Sea wall shows signs of disrepair

SANFORD - The Lake Monroe sea wall in Sanford is in need of repairs, with the section around Memorial Park in poor condition and water starting to seep through parts of the wall around the Marina Boat Docks.

a report to the city said. The Sanford City Commission received a briefing on the sea wall's condition at Monday's work session, then approved phase two design services by Teng & Associates for $43,108. The city is examining preliminary design alternatives and cost estimates to make repairs to the sea wall.

Mayor Larry Dale said the city would need to repair the wall, then maintain it in good condi-

"I would think that our crews could do some of this," Dale said. "It would take a lot of their time. Let's identify a rouline maintenance schedule. What amazes me is that for 80 years there was no system of maintenance. It's a concern, because if we do nothing it will deteriorate."

Teng $ Associates said repairing the section of the sea wall around Memorial Park should be the city's number

We can examine Memorial Park as a stand-alone repair," Richard Jarmakowicz, regional manager for Teng & Associates inc. said. Then, you'll need to consider what you'll do with the rest of the wall."

The area of Memorial Park is subjected to more severe rising and failing of waves than other parts of the wall, causing more damage, Jarmakowicz said. He said the number of people walking on top of the wall also causes damage.

*One comer of the wall has actually moved a foot or two," Jarmakowicz said. "We would suggest more severe type of warnings. I can just picture a small child running and getting

School board hears final arguments in students' appeal

STAFF WRITER

SANFORD - The Seminole County School Board heard final arguments Tuesday in the administrative hearing for two Seminole High School football players appealing a suspension from the team under the district's good citizenship code.

The district's good citizenship code governs the behavior of students involved in extracurricular activities, both on and off campus. Jeremy Taylor, 18. and Lee Moore, 16, were suspended by principal Gretchen Schapker from the team for 30days on Sept. 8. The students, however, were permitted to play football while the auspensions were under appeal.

The parents of Taylor and Moore are appealing the auspension stemming from the investigation of an incident at New Smyrna Beach on Labor

Thomas Moore, Lee's father, gave a statement to the School Board on why he decided to appeal the suspension.

"I'm here to protect my son." Thomas Moore said. "He knows he violated the rules. I have punished him. We're here because my son was persecuted by Ms. Schapker without reasonable and fair treatment, and without following due process. She put an albatross around his neck."

Moore said questioning by Schapker led teammates, coaches, and teachers to think Lee was responsible for the demise of the school's football scason.

Airport gets new training runway

STAFF WRITER

SANFORD - A new 3,500 foot runway that will case safety concerns opened Monday at the Orlando-Sanford Airport.

The runway is located 4,300 feet from the airport's main runway. For six months, the runway will be used primarily by pilots in training, flying smaller planes than on the main runway.

The best analogy is that if you're in a small Yugo you don't want to be next to a gigantic Mack truck," Victor White executive director of the Sanford Airport Authority, said. "This has been in the planning stages for a long time. It will make the airport significantly safer."

After six months, the airport plans to build a taxiway next to the new runway, White said.

taxiway, allowing for increased traffic on the runway. Lights will be installed in aix months, allowing for night flights from the new runway.

The airport and the Federal Aviation Authority (FAA) also moved a step closer Monday to adjusting the altitude that planes fly at when they enter the airspace of the airport. The airport is attempting to make the airspace more compatible for airlines of difference sizes that are moving at different speeds, White said.

On Monday, the FAA scheduled a meeting with pilot and user groups to meet concerning the altitude and airspace issue in late January. The airport is hoping to have new rules in place by August of 1999, although the FAA has not agreed to that goal, White said.

Shuttle commander has close Sanford ties

STAFF WRITER

SANFORD - When mission commander Robert Cabana returned to Cape Canaveral Tuesday night after 12 days in orbit on the shuttle Endeavor. cousin Fred Rogers of Sanford was waiting to greet him. "I'll have to wait a week, since he'll first go through de-briefing and then go to Houston," Rogers said. Then, I'd love for him to spend time here."

Rogers said having a cousin who is an astronaut makes him feel overwhelmed.

"How would you feel if your cousin is in space," Rogers said. "Part of your bloodline is up there floating in the universe."

Rogers and Cabana grew up stx blocks from each other in Minneapolis, MN. Cabana preferred comedy movies over science fiction, Cabana said. The two spent many hours together.

We had a pond in back of our house," Rogers said. "Bob and I would make an ice skating rink. He had to make the rink a perfect oval. Just like when he cut others' yards, he was always meticulous. His perfectionism made him what he is today."

Rogers said he watched TV with pride when Cabana allowed Russtan cosmonaut Sergei Krikalev go before him into the Space Station.

He could have up-staged him," Rogers said. "Instead, he let him go first. That's the kind of compassionate person he is. He's very caring to people, his place in history, and family. He's very humble, too. His choice of words is very precise and caring."

Cabana is a 1971 graduate of the Naval Academy in Annapolis, MD, Rogers said. Cabana joined the Astronaut Program in 1981. This was his fourth mis-

Cabana, 49, and his wife Sarah have three grown children named Chris, Jeffrey and Nancy, Rogers said.

*Jeffrey is now in the Naval Academy, Rogers said. That makes four generations of our family in the navy."

Endeavor was the first U.S. launch dedicated to space station assembly, NASA said. The crew installed a connecting passageway called Unity to living and working areas of the station. The multiport Unity will be the main connecting point for later U.S. station modules and components.

The U.S.-built Unity component in the shuttle's bay was connected to the 21-ton, Russian Zarya module without a clear line of sight.

crew connected power, data, and utility lines and installed exterior equipment and hardware, NASA said. Endeaver was the first in a five-year series of shuttle flights.

The space station is planned as a $50 billion cooperative effort between 16 nations to research science and engineering

Construction of the space station faces multiple challenges, stemming from the staggering Russian economy and questions from U.S. senators on how much money to spend on the station.

The station's service module, that would provide crew quarters and propulsion for the early station, is a year behind schedule. NASA paid $60 million for stowage space and research time aboard the unfinished module in September, trying to give Russia the funding to complete it.

If the service module is not completed, a NASA supply flight in May would be the final space station mission before assembly is placed on hold.

Up the chimney he rose... Is it magic, or physics?

"Twas the night before Christmas and all through the house, not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse." So begins the much loved poem by Clement Clarke Moore about Santa's visit to a household where "the children were nestled all snug in their beds, while visions of sugar plums danced in their heads." The poem has inspired generations of children and grown-ups alike with the wonders and the magic of Christmas. Much of the Santa Claus story invokes magic - but there's physics involved too!

Take just one aspect of Santa's visit: at each household stop he parks his sleigh, goes down the chimney and delivers presents under the Christmas tree for the good boys and girls of the house. According to the poem -- our definitive source for Santa facts -- the trip down the chimney is described as something of a free-fall: "Down the chimney St. Nicholas came with a bound." After dropping off the gifts and taking a quick snack of milk and cookies, he leaves: "laying his finger aside of his nose ... giving a nod, up the chimney horose."

Santa's trips both down and up the chimney pose puzzles from a physicist's point of view:

If the typical household chimney is 30 feet tall, simply dropping down the chimney would be dangerous indeed. More than 350 Yuletides ago. Galileo examined the motion of bodies falling under the constant acceleration of gravity. From his results, it is easy to calculate that in free-fall, Santa's descent would take about 1.4 seconds and he'd hit the hearth at about 30 miles per hour! (As Galileo showed, aside from air resistance, the drop time and impact speed do not depend at all on the mass of the body.) So let us assume that Santa probably slides down a rope tied to his sleigh on the rooftop.

Also, as we know, he is "chubby and plump," with a "little round belly, that shook, when he laughed, like a bowlful of jelly." No doubt, by bumping his tummy on the bricks during descent he would further brake his downward plunge, while rappelling down the rope like a mountain climber. In a chimney, this would be messy, so it's no surprise that "his clothes were all tarnished with ashes and soot."

Going back up the chimney offers a much more challenging physics problem. Santa could just climb, hauling himself handover-hand up his rope. But for such a chubby fellow that would be slow and strenuous -- much too demanding in view of his incredibly busy schedule. Even if Santa could leap like Michael Jordan, a quick jump up the chimney is also not feasible. With no room for a running approach, the jump would have to be from a standing start, and the world record for a vertical Please see Chimney, Page 6A

Dale said U.S. Congressman John Mica is working with the airport authority and the FAA to speed the process of approval for adjusting the altitude of airplanes entering the airport.

> "If you look at the demographics there's a market for this airport," Dale said. "But, you've got to have the facilities. This airport was originally only designed for 500,000 people. Now, we're burgeoning on 1.3 million. We are going to be in a much better position to com pete. I'm very optimistic about where our airport is going."

White said the noise study on the airport is approximately one-third to halfway complete.

The airport is recovering from losing 20 percent of its passengers when Britannia Airlines moves to the Orlando Airport in Feb. 1999.

The good news is we now have a little breathing room to address our infrastructure," Dale said. The bad news is, we had to temporarily lose Britannia."

A part of the seawall near Cloud Branch Bridge is also a high priority to be repaired. Jarmakowicz said.

The wall is intact for the most part," Jarmakowicz said. We saw signs of deterioration. Once you have the loss of material in the joints, caused by waves, then you have roadway drainage. Also, this causes reinforcing steel to corrode."

The city will conduct research on what parts of the sea wall belong to Seminole County. such as in the Mill Creek area and east of Mellonville Avenue. Dale said. The city will then need to identify funding sources for repairs to the wall, Dale said.

Race relations among children

Dawn Letus lives in Ulster County, an area of upstate New York that is mostly integrated. Her 13-year-old son. Vincent, is in the eighth grade at the Accord Mtddle School. His best friend, who is black, sits next to him in the eighth-grade social-studies class.

Recently. Vincent's mother told me of a lesson her son had learned in race relations in that class. The teacher was discussing what happened when black men, freed from slavery, came north looking for work. They were willing, she said, to work for as little as 50 cents a day.

Vincent jokingly asked his black friend if he would work for 50 cents a day. The girl at the desk behind Vincent said "That was ruder"

WHAT was rude?" the teacher asked. Another student told her what Vincent had said. The teacher, feeling that this was too important to wait until she could speak to the two boys after class, decided to talk to all the kids about racism.

The teacher told Vincent that she knew he was only joking, and his best friend said it hadn't bothered him. He knew Vinnie.

But then, with racism the topic of the day, some of Vincent's classmates attacked him, in class, for his racism.

News of the incident spread to other classrooms—and to the cafeteria. Vincent, within hours, was known throughout the school as a racist. Back in class, he cried in front of the other students.

He was so embarrassed that it took him a while to tell his parents what had happened. The trony, his mother told me, is that she had dated black men before her marriage, and several members of her family are in interractal marriages and have children.

ive children. "Vincent," Dawn Letus added,

'was horrifled at the idea that anyone would consider him a racist. Like me, he has always taken one person at a time."

Vincent's teacher explained that this social issue had to be dealt with in the marketplace of ideas that is her classroom. Dawn Letus replied that her son had been involved in a private conversation.

"I understand," Mrs. Letus says, "that the teacher believes that racial issues ought to be discussed openly, but she didn't have to do that by making my son the center of the discussion when he hadn't said anything racist."

When I spoke to the principal, Peter Beckwith, he said brusquely, "That matter has been settled internally." I asked him if he had anything more to say. Mr. Beckwith said he would get back to me, He has not gotten back to me yet.

I called Mrs. Letus to find out if Vincent was still disturbed about the incident. "He hasn't talked about it lately," she said, "Although he's a good student, his grades have fallen off— but only in that class."

She is also concerned because her son is worried now about what he can and cannot say. In class, or anywhere.

Vincent has had a lesson in sensitivity training. It takes place, one way or another, in many classrooms— from elementary school through graduate school.

In Brooklyn, recently, a white first year teacher, Ruth Sherman, had some unexpected sensitivity training. She was having her mostly black and Hispanic third-grade class at Public School 75 read a book, "Nappy Hair," written by Carolivia Herron, an assistant professor of English at California State University.

Herron's grandfather had told her to be proud of her nappy hair. She wrote the book to celebrate diversity and to help children feel proud of who they are.

Armed with out-of-sequence photocopies of some pages from the book, a number of black parents bitterly condemned Ruth Sherman at a school board meeting. Some of them threatened her—"We're going to get you!"—and she has left the school, (Only one of her passionate critics had a child in her class.)

"Here was a teacher,"
Carolivia Herron told the New York newspapers, "doing what many don't have the nerve to do—giving black children, especially little girls, self-esteem."

Most of the parents at Public School 75 eventually rallied around Ruth Sherman, but she's afraid to return.

"Nappy Hair" will not be banned at Public School 75. But the children Ruth Sherman taught are confused by what happened. They burst into tears when they found out that their teacher wasn't coming back.

The reading scores at Public School 75 are low—too low. Ruth Sherman, who was a volunteer reading tutor at the school while she was still in college, says, "My children lost two days of instruction at a very important time of the year."

Keeping up with the Bateses

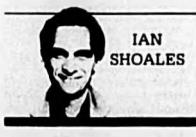

As pretty much everybody knows by now, director Gus Van Sant has unleashed a remake of Alfred Hitchcock's classic thriller, "Psycho."

Well, remake isn't quite the right word. According to the interviews I've read he was attempting to make a duplicate of the original.

He used the same Bernard Hermann score, followed the same shot list, and had an Alfred Hitchcock lookalike mimic the late master's trademark cameo. I understand that the doomed private eye even wears a hat like the doomed private eve in the original. There's a retro touch. When's the last time you saw a private eye wearing a hat, doomed or otherwise? The whole experiment smacks of conceptual art to me, a genre that I thought had died of malnutrition somewhere around 1982. Besides, his effort was doomed to failure before he even began.

Janet Leigh's a bit long in the tooth to play the doomed heroine again. John McIntyre, Martin Balsam and Anthony Perkins have all passed on. If I'm not mistaken, I believe Mrs. Bates herself has refused all screen offers since 1960. Plus, bowing no doubt to the pressures of the marketplace, Mr. Van Sant shot his version in color. Heresy!

Still, doing a shot for shot cover of a previous movie is a halfway intriguing idea. After all, different musicians can cover White Christmas," Tea for Two," or "Stairway to Heaven," and nobody blinks an eye. Elvis impersonators try to imitate Mr. Presley as closely as they can, and are the more admired the closer they get. When President Clinton emulates President Kennedy, his ratings soar (except among Republicans). Besides, looking back on "Psycho" recent remakes. probably can't be any worse than "Lost in Space," The Flint-stones," or "Lolita." Still, what's the appropriate response to the new "Psycho"? What I'd like to do is reproduce my review of the original "Psycho," but unfortunately Mom forbid me to see it.

I did eventually see "Psycho" on television in some cheap motel (very much like the Bates Motel, come to think of it), but I don't think I had an opinion about it one way or another. I even took a shower during a commercial break without feeling even a twinge of terror. That's probably because the shower scene had been cut, for time no doubt, and to spare offense to advertisers.

Maybe what I should do is try to get backing to do a remake of Gus Van Sant's remake. I'd cast Jamie Lee Curtis as Anne Heche, and Anthony Perkins [digitized and colorized] as Norman Bates.

I'd do his "Psycho" one better, though, and make it a television-ready version of his remake, complete with mattress commercials, used car ads, and previews of movies coming soon to a theater near me. I'd also squeeze the frame so it'll fit on a television screen, and cut the shower scene. Better yet, Ill try to do a remake of the 1968 classic "Psych-Out." Maybe you remember it. Jack Nicholson played a hippie in a rock and roll band (with a pony tall yet!). Susan Strasberg was the young deaf woman who falls in love with him in San Francisco's Haight Ashbury District. Bruce Dem was her semi-insane brother. Unless I can get Christian Slater to agree to wear a ponytail, however, this is probably just a foolish dream. Before I do anything, though, I need to check into some cheap motel somewhere and watch "Psych-Out" on television. After all, that's how I first saw that movie too. I need to get my head in the proper place. Say, I wonder if the new Bates Motel has cable. If I were to check into the Bates Motel a year from now, and see the "Psycho" remake on pay-per-view would the world as we know it end? It's worth checking out. Who knows maybe the Bates Motel even offers room service these days. Maybe a mini-bar, and those little three-dollar cans of peanuts. There's a lot of competition out there. Even Mrs. Bates has got to keep up with the

Bring on the Christmas treats

Invite your neighbors to a fun caroling party

If, like me, you get funny looks when you sing in public, then it's time to throw a Christmas caroling party. A caroling party is the only occasion on which I can liberate my singing from the confines of the car or the shower. At Christmas, there's too much good will floating around for people to give you funny looks.

On top of that, our annual caroling party has become the single event of the holidays that my kids identify as "Christmas" (as in "It wouldn't be Christmas without the caroling party"i.

This is a neighborhood gathering, to invite our guests we simply hang a sign at the general store announcing the date and time. We gather at the appointed hour and carol from house to house, picking up grown-ups, kids and dogs as we go. When we're frozen, or hoarse, or both, we gather at our house and stuff ourselves with Christmas goodies, hot cocoa and spiked punch. A good mood is guaranteed, because there's something about singing together in the cold night air that creates that feeling of camaraderie that we associate with Christmas

Miracle of life can be shared through umbilical cord blood

DEAR ABBY: Thank you, thank you, thank you Because of your column, lives have been saved, and many parents can hear the happy laughter of a child with a future. Because of a letter you printed more than a year ago, many families have stored their newborn's umbilical cord blood for potential use in the treatment of more than 30 different diseases. Cord-blood banking is biological life insurance.

Many expecting parents learned about the use of umbilical cordblood stem cells only through your column, and took the article to their OB or oncologists and asked for more information. Many umbilical cord-blood transplants have been performed for victims of cancer, and many of these children are alive

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

For the thousands of families who may have missed your original column or didn't need it at the time. would you please rerun it?

KAY AND JACK MULLINS, APPLETON, WIS.

DEAR KAY AND JACK: Here it is, with pleasure:

DEAR ABBY: I am an educator with the Cord Blood Registry. responding to the letter in your column about donors needed for the bone marrow registry. I would like to tell you and your readers about an amazing opportunity to assist tone of thousands of people in need of stem cells that used to be available only through bone marrow transplants.

Diseases like Hodgkin's lymphoma, sickle cell anemia and leukemia can now be treated with stem cells from umbilical cord blood.

The process of collecting it is painless; however, it must be collected immediately after birth. Umbilical cords are often just discarded. It's a tragedy that expectant parents are rarely made aware of umbilical cord blood. It can be banked privately for their families or donated to the International

Cord Blood Foundation. Abby, please urge families to contact the Cord Blood Registry at (888) 267-3256 (toll-free) or www.cordblood.com to learn more about banking their cord blood.

KATIE HEFFELFINGER. CORD BLOOD EDUCATOR. BETHLEHEM, PA.

DEAR MS. HEFFELFINGER: I'm pleased to alert readers to this relatively new therapy. which became available in the late 1980s. I was fascinated to learn that "cord blood" is the blood that remains in the umbilical cord and placents after a baby is born. Like bone marrow, it has been found to be a rich source of stem cells, the building blocks of the blood and immune system. Cord blood may provide treatment advantages over bone marrow, especially when it comes from an immediate family member.

If the umbilical cord blood of all deliveries were stored, succesuful matches could be found without the time-consuming search for a bone marrow

There is no cost for public donation of umbilical cord blood, but the application and testing process must be started at least two months before the delivery. Parents wishing to store their newborn's cord blood for their own potential use can do so for a fee. However, anyone with a family member who already has a condition for which stem cells may be a treatment option can store cord blood at no cost through the Cord Blood Registry's Designated Transplant Program.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. My husband and I recently moved to New York City where there are minor disagreement over elevator etiquette

My husband lets all the women exit the elevator before going out himself. This means I have to wait outside the elevator for him to join me so we can continue on our way. He insists he is being polite. I say he is being rude to me by making me wait for him.

IMPATIENT IN NEW YORK

DEAR IMPATIENT: Your husband is showing good manners by allowing the women to exit the elevator first. The obvious solution to your problem is to remain inside the elevator with your husband and exit with him, or just ahead of him.

high jump is only 4 feet. In order to exceed that, and reach of feet, Santa would have to have a means to "blast off," like a human rocket. Simple calculations show that, in order to exit in a second or so, he'd would have to be subjected to uncomfortably strong forces; Santa would emerge not merely tattered but fractured.

Surely, "laying his finger aside of his nose," is a teiling clue. Our conclusion is that in his cap he has a little electrical device of a kind that would have delighted Ben Franklin, who pioneered the understanding of electricity. The device evidently must be triggered by his finger, probably by interrupting a faint light beam near his glowing cheek. That would generate a photoelectric signal in a way described by Einstein in 1905. The device could then send a radio signal to activate a winch on the sleigh, thereby winding up Santa's tether and enabling him to rise effortlessly.

So up the chimney he goes - with a little help from physics and into the night he flies in his reindeer-driven sleigh - with a let of help from magic! Happy Christmas to all, and to all a good night!

CHRISTMAS COLORING CONTEST

An example we can all learn from SANFORD _ Last night, I spoke to a student athlete from Seminole County.

She is much like every other kid in the county, balancing school work with sports while trying to get into college and maintaining some sense of a social life.

However, this student is a little bit different.

She maintains an above perfect grade point average while taking honors classes. She is heavily involved in the school from numerous civic minded clubs to serving as an editor for the school yearbook.

On her basketball team, her inspiration, leadership and skill is unsurpassed in a posttion that requires her to play in a very tough position. While sacrificing her body for her teammates and coaches. she helped them attain the ultimate goal of any team...a state championship.

Her name isn't important. What she made me realize is. This student athlete was injured a few weeks ago and has been unable to play. For a few days, she was down in the dumps, feeling sorry for herself and wondering what she could possibly do to get back with her teammates.

She tried to find a reason why this had happened to her. why she wasn't able to be on the court instead of on the

Then, she realized something.

And her relevation can serve as a lesson to everyone, especially at this time of year when too many are concerned with what will be waiting for them under the Christmas tree.

On a day when all of us should be concerned with the children in the community who have nothing while we are able to open presents, have a huge, delicious meal and spend time with our families, this student athlete has put things into a better perspective. A perspective that all of us should take time to consider.

See, things have changed for this person...a person who doesn't want for any material possessions from life, who is loved by her family and liked by everyone who meets her.

Now, instead of sitting around and feeling sorry for herself, she has realized just how lucky she really is.

She has realized that basketball has been a privilege to her and what really matters is that she is loved, secure and is working on an education.

She said that if she never gets to play another minute on the court, she is thankful for the time that she has spent with her team and the accomplishments they have all made.

Now, when she sits on the sidelines, she is a cheerleader for the rest of her team. She said that she felt that by feeling sorry for herself, she may have been bringing her teammates down and causing them to play at a subpar level.

Her love of the game of basketball isn't lost, however. While she is rooting her team on, she is doing exercises to her injury heal. She spends her lunch hour in the weight room working her broken bone and injured muscles. While she's in class listening to lectures, she carries a sponge with her that she can use to strengthen her body and keep her recovery going strong.

In fact, she has requested a special appointment with her surgeon to see if the hard work has paid off enough that she can again suit up and hit the court with her team.

The lesson? There are several. Dedication, determination, desire and above all, care. Care for others, care for what has been achieved and care enough for ones self to care about the future. This is something all of us Please see Kellie, Page 3B

Seminole girls pound Panthers

Defense leads 'Noles to rout of Pine Ridge

By Jeff Berlinicka ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

SANFORD _ Relentless. How else do you describe the Seminole girls basketball team's defense?

It puts 32 minutes of torture on any offense it faces and has led to a strong start to the season for a team that has only one senior.

Tuesday night, the Fighting Seminoles pressed and battered Class 5A-District 4 rival Pine Ridge in a 67-28 rout at Bill Fleming Memorial Cymnasium. The Noles could have made it worse but coach Sylvester Wynn emptied his bench late in the game.

By that time, the 'Noles had proved their point...

"We've been working on our defense," Wynn sald. We're drilling it in practice and I'm pleased with the way we're playing. We have a young team and I have to accept that, but I'm happy with where we are."

Seminole has struggled with some of the Class 6A teams it has faced, but is undefeated in district play and should be considered a lock to earn a trip to the Regionals.

Pine Ridge is considered a decent team and was expected to give Seminole a strong challenge, but the Noles ran out to a 34-7 halftime lead before things got sloppy.

It was 18-2 after the first quarter and the Panthers were barely getting the ball over half-court.

The junior varsity contest also went to the home team by the score of 42-33.

Sophomore Martina Kendrick, a transfer from state champion Lake Mary, had one of her best games of the season, leading the Seminole offense with 14 points.

Two more sophomores, Natoshia Fisher and Barbara Gray, a starter last year, were also in double figures with 12 and 11, respectively.

The 'Noles were also to pull off the rout despite not playing at full strength. Jamala Mitchell, missed the game with a severely sprained ankle, and the team was also without rebounding force Felicia Winningham who caught the flu bug that Wynn sald was plaguing the team. Wynn said he was pleased that no one has come out and taken over the scoring role for Seminole, which has had a different leading scorer nearly every night.

Laqueena Grayson, Deanna Hird and Gray have all supplied scoring and leadership and senior Amanda Cook's defense has also been instrumental in Seminole's early success.

"It's all about playing as a team and I like that everyone's Conference action.

has been leading by example and we also get that from Jamala when she is healthy."

Seminole has also been getting an equal balance in rebounding. Against the Pan-thers, Hird had 11 [to go with nine points) and Kendrick pulled down nine. Next up for Seminole is a Seminole Athletic Conference matchup with Lake Brantley in Altamonte Springs Thursday night. The freshmen tip off the action at 4:30 p.m., followed by the junior varsity at 6 p.m. and the varsity at 7:30 p.m.

Holzworth continues tradition at Lawton

By Jeff Berlinicke

ASSISTANT SPORTS EDITOR

WINTER SPRINGS _ The kids at Lawton Elementary School are really nice and friendly.

It's too bad that, when other schools see their cross country team, they tend to look the other way.

The Lawton cross country team is in its eighth season and annually is one of the county's best teams. Winter Springs High School baseball coach Harold Hitt coached the teams in recent years, but this year, assistant coach Bryan Holzworth took over and the winning tradition has continued. The Panthers ran their first meet of the season two weeks ago at Bear Lake Elementary and placed 26 out of the top 40 runners at the meet, spread out over four age categories.

The winning tradition is continuing. "We work hard every time at practice," said runner Quindarrel Browdy. We practice three times a week and we work really hard.

Lawton students know to expect a strong team each year and it's never hard to fill

Seminole County has a cross country team, but the sport is growing in that age group. Some of the teams that attended the meet at Bear Lake included the host school, Sabal Point, Geneva and arch-rival

The kids at Lawton say they get a special kick out of running against Red Bug, their closest rival.

"We really like to beat Red Bug, Keeth and Geneva," said Krista Cammack. "They are our biggest rivals." The Lawton kids participate for different reasons, but mostly, they just want to be a part of the team. I wanted to get the experience of being an athlete," said Sammy Palmer, "I've been running since I was 5, but I never competed until now." Chelsea Kauss added, "It's good training and I love the meets and to be able to represent my school."

the team. Not every elementary school in Lauren Coughlin was best among the girls' 3rd graders. The meets are usually run separately with boys and girls competitions. The races are divided among age groups and usually last for a little over a mile. Most of the events offer trophies for the top 10 finishers and ribbons for the rest. At first, the kids said they got pretty tired of all the distances, but Krista said she got used to it pretty quickly. "When you get used to it, it doesn't hurt so much," she said. Chelsea added, You feel great when you win and you cross the finish Despite having a new coach, the Lawton kids said they are still having a great time under Holzworth. He makes sure we are doing our best and he yells at us to run harder and never give in." Quindarrel said. "We make it a dog Quindarrel also said he enjoys the fact It also helps that the team is pretty that other school don't like to see Lawton getting off the buses at the meets. Most people don't like to run against

Give guns with care this Christmastime

Special to the Herald

OCALA _ Are you getting or giving a gun as a gift this holiday season? Many sportsmen will be doing just that and the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission (GFC) urges everyone to teach and practice safe gun handling techniques.

"A gun can be a great gift, but the knowledge and education to properly use and store a firearm can make it a safe gift as well," said Lt. Greg Workman, hunter safety coordinator for the GFC's Central Region.

Florida law requires that all gun owners properly store their firearms so that they are inaccessible to minors. A child's natural curiosity and intrigue with guns can have tragic conare left within their reach.

To prevent needless tragedy, all fireanns should be kept in a secured place, with ammunition locked in a separate location," said Workman. There are a number of gun locks and safes available commercially for this purpose, and they are well worth the investment."

If you get a gun as a gift this year, why not treat yourself to a free gift that could very well save your life or that of someone else?

This official publication of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission (GFC), let's you experience the state's unique flora and fauna from the comfort of your easy chair!

Florida Wildlife magazine makes a great Christmas gift for everyone on your list. It's an award-winning, bi-monthly publication jam packed with vibrant and stimulating photographs, original artwork and colorful stories on Florida's hunting, fishing, wildlife watching and conservation-related topics.

In addition, each year the Florida Buck Registry is printed in the January-February issue of the magazine, listing the biggest whitetail bucks taken in the state during the previous hunting season. It also lists who took them and where they were taken.

These and more articles give readers a wealth of information about Florida's wildlife such as where to find an affordable place to hunt, how to hunt turkey, where to fish for bass and how to help protected species from disappearing. You'll even find some recipes on how to cook your favorite fish and game.

New this year is "A Wildlife Friend" - a feature that recognizes those who have helped wildlife in one way or another. And, for every three one-year gift subscriptions ($12) you purchase (a total of $36 plus $2 shipping and handling), you will get a free signed and numbered Largemouth Bass art print by artist Duane Raver. This is the 15" print in the magazine's wildlife cover art series and is available for a limited time.

To order Florida Wildlife magazine send check or money order payable to Florida Wildlife, Circulation Office, 620 S. Meridian Picase see Briefs, Page 3B

SANFORD _ Florida has its share of wildlife listed as endangered, threatened, and specially protected. Anglers, especially boaters, just be aware of the rules regarding these species. Their future is in our hands.

Manatees _ The West Indian manatee is an endangered marine mammal found in coastal waters, estuaries, canals, and parts of some freshwater rivers of Florida. Migratory in nature and sensitive to the cold, manatees move toward the warmer waters in the southern part of the state or to the warm freshwater springs during winter. As coastal and river waters warm up in the spring, manatees are likely to be found anywhere along the coast, in bays, or near the mouths of the larger rivers.

Boaters are the manatee's worst enemy. Fastmoving boats can easily overtake a slower manatee and hit the mammal before it can move to safety or the boater can slow down to avoid the collision. Please obey posted speed limits on waterways where manatees may be present. Typical limits include idle and slow speed zones where manatees congregate and 20-to 30-mph speed limits in channels and arcas outside channels.

It is illegal to intentionally kill, molest, annoy, or disturb a manatee. If you ever see an injured manatee or someone harassing one, call the Florida Marine Patrol's hot line at 1-800-DIAL FMP. To get more information about the manatee, contact the Save the Manatee Club. 500 North Maitland Avenue, Maitland, Florida 32751 or call (407) 539-0990.

Sea turtles _ Florida's waters are home to the threatened loggerhead and the endangered green sea turtle. The main threat to these animals comes from the trash we thoughtlessly toss in the water. Plastic bags and other plastic items are the biggest concern. Turtles mistake them for food and the plastic lodges in the digestive tract, blocking the flow of food and often killing the animal. All boaters should carry a trash bag and put everything, especially plastic items, in the bag. Deposit it in a dumpster back on shore.

(not to be confused with the dolphin fish) is a common sight in the state's coastal waters. This air-breathing mammal is protected by the marine mammal act. Sadly, an increasing rumber of well-intentioned people lure these animals to their boats for a closer look by offering the dolphins food. Healthy wild animals don't need us to give them a free meal. The bottom line is don't feed dolphins or any other wild animal.

Pelicans One species that can use our help under certain circumstances is the brown pelican. This bird likes to hang around fishing piers and bridges looking for an easy meal. But pelicans sometimes fly into fishing lines and become entangled. If you accidentally hook a pelican, never cut your line and let the bird fly away. It is a death sentence for the bird.

SHUPE'S SCOOP

Sooner or later, it will get cold. I keep a rain suit in my boat in the winter, and it's not for rain. When worn over warm clothing. a rain suit will block cold winds and trap in

FISHING FORECAST

Expect good bass action in the river. Bass will be holding in ambush spots such as sand bars and slough mouths. Big fish will be on the prowl, and large shiners are hard to beat this time of year for wall-hangers. Bream and catfish can be found in deep bends, while specks are Snook, redfish, flounder, jack crevalle and ladyfish are hitting at Sebastian Inlet. Action is fast due to schools of migrating finger mullet. Live shrimp and finger mullet are top balts. A few trout are hitting on the grass flats just inside the injet.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports fair offshore action with king mackerel and scattered dolphin. Pay attention to the marine forecast, for it may be a little rough this weekend. Flounder and sheepshead are biting inside the Port, while trout and redfish are rated as fair on the flats of the Banana and Indian Rivers.

Sheepshead, bluefish, flounder, drum and redfish top the agenda at Ponce Inlet. Live or dead shrimp is the top bait. Trout and redfish are rated as good in Mosquito Lagoon.

Although the number of firearm and archery-related hunting accidents has continued to most of the accidents could drop over the past 10 years, there were still 18 such accidents around the state last year - two in the GFC's Central Region. Of the 18 accidents statewide, one was fatal, and

What to expect in a prostatic exam

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: How does a doclor examine a man for prostate problema?

DEAR READER: The prostate gland is the organ that produces most of the seminal fluid. It wraps around the urethra (the tube leading from the bladder) and lies close to the rectum. Therefore, doctors can examine the gland either externally or internally.

By performing a rectal examination, a physician can feel most of the prostate and can tell if it is small or large, symmetrical or not, bumpy or smooth, hard or firm. This procedure is simple, safe, slightly uncomfortable, and provides an enormous amount of useful inflammation. It should be a required part of the examination of any man over 40.

The Internal prostatic examination is more complicated, expensive and uncomfortable. It should be performed only by a qualified urologist and is customarily done under anesthesia. A lighted tube is passed up the urethra. The surgeon then looks to see if the prostate is partially blocking the urethra. The technique is called cystoscopy ("cysto" means bladder, which is also examined). During cystoscopy, the urologist can, if necessary, remove part of the prostate that may be interfering with urination, or the surgeon can biopsy the gland.

Ordinarily, a patient's report of symptoms and the findings on the rectal exam are sufficient to enable a physician to decide whether a urological consultation is warranted. Also, the PSA (Prostate Specific Antigen) blood test is helpful in determining whether prostate cancer is present. Thus, the presence of symptoms plus the findings on the rectal exam in conjunction with the PSA value may provide the rationale for a specialist to investigate further.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my updated and revised Health Report "The Prostate Gland." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156, Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is highcolonic irrigation? Several of my friends swear by it. Are there any benefits or hazards associated with it?

DEAR READER: High colonic irrigation is a whale of an enema. It is an old-fashioned practice that does no good, is uncomfortable and can cause DR. GOTT PETER GOTT, M.D.

bowel injury. In some cases, such a forceful enema can actually rupture

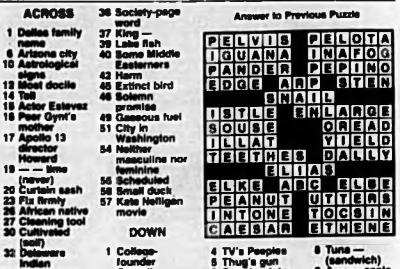

For the past few years, high colonics have achieved cult status. because some misguided people believe that "toxins" are removed from the body by this method. There is no scientific evidence showing that colonic irrigation is superior to an ordinary enema in relieving constipation. In fact, enemas are best avoided. Bran, vegetable fiber and mild laxatives are preferable.

If you would like to write to Dr. Gott send your letter to: P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156.

Continuing the covering rule

By Phillip Alder

Yesterday, I pointed out that if declarer is leading the top of touching honors for a finesse, second hand should not cover the first honor. The correct rule is to cover the last of touching honors. Yet there is one key addition that applies to covering either the last of touching honors or a single honor you might cover: Only cover when it might gain your side a trick. Why don't you cover? Well, you never know, declarer might not be planning to finesse. Or you might be about to blow a trick, as in this deal. North started with a limit raise, showing about 11 support points and at least four trumps. South used a dose of Blackwood before settling in

As is usually the case, when both hands have identical suit lengths mirror distribution - there is a loser or two more than anticipated. If only North had four cards in either minor, the slam would be much better. Here, apparently, South must lose one trick in each major. However, he spotted a possibility. After winning the first trick with the heart ace, declarer played a club to dummy's ace. Then he called for the spade jack, tempting East to cover an honor with an honor.

However, East was ready. There were five trumps in the dummy. Declarer had to have five too. (With six trumps, surely South would have cashed the ace king.) So, West had a trump. And if it was the ace or king. covering wouldn't bring a smile to West's lips. So, East played low, and the contract was dead.
