"Honest Abe"

In a rustic Kentucky shack one hundred and twenty-two years ago today was born of humble parentage—a mother of strong character but no education, a father who was illiterate, thrifty and more or less no-account—Abraham Lincoln destined to become the guardian of a nation and a martyr to the cause he had espoused. In those crude backwoods surroundings of that 1809 Kentucky frontier, Nancy Hanks may have dreamed and hoped that this new born babe might some day make his mark in the world—just as all mothers hope for the best for their child—but in her waking moments she could not have visualized to what heights he would ascend.

Lincoln's place in American history is as secure as Washington's. The latter created the nation; the former saved it. A modern iconoclastic age, which sees a set of un-believers indiscriminately crashing idols and stifling hero worship, has not yet jarred from its pedestal the bust of Abraham Lincoln nor blotted his pages in American history with the smudge of investigations. It is fair to show that the schooling of Lincoln could be confined within the term of one year, that all the books he had read at the time he was president would scarcely cover the top of a school boy's desk. It cannot be denied that, as success is measured today, Lincoln was pretty much of a failure the greater part of his life. He was frequently defeated for public office. His only business venture, a combination dry goods and grocery store, went broke and left him owing many bills. His career in the state legislature accomplished little worthy of mention. He was more of an observer than an active legislator. As yet he was interesting and picturesque, but the greatest and greatest oratorical effort, his series of seven debates with Stephen A. Douglass, resulted in his own defeat and the election of Mr. Douglass to the Senate.

But Lincoln's greatness cannot be measured in dollars and cents but only in the moral strength and benevolent character of the man. His innate honesty was largely responsible for the failure of his business and his long desire to see a better government. In 1845 he had paid the last cent of his debts. His fine sense of justice cost him many a retainer fee for he would not take a case at bar unless thoroughly convinced of the innocence of his client or the justice of his case. His sympathy for mankind, his devotion to duty, his loyalty to his country, his uncomplaining suffering, his acceptance of advice, his determination once convinced he was right, his perseverance in purpose were qualities he possessed in unsurpassed abundance.

So it matters little whether Lincoln is classed as a success or failure, in the modern sense of the word; his qualities of manhood mean far more than riches.

Prosperity Bugles

Whatever may be said of business conditions in this country, the best indication of returning prosperity is stock market speculation. Stock buying shows not only that the people have money for investments but also that they have confidence in the stocks they are buying. A steady rise in stock values proves that those stocks are in demand. When stocks are in demand they must be worth more, or as much, at least, as the prices for which they can be bought.

The last few days have seen business picking up in Wall Street where it has been in the throes of despair for over a year. Tuesday better shares rose during the day as much as fourteen dollars higher than they started. Investors in the stock exchange went to $400,000, the highest since Dec. 17. This bull market beginning last Saturday has added more than three billion dollars in three or four days to the aggregate value of all shares listed on the stock exchange. Financial observers reported that this speculation was not confined to professional operators but included many amateur traders found among the general public.

Whether this beneficial flurry is, as Arthur Brisbane suggests, the fresh ruddy glow of returning health, or the pink spots of tubercularis, it is not safe yet to say. The rise may be followed tomorrow by a sharp decline. However, it is encouraging. When prosperity returns, just such stock speculations will be in the vanguard. There is no particular reason why we should not be ready to believe that sharp clicks of the ticker tape are the shrill notes of the better business bugles. We have had enough of this depression and we are prepared to see hope in every hopeful indication.

WORLD'S STORIES

By FERRIS VAN TANK

Louise Silvain, a famous French actress, followed her husband, the star performer of the Comedie Francaise, within a few weeks to the grave. People said of the Silvains that they were a model couple. "Look," they said, "the family life of an artist is as calm and quiet as that of an ordinary bourgeois." A thousand little incidents of affection and mutual admiration between the Silvains.

Silvain himself used to tell with tenderness in his voice: "She thinks of everything. Louise does. Just imagine, one night we were playing in Limoges. I was so pre-occupied with my role that I was going over it once more while dressing. Still murmuring pieces from my role I started to go down the main staircase of our hotel to go to the dining room, when I was stopped by a cry from above: 'What's the matter? Why do you go downstairs without your trousers on?' 'Without what?' 'Without your pants!' I examined myself. It was true. 'What an extraordinary woman, my wife,' he used to say when he told the story. 'In spite of the tenses atmosphere in which she was obliged to live, she thought of everything.'"

Realists will say: "The example of Silvain does not suffice. The Silvains were probably old-fashioned people." Not every artist's family is so simple and modest. Just think of the party given of that actor, the pessimist, who waited for his wife after night, who swore he would kill her, kill himself, kill her, kill her, kill her, and when she finally did show up with a broad smile on her face, fell on his knees and addressed her in the philosophic approach: "Oh, how you didn't come home for these days. Is that fair? And she answered: 'Three days already, dear, is it? How time flies!'"

We have an acquaintance, a business man, who is married to an actress. She's a charmingly serious and amiable lady. "But when I finish my work," says our acquaintance, "she starts here. When I come home I find a wife who is just business. One day she said: 'I'll go to the theater at last with a girl like you.' She says: 'Let's hurry, I don't want to be late like yesterday. You don't wait if I read my role while we wait.' 'You'll take me to the theater, won't you?' 'I go to the theater,' he went on, 'although I've seen the piece dozens of times. Sometimes I go to another show, but I never see the end of the play, because I have to be back at my wife's theater to take her home. Sometimes she presents me to her fellow actors and actresses: 'My husband,' she says. The actors look at me, while pulling on their coats, with a look of condescension. I feel I look like a fool, like a husband. So I decided not to go and fetch her any more. And so we begin to drift apart. It's not what I'm cracked up to be, this artistic life," he concluded.

"The talker," said a gentleman in the train the other day, as he looked up from his newspaper, "the talker is going to bring peace on earth and good will to the world, as you say, and nothing to be continued." He continued that the talk of peace was a young fellow's mind to thoughts of love that to thoughts of love.

The gentleman continued his story. "You don't understand," he said. "You do not understand the sublime sense of the human. Have you heard?" he went on, "the speech of the new internationalist, the British Ambassador? If you would be so good to know that they have consolidated and worthy of applause of all countries, whether France, Germany, America or even Japan-Havis."

"You see now," said the talker, "the speech of the new internationalist is going to bring peace on earth and good will to the world." He continued that the talk of peace was a young fellow's mind to thoughts of love that to thoughts of love.

TAX FACTS

A taxpayer engaged in a trade or business is entitled to deduct the cost of the depreciation of his property. This is true even if the property is used for both personal and business purposes. The amount of the deduction is based on the cost of the property less any depreciation allowed in previous years.

Within the scope of the second class of capital property are many kinds of property, such as, for example, patents, copyrights, and trademarks. These are treated as capital property for purposes of the depreciation deduction. The amount of the deduction is based on the cost of the property less any depreciation allowed in previous years.

SHOULD THE CHILDREN EAT IT?

PARENTS, particularly mothers, are paying a lot of attention to children's diet these days. For it is far more economical and pleasant to keep a child well by feeding him correctly than by nursing and doctoring him back to health.

Of course the doctor should be consulted regarding what a child should eat and what he should not eat. But do you realize that the leading manufacturers of food now seek the advice and approval of the leading nutritional authorities in the country, and in the states they serve for their products in their advertising?

In other words, food advertisements are the result of intensive research regarding diet. They are based on the latest and most scientific knowledge available. So when you see a food advertisement, you are seeing a carefully prepared and well-researched advertisement.

ANNUAL BRIDGE LUNCHEON HELD AT WOMAN'S CLUB TUESDAY AFTERNOON

Furnishing a beautiful setting for the annual bridge luncheon of the Social Department of the Woman's Club held yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock in the club rooms, were the quantities of red and white sweet peas, gladioli, narcissi and asparagus fern which were arranged about the luncheon room. The entrance hall where the guests were received by Mrs. S. D. Highleyman, Mrs. W. T. Laird and Mrs. E. Compton, hostesses, Mrs. W. Theodora Langley, president of the club, and Mrs. H. Wayne Rucker, chairman of the Social Department, was banked with quantities of asparagus fern and large stands bearing vases of the flowers.

Placed at each end of the stage were large fern stands filled with red gladioli, while the stage itself was banked with a profusion of asparagus fern and a number of baskets and vases of red and white flowers. Quantities of fern were entwined about the banquet tables and the balcony railings. The luncheon tables were centered with small vases of red and white sweet peas and antigone, while the placards and tallies were designed to represent Valentines.

The guests were escorted to their places by Mrs. Roland S. Read after which luncheon was served in courses by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. A. C. Chamberlain, Mrs. Walter L. Cooper, Mrs. Walter Morgan, Mrs. Harry Heeren, Mrs. L. P. Hagan, Mrs. Arthur Brannan and Mrs. Roland Read.

Throughout the afternoon bridge progressions were enjoyed and at a late hour scores were added and prizes awarded. High score prize, a set of lingerie, went to Mrs. W. J. Thigpen, while second high score prize, a pair of silk chiffon hose, was awarded to Mrs. Roland S. Read, Mrs. W. F. Williams was given an enameled and white gold pin as consolation prize, while Mrs. Harry Heeren, who cut high, was the recipient of costume jewelry. Mrs. H. M. Papworth was presented with the lucky prize, a novelty powder box. Each prize was wrapped with white paper, tied with small valentines and topped with a large valentine.

Those present were: Mrs. Paul Biggers, Mrs. Walter L. Cooper, Mrs. Howard Overlin, Mrs. E. W. Pearman, Mrs. R. R. Pippin, Miss Ellen Mahoney, Mrs. G. P. Paxton, Mrs. Fred Williams, Mrs. John E. A. Londenberg, Mrs. J. C. Gibbs, Mrs. Harry Heeren, Mrs. G. I. Loucks, Mrs. J. H. Menick, and Mrs. June Roomillat.

Mrs. Hilda Clark, of Coonlaw, Iowa, is the house guest of Mrs. H. R. Stevens, at her home on Park Avenue.

Caswell Home Scene Of Afternoon Party

Yellow jasmies, budding and candidias adorned the living room of the home of Mrs. B. D. Caswell, Magnolia Avenue, when she entertained with a bridge party yesterday afternoon complimenting Mrs. S. LaGette, of East Orange, N. J. The guests included members of the Young Matrons' Duplicate Club and two tables of other guests, friends of Mrs. LaGette.

Throughout the afternoon bridge games were participated in and in-late scores were added and prizes awarded. High score prize for the club members, boxes of both powder, went to Mrs. E. F. Housholder and Mrs. J. P. Ridge, while high score prize among the other guests, a linen bag, was given to Mrs. E. A. Newman. Mrs. LaGette was presented with a compact as guest prize.

At the tea hour a salad and sweet course were served by the hostess to the following: Mrs. E. S. LaGette, honor guest, Mrs. W. C. Hill, Mrs. W. W. Potter, Mrs. Hawkins Connelly, Mrs. J. D. Woodruff, Mrs. J. P. Ridge, Mrs. E. F. Housholder, Mrs. E. J. Holly, Jr., Mrs. E. A. Newman, Mrs. D. L. Thrasher, Mrs. F. E. Roomillat, Mrs. Floyd Palmer, Mrs. L. P. Boyle, Mrs. J. C. Whichel, Mrs. W. A. Adams, and Mrs. John Melsch, Jr.

Miss Flo Bishop, who underwent an operation for appendicitis recently at the Forsyth-Langston Memorial Hospital, is improving nicely and has been removed to the home of her sister, Mrs. Perry Cameron.

Van Arnam Minstrel Will Play At Milane

By ORVILLE CRANSTON John R. Van Arnam can be given the title of Theatrical Architect par excellence, as he has constructed a bridge of minstrelsy that reaches from the early '90s to the year 1931—a bridge of sweet songs, whirling melodies, Mississippi River romance and all the charm of minstrelsy of a bygone era. Perhaps the best reason why he can give the never-ending popularity of a minstrel show is the fact that it is an "American Institution".

It is quite evident that Mr. Van Arnam knows just what the American theatre-going want in the way of entertainment—reunions familiar songs that are familiar to generations that never fail to extract joy from a minstrel performance. Perhaps it is the old songs and familiar melodies that draw the most appreciative audience to his minstrel shows.

(Continued from Page One) has been given a legislative drive in which to secure action on the Wickreham padlock proposal designed to aid dry law enforcement. The Wickreham proposal is one of four recommended last year. It would permit padlock proceedings against absentee owners of property used for liquor violations by notifying them through publication instead of personal service.

The Extra Cough Help

Cremulson is a super-help for coughs from colds. It is for deep coughs where you dare not risk a weak help. Seven major helps are embodied in it, including the best known to medical science.

Marker and Schenk, clever professionals, who, through the courtesy of officials of the Volusia County Fair, were in Sanford yesterday as guests of the Kiwanis Club. They will be features of the DeLand fair which opens Feb. 17, and will be seen on the midway daily, "hob-nobbing with the country folks".

Chapter X
Yvonne came back into the studio. Her face was pale as pale...

Unless her arms drooping at her sides, she turned toward the door. A shadowy figure...

He was agitated at her appearance. Before she had always appeared to him dressed in simple, girlish...

They said nothing for a minute and Yvonne sat there apparently to inspect the dining room.

Yvonne opened her pocket book and began to try out some of the bills. Yvonne silently counted the coins...
