Seminole almost wins

WINTER PARK — Maurice Thomas tripped while leading the 330 intermediate finals and finished sixth. The difference in points was the difference between Seminole High's first and second place finish in a strong eight-team field Friday night at Showalter Field.

Thomas had finished fourth in the 120 high hurdles earlier in the meet. Meet champion Winter Haven scored 125 points to the Tribe's 118½.

Nobody wins Lotto jackpot

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Lotto jackpot swelled to an estimated $13 million dollars this week when nobody picked all six winning numbers in the St. Patrick's Day drawing, lottery officials said Sunday.

The numbers drawn Saturday were 2, 3, 16, 19, 33 and 39.

Since nobody matched all six, the $6 million jackpot rolled over, putting the estimate for next week's grand prize at $13 million.

"This rollover ends the longest grand prize winning streak in the game's history," said Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul.

"We've had 10 new Lotto millionaires during this winning streak, which started after the only other rollover of 1980, on January 27."

Although no one claimed the jackpot, 257,780 tickets qualified for smaller prizes. Payouts were:

- 222 tickets matched five of six to win $3,604
- 12,289 tickets matched four of six to win $95
- 245,269 tickets matched three of six to win $4.50

Hospital bursting with babies

SANFORD — Doctors at Central Florida Regional Hospital say they can't explain an unusually high number of births there this weekend, hospital spokesperson Kay Bartholomew said today.

"You never know," Bartholomew said about the births of eight girls and five boys Friday, Saturday and Sunday. She said the record high was 17 births in one short stretch.

"There's no reason. That's just the way it happens," she said.

Not even a full moon can account for the weekend baby boom, Bartholomew said. According to popular legend, a full moon can induce labor.

Two boys were born Friday, seven babies were born Saturday and four babies were born Sunday at the Sanford hospital, according to hospital records.

Woman's skull was fractured

SANFORD — Sandra Gastequez, 33, of Oviedo, whose body was found early Friday morning near her home in Black Hammock, died as a result of a fracture of her skull, according to weekend autopsy findings.

Sheriff's Lt. Al Sanchez said today that Gastequez, who went horseback riding from her Stone Street house at about 8 p.m. Thursday, was apparently killed when she fell from her horse. Sanchez said deputies haven't determined what caused the fall. Gastequez' horse was found with a damaged saddle in that area alone at about 10 p.m. Thursday, deputies said. Her husband found her body on Howard Avenue at about 5 a.m.

Local major leaguers hustle to make tomorrow start

By DEAN SMITH

SANFORD — What does the end of the 32-day Major League Baseball lockout mean locally?

To players who make their winter homes in the Sanford-Lake Mary area like Tim Lincecum, and Chet Lemon, of Heathrow, David Martinez, of Winter Springs, and Frank Viola, of Oviedo, it means hustling to arrange plane flights, getting luggage together and saying goodbye to family and friends so they can get to spring training sites today for practice tomorrow.

For the three Major League teams that train locally it means getting all of their workers, ticket takers, ushers, vendors, etc. lined up for games that are scheduled to start next Monday.

The 18 teams that train in Florida will start two-a-day practices at 8 a.m. on Tuesday. Inter-team games will probably start on Thursday or Friday with games against other clubs scheduled to start Monday, March 26.

In Orlando the Minnesota Twins will be making their last appearance before moving to Ft. Myers next spring.

The first game for the Twins will be against the Dodgers at Tinker Field next Monday and according to Twins ticket manager Tom Blaha if you wish to see the game you had better hurry and get your tickets.

"The Dodgers are always one of our best drawing games and we have less than 100 tickets left," said Blaha.

SANFORD — The sun had barely broken over the horizon this morning and was still drying the dew from the outfield grass at Sanford Stadium on Mellonville Avenue when Joe Garnett settled into his seat behind homeplate about 15 rows up.

Joe is a baseball fan. "A big baseball fan," he emphasized.

And he is thrilled that the Major League baseball owners lockout ended early this morning.

Garnett was but one of many people in the Sanford-Lake Mary area this morning who expressed opinions on the resumption of major league baseball. Some were pleased and some were not.

Garnett said that coming to the Sanford stadium to watch the Florida Baseball Schools College Round Robin Tournament was a "fair replacement" for spring training, but he will probably take a trip to several training camps over play days.

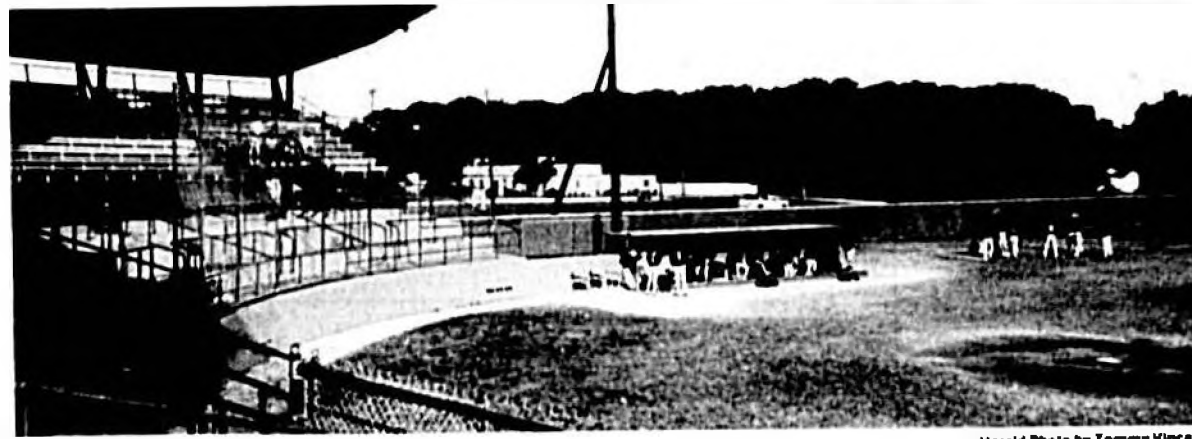

"Thank God the lock out is over," he said, surveying the college players assembled on the field for batting practice.

The crack of the ball against a bat draws Garnett's attention.

"You can't hear anything better than that," he said. "Baseball is great and I can't wait for the season to start for real on April 9th."

County officials revisualize 17-92 during planning meeting

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Ugly, bleak and depressing" were among the descriptions government and business officials used to describe the bare image of U.S. Highway 17-92 at a vision-setting meeting at Seminole Community College this morning.

Officials for the five cities touched by the road and members of the Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce began their discussions on how they see the future of Seminole County's "Main Street." Chief among the objectives of the group is to seek the redevelopment of businesses and the overall appearance along the roadside.

Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith suggested a possible new name for the road, which is known as U.S. 17-92 throughout most of its 14-mile length from the Orange-Seminole county line northward to Lake Monroe. Portions of the road are also known as Orange Avenue in Sanford, the road is called Seminole Boulevard along Lake Monroe, French Avenue from Lake Monroe to 25th Street and Orlando Drive south of 25th Street.

Committee member Randy Morris suggested "Elin Street" as a possible title for the road when another committee member described the area north of Elin World as a "nightmare."

The committee will discuss how they think the roadway should look and how government and private business can work together toward achieving their beautification and redevelopment suggestions.

The committee, sponsored by the county chamber, is cochaired by Casselberry Mayor Andrea Demunson and Randy Morris, former Lake Mary commissioner and past chairman of the Lake Mary Boulevard Study.

Dr. Keith Samuels of Seminole Community College discussed the possibilities of making U.S. 17-92 more beautiful. The road runs the length of Seminole County, and some lawmakers envision it becoming a "mainstreet" for the area.

Orlando parents file suit over year-round school

From staff and wire reports

ORLANDO — Ten families upset that their children will be required to attend school year-round filed suit last week against the Orange County School Board.

The suit seeks an injunction to stop the district from implementing its experimental program.

Some 2,300 students at three elementary schools are scheduled to start the year-round program in July, said Diane Locker, a district consultant.

Seminole County is experiencing the same growth and has year-round schools under consideration. Two weeks ago the district hired Dr. Robert O'Dell to serve as the coordinator of year-round schools. O'Dell will study the possibilities of beginning year-round schools here.

In Orange County, however, the year-round school plan has stirred emotions and some question the legality of the plan. "There is no authority that I can find in Florida statutes that the board can do this," said parents' attorney Tony Nardella.

Nardella alleged the program also violates the Florida Constitution. He said the constitution guarantees Florida children the right to a uniform system of schooling.

This so perversely and so dramatically impacts the families and

O'Dell brings a wealth of experience to year-round school researching job

SANFORD — Robert O'Dell, the Seminole County school district's new coordinator of year-round education, says his promotion is just another peak in his roller coaster life.

The school board has put O'Dell in charge of researching a year-round school program. The district is currently considering year-round school as a cure to overcrowding. O'Dell will research existing programs, then suggest a pilot school and supervise the implementation of year-round school at the pilot school. The district will make decisions on year-round school depending on the outcome of the pilot program.

Getting a new job is no change for O'Dell. Born in

Robert O'Dell

Dayton, Ohio, O'Dell grew up on the family farm. After high school graduation, he had several menial jobs, never staying one place very long and making no attempt to further his education. "I was carrying on a great family tradition," he joked.

When he enrolled at the University of Dayton, he was the first of his family to take a college class. He said he knew working at menial jobs was not what he wanted to do. "I graduated from high school in 1957 and Sputnik had gone up the year before. That put a new sense of mortality into me," he said.

O'Dell earned a bachelor's in education from the University of Dayton with a certain degree of difficulty. "I had two children, was working full time at night as a plastics molder with N.R. and attending classes during the day," he explained. "But I really wanted to be a teacher."

When he finally finished school, O'Dell said he took a $4,000 a year pay cut to accept his first teaching job. "Oh, but it was worth it," he said.

He taught fourth through eighth grades at a large inner-city school.

O'Dell said he has always loved being in the classroom with children, but he was interested in the administrative side of education as well. He took on the added job of boy's basketball coach at the school and selling ladies shoes in his spare time to pay for his schooling while he earned his masters degree in school administration and supervision.

Brothers emerge as keys in bombing

FORT MYERS — The FBI arrested a fugitive on cocaine charges Sunday and issued a nationwide alert for his brother but insisted the actions did not stem from the firebomb that gutted a Drug Enforcement Administration field office.

Authorities had said earlier that a man indicted on drug charges last week had threatened to blow up the DEA building in Fort Myers. Two men charged in that indictment with cocaine conspiracy were already in custody.

The FBI arrested a third suspect, John Lewis Ciganek, 22, on Sunday, but would not disclose where the arrest was made. A nationwide alert was issued for his brother, Jeffery Matthews, 23, who was the fourth suspect charged in the indictment.

FBI spokesman Brian Kinsel said the arrest and alert were unrelated to the firebomb that destroyed the DEA's 6,000-square foot building early Saturday.

"This was not done in connection with the explosion. We have not identified any suspects in the bombings, nor has there been any warrant issued in connection with the explosion," Kinsel said. "He is wanted only on drug charges."

Investigators would not say whether the alleged threat was made by one of the four charged in the Ciganek indictment.

Salvager attacks beach renourishment

JUPITER — Treasure from a 17th century Spanish galleon may be lost forever if officials proceed with a $2 million plan to renourish Jupiter beaches, said the salvager who discovered the wreck.

Dominic Addario has recovered nearly 2,000 artifacts from the wreck so far, including gold doubloons and silver ingots.

The treasure is believed to come from the wreck of the Spanish galleon San Francisco y San Antonio, although a positive identification has not been made.

Addario says plans to renourish area beaches beginning in October could obliterate parts of the wreck he discovered in 1987 with Peter Leo, a local lifeguard.

Addario and Leo are asking the state to delay the work so that they can probe the entire wreck site before it is buried under tons of sand or sucked up by dredges.

Panhandle flooded

CARYVILLE — Rivers across the Florida Panhandle overran their banks Sunday, forcing residents in several counties to seek shelter on higher ground, officials said.

Residents of Washington County were ordered Sunday to evacuate low-lying areas in and surrounding the Panhandle community of Caryville because of rising waters along the Choctawhatchee River, officials said.

County commissioners met in special session and voted to declare a local state of emergency and evacuate residents along the rain-swollen river, said Richard Morgan, a spokesman for the Florida Division of Emergency Services.

Area residents who live across the county line in neighboring Holmes County also were urged to evacuate low-lying areas, although evacuation was not mandatory, officials said.

The evacuation affected between 800 and 1,000 people, officials said. A number of shelters opened in both counties to accommodate those forced to abandon their homes.

Soda machine crushes 14-year-old boy

JACKSONVILLE — A 14-year-old boy was killed when a soda machine fell over and crushed him, Jacksonville authorities said.

A newspaper delivery boy found Robert Hobbs' body underneath the soda machine Sunday in an apartment complex clubhouse. Investigators have not determined what caused the machine to fall over.

hurt the local baseball fan who likes to go to Tinker to take in a game. The Twins lost 12 home dates to the lockout leaving only three games left at Tinker Field.

"We were scheduled to start games March 4," said Blaha. "It hurt the fan who only gets to see big league games in the spring. It also hurt the 25-30 people we employ to help with the games. The ticket takers, vendors and the like have not been paid and for some of these people that is a lot of money."

The other teams that train locally, the Houston Astros in Kissimmee and the Kansas City Royals in Baseball City (formerly Boardwalk and Baseball) will also begin practice tomorrow with games scheduled to start next Monday.

The loss of the 12 home games by the O-Twins means approximately 15-18 million dollars of lost revenue to the central Florida area.

"We've lost five sold out games so far," said Blaha. "And the concession people have lost $5-$10,000 per game. And who knows how much the local hotels lost in business. No one came out a winner in this."

The end is here

Owners, union finally agree to play ball

By MIKE TULLY
United Press International

NEW YORK — Major league team owners and the players' union agreed in principle to end the 32-day-old spring training lockout. Commissioner Fay Vincent announced early today.

Shortly after 6 a.m., the negotiators showed up with the news that they have "signed off on a memorandum of understanding."

"It was not an easy effort," said Chuck O'Connor, who represented management in the talks.

Added union chief Don Fehr, "It has been a long process and at times it has been a tortuous process."

Vincent said the 1990 season will begin on April 9 and that at least 158 regular-season games will be scheduled. The commissioner said doubleheaders and make-up games could provide a full 162-game season.

"I have a very pleasant duty and it is simply to announce that tonight an agreement in principle has been reached between the Players Association and the Player Relations Committee — the owners association — and the labor agreement in baseball will be executed in the very near future," Vincent said.

American League President Dr. Bobby Brown said if the deal is signed Monday, camps will open Tuesday with clubs free to play exhibition games on March 26 should they desire.

Vincent said the new four-year agreement includes a minimum salary of $100,000 for major league players, up from the current $88,000; an annual $55 million owners' contribution to players' benefits, and "arrangements" relating to how much major league service a player must have before he becomes eligible for salary arbitration.

Jerry Reinsdorf, owner of the Chicago White Sox and a member of the Player Relations Committee, outlined the details of the salary arbitration settlement, which had proved the thorniest issue in the dispute.

He said that players with 2 1/2 years of major league service and who had at least 88 days of service in the year just concluded, would form a pool. Of the players in that group, the 17 percent with the most service would be eligible for arbitration, he said.

Owners had previously said they would not move on their position that a player need three full years of experience before becoming eligible for arbitration. Players had sought a roll back to the pre-1985 agreement, when players needed only two years.

Asked by a reporter if a lockout had damaged baseball Vincent said, "I think it was damaged. I believe the recuperative powers of baseball are very strong and I don't believe the damage will be permanent."

Despite the agreement, the 1990 lockout became the second longest baseball stoppage of this century. Players struck for 49 days in 1981, creating a split season. Owners locked out players for three weeks in 1976 before Commissioner Bowie Kuhn ordered camps opened and the season began on time.

After a hiatus of eight days, the negotiations at Vincent's office intensified over the weekend, with a marathon session Friday night and a five-hour union caucus on Saturday.

Arbitration was the key issue throughout the contract dispute that led the owners to lock their players out of spring training on Feb. 15. The question was whether a player should be eligible for arbitration after two or three years' service in the major leagues.

Owners had conceded that work needs to be done on the so-called "manipulation" issue in which clubs have sent players to the minor leagues to control their major league service time.

Deputy Commissioner Steve Greenberg gave a glimpse at how the parties arrived at 17 percent on the arbitration issue. "We split the difference between 12 and 20," said Greenberg, "and my math wasn't very good so we came up with 17."

Pressed as to where the figures of 12 and 20 originated, Greenberg said, "Before that we were at 10 and they were at 25. It's a process, an evolution. You end up in negotiations with weird results because it's the result of a compromise."

New York Mets owner Fred Wilpon explained how the arbitration dilemma got solved.

"It got to a point where differences between the two sides got so small we had to say yes," Wilpon said.

office. Wes Rinker, director of the Florida Baseball School, shakes his head. "I love baseball," he said, "but I hope they had their fun with this prima donna thing."

Rinker said that he doesn't understand how the players and owners could expect anyone to have any sympathy for them when they are talking about minimum salaries of $100,000 and the average fan is struggling to make ends meet. "It's hard to have much enthusiasm when all they want is more, more, more."

Rinker said that in protest of the sums of money made by the baseball players and owners he intends to boycott any products advertised on CBS or ESPN during baseball telecasts.

In Lake Mary, some baseball fans were looking forward to the umpire's call to play ball.

Evan Gunn, 7, of Lake Mary, said he "is a little glad" the lockout is over. His dad, Jeff, said: "Maybe now we can go to a game." Evan's face lit up as he grinned. "Now he's real glad it's over," Jeff said.

Phillip Craddock, 12, Jason Taggart, 11, and Tony Novnich, 12, were raising the flag at Lake Mary Elementary School when they commented on the end of the baseball lockout.

"I didn't like it when they were on lockout, because it's the only great American pastime," Phillip said.

Jason said: "I'm sorta glad. I'm surprised they didn't stop baseball, there was so much fighting."

Tony didn't care for the fighting either. A Twins fan, he said the new salary structure "makes me want to play baseball."

Stu Kaderman, of Deltona, said he is a baseball fan who is happy the lockout is over. "I'm glad. They deserve the money," he said.

Dorothy Downing, a Sanford resident who works in Lake Mary, said: "I'm just glad it's over."

Some area residents were not as enthusiastic.

"I don't really care. I'm a Gator fan," Jim Sullivan, a Lake Mary city employee said.

"I was a fan until the first lockout. I haven't followed baseball since," a Lake Mary policeman said.

At the Sanford stadium, Kay Baylor, concessions manager at the park, thinks that it is "marvelous" that the lockout is over.

"I'm just surprised it wasn't over sooner," she said. "They lost a whole lot of money during the last 32 days."

Baylor said that she hoped that the lockout did not cause the players to return to playing before they were in peak condition and cause a lot of injuries at the beginning of the season.

"But they're professionals. They'll do alright," she predicted.

At the Colonial Room Restaurant in Touchton's Rexall on First St. in downtown, Karla Leonard peked at the remains of her breakfast. She wore an Atlanta Braves baseball cap, but said she wasn't a fan.

"My boyfriend will be happy," she said at the news that the lockout was over. "I don't care."

The New College senior who was on her way from Daytona Beach back to Sarasota said that the players and owners made too much money.

"They make millions of dollars a year," she said.

Ernest Bowers is unemployed. Standing in the Magnolia Mall, he shook his head, but didn't move from his position leaning against a wall. Arms folded across his chest, he said "I don't give a damn about those rich ball players. Let them be unemployed for three months. See what it's like."

Willie Carpenter and Bevan Freshwater work at Adams Transfer in Sanford. They stopped at the Wareco store on 17-92 near First St. for a coffee before work.

"They can stay where they are for all I care," Freshwater said. Carpenter agreed.

NEW YORK — A chronology of key events in the history of major-league baseball's labor negotiations:

Nov. 9, 1933 — U.S. Supreme Court reaffirms the 1922 ruling by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes that baseball is a sport, not a business, in effect upholding the reserve clause that binds a player to his club.

Jan. 16, 1970 — Curt Flood files suit against the reserve clause, challenging the legality of the standard baseball contract.

April 1, 1972 — Players strike for 13 days over the issue of pensions.

June 19, 1973 — Supreme Court rules 5-3 that baseball is exempt from anti-trust law, defeating Flood's bid of the reserve system.

Feb. 23, 1976 — In absence of a collective bargaining agreement, owners lock out players in spring training until then commissioner Bowie Kuhn ordered them opened March 17.

July 19, 1976 — A collective bargaining agreement is reached, stipulating that any player who had spent at least six years in the big leagues is free to sign with a new club once he has played out his option. His former club is compensated with a draft pick.

April 1, 1980 — Executive board of the Players Association votes to boycott the last week of spring training and strike May 23 if no labor pact is reached by then.

May 23, 1980 — Shortly before 5 a.m., negotiators avert a strike by reaching a 4-year deal. They put off the compensation issue and create a Joint Study Committee to make recommendations.

Feb. 25, 1981 — Executive Board of the Players Association votes unanimously to strike May 29 in the absence of an agreement on free agent compensation.

May 28, 1981 — Players and owners extend deadline to June 1. National Labor Relations Board petitions for an injunction that would rescind the owners' compensation proposal.

White House recognizes Longwood

By LACY DOMEN
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — The very small town that passed a resolution last month to express support of Mikhail Gorbachev's efforts toward world peace has received a letter of thanks from the White House. Mayor Gene Farach, who forwarded a copy of Resolution #650 with a cover letter to Gorbachev, Gov. Martinez, President Bush, and former President Reagan, received an answer from William J. Canary Jr., Special Assistant to the President, for Intergovernmental Affairs. Canary thanked Farach for a copy of the ordinance, and said the letter and ordinance had been forwarded to the appropriate officials at the Department of State. Resolution #650 supports reform that will lead to freedom for all people in communist dominated countries. It also assigns the city administrator, Michael Abels the task of preparing a request for sister city status with a Soviet or eastern European city.

Sister city status would allow Longwood to exchange cultural views and information with a city of similar size.

Abels confirmed that Longwood would spend $300 to become a member of Sister Cities International. "They put us through the process of matching us with a compatible city," Abels said. He said the process could take up to a year.

In his letter to Bush, Farach spoke of Longwood's backing of democratic reforms and the application for a sister city. "I hope, Mr. President, that maybe this will make 1,001 lights to improve life for all mankind," Farach wrote.

Leases at city marina renegotiated

SANFORD — City commissioners today were to renegotiate leases for two of three businesses located on the city marina. The negotiations come one month after the commission renegotiated lease terms and arrears repayment schedule for the financially-troubled marina Holiday Inn.

John Smith, owner of Harbour Place offices and shops, and representatives of the Monroe Harbour Marina have asked to renegotiate their leases, using a formula similar to one agreed upon by the city and Holiday Inn.

Chuck Volk of Monroe Harbour has requested modifying his lease from five percent of all gross income three percent of boat storage rental above $500,000, one percent of income from general sales and two percent of income from all labor.

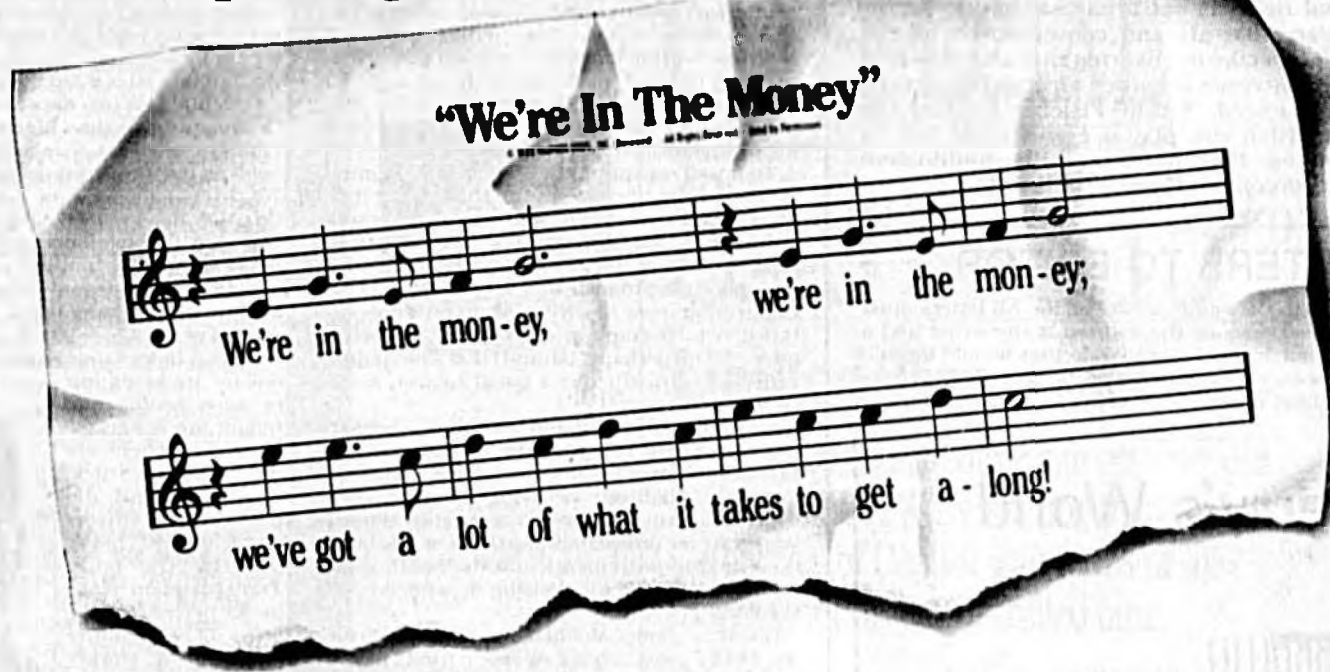

John Smith has requested modifying the Harbour Place lease from five percent of gross income to three percent of rent over $100,000 and one percent of all general sales.

The commission last month modified the hotel's lease from five percent of gross revenue to three percent of room revenue, two percent of beverage sales and one percent of food sales. During one year of lease renegotiations with the city, Holiday Inn was foreclosed on by a Savannah thrift and filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

The hotel, which now operates a restaurant, a bar and a sandwich shop on the marina, was the first business to locate on the marina after its construction in 1969.

The commission will meet today in the city manager's conference room at Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Ave.

A good start

President Bush's commitment to equal rights is reinforced by his selection of Arthur Fletcher to be chairman of the problem-plagued Civil Rights Commission.

Mr. Fletcher, a 65-year-old black moderate, has served three former presidents with distinction and earned bipartisan respect for his fairness and management skills. He was an assistant labor secretary to Richard Nixon, a deputy assistant for urban affairs to Gerald Ford and an adviser to Ronald Reagan. He also worked for Mr. Bush when he was chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations.

Mr. Fletcher's record as a consensus-builder recommends him for the difficult job of revitalizing the Civil Rights Commission.

Established in 1957, the commission is responsible for monitoring the nation's anti-discrimination laws. Originally envisioned as a fact-finding body, its statutory role is to act as a clearinghouse for civil rights information. The panel's eight members, four appointed by the president and four by Congress, deliver their findings to both branches of government.

After a promising beginning as a research and educational instrument, the commission has lost much of its moral authority. During the 1970s, the panel lurched from non-partisan teacher to liberal advocate. The 1980s saw it take on the conservative hue of President Reagan's appointees, much to the disappointment of some.

Decimated by two decades of politicization, bickering and abrupt resignations, the commission was nearly abolished by Congress last year. Fortunately, reason prevailed on Capitol Hill and the panel has been given a 22-month extension to get back on track. And Mr. Fletcher is just the man to put it there.

The chairman-designate's varied career has included stints as a professional football player, a university professor and an employee relations specialist. The discrimination he experienced prompted him to work for the rights of minorities and during the early 1970s he served two years as executive director of the United Negro College Fund. His perseverance will come in handy as he seeks to restore the commission's credibility.

Civil rights is not a partisan issue. To the contrary, liberals and conservatives have a common stake in ensuring that all persons in this country are accorded an equal opportunity to succeed. Arthur Fletcher believes the commission can play a constructive role in achieving that objective. His nomination deserves confirmation by the Senate.

Modern pagans love non-human life

DENVER — The pagans are making a comeback. After centuries of retreat before the world's great religions, the folks who worship bubbling brooks, bats, owls and foxes are pulling themselves together for a fearsome counterattack.

As Exhibit 1 in this thesis, consider a letter sent to a colleague of mine who'd written a column in which he innocently asserted, "It's better to live two minutes as a human than 10 years as a monkey."

"Better?" retorted one pagan couple (and not the only irate respondents, by any means). "In what sense? From what or whose perspective? Certainly not from a moral perspective. What other species wantonly kills its own, destroys its environment, etc.? From a philosophical position, (such) human chauvinism cannot be defended."

Then the pagans rolled out what they considered their clincher: "What (the columnist) passes off as an ontological judgment is in fact a value judgment...."

Does this reasoning sound familiar? It should, for it is an extension of an argument we've heard for the past 20 years, namely that all cultures are equal, and their differences come down mainly to a matter of taste. Now, we are told, it isn't just cultures that stand on the same moral plane. Different species do, too. (Although come to think of it, perhaps only in theory. What with the human tendency toward excess and violence, we may well rate as an inferior form of life.)

Is this the babbling of a few cranks? I don't think so. In the time leading up to the Aspen vote over whether to ban fur sales, similar arguments were heard all the time. And they seem to have found an equally comfortable niche at the far reaches of the environmental movement — where reside, for example, members of Earth First!, the radical group that believes in direct action to scuttle policies it believes harm the ecosystem.

Ed Bradley of CBS recently interviewed an

Their differences come down mainly to a matter of taste.

Earth Firster accused of conspiring to down power lines leading to nuclear facilities in three states. It was a disturbing report. Among other things, the Earth Firster seemed to have trouble distinguishing between "crimes" against nature — as he causally defined them, of course — and traditional crimes against property and people.

This should hardly surprise those familiar with the sort of rhetoric found all too often even in mainstream environmental literature. There, enthusiasm for "wilderness values" frequently veers off into something far more potent than an unadorned conservation ethic. It becomes an anti-humanist romance, one that holds land sacred precisely to the degree it escapes human touch.

In one of my favorite examples, Wilderness magazine published an article a few years back complaining that European settlers in America never understood "the language of the Eastern forest," but that in an apparently less obtuse era, "ancient German law prescribed capital punishment for someone who wantonly peeled the bark of a living tree." Why would anyone even mention such a grotesque sanction, unless the writer's reverence for bark had reached the point that it competed with his reverence for human life?

The importance of infrastructure

WASHINGTON — On March 9, 1832, a 23-year-old candidate for the Illinois General Assembly told Sangamon County voters "my sentiments with regard to local affairs." His first sentiment was "the public utility of internal improvements," particularly "the opening of good roads (and) the clearing of navigable streams." Thus did Abraham Lincoln's public life commence with concern about what is now called "infrastructure."

Today Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner, from Illinois, has the challenging task of selling a taxophobic nation on the rationality of spending much more on infrastructure. Americans already spend $800 billion for transportation products and services each year. Eighteen percent of GNP is spent on transportation, which employs one-tenth of the work force. It is perhaps natural that the public considers infrastructure a banal subject. Natural, but unhistorical.

In 1816, John Calhoun introduced legislation for a federal program of internal improvements as a means of avoiding disunion. President Madison, believing Congress not constitutionally empowered to do such things, vetoed it. So prosperous Northern states built their own improvements and the South sank into inferiority and increasing dependence on slavery.

Historian James McPherson writes that prior to 1815 most roads were rutted paths impassable in wet weather. Commerce depended on sailing ships and riverboats. The cost of moving goods 30 miles inland equaled the cost of moving them across the Atlantic. Trans-Atlantic trade exceeded inland commerce and economic growth barely exceeded population growth.

But then came all-weather macadamized roads. The Erie Canal ignited construction: 3,700 miles of canal by 1850. Next, railroads freed commerce from frozen canals in winter, cut travel time from New York to Chicago from three weeks to two days, and cut the price of shipping a ton of wheat from Buffalo to New York from $100 to $10. The difference between the wholesale price of pork in Cincinnati and New York plummeted from $9.53 to $1.18. Suddenly urban workers had more money to spend on manufactured goods.

Today the condition of the infrastructure is just as dramatically connected with economic vitality. Unfortunately, the wearing out of America, which is one aspect of today's frenetic pursuit of current consumption, is accelerating. Since 1960, investment in infrastructure has fallen more than 50 percent as a percentage of GNP, which explains much of America's drop in productivity. Illustrations abound.

Of America's 575,000 highway bridges, 42 percent are structurally deficient (closed or restricted to light traffic) or functionally obsolete. A bridge fails every two days. Consider one bridge with a light load of 2,000 cars and 200 trucks a day: If trucks must detour, adding five miles to their routes at 50 cents a mile, costs increase $182,500 per year. If cars must detour (figuring 20 cents a mile), the annual cost is $730,000.

Over the last two decades, traffic has grown five times faster than highway capacity. In the next two decades, congestion is projected to become five times worse. Airports anticipate a 72 percent increase in passenger volume in this decade; by 1997, 33 major airports are expected to experience, cumulatively, 20,000 hours of delays annually. More billions of gallons of gasoline and billions of dollars worth of aircraft fuel and flight crew time will be wasted yearly.

Time is indeed money and already billions of dollars are being lost because people and freight are congested in traffic. There are three million trucks, bus, taxi and delivery vehicle drivers stuck there, being paid by the hour. Transportation is 15 to 30 percent of the price of agriculture products. A worker delayed by even 10 minutes each way during 45 years of commuting wastes the equivalent of two working years. Slow, unpredictable traffic prevents businesses from relying on "just in time" delivery of raw materials and parts, a technique for reducing inventory costs.

You get the picture. The first Republican President certainly did. A crimson thread of consistency connects Lincoln's passion for internal improvements with his later mission of binding the nation together as a land of opportunity.

Transportation and other infrastructure issues should bring out a strong Hamiltonian streak in American conservatives who too often talk the anachronistic language of Jeffersonian small-government sentimentality, of nostalgia for another America. In the debate now beginning about transportation policy we should see if the 18th Republican President is the kind of conservative who understands the need to spend in order to conserve and enlarge the nation's stores.

The condition of the infrastructure is just as dramatically connected with economic vitality.

EPA's retesting of pesticides flawed

WASHINGTON — Two years ago, Congress ordered the Environmental Protection Agency to retest about 600 pesticide chemicals already on the market because they may have been approved at a time when EPA standards were more lax. The EPA hired more than 100 people to tackle the job.

But an internal EPA memo we have obtained acknowledges that the agency doesn't really know what those new employees have been doing for the past year.

In fact, they may be spending their time putting new pesticides on the market and ignoring their mandate to retest the old ones.

Congress has been prodding the EPA since 1972 to get a handle on pesticides that were registered years ago under early and often inadequate scientific standards. Finally, in 1988, Congress stopped prodding, set deadlines and authorized the hiring of enough employees to do the job. The internal memo from Douglas Camp, director of the EPA's Pesticides Program, says that, according to employee time cards, the number of people involved in retesting the old pesticides decreased by 6 percent last year, while activities to register new pesticides increased by 49 percent.

Camp's memo told employees to keep better track of how their time is spent. He told us that the problem may be that the employees simply didn't fill out their time cards correctly. And he says his agency is on schedule meeting the congressional deadlines.

But other numbers point to a failure by EPA to get the message from Congress. Only 11 of the 102 employees hired for the retesting work ended up being assigned to the EPA divisions responsible for ensuring the safety of pesticides already in use.

The bulk of the employees ended up with paperwork jobs — analyzing records and preparing computers for what EPA promises will be a serious re-examination of the pesticides on the market.

Even if EPA is serious about the congressional mandate, there will probably be a shortage of scientists to do the job. The demand for EPA scientists to re-register old pesticides will create an equal demand in the pesticide industry for scientists to prove that their products are safe. And private industry pays better.

A congressional staffer told our reporter Greg Moore about three EPA recruiters who were sent on a mission to hire scientists away from industry. Two returned empty-handed. The third was hired by the company whose employees he went to interview.

While the EPA is taking its own sweet time assessing the health hazards of pesticide chemicals, the Food and Drug Administration is blithely assuring the public there is nothing to worry about.

The FDA recently cooperated with a supermarket industry group, the Food Marketing Institute, to produce a pamphlet that calms the waters. The private institute paid for the brochure, but the FDA bought 50,000 copies to distribute through its Office of Consumer Affairs.

The brochure says that "Although some pesticides have been found to produce tumors in laboratory animals, there is no evidence to link cancer deaths or the incidence of cancer with the residues of those pesticides." That has long been the industry's argument, to wait for a human body count before panicking. The brochure also tells consumers that pesticides go through "extensive testing and safety studies."

The agency doesn't really know what those new employees have been doing for the past year.

elementary school with 1,800 students. "It was a big responsibility," he noted.

Following that he took over as principal at a "country club" school in suburban Dayton which was so large that five of the kindergarten classes were spread around the district in church basements.

It was there, in the early 1970s, that O'Dell got his first taste of year-round schools. Following the defeat of a bond issue, the superintendent of schools came to him and asked if he would research a new concept called year-round schools.

He spent 14 months researching the concept. "At the time, there was only one way of organizing the year-round program...the 45-15 plan (45 days in school and 15 days off). Today, there are many more options," O'Dell felt the plan would have worked, but the bond issue passed on the second attempt and year-round school plans were put on the shelf.

After that job, O'Dell and his wife Nan went back to school to earn advance degrees; she a masters degree and he a doctorate in education.

Next he was employed as a superintendent of schools — first in a rural area outside of Chicago and then in the Chicago suburbs.

Then, due to a series of health problems within his family, O'Dell left education and opened a small chain of flower shops.

"That lasted about five months before I sold them and found myself out of work," he said.

The O'Dells moved to Central Florida a couple of years ago because Nan's family is in the area and they had enjoyed Central Florida vacations for the lives of the families involved, there's no way it could be considered uniform," he said.

Locker said the program was an attempt to ease overcrowding in the rapidly growing Orange County district. This year, about 8,000 new students came into the district, and next year, the number is expected to reach 9,000 or 10,000, she said.

"It will not solve all of our growth problems, but it will give us the opportunity to increase some capacity in some of our schools," she said.

The plan would affect about 1,100 students at Palm Lake Elementary School, 700 at Aloma Elementary School and about 500 at Tangelo Park Elementary School.

The children would attend 60 days of school, have 15 days off, then repeat that cycle through the year.

Parents with children in Palm Lake Elementary School have been the most vocal in their opposition to the plan.

Dozens of upset Palm Lake parents attended Tuesday night's school board meeting and asked that the program be scrapped, but the board gave only a one-sentence reply.

"Any concern you have may be taken up with our attorney," said board Chairwoman Iris Tapley.

Nardella said Palm Lake parents had been voicing their opposition to the program for months, but district officials were inflexible.

"I don't see a middle ground here. You either have a program or you don't," he said.

Parents claim the change will disrupt their lives and harm their children.

"There's nothing to show any child has ever been harmed emotionally by year-round education," Locker said.

"Let them go ahead and start a voluntary program where the people going in know they're guinea pigs," said mother Jill Halre. "We have no alternatives to this. This is what makes us mad."

"I don't see any academic gain, and if we're making that change, I would hope it would be for the better," said Marta DiMarcantonio, who has two children who would be affected.

Locker said children could not opt out of the program because the district is under court-ordered busing. She said the district has asked the court to allow children in the three affected schools to switch to other schools if they choose.

TAMPA — Three Golden Lion Tamarin monkeys, one of the rarest species in the world, were born in a southwest Florida zoo last week, and zoo keepers said one of the siblings has been abandoned by his mother.

The tiny monkey, considered the runt of the litter, has been receiving round-the-clock feeding and attention by keepers at the Lowry Park Zoo in Tampa to keep him alive.

The 1-ounce monkey and two siblings born Friday are among an estimated 500 Golden Lion

While his siblings cling to their parents in a tree-filled exhibit in the primate section, the still-unnamed outcast clutches a white washcloth in an incubator in the zoo's nursery.

He sleeps on towels next to a brown Pound Puppy a stuffed animal about his size.

The trio is especially rare because triplets occur in only 15 percent of Golden Lion Tamarin litters born in captivity, said Jon Ballou, population manager of the National Zoological Park in Washington, D.C.

German unity leaps ahead

By PATRICK BOGNER
United Press International

EAST BERLIN — The conservative Alliance for Germany's surprise victory in East Germany's first free elections clears the way for rapid German unification, and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl told East Germans: "Stay where you are and things will soon improve."

Official results computed early Monday showed the three-party Alliance, backed by Kohl, winning 48.15 percent of the ballot, just shy of an absolute majority in the 400-member Parliament.

The Alliance inflicted a humiliating defeat on the rival Social Democratic Party, which was expected to win a narrow victory but instead drew only 21.84 percent of the vote. The conservatives did not rule out the possibility of asking the Social Democrats to join them in a coalition government.

With the Alliance campaigning for rapid unification and the Social Democrats backing a slower approach, the conservative victory was seen as a sweeping endorsement of Kohl's blueprint for quickly incorporating East Germany into the West German Federal Republic. Critics of the plan say it amounts to a virtual annexation of the East by the West.

The ballot results indicate that the conservatives will send 180 deputies to the Parliament, while the Social Democrats will have 87. The communists, now renamed the Party of Democratic Socialism, drew 16.33 percent of the vote and will have 65 deputies in Parliament.

Sunday's vote stripped the communists of any power they had, formally ending four decades of communist rule in East Germany.

The rest of the deputies will come from among the 24 other parties that competed in Sunday's elections, including an alliance of liberal groups that captured 5 percent of the vote

Gorbachev to talk to Lithuania

United Press International

MOSCOW — Lithuania's rebellious government faced a deadline today for responding to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's resolution that the Baltic republic's independence declaration was null and void.

However, Gorbachev said the Kremlin would talk with the Baltic republic to try and persuade it to remain in the union.

Lithuania's Sajudis nationalist movement said Gorbachev has summoned a Lithuanian government delegation to Moscow, and an Estonian newspaper said a similar call for a meeting in Moscow has gone out to the leadership in the independence-minded Baltic republic of Estonia.

In the war of nerves with Lithuania, Soviet army helicopters dropped thousands of leaflets Saturday on the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius.

The election results, which are not expected to be confirmed until Friday, showed that the largest of the three parties in the conservative alliance, the Christian Democratic Union, took nearly 41 percent of the vote.

The CDU was one of the so-called bloc parties formerly allied to the communists. CDU chairman Lothar de Maiziere is widely expected to become the country's new premier, replacing Hans Modrow, who headed a caretaker government after the Stalinist leadership was ousted in a popular uprising last fall.

"We are proud and happy," de Maiziere said in an initial reaction to the results. "It was a big surprise. We didn't expect this high a result and this means we have an even greater responsibility."

He said he would meet the heads of the two other alliance parties to discuss the formation of a new government, but did not entirely rule out forming a broad coalition with the Social Democratic Party.

Modrow said he intended to stay in his job until the new government is formed, but added, "I hope it is not a torturous process."

Estonians, Latvians voting, too

United Press International

MOSCOW (UPI) — The first firm poll results were anticipated today in Estonia and Latvia following elections of parliaments expected to lead the fight for the independence of the two Baltic republics annexed by Moscow 50 years ago.

Residents reached by telephone in the Estonian capital of Tallinn said voters crowded the polls in orderly balloting for the 105-member Parliament. A total of 385 candidates were contesting the seats, with 16 percent of the candidates representing the Estonian People's Front.

In Latvia, 309 candidates were contesting 201 seats.

Christian Democratic headquarters in Bonn that East Germans gave a "clear rebuff" to the communists and voted "to travel with the Federal Republic along the path to a unified Germany."

Even with lockout over, SAC dogfight perfect for local baseball fans

SPORTS
TONY DeSORMIER

Major League Baseball? We don't need no stinking Major League Baseball. Who needs Major League Baseball when you have the Seminole Athletic Conference?

If you have a serious Baseball Jones, if you find yourself watching the reruns of Cubs games on Chicago superstation WGN, you really need to get your life together. Falling that, head out to one of Seminole County's high schools for a little varsity action.

Like they say, it's the next best thing to being there.

As the schools take a week off for nine-week exams, we're at the halfway point of the SAC season and the race is deliciously close. Lake Mary and Lake Brantley each have one conference loss. Ovtedo has two. Lyman and Seminole each have three and Lake Howell has four.

Granted, with each team having six SAC games left (Seminole and Lake Brantley have seven, playing each other this coming Friday to complete the first half schedule), being three games back is large deficit.

But Seminole and Lake Howell have had the misfortune to be on the short end of a season's worth of one-run games. If things truly do even themselves out in the long run, then the second half could be a real dogfight.

Also, this kind of competition has a sharpening effect on those teams that survive. You know the phrase: "That which doesn't kill you only makes you stronger?" It applies to SAC baseball.

When the five Class 4A Seminole County schools (Seminole is a Class 3A school) gather for the District 9 tournament at Lake Mary High School in April, the lessons learned during the heat of SAC competition will pay dividends.

Also, just because a team happens to come out on top in the SAC race is no guarantee for success in the district tournament. According to one coach, the last time the district favorite actually won the district tournament was the time Lake Mary advanced to the state tournament several years ago.

That should come as no surprise. Competition within the county is very keen (this season is not a variation, just more of the same). The county team that enjoys the highest seed generally isn't that far ahead of the local squad with the lowest seed. Not only that, but strange things have been known to happen in tournaments.

Local diamond frequenters will also tell you that this year's high school season is an extension of the youth season from a couple years ago. By the time players get to the high school level, chances are very good they've faced each other in similar situations on the youth level.

All in all, it's pretty much a baseball fan's dream, especially with the professionals and owners busy squabbling over who gets to hold the money. So take advantage of the situation and get yourself out to a local high school game. It's a sure cure for an acute Baseball Jones.

Gatornationals

Running against Hill in the fastest side-by-side race ever run at the Gatornationals, Gwynn edged Hill 5.011 to 5.087 for the title.

Defending Gatornationals' Funny Car champion Ed McCulloch claimed his first NHRA victory of the year as he drove his Mille Oldsmobile to a win over K.C. Spurlock in a time of 5.335.

McCulloch, who has been racing Funny Cars since 1969, has never lost a final round at Gainesville. His other wins there came in 1972, 1986 and 1989.

Kenny Delco took his Pontiac Grand Prix to his first-ever

Winston Drag Racing Pro Stock event title when he beat Rickie Smith in the finals. Delco's only other appearance in an NHRA national event final round came in 1988.

Track champion and No. 1 qualifier Jerry Eckman went out in the first round despite setting a new track record of 7.272. But he was defeated by Jerry Ingersoll, who beat him off the starting line by .02 of a second.

Crowd favorite Bob Glidden was eliminated in the third round in what looked like a dead heat with Ricky Smith.

Sanford's Terry Martin, last year's Super Competition winner, was eliminated.

Fryer, Loyola Marymount let it fly, bomb defending champion Michigan

United Press International

Before Loyola Marymount took the court to meet the defending national champions, Coach Paul Westhead told his team to play "bombs away."

The Lions complied, leaving Michigan shell-shocked and victims of the greatest offensive explosion in the history of the NCAA tournament.

With Jeff Fryer striking for 11 three-pointers — just one of many records Sunday — Loyola Marymount walloped the No. 15 Wolverines 149-115 at Long Beach Arena, in Long Beach, Calif., to advance to their first-ever Sweet Sixteen appearance.

"We instructed our guys at the start to play bombs away," Westhead said. "We told them to let it fly."

"I think you saw our fastbreak system as we see it every day... The players are free to let it go. Guys like Jeff Fryer love to do it. It's fun, it's not work."

Indeed, the Lions, 25-5, made child's play of the Big Ten powerhouse. They shattered the tournament record for most points and scored more than any opponent had in 82 years of Michigan basketball.

"They made NBA three-pointers, they made them with people on them, with people not guarding them," Wolverines Coach Steve Fisher said. "They were truly sensational."

Loyola, the 11th seed in the West Region, will meet Alabama Friday night in the regional semifinals at Oakland, Calif.

David Bennet scored 20 points and teamed with Robert Horry to trigger a 14-0 run midway through the second half to spark the Crimson Tide.

The way Loyola is playing right now I don't think even the Lakers could match up with them," Arizona's Lute Olson said.

Bo Kimble of the Lions, the No. 1 scorer in the nation, contributed 37 points despite hitting just one three-pointer.

Michigan, which became the 17th straight team since the 1973 UCLA Bruins to fail to repeat its NCAA championship, finished 23-8. The loss was Fisher's first in eight tournament games.

Loyola, playing only its second game since the death of star Hank Gathers, topped the previous tournament record of 127 points set by Westhead's alma mater, St. Joseph's (Pa.), against Utah in 1981. That game went four overtimes.

The previous mark for points against Michigan was 119, accomplished by Utah in 1969.

Demetrius Callip's two foul shots had Michigan within 84-76 with 13:18 left, but Loyola — once again fueled by its fullcourt press — reeled off nine unanswered points.

Kimble dunked to start a three-point play — drawing Mike Griffin's fifth foul — and Per Stumer struck for a corner three-pointer following a five-second violation for a 95-76 bulge with 11:55 left.

When Fryer drove for a left-handed hook, the lead was 100-79 with 11 minutes left, and Michigan was never again close.

Fryer's binge of long-range baskets topped the previous record of 10 set by Freddie Banks of Nevada-Las Vegas in 1987 against Indiana. Loyola hit 21 three-pointers in 40 tries, two more tournament marks.

"It's a great feeling," said Fryer, who made 15 of 20 field-goal attempts, including 11 of 15 from long range. "I know I'm going to get my shots through the flow of the offense — it's just a matter of me hitting them."

Terrell Lowery added 23 points while Stumer had 21 for the nation's top scoring team. Fryer's outburst was a season-high and one shy of his career mark.

Terry Mills and Rumeal Robinson scored 23 points for Michigan, which finished with a season-high 27 turnovers.

In the second game Horry, held scoreless to that point, nailed two three-pointers in the 14-0 burst as the No. 19 Crimson Tide, 26-18, advanced to the Sweet Sixteen for the fourth time in six years.

Bennet added 13 rebounds to key a 40-27 advantage under the boards for the winners.

"They are so big," he said of the Wildcats. "Mainly it was desire. When you think about it, size doesn't matter. It's who wants it the most."

Second-seeded Arizona, which struggled to beat South Florida in the first round, failed in its bid to advance to the Sweet Sixteen for the third straight year and finished 25-7.

The Tide, seventh in the nation in scoring defense, held the Wildcats — averaging almost 80 points a game — to their lowest point total this season.

Jud Buechler, Arizona's leading scorer, was limited to two field goals and six points. Brian Williams, who had a career-high 28 points against South Florida, was blanked.

Freshman Ed Stokes led No. 12 Arizona with 17 points.

Eastern Regional
At Atlanta
UCLA 71, Kansas 70

Freshman Tracy Murray sank two free throws with nine seconds remaining and UCLA advanced to the regional semifinals for the first time since 1980 with the victory over fifth-ranked Kansas.

The Bruins, 22-10, move on to East Rutherford, N.J., for a Thursday matchup against No. 14 Duke.

Rick Calloway missed a 15-footer in the final seconds for Kansas with Trevor Wilson draped all over him as the second-seeded Jayhawks finished 30-5 and fell to 0-8 lifetime against UCLA.

All four Big Eight representatives were eliminated over the weekend, with Kansas State and Missouri losing Friday and top-ranked Oklahoma dropping a 79-77 decision to North Carolina Saturday.

Duke 76, St. John's 72

Robert Brickley made a tie-breaking layup with 34 seconds remaining and the Blue Devils held St. John's without a field goal for the final 6:33 in advancing to the NCAA East Regional semifinals.

The third-seeded Blue Devils, 26-8, rallied from a 68-81 deficit and advance to meet UCLA. Duke has advanced to the final 16 five consecutive seasons and has earned three Final Four berths in the past four years.

Brickley tied his season high with 22 points, and Alaa Abdelnaby added 17 points. Bob Harvey, who scored 14 of his 17 points after intermission for the Redmen, missed a 12-foot jumper with 14 seconds remaining and Brickley added two free throws for the final margin. St. John's finished the season, 24-10.

Southeast Regional At Richmond, Va.
Syracuse 63, Virginia 61

Derrick Coleman scored 19 points and blocked a shot with 2 seconds left to preserve the Orangemen's victory. No. 6 Syracuse advanced to the regional semifinals where they will face Minnesota.

Virginia rallied from a 15-point second half deficit and held the Orangemen to just two field goals over the final 12:53. After Billy Owens missed the front end of a one-and-one with 14 seconds left, senior forward Coleman, the Big East Player of the Year, swatted Bryant Smith's 6-foot jumper and the ball bounced toward midcourt as time expired.

Syracuse, 26-6, also received 10 rebounds and 9 assists from Coleman, and Owens had 16 points. The loss marked the end of Virginia Coach Terry Holland's 16-year tenure with the Cavaliers, during which he posted a 326-173 record. Holland will now take over as athletic director at his alma mater, Davidson.

Minnesota 81, N. Iowa 78

Senior forward Willie Burton scored a career-high 36 points and made five free throws in the final 43 seconds, helping Minnesota return to the final round of 16 for the second straight year.

Burton, who also collected 12 rebounds for the Golden Gophers, shot 13-of-17 from the field. Senior center Jason Reese led the Panthers with 29 points and 10 rebounds, while Troy Mullenburg added 20 points.

Northern Iowa turned in a shocking, upset victory Friday over Missouri and finished the season with a 21-9 record. Minnesota, 22-8, advanced to meet sixth-ranked Syracuse in a Southeast region semifinal game Friday in New Orleans.

Midwest Regional
At Indianapolis
Texas 73, Purdue 72

Travis Mays made two free throws with seven seconds remaining and Guillermo Myers blocked a last-second shot, giving the Longhorns the upset of No. 10 Purdue. The Longhorns, 23-8, advanced to the Midwest regional semifinals Thursday in Dallas while Purdue finished the year 22-8.

Purdue center Stephen Schellner sank two shots from the line with 1:46 remaining to pull Purdue ahead 72-71. Mays lost the ball out of bounds on the next Texas possession but Tony Jones missed a 3-pointer and Jimmy Oliver fouled Mays for the winning free throws. Jones drove into the lane for Purdue's final shot, but the attempt was batted away by 6-8 Myers.

Joey Wright scored 20 points and Lance Blanks added 19 for the Longhorns. Schellner, the nation's most accurate shooter entering the game, missed 10 of 16 shots from the field, finishing with 18 points — his worst performance since the second game of the season. He finished his career at 68.6 percent, breaking the NCAA career mark of 67.8 percent set by Oregon State's Steve Johnson

Growing Vegetables

Successful gardens don't just happen

Successful vegetable gardens are not accidental, but are the result of planning, constant care and the desire and interest to make things grow. In return, vegetable gardening is satisfying because it allows you to get the freshest food harvested at the perfect stage of maturity.

Organic gardening differs from "conventional" gardening mainly in the areas of fertilization and pest control. The organic gardener prefers to use natural and organic materials and methods while the conventional gardener combines all the materials and methods available.

Soil preparation is a very important beginning step in organic gardening since the basis for organic gardening is incorporating abundant quantities of organic materials into the soil. The organic materials may be in the form of animal manures, plant materials, cover crops or compost.

Adding organic matter benefits the soil by adding conditioning and structure to the soil. It increases the soil's ability to hold nutrients and moisture, supports the soil's microbiology and contributes nutrients. Organic materials must be broken down by soil microbes hence the release of nutrients is slow.

Since organic materials break down slowly, they usually need to be worked into the soil about three weeks ahead of time.

Clumps of undecomposed organic matter can interfere with young plants and seedlings by restricting growth, nutrient uptake and it can cause disease. Organic materials that won't have enough time to decompose in the garden should be composted first.

A compost pile is simply a pile made of leaves, straw, grass, clippings, kitchen refuse, manures, soil, fertilizers, water and air. Start by spreading your organic materials, add a layer of soil, one fertilizer then repeat the periods when infestations of garden pests are high, control by natural means may be difficult. First, use resistant varieties when possible. Certain varieties of tomatoes, for instance, are resistant to certain diseases. Also, always plant seed from disease free plants and select pest free transplants at the garden center.

Incorporate your organic matter early so it has a chance to decompose before planting. Use a mulch since vegetables that touch the soil may rot. Clean up crop refuse as soon as possible since it may harbor pests and diseases. Also, remove weeds as they harbor insects and diseases as well.

Water early in the morning so that plants are not wet at night. Remove diseased plants from the garden as soon as possible. Some diseased plants should not be put in the compost pile.

Many insect problems can be controlled by frequent inspections and hand picking the insects. I call this method the layers. The soil provides the microorganisms needed to break down the materials while the fertilizer provides the food for them. The pile needs to be kept moist, but not wet and it should be turned after three or four weeks to provide air. Compost should be ready for use anywhere from two months to a year depending on the time of year and types of materials added.

Organic gardening also differs from "conventional" gardening in the area of pest control during

Prevention best antidote for poisonings

DEAR READERS: It's Poison Prevention Week again, and I am happy to report that because of poison prevention awareness, deaths of children under the age of five due to household chemicals and medications have declined substantially since 1972. I will continue to focus on children, who are still involved in more than half of our poison exposures. However, the next largest group who seems to be at risk from accidental poisoning is our senior citizens!

People over 65 constitute 11 percent of the U.S. population, and they take 25 percent of all prescription drugs sold.

Here are some rules for seniors to follow:

MEDICATIONS:
READ THE LABEL BEFORE TAKING THE PILL: Too often seniors take medication without checking the labels. If the medication is taken during the night, they either don't put on their glasses, or they don't turn on the light because they are afraid of bothering someone.

DON'T TRUST YOUR MEMORY: Some seniors tend to forget things they do routinely. They know how many pills to take and when to take them, but they can't remember if they took them or not.

ADVICE

CHECK THE EXPIRATION DATE AND DISCARD OLD MEDICATION: It is hard to throw away old prescriptions when they cost so much, but if the expiration date has passed, throw the medicines away, because they can lose their potency or break down and react differently with other medications, thereby making them risky, also, a child can find them and ingest them accidentally. (Always keep medications in their original containers.)

DON'T SHARE YOUR PRESCRIPTION WITH OTHERS — OR TAKE SOMEONE ELSE'S MEDICINE.

CHILDPROOF YOUR HOME:

Store all cleaning supplies out of sight and out of reach of children. Here's a checklist of potential poisons found in almost every home. These products should be locked up or kept out of reach of children. Never store them under your sink where a toddler can find them.

Kitchen: aspirin, vitamins, furniture polish, detergents, cleaners, ammonia, air freshener.

Laundry: bleaches, detergents, disinfectants.

Bedrooms: all medications, cosmetics, perfumes.

Bathrooms: all drugs, pills, shampoo, nail polish and polish remover, deodorants, bath oil, lotions and hairpray.

Closets/attic/storage: rat, roach and ant poison, mothballs, all aerosol sprays.

Garage/basement/workshop: lye, gasoline, kerosene, lighter fluid, paint, paint remover and thinner, anti-freeze.

GENERAL: Some flowers and plants are poisonous. Protect your children and your pets by keeping them inaccessible.

GRANDMA'S (OR MAMA'S) PURSE: If you carry pills or cigarettes in your purse, do not leave your purse where a child can get into it.

FIRST AID FOR POISONINGS: Keep ipecac syrup on hand in your home, but do not use it except on the advice of your poison center physician. (Call information now for your local poison center's 24-hour hot-line number and keep it on or near your phone.)

Poison prevention is the best antidote for poisonings, but accidental poisonings can occur in any home. The natural impulse is to act at once, but the wrong treatment for poisoning is often more harmful than none. So, call your poison center or physician for advice immediately.

Since we opened, we've had a lot of accolades on both our restaurant and our food. One in particular needs mentioning: TV Channel 9's Mystery Diner. She awarded us 4 forks for excellence and complimented us on our pasta, soups, salads and special entrees. After seeing her critique on TV, I asked our chef: "Who was that Mystery Diner?" He looked out the window and said, "I don't know... but I'd sure like to thank her... Hi, Ho Silverwarrior... Attaway!" So much for our chef.

Aspirin substitutes gentler on stomach

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have spinal osteoarthritis. The use of ibuprofen has triggered chronic gastritis. Are there any anti-arthritis medications that won't damage the stomach?

Is it true that both enteric-coated and injectible aspirin also adversely affect the stomach?

DEAR READER: Unfortunately, aspirin, ibuprofen and prescription anti-inflammatory medicines often cause stomach upset, irritation (gastritis) and — sometimes — peptic ulcer. Although enteric-coated aspirin, which dissolves in the intestine instead of the stomach, is less likely to cause gastric irritation, it still may cause some distress. I don't know of any doctor who recommends injectible aspirin. Therefore, I think you have three choices.

First, try acetaminophen (Tylenol). It is safe and will not upset your stomach, although it is not as strong as prescription drugs.

If this is ineffective, ask your doctor to try one of several non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs — such as Voltaren, Indocin or Motrin — until you find one that agrees with you. In addition, you might take antacids (Maalox, Gelusil and Mylanta) with the medicine because these substances often alleviate the irritation caused by NSAIDs.

Third, ask your doctor about Cytotec, a new drug marketed specifically to relieve the stomach problems caused by aspirin and NSAIDs. With Cytotec, you'll be able to take any anti-inflammatory drug without the risk of gastritis or ulcer; however, you may find that taking an additional medicine is not only inconvenient but expensive.

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

However, in other people, the joints are somewhat unstable: the mandible tends to slip slightly out of joint when the mouth is opened widely, even when the mouth is only partially opened.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would you comment on TMJ (temporomandibular joint) syndrome? I'm specifically interested in the symptoms and diagnosis.

DEAR READER: The temporomandibular joints, where the mandible (jaw bone) meets the temporal (skull) bones, are on either side of the face, just in front of each ear. The temporomandibular joints act like a hinge when the mouth opens. Ordinarily, this movement is smooth, silent and pain-free. In some circumstances, when the mouth is opened widely, normal people can feel or hear a click.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have spinal osteoarthritis. The use of ibuprofen has triggered chronic gastritis. Are there any anti-arthritis medications that won't damage the stomach?

Is it true that both enteric-coated and injectible aspirin also adversely affect the stomach?

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Do you wonder why South was so slow about getting to game? Bear in mind that North was not really raising spades but merely showing preference. If North had a minimum response with his strength in minor-suit junk cards (queens and jacks), South might very well wish he had stopped in only two spades. However, North had an ace as well as a prime card in trumps, so he was happy to accept the game invitation. He was not so happy with the play of the hand. Declarer won the king of hearts. This took the ace and ruffed a heart with the nine of spades. East overruffed with the queen and led back a trump. Declarer took that with the ace in his hand and ran four more high trumps. Eventually he got to dummy with the club ace and led a diamond to the king. West took the A-Q of diamonds and another heart trick, and that was down one. Declarer's play was inexcusable. He can gain nothing by ruffing the third heart with the spade nine rather than the king, since his plan is to ruff a club back to his hand and ruff the last heart anyway. In fact, best play is for declarer to win the first heart and go to dummy with the club ace to lead up to his other high heart. This gives declarer some extra play in those instances when West is leading from a six-card suit and East has only a singleton heart.

HOROSCOPE

YOUR BIRTHDAY
March 20, 1990

There is a possibility you might become involved in a very interesting enterprise in the year ahead. What develops could be brought about by chance, yet it may turn into a profitable second source of income.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
The urge to splurge might be a strong inclination with which you'll have to contend today. If it manages to get the upper hand, your credit cards could get a real workout. Major changes are ahead for Pisces in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
It might be wise to reevaluate today any big deals in which you're presently involved. Be sure they actually have the potential you believe them to have.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
The road to Hades is paved with good intentions, and there's a chance you might add some fresh brick and mortar to it today. Don't make promises you cannot deliver.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Someone you like might ask you to help sort out some complications today. Do what you can to help, but think twice before making an unsecured loan or co-signing legal documents.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Taking things for granted today where your career is concerned could contribute to your downfall. Double check all of your positions, especially those that appear to be obvious shoo-ins.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Optimism is a constructive asset today, but wishful thinking could be self-defeating. You might think you're the former, but in actuality, you may be the latter.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Don't grab the managerial reins from the hands of another today unless you're absolutely certain you can do a better job. If you foul up, it could be very embarrassing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

Don't be intimidated today by people who flaunt the trappings of power. This could be just a big facade which needlessly puts you in a subservient position.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Uncharacteristically, your motto for today might be, "Don't do now what you can put off until later." Unfortunately, the later to which you refer might be closer than you think.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Where gambles are concerned today you may be relegated to the role of sweetener in the pot for others. Even if you're holding aces, don't up the ante.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Don't pawn off on others today matters that you hope to conclude. Those to whom you delegate the task may attempt to pass the buck themselves and nothing will be accomplished.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Owing up to your own shortcomings could be exceptionally difficult for you today. You'd much rather help remodel others than make any corrections in your own make-up.
