Postal Firings Could

Trigger New York Strike

United Press International

The firing of almost 100 postal workers in New Jersey and California has failed to quell wildcat walkouts threatening to spread into a full-scale strike in the New York City area. Union leaders said they thought a New York City strike would mean a nationwide walkout. The effect of wildcat walkouts so far has been minimal — a one-day backlog of bulk mail — parcels, "junk mail" and other low-priority items at bulk mail centers in New Jersey and California. But the leader of the New York City union local said Monday night

Carter: Good Intentions, But...

The U.S. dollar Monday fell to its lowest level in relation to the Japan yen since World War II.

This is hardly encouraging news to President Carter who, only a little more than a week ago, returned from the heralded Bonn summit filled with optimism that the world economic situation would be stabilized.

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt found an ideal metaphor for that summit - the Siebengebirge, or seven hills, forming a familiar landmark near the West German capital.

The West's leading industrial nations represented at Bonn shouldn't be climbing their separate hills, said Mr. Schmidt, but should be pulling together up the one big peak that confronts them all.

The peak, of course, is the unemployment and aflation that afflicts their economies and the trade imbalances undermining the international monetary system, all being aggravated by their over-dependence on imported Middle Eastern oil. But the pledges of cooperation and the agreement on goals which highlighted the communique at the end of the summit couldn't hide the problem at the base camp. The climber expected to lead the expedition, President Carter, is still having trouble getting his

Japan and Germany, with their trade surduses, will stimulate their domestic economies to acrease demand for imports from the United States and other nations with trade deficits. Britain, France, Italy and Canada will shape their economic policies accordingly. But the "commitments" of the seven toward those goals are carefully hedged.

"We will now seek parliamentary and public apport for the economic measures," said Mr. Sch-mid, no doubt remembering the largely unfulfilled promises of the London summit a year ago.

This could be taken as a verbal prod to Mr. Carter to get back to Washington, where parliamentary support for his share of the Bonn commitments looks as distant as the highest knoll

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd's phone call to Bonn, promising action within days of an important energy bill, may have been calculated to

All it could do, however, is remind them that Mr. Carter's energy program as a whole is still moving inconclusively from desk to desk in Congress, caught in a stalemate on basic policy lesues that the White House has been unable to break for more than a year.

Mr. Carter's commitments on economic policy were equally conspicuous for lack of evidence that Congress is behind them.

His tax cut proposals are very much up in the air, along with the size of the deficit in the 1979 et, and his promise of a "very tight budget" or 1980 has a ring all too familiar.

He is pinning more than most economists on the success of other aspects of his anti-inflation agram, especially his call for voluntary wage price restraints.

The Bonn communique was a recitation of tentions — all of them good.

However, this summit only dramatized how far Mr. Carter has to go before his own list of good ntions amounts to any more than that.

children in the two counties, here the nutritionists came to see the scurvy and rickets and other all-too-visible signs of malnutrition, here the health statisticians found an infant mortality rate of 62 per 1,000 births. And it was here that Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., came to see for himself that "there is hunger in South Carolina" and to confess to the Senate and the world that he and other politicians in the state had for too long covered up the shameful truth. The politicians still come to the low country. Jimmy Carter was here during the 1976 cam-

'Too Smart' To Drive A Car Dear

from the woman whose friends consider her some kind of freak because she down't drive a car could have been written by me I learned to drive early in life, but I gave it up for the following

(1) I don't really like to drive, which is reason enough in a world where we have to do so many thing whather we like them or not.

(2) I'm afraid to drive with all the drunks, hooks, dope and plain incompetents who are out there killing and maiming other meterists.

(3) I have slow reflexes, and I lack confidence in my ability to handle a car expertly.

Mosquito Trap Program Gets Commission Okay

By MAX ERKILETIAN

Evening Herald

The Seminole County Commission has taken an initial step in establishing county-wide mosquito control by approving a trapping program and authorizing Director of Human Services Troy Todd to negotiate a spraying contract with an area

The trapping program, which will begin im-mediately, is a method of determining where and to what extent culex mosquitoes exist in Seminole County. The culex mosquito carries encephalitis.

This spring state health officials warned of a possible outbreak of encephalitis. The disease appeared in Florida last year for the first time since 162, according to the Department of Health and Three cases were reported in Seminole County during 1977, according to Todd. The trapping program will cost $3,012. The spraying program is estimated to cost $3,734 per week. The program was designed to be carried out over a 13-week period, according to Todd, amounting to a total cost of $51,424 for trapping and The spraying cost would include a $300 fee for each aircraft flight and $37.50 per gallon of spray at an estimated cost of $741 for spray per flight. Last April, Todd estimated a county-wide ground spraying program would cost the county about $150,000. That would have been ground spraying on The program currently under consideration is designed to attack areas where a high concentration of the culex mosquito is found. These areas of high concentration would be determined by the number of mosquitoes found in the traps, according to Todd. Each spraying would be lesigned to cover five square miles. The county will station four traps at various ocations around the county, according to Todd. On a periodic basis the traps will be moved to gain data on the mosquito populations of other areas.

The traps will be inspected on a daily basis ! mimal control officers, said Todd. When a high concentration of mosquitoes is found in a given pping area, Todd will contact the heliconter firm
