'Disciples Of Christ' One Of U. S. Largest Protestant Bodies

By LOUIS CASSELL
 United Press International

In the East, they are known as "Disciples of Christ." In the South and Midwest, they go by the name, "Christians."

Somehow they've never been able to choose between these traditional appellations, their official name being both. The International Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ) is one of America's largest Protestant bodies, with 2,000 local congregations and about 2 million members.

Three main major denominations, which were transplanted to America and from Europe, the Disciples followed originated in the United States in the early 19th Century.

Sought Unity

The founders did not intend to start a new denomination. Just the opposite. Their dream was to end divisive sectarianism and reunite all followers of Christ in one great brotherhood.

Alexander Campbell, a Pennsylvania Presbyterian who became principal leader of the movement, believed that unity could be achieved by restoring the simplicity which characterized the earliest Christian churches.

From the "Testament," Campbell concluded that the primitive churches were very loosely organized, with each congregation controlling its own affairs and ministers holding no special rank over laymen.

He also decided that the early churches had no detailed theological creeds to quarrel about, but were united around one essential article of faith, summed up in Peter's confession to Jesus: "Thou art the Christ, the son of the living God."

Work Together

These two principles — congregational autonomy and "no creed but Christ" — are still the foundation stones of the Disciples movement.

Local Disciples churches, now found in every part of the United States and 48 other countries, MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — What do employers think about job applicants with heart disease?

Preliminary findings from a Minnesota State Health Department survey of industry indicate many companies are reluctant to hire persons with heart disease because they don't believe they have suitable jobs available.

But Dr. Wayne Matly, U. S. Public Health Service official working with the department in heart disease control programs, said most people with heart disease can do almost any kind of work for which they are trained.

"If the employee has been placed at a job for which he is suited," Matly said, "the employer generally runs no special risk. The worker with the unknown or unsuspected heart disease is a much greater risk to the employer."

Matly said an objective method of evaluating the capabilities of cardiac workers is needed for selective placement in positions where they can perform fully without overtaxing their capacity or becoming an economic risk for the employer.

"Such a means of evaluation would be a major step in putting cardiacs back to work so they can remain independent and self-supporting," Matly added.

Another health department heart disease control program is aimed at the homemaker. The average woman with heart disease can usually continue to manage her household, if she learns work-saving methods which require a minimum of physical exertion, health officials said.

With this in mind, they are co-operating with the University of Minnesota in setting up a series of classes, taught by a home economics graduate, to show simple, inexpensive methods of making kitchen, laundry and other household work easier.

Try and Stop Me

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE arrived in Paris one Sunday evening, and ordered a taxi driver to deposit him at the Ritz hotel. "Delighted to oblige you, Monsieur Doyle," said the driver who could speak fair English.

"Amazing!" declared Doyle. "How did you know my identity?"

"Elementary," countered the driver. "I read that you were arriving from the Riviera. Obviously you are an Englishman. Also, only a barber on the Riviera would give a man such a haircut."

"Incredible!" applauded Doyle. "And you had nothing else to go on?"

"One small additional fact," admitted the driver. "Your name is prominently plastered on every one of your seven suitcases."

At these tactics too-astute Mrs. Andre Blumenthal, of New York, Conn., overheard her young son tell a girl in the back seat of the family car. "I'm certainly glad you can go to the club dance with me tonight. I rang up about seven others and they were all busy."

Educator Favors Study In Africa

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Dr. Douglas Steere, recently back from Africa, says expanding opportunities for a year of study in African universities are permitting American students to get firsthand knowledge of a continent in transition.

Steere said he hoped more American students will take advantage of the openings in Africa, and proposed that a number of "mature" students do their third year of college work in one of the multi-racial African universities.

Steere, Thomas Water Brown Professor of Philosophy of Haverford College, Haverford, Pa., and his wife visited Africa under sponsorship of the American Friends Service Committee which periodically sends Quaker leaders on good-will missions throughout the world.

Steere said several universities in Africa are ready to accept American students for a year of study. Makerere College at Kampala, Kenya, is one which will be willing to consider accepting carefully screened applicants.

July-March Term

"Not only is the college eager for these students," Steere said, "but the winter in moderate African climates would welcome the opportunity to have western undergraduates living in their excellent dormitories where they could exchange ideas."

"This is a magnificent opportunity for learning some of Africa's problems at first hand. The term runs July to the following March, a period of the most interesting period of the year."

The students could use the remaining months to visit in East Africa, the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, South Africa, the Belgian Congo and Ghana.

"These are some of the most interesting regions in the world," Steere said, "and the presence of the International University of Rhodesia

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Many cases can be attributed to the nation's post-war economic recession. Perhaps the most long-lasting one, however, will be the rise of the federal debt. It now stands at $275 billion, and is heading higher.

House Speaker Sam Rayburn, Texas Democrat, has estimated it will increase $5 billion this year. Other estimates are that it will rise overall $10 billion to $15 billion. It now costs American taxpayers some $7 billion a year, just to this figure. The rise in the debt is the prospective increase will add another $300 million a year to this figure. The rise in the debt comes not only from increased federal spending for public works as an anti-recession measure, but also from lower tax collections resulting from smaller personal incomes and corporate profits.

What is needed over the long pull, some observers think, is a measure of responsibility and self-discipline that neither political party has been willing to shoulder in the past. When the next cycle of prosperity returns, corporate and personal taxes, they say, should be increased for a period to make a significant reduction in the size of the national debt.

Only in this way, the argument goes, will the interest on the debt be reduced to manageable proportions, and the constant drain on the taxpayers eased.

MAN IN SPACE — Some members of Congress and government officials are showing signs of restlessness about all the talk of getting a man into space. Typifying this sentiment is Senator Stuart Symington (D, Missouri), who has charged a Pentagon scientist with "misleading the people" regarding Army Project Adam.

"Adam" contemplates sending a man into space in a missile nose cone, and, upon reaching a height of some 100 miles, having him released and parachuted back to earth.

Senator Symington, and others, argue that the project is nothing more than a stunt, and that it would contribute nothing to scientific knowledge.

On the other hand, should it fail, it could have serious repercussions on the space program, for it would be difficult to convince the public that the loss of a human life was necessary in this kind of experiment.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senator Joseph Javits, New York Republican, currently is espousing a code of ethics for federal government employees and officials as an aftermath of the Sherman Adams affair.

Javits would set out lines of behavior to avoid future incidents of the kind which saw President Eisenhower's chief-of-staff accepting payment of a hotel bill, an Oriental rug and material for a lunch picnic.

The New York senator has modeled his proposals after the so-called "Dewey Code," which was put into operation in the Empire state while Thomas E. Dewey was governor, and administered by Javits when he was the state's attorney general.

There is nothing new in this business of advocating a uniform code of ethics for government officials. A similar code was widely talked of on Capitol Hill during the height of the "Truman scandals" in 1951.

Nothing became official then, and it isn't likely that anything will come of Javits' suggestion. To paraphrase Mark Twain, every one talks about ethics, but no one does anything about them.

Air Parcel Size, Weight Limitations To Be Liberalized

Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield announced today that size and weight limitations on air parcels to overseas military post offices will be greatly liberalized effective July 1, 1958.

Air parcels have been limited to two pounds and a combined length and girth of 30 inches. After June 30 such parcels for most overseas military post offices may weigh up to 10 pounds and have combined length and girth up to 100 inches.

However, parcels destined for military post offices located in certain countries will be limited to 50 pounds and 78 inches length and girth combined because of internal regulations in those countries which make such limitations necessary.

Questions about mailing conditions for specific military post offices can be answered by local postmasters.

Rev. Armin Olden Returns As Summer

The Rev. Armin C. Olden returns to the Lutheran Hour microphone on Sunday, July 13, as 1958 summer guest speaker. He was regular Lutheran Hour speaker from 1951 until 1953 when he resigned on his doctor's advice. The broadcast is heard on Sundays at 1 p.m. over Radio Station WIOD in Sanford.

A recorded interview from Elmendorf Air Base, with Alaskan Air Force Command Chaplain (Col.) Martin C. Poch will be the first in a vacation series of brief reports from the touring regular Lutheran Hour speaker, Dr. Oswald Hoffmann. He will return to the air to open the program's 26th broadcasting season on Sept. 21.

Pastor Olden, now director of religious education at Concordia High School, Fort Wayne, Ind., on Sunday will begin a ten-week series of very practical addresses under the theme, "Christ Helps Modern Man Solve His Problems." The first message will discuss the problem of loneliness.

"Loneliness comes in many shapes and styles," the noted spiritual counselor will say. He will enumerate the loneliness of being alone, of the crowd, of the institution of old age, of leadership, of being misunderstood, of frustration, of grief, of shyness, of standing on principle.

"Even Christ knew what it is to be lonely," the speaker will say. He will illustrate that Christ was an outcast from His home town, that He was continually misunderstood, and that He was alone in His suffering and death for men's sins.

"Christ came into the world," Pastor Olden will point out, "that no one need ever again feel altogether alone." He will say, "The awareness of God's loving presence in Christ has supported millions of men and women in their loneliness."

Nautical Rules

The manner in which you respect the rights of others on the highway indicates the type of driver you are, and the same can be said of the way you handle your boat on the water with respect to your fellow boaters.

Ever conscious of safety afloat, the Riverside Boating Foundation lists a set of basic regulations which, if followed, will stamp you as a good boater. Simple respect for the rights of others on the water will dictate your adherence to these fundamental Rules of the Road.

1. Meeting. When two boats approach each other head on, each steers to starboard (right) so as to pass port side (left) to port side. In the Great Lakes and certain rivers with strong currents, the vessel going downstream, or down-current, has the right of way over the vessel going against the current. That is because it is easier to control a vessel going against the current than it is to steer one being carried along by the current.
2. Overtaking. When one boat is overtaking another, the one doing the overtaking must keep clear of the one being overtaken. However, if you are in a narrow channel and are being overtaken by a larger, deeper draft vessel, it will be easier for you in the small boat to swing to the side of the channel and let the big fellow have the deep water.
3. Crossing. A motorboat which has another in its "danger zone" (from dead ahead to two points abaft the starboard beam—meaning coming from your right) must give way to it by altering course to cross astern of the other boat, by slowing down, or, if necessary, stopping or reversing. By the same token, if you have a boat approaching your port side (coming from your left) you have the right of way.
4. Leaving slips, wharves and piers. Boats coming out of slips into open water, or leaving berths at piers and wharves, have no rights until they are entirely clear. Therefore, they should proceed with caution and at low speed.
5. Sailboats always have the right of way over power boats except in the rare instances where a motor boat is overtaking one under power. Courtesy requires that sailboats always be given a wide berth. If you have to pass close to a sailboat, do so slowly and on the leeward side (the side on which it is carrying its main boom) so as to cause the least possible disturbance from your wake.
6. Fishing boats whether anchored or underway with nets, lines or trawls out, have the right of way. Simply take it easy when passing a fishing party.
7. Tows. Although under certain conditions power boats have the right of way over tug boats, in general, it is not only good manners but sound seamanship to yield the right of way because a small motorboat is a good deal more maneuverable than a string of barges.
8. Accidents. In cases of collision, capsizing, fire, or other serious accidents, it is the duty of the boatman to stand by and render all possible assistance. It is also a tradition as old as the sea itself that mariners always go to the aid of those in distress. The good boatman is always ready and willing to offer a tow, or loan gasoline to a fellow water sportsman who has suffered an engine breakdown or run out of fuel.

Above all, use your head. If you get into a position where you might legally have the right of way, but it is difficult for others to do what the law dictates, use common sense, courtesy and thoughtfulness in handling your boat.

THE LONE DEPUTY

CHAPTER 20
 "JESSE REGAN drew his gun as he swung around to face Pete Weston, the lightning-fast, smooth draw that Jesse knew had taught him. For one horrible moment Pete thought he had been too slow. Jesse had his gun aimed free of leather when Jesse turned a time advantage that let him get off the first shot.

But Jesse was too fast to be accurate, and so died, with Pete's shot hammering into the center of Jesse's chest. The gunman was knocked off his feet by the bullet. Pete shot him again, and he fell and wanted to face Cole Weston and his men.

Max Barker had been under his shotgun, but he couldn't cover all of them. It was a surprise that held them motionless when they saw the face of Barker's shotgun.

"Drop your gun, boys," Pete said. He kept his gaze on Weston. He had a navy revolver in his hand, and Weston must have sensed it. He remained absolutely motionless. Pete said, "I won't give you all day. If you submit peacefully, you'll get a fair trial and a legal hanging. If you resist, I'll kill you. It doesn't make any difference to me because you'll die either way."

"What charge are you going to arrest me on?" Weston asked hoarsely.

"I have a witness who saw you shoot Red Sanders," Pete said. "You'll hang, all right, and don't expect any help from the Missouri. They're both dead." He seemed waiting for Weston fully to understand what that meant. Then he added, "And don't expect any help from Harry Madden, either. He's seen the light."

Pete was perfectly aware that he was playing a long shot. He heard running steps on the boardwalk behind him, but he held his gaze on Weston. He heard Laura call, "Pete! Pete! Get back, get back, get back!"

"It's all right, Mr. Regan. Weston promised me he'd testify against Weston."

Pete swore under his breath. He needed this assurance, and he was glad Weston had heard it, but he didn't want them on the street now. Curly Stutz, over on the far side, was egging away from the others. If Barker could see him, the rest of the Rocking-C men would be free to go for their guns, and Pete had to keep his gun on Weston.

"Then Weston cried out, 'I seen you do it, Weston! I seen you shoot Red Sanders!'"

The diversion was enough for Curly Stutz to make his play. He stood on the far side of the street, hand driving for gun butt and lifting the Colt from behind. Pete cut his knees with his first shot. Blue's gun bucked and he applied forward into the dust; his gun dropped from his hand as he went down.

Cole Weston wheeled and ran, head down, his long legs driving forward. He was a good runner, but he was not a good swimmer. He reached the corner and disappeared.

Barker said, "Go get him, Regan. I'll keep these buckskin-berris right hammering into the front of the jail and turned the corner. Weston had almost reached the alley. Pete fired and missed, the bullet missing the splinter from the corner of the jail. It was the last lead to his gun.

Weston must have sensed Pete's shot. Knowing that there was no more to be done, he turned. Pete jumped, sliding and dropped on his face, rolling into the tall weeds alongside the jail. Weston fired, his bullet hitting dust at it scurried back. Desperately Pete started the spent shells and released as Weston ran toward him. Weston fired three more times, splinter from the corner of the jail. It was the last lead to his gun.

University Will Offer Russian Language Courses

Courses in Russian language will be offered at Boston University this fall, Dr. J. Otto Edwards, president, said today as he announced the appointment of Serge Alexander Konobov to the faculty.

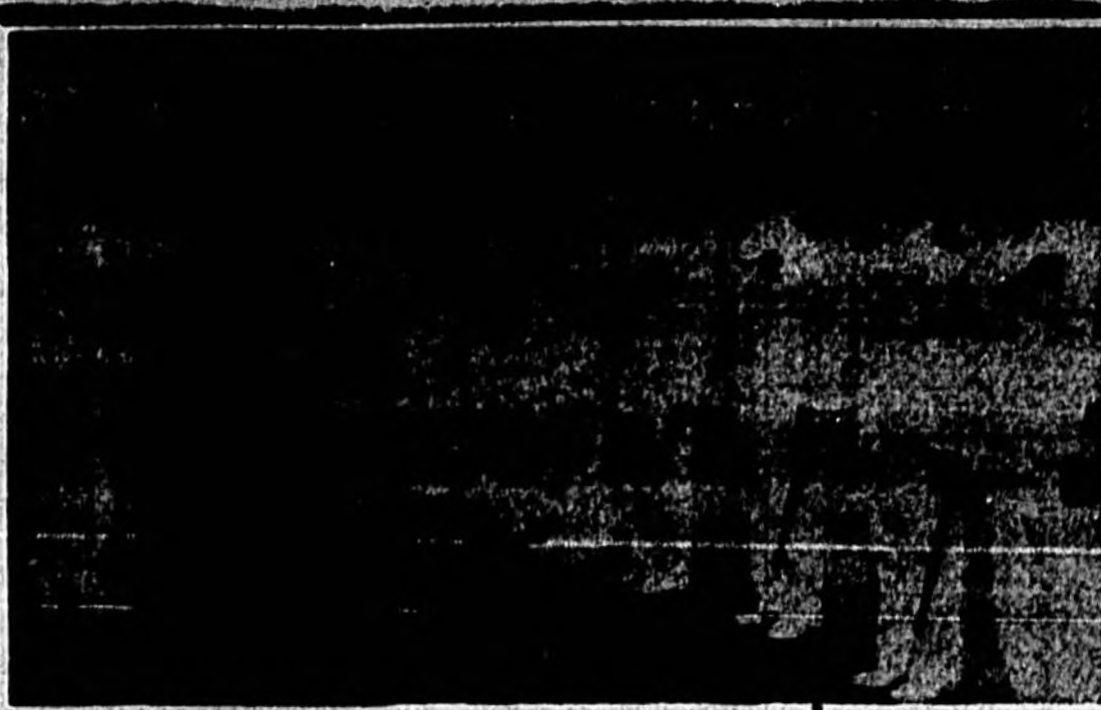

"Recent events should have convinced us that all of us need to know more about the people of every nation, including the Russians," Dr. Edwards said. "Our government tells us that each graduate of a Russian secondary school must have six years of a foreign language and that their favorite foreign language is English. Although there are more than 45,000 teachers of English in this state, last fall there were only 41 universities in America offering instruction in the Russian language.

"With nearly 10,000,000 Russians studying English and only about 7,000 Americans studying Russian, it is apparent that all of our colleges must expand their Far Eastern Studies. At Boston, we would like to train some public school teachers in this area so that high school students can have an introduction to Russian history and language before they go to college."

Dr. Konobov will teach Russian History as well as Russian Language. The University hopes that interest will grow so that a full department in Russian and Far Eastern studies may develop.

Born in Kiev, Dr. Konobov lived and studied in Turkey, Germany, Czechoslovakia, and France before coming to the United States in 1948.

He has a certificate of maturity from the Lyceum of Trebova and a diploma of engineer in economics awarded with distinction from the School of Economics at Prague, both in Czechoslovakia. He has the license of letters from the University of Paris and the doctor of philosophy degree in history and Slavic language from Charles University, Prague. He studied at the School of Economics under a state scholarship and at the University of Paris under the Professor Whittmore Scholarship.

Dr. Konobov came to America after 20 years as lecturer at JRO University in Munich, Bavaria Economic College in Prague. He was visiting professor in Russian Literature at Indiana University for four years. For the last two years he has been a research fellow in the Russian Research Center at Harvard. He also has taught in the summers at Middlebury College and Connecticut College.

In 1928 he was married to the former Betty Jean Babers, of Nashville, Ind., who is studying for her doctor of philosophy degree at Radcliffe College in Slavic literature. She has a bachelor of arts degree from Michigan and a master of arts degree from the University of Indiana.

New Farm Youth Center Dedicated

Approximately 200 persons interested in rural youth of America witnessed ceremonies at the Purina Research Farm near Gray Summit, Mo., recently, dedicating the new Danforth Farm Youth Center. Among the visitors were some 500 donors and faculty members of agricultural colleges throughout the United States.

Principal speaker at the dedication ceremonies was Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson. Of the Danforth Farm Youth Center, he said, "This Center is dedicated to those who are trustees of the future: Youth. Here farm youth groups will have facilities for such projects as club meetings, judging contests, field days, and instruction sessions. Research in this Center will contribute to the success of such projects of young men and women on farms throughout the country. It will help bring about a better animal agriculture for tomorrow.

"We congratulate the Ralston Purina Company and all who have had a part in the building of this Center. To this institution we hope—and we expect—will come youth who dare—youth who aspire to emulate in their own fields and even surpass the achievements of other young people who have dared to pioneer."

Seminole County Home Modern—20 Years Ago

AN EDITORIAL

No doubt, one of the dreams you have in the day-to-day necessity of growing old, is that the declining years will be carefree and comfortable. One of the most annoying things about Seminole County is the fact that the old-fashioned "poor farm" era is still in progress. If the citizens of Seminole County would only place themselves in the position of growing old, helpless, no chance of getting a job, or earning money, Seminole County would have no trouble whatsoever in changing its attitude toward the "County Home" — or, as it has been called, the "poor farm". These people are due more respect than just being assigned to such a life. Imagine spending the rest of your life in a building that could be destroyed by fire at any moment because of just one little slip of carelessness. People who are aging, and the indigent, without a home in which to spend the rest of their lives should not be shoved into the first thing that comes along regardless of whether it is suitable or not. Twenty years ago, the Seminole County Home would have been sufficient and possibly modern—but not today! You see, most elderly people have an income that is their's by law. Many can receive enough to support themselves in a home specially constructed for them and operated by those who are thoroughly acquainted with the care of these people. It is possible, with a modern nursing home, constructed especially for the indigent and the aging, that Seminole County might save thousands of dollars, if those placed in its care are paying part of their way. In the first place, the building itself, even though it is being repaired and renovated to some extent, isn't one that can be called sufficient for the care of people who are old—some bedridden, others not able to walk about. Second—the property on which the county home is located is much more valuable than to be relegated to a "poor farm". The stigma of a work camp should be removed and the very essence of the "stockade" of bygone days should be eliminated. A nursing home can be constructed by Seminole County—and even though the county government feels that it should not be operated as a part of its system—it could be leased to private operators to take care of the old and helpless. Certainly there is a way to take care of our old folks. They need our care, our sympathy, and our understanding—but not in a home such as the one now provided.

7-Year-Old Dashes From Curb Into Auto

A 7-year-old boy was badly injured last night, shortly before 7 o'clock, when he dashed from the curb into a passing automobile near the intersection of 3rd and Park. Phillip Bedard, according to witnesses, ran from the sidewalk and over the curb, into the side of an automobile driven by Kathleen Louise Kimball, Altamonte Springs girl. The youngster, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Bedard, 411 Magnolia Ave., was taken to Seminole Memorial Hospital for emergency treatment and later transferred to an Orlando Hospital. An officer, investigating the accident, was prevented from getting names of witnesses by a bystander. However, two witnesses to the accident were secured. Patrolman Carl Dodson said "By the time the bystander got through telling me what to do and who he was, most of the witnesses to the accident had scattered and gone." According to the investigating officers, Lt. Joe Hickson and Patrolman Carl Dodson, the boy received an apparent fracture of the left shoulder and bruises of the left side of the face. No charges were made pending further investigation.

Defense Attorney Opens Attack Today In Lawmen Trial

ORLANDO (UPI) — The trial of two law officers, one a Seminole County constable, charged with civil rights violations in the recapture of two Negro prison escapees today entered its third day in federal district court here. Defense attorney Rowe Wilkins of Winter Park was slated to open his attack on the charges that Constable George A. Kelsey, 44, and state prison camp guard A. D. Bennett, 49, inflicted punishment on the two escapees without due process of law. Wilkins maintains Kelsey and Bennett were jumped by escaped convicts Johnny Young, 30, and Marvin Merritt, 30, when they were recaptured three days after fleeing the state prison camp at Ovidelo in March of 1955. But Tuesday, U. S. Atty. E. Coleman Maden brought several witnesses to testify the men were recaptured when Stanley and Kelsey shot them down. Young was killed in the incident and Merritt was wounded. Merritt told the court the two men beat him with a club and kicked him after he was wounded. Kelsey is chief of police at Ovidelo and also a Seminole County constable. Stanley is foreman of the state prison camp at Ovidelo. District Federal Judge William Barner of Tampa is presiding over the trial.

Police Begin Vast Manhunt For 'Mad Axman'

LONDON (UPI)—City and county police today pushed an extensive manhunt for "mad axman" Frank Mitchell, who broke out of Broadmoor Criminal Lunatic Asylum Tuesday armed with his favorite weapon. Citizens were told to "run like xxx" if they saw him. Warnings were broadcast to both police and civilians to beware of Mitchell, a powerfully-built six-footer. Police were told "this man is especially dangerous and if cornered might kill." Mitchell escaped from the maximum security Broadmoor institution early Tuesday, carrying an ax and wearing only a shirt. He broke into a nearby house, trussed up a woman and fled in a car with her husband's clothes. The woman said Mitchell told her he was heading for the tough Chinatown district of Limehouse in East London. The car was found abandoned later. But Berkshire Police Chief John Waldron expressed fear that Mitchell may have backtracked and was hiding out in a home in the Broadmoor area, holding its inhabitants captive. Dr. Patrick McGrath, medical superintendent at Broadmoor, suggested that anyone meeting Mitchell should "run like xxx" and phone the police. Mitchell was serving a nine-year term at Broadmoor on seven charges, including one for wounding a man "with intent to murder" during his previous escape.

TO STUDY GUARD CUTS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Maj. Gen. Maxwell E. Rich, president of the National Guard Assn., has summoned a meeting of state adjutant generals in Washington for July 14-15 to consider the Army plan for trimming the size of the Guard from 400,000 to 300,000 men and the paid ground reserves from 300,000 to 270,000 men.

Free Enterprise Is Important Ike Declares

OTTAWA, Ont. (UPI) — President Eisenhower said today Canada and the United States must never let their differences result in their losing sight of the importance of free world cooperation in winning the global struggle against communist imperialism. In an address before a joint meeting of the Canadian parliament, the President said he was sure Canada and his nation could settle their relatively minor differences in a friendly spirit. The main problem of the two neighbor nations was Russia's "military threat and political attacks," he said. "Our system of free enterprise is challenged throughout the world by a state-directed, state-controlled economic system," he said.

Distinguished Character "Indeed this could well be the area in which the competition will be most bitter and most decisive between the free world and communist imperialism." For this reason, he said, the two North American nations must not let bilateral economic problems dominate their relations. "The President saw no reason to be surprised or disturbed to discover that occasionally differences arise between us." "The distinguishing character of the people of the free world lies in the fact that differences between them can develop, be expressed and be amicably resolved," he said. "We in the United States have no more desire than you to seek in our relations with others the silent, sullen unity that elsewhere has been purchased or imposed."

Eisenhower's address before the parliament was the public highlight of his three-day informal visit here in an effort to improve Canadian-U. S. relations, which have deteriorated sharply over economic differences. Met Tuesday Before making the speech, he laid a wreath at the National War Memorial honoring Canada's dead in the two world wars. He met with the Canadian cabinet before leaving the Parliament building. The President and Prime Minister John Diefenbaker held their first discussion late Tuesday five hours after Eisenhower arrived here on the presidential plane Columbia III.

The discussion among commissioners then turned to the possibilities of a new court house. "All these years have gone by and there are no plans for anything," Krider said. Commissioner Swetford admitted that construction costs will go up a half million dollars, five years from now. "The only thing that will help us is a slump," said Commissioner B. C. Dodd. Dodd recalled that the Board of Seminole County Commissioners had set aside $154,000 in a fund earmarked for a new court house and jail. However, commissioners on the board then insisted that the money be turned in so that mileage could be reduced. In other business coming before the board of commissioners, they heard a request from Seminole County Chamber of Commerce President Clifford McKibbin that $10,000 be included in next year's budget for Chamber of Commerce advertising. Junior Chamber of Commerce President Tom McDonald asked that the commissioners appropriate $2,000 for their work. A letter was read from Gov. LeRoy Collins asking the board of commissioners to support the county sheriff in his fight against bolita. However, Sheriff J. L. Hobby told the board that bolita did not exist in the county. An appeal by J. L. Thomas to construct a trailer court in Geneva at the intersection of State Road 406 and 46 was denied. A number of Geneva residents testified against the trailer park construction and the damage it might do to the community. Four plans were approved by the board of Commissioners adding additional lots to the already growing maze of subdivisions throughout the county.

10 Pct. Social Security Benefit Boost Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Clifford P. Case (R-N.J.) proposed a 10 per cent boost in Social Security benefits today as a fair share for the aged and an effective anti-recession measure. But his bill and similar legislation were given only a slim chance of enactment at this session of Congress. The Senate Finance Committee, now considering the House-passed retirement bill, was open on the key stumbling block, the fast action on Social Security Finance Chairman Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.) has made it clear he would expect thorough hearings on any "comprehensive" bill. "One GOP member of the committee said final passage of legislation to boost benefits to the aged and family survivors is 'out of the question' if Congress hopes to adjourn in August. Case, who planned to formally introduce his measure later today, explained his plan would boost the Social Security tax on employees and employers to 3 per cent in 1960 and then by another one-half of one per cent every four years until the maximum of 4 1/2 per cent was reached in 1975. For 1958, the maximum rate would go to 4 1/2 per cent in 1958 and to 4 3/4 per cent in 1975. Case's bill would increase from $4,900 to $4,900 the earnings base on which Social Security taxes and benefits are computed. He said about 900 million dollars in additional benefits would be paid out in the 12 months following Sept. 1, effective date of his proposed revision.

AIR CONTROL RULES BLAMED

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Air Force has blamed inadequate air traffic control rules for the collision of a military jet plane and a Capital Airlines Viscount near Brunswick, Md., on May 30 in which 13 persons were killed. The report to the Civil Aeronautics Board, which is investigating the accident, criticized flight rules which permitted the jet to operate on the "see and be seen" visual flight principle in the same air space used by the Viscount.

Commission Okays $800 For Awnings

The Board of Seminole County Commissioners approved an $800 expenditure yesterday for aluminum type awnings over the entrance of the Seminole County Court House and the Seminole County Health Department.

The proposal to spend the $800 was objected to strenuously by Chairman John Krider who said "I don't believe it is good, honest, and smart business. There are things we need more than that." Krider was speaking of the renovations in the court house to enlarge quarters occupied by the County Tax Assessor and County Tax Collector so that additional room could be made available for machines and work space. "We have only $2,500 left and the job may take all of that and more," said Krider, "and I think it is the most important." However, commissioners agreed with Commissioner Fred Dyson and approved the addition of an aluminum awning on two buildings which Commission Chairman Krider called "worn out."

World Situation CofC Guest Speaker's Topic

Captain James D. Ramage, Commander Heavy Attack Wing One, was the principal speaker last night at a meeting of the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors. Captain Ramage asked members of the board to "take a look with me at the world situation today and see where we are." Principal developments, he pointed out, are in the rise of new countries with high ideas and unstable governments. And as the second point he said "on both sides of the Iron Curtain we have great masters of weapons of destruction." The fact that Russia has tried to dominate the world is not new, said Capt. Ramage. But, they have selected means other than military to conquer. The threats are these: military, political, economic and psychological; along with their tremendous industrial base, he pointed out. "Taking a look at ourselves," said the Captain, "we have depended mostly on massive retaliation. But, there has been a lot of soul-searching these last two or three years. "In measuring our capability we have learned to fight wars for limited objectives," he said. But there are a lot of people who say that is impossible—it's all out war. So, he said, "we are going to have to tailor our forces to meet them." Speaking of world areas where unrest to communism is a tar-norm, Captain Ramage pointed to Asia, the Middle East, North Africa, and South America is even on the time table. "All of Africa is actually a primary target for communism," he added. It appears that we have to have mobility," he said and added "in addition to the ability to partici-

Rumor That Seeing Dogs Available With Tabs False

John Krider, Manager of the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce announced today that the false and vicious rumor that Seeing Dogs may be obtained by saving and redeeming red telephone tabs from cigarette packages continues to be circulated throughout the county. "The fact is," the Chamber manager stated, "these famous guide dogs cannot be secured in this way, nor for the collection of match folder covers, or any other article. Such collections can only result in disappointment to blind people and their friends who save the articles." George Wornitz, Jr., Vice President of the Seeing Eye, had advised the National Better Business Bureau with which the Chamber is affiliated, that this rumor persists despite continuing efforts to correct it, and is now spreading with alarming rapidity throughout the county. "Here are the facts," Mr. Wornitz stated: "Any blind person between the ages of 16 and 35 who wants a Seeing Eye dog should communicate directly with The Seeing Eye, Morristown, New Jersey. His eligibility will be established promptly. No blind person who is otherwise eligible, is ever denied a Seeing Eye dog for lack of funds."

Law Officials Arrest, Charge Man With Passing Bad Checks

A 31-year-old man who says he has no particular address in the Sanford jail today charged with passing a bad check. William E. Clark was arrested shortly before 4:30 yesterday afternoon in the Hollywood Shop as he attempted to pass another check in payment for merchandise. Shortly after 4 o'clock, yesterday, according to Sanford Police Department Lt. Joe Hickson and Patrolman Carl Dodson, Clark bought two gallons of paint at the Sherwin-Williams store on Magnolia Ave. giving a $25 check in payment. Clark received $13.15 in change. Ronnie Russel made the sale at the paint store but Bob Landreth, credit manager of the store, became suspicious and had Russel trail the check passer to the Hollywood Shop while he checked the validity of the check with a local bank. Finding that the writer of the check had no account in the local bank, Landreth called the Sanford Police Department. Patrolman Carl Dodson arrested Clark as a purchase of women's wear was being wrapped and a sales slip rung up. A woman companion waited for Clark in a nearby tavern and she too was taken into custody. Clark admitted last night that he had been arrested before on bad check charges and revealed that his wife, Marjorie Clark, had served a six month term for passing bad checks. An unverified report was that Marjorie Clark was now serving a six month term for passing bad checks and is being held in a Lakeland jail. Evidence that other checks have been passed is shown in the number of new items, recently purchased, in his luggage. His woman companion denies taking part in any of the check passing forgeries claiming that she has been with him for only one day. They were registered at a local hotel under another name as man and wife. Billboards and other paraphernalia found in his luggage give addresses in Barrow, St. Augustine, Orlando, Lakeland, DeLand, and identification in one billiard reveals a California address. Local police, Lt. Hickson and Patrolman Dodson, said they have every reason to believe that Clark has operated his check passing racket in other places. Clark is supposedly a truck driver and according to identification has worked for several trucking firms. "Investigation into Clark's activities will continue until we clear the whole matter up," said Lt. Hickson.

10 Youngsters Hurt In Collision

MIAMI (UPI)—Ten small children were injured here Tuesday when a nursery school station wagon collided with two other cars and rolled over. All but one of the children escaped without serious injury however. Little Johnny Gutierrez, 3, was hospitalized with head injuries. He was listed in "fair" condition today. Police said the driver of the station wagon, Mrs. Winifred C. Zellars, 47, will be charged with running a stop sign. Patrolman James Knight said Mrs. Zellars ran a stop sign and the station wagon was struck by a car driven by Clifton J. Walker, 47, who was not hurt. The school car glanced off a parked car nearby and flipped over. The children, except for young Gutierrez, were treated for cuts and bruises and released. They ranged in age from three to eight. Mrs. Zellars was also uninjured. "When I got there, the kids were crawling out of the windows on their hands and knees," said Knight. "There were never so many kids—all of them crying."
