Federal Deficit Fuels Inflation

Trying to find a consensus of among the experts on what is happening to the U. S. economy or how to cure its afflictions is like looking for a needle in the haystack, but at least the leading economists agree on a few things.

Among them is the fact that the recession bottomed out a few months ago and the economy is exhibiting a reasonably strong recovery. Accordingly, most of them did, the American consumer should unzip his wallet to buy the things he has put off buying during the recession of the last

From all of the apparent evidence, however, John Q. Public has not responded as the economists expected him to respond. Sales of almost everything except the necessities are lagging and economists are worrying about a "consumer recession," asking how to improve "consumer

We don't think that the economists have to look far for reasons. If there isn't one, there should be a law of economic behavior which holds that the consumer cannot develop any more confidence than he sees in industry and government.

How can the consumer have more confidence, for example, than the sophisticated people on Wall Street who voted to send the Dow Jones index plunging below 800 recently.

Is it possible for John Q. to substitute his limited knowledge of the economic machinery for the widsom of the Congressional Budget Office which noted that the economy had indeed responded well to recent medicine, but that it would likely sag again next year?

Or should John Q. believe that labor is practicing moderation when, for example, teachers, who are in great oversupply, engage in reckless strikes around the country?

If he turns to his morning newspaper John Q. is likely to discover that half of the businessmen who are quoted might say that even the better times we are experiencing are temporary - merely the result of people buying things as a hedge against price increases that are expected later.

And the last place that John Q. can acquire comfort or confidence is in Washington where Congress is acting as if there is no fiscal tomorrow. From experience he knows that if Congress spends $70 billion more than taxes produce the prices of everything will go up.

The average American may not have a textbook knowledge of economics, but he does have a practical one that was learned in a hard school. Nobody has to tell him to be more frugal and prudent when the value of his income has decreased at the same time that the prices of necessities has gone up.

Would that Congress learned the same lesson.

Unthinkable War

Total war remains unthinkable in the nuclear age. That fact is the central fact of our time. It bears repeating The Defense Department has raised its estimate of the number of persons who would die because of a Soviet nuclear attack on U. S. missile forces from 800,000 to between 3.4 and Even the highest estimate is unrealistically low, if such an attack leads to total war. It probably would. Once the needlelike ballistic missiles start flying back and forth through the blackness of space between Siberia and Montana, nothing is likely to stop them, short of total destruction.

Civilization has survived before by the skin of our teeth. We have faith that it will again. But it will do so only if enough people in all countries realize that survival depends upon recognition of the dangers of total nuclear war.

Another descent into dark ages would probably last longer than before. The biological basis of life on earth could be damaged if not destroyed. It would not be a matter of keeping a few sparks of learning and tradition alive in isolated monasteries. It could be a return to the caves. Our country has a unique responsibility for leadership in helping the human race adjust to the enormous technological hange in conditions for its survival.

Are Federal Controls Out Of Control?

assume command of the nation's economic life should take heart. The process is already well begun - assuming, that is, that what is busily abuilding in Washington is what we mean by government of, by and for the people,

"A massive expansion of governmental controls over private industry is clearly under way," charges Murray L. Weidenbaum, an assistant secretary of the treasury in the Nixon administration and now director of the Center for the Study of American Business at Washington University in St. Louis.

It is more than merely an intensification of existing activities, he says. In good measure it is a new departure, and it is costing not only industry but the American consumer and taxpayer

The notion of benign and wise officials making altogether sensible decisions in the society's greater interests is wrong, pays Weidenbaum. "Instead, we find waste, bias, stupidity, conflicts among regulators and, worst of all, arbitrary and uncontrolled power." He cites chapter and verse in a recent publication by the Tax Foun-

As an example of both trivia and inter bureaucratic conflict, an old Labor Department requirement still on the books gives detailed instructions concerning the size, shape, dimensions and number of toilet seats it must maintain for its employes. The department also requires that some type of lounge must be adjacent to women's restrooms.

However, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission demands that male toilet facilities, although separate, must be equal to those lounges must be built adjacent to the men's toilets or the women's lounges must be

It is not just big business that falls under the all-seeing eye of the regulators. A small, 5000watt indio station in New Hampshire had to spend more than $26 just to mail its license renewal application to the Federal Communications Commission. An Oregon company operating three small television stations reports that its renewal application weighed 45 pounds.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission mistakenly put the products of a small Wisconsin toy manufacturer on its "banned" list as unsafe. When the error was called to the commission's doctor would remove the sutures. After waiting attention it replied that it was not about to recall 250,000 lists "just to take one or two toys off." The company was forced out of the toy that the sutures should not be removed for two business and 75 people lost their jobs. It is ironic, says Weidenbaum, that the commission specializing in ordering companies to recall their products if any defective ones have been produced, refuses to recall its own product when Sobered in a variety of ways over the months, reduced by ...imiliation to the level of everyman. the congressman from Arkansas says by the time the nation learned of his indiscretions he was so debilitated by pills, alcoholism and Fanne Foxe he was very near death.

"I'm glad the thing in Boston happened," he explained, referring to the night he came blearyeyed out of an audience to join Miss Foxe the stripper in the spotlight of a sweat-stained supperclub stage. He says he doesn't remember the event precisely, having consumed "five quarts of vodka" in the previous 24 hours, but he's sure the publicity that destroyed his career may have saved his life: "If I'd have gone on like that, I'd have been dead in two months." #### Sinai Plan Gains Approval ... WASHINGTON (AP) - A House committee has approved the administration's plan to send American technicians to monitor the Sinai accord, clearing the way for final action on the matter by Congress next week. A Senate committee on Friday released the text of four secret agreements forged by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in negotiating the Sinai settlement, removing their disclosure as a stumbling block to action.

ROME (AP) - Vandals with a grievance against the phone company set fire to seven of its installations during the night, knocking out telephone service to more than 1,000 homes, police reported. Several newspapers said they later received anonymous telephone calls claiming the fires were set to protest a recent rate increase by the phone company.

Terrorists Attack Airport

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Arab terrorists attacked Beirut International Airport today, spraying Lebanese security men and civilians with machine gun fire in an apparent attempt to hijack an airliner. Initial reports, unconfirmed by Lebanese authorities, identified three of the gunmen as Libyan, Palestinian and Syrian. One was killed and two or three were captured in a gun battle that littered the airport terminal with casualties. Airport employes said an Egyptian woman passenger and a Lebanese army commando were killed. The wounded included at least six Egyptians, one Lebanese employe of Middle East Airlines, two army commandos and four policemen.

Every investment has management. Are you thinking of no management or relatively little management? Think of stocks and bonds. Did you ever watch a serious security investor? Step nto a stock broker's office at the opening of market for five days unning and observe. You don't know what management problems are until you've seen the maneuvers of a stock buyer in a down market. A call from a tenant complaining about a stopped p drain will seem like a pleasure compared to a margin call from your stock broker.

But if you don't want any or relatively little property management there are many capable real estate management firms who will take over this job for you at a nominal fee. Dear Mr. Saxon,
