FRIDAY, AUG. 26, 1951
TODAY'S BIBLE VERSE
The birth of a child in a stable every watch and clock in the world. Every historical event would like a Savior born on a throne in a palace, but God wanted our love, not our fear. He wanted to show that a son of his could do as a workman and a peasant. Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another? —Matt. 11:3.

Chemists Predict Cure for Colds, Polio In 75 Years
We're afraid we can't wait that long.

There may be something ominously significant about the collapse of the Korean peace talks at the same time that the Iranian oil talks are abandoned.

FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover is as concerned as anyone over delinquencies of the younger generation. "In certain cities they run like a pack of animals," he says, "descending upon unsuspecting citizens, viciously assaulting them, and placing their lives in jeopardy. Sometimes there is no robbery element involved; it is just sadistic assault." There is always a tendency among an older generation to view with alarm the activities of the younger generation, but it could be that once every few centuries some cause for alarm exists.

If there has to be corruption in high places in the United States, generals of the Army will have to be corrupt at their own risk. Like the boys at West Point who lost will be fired if they are caught, and so Col. S. W. H. Linn, commander of the Army...

Admitting that former President Roosevelt was not in good health at Yalta, Ambassador Harriman denies that his bad health had anything to do with the breakdown of the agreement effecting freedom for the people in territories overrun by the Red armies, said Harriman. "If Stalin had honored these commitments taken at Yalta, Eastern Europe would be free today and the United Nations would be a truly effective organization for world security."

Deland Jaycees ask Governor Warren by what authority he makes crime investigations in other states, as he is reported to have done as he prepares to assess an exposé on the failures of other governors in order to justify his own bleak shortcomings. All his method of cleaning his own skirts is as distasteful as that of most escapists. Because there is illegal gambling in California, there should be illegal gambling in Florida, because there is crime in New York, we should condone crime in Florida, seems to be his argument. Thus the vicious circle is continued and where it stops is unknown.

Isn't the atom bomb a danger to cause the greatest destruction of human life in the war? When these missiles are to fall upon a city, to cause not only in large buildings, but also on the people who are together, as people might be in a theater when someone says "Fire" but the disaster is not to get out in a panic, but to get out in a calm, whose duty is to lead them out?

Hazards Of Motherhood

The hazards of pregnancy and childbirth for the more than 3,500,000 American women who enter motherhood each year have been reduced to a level which would have seemed Utopian as recently as 10 years ago, according to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

This is reflected in the decline of the maternal mortality rate in the United States from 58 per 10,000 live births in 1936—the lowest ever recorded up to that time—to a rate appreciably under 10 per 10,000 nationally, and less than five per 10,000 live births in many communities throughout the country.

Progress in safeguarding maternity, the company points out, has come hand in hand with the increase in the proportion of women utilizing hospital facilities and the services of a physician in childbirth. In 1935 only 37 percent of the births in the country were delivered in a hospital; by 1949 the figure had risen to 87 percent. At the same time the proportion of women attended by a midwife dropped from nearly 13 percent to five percent.

"Advances in medical science, the developments in public health administration, and the rise in our general standard of living have contributed to making motherhood safer," the company comments. "This progress has saved the lives of many thousands of mothers and their infants."

About three-fifths of the births in the United States are born in their 20's, a period of life at which the hazards of maternity are at a minimum, it is noted. Of the married women at ages 20-24, each year one out of every four has a baby. The proportion decreases rapidly with advance in age; it is one in eight at ages 30-34, and only one in 50 at ages 40-44.

Use Of Influence

Reports of the Senate subcommittee which investigated the Reconstruction Finance Corporation have placed on the official record findings which had already been arrived at by the general public. In soft majorly language and blurring minority terms, they say that the RFC permitted itself to be swayed by a ring of political influence peddlers which had contacts in the White House.

In a way the reports came as an anticlimax. The hearings in which the scandalous goings-on were made public had been almost forgotten. Congress had long since abolished the old five-member RFC board and the organization was under the guidance of a single director who had displayed some of the attributes of a new broom. Here it is necessary to repeat a trite but nevertheless appropriate remark—it remains to be seen whether these findings and changes will be effective in lifting the operations of the RFC above the touch of scandal.

Investigation and public indignation may result in the clearing up of a specific situation. But only a general and persistent public demand for higher standards in public life will prevent such flagrant situations from developing in the future. It would mean little for us to condemn the RFC for yielding to influence if we would be willing to have political influence used for us to obtain something we might want. The integrity of government is personal, and it begins at the personal, community level.

Unwanted Guest

"We are inviting you to dinner, but secretly hope you won't come." Some such thought was probably in mind when the State Department invited Russia to attend the Japanese peace treaty conference in San Francisco. No good was expected to use the meeting only for propaganda. Leader of the Allies must therefore have heaved a sigh of learning that Moscow had accepted the invitation and would send a delegation.

Still, Russia had to be invited. She did participate, technically, in the war against Japan, and her entry into the war, coming on top of the atomic bomb explosions, could possibly have been the last straw, leading Japan to conclude finally that further resistance was useless. She "fought" only six days before the Japanese surrendered. But those six days of war give her a technical right to take part in the treaty.

Senator Jenner

from the fact that the Japanese left treaty gives the Soviet Union everything it could possibly desire.

He said the treaty provides that any state which does not sign may conclude a separate peace later on the same terms. "Isn't that neatly tailored to let Soviet Russia come in quietly a few months after the signing," he asked.

Jenner also said it was "damned" that Nationalist China was not invited to the treaty conference.

"How would you feel if you were in the Nationalist government in Formosa when you were told the American occupation (of Japan) was to come to an end, and that you were to be left to your own devices?" he asked.

Jenner proposed that senators who are opposed to another meeting on Formosa when you were told the American occupation (of Japan) was to come to an end, and that you were to be left to your own devices?" he asked.

Bicycle Trip Through Scotland Recalls Valor Of Scottish Past

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the seventh of a series of articles on England written by S. Bobby Dean who with other American college students is working in a London boys' club this summer as a Winnet Volunteer.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—(Special)—The best way to see Scotland and to see it in the greatest variety of atmosphere, is to bicycle north from Edinburgh, swing around through the southern Highlands, south along Loch Tay, come into the Lowlands between Edinburgh and Glasgow by way of Stirling and head southeast toward the Tweed and the North Sea. You can do all this in a week, and when you come away you will feel that you are bringing a great part of Scotland with you.

There is first the ferry trip across the Firth of Forth, beneath the great steel railway bridge which spans the ancient strait. A little later there is the long ride through the valley of the Tay, and it is here that you begin to see you are not just cycling through another part of England, but are in truth, in a new country.

You climb, at first leaving behind the rolling "English" countryside, the pleasant winding roads shaded by oaks from the hot sun, and in your climbing, in the difficulty of it, you forget that the feeling of the place is changing, and you think just of getting round the next curve to recover whether the road is going to begin its descent.

Then, suddenly, you are in a deep-cold, blue-green forest of pines and firs, and the air is suddenly very chill, and you start going down very fast, and about half way down you wish you had stopped at the top to put a sweater on. Then, just as suddenly, you are out of the evergreens and in the valley of the Tay, among the same rolling hayfields, but with a difference, because above, close by, are barren hills, lined purple in the sunlight and far to the northwest are mountains.

At the little village of Birnam you can cross the Tay, but it would be a good idea first to hide your bike in the shrubbery beside the road and climb the hill above the village, for here you can pick heather, and see the whole valley lying beneath you, still and remote, yet beneath the stillness is the activity of farmers and of distant locomotives. And you will be standing upon the spot where once a great wood grew, and to fulfill the prophecy of which an ancient Scots bent upon crushing a tyrant cut the wood down and carried it before them into battle. The chief of that army was of the clan Macbeth, and his name, as you may know, was MacBeth.

Not long after you cross the Tay, you will probably discover that the air is cooling rapidly, that you are in the shadows, and you are very tired, looking for a place to spend the night, you might find a youth hostel and the companionship of other young cyclists, or, if you are tired and want to sleep, you might come across a benevolent farmer who would allow you to halt in his barn, and give you the hospitality of his hayloft.

You might, on the other hand, get into a little cottage where, sitting on a bench, you are greeted by an onslaught of 16 or 17 small white moaters, who on were later to learn are called Highland Tatters, all a state of intense excitement and a rippling furiously. The kennel mistreated would, in time, emerge, save you from the small moaters, and put you on your feet in the spot where straw is kept for the sheep. In the morning you would be pleased and surprised to discover that there was not a flea in the place.

That night you would have the valley and be properly set on your journey. There would be long, uphill struggles over misty, up-hill wastes. There would be sudden dashes downwards to see stretched miles ahead the flashing sunlight waters of Loch Tay or Loch Earn. There would be little country churches, or kirks as they say in Scotland, one on a hillside at Stirling, one on a hillside at Glasgow, and even before the Christians the place was sacred ground to the ancient Druids.

The best of the journey might be the city of Stirling, for there is the very heart of the Scottish past. At Stirling Bridge, seven centuries ago, William Wallace turned back the English invaders, and although Wallace himself was later captured, brought to London, and beheaded, only a few years afterward King Robert the Bruce secured Scottish independence once and for all at Bannockburn, a few miles to the south.

Today's great bearded Bruce in weathered stone strays from the heights of Stirling Castle, the broad plains, bordered off the north by the Fringians, through which the Frith winds fantastically. You ascend to these heights by a narrow, steep, cobblestone street, which leads you up behind the Castle to the church of the Holy Rude, where Mary, Queen of Scots, worshipped. King James the Sixth (First of England) was crowned, and John Knox, the greatest of Presbyterians, preached. If you go by the square tower of the Church, which bears the marks of English cannon, through the little valley between the Church and the Castle, which was once the playing field of the

Marilyn Messler Is Complimented At Tea

Miss Marilyn Messler, who will be married on Sept. 4 to Wade Garner, Jr., was complimented yesterday afternoon with a lovely tea given by Mrs. W. V. Bittling and Mrs. C. L. Powell at the Bittling home on Seminole Boulevard. Guests called at the charming lakefront home between the hours of 4:30 and 6:00 o'clock.

They were met at the door by Miss Gail Bittling and shown to the receiving line formed on the front porch. Receiving with Miss Messler were the two hostesses, Mrs. Joseph W. Messler and Mrs. Wade Garner, Sr. Bright and attractive flower arrangements on the porch were composed of single and double yellow hibiscus with greenery.

For the occasion Miss Messler chose a steeple-length gown of white accordion-pleated nylon with black velvet sash. At her shoulder was a corsage formed of white bride's hibiscus with lush pink centers. Her accessories were white.

Single and double yellow hibiscus were used in decorating throughout out the Bittling home. The tea table in the dining area was covered with a white linen cut-work cloth and the unique centerpiece had driftwood as its base decorated with bright yellow hibiscus and daisies berries. Crystal and silver appointments held punch, dainty sandwiches, nuts, cakes and minis with yellow and green being the note of color in the refreshments.

Arden and Camellia buds are starting to form now. One makes abundance of water even in a dry day, depending on heat and local rains. Humeral to make the ground white may help blooming but do not apply nitrogenous fertilizers now, as bud dropping will be caused. Red spider may be noted. Sulphur dust is a good remedy. This pest will not be so likely to attack plants kept well watered.

Sickly looking foliage on Arden or Camellia characterized by yellowish color can be restored to healthy green quickly. Apply spray of 1 ounce copperas dissolved in 3 gallons of water. This is a good general use for control of aluminum poisoning applied for each foot of height of Camellia or Arden plants. All remedial lack of fertility.

Day Lily Blooms Still are dry and brown now. Remove them by a steady pull that loosens them at the base. Just after they have been what is it? hyper-concentric type," he said. "The work doesn't bother my partner, because he's stronger. He has his gift which relaxes him. But I like to have a lot of people around me and my friends. Also, I handle all the business of the act. I'm a musician, getting arrangements and so forth."

Jerry indicated he will not do another breakdown. The quart will limit their activities on the future. They cancelled out a date at Ciro's this month and when they will play no more night clubs.

"A lot of people claim we are ungrateful because we got out of night clubs and the night club scene when I started in them. The smoke and the heat don't appeal to me. And the late hour are number 1. I would rather do 10 hours a day of less than 12 hours a night of a night club."

Martin and Lewis will do a set down on their appearance and limit their activities largely to movies, television and radio.

"Yes, radio," he repeated. "It's not as good as people think. They'll start a picture next month and do another shortly thereafter. Their schedule will be tighter since they will be doing their TV shows from Hollywood, along with many of the other TV comedies."

The story of Martin and Lewis is one of those sagas that make American kids dream of show business careers. These young men are expected to land in $1,500,000 this year. Naturally, Uncle Sam takes a big chunk of this, but Jerry indicated they will be able to keep 10 percent of the total.

Shed blooming is one of the best times, say some authorities, to... it can be done at virtually any time, however.

Continue disbudding Chrysanthemum plants of all buds not necessary to your bloom purpose. If you haven't done so already, the "Mum" plants to stout stakes each 6 or 8 inches to provide support that prevents breaking of plants and spilling of flowers. Under your much apply non-acid to whiten the ground. Replace mulch if it has broken down enough to leave bare spots on ground.

Flowers untrammelled since they faded blooming should be cut back at least a couple of feet now. They will bloom better if you do, but it must be done this month or you will retard bloom for next season.

Planting guide for all Florida nurseries. As you can see, we're getting ready for cooler weather and fall flowers. In all sections of Florida seed, Olyssum, Baby's Breath, Blue-Eyed African Daisy, Blood Red Butterfly Flower, Calliandra, Candytuft, Carnation, Chinese Forget-Me-Not, Cosmos (Sulphureus), Florida Palm Brush, Lippincott, Nicotiana, Orange African Daisy, Painted Tongue, Pansy, Petunia, Pink, Snapdragon, Statice, Stock, Verbena and Zinnia. All these will do better for August planting if started in seed flats with protection.

Continued heavy summer showers and fall flowers from a standpoint of washing unless you are prepared. Frames covered with window screen supported a couple of feet above the beds prevent the seedlings by breaking rains.

Seedlings should be made or reported to do another year's garden. Most of the things you will plant this month will have a better chance of handling in flats. To provide each with a hurlap smock cover to be kept on and moist while but weather seedlings and their start is a smart thing to do.
