

Miracle at your doorstep

· So what's new? News from China, Russia, Vietnam, the Moon and Mars. Is that all there is? While news from far-off places seems to dominate the headlines, life goes on and things happen right here in Central Florida that are of far greater concern to you.

In this day of miracles, nothing has replaced the newspaper for keeping you informed of what's happening around your own neighborhood: weddings, engagements, births, deaths, church news, school news, police news, social events.

Where else do you get local sport news? Who helps fill quotas during fund drives, promotes safety, fights pollution, and backs every cause whose aim is to make this a better place in which to live? Your newspaper, with all its services and features is perhaps the greatest single force for service to the public and the community. Our goal is to make it continue to fill every possible need in a bigger and better way in the future. This is your newspaper . . . a miracle on your doorstep.

I'd be the first one in favor o the three-day weekend; but as the 80 year old World War I veteran said in Jacksonville today, "we've not going to march in the Veteran's Day Parade" unless Congress changes the date back to Nov.

> Veterans Day will be celebrated October 23rd . . . and that's a lie in itself, isn't it?

And then there's that champion of "truth"...Mr. Agnew who charged that Senator McGovern "tries to obfuscate the issues in emotional rhetoric and reckless and groundless insinuations of corruption and scandal in high

First of all - obfuscate means to darken or to confuse. Therefore, Mister Vice President it is not McGovern who is issuing those obfuscating statements; it's none other than the FBI. So, don't obfuscate the already cloudy issue, C.K.?

Now if that wasn't enough, Mr. Agnew added that McGovern had broken a promise of last May to "avoid inflammatory rhetoric." Which leads me to question if the Republicans, including Mr. Nixon haven't really broken one of the more important lessons in life....the Ten Commandments..."Thou shalt not bear false witness...'

Make room, Diogenes.....we're all seeking the truth, and nothing but the truth.

If there is one hazard of everyday living in which the old saying "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" is certainly true, it is in the case of fire.

Always true from the days when brush and forest fires swept into the frontier towns and wrecked havoc to these times of complex construction and drastic changes in neighborhoods, it is imperatively demanding in the explosive areas of Central Florida.

And in none more so than Seminole County where governmental boundaries are under common sense pressure to adjust to the '70s and do away with the concepts of yester-years.

We are moved to make this comment as this is "Fire Prevention Week" and it is a campaign which this year is aimed at the place where most fires destroy not only property but lives, The

We trust that other fire departments are as wide awake to this opportunity to spread the gospel of prevention as is the Sanford Fire Department.

For what the expert fire-fighters of this rapidly modernizing department are about is something which is so simple and makes such good sense that it deserves to be copied.

Under the direction of Fire Chief G. Manning Harriett, this story of home fire prevention is being told to the elementary school classes. Easily read and clearly diagrammed plans for protection from fire hazards in homes are being furnished the youngsters.

In fact, if he hadn't held the high office he did, Lincoln wouldn't have been asked to say a word. It was this matter of protocol alone that put him on the program.

They had a "main speaker" - Edward Everett, perhaps one of the great classical orators of history. But it took some discussion before it was decided that the chairman include in the invitation to the president this request; ". . . Everett was a thoughtful man, and when he had completed his speech he sent a copy of the text to President Lincoln, noting that it might help in avoiding duplication of thought or sentiment.

Carl Sandburg reports that Lincoln looked at the voluminous manuscript and cited a remark by Daniel Webster. "Solid men of Boston make no long orations." Whether Lincoln wrote his own speech on the back of an old envelope, while on the train heading for the ceremonies, is difficult to establish as fact or fantasy. History has just about forgotten Edward Everett, as least for his role at Gettsburg, although this was not true at the time. Everett got the big newspaper play-his speech took up two full newspaper pages - and was widely praised.

Lincoln's remarks got little immediate attention, and even this included biting criticism. Everett began: "Overlooking these broad fields now reposing from the labors of the waning year, the mighty Alleghenies dimly towering above us, the graves of our brethren beneath our feet, it is with hestitation that I raise my poor voice to break the eloquent silence of God and nature. . . " He broke that silence for a hour and 57 minutes, eloquently. So President Lincoln had a hard act to follow, and an audience which must have been a wee bit on the jaded side. There were a few reporters, however, who praised it. The Springfield (Ill.) Republican said of the speech: "It has the merit of unexpectedness in its verbal perfection and beauty." The next day, Everett wrote to President Lincoln: "I should be glad if I could flatter myself that I came as near to the central idea of the occasion in two hours, as you did in two

Mirror Reflects Much Bad Today

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

The constant traveler about the United States these days finds it very difficult to be optimistic about the future. As affluence has advanced beyond most imaginings, the quality of life seems to have declined seriously in many, many ways. I'm not talking just about those things the politicians and some other figures mean when they say "quality of life" - the pollution of air and water, the rampant crime in the streets, the deterioration of city services, etc. There is something much bigger and more important missing from American life. And the saddest part about that is that millions upon millions of Americans don't know it because they never had it.

To speak of the "good old days" is to lay oneself open to easy scoffing, good-natured or otherwise. There is some validity in that kind of criticism. Political analyst Richard Scammon once snorted: "The good old days; those were the days when mama boiled the wash. Agreed. Many of the shortcomings of the past are forgotten as recollections of good times spread a golden glow over everything. But I'll just defy my younger riends and associates and say flatly that a lot that went n was better than what goes on today.

One hardly knows where to begin and no short report ike this can more than brush the surface. I'll start by saying there was a great deal more simple dignity in life. A short few decades ago, freedom and opportunity were cruelly denied to blacks and other minorities (their numbers were then much smaller). Its vital bond with freedom is broken. Wherever I go, and I travel 50,000 to 75,000 miles a year to all corners of the land, I see on almost any given day more thoughtless, selfish, inconsiderate, disorderly human behavior than I saw in months in earlier times. Yes, yes, there are far more people today, but that just isn't the whole story.

We like to blame the carnage on the highways on defective cars. There is a point there. But a thousand Ralph Naders couldn't produce safety out of the mad, selfish scramble which enlivens our roadways. When we're not in cars, most of us these days travel in the great big bus in the sky. It's a marvel of speed and technical efficiency. But almost everything a human being has to do to get to an airplane, sit in it, get off of it, get his bags and go on his way involves a herdlike clashing of elbows that is painfully demeaning. We like to blame city decay on government neglect and lack of rebuilding money. Again, the complaint has some merit. But much of the mess is simply disorganized human behavior. The cities are an ugly portrait of people who don't care, who litter streets and lawns, scrawl

One Man's Opinion

Financial Plight Of Cities Worsens By DON OAKLEY

City governments are in a financial hole and it's getting deeper, reports Commerce Clearing House. Revenues of all city governments in the country totaled $37.4 billion in fiscal year 1970-71, an increase of $4.7 billion over the previous year.

But the city expenditures totaled $39.1 billion in 1970-71 making for a net loss of $1.7 billion. This was $200 million more on the minus side of the ledger than in the year

Property taxation continues to be the predominant source of funds, supplying more than a quarter of total revenues. Talk among city fathers these days is of 'revenue sharing," in which the federal government wil ante up generous injections of money for the hard-pressed state and local governments, with the hoped-for result that increasingly unpopular property taxes can be eased. But Uncle Sam can only give to the people what he takes from them in the first place and he is already running tremendous deficits himself (which are paid for through inflation, another kind of taxation).

Cynical students of the situation take a wait-and-see attitude. Rather than helping the cities out of their financial plight, revenue sharing may only enable them to dig deeper holes.

". . . as a matter of fact, a certain amount of 'shady goings on' and 'dirty business' in politics is a good thing-tradition, you know!"

There are existing fire fighting units which are capable of mustering enough strength to cope with the fire hazard. These could be welded into a much better weapon if the legal restrictions and - even more damaging - the local rivalries could be erased by a zeal for the common good.

Indeed this is another of the factors, now at work and not to be gainsaied much longer, that points to an opportunity for consolidated or combined government which confronts the county and all the municipal governments.

And while this may take a great deal of doing before it can be realized, the fire hazard is something which has no time limitations nor time-table for happening.

Nor does it signal ahead whether it will take place in some of the obviously dangerous firetraps which usage and time have made of the older buildings in the county on the farm or on Main Street. Thus we join with the non-profit National

Abe Said It All In Two Minutes

In this autumn of presidential speeches, it might be useful to swell upon the speech that President Abraham Lincoln gave at Gettysburg five score and nine years ago. It wasn't intended as a speech, either by President Lincoln or by the worthy citizens who invited him to attend the dedication of a National Soldier's Cemetery at Get-

In fact, if he hadn't held the high office he did, Lincoln wouldn't have been asked to say a word. It was this matter of protocol alone that put him on the program.

They had a "main speaker" - Edward Everett, perhaps one of the great classical orators of history. But it took some discussion before it was decided that the chairman include in the invitation to the president this request; ". . . I am authorized by the governors of the various states to invite you to be present and participate in these ceremonies, which will doubtless be very imposing and solemnly impressive of the nation, formally set apart these grounds to their sacred use by a few appropriate remarks."

More bluntly, keep it short, buster Everett was a thoughtful man, and when he had completed his speech he sent a copy of the text to President Lincoln, noting that it might help in avoiding duplication of thought or sentiment.

Carl Sandburg reports that Lincoln looked at the voluninous manuscript and cited a remark by Daniel Webster "Solid men of Boston make no long orations." Whether Lincoln wrote his own speech on the back of an old envelope, while on the train heading for the ceremonies, is difficult to establish as fact or fantasy. History has just about forgotten Edward Everett, as least for his role at Gettsburg, although this was not true at the time. Everett got the big newspeper play-his speech took up two full newspaper pages - and was widely praised. Lincoln's remarks got little immediate attention, and even this included biting criticism. Everett began: "Overlooking these broad fields now reposing from the labors of the waning year, the mighty Alleghenies dimly towering above us, the graves of our brethren beneath our feet, it is with hestitation that I raise my poor voice to break the eloquent silence of God and nature. . ." He broke that silence for a hour and 57 minutes, eloquently. So President Lincoln had a hard act to follow, and an audience which must have been a wee bit on the jaded side. There were a few reporters, however, who praised it. The Springfield (Ill.) Republican said of the speech: "It has the merit of unexpectedness in its verbal perfection and

Political Notebook

Mirror Reflects Much Bad Today

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

The constant traveler about the United States these days finds it very difficult to be optimistic about the future. As affluence has advanced beyond most imaginings, the quality of life seems to have declined seriously in many, many ways.

I'm not talking just about those things the politicians and some other figures mean when they say "quality of life" - the pollution of air and water, the rampant crime in the streets, the deterioration of city services, etc. There is something much bigger and more important missing from American life. And the saddest part about that is that millions upon millions of Americans don't know it because they never had it.

To speak of the "good old days" is to lay oneself open to easy scoffing, good-natured or otherwise. There is some validity in that kind of criticism. Political analyst Richard Scammon once snorted: "The good old days; those were the days when mama boiled the wash. Agreed. Many of the shortcomings of the past are forgotten as recollections of good times spread a golden glow over everything. But I'll just defy my younger friends and associates and say flatly that a lot that went on was better than what goes on today,

One hardly knows where to begin and no short report like this can more than brush the surface. I'll start by saying there was a great deal more simple dignity in life. Kindness, in the sense of consideration for others exhibited in public places, was practiced in fact- not carried on placards shouting peace and love or artificially proffered by the thrusting of flowers into strangers' hands.

A short few decades ago, freedom and opportunity were cruelly denied to blacks and other minorities (their numbers were then much smaller). But freedom was better understood as deeply linked with order. Because in this age, "order" was adopted by some Americans as a code word for harsh suppression of minority rights and opportunities. Its vital bond with freedom is broken. Wherever I go, and I travel 50,000 to 75,000 miles a year to all corners of the land, I see on almost any given day more thoughtless, selfish, inconsiderate, disorderly human behavior than I saw in months in earlier times.

Yes, yes, there are far more people today, but that just isn't the whole story. We like to blame the carnage on the highways on defective cars. There is a point there. But a thousand Ralph Naders couldn't produce safety out of the mad, selfish scramble which enlivens our roadways. When we're not in cars, most of us these days travel in the great big bus in the sky. It's a marvel of speed and

technical efficiency. But almost everything a human being has to do to get to an airplane, sit in it, get off of it, get his bags and go on his way involves a herdlike clashing of elbows that is painfully demeaning. We like to blame city decay on government neglect and lack of rebuilding money. Again, the complaint has some merit. But much of the mess is simply disorganized human behavior. The cities are an ugly portrait of people who don't care, who litter streets and lawns, scrawl their pathetic names and slogans in spray paint everywhere, wait for "them" to make the urban scene more

The fuss about the young wearing long hair and beads is silly. What isn't silly is the contrived ugliness some of the young insist upon these days, and the emptyheaded lounging in public places which passes for "living" in the nonworld they have created. Amid all the gross selfishness, I find little real caring for self. And much of the "new freedom" is only a

Financial Plight Of Cities Worsens

By DON OAKLEY City governments are in a financial hole and it's getting

$37.4 billion in fiscal year 1970-71, an increase of $4.7 billion over the previous year. But the city expenditures totaled $39.1 billion in 1970-71; making for a net loss of $1.7 billion. This was $200 million more on the minus side of the ledger than in the year

Revenues of all city governments in the country totaled deeper, reports Commerce Clearing House.

Property taxation continues to be the predominant source of funds, supplying more than a quarter of total revenues. Talk among city fathers these days is of "revenue sharing," in which the federal government will ante up generous injections of money for the hard-pressed state and local governments, with the hoped-for result that increasingly unpopular property taxes can be eased. But Uncle Sam can only give to the people what he takes from them in the first place and he is already running tremendous deficits himself (which are paid for through inflation, another kind of taxation).

Cynical students of the situation take a wait-and-see attitude. Rather than helping the cities out of their financial plight, revenue sharing may only enable them

Today saw a lot of blue pills and some capsules on the street in front of a newsstand. There was a sewer nearby and have done that. Some day an innocent child may pick up one of these pills and eat it thinking it was candy. Please, readers, dispose of those pills some other way - they can always be flushed down a commode -A MOTHER DEAR POLLY-If you have a lightweight coat you would like to interline so it could be worn in cold weather, the simplest way to do it is to use a lightweight cardigan sweater as the lining. Use one that may be faded or not good enough to wear as a sweater but NEVER a bulky one. Cut the sweater sleeves off at the seam and open up the shoulder seam. Slip the sweater up between the garment and the lining and sew up, by hand, the shoulder seam. Open 17 the sweater sleeves from the wrist to the underarm tween lining and garment and hand sew the seams that have been opened, to ge the sweater in as an interlining. I have done this several times and it works great. The sweater can always be re-

Altamonte Spgs. Insurance Studied

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS - Discussion concerning renewal of the city employes' health and accident insurance brought a suggestion to City Council by Mayor Lawrence Swofford yesterday that the entire insurance program be reviewed. The mayor objected to an increase in rates by the company with whom the city transferred its employes' insurance program only last year. Mayor Swofford contended that while each year impressive presentations are given by companies, the rates mushroom and the next year the city switches to another In suggesting study of the insurance program
