.

Before his last visit to Peking, Kissinger was told by Clark that Weinberger would pay an official visit to Peking in September to work out details of the technology transfer, that this would be followed by a visit to Washington in October by Foreign Minister Wu, that Premier Zhao would also come to Washington at an undetermined date and that President Reagan hoped to reciprocate by visiting China next year.

A spokesman explained that Kissinger was merely "briefed" and did not act as a "messenger" or "negotiator" for the Reagan administration. But he has been right in the middle of the tech-transfer battle.

Footnote: It was also Henry Kissinger, who urged the sale of high-tech equipment to the Soviet Union in 1974. As secretary of state, for example, he approved the sale of U.S. computers which were used at the Kama River truck factory to help produce the vehicles that carried Red Army troops into Afghanistan in 1979.

WILLIAM RUSHER

Robin Hood Government

NEW YORK (NEA) — "What kind of government do you want?"

Ronald Reagan put that question to the American people in 1980, thereby demonstrating anew his firm grasp of the really basic problem confronting the country.

His own answer to the question has always been clear: The federal government has certain fundamental duties, of which the most important is national defense. Beyond that, it can "take the lead" in pointing the country in various desirable directions, but in recent decades it has meddled far too deeply in far too many areas. The problem today, as Reagan sees it, is to "get the government off the backs of the American people."

But Mr. Reagan's view of government's role isn't by a long shot the only one popular in Washington. One of its most important rivals is what might be called the Robin Hood Theory of Government.

This is the view favored by Tip O'Neill and the more perverted Democrats. As the name implies, exponents of this theory regard the federal government as a sort of benevolent power-source that enjoys expropriating the ill-gotten gains of the wealthy and turning the proceeds over to the deserving poor. The technical name for this sort of thing is "redistribution," and don't kid yourself that it doesn't happen in Washington. It is usually called something else, and gussied up with a lot of misleading references to "compassion" (misleading because compassion is an emotion that moves the person who feels it to share his own resources, whereas redistribution merely involves egging Robin Hood on to preempt somebody else's), but basically it boils down to Harry Hopkins' famous formula for political victory: Tax and tax, spend and spend, elect and elect.

There is, however, a third theory of government's role rattling around Washington, not nearly so crude as the Robin Hood Theory, but far more sympathetic to governmental activism than Ronald Reagan. This is the "services government" theory, and it is beloved not only by the more moderate liberals but also of quasi-conservatives such as George Will, who like to wear their rue with a difference. Recently, Will, speaking for the American people as he increasingly tends to do, proclaimed the dominance of the "services government" theory as follows:

"The politics of Congress (where the budget cutting is finished for the foreseeable future) and the actions of many state legislatures indicate that... Americans want a 'services government' at least as large as the one they have."

And what, precisely, is this "services government" that we supposedly want so badly? It can be thought of as a sort of outsized butler — a domesticated federal Bigfoot, panting to perform all sorts of "services" for us on our long journey from the cradle to the grave.

As proof that "Americans want" these suffocating (and expensive) attentions, Br'er Will cites two pieces of alleged evidence: "The politics of Congress" (which, he rightly asserts, bitterly opposes further spending cuts), and "the action of many state legislatures" (or, in short, their similar high-spending habits).

But this totally overlooks Congressman Phil Gramm's recent observation that the intended beneficiaries of these proliferating "services" will always lobby far harder for them than any opponents will lobby against them, because they anticipate direct benefits amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Begonias Answer To Constant Display Of Color

If you like variety and a constant display of color throughout the season, you'll love begonias. The begonia family contains more than 1200 species and hybrids with an infinite selection of sizes, growth habits, foliages and flowers. Some begonias creep and crawl, some grow like a tree, and some are bushy. Many resemble other plants, with leaves like elm, palm, maple, ivy and other plants.

The begonia is chiefly of tropical origin. It was first discovered in Santo Domingo in 1690 by Charles Plumier, who named the flower for his patron, Michel Begon. Begonias are essentially classified according to the type of roots they possess: (1) tuberous, (2) fibrous, and (3) rhizomatous. The tuberous

Frank J. Jasa

County Extension
Director
323-2500
Ext. 182

begonias are primarily propagated from tubers, whereas the fibrous-rooted begonias possess fibrous roots and are propagated from seed or cuttings. The Rex begonia is an example of a rhizomatous begonia. It possesses a thick, rootlike rhizome which grows either erect or horizontal.

The fibrous-rooted or wax begonias are the most popular with homeowners. They are frequently sold as a house plant, holiday plant or bedding plant. To be most effective as bedding plants, begonias should be used in mass rather than mixed with other annuals.

Formerly, fibrous-rooted begonias were mostly non-hybrid varieties and these varieties grew best in partial shade. Today's hybrids are not restricted to a partial shade location, in fact, they perform better when planted in full sun.

Under Florida's growing conditions, fibrous-rooted begonias stand drought and heat better than many annuals. In addition, begonias will not grow out of bounds and can be planted close together in a relatively small area. Begonias grow slower than other annuals making them suitable for use in pots, window boxes, flower boxes and hanging baskets. Begonias are virtually insect free and are resistant to pesticide injury.

Begonias offer many variations in flower and foliage color. Green, bronze and variegated foliage are available with white, pink or red flowers.

Begonias thrive on light, slightly acid, well-drained soil. To improve the soil structure and increase the water holding capacity, add a substantial amount (up to 50%) of organic matter such as peat moss, leaf mold or well-rotted manure. Begonias are not heavy feeders, so fertilizer should be applied sparingly. Apply 1 to 1½ pounds of a complete fertilizer (8-8-8, 10-10-10, etc.) to 100 square feet of bed area.

Begonias tend to grow somewhat larger if grown outdoors in a flower bed, where root growth is not restricted. In flower pots or planters, they usually do not grow quite as large. Plants should be placed 8-12 inches apart for the best effect in the garden and somewhat closer in containers.

Most fibrous-rooted begonias, with the exception of the double flowered varieties, are propagated from seed. The double flowered varieties are sterile and have to be propagated from cuttings. Purchasing seed and germinating them is not a good practice since good begonia seeds are expensive, very small and difficult to germinate. Many people take cuttings from plants grown in their yard all summer. Begonias are easy to root, however, there are several problems. These cuttings may be infested with disease and/or insects. Also, plants propagated from cuttings will not branch freely.

When flowers are produced at leaf axils no other vegetative growing points are present, therefore, when flower stems abort from the leaf axil no branches will develop. Consequently, cuttings taken from flowering mother plants will always result in single stem plants.

Therefore, it is beneficial to use plants started by commercial growers from seed free of disease and insects rather than from cuttings.

All Extension programs are open to all regardless of race, color, sex or national origin.

Miss Rogers, B.A. Anonick Repeat Vows

Susan D. Rogers and Bruce Alan Anonick are announcing their marriage today. They were married May 28, at 10 a.m. at the Palmetto Avenue Baptist Church, Sanford. The Rev. Raymond Crocker performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Raymon Rogers, 2524 Narcissus Ave., Sanford. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Anonick, 978 Chippendale St., Deltona.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a formal gown fashioned along the empire silhouette with a stand-up lace collar, ruffle-trimmed lace yoke and lace-trimmed full illusion sleeves. The full skirt softly cascaded into a chapel-length train. Her veil of illusion was secured to a headpiece enhanced with lace and seed pearls. She carried a formal cascade of orchids, miniature carnations, baby's breath and fern.

Joan Rogers attended her sister-in-law as matron of honor. She wore an apricot colored gown and carried a bouquet of peach roses with baby's breath and fern. Cathy Crocker was the bridesmaid. Her gown and flowers were identical to the honor attendant's.

James Paulus served the bridegroom as best man. Usher-groomsmen were John Lucas, Dave Lucas and Richard Sawicz.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Alan Anonick

A reception followed the ceremony in the church fellowship hall.

After a wedding trip to Daytona Beach Shores the newlyweds are making their home in Sanford while awaiting the completion of their home in Deltona. Both are employed by Ellis Bank of Northeast Florida.

In And Around Geneva

Snow In Mountains Treat To Floridian

Ada Reynolds of Geneva has returned from a vacation that lasted six weeks. She visited daughter and son-in-law Jean and Jack Kidder in Idaho. While there, Ada and her family toured northern Idaho in a motor home, spending time in Couer d'Alene, and then on to western Montana.

Ada said the beautiful mountains in Montana were still peaked with snow, and she had several good trips to art galleries.

Another family in Geneva has been touched by fire in their home.

Wayne and Pat Johnson who live on Lake Geneva Drive are thankful that their next door neighbor spotted smoke coming out of the windows while they were at work in their Oviedo-based feed and tack store, Orangewood.

Thanks to the gallant efforts of the fire department, the fire in the Johnson's home was contained and they lost only parts of three rooms, including some furniture and clothing.

The quick action of a concerned neighbor calling the fire department no doubt saved Wayne and Pat's home from total destruction. There appears to be a lot of smoke damage, and it will probably be a few weeks before the Johnsons can move back in.

Wednesday morning as Pastor Don Crabtree of the Church of God in Geneva was running his bus route picking up children for the Camp Meeting services at Ft. Lane Park, the bus suddenly caught fire.

Pastor Crabtree safely got all of the children (about 13) off the bus, and disconnected the battery. The fire was in the electrical wiring of the bus, according to a church member.

Thanks to the lovely spirit of cooperation that exists in Geneva and the parents of the children who have been riding the bus each day, the camp meeting services were not disrupted because the parents agreed to car pool and make sure the kids still got to the meetings.

All is well that ends well. Attendance at Tuesday night's meeting swelled to 165, and it was necessary to seat some of the group outside the screened Sieg Pavilion.

The last evening of the Church of God's special meetings will be Saturday, Aug. 13 at 7:30 p.m. at the park.

Woman, 35, Needs To Leave Mom's Nest

DEAR ABBY: I am a 35-year-old woman. I'm recently unemployed, which necessitated my returning home "to the nest." My problem: an overprotective mother. She has never liked the man I've dated for the last seven years. When we broke it off (for a while) two years ago, she was very pleased, so when we got back together again, I never told her.

Now that I am home, when he calls I am forced to lie to her, and I have to tell her I am going somewhere else so I can meet him.

Everyone I talk to tells

Dear Abby

me my mother has no say about whom I may date, but I can't seem to get that through her head. I need some suggestions on how I can deal with her overprotectiveness.

"S'MOTHERED"
DEAR S'MOTHERED: Your problem is not an "overprotective mother" — it's your own inability to assert yourself and protect yourself as a mature woman who is able to control her own life. Try doubly hard to find a job in order to break out of that "nest," because as long as you're under your mother's roof, she will feel justified in treating you like a juvenile.

DEAR ABBY: I have some questions I'm too embarrassed to ask anybody else. I'm a 21-year-old woman and, unfortunately, my mother never told me anything about growing up or being sexually active.

How far can a woman go with a man without getting pregnant? Does the degree of penetration determine whether she is in any danger of getting pregnant? Can a woman get pregnant if she doesn't have an orgasm during sex?

Sorry I am so dumb, but I really need to know.

COULD BE PREGNANT
DEAR COULD BE: See a doctor at once for a pregnancy test.

A woman can get pregnant without experiencing orgasm, and your other questions are answered in detail in my booklet, "What Every Teen-ager Ought to Know." It can be obtained by sending $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Parents have written to tell me that their 12- and 13-year-old boys and girls found it very educational, and they (the parents) regretted that such a booklet was not available when they were growing up.

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman of 67. In fairly good health and weigh 272. I cannot keep weight off once I do find a diet that works for me. I have been overweight for 35 years, but nothing like this.

My doctor told me he wants me to have my stomach stapled! Do they actually use staples? Or is that a stupid question?

Please send me all the information you have about this operation or tell me where I can get it.

LAST RESORT
DEAR LAST: In my opinion the first and the only place to get the answer about the procedure is from the doctor who recommended the stomach stapling. Please consider a second opinion. There are no stupid questions — only people who remained uninformed because they're afraid of appearing stupid by asking questions.

DEAR ABBY: My mother is a strict Catholic who feels that no one should live in sin; they should be married first.

Multivitamins and vitamin C lead the list of supplements taken by American adults. And new evidence suggests pregnant women may need more vitamin B-6 than previously thought.

Coffee And Alcohol Absolved Of Link To Pancreatic Cancer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Coffee and alcohol have been absolved of a suspected link to pancreatic cancer, says the health expert who first linked smoking and lung cancer more than two decades ago.

No association between consumption of either beverage and cancer of the pancreas was found in an epidemiologic study conducted by Dr. Ernst L. Wynder and associates at the American Health Foundation's Mahoney Institute for Health Maintenance.

However, the investigation, reported in the journal "Cancer Research," confirmed a weak association between cigarette smoking and cancer of the pancreas. They said this was similar to findings of previous studies.

The study compared coffee consumption of 275 male and female patients with pancreatic cancer and 7,949 controls — persons without the disease. All of the subjects were interviewed.

No differences were found between cases or controls either by amount or duration of coffee consumption. Wynder reported. The subjects lived in six cities.

He is the health detective who first linked heavy smoking and lung cancer more than two decades ago.

The report from Wynder and associated scientists, Nancy Hall and Marcia Polansky, said data also failed to show an association between alcohol consumption and pancreas cancer.

Their study did not differentiate between regular and decaffeinated coffee. But the issue now is under investigation by Mahoney Institute scientists.

The authors suggested that prior studies that linked pancreas cancer and coffee might have reached different conclusions had there been more appropriate selection of controls and adjustment carried out for confounders, particularly cigarette smoking.

The Mahoney Institute study further observed no consistent correlation between per capita coffee consumption in various countries and the incidence of pancreas cancer in those nations.

Wynder said this supports the conclusion that no causal relationship exists between the consumption of coffee and the risk for cancer of the pancreas.

Utilizing Computers To Analyze Writing

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — A stranger with an analytical mind might be able to tell quite a bit about you from your correspondence. In 1984 that stranger might program a computer to do it.

If such a program were developed, clues in your letters would suggest to a business, say, your social class, intelligence level, assertiveness, breeding, as well as your sex and age. The clues would be in the style and structure of your letter, its phrasing, vocabulary and so on.

The business would thus be in a position to know what might please or displease you and tailor its approach accordingly.

If somebody, for example, referred to a car as a "machine" in a complaint to an automobile manufacturer, it would likely be an older person. The use of the word was favored into the 1930s.

Somebody else might threaten to "clean the dealer's clock," if the defect wasn't fixed. The computer would pick up the phrase and might assign it to an aggressive male under 35.

Specialists have been able to determine when expressions enter the language — authors like Stuart Berg Flexner have written books about it — so programming a computer to figure out age based on such information isn't that difficult.

A Norwalk, Conn. market research firm says there is an artificial intelligence program being developed experimentally that can critique the writing style, syntax and construction of any document a company's managers generate. It says it is not that far removed from analyzing correspondence managers may receive from the outside.

The present purpose is to improve business communications by pinpointing errors of style in draft correspondence prepared by managers, according to International Resource Development Inc. of Norwalk. The system is programmed to comment on tired, outdated and stilted language, along with any that was impossibly long and obtuse.

Eventually, incoming material could be scanned and a summary prepared with items of interest to particular managers highlighted and put into storage for retrieval later.

The IRD researchers expect artificial intelligence to be an $8 billion market in 10 years.

In the meantime, the researchers say somebody could arrange such a program so the social origins and general character of the writer could be determined.

"Such a system will be able to detect small nuances of expression and relate them to the social background of the originator. We see the program evolving to the point at which a great deal will be able to be deduced about the writer of even a relatively short memo," says David Ledecky, an IRD researcher.

"The self-teaching ability of the artificial-intelligence system will enable the system to learn and recognize which style or pattern of writing originated in the Bronx, which in Harlem, and which in San Diego."

Pregnant Women Need More Vitamin B-6

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — A University of Florida nutrition researcher says pregnant women may need two to three times more vitamin B-6 than the government's Recommended Dietary Allowance says they do.

Vitamin B-6, also called pyridoxine, is found in a variety of foods, especially liver, chicken, bananas, avocados, peanuts and walnuts. It is important for the neurological development of the fetus and proper metabolism of amino acids.

Dr. Karen Schuster of the UF Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences said her study shows expectant mothers need a total vitamin B-6 intake of between 5.5 and 7.6 milligrams per day for optimal health of their infants at birth.

But the vitamin B-6 RDA for pregnant women, as set by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences in 1980, is only 2.6 milligrams daily, she said.

"Most of the RDAs for vitamin B-6 are established from studies of normal men and women in which the vitamin stores are depleted. For ethical considerations, this kind of study cannot be performed with pregnant women," Ms. Schuster said.

The RDA is adjusted for a woman's increased protein needs during pregnancy but does not take into account her increased metabolic requirements during pregnancy or fetal demand for the vitamin, she said.

The UF researcher studied 196 mothers-to-be who were clients at maternal and infant care clinics in Alachua, Marion and Putnam counties between June 1981 and April 1983.

The women were given varied doses of vitamin B-6, ranging from none at all to 20 milligrams a day. They were checked during the 30th week of pregnancy and at delivery.

One minute after these women gave birth, the heart rate, breathing, reflexes, color and muscle tone of their newborns were evaluated.

Then each infant was given an "Apgar score," a routine delivery-room procedure. Babies of mothers who had a total vitamin B-6 dietary intake of 7.6 milligrams or more had higher scores than those whose mothers had an intake of 5.5 milligrams or less of vitamin B-6.

Ms. Schuster found no relationship between the degree of morning sickness of the mothers-to-be and vitamin B-6 levels in the blood.

"The idea (that vitamin B-6 cures morning sickness) has found its way into the popular literature and there is no scientific evidence to back it up," she said.

States Try Everything To Find Jobs For The Unemployed

United Press International
Taylor Jones wanted a job.
"I live on the streets," the 37-year-old Minneapolis man told a Minnesota Senate committee. "Sometimes I go to jail. I can't get a job. I can't get anything to eat, so I take something. That's how I survive."
Sam Johnson, a Minneapolis cook, needed a job. He said his wife left him and took their year-old daughter because he could not keep a job. He said he cooks occasionally but seldom gets a job call these days.
"I'm an on-call worker but I can't afford a telephone," he said. "I'm 27 and I feel like I'm 56, just getting older and older. I'm just sitting around. I might as well be dead."

Jones and Johnson are among the jobless who began looking to state governments this year to do what Franklin Roosevelt and the federal government did 50 years ago — provide them with work and a paycheck.
More than half a dozen states created jobs programs, providing public service work for victims of an unemployment rate that hovered around 10 percent. Among them were Michigan, Utah, West Virginia, Virginia, New Mexico, Vermont and Minnesota.

Many other states subsidized businesses through grants, loans or tax breaks in the belief that only private employers can provide permanent jobs.
Some states tried a variety of potential cures for the unemployment problem.
In Minnesota, the lawmakers who listened to Jones and Johnson enacted a $70 million emergency jobs program and gave a variety of tax breaks to businesses in hopes of creating additional jobs in private industry.
Joe Smargia, a former Steelworkers Union official who heads the Minnesota jobs program, said he hoped to put 12,600 people to work in the next two years at $4 an hour. He estimated 60 percent of them would end up in public jobs.

In recession-wracked West Virginia, lawmakers approved a $47.9 million program intended to create 6,000 jobs at the federal minimum wage of $3.35 an hour. Half of the jobs will be in state government, primarily in maintaining highways, cleaning up parks and building new buildings.
"The work and training this emergency jobs program will provide is important — not only to provide paychecks but to restore pride, dignity and hope for the future," Gov. John D. Rockefeller IV said.

Michigan Gov. James Blanchard calls his state's Youth Corps the largest summer job program offered by any state. The bill provides minimum wages for youths ranging in age from 18 to 21 to clean up roadways and highway rest areas, fix up county fair grounds and work in the state parks and forests. The program, enacted by the legislature one month after the governor proposed it, included enough money to create 25,000 jobs but drew 67,700 applicants.
The legislature in Michigan, which was hard hit by the impact of the recession on the auto industry, aservation projects in schools and hospitals.

Utah lawmakers created a public works jobs program that pays the unemployed a minimal wage for working while they look for permanent jobs. Participants work for 32 hours a week and are required to spend eight hours a week looking for permanent employment.
Utah first passed the bill in December with a $950,000 appropriation to pay workers $50-$100 a week, depending on the size of their families. Another $400,000 was appropriated in January. So far, about 1,700 people have been aided.

Outbreak Of Plague Linked To Wet Spring

ATLANTA (UPI) — An unusual cycle of cool, moist weather that began out west months ago is partly responsible for this country's worst outbreak of human bubonic plague since 1925, health officials say.
So far this year there have been 28 confirmed cases of human bubonic plague and half a dozen presumptive cases, most of them in New Mexico and Arizona.
Bubonic plague, a disease that wiped out half the population of Europe during the Middle Ages, is widespread in several western states among rodents, such as the ground squirrel, chipmunk and prairie dog. It is transmitted to humans by its primary vector, the flea Dipentomys montanus.
Although human plague tends to be cyclical, changes in climate account for some patterns in spread of the disease, according to Dr. Jack Poland of the national Centers for Disease Control's plague branch at Fort Collins, Colo.
In dry weather, the vector fleas are not very abundant. This past spring, however, saw a pattern of cool, moist weather in the western United States that prolonged the survival for infective fleas, thus extending the plague season, said Poland.
As a result, 1983 has been a particularly bad year for plague in the western states, Poland said in a telephone interview.
The majority of this year's 28 confirmed and six presumptive plague cases have occurred in New Mexico and Arizona. New Mexico's 18 cases make it the highest number in any state in a single year since California reported 38 cases in 1925.

...Blood Bank

Although there is no way of identifying a person who might later come down with AIDS, Carr said the blood bank screens prospective donors as well as possible.
He said that medical histories are taken of volunteer blood donors and they are asked specific questions about symptoms. "There is no reason for them not to be truthful," Carr said. "They are volunteers."
"I would have no hesitancy in accepting a transfusion for myself or my family from the blood bank," Carr said.
Since information about AIDS has become "rampant," Carr says he fears that the number of voluntary blood donors will diminish. "The voluntary program is the only way to assure a safe supply. A lot of fear might turn off blood donors. The risk of not having blood available when it is needed is far greater," he said, than the possible risk of contracting AIDS.
The blood bank tries to screen out donors who might be potential carriers of AIDS. These include: male bisexuals, homosexual males, intravenous drug users, Haitians, hemophiliacs and the sexual partners of any of the groups.
The "hate" calls received at the blood bank since the Studebaker request was denied are from persons, who claim they have donated blood in the past, Carr said.
"Those people are saying now they don't want to give blood anymore," Carr said. "Something like this could destroy the blood donor program and create the hazard that blood will not be available for persons who need it."
The policy of declining the directed donation of blood was developed as all blood bank policies are, Carr said, by blood banking experts, representing the National Center for Disease Control, the American Association of Blood Banks, the American Red Cross, and the Community Council of Blood Centers.
Carr said that currently the blood bank has a program whereby persons with rare types of blood with special antibodies can store blood for scheduled future surgery. In these cases, he said, it is difficult to find a type of blood that is compatible. The blood is stored for no longer than six months at a time in ultra low temperature freezers.
He said that 25-30 persons of this type are currently storing blood at the blood bank.

Altamonte Walks All Over Texas

Brock's Big Play Ignites 19-0 Romp; Juniors Need 1 Win For Series' Spot

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

EUSTIS — It's funny sometimes how a name can be an omen of things to come.

Take West University, Texas pitcher Mark Waite. As the ace of the West U. staff, he had waited through two games to pitch in the Little League Junior All-Stars Southern Regional. Lee Howell, the manager of the Houston-based club, said he felt Altamonte was the team to beat, so he saved his ace for Thursday night's winner's bracket final.

But when the Texas righthander took the mound, he couldn't find the plate, and nobody from the Texas state champs was laughing. Altamonte waited and waited and waited, collecting 12 bases on balls off Waite en route to a 19-0 whitewash over West University, which threw in the towel at the end of five innings.

"Mark was too ready. He was too psyched up," said Howell. "He was really looking forward to this game, but he just couldn't throw strikes. That's the name of the game. All those walks (21 total)...we just beat ourselves tonight."

While Waite and reliever Lantz Howell were having trouble finding the strike zone, Altamonte's Greg Ebbert blanked the West University hitters on three hits and Chris Brock played center field like the second coming of Mickey Mantle.

It was a spectacular play by Brock in the third inning when West University, trailing 5-0, loaded the bases on a single, a walk and an error with no one out and appeared ready to jump back into the ball game.

Chris Finley ripped a sinking liner to short center. Brock broke with the sound of the bat and in one motion trapped the ball and fired to second to force the runner. Shortstop Jimmy Waring then wheeled and tossed the ball to catcher Randy Green who put the tag on Howell to complete the unusual 8-6-2 double play! Ebbert then got Waite to pop to second for the third out.

"I didn't know whether I could catch the ball or not," the runner on third had already scored, but Jimmy was quick enough to get him at home."

The play deflated the West U. spirit and also drew raves from manager Frank Messina and coach Terry Hagen.

"That was just typical Brock," said Messina.

"He's been playing like that all year," echoed Hagen.

And, like all year, Altamonte scored two runs in the first and three runs in the second to take a 5-0 lead. Matt Lange walked and stole second and Eric Martinez drew another pass. Brock hit a ground ball to shortstop and Martinez was forced at second. Brock promptly stole second and Ernest Martinez singled to score Lange for a 1-0 lead as Brock went to third. Martinez then stole second and Green followed with a healthy fly ball to center to score Brock for a 2-0 lead.

In the second, Matt Messina walked and stole second with a nice head-first dive. Ebbert struck out, but Waring walked as Messina moved to third on another wild pitch. Waring then stole second. With Lange at the plate, Waite uncorked another wild one to score Messina. Lange walked and with Eric Martinez at the plate, Waite tossed another one into the dirt to score Waring. Martinez walked and stole second. With Brock batting, Waite unleashed his fourth wild pitch of the inning to score Lange for a 5-0 lead. Texas catcher Kevin Jernigan then bailed out Waite by picking Martinez off third and nailing Brock, who had walked, trying to steal second to end the inning.

Altamonte broke open the game with eight runs without a hit in the fourth inning by sending 14 batters to the plate. Messina walked, but was thrown out stealing. Ebbert and Waring both walked, but Lange popped to third for the second out. Eric Martinez and Green both drew free passes with Green getting an RBI for a 6-0 lead.

Howell then yanked Waite in favor of Howell. Ernest Martinez walked on a 3-2 pitch to force in another run, but Green hit a slow roller to second baseman Robbie Wade. Wade, though, kicked the ball and then threw wildly to first. All three runners, who were running with the 3-2 pitch, scored for a 10-0 bulge.

Howell then walked Eric Birle, Messina, Ebbert, Waring and pinch hitter Zac Maddox in succession to force home three more for a 13-0 lead.

Altamonte added six more while batting around again in the fifth. Brock reached on an error, moved to second on a wild pickoff try by Jernigan, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on another wild one. Ernest Martinez and pinch hitter Scott Stiles walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Pinch hitter Cory Prom brought home another run with a groundout. Anthony Lazsalc, making his first playoff appearance since breaking his wrist, reached on an error by the first baseman as another run scored. Ebbert then singled home Green for a 16-0 lead. Waring also followed with a base hit — his first of the

Aucklund, District 14 Are Region Champions

DELAND — A bases-loaded walk in the bottom of the seventh inning forced in the winning run Thursday as the District 14 Orlando Big League All-Stars pulled out a narrow 2-1 victory over Fort Walton Beach Niceville, advancing District 14 to the Big League World Series in Fort Lauderdale. District 14 was just coming off a 2-1, nine-inning victory over Niceville on Tuesday.

Orlando, made up of players from Oviedo, Maitland, Eustis, Orlando, Mount Dora and Ocoee, left for Fort Lauderdale this morning at 11:30. District 14's first game in the Big League World Series is set for Sunday at 2:30 against host Broward County.

"It was a close game all the way, but we finally pulled out," District 14 manager Howard Mabie said. "The pitching kept us together, neither team hit that well."

Ocoee's Randy Lee, Lake Mary's Kevin Wick and Eustis' Todd Aucklund combined on a five-hitter with Aucklund picking up the victory in relief. Aucklund has been the pitching star throughout the tournament as he has picked up two victories and one save without a loss.

After three scoreless innings, District 14 took a 1-0 lead with a run in the bottom of the fourth. Former Oviedo High star Rob Isner gave District 14 the lead with a RBI single to left to score Ocoee's Dean Hazen.

District 14 hung on to its 1-0 lead into the top of the seventh when Niceville scored a run with a clutch two-out single by Mike Faircloth to knot the score at 1-1.

District 14 prevented the game from going into extra innings again as it broke the tie with a run in the bottom of the seventh. The first two hitters for District 14 — Dean and Brent Hazen — drew walks and Isner dropped down a bunt single to load the bases. Aucklund not only picked up the pitching victory, but he also got the game winning RBI as he drew a walk with the bases loaded to force in the winning run to send District 14 to the Big League World Series.

"Isner just had a perfect, perfect bunt," said Mabie. "Then he (Charlie Smith) got a little wild in the seventh and we got the run."

er, Brent Castille and Dean Hazen had two hits each for Orlando while Dwayne McLeod and Jack Smith had one apiece.

For Mabie, it will mark the third trip to the World Series. The Oviedo skipper has finished second twice (1979 and 1980), but he feels this year's team may have the ingredients to take it all. "This team has great speed and it can hit," he said. "We looking forward to this week."

Mabie's squad is also the first District 14 team to go through the Southern Regional undefeated.

Todd Aucklund did a little bit of everything this past week to help the Orlando District 14 All-Stars earn a spot in the Big League World Series at Fort Lauderdale. Above, Aucklund dances away from an inside pitch as Niceville's Mike Faircloth makes a nice stop. Aucklund eventually drew a walk to force in the winning run in the bottom of the seventh for a 2-1 victory in the championship game. At the left, Aucklund fires a fastball. The hard-throwing righthander picked up two wins in a save during the week as manager Howard Mabie's club became the first District 14 team to win the Southern Region with an unbeaten record. District 14, comprised of Central Florida area players including six from Seminole County, will play World Series host Broward County at 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

Eustis Holds Off Louisiana

By Chris Flister
Herald Sports Writer

EUSTIS — Although it put on a furious come back at the end, Lake Charles, La. has only itself to blame for dropping a 6-4 decision to host Eustis in Thursday night's first game of the Little League Junior All-Stars Southern Regional tournament.

Eustis now goes on to the loser's bracket finals tonight at 7:30 against West University, Texas, a 19-0 loser to Altamonte in Thursday's second game.

While Lake Charles stranded nine runners in the first six innings, Eustis cashed in on nearly every opportunity it had. Eustis took a 3-0 lead in the bottom of the first without even hitting the ball out of the infield. Totch Mabry reached on an infield error to lead off and Brian Langford drew a walk. Mike Young then moved the runners to second and third with a sacrifice bunt and Eric Buxman followed with an infield single to chase home Mabry. Two more runs came across when Jimmy Curry hit a grounder to short, and the shortstop's throw was wild making all three of Eustis' runs unearned.

Eustis came up with three more runs in the bottom of the third to take a 6-0 lead. Langford drew a walk to lead off and, one out later, Buxman ripped a single to left to put runners on first and third. After Buxman stole second, Curry dropped down a squeeze bunt. Lake Charles' pitcher Steve Ryder fielded the bunt, but his throw to the plate was not in time to get Langford. Ryder was then lifted and John Loss came on in relief. Loss walked the first man he faced, Taylor Koch, and Russell Ettinger drilled a two-run triple over the right fielder's head to give Eustis its 6-0 lead.

Lake Charles stranded two more runners in the fourth and, a couple of baserunning mistakes cost Lake Charles at least two runs in the fifth. In the fifth, with Glenn Hinton on second and one out, Jerome Sullen smashed a shot to deep left center. The ball hit off the fence, but Hinton froze between second and third and wound up at third while Sullen got a stand up double. Hinton then broke from home when Paul Green tapped back to the mound, but was thrown out by at least four steps. Mickey Clark then grounded out to end the inning.

Behind the strong arm of Curry and good defensive work, Eustis held on to its 6-0 lead into the seventh inning. Curry then ran into control problems and the roof almost caved in on the tournament hosts.

Dwayne Darbonne walked to lead off the inning and both Hinton and Sullen singled to load the bases. Green followed with a RBI sacrifice fly to center for Lake Charles' first run of the night. Clark then hit into a fielder's choice for the second out, leaving runners on first and third. Tim Dugas then drew a walk to load the bases and the next two batters walked to force in two runs and cut Eustis' lead to three, 6-3. Curry was then lifted and Buxman came on to attempt to put out the fire. But, Buxman walked the first hitter he faced to make it 6-4 and Lake Charles still had the bases loaded with its best hitter, Darbonne, at the plate. Buxman kept his composure, though, and came back to strike out Darbonne to preserve the victory for Eustis and keep the home crowd from going berserk.

Modest Murphy Clobbers 2 As Braves Trip Giants, 6-4

United Press International

When it comes to remembering his accomplishments, Atlanta's Dale Murphy would just as soon forget.

"Well, if it's good or bad you've just got to forget it and come back the next night," said Murphy, who ripped two homers and had five RBI to spark the Braves to a 6-4 victory Thursday night over the San Francisco Giants.

"I felt OK tonight, and tomorrow night's another game. You never feel comfortable up there."

Murphy, who has 25 homers and 82 RBI places him second in the NL in both categories, said he never sets personal goals.

"I'd like to hit x-number of home runs, but you can't think about it too much," the 27-year-old slugger said. "You've got to try and block it out of your mind. Once you start thinking about hitting a homer, you start altering your swing and things like that. You just want to make sure you take a good swing."

Murphy, who also singled, is hitting .304.

Ken Dayley, 3-3, allowed five hits over 5 1/3 innings for the victory. The left-hander yielded an RBI single to pinch-hitter Tom O'Malley in the fifth and a sixth-inning solo shot by Jack Clark, his 16th of the year. Gene Garber got the last three outs for his seventh save.

The Braves raked starter Bill Laskey, 12-9, for three runs in the first. With two out, Claudell Washington singled and Bob Horner walked. Murphy then drilled a 2-1 pitch into the left-field seats.

The Braves went ahead 4-0 in the second on an RBI double by Brett Butler and added two runs off reliever Andy McGaffigan in the fifth. With two out, Horner singled and Murphy popped an 0-1 pitch over the right-field fence for his second homer of the game.

The Giants scored two runs in the ninth on a throwing error by third baseman Jerry Royster and an RBI single by Duane Kulper.

"We hit the ball real hard in the first three or four innings — just nothing happened for us," said the Giants' Darrell Evans. "They got two big hits from Murphy and even with the three-runner, we had a chance to come back. He hit another one, so it's tough when a guy has a night like that. We had some opportunities, that's for sure."

Cubs 10, Cardinals 5

At Chicago, Leon Durham belted a grand slam in the third inning and the Cubs scored six unearned runs in the fourth to beat St. Louis for the ninth time in 12 games. Dick Ruthven, 8-9, was the winner while rookie Danny Cox, 0-1, took the loss. Ozzie Smith had four hits for the Cards, who have lost 10 of their last 12 contests.

Dodgers 4, Reds 3

At Cincinnati, Ken Landreaux lofted a tie-breaking sacrifice fly in the seventh and Tom Niedenfuer pitched four innings of one-hit relief to spark the Dodgers. Niedenfuer, 6-1, struck out seven and walked none after relieving Jerry Reuss with the score tied 3-3. Greg Brock hit his 15th homer, a three-run shot, for Los Angeles.

Astros 6, Padres 1

At Houston, Mike Scott and Dave Smith combined on a seven-hitter and Jose Cruz drove in four runs to lead the Astros. Scott, 6-4, went seven innings in his first start since suffering a sprained ankle July 20. Cruz singled in the go-ahead run in the fourth and sliced a bases-loaded triple in the eighth.

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 4

Despite losing a solid right arm and their fingers, the Milwaukee Brewers have put their hands back on first place in the American League East.

Cecil Cooper, Robin Yount and Jim Gantner drove in two runs apiece Thursday night to lead the surging Brewers to a 6-4 victory over the slumping Toronto Blue Jays.

The triumph was Milwaukee's 10th in its last 14 games and the loss was the Blue Jays' eighth in their last nine. The American League champions lead second-place New York by a half-game. Though the race is far from over, the Brewers deserve praise for rallying from a bad start, especially without ace right-hander Pete Vuckovich and reliever Rolfe Fingers.

Much of the success revolves around Cooper, who has 44 of his league-leading 98 RBI since the All-Star break. He went 3-for-4 with two RBI against the Jays and even

The league, however, pointed out that the Royals are playing in Kansas City the day before while the Yankees are home.

Steinbrenner called MacPhail's order just another in a series of decisions that have gone against the Yankees "all the way down the line" since the AL president upheld a Kansas City protest that allowed George Brett's two-out, two-run ninth-inning homer in a controversial July 24 game.

Steinbrenner accused MacPhail of favoring the Royals because the team preferred leaving Kansas City on the day of the resumed game rather than the night before.

Rescheduled 'Pine Tar Game' Upsets George

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Yankees believe they have been stuck with another bad decision in their "Pine Tar Game."

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner Thursday charged American League President Lee MacPhail with accommodating the Kansas City Royals by ordering his team to push the starting time back for the resumption of the game from 2 to 6 p.m. EDT on Aug. 18.

Steinbrenner also emphasized that there was no certainty of a game on that date, which would have been an off-day for both clubs.

"If in fact the game is played, we will follow Mr. MacPhail's orders, but I hasten to point out that the decision rests solely with the

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Peete, Weibring Share Buick Open First Place

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (UPI) — Chi Chi Rodriguez is trying to turn back time but he may discover that Calvin Peete has beat him to it.

Rodriguez shot a 5-under-par 67 Thursday in the opening round of the $350,000 Buick Open, one stroke off the pace set by leaders Peete and D.A. Weibring.

Joining Rodriguez at third place on the 7,001-yard, par-72 course were John Cook, Jack Renner and Fred Couples.

Another shot back at 68 were Lou Graham, Japan's Isao Aoki, Don Pooley, Jeff Sluman, Tom Kite and Jim Simons.

The rain, which delayed the morning start by one hour, slowed things up considerably in the afternoon. Thirty-three players broke par in the morning, only 21 broke par in the afternoon.

But shortly after Rodriguez came in, Peete, 40, strolled in with his 6-under 66.

Sheehan Putts Into Lead

HIGH POINT, N.C. (UPI) — Four-year LPGA tour veteran Patty Sheehan says putting was the key to her 7-under-par 65 and a three-stroke lead in the opening round of the $180,000 Heurdon Classic.

Three strokes behind Sheehan going into today's second round were Judy Clark and Charlotte Montgomery, who each came away Thursday with a 68 on the 6,191-yard Willow Creek Golf Club course.

Defending champion JoAnne Carner, Janet Coles and Lenore Muraoka had 69s in the opening round.

Nine golfers were tied at 2-under. Carner, an LPGA Hall of Famer, said she was not surprised at the low scores. She said it will take a lower score to win the tournament than it did last year.

"Last year we had trouble with some of the greens and they wouldn't hold a shot," she said. "This year you have to hunt for the bad areas. I think there will be a lot of sub-par rounds."

Sheehan set the pace in 90-degree temperatures and high humidity with a round that included seven birdies and no bogeys.

Seminole Start Monday

Seminole High football coach Jerry Posey announced the practice times for varsity, junior varsity and freshman teams Wednesday.

The varsity will begin practice Monday with sessions at 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. "We've contacted just about everybody," said Posey. "But if there are any new kids in town, they should get a hold of me at the school (322-4352)."

Junior varsity and freshman practices will begin Monday, Aug. 22 at 3 p.m.

Ovett, Smith, Foster Highlight World; Noll Impressed With Steelers' Youth

HELSINKI, Finland (UPI) — Almost 5,000 people ran for fun in the Helsinki City Marathon Thursday, but the serious action resumed today in the World Track and Field Championships.

The busiest day of the seven-day program featured four finals, plus qualifying rounds in the men's 200 meters, high jump, 110-meter hurdles, pole vault, 5,000 meters, 1,500 meters, and the women's javelin throw, 100-meter hurdles, 1,500 and 200.

Among the top names scheduled to compete were Britain's Steve Ovett, the world 1,500 record-holder and Olympic 800 champion; American Calvin Smith, the 100-meter world record-holder; and American Greg Foster, the fastest man in the world this year over the high hurdles.

Westerners also had their first glimpse in a major international meet of China's Zhu Jian Hua, who cleared 7 feet 9 1/4 inches to set a world record in the high jump earlier this year.

playoffs — to score Laszale for a 17-0 advantage. Maddox walked again and when Eric Martinez reached on an error, the final two runs scored.

Working with the big lead, Ebbert breezed with the aid of some good defensive plays. Waring snared a hot liner and Green gunned down a runner trying to steal in the first. Brock made his big play in the second, and Stiles, who took over the catching, tossed out David Cromack trying to steal third in the fifth. Cromack suffered a broken finger while sliding and will be lost for the rest of the tournament.

Ebbert struck out one and walked one while bouncing back from two subpar showings in the sectional. "I felt more confident tonight," he said. "After two bad games, my confidence needed a boost. It was a lot easier to pitch that wasn't enough for him.

"No I'm not satisfied," he said. "You can't ever be satisfied — you always want to do more and contribute more. If I get three hits, I want four hits and if I get four hits, I want five."

Of his surge, he said, "I'm not doing anything different. I'm just getting the opportunity to drive in runs. I just happen to be in the right place at the right time."

Starter Chuck Porter scattered six hits over six innings, struck out five and walked five to even his record at 5-5. His record since the All-Star break is 5-1.

"I haven't really changed anything," he said. "It's just that before the All-Star game I was only used as a spot starter, and now I'm pitching every five days. Pitching as a regular member of the rotation has allowed me to get my rhythm."

Pete Ladd worked the final inning for his 13th save and his 11th in his last 19 appearances. Doyle Alexander, 0-7, took the loss.

"We haven't been getting good pitching or timely hitting," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox. "We've been playing catch-up ball for the last couple of weeks."

The Brewers took a 1-0 lead in the first on Cooper's 25th homer, a drive over the left-field wall.

Milwaukee made it 3-0 in the third. Paul Molitor walked and scored on Gantner's triple. Yount followed with an RBI single.

Toronto edged to 3-1 in its half of the third on Willie Upshaw's RBI single and to 3-2 in the fourth on Garth Iorg's RBI single.

But Milwaukee made it 6-2 with three runs in the fifth. Charlie Moore led off with a double and one out later scored on Gantner's single. Yount tripled to deep center to score Moore and chase Alexander. Cooper greeted reliever Dave Gelsel with an RBI single.

Toronto added a run in the seventh on Lloyd Moseby's RBI single and made it 6-4 in the eighth on Iorg's run-scoring groundout.

White Sox 9, Orioles 3

At Chicago, Tom Paclerek had four hits and four RBI and Floyd Bannister, 10-9, equaled his career high of 11 strikeouts, lifting the White Sox. It was the sixth straight loss for the Orioles, who dropped from first to third place in the East, one game back. Allan Ramirez, 4-3, lasted only 2 1/3 innings.

Yankees 6, Tigers 5

At Detroit, Dave Winfield's 23rd home run of the season, a solo shot with one out in the 10th, lifted New York. Winfield hit a 2-2 pitch from reliever Howard Bailey, 5-5, to make a winner of Rich Gossage, 10-3. It was Winfield's 18th game-winning RBI of the season, most in the AL.

A's 6, Twins 0

At Oakland, Chris Codiroli, 9-8, pitched a five-hitter for his first major-league shutout, lifting the A's to their sixth victory in their last seven games and into the third place in the West. Frank Viola, 5-10, took the loss. Dwayne Murphy hit his 12th homer for Oakland.

Roundup

As the NFL exhibition season continues, Pittsburgh Steelers' head coach Chuck Noll has found his team more dependent on its young players. And tonight, when the Steelers face the New York Giants at Three Rivers Stadium in an exhibition game, Noll once again will be using inexperienced guards, receivers and defensive backs.

Veteran starters Terry Bradshaw, Craig Wolfley and Steve Courson have been sidelined with injuries, while others such as Lynn Swann, Ray Pinney and Jack Ham are no longer with the team.

In their first two pre-season contests, the Steelers have won with Cliff Stoudt at quarterback, rookies Gregg Garrity and Paul Skansi at wide receiver and reserves Rick Donnalley and Emil Boures at guard.

"I am impressed with the young players as a group," Noll said.

"They have shown good potential, but with potential, the question is whether they can realize it. I don't know what limits they have."

That group was able to defeat New Orleans 27-14 and New England 27-16. In fact, rookie free agents Chet Winters and Tim Harris have gained more yardage at running back than veterans Franco Harris, Frank Pollard and second-year man Walter Abercrombie.

Yet Noll, despite the fact Stoudt will be starting for the third week in a row Friday, says he would like to try to give his veterans more playing time Friday. He also will try to get a look at wide receiver John Stallworth and strong safety Donnie Shell, who both ended 23-day holdouts this week.

Giants Coach Bill Parcells, meanwhile, plans to give quarterback Phil Simms a chance to try a comeback. Simms missed the 1982 season because of knee surgery and has temporarily lost his starting spot to Scott Brunner.

with the big lead."

West University, meanwhile, needs a win over Eustis tonight for a second crack at Altamonte. "I still think we can win this thing," said Howell. "Mark (Walte) isn't used to being behind and he let it get to him tonight. When you only give up three hits and lose like this, well, we have never lost a game this badly before."

Howell said he would probably go with Alex Allgood tonight. Allgood turned in a nice job on the mound when West U. beat Anderson, S.C., 4-3, on Tuesday. Saturday's game will be at 10 a.m. If the Eustis-West University winner takes that one, a second game will be played immediately after.

TOURNAMENT TIDBITS — Altamonte catcher Randy Green continued to be on the money with his throws to second. Green nailed his second thief Thursday. He also had his third dead to rights, but the ball was dropped, the second time that has happened...

The Martinez brothers continue to be the steadiest performers for Altamonte. Both have excellent batting eyes and seldom swing at bad pitches. Ernest, the righty, followed up his three-hit game from Wednesday with a single, two runs scored and two RBI Thursday night. He also hit a deep smash which sent center fielder Allgood to the warning track in the third. Eric, the lefty, walked three times and scored a run. He also dug out a couple bad throws from Ernest. "He's making me work too hard," laughed Eric about his brother's errant throws...

Coach Terry Hagen is taking the blame for his son Jeff's wild throw to first in Wednesday's win over Lake Charles, La. Jeff fielded a bunt during the second inning and was positioned to throw it to second when Terry yelled first. The throw went 10 feet over Eric Martinez's head. "I just should have kept my mouth shut," said Terry...

Rafting On The American River

White Water Adventure

By Lidia Masowicz

COLOMA, Calif. (UPI) — Waves toss the gray and yellow rubber raft wildy. The four novices aboard grip their paddles for dear life.

Their guide in the stern shouts orders above the river's roar.

"Forward! Forward! Stop! Backwater! Come on ... off your knees ... those muscles ... paddle!"

Some of his words are drowned out by the rushing white water of the American River, but the gist is as clear as the spray shimmering in the sunshine.

The two men, who less than three minutes ago volunteered to take frontline positions for the white-water trip, struggle up from the bottom of the waterlogged raft where the third 10-foot standing wave thrust them.

The women, who grudgingly agreed to take the two center seats at the start of the trip in the languid waters at Chili Bar, remain upright with legs firmly gripping the curved edge of the raft for support.

Their paddling efforts are disrupted, however, by uncontrollable giggling brought on by a feeling of exhilaration at riding the waves — and the fact that the men had gone down first.

A few seconds later the raft plunges into a frothy, watery hole, a wave crashes over the top, leaving only American River Touring Association guides Scott Comer and Lisa Grove in upright positions in the stern.

Scott, at 23 a river veteran who has run the rapids 50 times on an innertube, has just enough time to holler "Paddle!" before the raft smashes against a giant boulder jutting above the monstrous waves.

Fortunately, the neophytes remember Scott's safety talk — required by ARTA and many other rafting companies — and even before he begins shouting directives hurl themselves against the side of the craft that's wrapped around the rock.

It works. The raft is dislodged with no casualties, not even a scratch — just a ton of water that needs bailing. A few more minutes of furious paddling through the churning water, and the bumps end.

"That," says Scott, grinning, "was Meatgrinder Rapid."

The half-mile stretch of rolling water on the South Fork of the American River — the most popular rafting spot in the West, with 120 rafting companies handling up to 200,000 thrill-seekers each year — is normally rated a moderate "Class III."

This summer, however, the river is swollen to more than four times the normal summer levels by the highest Sierra Nevada snowmelt in a century — 233 percent of normal on the South Fork.

The unprecedented snowmelt that makes the current colder, swifter and more dangerous has caused several South Fork rapids — including Meatgrinder — to be upgraded to "Class IV," i.e. for the skilled only.

Under guidelines established by the American White Water Affiliation, rivers are categorized from Class I to VI, with VI considered life threatening and foolish to attempt.

After surviving "Meatgrinder," the first-time white water rafters confidently maneuver their way through a turbulent chute called "Troublemaker" — strikingly similar to a waterfall — then beach to watch how others are faring.

The first raft to float along is sucked into a swirling eddy and flips, hurling four young Boy Scouts and an adult leader helter-skelter into the foamy, 50-degree bath.

One of the boys grabs a rock and, on very shaky legs, climbs to the top. The others remember their guide's instructions before the trip and drift out of the rapids on their backs, feet first to fend off rocks.

"We hit this high wave and then before we knew what was happening this huge hole grabbed us, and we fell out," says Ian Crows, 12, Lafayette, one of those who drifted to safety. "It was neat."

During lunch at the site where James Marshall discovered gold in 1848 discussion centers around news reports of two recent rafting deaths.

"Out of the hundreds of thousands of people who have gone on commercial rafting trips, only two died, and both were very unusual circumstances," Scott assures the group. "That's a pretty good record."

The two-day, 21-mile trip to Folsom Lake ends with a spectacular gorge run through such white-water sizzlers as "Salati's Cesspool" and "Hospital Bar" that rapidly follow each other as the river squeezes between polished rock banks.

At "Lost Lunch" both Scott and Lisa are dumped over the stern, but soon haul themselves back onto the raft.

As the expedition ends, Debbie and David Ornelas, who drove from West Covina in Southern California, can't wait to get out — to reserve their spot on the river next summer.

"We're definitely going to take our kids," they say simultaneously. "This is much too much fun not to share with them."

Cost ranges from $40 for a one-day weekday trip to $140 for a weekend two-day outing.

Spurred By Strong Dollar

American Tourists Flock To Britain

By Margo Grilman

LONDON (UPI) — "They say there are 1.5 million Americans here," said Steve Schwarzev on a London street, "and I seem to be running into half of them. There are a lot more Americans than I expected."

Schwarzev is from Franklin, Mich.

"There are a lot of Americans here this summer," said Toni Chalkin on a London street. "Too many."

Chalkin is from Chicago. What these two Americans noted is statistically true. With the stronger dollar, more Americans than ever are invading England this summer.

The British Tourist Authority expects 12 percent more American tourists in England this year than last. From everywhere else it expects a 7 percent increase.

As for tourist spending, it's like the old days when the European legend ran that all Americans were rich.

An English Tourist Board report estimated American tourists are spending 29 percent more this year. Department of Trade figures show that in 1982's first quarter, 91,000 North Americans spent $38.4 million in England. In the same period this year, 98,000 North Americans spent $46.6 million.

Both the ETB and the trade department hope this trend will continue. It may — but for one reason deplored by ETB chairman Michael Montague.

"Unfortunately there is evidence that some prices have already started edging up," he said in his annual report. "That is very foolish indeed."

By putting up prices you merely cut down what the public can afford to buy," He warned that "greedy price increases" could strangle tourism growth.

"We're trying to spend as little as possible," said Ellen Whitaker and Chuck Rosenberg of Washington, D.C. "But things aren't really expensive. They're comparable to any other big city. We haven't been shocked."

One thing easing the shock is a cheaper pound, priced at around $1.60.

"The dollar's fantastic," exclaimed Paul Higginfield of Greenbush, Mich. "This is my fourth summer here and things don't seem expensive at all."

"Your money goes farther this year," said Jack Youree of San Francisco, waving a huge carrier bag from Harrod's, London's most expensive department store. "I feel more free to spend."

Such freedom has been expanded for many by lowered air fares. People Express has the cheapest New York-London fare, $149 one way, but other airlines offer special fares too.

"The reduced fares leave more money to spend," said Carol Stephenson of Nassau Bay, Texas. "By planning my trip in advance I can go crazy spending my money now."

Furthermore, the ETB notes a trend away from tight-fisted backpackers toward freer spenders all around. So do American tourists themselves.

"When I first started in school, more people were backpacking," Ms. Stephenson said. "Not as many of my friends are backpacking now."

"You don't find the 1960s flower children sitting in Trafalgar Square smoking dope and just hanging out anymore," Youree said. "Young people are studying harder and thinking more of their futures, therefore people with barely enough money are not coming over."

Joan Curtis, who now lives in Saudi Arabia, said she had noticed "more affluent people than backpackers," but Brian Press of Pittsburgh and his friends claimed to have seen "a lot of backpackers on the train coming in —

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY
AUGUST 13, 1983

Have definite goals and objectives this coming year, but be flexible regarding the methods you use to achieve them. You may find it necessary to tailor your procedures to changing conditions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you place too much emphasis on self-serving interests today, someone you're fond of may let you know how he or she feels about selfishness. Order now: The NEW Matchmaker wheel and booklet which reveals romantic compatibilities for all signs, tells how to get along with others, finds rising signs, hidden qualities, plus more. Mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to give your zodiac sign. Send an additional $1 for your Leo Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Strive to be budget-minded today and keep your accounts in order. Don't blow funds now which are earmarked for future expenditures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Keep mum about your financial status. If you broadcast your worth, an acquaintance who is always short may tap you for a loan.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Money could be the root of your problems today, and I'm not referring to the lack of it. Uncharacteristically, you may be needlessly tightfisted.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Optimism must be tempered with reality today. Hope which lacks sufficient substance could be shattered by minor disappointments or setbacks.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It is likely you'll achieve your ambitious objectives today, but you might have to pay a price that exceeds their true worth.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Deal warmly with others today, not in a cool or calculating fashion. If you get off on the wrong course, it will be hard to get back on track.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Coworkers will not appreciate it today if you press them to get things done and then slack off yourself. Do your fair share.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Pay your dues with a smile today. One who has aided you in the past will not take kindly to excuses for not helping him or her now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You won't be afraid of work today, but there's a possibility you may balk at pitching in if everything isn't done your way.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's true you're entitled to a little rest and relaxation today, but not to the point where you totally ignore important duties.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Household projects could prove to be fun today and also save you money — provided, before you begin, you're certain your way is cheaper.

Want To Get Well?
Obey Doc's OrdersDr.
Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 25-year-old female and two years ago I became very sick while on duty at the hospital where I work. I was having severe abdominal pain right under my ribs in the pit of my stomach, in the center. It felt like something was twisting my intestines or a hard gnawing feeling.

I went to the emergency room and was hospitalized. My tests showed that I had acute catarrhal pancreatitis. Since I have been out of the hospital I've started having more severe pain. It is not always when I eat but also when I have eaten nothing.

The doctors also found two duodenal ulcers and put me on Gaviscon and Tagamet. I quit taking the Tagamet except when I started hurting real bad, but my doctor got mad and said that was the wrong way to do it. Another serum amylase test was done and it was 195.

I drink some socially to have a good time but not a lot. The doctor said I was never to drink again. He says I have pancreatitis but how can he say that on the basis of just a serum amylase test?

Something else worries me. I've been taking amphetamines such as Isonamin so I can get more work done. Can speed damage my stomach or cause severe pains? Should I have another test to see if my ulcers have reopened or do what my doctor has told me to do thus far?

DEAR READER — I couldn't include all your letter. You are the kind of patient that doctors find most difficult to help.

Speed will increase gastric acidity just like caffeine and should be avoided. The gastric acidity may contribute to your pancreatic problems. And your ulcer could be penetrating into the pancreas aggravating the condition. You have a serious illness and would be wise to start cooperating and following directions to the letter. If you want to get well, stop substituting your bad judgment for your doctor's judgment.

Pancreatitis is one of those diseases where the doctor does indeed put a lot of reliance on the laboratory test.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been in the habit of taking long walks during nice weather. Recently I got a treadmill for days when the weather was not nice. I am disappointed that I can't stay on it for more than eight minutes and even that is difficult.

The treadmill is not motorized and has a slight incline and no mileage indicator. Why can I walk 45 minutes to an hour but only stay with the treadmill eight minutes?

DEAR READER — You are making a lot more effort on the treadmill. The incline makes a difference. And you are working against the machine's friction since it is not motorized.

Even with a motorized treadmill, because of adjusting the speed and inclination, a well-conditioned athlete doesn't expect to stay on the treadmill a long time.

Your letter reminds me to tell people not to try to exercise the same length of time on treadmills as they do when they're walking. That could be far too much exercise.

Zia says it might best be forgotten, except that South played in six no-trump.
Opening lead: ♥2

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

Pakistani expert Zia Mahmood has written an excellent "Bridge World" article on a tournament played in Calcutta, India.

He shows many interesting hands, and takes great pains to compliment his Indian hosts, who beat his team in the finals. He doesn't show the bidding except to say that it was very bad. West led the fourth best of his partner's suit in accordance with Easley Blackwood's theories. It was definitely his best lead.

South took the first heart and led a spade toward dummy. West ducked and North won. South returned to his hand with a club and led his nine of spades. West ducked and East chucked a heart. Now South ran off the rest of his clubs. East chucked a second heart and was careful to throw a high one.

Now South cashed his ace-king of diamonds and was delighted when the queen fell. He then took his second high heart and again East dropped a high one to retain the seven spot.

Now South made his key play to try to make the hand. He led the four of hearts, only to go down two instead of one when West won that trick with his eight to cash two spades.

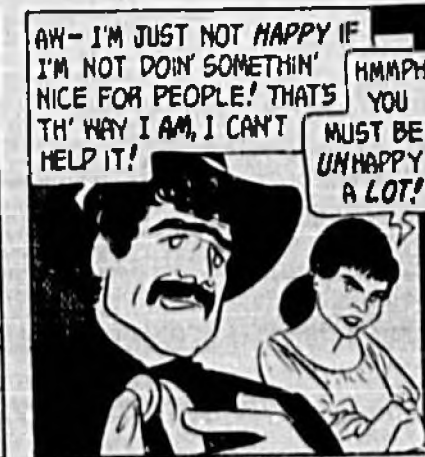

Note that the old-fashioned opening lead had told East that he could unblock in hearts, thus avoiding the diamond end-play.

Pumping Iron

Who Says Only Muscle-Headed Men Can Do It?

By Katherine Burkett
Herald Correspondent

The phrase 'weight training' conjures up a macho image: a muscle-bound he-man watching his biceps bulge as he lifts a heavy barbell to his chest. That image is changing, however, as women in Central Florida invade the gym and find that weight training will give them well-defined muscles more like Jane's than Tarzan's.

Women have come to accept weight training as a 'feminine' exercise since discovering that they will not develop the same bulk men do. Necessary levels of the muscle-building hormone testosterone are not present in 99.9 percent of women, experts say.

Treva Pickelsimer, a secretary at the Seminole County Sheriff's Department, has been working out since the department got its new gym two years ago. She says that she has gone through several stages with her training.

"At first I was afraid of gaining bulk so I was very careful to take it very easy. Then I found out that women don't get bulky because of a difference in hormones and I went through a stage where I was trying to see how much I could lift. Now I'm at a happy medium," she says.

There are basically two types of weight training. The more familiar might be the use of 'free weights' — barbells and dumbbells — as pictured in all those Muscle Beach movies and the Olympics. An athlete does prescribed lifts with free weights, usually changing only position and the weight on the bar. Because the weight has no restraints on it, people who work out with free weights usually have a partner around as a safety precaution in case a weight falls on them.

Becoming more popular now are weight machines, particularly Nautilus.

The machines are intended to be used in a particular order to work specific groups of muscles. The line-up of machines is designed so that fatigue in one group of muscle won't affect the work out of another group.

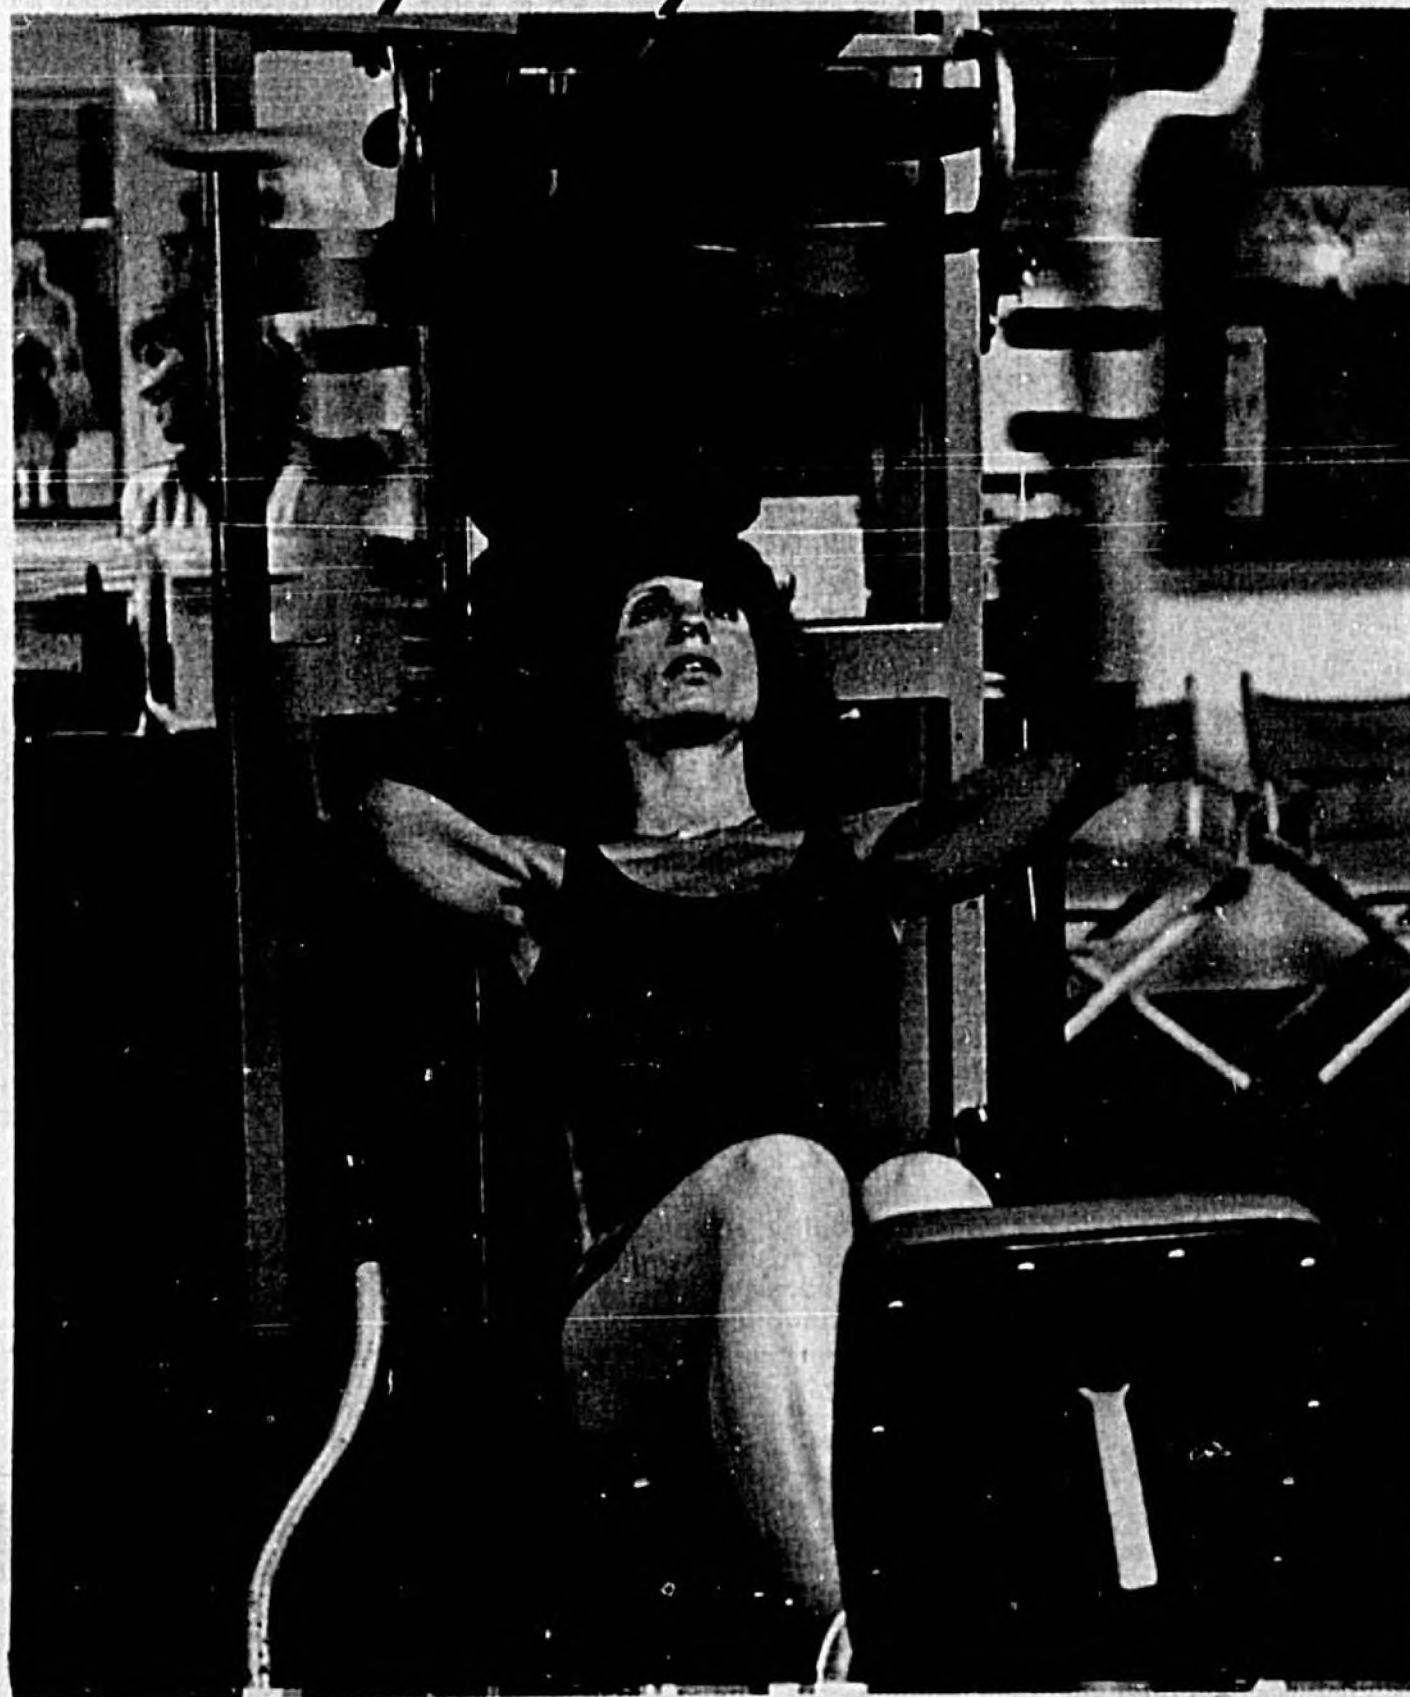

The theory behind Nautilus, according to Mary Vacala, athletic trainer at Lyman High School, is based on a special kidney-shaped cam in the inner-workings of the machine. Ms. Vacala, who also has a masters degree in exercise physiology, compares a free weight arm curl and an arm curl performed on the Nautilus machine to show the difference between the two systems.

In a free weight curl, the athlete begins with the weight in a downward position and bends the elbows, bringing the weight up to the chest. The Nautilus machine mimics this action, but more effectively, according to Ms. Vacala.

"When you curl a regular free weight, the most resistance comes at first, where you're the weakest," she says. "By the time you go down to a weight small enough for you to lift at the beginning, it's too light to do anything for the rest of your arm, which is stronger. The cam helps by increasing resistance where your muscles are the strongest."

According to Jim Knauss of a Longwood Nautilus center, there are other advantages as well. "Nautilus

Charlotte Borolet of Apopka is just one of a growing number of women who have taken up the formerly all-male exercise of lifting weights. Devotees say pumping iron increases a woman's strength and flexibility, relieves stress, eases the pain of giving birth, and is a great way to shed unwanted pounds.

Newscasters Should Use Proper English

DEAR DICK: Why do TV newscasters always say perfection when the word is spelled protection? Newscasters talk about the Environmental Perfection Agency. Commercials talk about everything from feminine perfection to outside house paint perfection. This is grating to the ears. — English student, Joplin, Mo.

This Q&A Columnist in Los Angeles agrees. You would think that newscasters, knowing that good pronunciation is one of their tools, would be careful in that area. But they aren't. My pet hates are the way they all mispronounce applicable, affluent, comparable and preferable. They generally put the accent on the second syllable — affloent — when it is on the first syllable in all cases. Learn proper English, newscasters!

DEAR DICK: I enjoy older movies and try to find what book the movies come from. Could you please help me find where "The Naked Maja," with Ava Gardner and Anthony Franciosa, came from? I would like to read the book, if there is one. — Mrs. G.C.L., Amarillo, Texas

That film had an original script based on the life of the painter Goya. But there have been many Goya biographies, so you could read any, or many, of them.

DEAR DICK: A co-worker of mine argues that the dark-haired half of "Cagney & Lacey" is one of Judy Garland's daughters. I say Judy Garland only had two daughters, Liza Minnelli and Lorna Luft, and she is not one of them. Who is right? — Mrs. R.S., Jersey Shore, Pa.

Ask Dick Kleiner

You are. Judy had three children — the two you mentioned and a son, Joey Luft — but Tyne Daly, who is on "Cagney & Lacey," is not among them. Tyne is the daughter of the late actor, James Daly.

DEAR DICK: My brother and I are arguing over whether Jan Michael Vincent, who was Ski in "Hooper," is the guy who played the part of Tanner in "Damnation Alley." I say he is. Should I have my brother pay up? — A.P., Nixa, Mo.

Pay up, Brother P. — Vincent was in "Damnation Alley."

DEAR DICK: Every week on "Fantasy Island," Ricardo Montalban limps. Can you tell me why he limps so badly? How did he get hurt? — S.B., Rock Hill, S.C.

Montalban was hurt many years ago when he fell from a horse during the filming of a Western. The leg has gotten worse over the years.

DEAR DICK: Can you tell me if Anna Lee, who plays Lila

Quartermaine on ABC's "General Hospital," was in "The Sound of Music"? — B.A., New Albany, Ind.

Yes, she was. And many other movies, going back to when she was probably the most beautiful woman in the movies.

DEAR DICK: My sister and I were discussing bad television shows. We decided the worst all-time would be "Man in a Suitcase." The main actor was also the worst, but we can't remember his name. Can you? — S.S., Saginaw, Mich.

Yes, his name was Richard Bradford. But I could give you dozens of others just as bad. Some are still on.

DEAR DICK: I watch "Hee Haw" all the time, unless something comes up and I have to miss it. For a long while, I haven't seen Buck Trent on it. I never did hear why he isn't on the show any more. Can you tell me why? — L.G., Joplin, Mo.

Trent is still in the music business, but hasn't been on the show for a few years.

DEAR DICK: On a recent rerun of "The Munsters," I thought I saw Gavin MacLeod playing a candidate for Prince Charming. I was wondering if it was him because he had a full head of hair. Did he lose his hair since becoming skipper of "The Love Boat"? — D.J.P., Vassar, Mich.

You have sharp eyes. MacLeod says he did do that show, doing a sort of Marlon Brando takeoff, but says that not many people recognize him. He's been bald a long time, however, and wore a wig for that role.

John Davidson's Career Less Than 'Incredible'

By Peter Meade

The title of the show he co-hosts may be "That's Incredible!" but John Davidson says it has nothing to do with his performance on the ABC Monday night series.

Davidson says he and co-hosts Cathy Lee Crosby and Fran Tarkenton are nothing more than "pointers."

"I trained for 20 years," says Davidson, "and I love to do my nightclub act, but we're not asked to do much for 'That's Incredible!' It pays the bills and it's been a great jumping off point for me to try and get back to Broadway."

Broadway can't be calling too persuasively — and he can't feel the show hurts his career any — because Davidson originally planned to stay with the show only one year.

ABC originally envisioned the show as competition for CBS' "60 Minutes" when it debuted as "Incredible Sunday," but it took the CBS show just a little longer than its name to do away with its rival.

Considered nothing more than a ripoff of NBC's "Real People" by others, "That's Incredible!" incredibly remained on the schedule proving that viewers do want to see oddities and odysseys on a weekly basis.

Davidson's career has also sometimes resembled an odyssey. Although he still entertains dreams of being a Broadway leading man, he has previously played the role of a three-year regular on "Hollywood Squares" (where his babbling bluff answers still leave some wondering about his IQ), was a frequent guest host on the "Tonight Show," and spent two-and-a-half years as a talk-show host who relied on his boyish dimples and smile when the question-and-answer chatter ran out. All three jobs allowed him to rub elbows with his peers.

"It was a tired format," says Davidson of his talk-show tenure. "I came in at the end of its popularity and I don't blame myself for it not lasting longer."

On The Road

Charles Kuralt finds many unusual people and places as he and his crew travel the back roads of America. In Wisconsin, an off-beat roadside business provided an interesting setting for Kuralt and cameraman Isadore Bleckman for On The Road With Charles Kuralt which airs Tuesdays at 8 p.m. on CBS.

'Professor' Billy Joel Conducts MTV Class

By Andrew J. Edelstein

In a pleasant change-of-pace from its usual nonstop barrage of music videos, MTV offers "Nightschool with Billy Joel," airing Sunday, Aug. 21 on the Warner-Amex all-music channel.

It's a tape of an informal talk given by the pop singer earlier this year at New York's New School for Social Research.

But this is no dry academic lecture.

Professor Joel sits on a piano stool, fielding questions from the audience about various aspects of his professional and personal life. His answers show him to be a glib, perceptive and quite candid man.

The half-hour program provides a nice counterpoint to HBO's recent broadcast of one of Joel's concerts.

During the talk he admits that he considers himself to be a shy person who got into music as a way of meeting people more easily. He says he often gets stage fright and has to rely on cues from his drummer in order to remember lyrics.

In response to another question, he says he often misses being "one of the crowd."

Once, in order to get some privacy while attending a ball game at Yankee Stadium, Joel didn't shave and wore sloppy clothes and a bandana around his head.

Nonetheless, his disguise was recognized by sharp-eyed fans. Despite Joel's protestations in Spanish that "no habla Ingles," his admirers wouldn't leave him alone. They stood behind him during the game singing his songs.

During the talk, Joel performs one song, "Where's the Orchestra," and also does credible imitations of singers Steve Winwood, Joe Cocker and Richie Havens.

"Nightschool with Billy Joel" is an insightful show that somehow manages to convey a lot more genuine feeling than that usually heard on talk shows.

Action Aids The 'A-Team'

By Peter Meade

Whatever happened to animal shows like "Lassie" and "Mr. Ed"?

Animal adventures for the 1983-1984 season include NBC's "Mr. Smith," an orangutan with an Einstein-ish IQ and "Manimal," about a man who can turn himself into various animals. NBC hopes it can turn itself into a hit series, but I'd say "Manimal" is minimal.

CBS and NBC obviously disagree in their strategy about the new shows. NBC is making noise about how they are including more chuckles in their new programs.

Although impressionist Fred Travalena is known for his comedy, he also has a serious side. He's very much involved in the cause of American Vietnam POWs. "I couldn't sleep at night after I heard about the POW situation," says Travalena. "There's a wall built around the subject and if someone bigger than me had picked up the baton and ran with it, fine, until that happens I'll keep screaming. I'm not just another celebrity with a pet cause."

The ABC limited-run series may be called "The Hamptons" but Bibi Besch says the shows were filmed in other places than just the Long Island, N.Y., resort communities. Other New York locations were used as well as in California. But is it really necessary that "Dallas" be done in Texas or "Dynasty" in Colorado? It's the plot not the place.

More viewers believe that "The A-Team" has plenty of action, but one member of NBC's popular action series doesn't believe it. Melinda Culea hopes that she'll have a bigger role in next season's stunt-filled episodes. "I have to have a more definite role," she says. "Not more pages, just a stronger handle." But she does realize for someone who was modeling just a few years ago, she's been pretty lucky with her fledgling acting career. The toughest job on "The A-Team" has got to be the people who dream up the "Can we top last week?" stunts. Just how many ways can you jump a jeep, shoot a gun or blow up a building?

There is a good possibility that there will be an "A-Team" movie filmed this season. George Peppard, who stars as the leader of this Tuesday night madness, says they will film 13 new episodes for the 1983-1984 and then do an extended adventure before returning to shoot another nine shows. When Peppard says they will "shoot" 22 new shows, you can take it literally.

...Weight Training Increasingly Popular With Women

Improves flexibility because it causes you to stretch into positions you never look for. Safety is also an important feature - most of the machines have seatbelts to keep you from arching your back and straining the wrong muscle.

"It also helps increase your lean body weight - the part of your body that isn't fat. That increases the rate at which you burn calories and makes it a good way to lose weight," Knauss says.

He adds that a Nautilus workout is most effective without long rests between machines. "The optimum length of a workout is around 20 to 25 minutes. That makes it perfect for businesswomen - they can come in here on their lunch hour.

"We like to get the line of machines clear and send each person down the row, bang, bang, bang. If it's done that quickly, the heart will beat continually at an excited rate, making it aerobic exercise, and good for the cardio-vascular system," Knauss says.

Weight training is not as much as a solo activity as it may seem. Ms. Vacala says that she encourages athletes to work with partners. "There's a great psychological advantage to having a partner. You have a tendency to work harder and do routines more correctly. You can cheat on any weight program. Having a partner makes you more aware of what you're doing," she says.

Ms. Vacala cites recent studies that show amazing benefits for pregnant women in weight training programs. "Dr. Douglas Hall in Ocala has just done studies that indicate that pregnant women who lift have less severe labor pains, more effective labors because their muscles are stronger, and fewer abdominal, leg and lower back pains.

"They also escape a lot of the stress surrounding a pregnancy because they had a method of tension release. There's a lot of psychological things happening to the pregnant woman, she sees her body becoming less attractive, she often becomes less active; these things work to cause stress. Activity can make her feel good about herself again. A fit woman will also return to her pre-conception figure more easily," Ms. Vacala says.

Weight training is also good therapy for people who have been injured, she says. "After three days of inactivity, the muscles begin to atrophy (degenerate). Even if a person is in a cast, they can work, preferably on the Nautilus machine because it's safer. If they can get into the right position. If they can't, we just have them lift the cast - they usually weigh at least five pounds," she says.

Weight training also helps prevent serious injury, says Ms. Vacala. "Anybody with an injury, the better shape they are in, the quicker a recovery they'll make," she says.

Weight training and cardio-vascular exercises are essential for a weight-loss program, according to Ms. Vacala. "For a woman to lose weight, she must both cut down on eating and increase activity. That's a proven fact. If there's no increase in activity, the metabolism will just slow down and calories will burn at a lower rate. That doesn't help," she says.

Ms. Vacala says that psychological well-being is connected to physical fitness. "A lot of businesswomen come in after work to help relieve their tension. There's nothing like exercise to alleviate stress. The most likely candidates for heart attacks and strokes are people with stressful jobs and those who are obese. Inactivity leads to both problems," she says.

Thirty-minute workouts three days a week should do it, says Ms. Vacala. "When you lift weights, you're tearing down the muscle - actually tearing some muscle fiber. It repairs stronger, which is where you get your improvement.

"If you lift too often, it can be detrimental because the muscle doesn't get a chance to repair. Any time you work out, you get some improvement, but three times a week is the best amount for getting results," she says.

You Don't Have To Be Italian To Enjoy Laurie's Veal Rossini

The New England seacoast and Central Florida have more in common than it may seem. One of these common interests is seafood, prepared in special ways and Laurie's Italian Fisherman, a restaurant new to the local scene, is adept at preparing this cuisine.

As the restaurant's name implies, Italian dishes complement the interesting menu.

Rainbow trout is baked in garlic sauce, frog legs, shrimp and scallops are fried, or served in scampi or marinara sauces for entrees. Baked clams, escargot, mussels marinara or shrimp cocktail may be ordered as appetizers.

The universal favorites, lasagna, cannelloni, manicotti, fettuccini Alfredo, ravioli, linguini and spaghetti are always available, but, probaably, the piece de resistance, is one of Laurie's own creations, veal Rossini. This veal dish is prepared with prosciutto ham, fresh tomatoes, basil, garlic and oregano baked and served with dutchess potatoes and a choice of spaghetti, linguini or French fries. The tab? $12.95. It is served with soup or salad.

Dinners range from $4.50 to $13.50 for duck a l'orange, chicken caclatoria, seafood Oscar, steak or steak Oscar or veal Oscar.

Soups are made by Laurie, chef-owner, and might be minestrone, onion or clam soup, a lighter, broth-like delicacy than chowder.

Spinach salad, anti pasta and fried mozzarella may be ordered as appetizers.

Dessert lovers can indulge in cannolis, cheese-cake, rum cake or blueberry crunch, all made on the premises.

Laurie's Italian Fisherman serves breakfast from 7 until 11, lunch from 11:30 until 2:30 and dinner from 5 until 9. Beverages are available through the adjacent lounge. Party and banquet rooms can be reserved.

Laurie Robinson, the diminutive young owner, has brushed pestles with the finest chefs in the area. Cooking since she was 10 in her parents' restaurants both here and in Cape Cod, Mass., Laurie's ambitions have brought her to the Cavalier Motor Inn, where her dining place occupies what was formerly The Buccaneer Restaurant.

Laurie, with her mother owns Carol's seafood in Longwood.

Cameras Don't Lie, Actors Must Stay Trim

By Elaine Thompson

The first time I heard "a moment on the lips, a lifetime on the hips" was long ago on a Jack LaLanne televised exercise sermon, but currently the phrase now circulates as fast and as often as pennies.

However, are trim show-folks motivated by that precise warning?

The phrase? No. The essence? You bet. We hear routinely about how television and movie actors must stay trim — cameras add pounds that really aren't there — and strong. These jobs that bring fame don't happen as often as they should, even for the talented, and they're not 9-to-5 when they happen along.

Nobody I talked to follows the self-destructive "black coffee and nothing else" slimming regime attributed to Marilyn Monroe. But within definitions of "what's right and what works," regimes vary.

For instance, there is Ted Knight and Nancy Dussault, who co-star in "Too Close for Comfort," returning to television this fall with first-run episodes via syndication. In real life, Ted and his wife have for the past seven years followed a balanced eating regime. They also contribute both money and time to a non-profit foundation dedicated to preventive medicine through good nutrition.

Nancy only last year found a pattern that works for her and says her fiancé, Valentine Mayer, goes along with it although he has no weight problem. Maybe she didn't either, but says she didn't like the way she looked on screen, so she took off a few pounds.

Yoko Gets John's Mail

By Clady Adams
NEW YORK — Henry Fonda's 1938 classic "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," with Sylvia Sidney, is coming at us again. MGM's brightening it up, giving it a little modern razzmatazz and is dishing it out as a TV movie... The digs that once housed Noel Coward in a swank section of London were grabbable for any "Blithe Spirit" who has a loose two million clams... All MacGraw and Fran Tarkenton, who have discovered everyone else, have discovered one another... Yoko Ono still receives 100 letters a month about John Lennon.

Octogenarian George Burns: "I just signed another seven-year deal with my manager. When I reach 100 we'll start to negotiate one year at a time."... The ex-Mrs. Van Johnson, Evie, is doing a book and it will not thrill her ex-hubby... TV's "Dynasty" is coming out in book form. The writer is Eileen Lottman... Bruce Jenner and his manager George Wallach are developing a family series for Dick Van Patten, his wife, Pat, and their sons, including hot shot tennis player Vince. It'll be a sort of "Ozzie and Harriet."... Ava Gardner requested a print of "Earthquake," a bomb she made eight years ago. Why, I don't know.

Edie Adams' 14-year-old son, Josh Mills, wants to be a comedian like his mom's first husband, Ernie Kovacs. Josh studies Richard Pryor, watches old Kovacs tapes and throws one-liners. Ask how old mom is and kid comic gives you: "She's 29 and holding." Mom's worry is that he likes blue material. Said Edie: "I told him dirty's OK, but only if it sure is funny."

Anna Marie Casablancas, wife of John Casablancas of the Elite Model Agency, insists their models eschew coffee. It's bad for the skin, she says. There's no rap on French fries or soda — just coffee.

Chevy Chase Getting The Hang Of Movie Comedy

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Chevy Chase says he's finally getting the hang of movie comedy after making six pictures — some hits, some misses.

Chase, the most successful and sophisticated of TV's "Saturday Night Live" sophomore hijinks, began with a huge hit, "Foul Play," with Goldie Hawn.

He followed with the critically praised "Seems Like Old Times" and the box-office smash, "Caddy Shack." Then came a drought with "Under the Rainbow" and "Oh Heavenly Dog," both disappointments.

Chase is back on the beam with "Vacation," playing a comic wimp of a father and husband on a sight-seeing saga from Chicago to Los Angeles to visit the ultimate amusement park.

Chase keeps moving further away from physical comedy, relying on dialogue and character development for his laughs.

Despite an image of serene confidence, Chase until now has been a very insecure screen actor. He said he sometimes ducked close-ups in "Foul Play" out of nervousness.

"I couldn't stop from twitching over certain straight lines," said Chase, grinning at the memory. "Like the time I had to tell Goldie's character she had the greenest eyes I'd ever seen."

"That's not a comedic line. I was uncomfortable with it. Maybe it is something I say to my wife, no one else.

"Now I can say those lines more easily as an actor rather than comedian. I saw the same twitchy reactions in Christie Brinkley, who makes her acting debut in 'Vacation.'"

"I tried to help her just as Goldie did with me. It's not an easy thing to overcome when that camera zeroes in on you."

"It's taken me six pictures to hold a character for the length of a film and not be sketchy. I never felt comfortable in a role before now."

Chase was a master at TV sketch comedy, bringing a character to life for a minute or two and then moving on. Prolonging a role over a period of months was a difficult transition.

Such other "Saturday Night Live" graduates as Gilda Radner, Dan Aykroyd, Bill Murray, Eddie Murphy, Steve Martin and the late John Belushi doubtless have encountered the same challenge.

There exists, Chase thinks, a fertile movie climate for himself and other "Saturday Night Live" comedians, along with Dudley Moore, Richard Pryor and Monty Python's madmen.

The deadly predictable, humorless TV sitcoms have driven comedy lovers back to movies where originality and lack of censorship give free rein to new comedians.

Often, however, newcomers — thanks to lack of discipline — bomb out.

Chase acknowledges he discovered the meaning of tight comedic control in his seventh picture, "The Deal of the Century," due for release later this year.

Long accustomed to running his own show with choice of director and script approval, Chase found himself under the dictatorial control of William Friedkin, who directed "The French Connection" and "The Exorcist."

"It was a different experience for me," said a chastened Chevy.

"Billy is meticulous and he pulled a quality out of me I haven't seen before. I wasn't allowed to mug. There was a lot of discipline and rehearsing, and less freedom."

"I'd never been yelled at before in a simple expository scene. That was a surprise. Billy would clear the set when we disagreed. He struck fear into the hearts of the cast and crew."

"Physical comedy and rhythms are instinctive with me. Billy requires more structure. More reality. There are no Chevy Chase mannerisms in Ed Muntz, the arms salesman I play in 'The Deal of the Century.'"

Chase, as have the other TV comics moving up to the big screen, discovered enormous budgets, screen size and greater expectations from ticket-buying audiences demand more of comics than the tube.

He's also learned movie comedy is considerably more risky.

On a dumb sketch on TV and everyone forgets 5 minutes later. Make a dumb movie and it is rarely forgiven or forgotten. But Chase is not about to return to television.

"It's too much exposure," he said. "I had more freedom but my work on 'Saturday Night Live' was aimed at a specific audience. Now I have to appeal to a broader segment. I'm older and don't have the need to fall down a lot and hurt my knees."

Robert Stack Says Stars Run The New Hollywood

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "In the old days movie stars waited for the telephone to ring. Today it's the stars who make the calls."

The words are Robert Stack's, an actor whose career spans the golden era of studios and the current age of superstars.

As a youth, Stack went duck hunting with Clark Gable and played polo with Spencer Tracy. He was a friend of Gary Cooper and other legendary movie giants.

But even those superstars were at the beck and call of the powerful old moguls — Mayer, Warner, Zanuck, Cohn, Goldwyn, DeMille and the rest.

Stars were bought, sold, loaned and bartered at the whim of studio bosses as, of course, was Stack himself.

Stack has enjoyed a longer run in movies than any of his contemporaries. He's still in demand, currently co-starring with Gene Hackman in "Last Rites Cross."

But then Stack is a product of movies, a fifth generation Californian whose great grandfather built Los Angeles' first theater. His father's best friend was Will Rogers. His mother's first beau was silent idol Wallace Reed. Rudolph was a family friend.

"The insanity of the motion picture business never settled in with me because I grew up thinking it was a normal way of life," Stack chuckled.

Stack was a teenager in 1939 when he made movie debut in grand style by giving Deanna Durbin her highly-publicized first screen kiss in "First Love."

Since then, Stack has appeared in some 100 films, winning an Oscar nomination for "Written On The Wind" and intonal acclaim for his portrayal of Elliot Ness in TV's "The Untouchables."

Despite his background, and sizeable personal fortune, the handsome, poised Stack still suffers the insecurities of all actors.

"Henry Fonda once told me, 'No r who you are, if you're out of work for two weeks in this business, you think you'll never work again.'"

"That's true of all of us. Even the biggest stars had to answer to the studio chiefs. But today it's different. Studio bigwigs listen to the superstars — or else."

"The difference is that stars like Sylvester Stallone, Clint Eastwood, Warren Beatty and Burt Reynolds have become their own studios. They are in full control."

"They are businessmen as well as actors. Tracy, Gable and Cooper weren't directors, producers and writers like Stallone and Eastwood."

"Today's big stars are corporate structures. They have the best of both worlds. They don't sit around waiting for the telephone to ring. They do the calling, making their own deals and financing their own pictures."

Stack shook his head and said, "Acting is a lonely business unless you're in that category. Accepting roles is like a parachute jump, continually proving to yourself you're good at what you do."

"I've had a good long run, but the continuity of my career has been weird. There are moments of flash — like being the world's biggest midget. I've always confused the people who make pictures. They don't know how to cast me."

Mulligan Stews Over His New Series

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Here's a suggestion for you in case you ever find yourself sitting next to Richard Mulligan at your local malted milk emporium: Don't ask him why he's doing his new series "Reggie."

"I get annoyed," Mulligan says, "when people ask actors why they are doing a particular production, which may not be so hot. They are most likely doing it because their son needs an operation or because an insurance bill is coming due."

"People think actors are somehow above that mundane sort of thing, bills and all that. But we're not. We get up in the morning and sometimes we have a headache, like everybody else."

OK. So why is he doing "Reggie," the new ABC series which started last week and will continue, all things being equal, into the fall season? I don't mean to imply that "Reggie" fits his characterization of shows that "May not be so hot." The thing is Mulligan had become one of the hottest of funny character actors on the big screen with his right-on portrayal in "S.O.B." Generally, when an actor makes it big in feature films, he tries to stick to feature films from then on.

"I'm doing this series," Mulligan says, "primarily because I like to work. The feature film field today is just too thin. Sure, I get some offers, but they are not for the kind of picture I would like to do. So this came along, and I liked it."

He likes "Reggie" and the part he'll play. Mulligan explains, Reggie is a man of 50 or so, who is beginning to wonder if his life is worthwhile.

"That's a feeling I have every day, don't you?" he asks. It's nice to play a character you like, he also liked Bert — his character from "Soap" — and he liked the producer he played in "S.O.B." and now he likes Reggie, too.

"But you can't like every character you play or every production you're involved in," he says. "Sometimes, to pay for that operation or pay that insurance bill, you have to take a part you don't particularly like. It happens to all of us."

Mulligan is a cop's son from the Bronx. As a kid, he was part of a gang, but he says it wasn't a violent gang. "We were called 'The Schoolyard Gang,' because we hung out in the schoolyard," he says. "As a kid, they called me 'The Duke.' A couple of the kids wound up in jail and one was electrocuted, but we also had one guy who became a nuclear physicist, another is now a professor of English literature and another one who is an advertising executive."

"The Duke" never knew exactly what he wanted to do with his life. He thought some about writing "for newspapers or maybe a novel if I had it in me," but wasn't really sure.

"When I was 18," he says, "I remember going in to talk to my dad, who was in the living room reading the Journal-American, and I said, 'I want to be a cop like you.' He put the newspaper down and said, 'No, you don't,' and that was all. He just picked up his paper again, and that was the end of that."

So Mulligan went into the Navy. Afterwards, on the GI Bill, he went to the University of Miami. In the Navy, he had happened upon a copy of "Cyrano de Bergerac" and became fascinated with the play form. So he decided to be a playwright. In college, he wrote a play, but the director of the college theater told him to act, not write.

"Reggie" is another adaptation of an English series. In the U.K., it was called "The Death of Reginald Perrin." When it was bought for American TV, they moved it to a Long Island, N.Y. town called Little Neck.

Former 'Soap' star Richard Mulligan is now the star of the new ABC comedy 'Reggie.' He's your average guy except that he has quite an imagination and here he shares it with his son's girlfriend (Lisa Freeman).

Then they found there really was somebody named Reginald Perrin living in Little Neck. So they changed the name to Reginald Potter. Then they changed the title to "The Fall and Rise of Reggie Potter," which Mulligan likes better than the current "Reggie."

'Cujo' For The Dogs; Linda's No 'Screwball'

By Dick Kleaer

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — All that "Flashdance" furor about who really did the dancing may pale into insignificance compared to the next big Hollywood scandal. This one involves the upcoming release of "Cujo," based on the Stephen King novel.

The question is: Who really did those dog scenes? St. Bernard dogs play a big part in the story, but they are tough to train, and so — horrors! — for one key scene they used a Labrador retriever wearing a St. Bernard suit.

THIS SUMMER, for the first time in quite a few years, there are summer replacement shows. They are trying out some shows in prime time instead of just rerunning old shows. Barbara Corday, who is producing ABC's "Reggie," starring Richard Mulligan, believes the reason for the networks doing this is abject fear.

"Cable is making big inroads," she says. "The public won't stand still and just watch old reruns, not when they have an alternative like cable. So the networks have to give them new shows."

She calls the summer replacements "pacifiers." But the network won't spend much on them. She estimates that the budget for "Reggie" is some 20 percent less than what it would have been for a comparable show in the regular season. Richard Mulligan's co-star, Barbara Barrie, was paid for the six episodes of "Reggie" what she would ordinarily make for one pilot.

Linda Shayne

PEOPLE in the know in theatrical circles are beginning to say Los Angeles, not New York, is now the center of stage in this country. One of those people is Dena Dietrich.

She's known best as Mother Nature, from nine years of those "You can't fool..." commercials. But she is also one of the most dedicated stage actresses around. Currently she is in one play ("Shay," with Karen Morrow and Chris Lemmon, at the Coronet) and directing another ("Two," at the Actors' Playhouse).

"At any one time in Los Angeles now," she says, "there are around 400 Equity waiver theaters in operation. (Those are little theater companies that are so small that the actors' union gives them waivers so they are non-union productions.) There are none in New York any more — the unions killed them."

CHANCES ARE GOOD that this summer's release of a film called "Screwballs" will not win a Nobel Prize for literature. But it's a feather in the cap of a pretty blonde named Linda Shayne.

"Screwballs" is one of the series of "Porky's" clones that is popping up like mushrooms on a damp lawn. Miss Shayne was the co-writer (with Jim Wynorski) and executive producer of the film. That's rather remarkable, since she is primarily an actress.

She is the daughter of a Xerox vice president, and as she grew up, she wanted to be queen of England. When she realized the odds were against her, she switched to acting.

After a bunch of low-budget films — she screams well — she did some high-budget TV shows, because she also looks good. Through her association with low-budget movies, she got to know the people at the Roger Corman office, and one of them was the firm's advertising director, Wynorski.

They started talking, and one thing led to another, and the other thing was that they began writing together. Now she's getting offers to write and produce.

But she says that if somebody offered her a choice between a big writing assignment and a plum acting role, she'd take the acting role.

She might also consider an offer to be queen.
