Discuss Military-Industry Program For Plane Engines

NEW YORK—Organization of a joint industry-military research program to accelerate development of American super-sonic powerplants is being discussed seriously in top-level scientific circles, Aviation Week, McGraw-Hill publication, reports.

Support for such a program is stimulated by a feeling among top military and airframe technicians that the United States is lagging behind both Britain and Russia in the development race toward producing powerplants capable of propelling an airplane at Mach 2 (twice the speed of sound) over sufficient range to perform military missions. The program would be aimed at doing the job for powerplant development that the research aircraft program—jointly sponsored by the Air Force, Navy, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, and airframe manufacturers—accomplished in speed development of super-sonic airframe design data during the past decade.

Development of powerplants for sustained flight at Mach 2 is considered by some technicians to be the most serious problem confronting the architects of U. S. air power today and is complicated by the fact that the traditional lag of engine development behind airframe progress is increasing rapidly in the super-sonic realm because of the increased research aircraft program's progress with airframe development. Veterans of this program emphasize that the requirements of super-sonic flight actually have reversed the traditional dominance of the airframe in relation to powerplant in sub-sonic flight, so that today the engine and fuel system are becoming the dominant design considerations.

The proposed program for government-financed research on engines to be built and tested by industry after the pattern of the proposed aircraft program to be produced the Bell X-1 series, would be expected to accomplish the following objectives, according to the magazine:

- (1) Allow broader participation of the powerplant spectrum for high-speed flight observers emphasize that U. S. development now often blanks for such promising developments as ducted fans and bypass turbines.
- (2) Allow the engine industry to branch out into basic new design concepts without the urgency to make these concepts into a "bread and butter" production engine and without the alternative of suffering heavy financial penalties for experimental ideas.
- (3) Speed the engine development cycle by applying liberality proven ideas to specific whole engine concepts. Eventually this would provide a method of bringing the experimental development gap between the laboratory and the service-ready operational engine.
- (4) Help the engine industry to cut down the current wide lead time gap between airframe and

Chicago Tribune Poll On Hearings Favors McCarthy

CHICAGO — The Chicago Tribune's poll on the McCarthy Army hearings called last night also found persons casting ballots for the Wisconsin senator.

The poll, by mail and telephone, was held for six days and followed the 31 days of hearings in the McCarthy Army controversy.

Those voting in the poll were asked to vote yes or no on two questions:

1. Do you believe Secretary McNamara and Army Commander Adams and their advisers proved they charges that Sen. McCarthy and his staff exerted improper pressure to secure favored treatment for Pvt. G. David Schine, former committee aide?
2. Do you believe Sen. McCarthy and his staff proved their charges that Sen. Adams and his staff sought to end the inquiry into communism in the Army by threats to retaliate an unfounded report about undue favors sought for Schine?

The Tribune reported today that of the mail ballots, 31,874 voted for McCarthy; 4,816 for the Pentagon Army and 662 were undecided. In voting by telephone, 18,768 were listed for McCarthy; 715 for the Pentagon and 31 were undecided. The total vote was 50,642 for McCarthy; 5,531 for the Pentagon and 693 undecided.

The Tribune said ballots were counted as "undecided" when the voter marked to show that he believed both sides had proved their charges or that neither side had proved its charges.

Longwood

By MRS. BEVERLY PATON
Mrs. Michael Russo has been fined $100 for failure to observe the city's new trailer ordinance. Mrs. Russo was subpoenaed to court last week to answer why she did not comply with this law. She said she considered her habitation not a trailer but a house. Mrs. Russo was represented by Volle Williams Jr., Sanford attorney.

Ordinance No. 124 was unanimously adopted on Dec. 3, 1953, by the city council. Several warnings had been issued and all but two had complied with the law.

April 1 Mr. and Mrs. Russo applied for permission to stay until Mr. Russo returned from a tour of duty in Europe and North Africa. Mr. Russo is stationed with the Navy at Sanford. When he returns they expect to be reassigned. When appearing before the council with this request the council gave its consent that they stay, but the council was in error as they did not rescind this ordinance with an exception to a law is discrimination.

At the trial, Williams asked for dismissal as Longwood has no comprehensive zoning law; no right to prohibit but only to regulate when it affects the health, safety and welfare of the community, and no law enforcing officer is employed to check up to see if citizens are obeying town ordinances.

Weber H. Haines, Winter Park, presented the city's case; that legally Mrs. Russo had no permit that even permitted her to live on the premises in a trailer. In fact she had not complied with the preceding ordinance, he said.

The permit which she claims justified her living on the city lot was issued to Seth Babcock former owner, and contains the following provision for a cottage 12 by 30 feet. Haines said, the only tangible building is a three-sided room attached to the trailer home.

Summing up for the city, Haines remarked the trailer was erected for, and provides correct sanitation but in her own words the adobe was licensed in 1953 and hasn't since carried a tag.

Mayor J. A. Cottingham, sitting as municipal judge, fined Mrs. Russo $100 but suspended all but $25 of the fine if she moved her trailer to a regular trailer park.

The second case to come before the court was T. B. Law's case for illegal permit of use of trailer for living quarters. He furnished a certificate from the doctor saying his wife was too ill to move. He at one time did have a permit but it was allowed to expire without renewal.

Due to the condition of his wife, he was permitted to stay until the doctor has completed treatment. She should be able to be moved the latter part of August.

Mayor J. A. Cottingham has received a note of thanks from several of Longwood's leading citizens and property owners for his active part in extending the water mains in the city.

The letter reads as follows: "By inscribing our names upon this sheet, we seek to break the silence that this is a thankless world. This is by way of expressing to Mayor Cottingham our appreciation of the splendid improvements he has made in the short time he has been in office."

"Bringing order out of chaos in our traffic conditions by the appointment of an honest, competent, experienced officer; "Saving hundreds of dollars by his experienced supervision of the proposed and present extensions of the local water works; "Giving time and energy traveling over three counties during conditions in the other municipalities in an effort to improve local conditions."

"Look down the narrow street, the best medicine in the world."

The Longwood Volunteer Fire Dept. lists these telephone numbers to call in the event of a fire. Members of the volunteer department can be reached by calling Winter Park 25-2542; 26-3131; 26-2331 and 26-2263.

Dillon Helms has returned home from Omaha, Neb. where he played third base position for Rollins College Winter Park. The Rollins College baseball team had been competing in the N. C. A. A. college world series. They returned home victorious with second place.

Worthy Fund Drive Still Underway To Lend Aid To John Courier Family

"I'd do the same thing over again," John Courier said relative to the shooting affray in Oviedo which cost him the use of the lower part of his body.

Courier, who heads a family of six, threw caution to the winds on the fateful night of April 9 and fought with a demented gunman in the house of the Oviedo police chief.

Courier, answering a request of the police chief's wife to check a noise outside her house, came to the door to tell her he saw nothing amiss, and discovered the woman facing a gun-waving madman who was bent on killing his wife.

Courier, without hesitation, went to the attack with a gun he had brought as a precaution. The two men fought on the floor as the woman crept frightened into a corner.

A shot rang out, Courier dropped. He had been seriously wounded. As his life's blood ran out on the floor, a bizarre sequence of events passed before he was taken to a hospital. There, it was found just how serious was his wound—his spinal column had been severed. For weeks his life hung on a slim balance.

After the news of the horrible night was made known, the community set about helping this man who had risked his life. This is obviously not a charity case, so a trust fund was started. Gifts of appreciation had flowed into the fund, which had been used to pay high medical bills. (Expense the first week amounted to $735).

These gifts have not been limited to Central Florida, or to the South, but have come from distant places such as Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston and New York.

Contributors remain anonymous in order that the Couriers need not feel obligated to this or that person.

Central Florida is proud of his effort and a good way of showing this pride is to make a contribution to the trust fund. A burden faces the family through a heavy mortgage on the house and money will be needed to see them through long convalescence.

Checks and money are needed, should be made payable to the "John Courier Fund" and sent to the Citizens Bank, Oviedo. There is no expense of overhead.

Money given to so worthy a cause isn't really spent. It is found in Luke, "Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down and shaken together and running over, shall men give into your bosom."

Distinguished Visitor

Today Prime Minister Winston Churchill, and Anthony Eden confer with President Eisenhower at the White House on ways to strengthen the bonds of friendship which exist between the United States and Great Britain and on how to reconcile some of the policy differences which have come up in recent months.

The British Prime Minister has always believed in the value of personal conferences. It may very well be that his visit to Washington will accomplish a great deal in straightening out some of the differences. He and President Eisenhower are personally aware of the world situation and it is possible that the conference will result in a closer harmony between British and American policy.

Intelligent Americans and Britons realize that while differences in policy are possible between their countries on essential issues there is agreement. The unity of the United States and Britain is the world's best hope for preserving peace and holding Communist aggression in check.

HIS MOVE!

JAMES MARLOW

Asian Plan Peculiar

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sir Winston Churchill and Britain's Foreign Minister Eden, leaving an Acheson-Wonderland plan for saving Southeast Asia, today begin talks with President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles.

There are no optimistic predictions here about the outcome of the conference. The plan, which Eden announced Wednesday in London, is of such a kind that it raises some legitimate questions.

Just how interested are the British in wanting to save South East Asia from communism? Is this Eden plan a joke, a smoke-screen of a stalling tactic to cover up basic British unwillingness to defend Southeast Asia?

It's a strange plan, coming from Churchill and Eden, who prided themselves on wanting a stern stand against Hitler in those days before Munich when other Britons were preparing to bow their necks.

In Indochina, the French have been fighting the Communists for almost eight years. The French are beginning to smash them back. The French are weary. The United States and Britain so far are unwilling to go to their rescue.

So the French are talking about an armistice with the Communists. This armistice, if it comes, may result in opening the way for the Reds to take over all Indochina.

After that, unless the Western Allies can find some way to stop them, the Communists have all the rest of Southeast Asia open to them. So far the Allies have not been able to agree on the way.

The United States is in an awkward position if it tries to tell the French not to sign an armistice displeasing to this country. The Eisenhower administration had talked very big about stopping communism in Asia.

But when the crisis came in Indochina, it did not send in troops nor planes to help the French. Now Dulles wants the United States, Britain, France, and the South Pacific nations to form a military alliance which will fight

Business Is Showing Confidence

NEW YORK (AP)—Business enters the hot weather slowdown season with a show of confidence.

Stock prices rise as traders assess the chances of inflation to outweigh deflation in the months ahead.

Leading businessmen express faith in the future of their own companies and industries.

New plants are being opened, and still others planned, in spite of a year of slackening in general business activity.

More new businesses are being incorporated than at any time since 1947.

Businessmen are setting their sights on fall. For many of them July will be a slow month. While plants will close for vacations, people will stick close to the fans at home and make fewer trips to the stores.

But there is an impressive list of predictions of more prosperity on the way and of industry's planes to grow so it can meet new demands.

General Electric's chairman, Philip D. Reed, says his company expects to sell more in the next 10 years than it did in all the past 75.

Ford's vice president, Benson Ford, says his motor company is considering the "longest" range plan for expansion and modernization we have ever undertaken.

Both of these companies are in the business of making and selling consumer goods. And in expressing optimism both men are acting in their role of salesman. But both the appliance and the motor industry have been putting much of this optimistic talk into concrete form in the way of expansion of plant and equipment.

There are many signs of industrial health right at the moment. Electric power production has been rising since the end of May—but weather helping to boost power consumption for air conditioning systems and refrigeration. Power use is now six per cent higher than this time last year.

Some 48,000 new businesses were formed in the first five months of the year. Dan A. Bradstreet reports this topped the 1953 figure by six per cent. Business failures have been higher this year than last, too. The general slump has taken its toll of marginal firms. But faith in the future burns bright in at least 48,000 corporate breasts.

The food industry is also among the optimistic. Grocery store sales are topping even last year's record volume. Food processors say their sales should continue to grow—a rising population and fairly prosperous one cheers the handlers of vittles.

The farm outlook seems better, too. The department of agriculture says the demand for farm products is holding high. And makers of farm machinery say sales volume is brighter now and looking them to work out of the slump that bothered them in former months.

Confidence in the days ahead is strong. Everyone seems to expect an upturn—the question being when?

Chimpanzee To Go Around World

NEW YORK (AP)—J. Fred Muggs, America's only incorporated ape, sets out next month on a flying trip around the world that will mark a new milestone in the air age.

The celebrated chimpanzee will become the first television star in history to circle the globe by airplane while still in diapers. Neither J. Milton Berle nor J. Arthur Godfrey can make this claim.

Over at NBC, where Muggs has become at the age of 2 a veteran news commentator as co-star on J. Dave Garroway's "Today" show, J. Fred's journey is being accorded more respect than J. Christopher Columbus' first voyage.

"The other day 25 people attended a conference to iron out the details," said a network man with a note of awe. "Muggs listened for a while, then stretched out in the leather seat of an executive's chair and fell sound asleep. He has tremendous self-possession."

Muggs, who is traveling as a goodwill ambassador for the U.S. television industry in bound to be the most popular American tourist of the year for a very simple reason. He doesn't speak English.

Flying via Pan American World Airways, he will hit such key cities as Paris, Rome, Cairo, Hong Kong, Tokyo and Mexico City.

But the trip also holds a sentimental interest for him as he will revisit Africa, where he was born in poverty some 27 months ago.

Today, just 12 months after Muggs entered television, he has become the wealthiest simian alive. He earns $450 a week, has 300 suits, sets hundreds of fan letters each week, owns 4-inch-square ranches in Texas and Florida, and is incorporated under the name of J. Fred Muggs Enterprises. He has also judged several beauty contests, and is an admiral in the Nebraska navy. He has endorsed everything except a tractor.

Wearing a beret and dark glasses, Muggs will take in his entourage his secretary and Girl Friday, J. Mary Kelly; a cameraman; and his two young owners, J. Roy Waldron and J. Bud Mennella.

I went along with the chimp the other day to a children's store to watch him pick out some new clothing for the journey—a suit with morning trousers and pearl gray vest; a white gabardine suit; a red, white and blue bathing suit. But it is an open secret in the TV industry that underneath his fancy gear, J. Fred still wears slacks. It takes time to become a TV commentator.

"We have arranged for a veterinarian to check J. Fred's health of each stop," said Mennella. "But what is in jeopardy is laundry service. Muggs needs 12 changes a day, and I don't know whether any airplane can haul all those diapers."

ances now I don't know how much longer he can stand up under the strain. Television is very hard on any performer's nerves."

Miss Kelly already views the African stopper with dismay. She is fearful Muggs will go native, rip off his store clothes and disappear into the bush.

"We certainly have no romance in mind for him," she said firmly. "We definitely are not going to let him associate with any other chimpanzees."

"He's getting girl-crazy already. He likes to put his arms around them and hug and kiss them."

During his stay in the store Muggs tore down a rack of hats, and jumped up and down in glee. Finally, he playfully refused to put his feet into a pair of overalls held out by Mennella.

"Quit being so silly, Muggs," said Mennella, impatiently. "You're getting so you act like a child."

"Poor little rich chimp!"

"Now there's a Beautiful Roof"

That's what your neighbors will say when they see your new Barrett's Asphalt Shingle Roof. And there'll be more such compliments, too! For the Barrett Asphalt Shingle, with its rich harmonizing colors and neat geometrical pattern, is an eye-stopper anywhere. That's the way the women see it, at least!

Of course, from the man's view-point, the real beauty of the Barrett Asphalt Shingle is its durability. It's a tough shingle—made of high rag content felt, saturated with specially refined asphalt and surfaced with fire-proof mineral granules.

Anyway you look at it—"She's a real beauty."

Mickey Rooney Says Wife Should Handle Finances

HOLLYWOOD — Should the lady of the house take care of the family finances?
Mrs. Mickey Rooney thinks so. What's more, the Mighty Mick agrees. This could lead to all kinds of discussions in homes throughout the land.

"Certainly, the wife should handle the money matters in the home," says Mrs. Rooney. "The man has enough to do in earning the money. He shouldn't have to be concerned with the family budget as well."

Like the three previous Mrs. Rooneys—Mrs. Gardner, Betty Jane Rose, Martha Vickers, Elaine Davis is a beauty and taller than her husband. Elaine also has a business sense. A Compton, Calif. girl, she began modeling when she was 15 years old. And Elaine began early managing her own affairs.

After she married Rooney in Las Vegas on Nov. 23, 1952, she began to take an interest in his tangled financial setup.

"Mickey never handled his own money," she remarked. "He at times had a business manager to take care of things for him. I think that's a mistake. You don't realize where the money is going unless you're in on everything yourself. I'm inclined to spend money wisely."

Elaine took matters into her own hands. They moved into a medium-sized house, nothing too fancy. Both of them went on an allowance. Pretty soon the financial picture began to brighten.

"Now we're happy to be able to buy another home," she said. "Not a bigger house, just one with more grounds. Both of us love horses, and we'd like to have a farm."

Rooney's budget is burdened by alimony and support payments. About $450 goes every week to Miss Rose and sons Mickey Jr., 9, and Tim, 7; $200 weekly goes to Miss Vickers and son Teddy, 4. Despite this hefty outlay, the present Mrs. Rooney said she and Mickey may be able to start saving.

Now 33, the onetime child star appears to be hitting his stride again. He drew good notices for his mature acting in "Drive a Crooked Road" and has a child role in the forthcoming "Miracles at Tokyo." At present he is acting in his own production of "The Atomic Kid," a comedy about a lad who survives an atomic bombing.

His leading lady in the film is the keeper of the purse strings, wife Elaine. It's her acting debut.

Another big piece of news on the Rooney agenda is his television series, "The Mickey Mouse Club," which will start on NBC in August. He is opposing the CBS powerhouse.

Jackie Gleason, but Mickey's bark is not so thick. "I think we can knock off Gleason," said Rooney's manager Maurice Duke. "The kids used to like Gleason because of the crazy cat-walk skits. The kids don't like that so much. And Mickey has always been a kid's favorite."

Cottage Cheese Is One Of Most Versatile Foods

Cottage cheese is one of our most versatile foods. It's Myrtle Wilson, Home Demonstration Agent. It's equally good whether served in a simple mound on crisp lettuce leaves or in a glamorous dessert for the most festive occasion.

Because cottage cheese is such an inexpensive form of high quality protein it has been nicknamed "poor man's meat." An average serving—1/2 cup—furnishes about 50 per cent of the amount of protein needed daily by adults. And that serving costs only about 1 cent!

Since cottage cheese is made from milk it is a concentrate, source of the important food values of milk including calcium, riboflavin (Vitamin B2), and thiamine (Vitamin B1). Yet calorie are low—1/2 cup serving contains about 200 calories. This is only 1 per cent of the average adult daily calorie needs.

Cottage cheese is an excellent food to include in weight-reducing diets. It combines well with other foods in a variety of ways, for dishes generous amounts of protein, vitamins and minerals. It's "filling" with relatively few calories. Most of the cottage cheese you buy is "creamed" cottage cheese. In making cream it has been added to make the cheese moist and for extra flavor. The 1/2 ounce containers hold 1 1/2 cup cheese.

Practically any recipe made with a little different flavor—two-ounce casseroles, 1 lb ground beef, 1/2 lb ground pork, 1 medium onion, chopped, 1/2 cup butter, 2 1/2 cups of cans condensed tomato soup, 1 cup cottage cheese, 2 tea spoons Worcestershire sauce, 12 packages medium noodles, broiled and drained, 1 cup buttered bread crumbs—Brown meat and onion lightly sautéed in butter. Add soup, cottage cheese and seasoning. Simmer for 15 minutes. Arrange layers of cooked noodles and meat mixture in a buttered baking dish (about 12 x 8 x 2 inches). Top with buttered crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven (350°F) for 25 minutes. 1 serving.

THE SMART GROOM HAS Leather on Hand

The formal clothes for the groom are virtually changeless. But it's the throwed choice of accessories that marks the critical all-around man. Never forgetting the long, fine leather gloves and starched bosom shirt, wing collar, white waistcoat for formal evening, black or oxford-grey cutaway with striped trousers, light grey waistcoat, grey ascot for formal daytime. High silk hat and lily-of-the-valley boutonniere on both occasions.

Recipes To Make Sundays Famous

Sunday morning is a perfect time for formal, entertaining. Everybody's relaxed—with a whole wonderful leisurely day ahead. They're in the mood for browsing through the paper, indulging in friendly talk and eating extra good food! People who've dieted conscientiously all through the week feel they can let down the bars a bit on Sunday. And those who don't diet, revel without shame in Sunday goodness.

It's such fun to say, "Come for breakfast after church!" Or, if it's later, "Come to brunch." Fun, that is, if you know the trick of making the meal easy, as well as out-standingly delicious. Surely Sunday is a time when the hostess herself should share in the feeling of comfort and ease.

Sounds magical, doesn't it? But the recipe for just such a meal is sent by Winifred S. Carter, Director of the Household Information Service for Procter and Gamble—together with her recipe for those heavenly gooey pecan rolls that are out of this world with hot fragrant coffee, and the recipe for crisp waffles so good they seem to fall away, leaving only a tell tale trace of crisp on the plate.

Make-At-Home Hot Bread Mix
2 1/2 cups sifted all purpose flour
1 tablespoon salt
3 tablespoons baking powder
1 cup crisp
Mix dry ingredients in large mixing bowl or on a large square of waxed or wrapping paper. Cut Crisco into flour with two knives or a blender until mixture looks like coarse cornmeal. Store mix in a covered container. No refrigeration needed.

Butter-Soaked Pecan Biscuits
2 1/2 cups Hot Bread Mix
1/2 cup milk
Add milk to Mix Blend well. Place dough on board or pastry cloth which has been dusted with flour. Knead lightly several times. Roll dough to rectangle 1/2" thick and twice as long as it is wide. Brush rectangle with soft butter, sprinkle with 1/2 cup sugar mixed with 1 teaspoon cinnamon. Roll as a jelly roll. Pinch to seal. Slice in 1" slices. In bottom of 9" square or round pan melt 1/2 tablespoon butter, add 1/2 cup brown sugar.

DEFRACK SPRINGS—Walton County farmers who keep sheep recently sold their 1954 wool crop more than 1,000 pounds in a cooperative sale. County Agent H. O. Harrison reports.

Anyways, the justices who vindicated Mrs. Nicholson summed up the situation neatly by commenting in their decision that "the courts are not unmindful that age, so far as our sisters are concerned, is singularly relative, and gallantly exact an appreciation and understanding of our lady's age as one of the most gracious virtues in man."

The only problem left is to make other women accept of this same gracious mantle of virtue.

Gypsy Clan Gathers At Hospital After Leader Of Tribe Is Hurt

DALLAS — A gypsy matriarch lay in the hospital, and out on the lawn her dark-skinned tribe camped, waiting and praying. Sometimes the clansmen laughed aloud as their children doted squealing among the trees. Mostly they talked softly in small clusters, and changed from English to a rapid flow of Gypsy dialect when a stranger came near. They kept watch over Mrs. Louise Evans, 75, of Fort Worth, injured in a car wreck.

"She is our elder, the leader of our tribe," said Joe Evans, a Fort Worth coppersmith. "That is why we wait."

Evans, a slim, middle-aged man whose brown mustache almost matches his skin, is the oldest of the gypsy leader's seven sons. If she should die he would become the tribal head.

"No, of course I won't be the King of the Gypsies," he said. "That's foolish. There are many gypsy tribes, and there is no King or Queen. That's just something people like to say about gypsies."

"But she is our mother—and she is a Queen," Mrs. Evans said. "Mrs. Evans suffered from shock, a broken ankle and foot, an injured hip and deep cuts across one knee and her forehead. She was hurt in a wreck near here Sunday night."

"The tribe began gathering the next day. There were about 30 gypsies keeping watch at Methodist Hospital—only part of Mrs. Evans' tribe. Besides the seven sons, she has four daughters, 30 grandchild and 100 great-grandchildren. "Sure, we're gypsies," Evans said. "My mother is a Cherokee Indian and my father was a North Carolina farmer. My great-grandfather came from the old country."

"But we've put a stop to that roaming gypsy stuff. We have been around here and there. We live like anybody else."

"I'll tell you something though. There'll always be gypsies always. And I'll tell you why," he said, clenching down and smiling. "We're proud of being gypsies. That's why."

Women Have Right To Tell Stories About Their Age

A Mrs. Edward Nicholson was haled into a New York lower court recently and charged with falsifying her age on three motor vehicle registrations.

It seems that Mrs. Nicholson, in three separate registrations the same year, listed herself as being born in 1914, 1915 and 1918.

Two Special Sessions justices, cavaliers and wise men both, dismissed the charges, and Mrs. Nicholson brought out of court. At this moment, Mrs. Nicholson's correct age is still in doubt.

But the discouraging part about the story, triumphant as has been Mrs. Nicholson's victory for all time, is that Mrs. Nicholson, who bears about the case is going to conclude she was born at least, in 1914 and most other women are automatically going to add another five years to that, deducing she really was born in 1909.

The normal number of years a woman clips from her true age, if she goes to clip, is five. I see no reason why she should do that, deducing she really was born in 1909.

Tim, glad Mrs. Nicholson took liberties with her own registration, and I wish some brave female would fight the business of revealing her age publicly right up to the Supreme Court.

I can see why my doctor should know my age, why an insurance company should know what the terms of my gamble is. But I most say, most times I can answer those little age questions, about the only reason I can find is simple, uncomplimentary business. I see no reason why she should do that, deducing she really was born in 1909.

As newly as I can figure out, there are two specific types of preservation which are not only acceptable but desired again, indisputably by the most passionate seekers of unvarnished truth. One is a woman's own statement of her years. The other is man's account of the size of a rib he almost thought. These, except on questionnaires, are accepted as facts of life.

It would be very pleasant, of course, if public opinion in conjunction with a woman's age could be truly educated to a point where the whole subject was without meaning. I believe it is Mrs. Marylene Dietrich who is so fond with speculation about how old she is that she now tells everyone back enough to inquire that she is 21. This sounds like a good idea to me, and if I had nerve enough I'd adopt it, too.

Perhaps, even better, though, is Mrs. Nicholson's way of completely confounding the nasty ones by using a different birth year each time.

Strawberry Cream Pie
1 1/2 cups finely crushed pre-sweetened corn flakes or pre-sweetened rice cereal (about 4 cups cereal before crushing)
3/4 cup butter or margarine, melted or softened

To crush cereal: place a long length of waxed paper on pastry board or counter. Push half the cereal down the center of the paper. Make double fold lengthwise in the paper; tuck ends under. Gently roll with a rolling pin to desired fineness. Repeat to get 1 1/2 cups fine cereal crumbs.

To make filling: prepare vanilla-flavor instant pudding according to directions on package. Pour into bowl. Cover with fresh strawberries. Pour 1/2 cup currant jelly over low heat, boiling until smooth. When cool but still syrupy, pour over strawberry topping. Chill before serving.

Construction is underway for an ultra-plush golf course—the Coral Ridge Golf Club—at Ft. Lauderdale. The latest show just nearly a million and a half smacks. Volusia County Kennel Club is inaugurating a special airplane service to bring racing fans from Miami each Saturday. Manager Lake Predicts Game Will Be Tight Action will continue in the six-team Central Florida League Sunday with a three-game schedule that sends the Sanford Cardinals to Groveland. The home club will be out to average a 2-1 decision which Mel Fleischer dealt them in Wednesday night's tight tilt played at Memorial Stadium. Both teams garnered but two hits apiece in the last game. Bobby Lake, Cardinal manager, has tentatively nominated Charlie Thomas to open the game against Groveland and looks for the opposition to counter with their pitching ace, Bobby Rogers. Rogers iron-named a doubleheader against Longwood last Sunday, posting 2-0 and 2-1 victories. "We can look for a tight game," Lake opined, "but they don't get much tighter or closer than the one Wednesday night. They claim this boy Rogers is as good as the Pinacalle pitcher, Conroy." The latter is proclaimed by loop slammers as the hottest pitcher in non-professional competition in the state. Sanford now boasts a league record of eight and six, and, with a few breaks, has an excellent chance to gain second place in the circuit in the coming weeks. Pinacalle is solidly entrenched as the loop-leader and Sanford Navy is second. In other games scheduled Sunday, Pinacalle visits Navy, and Longwood journeys to Clermont.

Three-Game Series Between Yankees, Indians Important

CLEVELAND, (AP)—To Casey Stengel, it's "that big series in Cleveland." Al Lopez calls it "a crucial weekend, but certainly not one of those do-or-die times." No matter how they described it in separate interviews with newsmen, there was little doubt that Managers Stengel of the Yankees and Lopez of the Indians view with respect the three-game series with teams open here tonight. "Sure the Indians are tough," conceded Stengel whose men have a 4-4 record against Cleveland this year. "But we're playing well enough." Here, Stengel referred to New York's current win-loss percentage of .527, right now behind Cleveland's .522, but good enough to win the pennant for the last five years. "Manager Lopez, however, had a ready answer for that sort of speculation. "I don't care what percentage New York had the last five years. It doesn't matter, so long as our boys are scheduled." Separated by four games, the first place Indians and the third place Yankees plan to send their best pitchers to the mound in the series. For New York, it will be Allie Reynolds, Ed Lopat and Whitey Ford. For Cleveland, Mike Garcia, Early Wynn and Bob Lemon are scheduled. Garcia and Reynolds, facing each other in tonight's opener, each has a seven game winning streak going.

OFF TO VERO BEACH—The Post 53 Sanford American Legion Junior baseball team left early this afternoon to resume an exhibition rivalry with the East Coast club tonight. The local team holds a 3-2 victory over the Vero team which was posted in Wednesday night's fracas at Memorial Stadium. Those included on the Post 53 team are, from left to right, Doug Scott, Eddie Barber, Squirrel Bowen, Ronnie Ross, Robert Samuel, Jim Hawkins, and Bob Carter. Standing, Coach Red Hires, Bobby Johnson, Raymond Hardy, Ralph Farina, J. C. Jenkins, Charlie Swann, Howard Alfred, John Clark, Larry Barney, Lawrence Howard, and R. Z. Johnson, Jr., Post 53 Commander.

Winter Park Repeats Win Performance

Darlington Entries Are Just One Shy Of Starting Field

DARLINGTON, S. C.—With the deadline for the filing of entries in the Darlington 200-mile AAA Independence Day Sweepstakes a week away, the tempo of official entrants picked up. Three more drivers, headed by Wally Campbell, AAA's 1933 rookie-of-the-year, and five championship cars without drivers named were reported by Bob Cohen, general manager of the AAA Eastern division, to be in the starting field. Local Legion On Short End Of 10-4 Score Post 53 jumped to a one-run first-inning margin when J. C. Jenkins came home on Ralph Farina's double. Swann teamed with Farina in the third and secured a run in the seventh. Winter Park's scoring was confined to the third—two runs in that frame—and fourth cantos. Pitch Jim Hawkins gave up seven hits in going the seven-inning route. Sanford mustered six off the offerings of Dee Green. Farina recorded two hits in three official tries, while Bob Samuel was also credited with two singles in three batting attempts. Red Hires and R. Z. Johnson Jr. departed with a 15-man squad at noon today for Vero Beach where the Sanford club will attempt to make it two in a row over the east coast outfit. Post 53 shipped Vero Beach in Wednesday night tussle at Memorial Stadium. Hires has named Charlie Swann to carry the pitching burden in tonight's game. Swann teamed with Farina in Tuesday's 2-6 loss. Winter Park and relieved the pitcher after four innings against the east coasters the next night. Both of the Vero Beach games are exhibition affairs and do not contribute to the seasonal record. Groveland is next on the Sanford agenda when the locals travel to Lake County Tuesday. A return engagement is set for the stadium here Thursday. Leo Durscher, in his 15th year as pilot of a National Legion team, is the senior manager of the circuit in point of service.

Nashville Slugger Blasts 3 Homeruns

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Big Bob Lemon, the broad-shouldered lefther from Brooklyn, gleams like a lighthouse beacon in a stormy midnight for the wallowing Nashville Vols. The 25-year-old southpaw slugger rambled three home runs last night to run his league-leading total to 29 and drove in six runs to boost his RBI's to 76, also tops in the Southern Assn. But his battery could not prevent the fabled Vols from losing 13-11 to Mobile in 16 innings for their third straight loss to the Bears and their second 16-inning setback in less than a week. Lemon who leads the Southern in almost every important offensive department and is almost certain to win advancement to the New York Giants, poked a three-run homer in the last of the 13th to keep the Vols in the game after Mobile had tallied three in the top half. But in the 16th, the Bears sandwiched singles by Jim Williams and Bill Kerr around a Norm Larker double to hand Nashville its 16th defeat in the past 12 games. It was supposed to be the seven-inning opener of a doubleheader, but the second game was postponed after the teams spent 4 hours and 12 minutes on the first one.

NO PLACE HERE as Squirrel Bowen, second-walker for the Sanford Post 53 Legion 16th, drove a solid single to centerfield in yesterday's tilt at Memorial Stadium. The Squirrel's base-rap went for naught though, when he was cut-down on a double-play.

Bobby Shantz Being Replaced

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Right-hander Bill Upton was on his way from Ottawa today to take the place of ailing Bobby Shantz with the mound staff of the Philadelphia Athletics. The Athletics placed their spare arm southpaw on the disabled list yesterday after Dr. George Bennett of Johns Hopkins University said Shantz's pitching arm needs at least three more weeks of rest. And the physician indicated the American League's Most Valuable Player of 1933 would be lucky if he ever pitches again. Upton, who played with the Athletics only briefly this spring before being optioned out to Ottawa of the International League, probably will be used mostly in relief.

Writers, Old Friends Join Dempsey On 59th Birthday

NEW YORK (AP)—This was Jack Dempsey's 59th birthday and the boxing writers and old friends of the Manassas Mauler gathered at Jack's restaurant on Broadway to celebrate his Happy Birthday to the "Champ." Still black-haired and 170 at 225 pounds, some 40 over his best fighting weight, the Mauler moved resolutely through the birthday graphs and posing for pictures. "But it was different some 37 years ago when Jack visited the Big Town looking for work. It was a cold town to Jack then. "If it wasn't for the free lunches in some of the bars then I might of starved," said Jack as he pulled on a fat cigar. "They had piles of hard-boiled eggs, too, and if you had a chance you could put four or five in your pocket and on those you could eat for a week." The old Mauler stroked his black-jowled chin and bit into a thick cigar. Year by year the Mauler's popularity grows. "I toured the world," said Nat Fleischer, the Ring Magazine editor who was sports editor of five different New York papers at one time or other when Jack was on the rise. "Everywhere I went, they asked about Jack Dempsey." "What was his toughest fight?" "Getting some money from Jack (Doc) Ezzardis," said Jack with a laugh. Ezzardis was Dempsey's free spending manager. "He used to give cab drivers $1,000 tips." How would he have made out against Ezzardis? "He was too good, too good," replied Jack. "Marciano?" "Too good, too good," said Dempsey again. This from the man who was named "The Fighter of the Ball Century" in The Associated Press poll of sports writers and sportscasters. "He would have knocked them both dead," volunteered a grey-haired bystander who came over to shake Jack's hand.

NL Homerun Tally Drops This Year

NEW YORK (AP)—National League batters, record smashers with 1,197 home runs last season, have tallied off somewhat in 1934, but they still aren't giving pitchers anything to cheer about. Figures compiled by the Associated Press through yesterday's games reveal that senior circuit hitters have accounted for 600 homers this year compared to an even 600 in a like number of games in 1933. The American League is up over last season, 664 to 556. American League hitters connected for 673 homers during the entire '33 campaign. Actually, only seven clubs—the Cubs, Giants and Cardinals in the National League and the White Sox, Senators, Red Sox and Tigers in the American—are showing an edge over last year. The Cubs, who hit 813 at home runs in 1933, lead the National League with 62 and the American with 61 on top in the statistical war.

? WHY ?
Do you know that there is not one road in the entire State of Florida connecting two cities of the same size and the same distance apart that is as poor and dangerous a road as State Road No. 415 which connects Sanford and New Smyrna Beach?
The following petition is the means by which you as individuals may show you are 100% behind those agencies that are and have been working so hard and faithfully on this project.

PETITION TO: THE HONORABLE GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF FLORIDA
THE FLORIDA STATE ROAD DEPARTMENT

We, the undersigned petitioners, respectfully submit the following facts for your close attention, consideration, and action:
The Atlantic beaches of Central Florida have become, and are increasingly becoming, a place to which the visitors to and residents of Central Florida resort for wholesome, healthful relaxation. People traveling to and from the beaches for short periods number many thousands each week, and it is a matter of State concern that these people be furnished with safe and direct roads for such travel. The State officials have already recognized the significance of this fact by completing good access roads to the beaches with apparently the sole exception of that short segment of State Road No. 415 between the Seminole County line and its junction with the new highway near Samsula in Volusia County. This segment of road serves an area, which in the twenty-mile radius around Orlando represents the most densely populated area in the center of the State peninsula, and yet it is probably one of the most obsolete, poorly kept roads in the entire State. It is extremely hazardous by reason of several narrow bridges, narrow and uneven pavement, narrow and sharply dropping shoulders, and excessive unsafe curves. Because of this condition, there have been a large number of accidents on this road, several resulting in fatalities. We feel that continued existence of the road in this condition will reflect adversely on you, the State officials directly handling roads, as well as the remaining people of the State of Florida, and further that it is a matter contrary to the best welfare of thousands of citizens and out of state visitors in this area. Repair or replacement of this road to fit modern traffic needs will accomplish a dual purpose. Not only will it eliminate the unsafe conditions above pointed out, but it will enable this road to carry its just proportion of traffic which is creating a dangerous overload on other beach access roads. It is our judgment that highway safety should be your aim above any other consideration. By reason of the premises, we the undersigned, do hereby respectfully urge that you, our Governor and State Road Department, initiate immediate action toward replacement of State Highway No. 415 from the Seminole County line to its junction with the newly completed road at Samsula in Volusia County, that this matter be referred to all other appropriate State officials whose approval and authority is required to accomplish this purpose, and that the action requested be taken at the earliest possible date so that the increasingly heavy traffic over this road may be moved safely and expeditiously in accordance with the high standards of this State and its agencies.

Joan Foster, Bride

By Alice Ross Colver

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE
THERE were literary books on antique. She brought them home. She read them and made notes and learned a good deal about Queen Anne chairs and the Dutch influence and cabriole legs and Sheraton simplicity and Philadelphia highboys and claw and ball feet and Empire monumentalities and gesso carvings and Meissen plates and Sheffield silver and Sandwich glass. But she did not know any note about running an antique business than she had before.

And here it was December, winter, her work period, was upon her. Before she knew it, spring would be here, when her book must be completed. Yet she had not written a page—not a line!

What ought she to do now? It was Diane who unconsciously helped solve the problem for Joan. She stopped in one Saturday afternoon after the Thanksgiving holiday in early December and was idly watching Joan make an apple pie.

"Have you begun your book yet?" she asked.
"No," Joan was silent a moment. "I'm stuck. Stuck before I've begun. How do you like that?" And she began cutting little holes in the pastry and then daffily and her pie into the oven. "Ten of four, in fifty minutes and it'll be done. Don't let the fidget. Come on into the living room now and be comfy and tell me what I'm going to do. Tempus is fugit and I'm fidgeting." Her light words did not wholly conceal her concern. "If I dared, I'd start an antique business myself and learn the hard way. But that takes capital, a picture of which we have not."

They were back in the living room by this time and Joan waved Diane to the Boston rocker. "I miss my own chair," she said. "Not that I'm not grateful to your mother for buying it. No, you sit there, Diane. I'll take this Captain's chair, isn't it a nice one? I found it up in Mother's attic last week when I went up there to hunt for my skates. It was way back under the eaves and broken. Two legs off. But I fixed them and now I'll refinish it." She dropped into it and patted its arms. "One more chair which we sure needed. When is it you're trying to say—if you can stop my torrent of words?"

"About your book, Jo. I was wondering I mean—well, how do people start an antique business, anyway? Do they borrow, do you suppose? From banks? I should think that had a director in the one here, something might be worked out. Do you want me to sound him out? No harm in asking, you know. No harm in questions."

But Joan shook her head. "No thanks, Diane, but Mr. Banks requires collateral for loans and we have nothing we can put up." She paused, then went on slowly. "But —you're right. There's no harm in questions. So this is what I think I'll do. I'll go see that nice little Mrs. Cochran over in Riverside, put my cards on the table and tell her just why I want to know things and then ask for information."

Diane clapped her hands. "Oh, good! That's a wonderful idea! You mean the little woman who sold you your set of maple chairs—oh, I get anything about soap you and be glad to show a sweet person. And she admires you tremendously, now that she knows you write."

"You think so?"
"I'm sure of it. I bet she'd be thrilled to feel she was helping you. She'd think she was taking a part in the book's creation. She'd feel almost like an author herself. Or perhaps like the heroine. Honestly, I believe you've hit on the solution."

"I hope so," Joan said, seeing a faint gleam that had been shining for a long time taking shape at last. "Maybe I could actually get a job there. Help her out on the days when she has to go off buying. I mean take care of her shop for her or something."

"Maybe you could," Diane's eyes sparkled suddenly. "Look! Let's drive over now and see her about it!"

"My pie!"
"Well, after you take it out of the oven. It still won't be too late. Come on! Let's!"

It was on a Thursday in early December when Joan stopped the car in front of the red-shingled farmhouse on Riverside. She hurried up the flagged walk to the old front door. As she opened it she heard a bell tinkle in the back of the house and a voice called, "That you, Joan?"

"Yes, Mrs. Cochran, I'm here!"
"Good," Mrs. Cochran followed her voice to the front hall where Joan stood waiting. She was a pleasant-looking little woman with a pink face, very dark, lined under an arch of white fluffy hair. She had on her hat and was buttoning her coat as she asked, "I'm glad you got over before I bought. I mean I wanted to tell you a few things. There's a tower coming this morning—a poker. She's one you'll have to watch. I don't like her but I have to do business with her. So a week she picks up for some big houses in New York. Well, I want to warn you to stay with her the whole time." She nodded at Joan. "She's well-to-do. Anything she wants, give her the dividend. Though she's entitled to that. And there's Mr. Caldwell, one of my best customers, who'll be here to get his table. He has just for it. It's the one he's been hankering for out here so there'd be no confusion. She stopped to arrange in the top drawer of an old chest for her gloves. "Oh, here they are." Straightening up, she began pulling them on, her face thoughtful.

"I guess that's all," she said after a minute. "Maybe you'll get some time to write today. I hope so." Her eyes met Joan's in a friendly, admiring way. "Goodness! To think of my having a writer for a helper! Guess I'm pretty classy. But I certainly am glad you turned up last week when you did. I was at my wit's end. Mrs. Stinson has always tended my shop the days I went off to buy and to have her move away was the like the end of the world for me, especially just before the Christmas season. And I can't pay enough for most people to be interested in the job. It has to be someone that really likes antiques. Well, I'll get started. There's a kettle of soup boiling at the stove. I'll probably be boiled down good about noon. Help yourself. You'll find crackers or bread—whatever you want—there in the pantry. And you might turn off the gas under the soap, if you will. I'll be done, in an hour."

"All right. And thank you. I hope you find some treasures today."

"I hope so."
"And don't worry. I'll take care of everything."

"I know you will. The picker's name by the way is Miss Stinson. Mrs. Stinson. It's cold out, isn't it? Well, good-by. I'll be back around six."

She was gone. The bell tinkled in the rear of the house as Joan closed the door. Then she was alone for the first time.

With Christmas only a few weeks away, business had been brisk, but Joan had observed that most of the transactions were in small items priced under ten dollars.

"That's true," Mrs. Cochran had agreed. "Furniture moves slowly. That's why you have to be careful when you buy it. You mustn't pay too much for it, because you have to remember that your money may be tied up in it for a year or more. I have to figure on the cost of repairing and refinishing, too, since I have no husband to help me. I'm a widow, you know, and I have to see to everything that needs doing over to a cabinet man. Believe me, it costs a pretty penny. But if you're really thinking of going into this business, you will be better off than I am, because you'll be together can handle your own refinishing."

"I'm not really going into it," Joan explained. "At least not yet. I just want to learn about it so I can write a book about it."

"I see. But some day you'll be in it, too, Jo."

ALL about FLORIDA

Well, they're teaching chickens to play pinball machines nowadays!

I never thought chickens were very smart until the other day. While riding along a highway I came across flocks of them feeding along the roadside. I slowed down, recalling the days back home in Maine when a Sunday afternoon drive was good for at least a half dozen fryers and a roaster or two. But no, these chickens minded their own business, pecking musically along the roadside. They didn't attempt to cross the road.

Outside of eliminating forever that old pun, "Why does a hen cross the road," I figured there must be something else in it, so when I got home to Hogtown Creek I called the University of Florida Poultry Research Laboratory. My question, of course, was "Why DON'T chickens cross the road?"

I was told that chicks today are fed better, are better cared for and have more fencing. That wasn't the answer I wanted so I asked this one, thinking it ridiculous, "Can you train a chicken?"

"Oh yes," came the reply. "General Mills has been quite successful in training poultry." Still unbelieving, I came back with something about how Sen. McCarthy would certainly investigate any General who wasted his time training chickens. That was ignored—and perhaps it was just as well.

Anyway, I learned that General Mills has trained chickens to play baseball on a kind of pinball machine. It seems the trained chick is in a cage and pecks away at a rubber washer of some kind. When it pecks just right, the washer sets into motion a batter on an electrically controlled pinball machine and it hits a homerun! The chicken then has access to a dish of food. Some of the chicks, I was told, are very adept at clearing the bases.

R. E. Eikenberry, of Coral Gables, Florida manager for General Mills, has shown the exhibit in several places around the state with considerable response from both chicken and baseball fans.

I find the story very amazing except for the fact that chickens must be smarter than people, be-

STEP-STOOL FOR YOUNGSTERS

By DONALD R. BRANN

Provide a child with something that captures his imagination and it becomes a simple matter to get him started on a new behavior pattern. This colorful Pony Stool is one device many parents use when they want to wean the child away from a high chair. It provides just the right amount of additional elevation to permit his sitting at the dining table.

Want the child to wash his hands or brush his teeth? Let him "ride the Pony standing up." This whimsical character quickly makes friends and helps to influence children in doing the many things life on occasion demands. Besides liking to sit and stand on the Pony's back, they associate the need for doing something new with a spirit of adventure.

Place the stool on the dining room chair and the youngster will be raised to "grown-up" height. In the bathroom it can turn all phases of bathroom training into a game that the youngsters will be eager to play. It provides just the necessary elevation to permit the child to brush his teeth or wash his face, or to use other plumbing facilities.

No special tools or skill are required to build or decorate this useful piece of equipment. With a hand coping saw, anyone can easily cut out the sides from pieces of box wood.

cause they know enough to stay off the highway. Chickens aren't so chicken after all.

ASH'S HASH—Ed Frick of Tampa says, "Remember, ladies, no man likes to come home to a supper of cold shoulder and spiced tongue." . . . Ruth Stewart Allen, of Tropical Homes and Gardens tells of a new fly killer. It's made of inconspicuous flakes and can be sprinkled around the house.

There's a man in Daytona Beach whose name is Bromo Seltzer and has a dog named "Alka." . . . Mrs. Minnie Robinson of Tallahassee has a pet turtle 13 years old. She raised it from a turtle, too. . . . Harry Wolfe of St. Augustine, was painfully injured recently in Miami when visiting friends. A glass on a desk blew up in his face. No one knows why. It just exploded.

Florida Marines are telling this one about a two-star general, who shall remain nameless.

During an inspection of an island air base, the General was invited to try out a new flying boat. He took off from the smooth lagoon and all went well until his host, a major, noticed they were about to land on a concrete runway.

"Excuse me, General," he said, "but it would be better if you landed on water—this is a seaplane, you know."

"Why, of course, Major, how stupid of me," cried the General, and he proceeded to make a perfect landing on water.

Rising from the wheel, he said, "Major, I deeply appreciate the tact with which you called my attention to the asinine blunder I nearly made."

The full size pattern is first traced on the wood that pattern specifies, then cut to exact shape. Wherever two parts are fastened together, the pattern shows the exact location. The cute expression is easy to reproduce if you trace the decorating outlines directly on the wood and then paint each part with the color the pattern specifies.

Fresh paint job is assured the Florida driver of this revolutionary two-step speedboat which sports aquafloils below the hull line to lift the boat right out of the water at highest speeds, thereby reducing water friction greatly, and making that high speed still higher. At slower speeds, the craft cruises in the orthodox manner, and is easily maneuverable in the trickiest Florida waterscape.

And all four got into a 20 foot boat! Riviera Beach cop Bill Shearer (center) brought in a near record, 56 pound dolphin in the Atlantic Ocean off Singer Island, and he brought it into an already overcrowded 20 foot outboard motorboat.

Return of the "PINE"

No . . . Pineapples
Don't Grow On Trees

An odd-looking caterpillar-tread tractor used to fertilize three rows of pineapples simultaneously by the Miami Pineapple Plantation Co. located at Delray Beach and Uleta.

By MAURICE LABELLE

Within one year Palm Beach County will be the largest fresh pineapple producing area in the United States.

Plans by one grower call for the clearing of hundreds or more acres to make room for still more plants.

According to local growers, production of the succulent pines will top three million. And, acreage will be stepped up from around 200 to more than 500 acres.

Biggest boost will come from Miami Pineapple Plantation, now located principally in Uleta, just north of Miami, but soon to be united with the company's Delray Beach farm located at the southern extremity of Military Trail, according to Doyle E. Abbott, supervisor of the local farm. Some 300 acres are involved in the transfer, Abbott said.

The company, with approximately 80 acres under cultivation at its Delray Beach farm, is already the largest grower in the county. Pineapples are still not their crop, however—not yet anyway.

Other growers in the county include O. R. Winchester, who has been growing pines for

21 years on his Military Trail farm, and Charles H. Terry, a retired Army major.

Winchester has 30 acres of Golden Abakka, Natal Queen and Smooth Cayennes under cultivation on the farm located west of Boynton Beach. Terry, a newcomer to the field with 2,000 plants on his Ridge Road plantation near the Tuberculosis Hospital in Lantana, doesn't expect his first crop until 1955.

Five hundred acres producing pineapples annually is still but a fraction of the record 5,000 acres which produced more than a million crates in 1909. But the demand for fresh pineapples is not being met and some growers have expressed a desire to attempt to meet that demand.

What happened to the pineapple industry?

According to the State Agricultural Department officials, numerous factors combined to destroy a thriving industry shortly after the turn of the century.

A red wilt called nematode caused extensive damage to plant roots around 1910. Oversupply caused by the importation of more than a million crates from Cuba ruined the market for most growers. And the difficulty in getting potash during World War I helped. The death blow was administered by heavy frosts in 1917-18.

Contributing factors were the closing of the Ft. Pierce inlet by storms in 1909-10 and the lowering of the ridge water table. Pineapples require large amounts of magnesium which was then obtained primarily through the ocean. Closing of the inlet is blamed for reducing the salt-fresh water ratio in the river.

But the history of the pineapple goes beyond Florida in the 1900's.

Actually, the fruit is believed to be of tropical American origin and earliest mention in literature is in Evelyn's "Diary" in the time of Charles II. Though once grown in Britain and Europe, pineapple cultivation is now confined principally to Hawaii, the Philippines, British Malaya, Cuba, Mexico and Florida. It is a one-hundred million dollar industry in Hawaii, ranking second only to sugar. Some 25 million Pickers wearing long, thick gloves are harvesting the delicate fruit which has to be picked individually due to its delicateness and different ripening rates. The pines are placed into crates and loaded into the strange-looking tractor in the photo on right. The same type vehicle is used to truck new plants which are placed in the soil by hand.

Contrary to many popular conceptions about them, pineapples don't grow on pine trees or palms but on a cactus-like plant.

crates of pineapples and pineapple juice were produced there in 1953.

Earliest planting in Florida occurred shortly before the Civil War. They were planted about the same time on Plantation Key and on Merritt Island (about 40 miles south of Daytona Beach). Soon pines were growing on Elliott Key and "Hardly a settler from New Smyrna to Jupiter but had his pineapple patch," according to one early observer.

Export of pineapples in those days had to be by schooner. Flagler's railroad wasn't even a gleam in the old pioneer's eye yet. The pineapples had to be loaded into small boats and loaded again into waiting schooners lying in deeper waters. In the Keys, small shipments were sometimes transported by horsecart to Key West for packing in barrels and then sent to northern markets, mostly New York.

Often, fully loaded ships would arrive there to find the market glutted and prices "down" to 60 cents per dozen from the normal 75 cents to $1 per dozen. Today fresh pineapples bring from eight to 15 cents per pound.

Modern pineapple cultivation in Florida is credited to Capt. T. E. Richards, who started his plantation on Eden Island (45 miles north of West Palm Beach), but later transferred his plantation to the mainland because island bears enjoyed his plants too much.

Prior to 1870, pineapple planting had spread to Volusia, Orange, Lee, and a few other counties. Most of the pines planted before this time were Red Spanish but Egyptian Queens became increasingly popular.

By 1899, acreage had grown to 1325 with 95,442 crates produced. And by 1908-09 a record crop of 1,110,547 crates was produced. An additional 1,294,137 crates were imported from Cuba.

The crash came shortly after in 1909 when the price of pineapples dropped to 76 cents per crate and native production costs were estimated at 95 to $1.05 per crate.

The low point in pineapple production was reached in the '20's according to the State Agriculture Department and by 1945 production was set at 200 acres.

Today, the important varieties in Florida are the Smooth Cayenne, Red Spanish, Natal Queen, Pernambuco, and Abakka.

According to Abbott, pineapples do not lend themselves readily to mechanization. Modern equipment is utilized to clear the ground; fertilize and spray plants, but picking still needs the human touch. Different ripening rates as well as the delicate nature of the fruit are blamed for lack of mechanical means of harvesting.

Due to the pines delicacy, trucks rather than railroad cars are used primarily for shipment today. Growers find it easier to contract for trucks which pick up pineapples at the source and deliver them directly to market.

New York was formerly the chief market, but now Miami, Chicago, Louisville and Baltimore provide large markets also.

Growers are faced with a problem in selling their fresh pines to winter season tourists since normal ripening doesn't always coincide. Locally produced fruit must also compete with that of Cuba and Mexico.

A recently developed technique of "smoking" or "gassing" the pines with ordinary smoke, calcium carbide or ethylene gas may speed up the ripening process by as much as six months. The normal time is about 18 months.

At least one local firm attempted to start a pineapple canning industry, but for some unexplained reasons has suspended operations. Pineapples imported from Cuba through the Port of Palm Beach in summer were canned by the Florida Canning Fruit Co. of Riviera Beach and plans to can other fruits and vegetables had also been formulated before the plant was idled.

But the immediate future for the Florida Pineapple seems to lie in a demand for a superior fruit—a fruit that is ornamental, fragrant, luscious and—at luxurious prices.

 "Ladies and gentlemen, I . . ." The tall, round-faced master of ceremonies with the iron gray hair clutches his throat, his voice rasping to a halt. He tries again. "I'd like to welcome you to . . ." For the second time his voice rises, sounding like he has gargled with crushed razor blades and tobasco sauce. It strangles on a high, quivering squeak.

An assistant races from the wings with a brimming pitcher of yellow fluid. The daily audience of over 1,500 watches, perplexed, seated in Winter Haven's Nora Mayo Auditorium as the MC pours a generous glassful, downs it with a flourish — never stopping for a breath.

Now the voice booms out, rich and clear, like a roll of thunder, as Tom Moore, maestro of Ladies Fair, moves into his pre-program warm up. For five years this daily gimmick, along with constant air plugs Florida-wise, has won Tom the undisputed title of Mr. Florida Orange Juice.

Dragged unwillingly to Florida back in 1949, Tom Moore stayed a week for a series of programs during the annual Florida Citrus Exposition. Put protestingly on water skis for a publicity gag, his enthusiasm for water sports and Florida grew until now he operates his own ski school, appears daily at Florida Cypress Gardens along with the professional skiers. Tom has even abandoned a strict personal taboo against flying, in order to commute from Chicago to Winter Haven on weekends during the summer months. For six months each winter, he moves the entire cast of his program to Winter Haven, with the tourist conscious City of Winter Haven, Winter Haven Chamber of Commerce, Florida Citrus Commission and Florida Cypress Gardens helping to foot the bill.

With the launching of his new show, "Florida Calling," this month, Moore will have a year-around job of "selling" Florida orange juice and other citrus products to the radio public. Originating in Winter Haven, "Florida Calling" will be aired by some 500 stations.

A thrice-honored citizen of Winter Haven, tourist court owner, one man huckster for Florida, Tom agrees that any place in Florida is better than anywhere else. "But let's add a post script to that," he smiles.

"Winter Haven is also better than any place in Florida!"

From right after program time till dark each day the Tom Moore Ski School is in session at the Tom Moore Motor Court which also includes gift fruit stand, gas station, packing house, and boat, bar, and tackle rental.

Just when we think we have everything we could possibly need to make our home well-organized and up-to-date, something new appears on the market. Then we realize all over again that being "just a housewife" is an important and exciting business, and making a success of it is again a wonderful adventure.

All the elements of big business and the rest of a big deal are involved for persuading the budget department (yourself, or family or both) that you really need that new super what-have-you. This takes some fast figuring, to say nothing of a fine working knowledge of applied psychology.

So take a quick look at a world's eye view of what's on the market in that all important field for summer, especially—the refrigerator.

The first great improvement in the new jobs that should bring hearty approval is the revolving doors, a fingertip twists them and turns the whole interior into front-row storage. If you press a button, you can raise or lower the shelves, they'll spin like a piano stool.

The upside-down refrigerator-freezer is another new feature. The frozen-food section is at the bottom and—imagine!—it holds 122 pounds! When you open the inner door with its juice-concentrate rack, you will see plenty of room for a frozen turkey and vegetables by the dozen load. Your new refrigerator will have a place to keep butter "spreadable," and your ice cream "scoopable" or "dipable." Other door shelves store packaged food. There is even a dispenser that hands out juice cans one at a time.

Ice water is on tap without opening the door! Press the dispenser bar and fill up your glass.

Water is stored in a one-gallon container that fits above regular shelves inside the door.

Now that you're all cooled off, take a look at the new ranges.

For those of you who like to barbecue meat indoors, there's a beauty. Although the entire range measures only 30 inches wide, upon opening the door you will find a roomy oven and bonus barbecuer. The spit turns automatically to cook roast, ribs, chicken or lobster. Could you ask for more?

And on into the automatic washers.

There are handy lint traps that can be lifted out with a no-stretch reach. New controls let you set the proper time and temperature for each fabric, even the new synthetics.

The new kitchen cabinets feature custom-arranged drawers. These cabinets come with regular shelves. You can replace shelves with drawers by slipping in the glide, then the drawer. An easy pull brings packages and heavy utensils out to your fingertips.

Another convenience for the housewife is the right-height breadboard. This breadboard pulls out from the center of frame that is same size as the drawer below. For a larger work surface, you can pull out breadboard and its frame and exchange places with the shallow drawer underneath.

All in all, what the manufacturers are offering new in the way of streamlined improvements, conveniences and labor saving devices makes the term "household drudgery" as outmoded as the old-fashioned three-legged iron pot in which clothes were leisurely and surely boiled to disinfection. So if you ever begin to feel sorry for yourself, ladies—just remember what it must have been like, banging over a hot cauldron in the backyard.

PARTY SANDWICH LOAF

This will make a big hit with the gang and it's really a cinch. You can mix the three fillings—ham salad, egg salad and chicken salad the night before, if convenient, and store them in the refrigerator.

Next morning you can fix the fourth filling, blending about two tablespoons hot water with half a five-ounce jar sharp-cheese spread. For "frosting," cream four three-ounce packages of cream cheese with enough light cream ($\frac{3}{4}$ to 1 cup) to make it spread easily. Then slice large tomato into six thin slices.

Next, trim all crust from top, bottom and sides of a day-old loaf of unsliced white bread. Make sure the knife is sharp. Lay the loaf on its side and slice it lengthwise into five even slices, about $\frac{1}{2}$ inch thick. (It helps to use a ruler as a guide to keep slicing straight.)

Spread the first (bottom) slice with sharp-cheese spread. The second slice is spread with half the chicken salad mixture, top this with tomato slices, trimming them where necessary to evenly cover chicken salad. Spread the tomatoes with the rest of the chicken salad.

Place bread slice topped with chicken salad on slice spread with sharp cheese. Spread third bread slice with egg salad, then place it on chicken layer. In arranging layers, one on the other, be careful not to press them together too firmly (mixture may ooze).

Spread fourth slice with ham salad and place it on top of egg-salad layer. Top the loaf with last bread slice, rounded side up, and gently shape the loaf with your hands so all sides are even. Remove any oozing bits with spatula, "frost" the top and sides with cream cheese.

Place loaf into refrigerator for several hours so it will cut easily. If you make it the night before, chill it in a covered box. To serve, top it with sliced radishes and a sprinkle of minced parsley. A sharp knife makes it easy to cut in 10 one-inch slices, and a cake server makes serving easy.

FILLINGS FOR PARTY SANDWICH LOAF

 1 teaspoon grated grapefruit rind

Grapefruit segments

Pour into egg yolks slowly, return to heat and cook 2 minutes longer. Remove from heat and add butter, grapefruit juice and rind. Cool. Red, white and blue are always in fashion, and long may they wave. The patriotic tri-color however, will apparently be confined to the flag that waves over us, as far-sighted Dame Fashion surveys late summer and peers into the fall.

It's going to be a brown season, but not a dull one, we're told. Everyone from Dior to Charles James and Florida designers like Marjoe are showing up with lively brown tones called anything but brown.

If you're one of the anti-brown division (like me) just change your makeup foundation, add a subtle dash of rouge, and you'll find it easy to get into the brown brigade.

Your incoming browns will range from a pale palomino beige (who said palomino meant a horse?) to a burnt sugar brown with a taupe cast. Charles James calls his browns "tortoise" and "tiger." Sometimes the browns are laced with black or brightened with a lighter crossbar.

You'll be hearing about "espresso" brown, a deep chocolate. These shades combine beautifully with topaz and amber jewels, now returning to favor.

Fashion's palette will also star violets, blues and scarlet. The amethyst shades bring winter violets and autumn plums back into the picture.

Last year's red taffeta dance frock still paint a pretty picture on the country club floor, but fashion says green is newer. You're still permitted your flash of scarlet, however, if your personality vibrates to this brilliant shade.

That's the color calendar, projected into the near future. Do you like it?

FLORIDA FACTS

When the hot days are here, try a glass of limeade made from that little fruit which is ripe when it is green. Take it with or without sugar, or ice, and in a few moments you will benefit by nature's own cooling "ade."

The lime — along with the other citrus and banana, pineapple and mango—is classed as a flavoring fruit. All of them are fragrant, too. A dish of any one, or mixed, will give off a delightful odor that is most pleasant in any room.

Hillsborough River State Park has perhaps the most notable rapids in any Florida river.

Scientists claim that scorpions found in Florida, can not sting themselves to death, because they are immune to their own poison. The sting of a Florida scorpion, while quite painful, has never been found to be fatal to humans.

NEW SMYRNA

By JOHN R. HABERMAN

Dr. Andrew Turnbull was a man of remarkable intellect, a wide traveler, and a practical idealist. His travels had taken him to Greece and Asia Minor, where the plight of Greeks living under harsh Turkish rule had touched his heart. His heart was also touched by the beautiful daughter of a Greek merchant in Smyrna. She became his wife.

In 1766 Dr. Turnbull visited East Florida and immediately saw its possibilities. The land was fertile and the climate was just right for settlers from the sunny Mediterranean. So the good doctor took a grant of land bordering Mosquito Inlet and embarked on his project—to provide a sanctuary in Florida for the downtrodden Greeks. They in turn, Turnbull expected, would provide their benefactor with a handsome profit from the broad fields they would cultivate.

Returning to England, Turnbull persuaded two partners to join him—Sir William Duncan and George Grenville. The grant of land on Mosquito Inlet was enlarged to 60,000 acres. And the projected settlement was named New Smyrna in honor of Mrs. Turnbull's birthplace.

The Doctor sailed to collect his Greeks, but he soon found that the Turkish government took a dim view of such an emigration. Consequently, with a handful of Greeks aboard, Turnbull headed for Leghorn, Italy. There he picked up over a hundred Italians and learned that the people of the British-owned island of Minorca were on the verge of starvation, due to crop failures. At Minorca, Turnbull quickly increased his complement of colonists to 1,500 and sailed for Florida.

Late in the fall of 1767 the woods back of Mosquito Inlet began to echo with the sound of axes, saws, and hammers. The Minorcans and the small minority of Italians and Greeks eagerly threw themselves into the work of building New Smyrna.

Everything went well for about eight months. The Minorcans were happy. They found the climate much like that of their homeland, and they saw that their familiar crops, such as grapes, could be grown in Florida. But it was different with the Italians and Greeks. They were wilder, more intractable. They resented their English overseers, and the disciplinary measures the overseers were forced to use to keep them in line.

In August, 1768, bedlam broke out in New Smyrna. Dr. Turnbull had just been there, conducting some visiting planters from Carolina over the plantations. The visitors had complimented him on the progress that had been made, and Turnbull was escorting them back to St. Augustine. They had stopped for the night at a friend's plantation.

That night a horseman rode madly up to the plantation house with a message for Dr. Turnbull.

"The Italians and Greeks have started a riot in New Smyrna!" the messenger cried. "Carlo Forni is their leader. Cutter tried to stop them, but they locked him in the storehouse and are looting the settlement. They're all drunk and running wild!" Carlo Forni was an Italian foreman. Cutter, an Englishman, was head overseer.

Dr. Turnbull was stunned for a moment. He saw the fortune he and his partners had expended on the New Smyrna settlement sinking into the Florida sand like rainwater. But he gathered his wits and sent a letter by fast rider to Governor Grant in St. Augustine. Then in the dead of night he set out alone for New Smyrna.

At his own plantation, four miles from New Smyrna, Turnbull gathered a small contingent of servants and advanced to the scene of trouble, early in the morning. He found the little town wrecked. The streets were littered with debris and empty rum casks. But the mutineers were gone. They were down at the waterfront loading everything movable into Turnbull's ship, which they intended to sail to Cuba.

Cutter, the overseer, was freed from the storehouse and taken to Turnbull's home. He was in a pitiable state from loss of blood. One ear and two of his fingers had been cut off. Soon afterwards he died, thus adding the charge of murder to the list of other crimes committed by the rebels.

But for the present there was nothing Dr. Turnbull could do to stop the rioters as they caroused merrily aboard his ship and leisurely loaded her with the stolen equipment and provisions. Turnbull could only watch helplessly from the shore while the rebels set sail and headed out to sea.

Then—a cannon shot! And two ships flying the British ensign hove into sight. Governor Grant's men-of-war had come in time.

The rebels immediately surrendered, all except 35 of the worst, including Forni and the ringleaders. They launched a boat and made off down the coast. Four months later, almost dead from exhaustion and exposure, these diehards surrendered on the Florida Keys.

Carlo Forni and two ringleaders were convicted and sentenced to execution. But one of the trio was pardoned on the condition that he be the executioner of the other two. The legal authorities in British East Florida believed in expediency.

All the other rebels were set free and returned to their labors on the intervention of Dr. Turnbull in their behalf. He felt that they had learned their lesson. Besides, men in prison could not work his fields.

But the "uprising of 1768" was only the beginning of trouble in New Smyrna. The dread scourge of malaria became the bane of the colony. Against that deadly killer there was in that day no defense. Eight years after its founding, only half the population of New Smyrna remained alive.

In 1777 the remnant of the Minorcans, discouraged and worn by long labor and sickness, abandoned the colony in a body. With the encouragement of the Governor, Patrick Tonyn, who held office at that time, they moved to St. Augustine. They left behind them, in the ghost town of New Smyrna, their coquina-lined wells as everlasting monuments to despair.

UNCLE JACK'S ANIMAL
By GENEVIEVE T. SEBELON

Mitzy Mo was a tame crow, black and shining as coal, with a beak of his own. His bright eyes gleamed with mischief, and as he perched on the porch rail of the Brown's house, he cocked his head this way and that as he watched Davey Brown whistling a willow whistle. Davey looked at Mo.

"Now what are you thinking up?" asked Davey. "I know you are going to get into trouble again, I just know it!"

"Caw, good morning," said Mo. "Good morning yourself," returned Davey. "Now don't do it, whatever it is. You know Grandpa said he'd wring your neck if you stole any more of his things."

Mo walked up and down the railing. He did know what Grandpa Brown had said, but he enjoyed picking up little things and hiding them about the house. He did not know why. Nearly all crows are thieves, attracted by small bright objects, such as jewelry, pins, beads and other things they can carry in their strong beaks. And they hide their loot in hard to find places. Mitzy Mo had a cage, but he used it only for sleeping. He had the run of the Brown house, and his family had learned not to leave any small, bright objects out in the open. Grandpa Brown had been particularly annoyed just last Sunday, for while dressing for church, his gold cuff links had disappeared. He had hunted high and low for them, getting angrier by the minute.

"I left them right here on my bureau," he exclaimed. "That thieving crow took them. Davey, if he does that again I'll wring his neck. Come and find them, right away!"

Davey stopped his own preparations for church and hunted. He found one cuff link on top of a picture, and the other in a corner of the davenport. As the Browns started for church (a little later), Mrs. Brown said:

"Davey, I declare you'll have to keep Mo in his cage if you cannot teach him to stop stealing. It's a great nuisance!"

So, as Davey sat on the steps, whittling, he wondered how he could stop Mitzy Mo from getting into trouble. He would just have to watch him all the time. He glanced at the crow, who returned the glance with a gleam from his bright eyes, as much as to say: "Why look at me? I'm not doing a thing!"

"Pretty boy, pretty boy," coaxed Mitzy Mo. "Pretty boy, nothing," said

Davey. "You're a bad boy, but you know it. Bad boy, bad boy." Mitzy Mo learned easily.

"Bad boy, bad boy," he croaked and Davey laughed, in spite of himself, just as his friend Ernie from next door came through the hedge.

"Come on over and see our new television set," he invited. "I'll just put Mo inside the house first," said Davey. "There's nobody home except me this afternoon." He thrust the crow inside the door and ran over to Ernie's, where the boys were soon watching an exciting cowboy television show with loud noise and action.

Right in the middle of all the shooting and cattle rustling and fast riding, Ernie's mother came in from the kitchen.

"Davey, there's something wrong over at your house!" she called above the noise. "Your crow is squawking so loud I can hear him from the kitchen. Maybe he has his foot caught in something!"

Davey jumped up and ran home, Ernie at his heels. As they went in the back door, they saw a man run out the front door with a bag in his hand. Mitzy

UNCLE JACK'S ANIMAL STORIES

Mo was flapping excitedly around, screaming at the top of his voice "Bad boy, bad boy, bad boy!"
The silver drawer in the buffet was open, Mrs. Brown's jewelry box was lying open on the bed, bureau drawers were open in Grandpa's room and clothing scattered around. The whole house had been ransacked! Davey called the police!
By the time the Brown family returned home, the thief had been caught with his pockets full of jewelry. The silver and clothing were in the bag he had carried. When the excited Browns identified their property it was returned to them, including Grandpa's gold cuff links.
"What do you think of Mitzy Mo now?"
"Mitzy Mo is okay," said Grandpa, placing the cuff links in their velvet-lined box. "At least when Mo steals things he hides them right here in the house. Mitzy is okay!"
"Ha, did you hear that?" laughed Davey, as he stroked Mo's shining feathers.
"Okay, okay, okay," croaked Mitzy Mo, very pleased with himself. He seemed to know that from now on his neck would be perfectly safe!

Military Assumes Guatemalan Control

GUATEMALA (AP)—Leftist President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman resigned under the pressure of the army and military reverses last night. He handed over the government reins to a military junta headed by Col. Carlos Enrique Diaz, 39-year-old army chief of staff.

Diaz in a broadcast pledged the army to continue the war against the invading exiles led by Col. Carlos Castillo Armas, but the switch in government appeared to signal the end of the Communist's strong influence on the regime. Arbenz had led Army leaders are known to have become increasingly opposed recently to the left-wing government.

Warning Issued Against Trifling With Court Edict

DALLAS (AP)—The leader of the Negroes' anti-segregation battle has indicated his organization will stand for no trifling with the Supreme Court's school desegregation edicts.

Thurgood Marshall says the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) will go to court against local school boards which balk.

Marshall arrived yesterday for the annual national convention of the NAACP in this segregated city. As special counsel for the NAACP, he was a possible factor in the May 17 decision of the Supreme Court which outlawed segregation in public schools.

"While the government wants to circumvent the Supreme Court," he said, "we are going to circumvent the government."

"Since the Supreme Court spoke, there is no use listening to any body else."

"If it has to be held, the school boards will be the defendants."

However, he would not deny present segregation governs the right to speak out against the court's ruling. And he said he favors court action to compel a fusion of Negro students to schools only as a final resort.

Today, Marshall was discussing with other Negro lawyers how to handle any possible suits. The lawyers will confer with state NAACP presidents tomorrow, opening a day of mass defections from his cause. He said the convention will consider other fields in which it will fight segregation. He mentioned transportation, housing, recreation and employment. But he added, "schools are most important to me."

Passengers Slide From Burning Plane; Two Die

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—John B. Rankin ate breakfast today with his right hand. His left hand was still wrapped in heavy bandages from friction burns received last night when he and 30 other passengers slid down a rope from a burning American Airlines plane that crash-landed after colliding with a Navy Beechcraft here.

Two Naval Reserve officers died in the crash. Rankin, 35-year-old Louisville, Ky., employee of a fishing tackle firm, slid to safety after a woman passenger stalled in front of him, afraid of the 25-foot rope plunge. "Lady," he told her, "we've got to go."

He said he grabbed her with his right arm and slid down the rope by his left hand. He suffered severe hand burns.

Helicopters Take Air Bent On Rescue Work

Approximately 116 Taken Off Train Stranded By Raging Flood On Border

LANGTRY, Tex. (AP)—Unconfirmed but reliable reports of new cloudbursts sent helicopters into the air despite severe flying weather as dawn broke today—seeking to free several hundred persons trapped by floods in this Mexican-U.S. border area.

An estimated 119 persons—150 on the Southern Pacific Railroad's Sunset Limited—were trapped. About 116 train passengers were taken off last night.

Maj. William Hughes, in charge of one group of the 14 helicopters, said he had reports he believed were accurate that from 8 to 10 inches of rain had fallen overnight in the drainage area above the line, forming a wall of water 10 to 15 feet high.

He said the aircraft took off in a rain and into a low overcast this morning, despite working until 10 p.m. CST last night.

The officer reported that the marooned travelers were in high spirits and in good physical condition.

He said his report of new cloudbursts came from ranchers and others in the sparsely settled area above the line, forming a wall of water 10 to 15 feet high.

Strolling In Sanford

City Manager Warren Knowles is credited with this bit of philosophy, "Knowledge is the only thing we can find information about."

Quite a number of local and area people attended the dinner meeting Saturday night at Orlando held by Florida Democrats to honor James M. Wilgan, recently elected state Democratic chairman, and to build party harmony.

Clarence Gay, state comptroller, was in charge of the affair. Attending from this vicinity were Mrs. Roy Tillie, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thurmond, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Nichols, secretary of World Missions, and three large boxes of women's clothing to the Stewart-Rebstock School in Tennessee, and a large amount of heavy clothing to Church World Service for overseas.

Mrs. P. T. Petty and Mrs. C. C. Howard assisted Mrs. Nichols in packaging the clothing.

In order to meet the demand at Week Washes Spring, according to Peter Schaefer, general manager, instead of seven under-water bullet showers are being offered daily and 10 or more on Saturday and Sunday.

Nearly 1,000 names were collected Friday and Saturday by the Chamber of Commerce on a petition aimed at getting improvement action on State Road 415, according to Mrs. Georgia Hall, who maintained a table for signing the request, on behalf of the CoC.

The organization was cooperating with E. O. Shubert, Jr., New Smyrna Beach real estate broker, originator of the campaign. He is next sitting at Orlando, Mrs. Hall said.

Nehru, Red Premier Call For Settlement

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Prime Minister Nehru of India and Premier Chou En-lai of Red China called jointly today for an Indo-Chinese political settlement creating free states "which should not be used for aggressive purposes or be subjected to foreign intervention."

A communique issued after Chou's departure for Rangoon, Burma made no mention of an armistice in the Indochina war. His seemed to indicate they took it for granted an armistice will be achieved there soon. French Premier Pierre Mendes-France has promised his people one by July 30.

First Info Of Talks Released

Recommend Action On EDC

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill declared today they will press forward with plans for collective defense of Southeast Asia, regardless of whether peace negotiations for Indochina are successful.

In a communique, they also expressed confidence that further delay in the creation of a European Defense Community and ending of sovereignty in West Germany would hamper the effort to bring about a settlement.

The communique was the first formal statement out of the four-day round of talks between British and American leaders.

It left unanswered the critical question of when an international conference to create a Southeast Asian Community will be called.
