

Administration Denies Secret Campaign

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House denied Thursday that the administration had made any "attempt to provide disinformation to the U.S. media" in its secret campaign to destabilize Col. Moammar Gadhafi and deter Libyan-backed terrorism.

The denial, issued by White House spokesman Larry Speakes in the name of national security adviser John Poindexter, was accompanied by a non-committal response to questions on whether disinformation was disseminated abroad.

Speakes, reacting to a report in The Washington Post, stood by statements made by administration officials in late August that U.S. intelligence reports showed Gadhafi gearing for a possible resumption of his support for terrorism.

The Post said the disclosures in August, which first surfaced in The Wall Street Journal, reflected false information generated in accordance with a secret plan approved by President Reagan to keep Gadhafi off balance.

While emphasizing the original Wall Street Journal story, which detailed the multifaceted war of nerves against Gadhafi, "was not authorized by the U.S. government," Speakes said Poindexter considered the report "generally correct."

The White House characterized the Wall Street Journal story, published Aug. 25, as "authoritative."

The campaign against Gadhafi, adopted at an Aug. 14 meeting of Reagan and his top national security advisers, was outlined in a three-page Poindexter memo.

Although Speakes would not discuss its contents, the Post reported the memo said the U.S. plan "combines real and illusory events — through a disinformation program — with the basic goal of making Gadhafi think that there is a high degree of internal opposition to him within Libya, that his key trusted aides are disloyal, that the United States is about to move against him militarily."

Despite the subsequent news reports in late August — based on comments from White House officials — that Gadhafi was preparing for possible new terrorist actions, the Post said the Poindexter memo concluded the Libyan leader had been "quiescent" on the terrorist front.

Speakes insisted there was no contradiction between this observation by Poindexter and the guidance offered by White House officials in August, when reporters were told that the administration was stepping up overt and covert pressure on Gadhafi in response to an increased threat of terrorism.

"Quiescent," I would assume, applies to the fact that there had been no overt (terrorist) activities," Speakes said.

Administration officials acknowledged at the time there was psychological warfare dimension to the campaign against Gadhafi, as well as an attempt by the CIA to promote internal opposition to his regime.

However, Speakes said he had been assured by Poindexter that in pursuit of those goals, "there was no attempt to provide disinformation to the U.S. media."

Speakes would not comment on whether any such attempt was made to channel disinformation on U.S. actions or intentions through foreign media, but pointed out, "The use of the news media by any government is not the only way to spread disinformation."

The Post said a State Department planning memo on implementation of the Libya policy called for U.S. officials to provide background to reporters on political instability in Libya and the "threat of resurgent terrorism." It also called for "foreign media placements" by the CIA, the Post said.

The State Department and CIA refused to comment on the report.

At the time the plan was adopted, administration officials insisted the intent was not to provoke Gadhafi, but acknowledged that might be one result. The principal objective, as outlined by Poindexter, was to keep Gadhafi "preoccupied" and "off balance" and to deplete him as "paranoid and ineffective."

Casino Foe Sponsors Atlantic City Trip

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Opponents of a Florida initiative on casino offered Thursday to jet both gubernatorial candidates, legislative leaders and reporters to Atlantic City for a first-hand look at the effects of gaming on neighborhoods.

Jack Eckerd, the millionaire owner of a drug store chain and the chairman of No Casinos, Inc., will pay for a charter Boeing 727 for the Oct. 14 trip, said the vice chairman of the anti-casino group, Lt. Gov. Wayne Mixson.

Steve Pajcic, the Democratic nominee for governor, was considering the trip and Republican Bob Martinez had accepted, spokesmen said. Incoming House Speaker Jon Mills, incoming Senate President Ken Jenne and minority leaders in both houses have tentatively agreed.

Navy Drug Ring Said Smashed

WEYMOUTH, Mass. (UPI) — Authorities detained five Navy personnel and implicated six other sailors and a Marine Thursday for alleged involvement in a cocaine ring that supplied the South Weymouth Naval Air Station, officials said.

Navy Cpt. Robert Perrault said the seven implicated personnel could face charges later.

"There may be some flight crew personnel who used the drugs," Perrault said at a news conference. "I don't know of any other use while on duty."

"There was no indication that anyone's performance was affected because of his drug use."

Michael McGorty, spokesman for the Norfolk County District Attorney's office, earlier said, "They (Navy officials) are in the process of apprehending these people for military court martial proceedings."

The military action followed the arrests of nine civilians on cocaine trafficking charges during the past week, officials said.

Some of the cocaine was sold on the base and some made its way into nearby communities, McGorty said. "The Navy has characterized it as the major supply of cocaine to the base," he said.

McGorty said the Navy informed him that five of the military suspects on the base were allegedly involved in cocaine distribution and the remaining seven in possession of cocaine.

McGorty said officials were still seeking another 18 civilians in connection with the investigation.

Gardening

Following Basic Guidelines For Planting Can Save Time And Money

When was the last time you planted a tree or shrub? If you've been thinking about it, the best time is during late fall and winter months. Now, this isn't a hard and fast rule, because the way a plant is packaged at the nursery has a lot to do with the best time to plant it.

There are a couple of exceptions to this fall and winter planting rule, however. Evergreens and palms fall into this category. Evergreens are best planted in August or early September. And, palms should be planted during the summer rainy season for best success.

Nurserymen prepare stock for sale in one of four ways. They may be "bare-root," which means the roots are bare of all soil. They may be offered in a "packaged bare-root" form, with the bare roots packed in moist sawdust, bark, or peat moss. Some plants are sold "balled-and-burlapped," with the root ball in soil wrapped in burlap or similar material. And, you can find many plants sold as "container-grown" specimens, in which case the root system isn't disturbed at all until it is removed from its container at planting time.

For the most part, "bare-root," "packaged bare-root" and "balled-and-burlapped" plants will have a higher survival rate if they're planted in the late fall or winter. "Container-grown" plants can be added to the landscape anytime. But, you'll probably pay more for plants sold in containers.

When setting the plant, the first step is to dig a hole. Be sure you dig it large enough — at least 6 inches deeper and wider on all sides than the root mass of the plant. Keep the sides of the hole straight down rather than sloped. Loosen the soil in the bottom to allow for root development.

Your next step is to add some soil amendments to the earth you've removed from the hole — soil that will be used to fill in around the roots when you set your plant. Soil amendments are things like compost, pine bark or peat moss. They help hold water and nutrients better in our sandy soils.

Mix one part amendment with every two parts of soil you plan to use in setting the plant. Then, place about 6 inches of the amended soil back in the hole. Pack this soil down fairly well, so the plant doesn't settle after it's set.

Next, stand the plant upright in the center of the hole, and turn it so that its best side is most visible. Make sure there is plenty of room for the roots when working with a bare-root plant — make a cone-shaped mound of soil in the bottom of the hole and arrange the roots around it. They should be spread naturally, not cramped or crowded. For a balled-and-burlapped or container-grown plant, handle the soil ball gently — be careful not to break it.

Make sure you place the plant at the right level in the soil. Planting too shallow causes the roots to dry out. Planting too deep can suffocate roots, and cause the base of the trunk to rot. On bare-root plants, you can usually tell what the right level is, because there is a color change where the base of the trunk meets the soil line. With balled-and-burlapped or container-grown plants, line up the top of the soil ball with the soil surface.

Don't try to remove the burlap on a balled-and-burlapped plant, unless it's a type of material that will not rot. Simply roll the material down away from the top of the soil ball after setting it in the hole — it will decay naturally. Container-grown plants are usually sold in plastic pots, which must be removed and discarded before planting.

After the plant is set, you're ready to fill up the rest of the hole with the amended soil mix. Water thoroughly. After the water settles, fill the rest of the hole with more amended soil, and water again. Finally, make a rim of soil a few inches high and one to two feet away from the plant's trunk. This saucer-shaped basin will help hold water, and direct it to the roots of the plant. Give your newly set plants a good drink at least once a week until established.

Remember, a beautiful home landscape can represent a major investment, a sizeable portion of which is accounted for by trees and shrubs. Plan carefully, and buy only from reputable nurseries, and take care of your new plants properly as soon as you get them home. Getting new plants off to a good start can have a lot to do with their health and appearance for many years to come. Proper care should begin the day you bring a new plant home. And, it's best if you already have the planting site ready.

If you follow the basic guidelines for planting new trees and shrubs, you could save time and money — and, be a step ahead in your efforts to develop an attractive landscape.

Happy gardening!

American Business Women's Annual Observance Day Held

The mission of the American Business Women's Association is to bring together business women of diverse backgrounds and to provide opportunities for them to help themselves and others grow personally and professionally through leadership, education, networking support and national recognition. Central Florida Area Council members from Adventure Charter, Bee Line, Central Florida, City Beautiful, Futura, New Visions, Nu Vistas, Orange Heritage, Orlando Auction, Osceola Charter, Seminole Sunrise, Tomorrow's Women and 21st Century and fourteen other visiting chapters from Florida, Georgia, Texas and California, attended the 2nd Annual American Business Women's Day on Sept. 27 at a luncheon held at the Omni International Hotel, Orlando. Over 300 women witnessed this special observance which recognized the nearly 46 million working women of the United States.

The presentation of colors was made by Scout Troop No. 48 of Park Lake Presbyterian Church. Dawn Farrell, co-chairman, delivered greetings from the area chapters. Roll call of the area chapters was made by Shirley Whitney, council secretary.

The occasion, "A Commitment to Excellence," was given by Ros Barbaree, chairman of this year's 2nd ABWA's observance day. The welcome from the city of Orlando was given by Commissioner Pat Schwartz who presented the honored guest speaker National Secretary-Treasurer Pamela J. Bratton of Austin, Texas, the key to the city of Orlando. The introduction of the fourteen visiting chapters from other cities in Florida, Georgia, Texas and California was made by Emily Butler, council co-chairman.

The highlight of the afternoon luncheon was the presentation of National Secretary-Treasurer who is expiring for the National President's Office at the National Convention to be held in Kansas City this October. Elsee Sanford of Orange Heritage presented Pamela J. Bratton of Austin, Texas. She held her audience's attention as she gave the women a recipe for success in the world of business, one should have courage, commitment, be an achiever, know where they are going, understand your goal, do your share, networking, meet others, work as a team. This dynamic young woman deserved the outstanding ovation she received from her listeners. Congratulations to Mrs. Bratton, Attorney Vicki Anderson of California, and Betty Parker, candidates for national officers. Betty is one of the 1985-86 Top Ten Business Woman.

A tribute to the late Ann Haire, who served as president of the chapter, was given by Victoria Nathan Killins of the City Beautiful Chapter. This young lady served as toastmistress for the afternoon and did a great job keeping the humor of the afternoon throughout the luncheon.

Presentations were made by Sue Emmons, 21st Century Chapter, and door prizes were won by many of the women present. ABWA looks forward to the 3rd annual American Busi-

Husband's Idea Of Charity Flunks Test

DEAR ABBY: We had been married for 15 beautiful years when a young married woman who works with my husband talked this fine, Christian family man into committing adultery. She is very plain and doesn't look the type, but she kept after him, telling him what a poor love her husband was, so he felt sorry for her and that's how it happened.

I am sure my husband didn't lust after her; it was more like an act of charity. He told her that he had never broken his marriage vows before and he didn't intend to break them again, so she shouldn't expect it to become a habit.

Abby, would you say it was adultery even though it was done out of charity?

Please don't mention the name of this town. The population is a little under 18,000, and you know how folks talk in a town this size.

SINNED AGAINST

DEAR SINNED AGAINST: Adultery is adultery, regardless of the circumstances. That kind of charity should not only begin at home, it should end there.

DEAR ABBY: Last year I was widowed, so my daughter and son-in-law took me on a little trip to cheer me up. When I returned, I learned that my neighbor, who had been a dear friend of many years, came to my home and took my old dog to the veterinarian and had him

Dear Abby

"put out of his misery" — that's the way she put it.

Granted, the dog was on his last legs and he wouldn't have lasted much longer, but I was devastated. She explained that my dog would have to be put to sleep soon anyway and she knew I wouldn't have the heart to do it, and she thought she was doing me a big favor.

I just cannot get over the unmitigated gall of this woman to have taken it upon herself to do such a thing. My daughter thinks I should take legal action against the neighbor for kidnapping my pet and putting him to death, and also the veterinarian who performed the job. What do you think?

STILL IN SHOCK

DEAR STILL: What happened was presumptuous and outrageous. But a legal judgment will not compensate for the pain of your premature loss. Your neighbor undoubtedly meant to do a kindness for a dear friend. Forgive her.

CONFIDENTIAL TO D.J. IN NASHVILLE: Your suggested

11th Commandment, "Thou shalt not get caught," is very catchy. But if you obey the first 10, you won't need an 11th.

DEAR ABBY: The fact that too-tight jeans may cause male sterility is nothing new. I wrote this little jingle back in 1970: If your jeans are too tight in the crotch

Your parental potential is bad. Better let out your seams just a notch. If you hope to be somebody's dad!

Let Your Doctor's Advice On Infant Inoculations

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — As prospective parents, we are trying to make an informed decision as to whether our child should undergo inoculations for diphtheria, polio, etc.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've read that leg lifts are not a recommended exercise, but I can't recall why.

DEAR READER — Leg lifts are an effective way to strengthen the lower abdominal muscles.

DEAR READER — One of the great breakthroughs of modern medicine has been childhood inoculations, because they have prevented much suffering and death.

I suggest that you follow the recommendations of your pediatrician. Although he or she may not wish to give your child all the infant shots, clearly your child should have some or most.

Make an appointment with the pediatrician now, before your baby is born, to discuss this and other issues of child care.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have what my doctor calls a sebaceous cyst on my nose.

DEAR READER — I do not know of any method that prevents the formation of sebaceous cysts, the oily collections that commonly occur in blocked pores.

Her son-in-law, Richard Keogh, said when his father-in-law was living one of his biggest complaints was, 'Where's the salt and pepper.'

"I'd forget to put it on the table," Mrs. Gleason confessed.

Salt and pepper shakers have been produced in just about any material and shape imaginable. Some depending on design and or material can have great value, but Mrs. Gleason said, "I don't pay that much mind, because there's no sense getting excited over something like that."

Her collection includes a bit of everything from an Amish family made of metal, to ceramic cabbage heads with faces that could have inspired Cabbage Patch Kids.

A favorite with real kids, she said, "are, I think, the little ice cream cones. They've caused as much excitement with the children as anything I have. There's one vanilla and one chocolate."

Some of the entries in Mrs. Gleason's collection are from other countries, including salt and sugar containers from Yugoslavia. She explained that odd mix by saying, "they don't have pepper. They don't have any seasoning of that kind, so instead of putting salt and pepper in they put salt and sugar. And you see there's no holes," she said of the tiny lidded bowls. "I thought it was odd."

Another oddity Mrs. Gleason has determined within her collection is the absence of a set of Union soldier hat shakers.

"These little Confederate hats, you'd say they're as cute as a button. But you'd say, well where's the Yankee hats? You know I've never seen any Yankee hat shakers and I've never seen anybody else that's seen any."

"No way. Nobody has ever seen any Yankee hats. I'm sure I would have had them if they'd produced them. I've had these for a long time. But there's no such thing as Yankee hat salt and pepper shakers," she said.

Mrs. Gleason does have shakers that are watermelons, outhouses, a skillet and fried egg, cable cars, Alcatraz prisoners.

The most unappetizing is a set of false teeth shakers and the most risqué, a reclining female nude.

She has little gravestone shakers that were given to her by a friend who was later killed in an auto accident. Then there are the turkeys that always go on the Thanksgiving table.

Behind every set of shakers there's a story of a place and the person who gave her the set, Mrs. Gleason said.

A collection of salt and pepper shakers, it seems, can come to represent a history of the family and friends of the collector. The hobby is out of the hands of the collector, who learns to live with these collectible gifts and who knows when opening most any gift package that it most likely contains another salt and pepper shaker.

PBS To Air 'The Africans' Despite Controversy

By Mark Schwab
UPI TV Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — A month before its airing, a major new Public Broadcasting Service series called "The Africans" was branded by a Reagan administration official as propagandist and offensive.

Filmed in 16 African countries, France and the United States over four years at a cost of $3.5 million, PBS says "The Africans" is the most comprehensive television study of Africa ever attempted.

"I think it is superb television — provocative and stimulating," said Ward Chamberlin Jr., president of WETA-TV, the Washington, D.C. PBS station that co-produced the series with the British Broadcasting Corp.

But Lynne V. Cheney, chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, which helped pay for the series, vehemently attacked it as an "anti-Western diatribe" and demanded the NEH name be stricken from the credits.

The attack may well boomerang on NEH. For when "The Africans" debuts Oct. 7 at 9 p.m. EDT (check local listings), the controversy generated by the criticism will only ensure a larger viewing audience.

WETA spent more than $600,000 in endowment grants for the program. The BBC put up $1.4 million, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting $200,000, the Public Broadcasting Service $300,000 and the Annenberg-CPB Project, $927,000.

"Under guidelines of the endowment, balance is required," Cheney said in a letter to WETA.

She said when she saw the program she was "appalled."

"The thesis is to blame all the moral, economic and technological problems of Africa on the West."

PBS says "The Africans" is the centerpiece of its fall season.

Those who stick through the nine parts will see stunning photographs of searing deserts, jungles thick with life, and an oasis in the highlands — along with the dark side of what was once the dark continent.

The guide is a black African, Ali A. Mazrui, a political scientist who studied at Columbia University and Oxford, who teaches at both the University of Michigan and the University of Jos in Nigeria, and who blames the West for many of Africa's problems.

"The foreigners come, they take and they depart, often bequeathing decay rather than development," Mazrui said.

Mazrui and his crew braved quicksand, guerrilla soldiers, precarious bridges and unstable political regimes to present the first view of Africa "from the inside."

Mazrui is so well connected that while the crew was filming a ceremony presided over by President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, the president recognized Mazrui, interrupted what he was doing and went to greet him in Swahili.

It is Mazrui's familiarity with the subject that helped breed the contempt.

Cheney labeled the series "one man's soapbox" and the Reagan administration official reserved her harshest words for a 90-second segment in the final part of the series. She said it glorified Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, not exactly President Reagan's favored son.

Last week, a 20-minute segment of the nine-hour program was screened at the National Press Club in Washington, D.C., followed by a question-and-answer period in which Mazrui defended the program.

"The series is tough on the West. But it is also tough on Africa and tough on Islam," he said.

The theme of the series is Africa's "triple heritage": what is indigenous, what has been contributed by Islam and what has been imposed or acquired from the West. Besides looking at how Africa came to be the way it is today, Mazrui also analyzes the problems and proposes solutions.

At the heart of the controversy is not really the subject matter. It is the balancing act that PBS must play between public funding and its great public promise — providing an alternative to the offerings found on commercial television.

In an editorial written for The Wall Street Journal, Hodding Carter, assistant secretary of state under President Carter, strikes a nerve:

"Public television's great failure in 1986 is not that it is too slanted to the left or anywhere else," he wrote. "It is that it has lost its nerve. That is the result of many forces not the least of them the philosophical hostility of this White House to federally supported television in any form."

Public television's mandate is that it not give us the same old gruel found on ABC, CBS, NBC and commercial cable. It is to rise above the muck, treat adults as intelligent beings, and present thought provoking programs, especially ones that take an unpopular view. Being exposed to alternative ideas gives us the ability to judge an issue for ourselves.

As Carter writes, "If not on public television, then where?"

So while Cheney may not like what she sees, it is the nature of public television's mandate to not please everyone.

When we want to know about America do we ask the Soviets for the information? Of course not.

When WETA and the BBC wanted to learn about the real Africa, they found a respected African scholar educated in the U.S. and England to do the job.

America has not cornered the market on truth. Truth is truth, whether it comes from American or African lips. And with "The Africans," PBS leaves it to you to sort it all out.

Would you have it any other way?
