Something More To Think About-It's Been 10 Years

This is a very special year for Trinity. It is our decade year. This year's graduating class is our Decade Class, and therefore, a very special class.

In these 10 years, Trinity's reputation has been established as an outstanding college preparatory school. We are proud of the accomplishments of our graduates. They have gained admission to almost every major college and university in the country.

Competition for college acceptance increases. More and more emphasis is given by colleges to the need for the basic skills of learning. We know that our graduates are well-prepared for college.

We are particularly pleased with our Decade graduating class. We, their parents and the community can be rightly proud of these young people. We wish each of them the very best as they enter into institutions of higher learning across the nation this fall.

Stafford has denied former Gov. Claude Kirk's request for a place on the 1978 gubernatorial ballot as an independent without receiving the necessary signatures from voters.

Stafford, late Thursday, rejected Kirk's request to strike down a law requiring independents, who want to run for governor without paying a filing fee or designating a party affiliation, to obtain the signatures of more than 122,000 registered voters. Kirk's deadline for the signatures was June 12. "Florida has created a reasonable method of ballot access independent candidates," said Stafford.

'Mormon Will' Ruled Fake

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI)-The first step toward settling Howard Hughes' estate is over - the so-called "Mormon will" was pronounced a fake by a District Court jury, which listened to more than seven months' worth of testimony in making their decision.

The estate still faces a tangled legal future expected to keep it tied up in the courts for years. The verdict was a victory for Hughes' distant relatives and the executives who administer his financial empire, who formed an alliance to discredit the will.

Ancient Meteorite Eyed

HOUSTON (UPI) - Three experts took the first official look at a pingpong ball-sized fragment of an ancient metorite that looks like a piece of used charcoal, one of 310 pieces found by a U.S.-Japanese team in the dry, frozen Antarctic last December and January.

"I think we are quite confident it is a carbonaceous chondrite," said Dr. Elbert King, chairman of geology at the University of Houston. "The question now is which type." Carbonaceous chondrites are rich in carbon, a key to life, and only about two dozen of the 2,300 meteorites discovered are of that type.

Mr. Ron Beck Advertising Director Evening Herald Sanford, Florida 32771

On behalf of everyone at Home Appliance Center, I would like to extend my thanks and appreciation for the sales results of our advertising with the Evening Herald.

Following The Herald Advertising initiating Total Market Coverage (T.M.C.) in Sanford, our sales noticably increased. Now with the addition of the Volusia area we are even more pleased with our Herald Advertising and feel our total sales return compared with advertising dollars is excellent.

I must also take this opportunity to express my gratitude concerning your representative Jan McClung. She is creative, knowledgable and has done an outstanding job in handling our account.

Because of the excellent service from the Evening Herald, we intend to increase advertising.

While I experienced a feeling of lightness and weightlessness, my slender daughter experienced a heaviness. "I felt like my weight would crush the chair," she said later. We were now in a state of hypersuggestibility - our conscious minds were subdeed, allowing our subconscious mind to emerge - to be open to suggestion.

Other reactions often experienced are excessive salivation and sensory detachment; sometimes the feeling of being slightly above the body. He's Blowing A Big Bubble

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) - Only a moment or so before answering the opening bell in one of his latest fights, skinny, schoolboyish Sean O'Grady drew some amused smiles from a national TV audience by doing what comes naturally to any 19-

Standing there in the ring, waiting for the referee's last minute instructions, he casually blew big bubbles with his gum.

He'll probably do the same thing when he meets Japan's Shig Fukuyama in a 10-round featherweight main event at the local Fairgrounds Arena Saturday night.

O'Grady doesn't see anything unusual about that at all. "It's me," he said. "People think I'm putting up some kind of front, but I'm really not. I'm only trying to be myself. I like bubble gum. Lollipops, too." Sean O'Grady, who has been fighting since he was 9 years old, is like few other professional boxers you've ever seen. First of all, he isn't only good, he's exceptional as is reflected by his 56 victories in 57 fights. Fifty-one of those victories were by knockouts, including 23 in the first round. Secondly, he is managed by his father, Pat, who has been promoting bouts in the Southwest for years, and his mother, Jeanie, who also helps handle him by taking care of such details as ticket sales, press releases and poster distribution for all his O'Grady's two sisters, Colleen and Rosie, lend their assistance from time to time making the overall operation a unique family affair that goes under the name of Starmaker, Inc. "Mama's Boy." "I don't see any shame in that," he said, completely open about I'm sick. She wakes me in the morning and puts me to bed at night. She washes my clothes every night so I'll have clean gear to train in the next day. Before a fight, if I'm a little nervous or have butterflies in my stomach, I think of her and it makes me feel much better." The more visual guiding hand in young O'Grady's spectacular career, however, is his father, Pat. "I listen to Papa the most," Sean says.

"Because he talks the most," adds the dark-haired youngster with a laugh.

To that, the elder O'Grady answers: "He listens to Papa the most because he has the most experience. Besides, look at those opponents I get him." The World Boxing Association ranks O'Grady No. 1 in the featherweight division while the World Boxing Council had him No. 1 in the super bantam weight class. When his father asked the WBC to list Sean in the junior lightweight class because he's still growing, it did and now ranks him seventh in that division. O'Grady's only defeat came two years ago, when he was 17, to world Featherweight Champion Danny Lopez, who stopped him in

"I think it did me good," says the tall, smooth-skinned Oklahoma City native. "I learned a lot. I didn't feel I should hang my head. Remember, he's the world champion. People asked me 'what happened?' I could have said the heat got me or I wasn't experienced enough, but I just said I got flat beat, and that was the truth."

He's only fighting so he can pay his way through medical school and when he's due to enter it three years from now, he plans to LEGION COVERUP retire from boxing at 22.

"I'll make sure of that," guarantees Pat O'Grady. "I never STILL NOT ENOUGH wanted Sean to be a fighter, anyway. It's too brutal, too rough. Boxing is not a game, it's a business. Sean is only a boy in a man's world. The sooner he gets out of it, the better."

LET THE GOOD DICE ROLL

'30 Minutes To Learn ... But Years To Perfect'

Half a dozen people sit in pairs around three heards.

The clubhouse is quiet except for the sound of the being shaken and popcorn being munched.

Sometimes a groan or a laugh is heard after a particular roll of the dice and pieces are advanced around the board. The clubhouse at the Royal Arms apartment complex on Orange Drive in Altamonte Springs is the scene of a weekly Backgammon tournament. Robert Gordon, with the help of Sherryi Irwin—two devotees of this ancient game—have organized the friendly competition which is held every Thursday at 8 p.m.

"We're only in our first month," explains Miss Irwin, "and we're just getting off the ground. We're trying to reach people who want to play backgammon." Right now they have from 8-12 regulars. Anyone interested in playing or learning the game is invited. There are no dues, but players are asked to bring their

"It takes about 30 minutes to learn the game," said Gordon, "then years and years to perfect it. It is a game in which strategy and luck each play an important part.
"The problem comes up that you can get a lot of doubles but not know what to do with them."

"I bought the game, read the directions and some books and became addicted to it. No two games are alike. It's the strategy and luck which make it different from other games," said Miss Irwin.

Bill Graham is another of the regulars who has become addicted to backgammon.
"I've got a board at home my mother gave me in 1935," he

"But with luck playing such an important part in the game, a player without 40 years of experience still has a good chance of defeating a player of Graham's calibre.

"It's a game where you can be so far ahead that you can't possibly lose, and then after a few rolls of the dice you find yourself losing," he said.

"It's a terrific, terrific game!"

DEAR DICK: I have heard rumors that Stevie Wonder does not go on any concert tours because people in the audience throw firecrackers, paper cups, etc. at him. genius. I only knew that I had DEAR DICK: Is Dolly Parton writing a book based upon her life called "Wild Flower"? If so. when will it be available in book stores? PAMELA SUE EMERSON, Liberty, Ky.

Dolly says she is planning a book, but it will be a long time before she finishes it. (She hasn't even started it, yet.) I'm told that her saying that may be just a ploy to keep all those writers who want to write biographies of her away.

DEAR DICK: Could you tell me what kind of dog Meatball, on "The Black Sheep Squadron," is? And how old is the nurse known as Sam on that same show? She is really lovely. GUY WELDON, Pueblo, Colo.

Down, boy. (And I'm not talking to Meatball). He was a linebacker. Even The dog is a bull terrier. The girl is Denise DuBarry (it says here), and she is being cov about her age, but the show's people say she is in Oakland, he worked with her early 20s.

DEAR DICK: Whatever happened to T.J. on that super war show "The Black Sheep Squadron?" I admired him very much and would like to know why he hasn't been on recent shows. BRIAN SULLIVAN, Kalamazoo, Mich. Bob Ginty played T.J. When "Baa Baa Black Sheep," as it was then known, went on its first hiatus, Ginty got a pilot for another series, and it was a bigger part. He took that offer, and Robert Conrad and the others wished him well. So far, that pilot hasn't sold, but it may yet make it.

DEAR DICK: Please settle a question that has come up. The lady that does the coffee commercial — Mrs. Olson. Is she Virginia Christine or Christine Virginia? MRS. H.H., Piqua, Ohio. Virginia Christine, otherwise Mrs. Fritz Feld. DEAR DICK: Is it true that Bruce Boxleitner and Katherine Holcomb, who play Luke and

Laura on "How the West Was Won," really married each other? ANGELA DEL GROSSO, Burnaby, B.C., Can. Yes, It's one of those hearts-and flowers stories that is hard to believe. They met while they were doing the pilot for the series and were married in May, 1977. And Bruce has been quoted as saying, "It's tough to play brother and sister when we love each other." Isn't that young and romantic?

DEAR DICK: Shaun Cassidy used to sing on "The Hardy Boys." Now he just acts. How come? KIKI BENSON, Rosenburg, Ore. Shaun's idea all along was that he would sing on the series only if the story called for it, only if it made sense for him to sing. So he will still sing on "The Hardy Boys" if it fits the story.

DEAR DICK: Someone said the star o "Gunsmoke," James Arness, was dead. Is that true? And I would like to know if Granny, on "The Beverly Hillbillies," is dead, too. DELTON WEST, Somerset, Ky.

"Then they laughed and Arness is still living, starring now in "How the West Was Won." Granny — Irene Ryan died in

'Tribute' To Talents Of Jack Lemmon

By FRED T. FERGUSON NEW YORK (UPI) Anyone with a first play hi like "Same Time Next Year" can expect tough sledding with the New York critics second time around. And when a show has done well out of town, they seem challenged to find even more wrong than usual. True to form, when Bernard Slade's "Tribute" opened with Jack Lemmon starring June 1 at the Brooks Atkinson

Theater, they did anything but pour out laudatory approval.

Most had something nice to say. But they said Lemmon was carrying the show, complained the jokes he spouts were "pyramided" and found its sentimental scenes too

Where the audience laughed a lot, one complained of Slade's one liners keyed to Lemmon's role — of a failure since 1980, is hilarious — even Scotty Templeton, played by

First Family Of Folk Music Trying It One More Time

After seven years apart, "The First Family of Folk Music," Peter, Paul & Mary, are once again back on the same track.

At a recent press conference the trio announced the immediate plans of their reunion, which includes a new studio album (to be produced by George Martin of Beatles fame, and released this summer), a concert tour and resulting live alburn. Mary Travers, still at stunning a blonde as ever, noted that "it's nice to be with the Longwood Village Pharmacy began at 5:45 p.m.

Two men entered the store and held 11 persons, including several children, at gunpoint while Baldree ordered owner Robert Duncan to fill a pillowcase full of drugs.

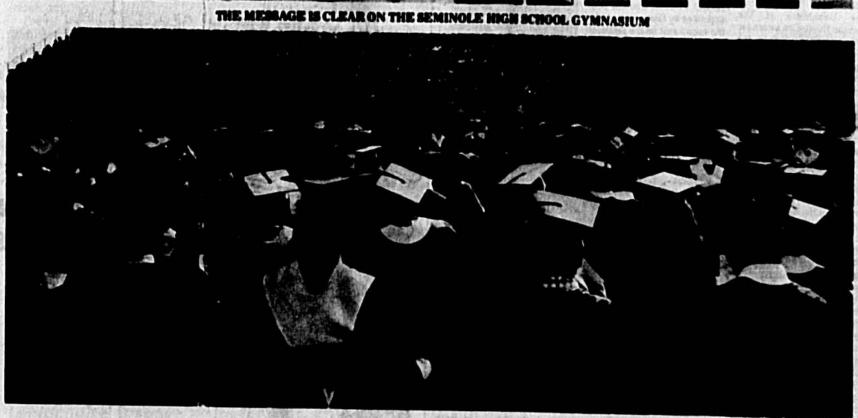

Pfeil, unaware the robbery was in progress and still in uniform after completing patrol of a private community in Altamoste Springs, began to enter the store to purchase medicine for his wife.

Pfeil and the gunman at the front of the store, said by deputies to be Sims, exchanged four shots with Pfell being hit in the heart and face.
