Medical science has produced enough evidence to convince us that the habitual discretic employ is endanguring his health. But the hamits of smoking are not the real issue in the Federal Communications Commission's attempt to her eigerette advertising from television and so har eigerecte advertising from television and sedio. The issue is what authority the FCC should have to ban the advertising of any particular product, so long as the advertising does not offend public taste.

Cigarette smoking, said the Commission by a 6 to 1 wate, constitutes "a serious, unique danger to public health . . . (and) it would thus appear wholly at odds with the public interest for broadcasters to present advertising promoting the consumption of a product posing this unique danger . . " Commissioners said they did not have of any other product "calling for such action" and "expressly disclaim any intention to preced against other product commercials." Furhams there is no such intent by these Commissioners. But the precedent would be estabners. But the precedent would be Suppose a majority of a future Commission decided that because alcoholism is a problem all hear commercials should be problemed. Or that the hearfble increase in traffic deaths warthat the herrible increase in traffic deaths war-rested a blackout on advertising of sports cars. Or that the excessive use of some drugs requir-ed a ban on patent medicine ads. The average TV viewer and radio listener would be happy if all commercials could be banished as a hazard to his nerves. But advertising pays the bill for the free entertainment and information he re-ceives. Commercial broadcasting has as yet found no other way to survive. It cannot live under a form of censorship based on the pos-sible prejudices — or even the selfish interests — of the regulatory body.

The appetite of a government censor grow with every bite of power. If a Federal agency could dictate the advertising policies of television could dictate the advertising policies of television and radio, why not newspapers and magazines?

And if consorship of advertising is permissible, why not the news and editorial content? The FCC proposal plainly constitutes a "unique danger" to a free press and free enterprise. Congress should rule it out on the ground it is hazardous to the national health. — Tampa (Fla.) Tribune.

Hearing Scheduled By BILL SCOTT

A public hearing to discuss integration of Seminole County - Established 1908 - FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1969 - SANFORD FLORIDA - Price 10 Cents School Board for a tentative Wednesday 7:30 p.m. session at Seminole High School's arditorium. The action came during

Thursday afternoon meeting of rights of U.S. Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) who met with Supt. John Angel and other county school officials here last week. Angel told yesterday's gathering that no advance publicity on the intergration matter had been given out through the press but the public somehow managed to acquire knowledge of the discussions ahead of time and arrived wanting to be heard. Angel moved to cut off and questions on the subject from parents attending the session, and explained board members knew no more about the HEW's alternatives than the rest of the room, who minutes before heard Tom Richey, administrative aide, report on what was discussed a week
