Naked is the law

Attorney Andy Brumby, above, pleads Seminole County's case before Circuit Judge Alan Dickey on Wednesday, watched closely by associate defense attorney Mark A. Glaser and by the Sassy Merlot's club owner Doug Bangle, right. Dickey ruled in favor of the nude dance club, which the county wanted to shut down for operating illegally.

Nude club dances free from county's law suit

Seminole County asked the court to make a ruling on nude dancing Wednesday, and in little more than an hour found itself undressed by Circuit Judge Alan Dickey.

Dancing nude, Dickey ruled, is a constitutionally-protected freedom of expression.

No, the county could not shut down Sassy Merlot's, whose nude dancers are boldly expressing themselves as of late at 9001 U.S.

Fired county official asks if it's official

It was merely an oversight. He didn't mean to do it, but the letter he forgot to mail could land Seminole County in court.

"So you can flog me," County Manager Gary Kaiser said this morning. "I just forgot."

The problems began last summer when Joyce Suber was fired as the head of the Land Acquisition Department for Seminole County. Suber disputed her termination and several months of debate and hearings ensued.

A hearing board agreed Suber had committed a "major offense" in working for an hour out county time on her son's campaign for property appraiser of Gulf County and that she had solicited contractors who work for the county for contributions to her son's campaign.

Kaiser had upheld their recommendation verbally, but never informed either her or her attorneys in writing so that it was never made

Silver Stars blaze across Central Florida

By DAVID FRAZIER
Herald Staff Writer

Florida is widely known for its retirement communities and a great place, in general, to come and relax. There are theme parks, beaches, world famous golf courses, cruise ships sailing daily from various ports of call, almost anything for the retiree or senior citizen to do. Theater may be the last thing in mind for those people wishing to rest and enjoy their lives. That is not the stance taken by the Troupe of Silver Stars.

The Troupe of Silver Stars was formed initially by a core group of senior professional actors due to an idea from Greta Hanley and Jo Monet. They recognized the enormous talent being wasted because many productions featured only young actors. While not denying the appeal of those young actors, the group realized that audiences, too, are growing older and much of the material being presented was not appealing to them. Therefore, the Troupe

Pack the kids and lunch to go tubing at Kelly Park

By STEVE BARNES
Herald Staff Writer

APOPKA - Lake Atlantic may be flat for the summer, but you can still get tubed at Kelly Park.

Inner-tubed, that is. Pack the kids and a picnic lunch and head to Kelly Park for a cool, refreshing tube ride down the Rock Springs Run.

The spring run is the centerpiece of this beautiful park which is nestled on 204 acres of semi-tropical woodlands. Kick back on a giant inner-tube and relax as you glide gently over smooth, round sandstone and past lush green stands of saw grass while the cool, clear water laps at your feet.

The 3/4 mile run begins in a limestone cave within the park. The wood planked nature trail which surrounds the run offers several put-in points giving tubers the choice of a quick, action filled start or a slower more gentle launch.

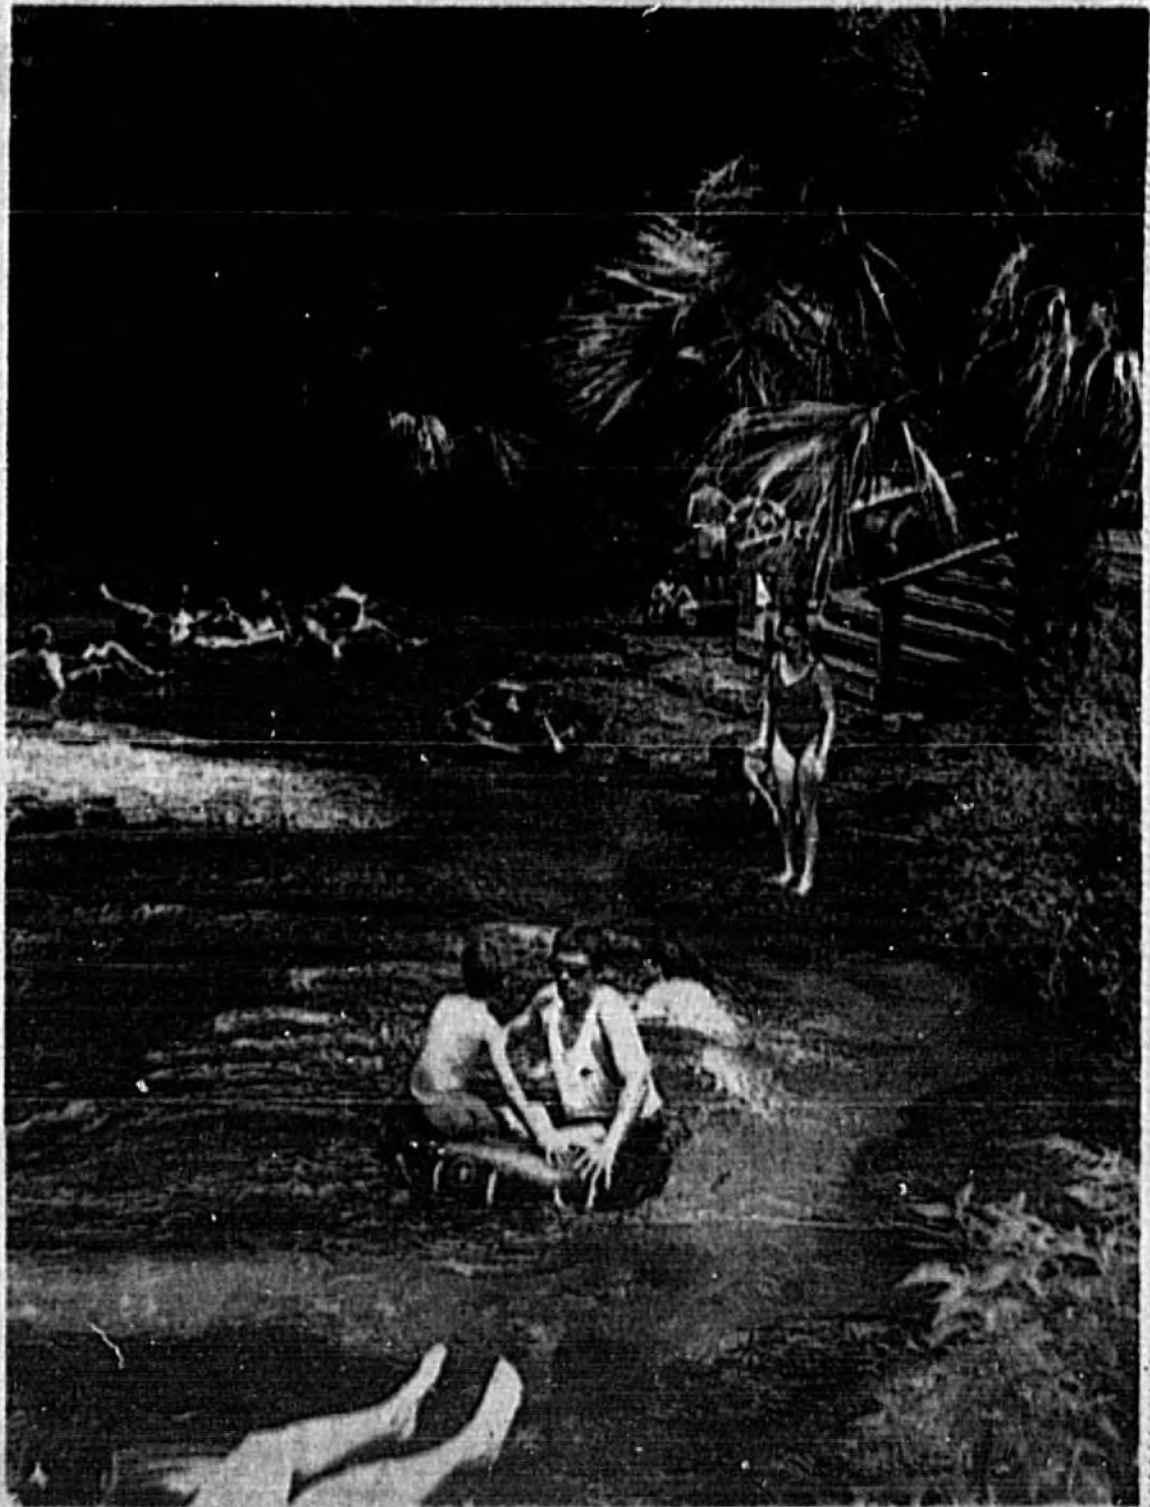

The spring pumps out 26,000 gallons of pure water per minute and maintains a constant temperature of 68 degrees year round. After leaving the park, it meanders nine more miles to the Wekiva River.

As you journey downstream, look to your right for the tributary streams which flow from smaller springs located along the run. Pull off and take a short hike along the ankle deep stream bed where you will find numerous small boats. This is an ideal place to look for fossilized shark teeth and Native American artifacts. Please do not remove these items as they may be of historical importance. They are also protected by state law.

A shallow swimming area is located near the grassy, oak covered lawn. Barbecue grills are scattered throughout the park, as are playgrounds and volleyball courts. Two miles of hiking trails meander through the park, much of it wheelchair accessible.

Also within the park is a 27-site campground. Many of the sites have electricity and running water. Group campsites and pavilions are also available.

Take Dad to the zoo on his day

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

Things are gearing up for Father's Day at the Central Florida Zoo.

There's nothing most dads like more than a good car show and there are quite a few who love to see the great critters who hang out at the zoo. So what better than to combine the two things and make a day of it on Father's Day.

If you bring your father to the Central Florida Zoo on Sunday, June 15, you'll have the opportunity to see some of the finest Model A's on display in the area, courtesy of the Model A Club of Central Florida. Of course, some of the finest creatures anywhere will also be there for you to see as well.

"It's a great opportunity to view and learn about our planet's endangered animals alongside some of our country's classic automobiles," said Andrea Farmer, who has recently returned to the zoo as the public relations director after a two year absence.

Other programs on Father's Day include the Elephant Demonstration at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.; the Snapping Turtle Demonstration at 11:15 a.m. and 2:15 p.m.; the Feline Feeding at 3 p.m. and the Primate Feeding at 3:30 p.m.

You'll also have the chance to see the clouded leopard cubs that were born March 21 at the zoo.

For more information on Father's Day at the Zoo, call 323-3350, ext. 149.

Kick up your heels and have fun

Today is... VICKI DeSORMIER Staff Writer

Sometimes you just want to kick up your heels and dance to a great song.

Your chances of hearing some great traditional Southern music are better than average at the Festival of the Bluegrass up in Live Oak, a couple of hours north of here.

Up to 25 bands will perform bluegrass music in an outdoor setting. Approximately 20,000 people are expected to attend the festival.

If music isn't your thing, you might consider traveling to Nova Scotia for the Shelburne County Lobster Festival kicks off there to celebrate the lobster-fishing industry.

Local community groups and businesses throughout the county host lobster dinners, sporting events, crafts shows, yacht and boat races and more.

Events, which are expected to draw more than 10,000 people, will last all weekend.

In Winnipeg, there will be an international children's festival. A weekend-long festival features song, dance, theater, mime, puppetry and music by local and international artists.

Nearly 20,000 are expected to attend.

And, speaking of children and their literature, today would have been Richard Scarry's birthday. Scarry is one of the most endearing children's writers and illustrators.

The creator of Lowly Worm and other cute critters, Scarry wrote 250 books over the course of his life. His books sold more than 100 million copies worldwide.

For those who are looking out for the natural world, today is World Environment Day, sponsored by the United Nations.

The event is sponsored annually on June 5 to celebrate the anniversary of the opening of the UN Conference on the Human Environment held in Stockholm in 1972, which led to the establishment of the UN Environment Programme based in Nairobi.

The General Assembly as urged the marking of the day with activities reaffirming concern for the preservation and enhancement of the environment.

The Foundation for Environmental Conservation will sponsor a celebration of World Environment Day.

The goal of that event is to awaken people to their responsibilities toward the Biosphere, which they say is the only known or likely source of life in the universe.

On a sadder note, it has been 29 years since Robert F. Kennedy was assassinated while campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination in Los Angeles.

Kennedy was shot on June 5 by Sirhan Sirhan and died the next day.

And when you go out to look at the moon this evening, it won't look like much. At 3:03 a.m., the moon entered the new phase.

Finally, the World Pork Expo will be held at the Indiana State Fairgrounds in Indianapolis.

The largest pork-specific event features free pork barbecue, musical entertainment and a variety of shows, sales and seminars.

Among the celebrity birthdays are artist Blackbear who turns 76; filmmaker Jacques Demy is 68; actor Robert Lansing is 68; and journalist Bill Moyers is 63.

Dave Scott loves kids and simple pleasures in life

By CARTER GILMARTIN
Herald Correspondent

One of the favorite periods of Dave Scott's life is when his two children were preschool and elementary school aged. He says he loved their "natural inquisitiveness and their love of doing things as a family." He describes the most exciting time of his life as "the births of my two children."

It is no surprise, then, that a man who takes such joy in being around children would be an elementary school principal, as he is now at Idylwild in Sanford.

Scott says he grew up in "Old Lake Mary, when a kid could play at the lake and run through the woods, when everybody knew you." He remembers a time when every year there was a town wide Christmas party organized by 80-year-old Ruby Schoblum: "For a 25 or 50 cents donation, every kid in town got a gift." Scott loved being a kid in Lake Mary. "When they built the Little League field, all the town turned out. I have nothing but fond memories. It was like Mayberry."

His heroes back then were "My mom and dad. I've never stopped looking up to them." From them he learned "how to stay calm and not over-react to things and that you just don't ever quit. Important lessons for a principal."

During this interview he took a call concerning a student's safety at home. Upon my arrival he was dealing calmly with an exceptional education student with behavior problems. As I was leaving, he was graciously giving rewards from his desk to two students who had kept a behavior contract.

Obviously student-centered, Scott says he is entertaining the thought of returning to work as an elementary school teacher after taking a year off when eligible for retirement in a couple of years. Retirement means "to have some time to do things I enjoy. The things I enjoy doing don't cost a lot of money." Canoeing and bicycling top that list, along with completely restoring his Dodge Dart and visiting his first grandchild in Jacksonville.

Scott's office has pictures of baseball teams he has coached throughout the years. He's loved baseball all of his life, from Little League in Lake Mary through college. His dad loved the Cardinals. Ted Williams was Scott's baseball hero. In the early 70's it was exciting for him to personally go to a game at Fenway Park in Boston after having listened to broadcasts from there for so long.

These days he is the unofficial scorekeeper for Lyman High School where son Kevin coaches the junior varsity team.

Daughter Robin followed Scott into teaching. She was teacher of the year at Woodlands Acres in Jacksonville this year.

Scott holds degrees from Seminole Community College, Florida State University and University of Central Florida.

It was while he was in Tallahassee at FSU that he did the most daring thing in his life. He jumped into a sinkhole outside Tallahassee that had a 50 to 100 foot drop. He laughs and shakes his head at the memory.

Scott loves surprises and beams with pride as he shares his biggest coup. One Sunday before Christmas when his children were in third and sixth grades, he drove them and their mother, -- Sandy, his wife of 27 years -- to the train station directly after church. En route he gave them little cards that said their Christmas gift from him was a trip to Syracuse to spend the holidays with Sandy's parents.

Grandma and Grandpa Scott met them at the train station with suitcases filled with clothes for the trip and presents and saw them on their way. It was a once in lifetime surprise.

And so he did it all again the next year, surprising them once more.

Scott recalls that while assistant principal at Sabal Point Elementary in Longwood "Someone complained that nothing uplifting ever happened. So on a clear, fabulous day, as the Navy band played 'Up, Up and Away,' Scott orchestrated the release of dozens of balloons, to the applause and shouts of students and staff and observers."

Scholastic Magazine had advertised cash rewards for the balloon that traveled the greatest distance. Scott heard from a family in Maine with a Sabal Point balloon, though it turned out they had retrieved it in Ormond Beach.

Dave Scott

As thrilling as it was, Scott says he has since learned releasing balloons is ecologically unsound, so it won't be repeated. He keeps a photograph taken that day on his wall at Idylwild.

Scott appears to find both challenge and something joyful in every school assignment.

He enjoys children and his own family.

Asked what life experience shaped his lifelong perspective, he is thoughtful. "Growing up in Lake Mary. Everybody contributed, some more than others. It taught me there's something good in everybody."

He finds it everywhere he goes.

Graham hails cities' law enforcement grants

From Staff Reports

WASHINGTON--Senator Bob Graham (D-FL) this week hailed the Department of Justice's decision to award nearly $4.9 million in law enforcement grants to 34 Florida locations.

These grants are the latest to come out of the COPS (Community Oriented Policing Services) Program that was established by the Violent Crime and Law Enforcement Act of 1994.

The initial COPS Grants provided grants to state and local law enforcement agencies for the sole purpose of hiring additional police officers.

Called COPS MORE (Making Office Redeployment Effective), these new grants will provide funding for police departments to purchase equipment and technology, hire civilians, and pay overtime. Agencies will be able to put more law enforcement officers out on the street.

"As someone who strongly believes in the value of community policing, I am very pleased that Florida's citizens will share in its benefits," said Graham. "These grants will continue the great work already being done by law enforcement officers all over Florida."

Graham had a first-hand look at the benefits of community policing last December when as one of his monthly workdays, he walked a beat for the Jacksonville Sheriff's Office. Jacksonville received one of the initial COPS grants.

Although Sanford also received one of the initial COPS grants, the city was not listed as a recipient this year. In this area receiving grants: City of Daytona Beach - $140,700.00; Flagler County Sheriff's Office - $16,206.00 and City of Melbourne - $44,114.00.

Arrest made in auto repair shop probe

From Staff Reports

TALLAHASSEE -- Florida Agriculture and Consumer Services Commissioner Bob Crawford this week announced the arrest of the owner of Dales Automotive and Boat Repair, of Titusville, following an investigation of complaints from consumers regarding the shop's repair work and business practices.

Roger Dale Farmer was arrested and charged with one count of scheming to defraud and four counts of grand theft - a misdemeanor.

The arrest followed an investigation by the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services in conjunction with the Department of Environmental Protection, the Titusville Police Department, and the State Attorney's office for the 18th Judicial Circuit.

Allegations concerning Dales

Automotive included claims that requested repairs were not made, charges were billed for parts that were never replaced, and unauthorized work was performed on vehicles. Several customers also reported that their vehicles had been damaged while at Farmer's shop.

Under Florida's Motor Vehicle Repair Act, the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services is responsible for licensing and regulating auto repair shops. When it appears that a repair shop is intentionally defrauding a consumer, the complaint file is referred to the Department's Office of Agricultural Law Enforcement. This office works with other law enforcement agencies, state attorney's offices, and local consumer affairs organizations to conduct investigations of persons or businesses suspected of criminally defrauding consumers.

Software piracy patrol nabs offender

From Staff Reports

In its latest pass through Florida, the software piracy patrol has collared another federal copyright-law offender that operates in Central Florida, trade officials said.

The Business Software Alliance said recently it has reached a settlement with Florida Diesel-Allison Inc. regarding software pirating by the Jacksonville-based company.

Florida Diesel, a distributor of engines and other heavy-duty auto equipment has agreed to pay $100,000 to settle claims that it violated federal law by illegally copying software. The company admitted employees had been using some illegally copied software programs.

The Jacksonville company has distribution centers in Orlando, Sanford, Ocala and other Florida cities.

The alliance, which includes Microsoft Corp. and other industry giants, has increased efforts in Florida this year to ferret out the use of unlicensed software, officials said.

Since 1993, the watchdog group said it has handled more than 100 cases in Florida, including at least a dozen in Central Florida. About $1 million has been recovered in settlements.

"We probably get more reports of software piracy from Florida than any other state except California," said Bob Kruger, alliance vice president of enforcement.

The group usually gets reports from calls to its hotline, 1-888-667-4722.

Let's do it right

Judge Alan Dickey Wednesday halted another attack that, had it been successful, would have eroded our Constitution to the detriment of all.

We doubt it was easy to side with the adult entertainment club Sassy Merlot's. Seminole County is a conservative, family-oriented community. The county commission was adamantly trying to stop the club and one other (which will have its day in court Friday) from continuing in business under a moratorium the county imposed until it could revise its 16-year-old ordinance regulating nude dancing clubs.

But Judge Dickey wasn't looking for the easy way out. He was applying the Constitution, specifically the First Amendment right to free speech, to a controversial situation.

Andy Brumby, an attorney for Shutts and Eowen representing the county, conceded that nude dancing is protected free speech, but that it may be subject to licensing. That is true, under the government's police power to regulate activity for the safety, health and welfare of its citizens. And that is what the county is attempting to do in redrafting the obsolete ordinances now on the books. In California v. LaRue, the Supreme Court upheld regulations proscribing that "nude dancing and liquor did not mix after administrative findings that explicitly sexual performances in establishments licensed to sell liquor tended to promote rape and prostitution."

"The court did, however, rule that "theatrical productions such as nude dancing are within the protection of the First Amendment." In Schad v. Borough of Mt. Ephraim, the court noted that as a form of entertainment, "nude dancing is not without its First Amendment protections from official regulation."

For the county to have attempted to put Sassy Merlot's and VIP Gold out of business before its new ordinances were in place was constitutionally violative.

We hope county officials will stop wasting taxpayers' money on expensive attorneys' fees when they jump the gun to litigate an issue that was clear-cut not only to Sassy Merlot's attorney, Hugh Trees, but to Judge Dickey and any student of the Constitution.

Work on the ordinances first. These businesses can be regulated, but to attempt to banish them because they are offensive to the mainstream is just another whack at the Constitution.

Here's two cheers for the ACLU

For the first time in its 77-year history, the American Civil Liberties Union is embarked on an endowment campaign. The goal is $25 million, and $10 million has already been raised.

It is indeed a hard time for the ACLU -- as well as for those other civil libertarians who do not regard it as the mother church. At present, there is no looming clear enemy of civil liberties -- such as Joe McCarthy -- around whom protectors of the Bill of Rights are eager to rally.

Even George Bush brought new members to the ACLU because of the scandalously anti-civil liberties campaign he ran against Michael Dukakis (the repeated ascent from the netherworld of Willie Horton and a patriot game which, at one point, had Bush almost literally enfolded in American flags).

Currently, much more damage has been done to the Constitution by a president to whom civil liberties are an irritant. He has nearly abolished habeas corpus; has worked hard to censor cyberspace through the Communications Decency Act; and has eviscerated the rights of prisoners and immigrants while pushing for vastly expanded wiretap powers.

Nonetheless, the $25 million endowment can bring the ACLU additional needed resources. However, it has internal civil liberties problems that money cannot solve. There is an increasing ideological rigidity within the organization.

DONNA BRITT

Slipping into excuse mode

WASHINGTON--I tried not to write about Grammy-winning songstress Toni Braxton and her semi-nude photos in Vibe magazine. Really, I did.

For weeks, I resisted writing about the personal responsibility issues raised by Braxton's hot shots--even when other news events tempted me. When Kelly Flinn dodged a threatened court-martial by the Air Force for lying about her affair with a married man, I abstained. When Frank Gifford blundered into the smarmy extramarital trap set by the Globe tabloid, I looked away.

The beauty parlor made me do it. Since Braxton's sex kitten debut on Vibe's June-July cover, I've visited my unisex Washington salon three times. Each time, I got a wash, set--and an earful from customers who commented on Vibe's shots of the otherwise naked Braxton clutching an artfully arranged sheet and of her standing on what looks like a city street in bikini panties and a transparent bra.

"Girlfriend's trying to get Hollywood's attention," said a stylist, noting Braxton's love of old movies.

"I'm so disappointed in her," sighed a forty something woman.

"She does have perfect breasts," another woman shrugged. "Do you think she had them done?"

"What's this about?" several patrons wondered. Their feeling: Toni's too talented "to have to" pose semi-nude. She did it to get over.

Well, why would a gifted, rich, award-winning singer on the road to divahood detour into softcore-land? Why did Flinn and Gifford risk so much, only to land in such humiliating predicaments?

OK, OK--so Flinn was in love, and although male officers have been punished for similar breaches, nobody's heard of them. But even if Flinn's general discharge last week saved face for her and the Air Force, it didn't excuse her reckless affair with a man who was married--though she says she didn't know that at first.

Gifford, who must never have heard the words "Gary Hart," let his TV hostess wife huffily deny the Globe's allegations that he'd pursued an affair with Suzen Johnson--virtually begging the tabloid to expose him. Of course the Globe was out of line, apparently paying Johnson to lure Kathie Lee's man into a hotel room. But a faithful husband wouldn't have met her there, let alone been videotaped embracing her. Like Flinn, Gifford reportedly griped about the unfairness of it all.

Braxton, of course, is different. Every woman has a right to exploit herself. So when she told Vibe her sex fantasies and that she wants to dress provocatively "before my booty gets flat," I said that's her business. Then she asserted that when Madonna goes around with "her booty hanging out, she's considered a genius,"

Why would a gifted, rich, award-winning singer on the road to divahood detour into softcore-land?

while black women who do likewise "are considered skank (lowlife) whores or sluts."

Suddenly, Braxton slipped out of personal responsibility into excuse mode, sounding like my son, 11, when he moans, "But Juwan's mom lets him!" Even if we ignore the millions who find Madonna a skank, we'd still have Braxton doing what too many blacks have lately done: explain questionable behavior by citing a white person who got away with it.

Once, amazing numbers of African Americans struggled to rise beyond white folks' highest achievements. Now, disturbing numbers of black culprits--drug dealers, corrupt politicians or foul-mouthed rappers--point out, "But while folks do it!"

Sometimes, the charge points out real injustice. Other times, it's a smoke screen: to obscure the fact that the drugs, corruption and indecency these folks are into hurt people, regardless of color. As a people serious about spirituality, we should remember that Jesus never said, "Well, the Pharisees got away with it!" Righteousness is its own reward.

So is showing off your goodies in a twisted society. It's ironic that Braxton, who could have mimicked ladies such as Dorothy Dandridge, Angela Bassett, Nancy Wilson or Tina Turner, chose to mimic Madonna--who if she had Braxton's talent might have been less luridly self-promoting. Clearly Braxton, a Maryland preacher's daughter, has learned Madonna's best lesson: Hypocrisy sells. In Vibe, Braxton flashes her breasts, sticks her hand in her panties and still coos, "I (won't) be having sex again until I'm married."

The beauty shop crowd knows a conflicted message when it hears one. Some wonder what the young girls who once copied Braxton's pique 'do will copy now. Many don't buy "well, they do it" any more than they bought Flinn's or Gifford's excuses.

Some folks despise tackiness, no matter how many film deals the perpetrator is offered. Sure we live in a world where anyone with a notion to flaunt her stuff, sleep with a married jerk or chase women while his poor wife brags about his loyalty can go for it.

But they should know this: The folks in the beauty shop have their number.

JACK ANDERSON

Records we have obtained partially support his story.

Navy's background checks are lax

WASHINGTON--A U.S. Naval base in the serene suburbs of Washington, D.C., is the scene of some bizarre personnel practices.

Robert Carmen, who worked as a security guard at the Bethesda, Md., Naval Surface Warfare Center in 1991-92, believes he was fired because of information he learned on the job. He says he was paid $10,000 to keep quiet.

Records we have obtained partially support his story. Documents show the Navy did enter into a "no fault" agreement with Carmen in August 1992. He was paid $10,000 to drop his formal discrimination complaints against the Navy (among other things, he found "Jew boy" emblazoned on his locker at the end of one shift) and to "keep the terms, amount and fact of this settlement agreement completely confidential."

The Navy claims the entire sum is back pay, and about $4,000 is categorized as such in the agreement. Carmen tells us, however, that he was not owed any back pay and the entire sum was intended to quiet him.

Carmen is speaking out today because he doesn't think the Navy held up its end of the bargain. The former security guard's official record was to reflect that he resigned from federal service, but instead Carmen claims his personnel file lists him as mentally retarded, apt to write members of Congress and a racist possessing Israeli connections--all of which effectively end his chances of further federal employment.

So just what did Carmen discover? That one of his fellow gun-toting security guards, a civilian named Eugene Burton, also known as Eugene Johnson, was a convicted rapist who had dropped out of sight before serving an eight-year sentence handed down by a Maryland court in 1981.

Somehow, Burton managed to slip through the mandatory FBI background check and finger printing required for all federal employees. In fact, Burton's conviction wasn't discovered until September 1992, when he applied for a take-home gun permit.

A year later, Burton was sentenced by a Maryland court to serve out the rest of his sentence. But court records show that he was released to "mandatory supervision" after less than six months behind bars.

And Burton was not the only security guard at the base whose spotty background wasn't initially discovered by the Navy's background checks.

Another guard, who was hired in the late 1980s, was given a job at a time when he was being pursued by creditors for thousands of dollars of bad debt. At the time of his hire, this guard also had an outstanding bench warrant in another state for failing to appear for a drunken-driving citation.

Not until two years after he was hired--and given security clearance--did Navy officials learn about his problems with creditors and his drunken-driving citation. His files also revealed a period of cocaine use in the months prior to becoming a security guard--an episode which the guard blamed on "peer pressure," according to documents we've reviewed.

Even after the Navy learned of these indiscretions, the guard was allowed to stay on the job, at least in part because of the intervention by his boss, who wrote a letter on his behalf to authorities. And by all accounts, the guard has experienced no problems since getting his job at the base.

Nevertheless, Navy investigators might have taken a dim view of his past had they known about it.

County

anyone out of business is to show or at least allege the activity is not constitutionally protected," Dickey said, ruling that the county's adult entertainment code did not apply and Sassy Merlot's needed no license.

This was glad news to Doug Bangle, the club's owner who has counter-sued the county for attorney's fees and $250,000 in damages. Bangle showed receipts Wednesday that Sassy Merlot's had been doing business since February - well before the county issued its moratorium to ban new clubs from opening while it reworked its adult-entertainment codes.

The county sued Sassy Merlot's and VIP Gold, also in Fern Park, for operating illegally. No nudes would be good news, county officials agreed.

Sassy Merlot's, however, easily won its Round 1 action, offering little reason to expect VIP Gold won't prevail at its 1 p.m. hearing Friday before Judge Leonard Wood.

"We knew it would be an uphill battle," said Ken Wright, the county's hired legal gun, who sat and observed on Wednesday as Shults & Bowen associate Andy Brumby pleaded the county's case. Later, Wright promised new strategies for Friday's session before Judge Wood.

Wright said he expected similar tactics from Hugh Trees, a First Amendment whiz who represents both nude dancing clubs. That Trees chopped down the county's case on Wednesday did not alarm Wright. "Hugh Trees is a walking encyclopedia on this issue," he said.

As the county feverishly works to put some wallop in an outdated, 16-year-old adult-entertainment ordinance, it also hired the firm of Shults & Bowen to fight what figures to be a long battle - first on the circuit courts and eventually in federal court. It also will be a very expensive battle, that must be paid for by the citizens of the county.

"They (the adult-entertainment industry) started this war, and in time they are going to lose," said Seminole County Board of Commissioners Chairman Randy Morris. "We know it's going to take time. We're taking action, and we won't ease up. This means too much to the citizens of the county."

On Tuesday, they will vote on new adult-entertainment ordinances, that its members believe will be among the toughest in the state. The question remains as to whether they will be constitutionally applicable.

"Stronger actions are needed," County Commissioner Grant Maloy said. "I believe the commission needs to stay focused on the goal of passing the toughest regulations that we can expect to win in the courts. Our proposed ordinance is exactly that."

of Silver Stars (TOSS) set out to find material which would feature mature actors in production that would be attractive to their target audiences.

The Troupe's mission is to provide attractive, intelligent, live theater, both original and established productions to audiences of all ages who are looking for seasoned professional entertainment that is mature without being insulting and adult without being embarrassing.

Currently, the Troupe is presenting a play by A.R. Gurney, Jr. titled The Dining Room. The play is about the history of a fine piece of furniture and its importance to the people who have owned it over several generations. The dining room is the center for everything from an elegant formal dinner to folding laundry to typing a thesis. The play first opened at the Studio Theater in New York in January of 1981.

Although there are 55 characters in the play, eight actors clearly delineate the distinction between characters: i.e. body language, speech patterns, and nuances of attitude of 5-year-olds to octogenarians and beyond. The cast of seasoned performers and exciting newcomers are Cory White, Janet Peterson, Greg Palmer, Linda Swartz, Annie Kidwell, George Hale, Frank Zelezniek, Gert Mansfield, and Jeffrey Grant.

The Silver Stars was formed in 1996 to give older actors the opportunity to perform. The play, directed by Jack Harrell, is being presented at the Black Box Theater in the Winter Park Arts Mall and will continue through June 15th. Performances are Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. Tickets are $10 ($8 for seniors & students). Group discounts are available for groups of 10 or more. Reservations can be made by calling (407) 672-3665.

The furthering of the arts should be supported by all no matter what age. The Troupe of Silver Stars offers an alternative in theater, but, remember, it is theater and the performers are just as dedicated as their young counterparts, maybe even more so.

But because he never put it in writing, on May 28, attorney Mark Blechman, who represents Suber, sent a letter to Kaiser requesting that he "inform Ms. Suber as to your decision regarding her employment."

The letter noted that his (Kaiser's) failure to make the decision within the time limits provided by the laws of Seminole County "clearly violates Ms. Suber's due process rights." He was asked to inform Suber of his decision.

"I thought that had already been done," Kaiser said.

He had not and Blechman asked that he "kindly inform Ms. Suber" within five working days if his first decision upholding the recommendation of the hearing board is his only decision. No such letter was ever sent.

Until now. "It went out yesterday," Kaiser said of the requested written decision. The mailing

Researcher's ears just ringing from hang-ups

DEAR ABBY: I work for a telephone research firm. I haven't been working for this company for very long, but I have already found that most people have terrible phone etiquette. We are taught to be polite to everyone we talk to, yet we no sooner utter the phrase, "Hello, my name is..." I work for a research firm, when the phone is hung up in our ears, without a word being said. All they have to do is tell us they aren't interested, and we would tell them to have a nice evening. We don't force anyone to talk to us.

Also, because the computer picks the phone numbers, we don't know who we're calling. We call a lot of businesses, but the majority of them don't answer the phones correctly. They say "Hello," with no indication that it is a business. Then they get upset when we say we work for a research firm — as though we were imposed upon them. If they would answer their phone with the name of their business, we would apologize and tell them we've reached the wrong number.

Some people treat us like we're kowtows to be doing this, but companies pay our firm to do these surveys. For us, it's a job! We have senior citizens, students and wives working for extra money to help with the bills and to buy a few groceries. What's so wrong with that?

Abigail Van Buren

We were taught by our elders to be polite to everyone, but it seems as though they live by a double standard.

DEAR M.B.: There is no excuse for rudeness, but many people find it highly inconvenient to get a telephone call when they are feeding the baby, putting groceries away, hurrying to pick up the children at school, etc., and they resent being interrupted by someone who is taking a survey or selling something.

People have telephones in their homes for their own convenience, not for the convenience of the research and marketing firms.

DEAR ABBY: I have been reading you for years, but this is the first time I have written. I want to let you

The story goes that one night a long line of folks stood at the Pearly Gates waiting to see if they would be admitted into Heaven.

St. Peter scrutinized the records of each of those before him.

One man, bypassing the lineup, went straight to the front and promptly entered Heaven.

"A Saint?" someone inquired. "Not exactly," answered St. Peter. "An old old newspaper guy."

A press pass, it would seem, works nicely in Heaven as well as on earth.

Always has.

Ask Matthew, Mark, Luke and John.

On the occasion of my 40th anniversary in the newspaper business, I've been giving much thought to what a person can do with a press pass.

Sure has made a difference in my life.

I've gone to Super Bowls and World Series games. NBA and Stanley Cup Finals, Wimbledon. The Kentucky Derby. A private Mass by Pope John Paul in Miami.

Ten years ago, I made this abrupt change from sports reporting to the religious beat. My pals in the press box were dumbfounded. No big deal, I told them, I'll still be dealing with deities and martyrs, and big crowds each weekend.

When I couldn't get an interview for my Orlando Sentinel religion column one morning with Norman Vincent Peale who said he needed to conserve his energy before he delivered a speech, I replied, "Think positively, Dr. Peale." Of course, he granted my request.

The late Dr. Peale also told me this: "You are engaged in the wonderful world of writing. When you meet people, love and trust them. God will always guide and protect you."

I have never doubted Dr. Peale's wisdom — although I went through a slew of more knowing editors who insisted I be more cynical.

That certainly wasn't the introduction I received 40 years ago this week when I was hired as a copyboy at the Washington Daily News. The paper's city editor, a kind gentleman named Nick Blatchford, wanted feeling, a good heart and a good nose for news. Be fair, be truthful, stick up for the little guy, he said. Expose the phonies and the cheats, too. Just be sure.

For 22 years as a sports reporter for the News and later the Washington Star, I traveled with one of Washington's major-league sports teams — the Senators, Redskins, Capitals and Bullets. A journeyman outfielder named Ken Hunt threw my typewriter out of an airplane one night. He was jealous that I hit two balls over the Green Monster at Fenway Park the night before in batting practice. You bet, I worked out with the Senators. Don't ask why, ask why not?

Memories. Of course, I've many. Of Casey Stengel, Gil Hodges and Bill Veeck. Bobby Orr, Gordie Howe and Bobby Hull. Pete Maravich, Bob Cousy and Dr. J. Roger Staubach, Joe Namath and Vince Lombardi. Lombardi coached the Redskins in 1960 and used to have a Catholic priest travel with the team. Joe DiMaggio used to be Lombardi's guest on occasion. One Sunday in Dallas, I was between Lombardi and DiMaggio at a Mass at the team's hotel. I thought I had died and gone to Italian Heaven on my press pass.

Until he had a series of strokes and could no longer compete, Ted Williams played several sets of tennis with me when the Boston Red Sox were training at Winter Haven. He liked to play tennis early in the morning before he went to the park to help coach some of the Red Sox farmhands how to hit a baseball.

Teddy Ballgame was a skillful tennis player, and an enthusiastic one. He would do this little play-by-play when he was ahead in a match — which was common — and give himself a round of applause for his better shots, blistering back-hand winners. One day after we played, Williams signed the cover to a magazine piece I did on him when he managed the Washington Senators. "To Russ, who got on my ass when I was in Washington but who is actually a pretty good guy."

For heaven's sake, I hope St. Peter will be as kind to this old newspaper guy as Teddy Ballgame.

Russ White and Ted Williams in Winter Haven, 1987.

Patience is a virtue; It's too bad the Magic didn't have some SANFORD — Did you catch those riveting sport-stalk shows on the radio after Chuck Daly was named the Magic's head coach this week? The callers didn't sound too happy, did they? They have every right to be disappointed. Hiring Daly, a man who was well past 40 when Disney World opened a long time ago, was a transparent move by the Magic front office to send a message to the fans who didn't exactly guarantee a sellout at the O-rena last season.

It said the Magic was willing to do anything it took to bring in a name coach, no matter the treatment of a loyal company man and successful coach Richie Adubato.

It also said that common sense doesn't stand for much when tickets are unsold.

Let's start with Daly's flaws. First of all, didn't anyone check Daly's birth certificate?

This is a man who will be 70 when his contract expires in three years.

America refused to elect Bob Dole for president, largely because of the age issue.

Dole would have only had to deal with congress.

Daly has to deal with the Magic Mutineers.

Second, doesn't anyone remember two years ago when Daly walked away from a lucrative deal in New Jersey because he couldn't stand today's athletes?

What, besides $5 million a year, convinced him things would be different in Orlando where the players had a coach fired last season?

Third, Daly is the architect of goon basketball. Remember the Bad Boys of Detroit?

They were boy scouts compared to some of the teams in the NBA today.

If Daly tries to bring thug ball to Orlando, who does he have to play leader of the Thugs? The Magic isn't exactly a team that likes to clean the O-rena floor, diving and fighting for every loose ball.

Daly is also entering a situation where he has a team temporarily on the decline. With no money to play with under the salary cap, the Magic should be largely the same team that took the floor last season with maybe a small-budget free agent added to the mix.

Wouldn't it have been better for Adubato to be given a year to see what he can do with a decent team, then, when the Magic finally have spending money and two first round draft picks (including Golden State's probable lottery choice), they could bring in a new man to a new situation.

If Phil Jackson does as it appears and stays with Chicago for one more season, then the Magic could get their man next year. If not, there are a bunch of glamour boy college coaches (Tim Floyd, Roy Williams, Dave Odom, etc.) who would look really nice on the Magic bench.

There's your scenario that has the Magic competitive for years to come.

Nothing against Daly, but he is a throwback to a different age in basketball. The players respected the coach. Now, the players run the show and the coach can only ask for permission to run the team.

Is Penny going to like Daly's slow-down of offense?

Which of the players in next year's Class of '98 free agent bonanza is going to want to play Daly's version of offense?

If only the Magic could have shown some patience and bided their time, tolerating a few empty seats next season, there could be light at the end of the tunnel.

Instead, the Magic look like an aging team with unfulfilled promises.

Last second shot: Do you hear the clock ticking, John Gabriel?

With every tick, the day gets closer to Penny Hardaway's free agency.

Lock him up before it is too late. You saw what happened last time you waited too long on your franchise player.

Predators claim AAU state crown; nationals next

Special to the Herald

WINTER HAVEN — The Seminole Predators, a local 15-year-old baseball team, claimed the Gold Medal this past weekend at the AAU (Amateur Athletic Union) State Championship held at Chain 'O Lakes Park in Winter Haven.

The Predators, whose roster is dominated by Seminole County athletes, went undefeated in the rain-shortened event. In three games, they outscored their opponents 28-8 on route to the title.

"Our team is awesome," explained an excited Predators manager John Lubrano, a veteran AAU and Seminole PONY manager who has assembled quite an array of talent and molded it into a team built on speed and pitching. "Some of these players I have had the privilege to coach for years and some I have coached against."

"I've been coaching for 20 years and this is the perfect team. We have speed, power and pitching and all of the players on our team are dedicated baseball players."

The Predators now advance to the National AAU Championship August 1-9 in Millington, Tennessee.

Seminole County members of the Predators include: Kevin Gergel, Lake Brantley High School; Eric Schmook and Randy Lewis, Lake Mary High School; Kevin Graves, Lyman High School; Doug Carpenter, Justin Holmes and Paul Lubrano, Oviedo High School; and Anthony DiFonzo, Seminole High School. Also on the team was Justin Hawarah, who was at Lake Mary before moving to Monroeville, Alabama last fall.

Other team members include: Nolan Germanos, Orlando-Boone High School; Scott Carmichael, Orlando-University High School; David Lemon, Melbourne-Florida Air Academy; Michael Reese, Orlando-Edgewater High School; Mike Fryrear, Valrico-Durant High School; Michael Blankenship, Starke-Bradford County High School; and Mike Ross and Bobby Wynns, Gainesville-Eastside High School.

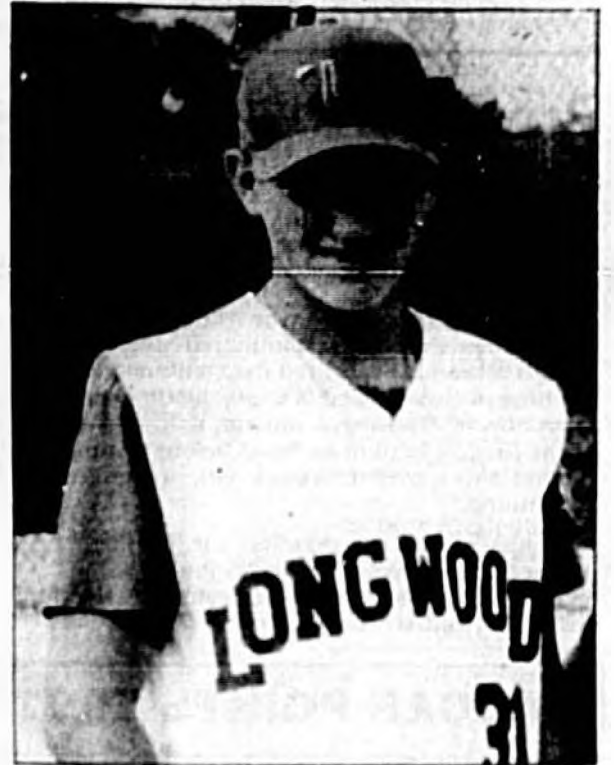

Assisting Lubrano as coaches for the Predators are veteran Oviedo Little League skippers Mike Carpenter and Mark Holmes.

The Predators started their championship quest with an 11-5 thumping of the Tampa Bay Rays. Paul Lubrano was the pitching star, retiring nine of the 10 Rays hitters he faced in three innings. Lubrano, a crafty left-hander, struck out seven and gave up only one hit.

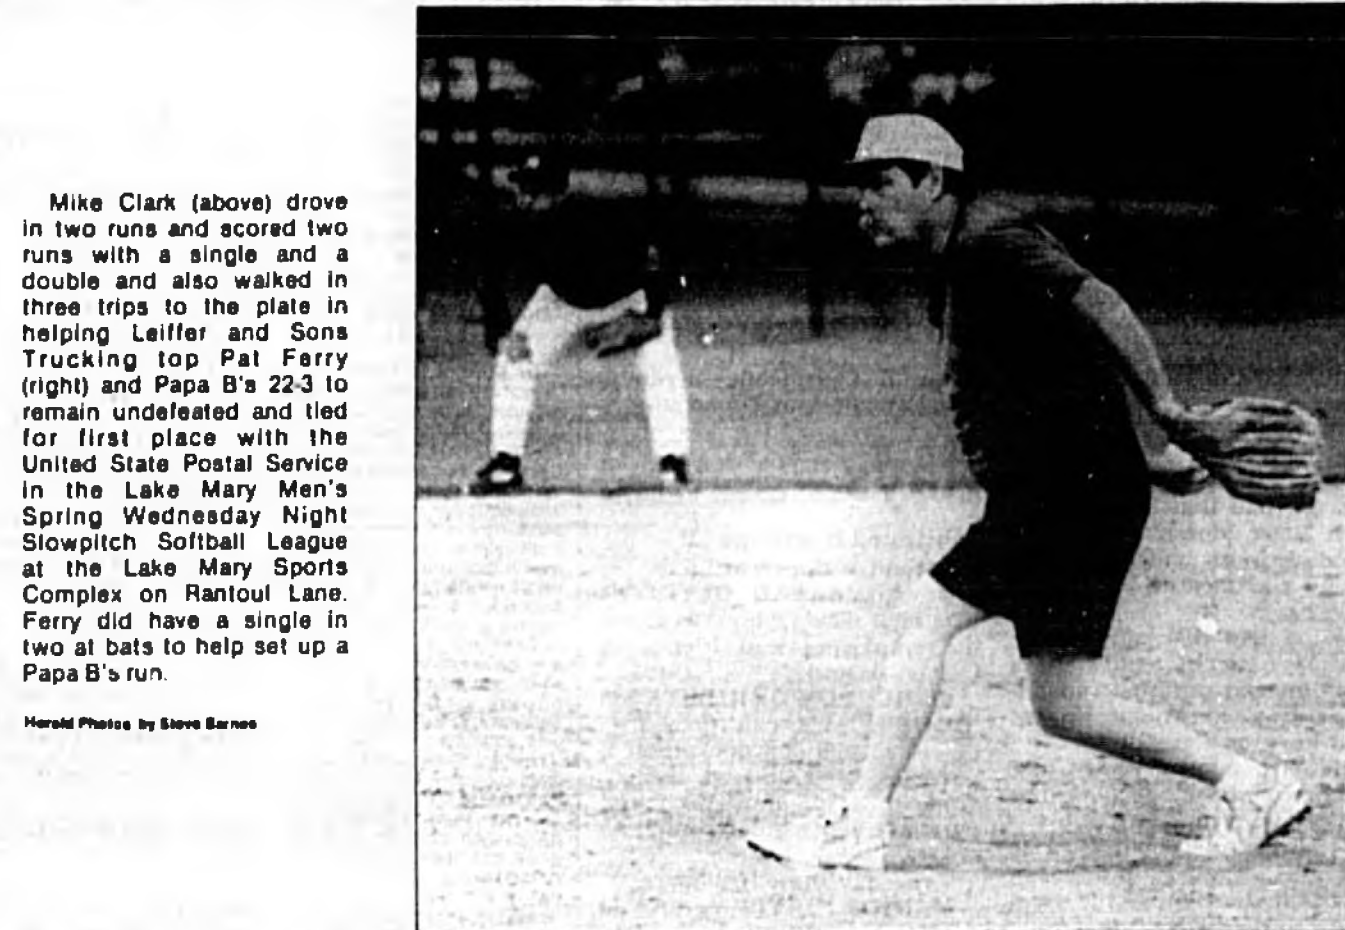

Carmichael led the offensive show with two hits and two runs scored, while Fryrear and DiFonzo scored two runs each. But perhaps the most impressive offensive hit belonged to first baseman Schmook, who belted a 380-foot solo home run leading off the second inning.

The Predators then escaped with a hard-fought 4-1 triumph over a scrappy Merritt Island Sting squad in game two. Blankenship picked up the complete game victory, hurling a two-hitter, while striking out five and walking only two. Offensively, the winners had six hits, with

Lake Mary's Eric Schmook, shown in his Longwood Babe Ruth days, was an offensive force as the Predators won the AAU State Baseball Championship last weekend.

Mike Clark (above) drove in two runs and scored two runs with a single and a double and also walked in three trips to the plate in helping Leiffer and Sons Trucking top Pat Ferry (right) and Papa B's 2-2-3 to remain undefeated and tied for first place with the United States Postal Service in the Lake Mary Men's Spring Wednesday Night Slowpitch Softball League at the Lake Mary Sports Complex on Rantoul Lane. Ferry did have a single in two at bats to help set up a Papa B's run.

Schmook leading the way with a double and a single. Other hitters were Holmes, Wynns, Hawarah and Gergel.

In what turned out to be the championship game, the Predators hammered the Volusia County Braves 11-2 behind the combined four-hit pitching of Holmes and Wynns. Justin Holmes, a shortstop by trade, was outstanding, retiring 13 of the first 14 batters he faced before turning the mound duties over to Wynns with one out in the fifth inning.

Wynns closed the door on the Braves as he allowed no hits over the final 2 1/2-innings. Justin Holmes also led the offense, slapping three hits and scoring two runs. Other offensive stars were Fryrear (single, two runs), Carmichael (single, run) and Germanos, Lemon, Wynns, Hawarah and Blankenship (one run each).

"I just can't say enough good things about our kids," said John Lubrano. "We had solid pitching from Lubrano, Blankenship, Holmes and Wynns. Offensively, every time I looked up, Mike Fryrear was on base. Eric Schmook hit the ball hard, Mike Reese, David Lemon, Nolan Germanos and Scott Carmichael ran the bases very well and our defense was also solid as evidenced by only committing one error in three games. We also turned four double plays.

"Our team is made up of true baseball players, they are all serious about the game and will always lay it on the line."

Worthy players ignored

SANFORD I thought I'd try to get through an entire column without mentioning the name of a certain Afro-American-Thal prodigy that is winning everything in sight.

Hmm.

Are you bored yet? Let's see. Halfway into the PGA season, there are a few golfers who would be battling for player-of-the-year honors if not for what his name.

Mark O'Meara had a nice start.

Paul Stankowski, Tommy Tolles and David Duval are good enough to rack up plenty of second place finishes and maybe a trophy if Nike decides to sit the kid out one weekend.

Let's see, what else is going on?

Hmm.

Oh, yeah. John Daly is back just a few weeks after trying to Making the calcium connection

DEAR DR. GOTT: I seem to suffer intolerable constipation from calcium supplements, many of which my doctor has recommended. You have suggested Os-Cal and TUMS as an appropriate supplement for post-menopausal women. What about constipation?

DEAR READER: A couple of Os-Cal 500+D pills and two or three TUMS will more than supply the extra calcium (about 1,500 milligrams) needed by most women to slow the progression of osteoporosis. In my experience, these products are not especially constipating.

If you have difficulty nevertheless, try increasing your fluid intake, boost your dietary fiber (cereals, raw vegetables, Metamucil, FiberCon, and others), and drink a 6-ounce glass of hot prune juice a day. The benefits of additional calcium outweigh the potential nuisance of altering your diet.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Constipation and Diarrhea." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Several people have told me that the calcium in dairy products is not beneficial for nutritional needs; in fact, it may interfere with the absorption of calcium from other foods, such as spinach. Consequently, I have stopped eating milk products. Please give me the facts.

DEAR READER: You have been misled. The calcium ion, which is present in a number of foods and dietary supplements, is the key ingredient. Whether the product is milk, calcium citrate, calcium carbonate, calcium lactate, or calcium gluconate makes little difference as far as the body is concerned.

The elemental calcium is split off, during digestion, and metabolized. Some forms of calcium are metabolically more active, however. For example, calcium carbonate will provide more elemental calcium gram for gram than does calcium lactate.

Dairy products are a good way to obtain calcium, so I encourage you to consume these foods. (The low-fat varieties are better because they don't provide unwanted cholesterol.) Green vegetables, such as spinach, contain little calcium.

If you are interested in a good review of calcium metabolism, I recommend the following book: "Popular Nutritional Practices," by Jack Yativ, M.D., Ph.D. (Dell Publishing, 1988).

DEAR DR. GOTT: As we age, calcium builds up in our arterial walls, yet may even reduce arterial-calcium buildup (arteriosclerotic plaque) and help prevent kidney stones.

MEDICINE

Furthermore, post-menopausal women need this calcium to maintain bone strength. Therefore, such supplements are not only harmless but provide great benefit.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Menopause." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Slow down your play

By Phillip Alder

For many players, we could rework an old saying: more haste, less tricks. Whenever I include this deal in a class, the play to the first two tricks usually takes less time than for right to travel a mile or two. And by then it is too late for the defenders to defeat the contract.

Against four hearts, West leads the club two. How should the play proceed?

There is one instinct that is almost unconscious among defenders. If they see a chance to give partner a ruff, they give that ruff. They don't stop for a moment to consider the deal as a whole and how the play will develop after the ruff.

Here, East, knowing his partner has led a singleton, returns the club three at trick two. After ruffing, West switches to a diamond. Declarer wins in hand and plays a trump. East puts up the ace and leads another club, but declarer ruffs high and claims.

East should have considered his target: Four tricks were needed, not three. Trying for two club ruffs was futile, as West couldn't have three trumps. Instead, East had to hope his partner had two trumps and organize a spade ruff before giving West his club ruff. At trick two, East should have switched to the spade seven. Declarer will win in the dummy and play a heart. But East hastens in with the ace and leads the club nine. West ruffs and, reading East's card as a suit-preference signal, returns a spade. East's ruff defeats the contract.

To slow down your play, consider sitting on your free hand!
