Working Through College

The Federal Bureau of Education recently issued a book entitled "Self-Help For College Students" in which were listed innumerable ways by which those who aspire to attend institutions of higher learning, may earn a part, or all of their expenses. The volume is interesting and timely in view of the steady increase in college enrollment throughout the country. Practically a million young men have matriculated in universities and colleges this Fall, or something like a hundred thousand more than attended the same schools last year. For those who have remained away because they lacked the funds an encouraging word is furnished by Dr. Walter J. Greenleaf, government specialist in higher education.

Forty-six percent, or nearly half of all college men, are making some effort to earn at least part of their expenses, Dr. Greenleaf discloses. Of all the young men registered in colleges last year one out of every three was at least partly self-supporting while one sixth of the total number paid their way entirely.

Hundreds of ways are mentioned by which students are earning money. Many college men are engaged in trades, including paper-hangers, carpenters, plasterers, masons' helpers, house painters, interior-decorators, window dressers, sub-station operators, radio announcers, photographers, watch repairers and countless others. "Barbering," says the book, "requires little time to learn, can be done in spare time and is fairly profitable when done either in local shops or independently in the students' rooms." Many students drive taxis, act as chauffeurs, work as auto mechanics or filling station operators while others obtain places as salesmen, tutors, stenographers, time-keepers, telegraphers, cashiers, soda dispensers, newspaper correspondents, teachers, watchmen, yard-keepers, furnace tenders and thousands of other jobs.

A college education costs on an average of seven hundred dollars a year, Dr. Greenleaf has estimated, while economical students may cut this figure considerably. The increasing number of means by which a boy may "work his way through" no doubt has been largely responsible for the fast increasing attendance in higher institutions. The costs of going to school have become so reasonable, and so many opportunities for making money have been held out as inducements to ambitious boys, that there is little excuse now for not obtaining a college education.

With Mrs. Owens In Congress

Every day or so we pick up an out-of-state newspaper, or a national magazine or other periodical and read something about Florida's first congresswoman, Ruth Bryan Owens. In every instance the articles have been of a complimentary nature, praising Mrs. Owens' work in behalf of her district and Florida. There can be no doubt that she is making a great record in Washington and that she is attracting the attention of the nation. These news articles, interviews and editorial comments are convincing testimony of that fact.

One of the most interesting observations that have come to our attention is one appearing in a recent issue of the Nation's Business, published in Washington. The periodical tells of an incident, which clearly illustrates Mrs. Owens' ability to meet her colleagues on an even basis. "A New England man," said the magazine, "was baiting her the other day about her financial success in getting money out of the federal treasury to assuage the woes and enhance the bank accounts of her constituents. He dwelt upon the appropriation of $4,250,000 she had swindled and irresistibly commended to the budget bureau, to the president, to the board of directors and to the leadership of the house of representatives, and to the house itself, for freeing her constituents from the ravages of the Mediterranean fruit fly.

"He reproached her with intending presently to tax him and all other New Englanders, federally, for confining Lake Okechobee in Florida to its banks and for draining all adjacent marshes so that, through sugar culture, federally sky-highly protected, they might turn all remaining impetuous Floridians into millionaires.

"Contrariwise," said he, "when we had a destructive flood of large proportions recently in New England, we repaired all the damages ourselves without asking the federal government for a penny."

"Those listening listened for a sharp retort. From any man it would have come. From the new member from Florida it did not. She turned innocent and admiring eyes upon the New Englander and then with a smile in which reverence and mockery were radiantly joined she exclaimed: 'And to think that we were all as noble as that before we migrated to places like Florida and Oklahoma!'

"That New England member of the house will curse the proposed federal appropriation to drain Lake Okechobee, and it is here confidently prophesied he will vote for it. It is sad to think of what local chamber of commerce could do to the federal treasury if the districts in which they are situated should all take to electing Ruth Bryan Owens or Edith Nourse Rogers or Ruth Hanna McCormick.

"Some realistic wag once remarked: 'Womanhood is not an ideal. It's an occupation.' The women in the congress, thank heaven, bore the Capital City very little by talking about 'womanhood.' They attend to business."

DON'T BLAME THE CHURCH

The story and lyric character of the Rev. Rex Proakey, thirty-eight year old Le Mars, Iowa, Evangelical minister, which was revealed after his death from self-inflicted wounds that followed his holdup and robbery of a bank, doesn't reflect discredit on the cloth even though the church's clothing critics will profess their opinion and endeavor to make capital of it. To our mind the action of the clergyman suggests a defective mentality rather than a desire for law and a desire to rob. This opinion is based on the fact that he was not in need of the funds that he received from the bank. It is action in using his own automobile with the State license number plainly visible in getting away from the holdup bank and later his act of self destruction. We hardly think anything more is necessary to prove the unfortunate young man morally irresponsible.

The rate is one of the most unusual in the entire history of the country. According to all information available the minister was the husband of a wealthy wife and was always well supplied with funds.

SATURDAY EVENING SERMON

BY REV. W. E. FUGH

Lesson Text: Mk. 10:23-25; James 1:14-17, etc.
"Who is Not in Debt?"

There is wisdom to be found in asking questions. Jesus was approached by many during His life who asked Him questions about God, about life, about duty. Some of these questioners were not sincere. Others came who honestly sought His answer to serious questions. In every instance Jesus gave answers perhaps of a nature altogether unexpected, but answers that taught deep and abiding truths. It is of vast importance that we know the right answer to the question as to God, our conduct, or faith, or works. The Scripture references given for this lesson study reveal God's mind on all these, and make manifest the fact that all men are indebted to God and to one another.

On a certain day one of the scribes came to Jesus with an important question. In addition to the Ten Commandments given by Moses, the Jewish teachers had added numerous other rules and regulations for the guidance of the people. Naturally many of these were within themselves insignificant. Yet all were faithfully taught and came to be a burden upon tender consciences. Now amongst all these laws, there must be at least one that is more important than the rest. Eager to have an expression from Jesus, the scribe asked Him, "What is the greatest or first commandment?" The answer is well known, but so well kept.

But we wish to note that the scribe was right in coming to Jesus with his question. Amongst us at the present time there are many questions as to what is meant by a Christian life. Live, what does a Christian mean in for justice and pleasure, who is my neighbor, what is my obligation morally? True answers to these and such like questions will be found only in the Bible and in the teaching of Jesus. Take your Bible and there find the wisdom of the ancients, yet a wisdom all together applicable to the present.

Jesus' answer states the principle that every man is hopelessly in debt. But there are

STILL LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

Oscar dePriest, Chicago's negro congressman, is apparently still looking for trouble. In a Seattle address delivered the other day dePriest, among other things, promised to visit the senate rest rooms of his district, convenience for no other reason than to give Senator Heflin the opportunity of throwing him out.

We seriously doubt if Mr. Heflin has ever entertained the slightest thought of what might come of the burly negro who has more mouth than brains but utterances similar to those attributed to dePriest in Seattle and elsewhere are bound to eventually make trouble that may assume serious proportions. Certainly the fiery Alabama petrel has the courage to attempt dePriest's physical removal from his presence should he determine on such a course.

One has only to read the negro's speeches to understand his position in public affairs, which is to get his hand just as deep into the national pork barrel as possible. He has his chair, seat at the head of the pie counter.

WHY ESCAPE?

MIAMI HERALD

Among the innumerable weekly comics is one which depicts a luntic who escapes to see the world. What he sees each Sunday drives him back to the production of the institution, because outside the humans seem to be just as crazy as inside.

The other day 60 policemen played hide and seek for nine hours among the girders of the Hell Gate bridge, New York, in an effort to capture a patient of the state hospital for the insane on Ward's Island. He crawled his liberty, climbing the dangerous girders and waving his hands at the pursuers. Finally he was captured. Now who showed more sanity, the lunatic, or 60 officers who devoted their day to chasing him? It is little wonder that impris-

Clipped from long years of service as ruler of Philadelphia and things political in Pennsylvania Vare mastered the upswing in Philadelphia in September by an overwhelming majority, but it was perhaps the

SANFORD GARDEN CLUB HOLDS FIRST MEETING WITH EXCELLENT PROGRAM

By Mrs. Henry Wight The first meeting of the season of the Garden Club of Sanford was held at the Woman's Club Friday morning, with an excellent attendance, and in reply to a roll call of summer lessons and garden observations many points of great interest and value were brought out by the members. Reports showed all the circles actively cooperating with the Beautification committee, and carrying out their programs according to schedule. The Beautification Committee, of which Mrs. Harry Heeren is chairman, reported the planting of many palms in incomplete streets and parks, some of these donated by the city nursery, others donated by the Garden Club, and maintained by the circles among which the work was apportioned. Mrs. Heeren also told of giving away more than three hundred purple hyacinths, and of the excellent assistance of her committee members. The experimental work of the club, as directed by Mrs. W. E. Watson, has resulted in the introduction of several new garden materials, and the Burston Bay Chestnuts grown by various members of that committee, were voted to be used in the city parks. Mrs. Watson also reported a number of purple hyacinths to be given away to club members calling for them on Monday morning. Miss Maude Cameron reported the fine work of the Florida Horticultural Society, and of the spider lily in any one who would like to add these to their gardens. The lectures and slides committee told of the showing through the courtesy of the Milane Theater of the film, "What is happening in the landscape in Florida." The fine work of the program chairman was also given to the club, as this is the first general meeting since the attractive year books were issued. It was Mrs. Galloway's originality which resulted in the clever system of the circles making their individual reports for the books. Mrs. W. M. Scott, recently returned from Europe, gave a brief and most charming resume of some of her garden observations in England and France, and it was announced that the end of her talk that she would address the Welfare Department of the Woman's Club with a more extended travel talk, and the garden club was extended an invitation to be the guests of the department at its November meeting. The main feature of the meeting was the splendidly prepared and delightfully rendered paper of Mrs. Kate S. Dutton on America's Greatest Garden, the Arnold Arboretum, and its wonderful keeper, E. H. Wilson. Mrs. Dutton exhibited a most beautiful slide in selecting from a great mass of material available on her subject, just the salient points that held the strongest appeal for her hearers, and their generous applause was evidence of their enjoyment. It is hoped that this fine paper may be put in permanent form for a more general distribution. Mrs. Curlett, state chairman of Lectures and Slides, requested that all members having ready spots in their gardens communicate with her at once as she is planning to make photographs for use in her work as representing Sanford. The club will not reassemble as a whole again until the annual meeting in February, when elections will be held, and the luncheon which has been such an enjoyable feature of the year. This function will be in the hands of Mrs. George DeCates and a competent committee, and a well known speaker from out of town will be the guest of honor. Fifteen invitations for membership have been extended, and those accepting will be guests of the circles of their choice until the annual meeting.

News Notes On Agriculture

By Alex R. Johnson Dept. Vocational Agriculture Semole High School. Give The Young Pullet Comfortable Quarters To Insure Winter Eggs Success with fall and winter egg production is going to depend largely on the quarters in which the birds are housed, says N. R. Mehrlhof, poultryman for the agricultural extension service at Gainesville. Any sudden change of weather conditions will have a direct bearing on subsequent egg production. The young pullets should be provided with a house that will keep them comfortable. For the lighter breeds such as leghorns, two to four feet of floor space, and from eight to ten inches of roosting or perch space is recommended for each bird by Mr. Mehrlhof. A little more space is recommended for the heavier breeds. He also says that plenty of feed and water space must be provided for best results. The birds need plenty of ventilation, this making it necessary to make the house too tightly constructed. On the other hand the birds must not be allowed to roost in drafts. A great percentage of birds are brought about by the birds being in drafts or in a too crowded house. Some of the things to consider relative to poultry houses are ventilation, freedom from drafts, dryness, sunlight, convenience, roominess, and economy. Look around and see that everything is ready for the birds about to lay. Egg production this winter means more money for the producer. Keep the birds and the eggs safe from the snake parasites in their production. Three dollars and eighteen cents profit per hen for eleven months production seems to indicate that proper feeding and care of poultry is a money making business. The above record was made on sixty-nine hens by Mr. P. N. Purdy, of Sanford. Mr. Purdy is President of Seminole Poultry Club and was registered in the Poultry Evening Class conducted by the agricultural department last spring. The movement of mixed vegetables from this section is assured for this year with the announcement from Chase & Co. that they are adding a vegetable department to their organization. The growing of mixed vegetables will not only tend to cut down the delivery average but will also build up the soil through the practice of diversification and rotation. One million paper white narcissus bulbs for planting stock have been brought into the local district for expanding the bulb acreage this next season. Mrs. Caswell Honors Miss Olyve Newman

Pink and blue formed the outstanding color notes used for decorations and appointments at the bridge party given Friday afternoon by Mrs. H. D. Caswell at her home on Magnolia Avenue, honoring Miss Olyve Newman, recent bride-elect. Quantities of pink and blue were distributed by little Miss Olyve and Miss Caswell. The young pullets should be provided with a house that will keep them comfortable. For the lighter breeds such as leghorns, two to four feet of floor space, and from eight to ten inches of roosting or perch space is recommended for each bird by Mr. Mehrlhof. A little more space is recommended for the heavier breeds. He also says that plenty of feed and water space must be provided for best results. The birds need plenty of ventilation, this making it necessary to make the house too tightly constructed. On the other hand the birds must not be allowed to roost in drafts. A great percentage of birds are brought about by the birds being in drafts or in a too crowded house. Some of the things to consider relative to poultry houses are ventilation, freedom from drafts, dryness, sunlight, convenience, roominess, and economy. Look around and see that everything is ready for the birds about to lay. Egg production this winter means more money for the producer. Keep the birds and the eggs safe from the snake parasites in their production. Three dollars and eighteen cents profit per hen for eleven months production seems to indicate that proper feeding and care of poultry is a money making business. The above record was made on sixty-nine hens by Mr. P. N. Purdy, of Sanford. Mr. Purdy is President of Seminole Poultry Club and was registered in the Poultry Evening Class conducted by the agricultural department last spring.
