PTL boss charged parents rent

Testimony given Tuesday in the PTL trial of Jim Bakker did little to help the former TV evangelist's chances of being acquitted on fraud and income tax charges.

Witnesses told the court yesterday that Bakker charged his parents rent for staying at PTL and used ministry funds to hire a private detective to probe the private lives of employees of a Charlotte newspaper, the same newspaper that broke the PTL scandal story.

NFL steroid users suspended

Thirteen players, including 1987 Pro Bowl pick Ron Solt of the Philadelphia Eagles, were suspended for 30 days Tuesday by NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle after testing positive for steroids.

The suspensions mean the players will miss the final pre-season games and the first three games of the regular season.

Storm blamed for dog deaths

CASSELBERRY — A seventh dog has died from apparent heat exhaustion after a thunderstorm Friday tripped electrical breakers at Seminole Greyhound Park, state investigators said today.

John Posar, Division of Part-Mutuel Wagering investigator, said six dogs were dead Friday, apparently from heat exhaustion after power to an air conditioning unit in a Seminole Greyhound Park kennel was cut off by a power surge.

Bob Holt, part-mutuel investigator in Orlando, said today a seventh dog died at Howell Branch Animal Hospital over the weekend.

Posar said investigators are still compiling a full report of the incident, due at the end of the week, to rule out any possibility of foul play.

Bob Nadort, owner of the dogs, said the deaths could not have been prevented. "This is something everybody fears throughout the industry," he said. "Even when the dogs are taken care of, there are still acts of God we cannot control."

Nadort said he met with Seminole Greyhound Park general manager John Dallas to discuss ways to prevent similar accidents in the future. He said Dallas will place heat sensors in each kennel to alert 24-hour guards when temperatures rise.

"Every kennel in the state needs this, not just Seminole," Nadort said.

The seven Grade A dogs were valued between $18,000 and $25,000, Nadort said. Dallas could not be reached this morning.

Four jailed after bribe attempt

NEW YORK — Four Bronx men, including two teens, tried to bribe two police officers with $10,000 in cash and up to $50,000 worth of heroin if they ignored a minor traffic infraction, police said Wednesday.

The officers, who are brothers, arrested the four suspects at 7 p.m. Tuesday and charged them with first-degree bribery and criminal possession of a controlled substance, said police spokesman Sgt. Peter Berry.

Police arrested Jose Martes, 22; Jorge Adorono, 20; Hector Vasquez, 18; and a 15-year-old boy whom officials did not identify.

Governor signs new death warrant in 16-year-old county murder case

From staff and wire reports

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Bob Martinez has signed the death warrant of the man convicted in the 16-year-old murder of a Seminole County woman, Joseph Robert "Crazy Joe" Spasiano, 43, is scheduled to die in the electric chair at Florida State Prison in Starke on Sept. 14.

Spasiano's death warrant was one of six death warrants signed by Martinez yesterday. He has survived one death warrant signed in 1985.

Spasiano, a member of the Outlaws motorcycle gang, was convicted in Jan. 1976 of the first degree murder of Laura Lynn Harberts, 18, of Orlando. Harberts, a hospital clerk, was found in an Altamonte Springs garbage dump Aug. 22, 1973.

The body of a second woman was also found on the garbage heap, but no charges were filed in that killing because the body was never identified.

According to prosecutors, a companion of Spasiano led police to Harberts' mutilated, decomposed body.

Spasiano's conviction in Harberts murder has withstood several appeals.

The jury that convicted him did not know of his earlier conviction in an Orange County rape. In that case, Spasiano cut the eyes of his victim, a 16-year-old Orlando girl, in an attempt to keep her from identifying him. He was sentenced to life plus five years in that 1974 attack, records show.

The six death warrants signed by Martinez total more than any governor has signed at one time since Florida resumed executions 10

Picketing school bus drivers continuing to hold that line

By VICKI BOGGERMAN
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — Wearing hand-lettered signs tied around their shoulders with string, nearly two-thirds of Seminole County's 340 school bus drivers were expected to return to the picket line today.

The picket line today was outside the transportation department's district center in Longwood. Yesterday the picket line formed on the pavement in front of the school board offices at 1211 Mellonville Ave., Sanford.

The driver are protesting what they believe have been poor management decisions within their department.

The drivers, willing to take a stand with their placards, were less willing to identify themselves when they made statements.

"Apparently Mr. Preston threatened them that if the protest took place, heads would roll and jobs would be lost," Nancy Wheeler, president of the Seminole Education Association, said yesterday. The Seminole County School Bus Drivers Association is a part of the SEA. Tom Preston is the district's assistant director of transportation.

Wheeler said such that if such threats were made, it would constitute a violation of chapter 447 of the unfair labor practices code and that a complaint against Preston had been filed with the district.

According Ernest Cowley, the district's chief negotiator, Preston was confronted with the allegations but denied having made any threats.

"He knows its wrong," Cowley said. "No jobs have been lost as a result of the pickets."

The drivers were angry at the more serious problems in the transportation department. "These aren't just minor problems of one or two children being left off a route," complained one driver. "We have some drivers with 10 students on a 88 seat bus and others with 99 kids on the same size bus."

Carolyn Perry, president of the bus drivers union, said the drivers felt the picket was their last resort.

"We've tried a number of approaches," she said. "We've spoken to management. We've gone through channels. We have to get this fixed."

In what transportation officials have been calling a money-saving effort, bus routes were reworked to include the mainstreaming of some special education students on to buses with other students.

"We don't object to mainstreaming," said a

County's approval of store site has agency up in arms

SANFORD — The Florida Department of Community Affairs is not about to give up their fight to prevent a convenience store at the southwest corner of State Road 48 and Longwood Markham Road.

In a letter received this week by Seminole County commissioner Sandra Glenn, Paul Bradshaw, director of the Department of Community Affairs (DCA) resource planning and management division, said the county would fail to protect the Wekiva River and its surrounding natural resources by allowing a commercial site so close to the river.

"We cannot see how five acres of commercial development in any form could have less impact on natural resources than five single-family homes (allowable under your suburban estates land use designation), and we therefore fail to understand how there could be any commercial development on the site that would be consistent with the (Wekiva protection) statute."

County officials weren't surprised by the response.

"It's a question of whether local regulations and the local plan was consistent when it was approved and we think it is," said Tony VanDerworp, county planning director. "There is a wide range of

State gets high marks in human services

From staff and wire reports

ORLANDO — Seminole County received less than 14 percent of Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services district spending for Aid for Families with Dependent Children, although a state study released Tuesday said the state ranks favorably in a program-by-program comparison with several other states.

The study, which was conducted for HRS by the Florida State University Center for Human Services Policy and Administration, compared Florida's spending for 16 major programs with seven other states of similar size and growth rate, said Allen Imerstein, the center's director.

Debbie Harris, an economic program specialist with the HRS district offices in Orlando, said 1,456 Seminole County families received $342,369 in AFDC, while the 6,688 families in the other three counties in the district received nearly $2.2 million from the same program. The Seminole County AFDC spending averaged $1.29 per capita.

The report found that while a U.S. Census study showed Florida ranks 47th among states in spending for Medicaid and Aid for Families with Dependent Children, it has steadily increased spending in those areas during the last few years while other states remained about the same.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

First Cuban-American elected to replace Pepper in Congress

United Press International

MIAMI — Republican Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, the first Cuban-American elected to Congress, promised to continue the legacy of her predecessor, the late Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla.

Ros-Lehtinen, a former state senator, emerged from a close race Tuesday to defeat Democratic opponent Gerald Richman. The final vote was 50,635 to 46,069, or 52.3 percent to 47.6 percent.

"I pledge to provide leadership in the U.S. House of Representatives which is based on a caring conscience and conservative convictions," Ros-Lehtinen told cheering supporters.

"I will strive to complete the mission established by Representative Pepper of a society where the old are respected, the ill are taken care of," she added.

In conceding defeat, Richman thanked his supporters for helping him come from a "total unknown" to nearly defeating Ros-Lehtinen.

The national GOP had a keen interest in the race because the party believed it was the Republicans' best chance to win one of the House's four open seats. Both President Bush and Vice President Dan Quayle made campaign appearances for Ros-Lehtinen.

Preliminary election results showed that Hispanic voters went to the polls in large numbers and voted overwhelmingly for Ros-Lehtinen, a native of Cuba.

Turnout was unusually high in the divisive campaign to choose a successor to Pepper, who died in May at the age of 86. Dade County

Elections Supervisor David Leahy had predicted turnout in the district, which covers much of Miami and all of Miami Beach, would reach 40.3 percent.

The battle to succeed the legendary Pepper, who represented the Miami area for 27 years, was tinged with racial charges and countercharges between the two candidates.

The heavy voter turnout reflected the divisive nature of the contest, as well as the attention focused on the seat because of the popularity of Pepper.

The race also generated a high degree of interest in Miami's large Hispanic community because of Ros-Lehtinen's heritage. Her ethnic background also provided much of the focus of the contest, and fueled its bitterest controversy.

Democrats were upset when Republican National Committee Chairman Lee Atwater said the seat should go to a Cuban-American because of the ethnic makeup of the district. The GOP has a strong base of support among Cuban-Americans.

Richman countered with a campaign slogan that the congressional post was an "American" seat — a tactic that was bitterly denounced as a sly attempt to divide Hispanics from white and black voters.

The conservative Ros-Lehtinen, a seven-year veteran of the state Legislature, refused to debate Richman, contending he was trying to sell a bigoted message.

Richman denied the charge, arguing that Ros-Lehtinen was afraid to face him on the issues.

Man charged with swiping hairpiece

UPI report

PENSACOLA — A 26-year-old man was arrested for allegedly ripping the hairpiece from his neighbor's head and running away with it after they had a confrontation near a communal mailbox, police said Tuesday.

Sgt. Perry Knowles of the Pensacola Police Department said Lewis Williams was charged with battery and petty theft Monday and released on a $100 cash bond in connection with the incident last week.

According to police, the incident happened Aug. 21 when the two men went to a mailbox outside their apartment complex at the same time. As the victim, believed to be in his 50s, was reaching for his mail Williams allegedly grabbed his $65 hairpiece and ran.

The neighbor gave chase and a scuffle ensued. The victim got his hairpiece back, but ended up with a black eye and swollen lip.

Cars kill 200 newly hatched sea turtles

DELRAY BEACH — More than 300 newly hatched sea turtles attracted by nighttime street lights have been killed by motorists on State Road A1A, officials said Tuesday.

The turtles apparently had wandered across the road from their unprotected nests on the beach.

L. Kim Jones, 33, of Gulf Stream, said she was riding her bike along A1A early Monday when she saw the turtles crawling along side of the road. Others fell into a storm drain and died of dehydration.

"If it had not been for those lights, those turtles would have headed for the sea," said Jones, who has been protecting turtles for more than five years. "They all headed for the high-pressure sodium lights."

Newly hatched sea turtles generally follow their instincts and move toward the brightest light, which in an isolated area would be the moonlight reflecting on the ocean.

But along A1A, the hatchlings are drawn by the brighter lights of condominiums and roadways.

"It's a common occurrence to find dead turtles on the highway," said John Fitzmeyer, who is paid by the city to protect the turtles.

The nests are sometimes caged to prevent the hatchlings from heading toward the traffic, he said.

Raw sewage poured into waterway

HOLLYWOOD — A broken pipe spewed an estimated 500,000 gallons of raw sewage into the Intracoastal Waterway, and health officials scheduled tests Wednesday to determine the extent of environmental and health dangers.

"It's fairly serious," said Jon G. Monson, Hollywood's deputy director of utilities.

The 18-inch city pipe underneath the intracoastal carries 1 million to 1.5 million gallons of sewage a day. Workers discovered a leak Monday and switched the sewage flow to a secondary pipe. That pipe apparently became overloaded and burst about 10 a.m. Tuesday.

Workers switched the flow back to the first, leaking pipe while they repaired the secondary pipe. The repair took nine hours, and by then as much as 500,000 gallons of sewage had leaked.

The Broward County Health Department planned to test the water Wednesday, but said it was unlikely health warnings would be posted. The department has already advised against swimming in the intracoastal for years.

Suit sought for girl left behind

ST. AUGUSTINE — The family of a 15-year-old girl who was left at Walt Disney World after a class trip in 1967 has filed suit against the St. Johns County school board, a former teacher and an assistant principal.

The lawsuit said the girl, identified only as C.S., has been hospitalized since in a psychiatric ward because of her extreme reaction to being left behind. The suit said the extreme reaction may have been triggered because the girl was abandoned by her natural mother.

She was part of a group from Ketterlinus Middle School that went to the park in May 1967. She arrived at the appointed meeting place after everyone had left and after school buses had departed.

Developer faces 30 years in jail

FORT MYERS — A commercial developer was convicted of defrauding investors out of up to $13 million and sentenced to 30 years in jail.

A circuit court jury found Kenneth Rager guilty Tuesday on 55 criminal charges, including racketeering, grand theft and securities fraud.

Rager, a principal in the defunct brokerage firm of Lawrence Rager Company, also could be ordered to make restitution to the victims.

He was indicted last year with Lloyd Lawrence on charges he used the money that 450 customers invested in an office complex project to satisfy debts and costs incurred in other business ventures.

Lawrence pleaded guilty to similar charges in January and was sentenced to 2 1/2 years in prison.

Too much money for FPL?

TALLAHASSEE — The Public Service Commission is investigating the earnings of Florida Power Corp. to determine whether the utility is earning too much money.

A review of Florida Power earnings presented to the commission this week shows the company is near the top of its allowable earnings range. Commission chairman Michael Wilson has called for a modified review Florida Power's rates. If they are found to be too high, then rebates could be ordered.

The state allows electric companies to make a profit ranging from 12.6 percent to 13.6 percent per month. Florida Power's return has been as high as 13.8 percent since January.

Gallagher may have diluted lobby reforms

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Insurance Commissioner Tom Gallagher wrote language in a lobbying reform bill that is blamed by ethics officials for weakening attempts to crack down on influence peddling, a newspaper reported Tuesday.

Gallagher has criticized regulations the state Ethics Commission has drafted to enforce the law approved in the closing days of the regular legislative session, saying he is "absolutely certain lobbyists will be able to sidestep public scrutiny unless the rules are altered."

A hearing on the new rules was scheduled for Sept. 14, and Bonnie Williams, executive director of the ethics panel, said it is possible they could be tightened then. The Tampa Tribune reported.

Lobbyists working the legislative branch are already required to register and disclose their clients. The new law would have required registration of lobbyists seeking licenses, environmental permits and hospital certificates of need from the executive branch.

But an amendment prepared by Gallagher's office, and adopted by the Legislature with virtually no debate, targets only lobbyists trying to influence the overall "policy or procurement" of executive agencies.

Gallagher now says the ethics commission is interpreting that language too narrowly and the result will be to exclude lobbyists who are trying to influence agency decisions on licenses or investigations.

"We saw that language then and we continue to see it as a strengthening of that law," said Jill Chamberlin, spokeswoman for Gallagher.

Chamberlin said a broader definition of the word "policy" includes agency actions ranging from granting licenses to issuing permits. She said the law would have been unworkable without the amendment because the original language would have required too many people to register as lobbyists.

Rep. Fred Lippman, D-Hollywood, and Rep. Debbie Sanderson, R-Fort Lauderdale, have complained the Ethics Commission has interpreted the language too narrowly.

Homicide victim's tale was fishy

UPI report

CLEARWATER — A murder investigation that started with an anonymous tip turned into just another fish tale when investigators sifting through a shallow grave discovered the remains of a 400-pound grouper.

Based on the anonymous tip, a contingent of law enforcement agents sifted through handfuls of dirt scooped from a 4-by-7-foot depression in the earth.

Four hours later, a man on a bicycle rode by and said he'd seen a fish buried there two weeks ago.

Investigators then uncovered the 6-foot skeleton of what was once a 400- to 500-pound grouper.

"Thanks to the efforts of the Clearwater Police Department," Clearwater police spokesman Wayne Sheior bragged, "this is one fish that did not get away."

Florida among AIDS leaders

United Press International

Florida was among the leaders in state spending on AIDS, which has increased by almost $100 million to more than $250 million during fiscal 1989, according to a new study released Wednesday in Washington.

The report by George Washington University found that about $500 million in non-Medicaid funds were spent to prevent and treat AIDS at the state level this fiscal year.

The number of states that did not allocate any general revenues for the battle against acquired immune deficiency syndrome fell from 14 in fiscal 1988 to eight in fiscal 1989.

New York with $47 million was second to California in state-funded AIDS expenditures. Three other states also topped the $10 million mark: Florida, Massachusetts and New Jersey.

The median level of state-only funds for AIDS was about $550,000.

The District of Columbia ranked first in per capita AIDS spending at $9.91, followed by Hawaii at $3.62. Five other states — California, New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut — rank high spending between $2 and $3 per resident on AIDS. In all, 11 states allocated more than $1 per person for AIDS.

The five states with the greatest number of reported AIDS cases were: New York, 23,424; California, 20,478; Florida, 8,248; New Jersey, 7,074; and Texas, 6,889.

State plans labor-camp fire inspections

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — State health officials have ordered, for the first time, fire safety inspections for all 360 migrant labor camps in Florida amid fears the result could be a housing shortage for the 39,233 workers.

The Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services ordered growers to provide fire safety certificates by Oct. 1 as a condition for renewal of their licenses to run the camps, said Wiley Hart, environmental health consultant for the agency.

HRS has never exercised its authority to require fire safety certificates. It is doing so now because officials have little information about conditions in the camps and because it feels compelled to improve its oversight of the facilities, Hart told The Tampa Tribune.

"We don't think they have to be palaces, but the housing needs to be safe," Hart said. "We really don't know what's out there."

HRS is asking for help from the office of Insurance Commissioner Tom Gallagher, who also serves as state fire marshal. But some officials questioned the need for the inspections just now.

"I think one of the reasons they may be doing this may have to do with the child deaths," said Cecil Chestain, fire marshal for Hillsborough County.

Five sleepers found in storage room

SANFORD — Sanford police report awakening and arresting five men found sleeping in a storage building at 110 N. Myrtle Ave.

The arrests were made at about 3:12 a.m. Tuesday. Police said the door to the building, which belongs to Salpointe Apartments, was padlocked and entry was apparently made through a broken window.

Charged with burglary are: Mark Walker Day, 24, of 4228 State Road 436, Geneva; Dale Allen Konstant, 41, of 836 Morris St., Altamonte Springs; Martin Stanley Lewis, 38, no address; Greg C. Prager, 28, of Sanford; and Richard David Lewis, 40, of Sanford. Bond is $2,000 each on the burglary charge.

Suspected stolen mowers brings arrest

FERN PARK — A man who allegedly sold two stolen lawnmowers in Fern Park has been arrested. The arrest, by Seminole County sheriff's deputies, came after the buyer reported to deputies he suspected the mowers were stolen.

Deputies said one mower had been reported stolen from a Casseberry church and another was reported stolen in Jackson, Miss.

James Ronald Thompson, 30, of Orlando, was charged with dealing in stolen property in the case. He was arrested in Fern Park at about 5 p.m. Tuesday. Bond is $3,000.

Apopka man arrested on pot charge

LONGWOOD — A Seminole County sheriff's deputy reported stopping a man's car and arresting him after the deputy saw the man apparently smoking marijuana as he drove on State Road 434, Longwood.

Mark Anthony Kendall, 23, 1159 High Meadow Road, Apopka, was charged with possession of less than 30 grams of marijuana and driving with a revoked license at about 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Rustproofing claims come under scrutiny

From staff and wire reports

SANFORD — Area automobile dealers say they haven't seen a letter reportedly sent from the state attorney general's office to all Florida dealerships warning auto dealers Tuesday that it is against Florida law to sell extra rustproofing to new car buyers without disclosing it might be unnecessary or even cause damage.

Nonetheless, most dealers said they add rustproofing to all their vehicles prior to putting them out on the lot and pass the cost on to the buyer.

"We feel it is vital to the satisfaction of the buyer," said Matt Strout, sales manager of Walt Jenner Buick-GMC in Casseberry. "Customers do not mind paying for the added protection."

In a letter to the 1,717 Florida dealers in new automobiles, Attorney General Bob Butterworth said failure to disclose manufacturers' recommendations regarding non-factory rustproofing will be considered a violation of Florida's Deceptive and Unfair Trade Practices Act.

Some dealers have falsely implied to customers the treatments are necessary in Florida because of the salt air, said Butterworth. Some dealers have also falsely implied factory rustproofing does not protect inside surfaces of a vehicle's underbody.

"Most manufacturers of cars sold in this country already provide a warranty against rust-through on their 1988 and 1989 vehicles," Butterworth wrote. "Some manufacturers also take the position that this after-manufacture rustproofing is not only unnecessary on their vehicles but also may even cause rust if misapplied."

Any dealer who engages in such trade practices after receiving the attorney general's letter could be forced to reimburse the buyer for the full cost.

Gulf stations to offer oil collection centers

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — British Petroleum announced Tuesday that more than 250 Gulf service stations in Florida would soon be accepting used motor oil from customers, making it easier for the public to help keep state waters clean.

Company spokesmen said the plan was BP Oil's way to support the state's new Solid Waste Management Law, which outlines procedures for setting up voluntary waste oil collection centers throughout the state and outlaws the dumping of waste oil.

"Few issues are more critical than protecting the ground water," said Pete Riley, southern regional manager for BP Oil Co., which owns Gulf.

Riley unveiled the plan to let the public drop off their oil at gulf stations at a news conference attended by state Rep. Chuck Smith, D-Brooksville, and Sen. George Kirkpatrick, D-Gainesville.

Starting next month, Gulf stations in 50 counties will post green-and-white signs announcing that they are taking consumers' waste oil, which will then be picked up by contractors for disposal and recycling.

"People might look at your company differently than people involved in oil spills," said state Sen. George Kirkpatrick, D-Gainesville, to the BP representatives, referring to recent massive oil spills off the coasts of Alaska and Rhode Island.

Oil dumped on the ground gets washed off by groundwater runoff and contaminates the freshwater aquifer or contaminates surface water, Kirkpatrick said that one gallon of oil can contaminate up to one million gallons of drinking water.

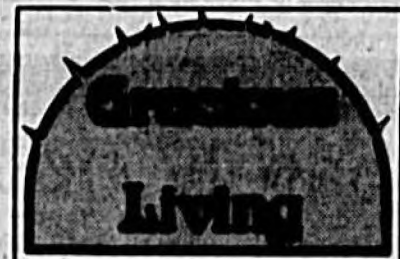

In Florida, businesses generate more than 23 million gallons of used oil each year, said Dale Twachtmann, secretary of the Department of Environmental Regulations, which regulates the disposal of hazardous wastes. Of that, used oil, 69 percent is burned as a fuel and 31 percent is used in industrial processes, such as asphalt production.

But, until this year, the general public has not been regulated. Twachtmann said that at least 10 million gallons of used oil disappears each year in Florida, and that seven million gallons comes from private users, mostly people changing their own motor oil.

Beyond Neptune

As the Voyager 2 probe departs the solar system, continuing the most fantastic journey of discovery in human history, the enormous rewards of space exploration are plainly evident. For the moment, anyway. But if the United States is to sustain its planetary quest, it will require a lasting commitment of talent and dollars that goes well beyond the passing enthusiasm sparked by Voyager's fly-by of Neptune.

The one-ton spacecraft's solitary odyssey of 4.5 billion miles, including earlier rendezvous with Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus, is really a triumph of the past decade. Voyager was launched in 1977, at a time when many still considered it America's destiny to push back the frontiers of space.

The 10 years that followed Voyager's liftoff were meager ones for NASA. The 1986 explosion of the shuttle Challenger marked the nadir of the U.S. space program and forced a healthy reassessment of its purpose and long-range objectives.

With President Bush committed to rebuilding the civilian space program, the 1990s hold promise of a renaissance extending into the 21st century. The U.S. effort will be magnified by the Soviet Union's robust plans for exploration of the solar system and by the expanding activities of the European and Japanese space agencies.

If today's ambitious plans by these governments are supported by long-term financial backing, mankind may be at the space equivalent of the mid-16th century, when European exploration of the New World began in earnest. The risk is that budget cutters will delay or abort these endeavors, much as the irascible Portuguese forfeited the discoveries of their pioneering navigators to the Spanish and others.

Voyager 2's revelations of Neptune's four small moons, its rings of dusty debris and turbulent atmosphere, highlighted by the wind-driven storm system officially named the Great Dark Spot, are only a foretaste of what the next decade could bring. After the lapse of the 1980s, interplanetary travel is set to take off again.

In 1992, the United States intends to launch another unmanned craft to study the atmosphere and surface of Mars, to be followed by a second probe that will retrieve a soil sample and return it to earth. A manned mission early in the next century is the logical climax of the Mars undertaking. Meanwhile, the Magellan probe is already on its way to Venus, and Galileo will leave for Jupiter in October. The Soviets also are preparing for two unmanned ventures to the Martian moon Phobos during the 1990s, with other probes bound for Mercury and Venus before the end of the century.

The price tag attached to these dreams is not cheap and social and economic problems also deserve enormous attention. But if the United States establishes a reasonable priority for space and presses ahead with genuine commitment, Voyager 2's spectacular discoveries will one day be remembered as merely a humble beginning.

Capital punishment isn't perfect

First came the saga of Randall Dale Adams and James Richardson. Now the case of Ronald Monroe has surfaced. Together, they make you wonder — if only for a little while — about the wisdom of the death penalty.

Adams was the prisoner freed earlier this year from a cell in Texas, 13 years after his conviction for killing a Dallas cop. Thanks in large part to a magnificent documentary, "The Thin Blue Line," doubts about Adams' guilt reached such a crescendo that even Texas officials could no longer ignore them.

In their haste to pin the crime on a friendless drifter, they'd overlooked a far more likely suspect who'd been available to them all the time and who was later jailed for another murder.

Adams' conviction robbed him of 12 years of life. But had the pace of executions been faster, as so many people believe it should be, he'd have been robbed of life itself.

Richardson was freed from Florida's death row this year after a judge ruled that his 1988 trial — a sensational affair that followed the poisoning of seven children — had been marred by perjured testimony and prosecutorial misconduct.

Monroe is a convicted murderer in Louisiana who was scheduled for execution at the end of this month. In mid-August, Gov. Buddy Roemer commuted his death sentence to life in prison without parole because of growing doubts about his guilt.

Actually, the case against Monroe is a great deal stronger than the other two, since the murder victim's children, eyewitnesses to the 1977 killing, remain adamant about Monroe's guilt. Even so, his attorneys have deftly focused attention on the victim's estranged husband at the time of her death, a man with a history of violence who was convicted of killing another common-law wife in Michigan.

Admittedly, three cases do not establish a national pattern of careless convictions, especially since no one questions the guilt of the vast majority of death-row inmates — not even many of the inmates themselves. But the case of Adams, in particular, should remind us that speedy trials and prompt executions, however desirable in theory, sometimes jeopardize justice.

No doubt many Americans are tired of arguments against the death penalty. And no wonder. Some very silly things have been said against it over the years.

Some critics have argued, for example, that executions violate the constitutional ban against cruel and unusual punishment. The trouble with this line of reasoning is that at the time the Constitution was ratified, anywhere from 10 to 18 capital offenses existed in the former colonies, in one instance even for burglary. What's more, the Fifth Amendment, which speaks of persons being "deprived of life," would make no sense without the premise of a death penalty.

Yet if the truth be told, some equally dubious claims have been made in favor of the death penalty — not the least of which is that it deters crime. Unfortunately, despite the best efforts of thoughtful scholars, the case for deterrence simply has not been locked in. The data are too slippery, and comparisons between states, countries and periods of history contain too many variables to ensure rock-hard conclusions.

They'd overlooked a far more likely suspect.

Where time is barely noticed

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. — This has been a very rainy year in eastern North Carolina. Along the roads to the beach, the corn is nudging elephant's eye height.

But no blessing is unmixed, and with the wetness an unheard-of unpredictability has descended. At first it was a blasting southwesterly breeze, torrid and fly-bearing. Then the wind whirled about, the glass fell and loathsome spitting rain came at us from the northeast. It was Canada's fault, someone pointed out, saying that maybe there ought to be a treaty. We would stop the acid rain, and they would keep their cold air to themselves.

Then following the northeaster came a baffling but tolerable melange of clouds, sun, wind and tides, leading up to the great lunar eclipse, the moon, when it pepped through the drifting clouds, became a pale circlet about the size and luster of a battered optic-orange tennis ball.

But why dwell on the weather? When the weather at the beach is out of whack, we take it personally — like our Siamese cat, Pharaoh, a brilliant and affectionate but cosmically self-centered creature. On rainy mornings back home, he bites mt ankle in reproach if it is raining. Then he darts to the back door to see if it is also raining there. If the world there is like the world out front, he bites my ankle again.

Cats have an over-personalized notion of meteorological causation, you may say. But for those given to the joys of tropical vacations, cat meteorology is the only kind that counts. Somebody is to blame. We wonder for weeks if it would rain enough in June and July to rain itself out by August. If it's been dry, we can almost sense the rains being stored in some celestial vat to fall here in August. Forget your scientific weather forecasting. At beach time, cats have it entirely right.

The other news of note here is the completion of the Palm Beach House, in all its pink glory. It stands at the top end of Shell Island, commanding a panoramic view of the tidal marshes and the Intracoastal Waterway. Until a few years ago, this northern sector of Wrightsville Beach was empty, unspoiled. We called it the end of civilization. Now it is civilization of a sort. The House had 6,300 square feet of floor space, seven tiled decks and two Jacuzzis. It can be your for just under $1 million.

The modesty of the price would be sneered at in Washington or New York, or for that matter Palm Beach. But this is Wrightsville, after all, the home of classic beach understatement. This house is not gentrification. It is escalation. It is an outrage, in fact; but while very much disapproving of it in principle, I covet it.

That such a house should be built here is in keeping with the most startling change in the beach landscape since my youth: the carpeting and air-conditioning of beach cottages, their gradual insulation from intimacy with the sand and the sea. Some now even boast chintzy easy chairs. The Palm Beach House is the ne plus ultra of this trend, for fortunately there cannot be many more. Space has just about run out.

And in its nest of well-snipped boxwoods and transplanted palmettos, the Palm Beach House looks patently imported. It looks as if Joe P. Kennedy Sr. or William Randolph Hearst ought to be standing on one of the decks, perhaps with a starlet or two tucked away in the attic for a rainy day.

Aside from gaping at the Palm Beach House, we did as little as possible — as usual. The day's routine is now as deeply encoded by immemorial custom as the Magna Carta. There is the morning seminar (breakfast), followed by reading, followed by the beach and drinking, lunch and more drinking, followed by...well, the schedule is a dull to recite as it is restful.

But every year, one novelty is allowed. One year it was gravity-inversion boots. This year it was "The Book of Questions," by Gregory Stock, Ph.D., featuring such soul-searching queries as: "How many times during the day do you look at yourself in the mirror?" or "Would you prefer to be blind or deaf?" or "Before making a telephone call, do you ever rehearse what you are going to say?" Mixed with a morning toddy or two, questions like this stimulate discussions which Pascal or Aristotle would find stunning in depth and brilliance. At least, that is the impression one gets after a toddy or two.

But enough of metaphysics. Keep your harps and your golden slippers, St. Peter. This place and this blessed interval are my idea of a satisfactory eternity. The sole defect is that, like eternity, Wrightsville makes clock time a barely noticed irrelevance. Too soon, and long before we are reconciled, it is time to make our way back through the cornfields. "Back to Amurrica," as we put it. And not very happily.

A baffling but tolerable melange of clouds, sun, wind and tides.

Entrepreneurs face battle

GORKY PARK, Moscow — When eating in one of the state-run restaurants in Moscow, if you don't like the food and service, just walk a few blocks away.

Visitors can find a luxurious atmosphere in an old, renovated building that a few of Russia's budding entrepreneurs have transformed into a four-star restaurant. And most surprising for the Soviet Union, the service was prompt and courteous, the food sumptuous.

This is in stark contrast to the nicest state-run restaurants, where the waitresses are surly and uncooperative, the food dull.

Why the difference? The first establishment is a sorry relic of a bloated and corrupt bureaucracy; these still vastly outnumber cooperatives, which might be called the seedlings of perestroika, or economic reform. The second establishment is a capitalist enterprise that Soviet premier Mikhail Gorbachev has baptized "cooperative" — created by partners who have pooled their savings, received low-interest state loans and their premises from the state.

Although mere blocks separate the two restaurants, they are, ideologically speaking, light years apart. In a sense, the conflict and competition between these two restaurants personifies the battle now being waged in the Soviet Union between new and old, reform vs. establishment.

The plight of "The Sweet Tooth" offers an ominous omen for Soviet reformers. It was the most popular and successful of Moscow restaurants until shutting down a few weeks ago. The Sweet Tooth attracted Western embassy crowds and even openly boasted — and displayed — letters of thanks and encouragement from both former President Reagan and President Bush. The restaurateurs somehow slipped a cake to Bush for his inauguration, and he reportedly ate the confectionery symbol of perestroika with gusto.

Yet The Sweet Tooth eventually was strangled by the red tape and government meddling that is so endemic to the Soviet Union.

Reform-minded Soviets have fostered the individual or cooperative private enterprises with a series of new laws beginning in November 1986. Only about a fifth of the co-ops that have quickly sprung up are restaurants. The rest offer a wide range of products and services, from key-cutting to proxy line-waiting, dog-grooming to babushka-grooming; from car and shoe repair to matchmaking services.

Some 100,000 cooperatives are officially registered, and the government estimates more than 1.5 million people are engaged in these private pursuits. Gorbachev desires even faster growth than this. A top Soviet economist, who serves as a close adviser to the Russian leader, told us that the income from these enterprises is expected to reach 10 billion rubles this year, or a little over 1 percent of the Soviet gross national product.

The government's secret target, sources tell us, is to boost it to 15 percent of the GNP in 10 years.

"We have great hopes with the development of the cooperative sector," the government economist told us. "The cooperative means jobs for those who are freed from other sectors, and especially for those soon leaving the army — about half a million soldiers." He touted new laws this year that give cooperatives the right to file lawsuits, create joint ventures with the state, hire workers the state lays off and even engage in foreign trade.

In the nicest state-run restaurants, the waitresses are surly and uncooperative, the food dull.

Murderer's appeal denied Pickets

RICHMOND, Va. — A federal judge denied the appeal of a newly baptized murderer scheduled to die in the electric chair tonight for raping and killing a 61-year-old woman.

U.S. District Judge Robert Merhige Jr. said the "evidence is absolutely overwhelming" against Alton Wayne, 34, who was sentenced to death for the 1977 rape and stabbing death of a 61-year-old widow of a prominent Lunenburg County farmer.

There was little, or no, new information in the appeal which was not already on the record, Merhige said of the case.

Waye still had one appeal before the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, which was scheduled to rule whether the Mecklenburg County jury that convicted him and recommended the death penalty was properly instructed.

Merhige rejected that appeal Monday.

If the ruling by the 4th Circuit was unfavorable, Waye's lawyers were expected to turn to the U.S. Supreme Court to stop his 11 p.m. execution.

Waye was baptized Tuesday and told chaplains that he was ready to die. He was ordered put to death for the rape and murder of LaVergne Marshall, whose nude body was found in her bathtub beaten beyond recognition, stabbed 43 times and covered with bleach.

Waye, a factory worker, first confessed to his father and then police, taking authorities on a tour of the crime scene several miles from his home in the rural Southside Virginia backwater.

Waye's lawyers late Tuesday told Merhige they needed more time to review the possibility that Waye's companion on the night of the murder, Len Gooden, also could be linked to the crime.

"Gooden is a possible candidate," in the murder, said Richard Burr of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund. "All the pieces are beginning to fall into place."

Linwood Wells, an assistant state attorney general, declined their last-minute appeals, suggesting that their attempt to halt the execution is "too late."

Wells said he found the request for a stay "a little difficult to swallow."

Waye, who has spent more than a decade on death row, would be the eighth person to die in the state's electric chair and the 117th person to be executed since the Supreme Court lifted the ban on capital punishment in 1976.

Gov. Gerald Riffe was not expected to halt the execution of Waye, who has been on Virginia's death row longer than anyone else.

driver while carrying a sign which read "Special Services for Special Kids." "We object to management mainstreaming the kids without giving us the proper training or assistance to help those kids with their special needs."

"No one asked us anything," a fellow protester said.

Many of the drivers felt the problem was the inexperience of management. One driver said he didn't think either transportation director Benny Arnold or Preston had any previous experience in routing procedures, yet they were the ones who made all the decisions on this year's routes.

Arnold, formerly the district's assistant superintendent of facilities and transportation, was previously a school principal and athletic coach in Putnam County. He was demoted from his assistant superintendent's position several years ago amid controversy regarding his management of warehouse facilities. He was replaced by Richard Wells, who was then director of transportation. Preston was previously employed by the Melbourne police department.

"I just want to help these kids get what they deserve," one driver said.

On Mellonville Avenue horns honked and people waved, occasionally shouting words of encouragement to the drivers.

"Give 'em hell," called one woman from a car. "Someone needs to straighten up that mess."

The rerouting failed to provide routes for new apartment complexes and housing developments that were constructed since the last school year.

"There's whole bus loads of kids not getting to school," said one driver who said her bus carries less than one third its capacity. "The worst part is that I see some of those kids standing out there waiting for a bus and I know it won't come, but I can't pick them up."

Wheeler explained that drivers are not permitted to pick up unauthorized riders.

Some drivers were frustrated at their inability to help parents who came to them with complaints.

"Don't blame us," read one of the signs. "The best way to save money is to hire competent managers," was the sentiment of another.

While the protesters marched at the district offices, transportation management could not be reached for comment.

Richard Wells, assistant superintendent for facilities and transportation, said the district was looking into the problems with the transportation department but would not elaborate on steps to be taken.

"I don't think any of us will lose our jobs over this," said one driver. "We can't strike, but we can sure protest."

Currency

Susan B. Anthony dollar, first issued in the late 1970s, are no longer minted.

"We had to dig and scratch to get what we have," he said. This week the bank will have $4,400, in $2 bills and $600 in dollar coins.

Martin said large volume exchange of the currency and coins should not create much confusion. He said the $2 bill, which features the face of Thomas Jefferson, is a distinctive bill. "And you know when you've got a Susan B. Anthony — they are heavy," he joked.

David Bates, manager of Winn-Dixie at 3818 Orlando Dr., agreed that merchants can handle even a large volume of the bills and coins without confusion for cashiers or customers. "Money's money," he said.

Clayton said he expects a number of blacks to help exceed the $10,000 goal in the weekend demonstration, which is promoted by the national NAACP. He said he could not disclose the number of members in the local chapter.

Intenalties that would be consistent with the (Wekiva River Protection Act). The market is always open to find ways to be consistent."

The DCA has asked a state hearing officer to consider the issue. A hearing will be in Sanford, Sept. 12 at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, beginning at 9 a.m.

The county approved the commercial site, owned by Miller Enterprises Inc., on Dec. 8, 1987 in its comprehensive land use plan. However, Miller never sought to rezone the property.

In December 1988, the DCA discovered the site had not been rezoned. They recommended it be converted back to a residential or agricultural designation to be consistent with Wekiva River Protection Act, passed by the Florida Legislature in 1988.

The Wekiva River Protection Act requires that all properties in the boundaries of the protection area remain of a rural nature. The act requires any development to have no more impact on the area than if it were developed for homes.

In response to the request to change the zoning on the Miller property, the county passed an amendment to its development codes in February. The amendment states that regardless of the zoning or land use, any properties lying within the boundaries of the protection area must comply with the Wekiva River Protection Act.

In the Aug. 23 letter to Glenn

Bradshaw said the change failed to address the requirements of the act. Any action short of changing the land use of the site would not prevent the state's appeal. Among the concerns stated by state officials is the site lies directly south from the entrance to the Lower Wekiva River State Preserve.

The commercial site also lies within a five-mile stretch of SR 48 in Seminole and Lake Counties where a dozen black bear were killed last year. Black bear are considered a threatened species by the state. More traffic attracted to a convenience store could lead to more black bear deaths on the road.

Miranda Fitzgerald, Miller's attorney, has denied the store would lead to more bear deaths.

Study

"For a woman who's on AFDC who wants to get a job, the picture looks good," said Greg Coler, Secretary of the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

"We picked states that were representative of having very liberal spending in social services," Coler said. "When you look at some of the areas, like children's medical services, we do a better job than all of these other states."

The other states in the study were California, Georgia, Illinois, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and Texas. California, Minnesota and Massachusetts usually rank among the top 10 when traditional ways of measuring social welfare spending are used, Imcrachein said.

According to the study, Florida ranked first among those states in child-support enforcement and programs for children with special health problems, Imcrachein said.

The state ranked second in programs for children's mental health, child abuse and neglect prevention, and juvenile delinquency. It ranked third in child welfare programs, and fourth in subsidized daycare, services for the elderly, AIDS treatment programs, maternal and child health programs, and personal health care and primary care programs.

However, Florida was sixth in alcohol and drug abuse programs, and seventh in services for the developmentally disabled and in Aid to Families with years ago.

The execution of three of the men would occur on the same day. That has happened before, but six warrants signed in one day amounts to a new record, said Capital Collateral Representative Larry Spalding.

Spalding's office represents indigent death row inmates, and he said his staff must prepare appeals for five of the men within 30 days, which will sorely try his resources. Spaziano has a private attorney.

"We've had up to 11 outstanding warrants at one time, but we've never had six at one moment," Spalding said. "We're back in business."

The last execution in Florida was of Aubrey Adams on May 4.

The five warrants in addition to Spaziano's signed Tuesday are for: Angel Diaz, Brian Jennings, J.B. Parker, Gregory Scott Engle and Rickey Bernard Roberts.

Executions were set Oct. 27 for Diaz, Jennings and Parker. Engle and Roberts were scheduled to be executed Oct. 31. All are on first warrants.

Diaz was sentenced for the 1979 murder of Joseph Nagy, manager of a Miami tuxedo bar called The Velvet Swing, during a robbery.

Jennings was sentenced for the 1979 sex murder of Rebecca Kunash, a 6-year-old Brevard County girl abducted from her bed. Court records say he raped her, beat her head on the pavement while holding her by her feet and dumped her in a canal, where she drowned.

Court records say Parker was the triggerman in the 1982 abduction and murder of Frances Julia Slater, heiress to the Evinrude boat motor fortune. She was working her last night at a Stuart convenience store, having quit because her family feared for her safety. Two co-defendants also drew death sentences.

Engle was sentenced in the 1979 abduction, rape, murder and mutilation of Eleanor Kathy Tolin, a convenience store clerk in Jacksonville. A co-defendant also was sentenced to death.

Roberts was sentenced in the 1984 beating murder of a George Luis Napoles, 20, of Miami. Napoles and two female friends were parked on the Rickenbacker Causeway when they were rousted by Roberts posing as an undercover police officer. Roberts began fondling one of the women and when Napoles objected, beat him to death with a baseball bat. He also raped one of the women twice.

Army reports on Vietnam war coverage

WASHINGTON — A new Army study concludes that rising U.S. casualties in Vietnam and the lack of a winning strategy — not news media coverage — led to erosion of American public support for the war.

While pointing to some flaws in coverage, the study says, "It is undeniable, however, that press reports were still often more accurate than the public statements of the administration in portraying the situation in Vietnam."

"The U.S. Army in Vietnam: Public Affairs, The Military and the Media, 1963-68," is the first volume of a two-volume account written by historian William Hammond of the Army Center of Military History.

Hammond said in an interview Tuesday his work was published in mid-March with little fanfare, though "the Army has stood four-square behind it all along. They had no illusions about this war."

EPA wants to cut haze at Grand Canyon

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency said it would take action to reduce air pollution obscuring the breath-taking vistas of the Grand Canyon and identified a northern Arizona power plant as the main culprit.

The EPA, acting Tuesday under a court order obtained by an environmental group, formally cited the Navajo Generating Station in Page, Ariz., for contributing between 40 percent and 70 percent of the pollutants that cause the bright white haze that often settles over the majestic canyon in the winter.

The agency said it will announce by February 1990 what pollution-control steps must be taken to reduce emissions from the coal-burning power plant, which spews between 12 and 13 tons of sulfur dioxide per hour out of its three 775-foot-high smokestacks, situated 12 miles from the canyon's northern rim.

Japanese leader leaves troubles at home

WASHINGTON — Political troubles facing new Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu are not expected to arise during talks beginning Friday with President Bush and Secretary of State James Baker, U.S. officials said.

Kaifu was scheduled to arrive today in San Francisco for his first working visit to the United States. The trip is being troubled by a series of political setbacks for Kaifu's Liberal Democratic Party, including a pair of scandals involving extra-marital affairs by high political officials.

One administration official said the United States is wondering whether "Kaifu is his own man, or just a front man for the old leadership waiting for the scandals to blow over, after which they will resume business as usual."

Kaifu won the leadership of his party because of his ability to demonstrate a lack of involvement with the traditional leadership and their association with fund-raising scandals.

Jesse Jackson criticizes Mayor Koch

NEW YORK — Jesse Jackson sharply criticized Mayor Ed Koch for discouraging black activists from protesting against the deadly racial attack of a black teen in the predominantly white neighborhood where the assault occurred.

The civil rights leader, speaking Tuesday at the slain teen's wake, said black sympathizers have every right to demonstrate in Bensonhurst against the killing of Yusuf Hawkins, 16.

A funeral for Hawkins, who was fatally shot last week by a white man, will be held Wednesday.

"The police are discouraging marchers ... he should have been leading them to affirm their right to do it," Jackson said. "Police said they believe Hawkins' death was caused after a teen, whose girlfriend spurned him to date a black man, angered white youths seeking revenge."

Jackson characterized the murder as "a racially and sexually motivated lynching" and compared it to the 1955 Mississippi murder of Emmett Till, a black youth slain by men who thought he whistled at a white woman.

Hawkins, wearing a button on his lapel proclaiming: "I'm proud to be black," lay in an open coffin Tuesday surrounded by family members and friends.

At the wake, grim-faced mourners got a scare after an anonymous caller told police there was a bomb in the building set to explode in a matter of minutes, officials said.

Bush promises more money for drug battle

United Press International

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — President Bush, promising to help Colombia's battle with drug barons "to the best of our ability," will significantly boost aid to the cocaine-crippled South American nation.

Bush's promise, issued after a meeting Tuesday with top advisers, was reflected in additional funding for Colombia that will be included in his national drug policy plan to be unveiled Sept. 5.

The president, who is to present the strategy in a nationally televised address, met with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, CIA Director William Webster and federal drug policy director William Bennett.

After the meeting, Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, told reporters the plan to overhaul the federal battle against illegal drugs was essentially completed and "the focus of the meeting was on the international aspects of it and ... the particular attention was to Colombia."

Standing outside his vacation home on the Maine coast, Bush said, "We will cooperate with Colombia to the best of our ability."

While details of new U.S. aid are still being worked out and Bush refused to discuss how he would pay for it, he did signal support for "what the president of that country is trying to do" and said the funding "is an important step." He referred to renewed Colombian efforts to crack down on the cocaine cartels that have launched a new wave of terror attacks.

WASHINGTON — The clock was set to expire today on an unresolved crisis between Panama and the United States, with the State Department expected to gain possession of a handsome, empty embassy building.

Panama's constitution provides that the present government, dominated by Gen. Manuel Noriega as de facto ruler, ends Sept. 1.

The United States recognizes Eric Arturo Delvalle as the president of Panama. Delvalle is living in Miami and is expected to return to Panama as the president of Panama.

Delvalle's ambassador, Juan Soza, remains in charge of the Panamanian Embassy in Washington, with a staff of 10 people, paid by U.S. funds withheld from the Noriega government.

On Aug. 23 the Organization of American States, after a three-month effort supported by the United States, failed to mediate Noriega's removal. The U.S. representative declared Noriega's government an "outlaw" that permitted drug traffickers to operate at will.

Noriega, who leads the Panamanian Defense Forces, is under indictment in the United States on drug trafficking charges. He has also been accused of trying to steal the May 7 election in Panama.

It's an acceleration of what was already planned for the international aspects of the drug strategy.

Brent Scowcroft, security adviser

U.S. officials declined to detail the total package, drawn up initially by Bennett and expected to cost between $7.5 billion and $8 billion a year including both domestic programs and foreign assistance.

Scowcroft, although stressing that the bulk of the program will focus on domestic measures to combat drug use in the United States, said the plan includes expanded aid for the Andean countries of Colombia, Peru and Bolivia, where massive amounts of cocaine are produced.

"It's an acceleration of what was already planned for the international aspects of the drug strategy," Scowcroft said in conceding that the events in Colombia had prompted Bush to raise the aid. "Colombia is the new ingredient in the overall strategy."

Officials said the amount allotted to those nations in the upcoming 1990 budget year has been increased in recent days, but various sources gave widely differing figures, of $300 million or more, suggesting the final amounts are subject to fine-tuning.

Panamanian crisis enters a new phase

WASHINGTON — The clock was set to expire today on an unresolved crisis between Panama and the United States, with the State Department expected to gain possession of a handsome, empty embassy building.

Panama's constitution provides that the present government, dominated by Gen. Manuel Noriega as de facto ruler, ends Sept. 1.

The United States recognizes Eric Arturo Delvalle as the president of Panama. Delvalle is living in Miami and is expected to return to Panama as the president of Panama.

Delvalle's ambassador, Juan Soza, remains in charge of the Panamanian Embassy in Washington, with a staff of 10 people, paid by U.S. funds withheld from the Noriega government.

On Aug. 23 the Organization of American States, after a three-month effort supported by the United States, failed to mediate Noriega's removal. The U.S. representative declared Noriega's government an "outlaw" that permitted drug traffickers to operate at will.

Noriega, who leads the Panamanian Defense Forces, is under indictment in the United States on drug trafficking charges. He has also been accused of trying to steal the May 7 election in Panama.

Soza, according to an embassy official, was expected to announce his resignation as ambassador today and turn the keys of the building over to the State Department's Office of Foreign Missions.

Panama's embassy, a large, Norman-style, three-story building, sits in a neighborhood where such houses sell regularly for more than $1 million.

In Panama, Noriega was expected to approve a "provisional government" that would take power but would not be recognized by the United States.

An official said, "We will not recognize any change of government that does not involve Noriega stepping down."

He said the United States will not make any immediate policy decision except to say that it will not accept any Panamanian government dominated by Noriega, "and that means Noriega must resign."

The official said Noriega was able to resist U.S. pressure in the past because he knew there were several thousand American military dependents in Panama who would be possible hostages and because the American troops had never seriously trained on how to resist Noriega's troops.

The official said, "Since then, we have evacuated essentially all the American dependents."

Communists may ignore moratorium

WARSAW, Poland — Communist officials warned that pro-communist trade unions may ignore a proposed moratorium on strikes aimed at giving the new Solidarity-led coalition government a chance to revive Poland's shattered economy.

A decision to ignore the proposed moratorium by the 7 million union members could be a major obstacle to economic reforms promised by Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, a long-time Solidarity activist and head of Poland's first non-communist government since World War II.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa has said he will announce the moratorium once Mazowiecki sets his new coalition cabinet, probably in early September.

However, communist unions in an attempt to flex their muscle may ignore the moratorium and continue to strike.

Communist unions remain a real force on the Polish labor scene. Their membership of 7 million dwarfs Solidarity's 2 million, mainly because the communist unions have been able to offer members perks such as subsidized vacations in government homes.

Chinese crackdown is expensive

BEIJING — The brutal crackdown on democracy is expected to cost China more than $1 billion in currency revenue this year following a drastic drop in foreign tourism, an official news report said.

Tourism plummeted in July to nearly half the level of July 1988, but made a modest recovery from June following the bloody crackdown, the report Tuesday said.

The sobering financial news coincided with officials' accusations that ousted Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang supported the introduction of public debate on government policy that "paved the way" for pro-democracy protests.

Chinese sources knowledgeable about party affairs have said the media campaign against Zhao is an effort to build a case against the former party secretary so he can be put on public trial.

The last party figure to be tried in public was Mao Tse-tung's widow Jiang Qing, who was convicted in 1977 as one of the infamous "Gang of Four" and given a death sentence that was commuted to life imprisonment.

The tourism figures, carried by the English-language China Daily, were evidence of the economic impact of the Chinese army's brutal suppression of the pro-democracy movement.

The country earned $2.2 billion last year from tourism, but analysts expect revenue will be halved this year. The peak summer season has been largely written off.

One killed in Gaza; more homes leveled

JERUSALEM — Soldiers killed a Palestinian and wounded as many as 17 in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip, as the army destroyed two West Bank homes and sealed four others belonging to Palestinians suspected of attacking Israeli targets.

Palestinian sources also said the military Tuesday demolished a vacant house in the Gaza Strip on grounds that Palestinians used the house as a cover to throw stones at soldiers. An army spokesman said he had no report of the demolition.

Since last week, Palestinian sources have reported daily hit-and-run confrontations between residents and soldiers stationed on roofs along Omar Mukhtar Street, one of the main commercial roads in Gaza City. Witnesses reported soldiers also antagonized passersby by throwing rocks toward them.

More bombings rock Colombia

United Press International

BOGOTA, Colombia — A new wave of bombings struck Bogota and the hometown of the powerful Medellin drug cartel, and the father of three most-wanted cocaine traffickers called for peace talks with the government.

Justice Minister Monica de Greiff, in Washington to seek U.S. help in Colombia's anti-drug campaign, Tuesday rejected the peace call and vowed to return to her country next week "to play my full part" in the crackdown.

"I am determined that the integrity of our justice system survives this crisis and I hope to play my full part in ensuring this," De Greiff told reporters. The law "is under siege in Colombia and we must protect it."

There had been reports de Greiff, 32, Colombia's ninth justice minister in four years, would resign because of threats against her life by cocaine traffickers, but she said she had never considered such a step.

Colombian authorities also reported they asked the United States for information on a suspected major drug figure who was arrested Monday on a ranch where 4 tons of cocaine was uncovered.

The Colombian air force reported it was destroying clandestine airstrips believed to be used to smuggle cocaine out of the country.

The Bogota newspaper El Tiempo published a letter sent to President Virgilio Barco from Fabio Ochoa, the father of three of 12 alleged cocaine traffickers the United States wants to extradite for trial.

"Let there be dialogue, let there be peace, let there be pardon," Ochoa, a wealthy landowner and head of the Ochoa clan, told Barco.

Ochoa has not been linked officially by the United States to the drug trade. His sons, Juan David, Jorge and Fabio Ochoa Vasquez, are on the U.S. government's list of most-wanted Colombian cocaine traffickers.

Cambodian talks end in deadlock

United Press International

PARIS — A month-long Cambodian peace conference was deadlocked on the eve of its final session, with host nation France saying Cambodia's four factions failed to reach a political solution to the 11-year-old civil war.

The 10-nation conference was to wind down today with a closing session of foreign ministers amid signs the talks could resume at a later date.

"It became apparent ... that there was no possibility of agreement at this stage and the time has not yet come for a compromise," Foreign Ministry spokesman Jean Guéguinou said Tuesday.

Guéguinou said negotiators at the conference were heading "in the direction of a resumption of the conference in Paris within a few months, probably in the spring."

Conference sources said a second phase of the meetings could be held in December.

Conference participants were deadlocked over a power-sharing formula for the Cambodian government and the three rebel factions trying to depose it, along with an international control mechanism to monitor a cease-fire after the promised Vietnamese withdrawal next month, he said.

Other major powers apparently shared France's pessimism over the outcome of the conference, which opened July 30 amid hopes it would end with the signing of a peace accord for Cambodia.

Key participants at the opening, including Secretary of State James Baker, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen and U.N. Secretary-General Javier Paves de Cuellar, did not return to Paris for final deliberations that began Monday.

Richard Solomon, U.S. assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, also held out little hope for a settlement.

"After three and some weeks here, we do not see the will to move the game from the battlefield to a political process coming together the way we had hoped," said Solomon, who heads the U.S. delegation.

Solomon blamed Cambodia's two communist factions — the Khmer Rouge guerrilla group and the Vietnamese-backed government — for the lack of progress.

The Khmer Rouge, responsible for the deaths of more than 1 million Cambodians under the leadership of Pol Pot, was ousted by Vietnam invasion in December 1978. Since then, a three-party rebel coalition including the Khmer Rouge has been fighting to depose Hanoi-backed Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen.

Israel's image hurt by cartel connections

United Press International

JERUSALEM — Justice Minister Dan Meridor said the image of Israel and its military has been seriously tarnished by allegations that Israeli reserve officers trained gunmen of the Colombian drug cartel.

Police Tuesday ended a second day of questioning of reserve officers in the Israeli army affiliated with Hod Hahanit, a military consulting firm at the center of the allegations.

At issue is whether any

Israelis violated laws prohibiting the sale of military knowledge or related services without Defense Ministry permits, police said.

Police also warned those under investigation against discussing the case with the media. Since allegations of Israeli civilian involvement in the training of drug cartel hit squads surfaced last week, the Israeli press has carried daily stories and the Israeli mentioned have granted almost daily interviews.

Heavy fighting in Afghanistan

United Press International

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — More than 100 casualties have been reported in heavy fighting between U.S.-backed Afghan guerrillas and communist troops that erupted last week around a government-held town in eastern Afghanistan, rebels said.

The most powerful guerrilla group fighting the pro-Soviet Kabul government, in a further blow to rebel unity, said Tuesday it would no longer attend meetings of the Pakistan-based rebel government until elections for a consultative council are held.

The rebel-run Media Information Department of Islamic Afghanistan said in a statement at least 70 guerrillas have been killed or wounded in battles that broke out last week around the eastern town of Khost, 20 miles from the Pakistan border.

It estimated government casualties at about 40, and said another 65 soldiers and militiamen have been taken prisoner. The statement said reports of new battles in the area still were coming in Tuesday.

State-run Kabul Radio said heavy rebel shelling of Khost Tuesday left six soldiers dead. It said that in retaliatory operations, 15 rebels were killed and 28 injured.

Rebel sources said Monday the guerrillas last week captured two military garrisons near Khost, but said one of those was retaken by government troops a day later.

Two years ago, Khost was the scene of one of the biggest military operations of the Afghan civil war. Thousands of troops and guerrillas died as Soviet and Afghan government forces attempted to break a rebel siege of the town.

Last February, Moscow completed a withdrawal of troops backing the Kabul government. However, the rebels have since had little military success, in part due to a lack of coordination among the resistance parties. A rebel operation launched in March to capture eastern Jajalabad city ended in a humiliating defeat.

Zakar reportedly was affiliated with a minor rebel group, the Afghan Militia.

Hezbollah leader wants pope to visit Lebanon

United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The spiritual leader of the Iranian-backed extremist group Hezbollah today welcomed Pope John Paul II's proposed visit to terror-ravaged Lebanon, but warned the pontiff may run into problems.

Sheikh Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, Hezbollah's ranking clergyman, stressed that he favors the pope's visit, which was announced recently as Lebanon's war continued with random and massive bombardments of populated areas.

"We are still on our previous stand that the pope should visit Lebanon and (Moscow) visit Beirut to examine the destruction here as well as in the Christian sector," Fadlallah told United Press International in a telephone interview.

Chinese officials get Audis

United Press International

BEIJING — Forced to give up imported limousines in a drive to end official privilege, Chinese leaders plan to set an example by substituting a local brand of plainer motoring: Chinese-assembled Audi sedans at $53,000 apiece.

This year's entire Audi production run of the First Automotive Works in the northeast city of Changchun — 120 Audi-100 and Audi-200 sedans — will be delivered to state leaders, the official China Daily reported Wednesday.

Since the June crackdown on the democracy movement, China's leaders have launched a much-publicized campaign against the corruption and official privilege that had spread in the economically liberated climate of free-enterprise reforms launched a decade ago.

The decision to use what the English-language China Daily called "homemade cars" comes on the heels of an announcement by Chinese leaders that they will no longer use imported luxury vehicles.

The measure, announced last month by the Communist Party Politburo, was one of several aimed at the officials themselves to promote by example their new motto of "hard work and plain living."

China's goal is to turn the country into a "First Automotive Works" deputy director Lu Fuyuan told the China Daily.

But the Audis, which use imported parts from Volkswagen, are priced at more than $53,700 each, the newspaper said.

The cost is double that of the cars produced by two other foreign joint-venture auto factories in China, the Shanghai Volkswagen Santana sedan and the Chrysler Corp. Beijing Jeep Cherokee.

Official corruption was a key target of the massive protests this spring. The preference of top officials for fancy Mercedes-Benz sedans, until recently a symbol of power and wealth in the China of the 1980s, has long been a source of popular resentment.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Thrift resigns as Yankee VP

NEW YORK — Syd Thrift, a shrewd baseball executive who this season tried to restart his career in the turbulent world of the New York Yankees, Tuesday resigned as the club's senior vice president of baseball operations.

The Yankees made the announcement in a three-paragraph statement and said Thrift cited "personal" reasons for the decision.

The move comes 11 days after Yankee owner George Steinbrenner fired Manager Dallas Green.

Thrift departs with the franchise in turmoil. After Oakland hammered New York 19-5 on Tuesday night, the Yankees had lost six straight to plummet 18 games under .500.

On the field in the AL Tuesday, Boston swept a doubleheader from California, winning 8-4 and 13-5; Toronto trimmed Chicago 3-2; Cleveland clipped Baltimore 3-1; Texas tamed Minnesota 4-2; Seattle beat Milwaukee 5-3; and Kansas City out-slugged Detroit 12-8.

OLYMPICS

East, West Berlin cohost in '04?

BERLIN — The mayor of West Berlin said Tuesday he wants his government to study the possibility of staging a unified Olympics in East and West Berlin in 2004.

The 2004 Olympics come 68 years after a Nazi propaganda spectacular in which Adolf Hitler walked out of the Berlin Games when a black American, Jesse Owens, won a gold medal.

"Olympic Games in both parts of Berlin together would be the greatest triumph of the peace-seeking process in Europe and of the Olympic ideals in our times," West Berlin Mayor Walter Momper said at a news conference.

Momper said the West Berlin senate would form a task force to assess the feasibility of the proposal that the divided city make a united bid to hold the event.

Until now there has been no official arrangement with East Berlin on the suggestion.

Miami announces schedule

CORAL GABLES — The Miami Hurricanes basketball schedule for the 1989-90 season includes a single game in Miami against the Florida Gators and a renewed home-and-home series with Florida State. Athletic Director Sam Jankovich and basketball coach Bill Foster announced Tuesday.

The schedule includes nine opponents who appeared in last spring's NCAA tournament. They are Arizona, DePaul, Florida, Florida State, George Mason, North Carolina, Notre Dame, Providence and West Virginia.

"This is definitely one of our most ambitious schedules," Foster said. "Especially for such a young team without any seniors."

The schedule includes the 1989 Eastern Airlines Palm Beach Classic Dec. 27 and Dec. 29 featuring the Hurricanes, Boston College, West Virginia and Lehigh.

Miami and Florida State did not play each other last season because of a dispute between Foster and Seminole Coach Pat Kennedy. The spat has been resolved.

Candelaria dealt to Expos

NEW YORK — The New York Yankees Tuesday traded pitcher John Candelaria, who appeared in just 10 games this season, to the Montreal Expos for a player to be named.

Candelaria, 35, went 3-3 with a 5.14 ERA appearing as a starter and reliever for New York this season. The left-hander underwent arthroscopic surgery on his right knee and was on the disabled list from May 6 to Aug. 19.

"I know I can still pitch," Candelaria said Monday night after losing 7-3 to Oakland, the Yankees' fifth straight loss. "There really is no problem with my knee anymore. I just want a chance."

Elsewhere in the NL on Tuesday, Chicago rallied to edge Houston 10-9 in 10 innings; Pittsburgh shaded Atlanta 5-4; St. Louis defeated Cincinnati 4-2; San Diego got by Montreal 2-1; Philadelphia drilled San Francisco 6-1; and New York tripped Los Angeles 2-1.

Race is on for No. 1

Girls' volleyball race is too close to call

By TONY BOGOSIEN
Herald Sports Editor

Last year, there was no doubt that the Lake Brantley High School girls volleyball team was the class of county, going undefeated in Seminole Athletic Conference play and advancing all the way to the sectional playoff.

But this year, who's No. 1 isn't so cut and dried. It's tough to pick against the Patriots, who graduated six from last year's team but still have seven varsity returners. And the rest of the spots on this season's varsity roster will be filled by players who were a part of a Lake Brantley junior varsity team that won eight matches last season.

How the Patriots do this year will depend greatly on first-year coach Dana Gephart, a former Lake Brantley standout and an All American at Rollins College. She replaces Wolfgang Halbig, who she worked with as an assistant last year.

"She has outstanding credentials," said Halbig. "We're looking forward to a lot of great things from her."

Among the returners Gephart has to work with are seniors Chris Rabaja, Traci Finley and Sarah Keth. Rabaja is a setter while Finley and Keth give the Patriots a pair of solid hitters. Seniors Kim Kurz, Jeanne Seidel and Jeana Chen and sophomore Michele Davis are other returners from last year's varsity.

At the other end of the spectrum are the Lake Mary Rams, who graduated just two seniors last year, only one of which was a starter. This season, Coach Cindy Henry will start a lineup that features four seniors and a pair of sophomores.

"We're looking for some good things," said Henry, whose team begins the 1989 campaign next Wednesday with a 7 p.m. contest at Apopka. "We've been waiting a while to get to this level. This year, we're playing a little more advanced offense and defense."

The Lake Mary senior starters are returners Lori Leckie, Tammy Scott, Terri Peters and Iowa transfer Kelly Jacobo. Sophomores Tara Calvin (first team All Conference last year as a freshman) and Melissa Mau round out the starting six.

Henry's second six is almost as solid with seniors Mary Carmody and Heather Golden and juniors Dena Morasch, Marti Citterelli, Renee Sanville and Cautlette Heape.

Seminole High School head coach Beth Curao also feels her team could also be among the county leaders this season if things work according to plan. After graduating seven seniors last year, Curao has a squad loaded with players who have two years of junior varsity experience.

"Graduating seven seniors can be devastating, but we have some juniors who have played," said Curao, whose team travels to Bishop Moore to start the season next Wednesday with a 6 p.m. match. "As soon as they can kick it into gear, we should play well. It's a matter of how long will it take for them to kick in. If they don't, we could be in trouble."

Curao will be counting on returning seniors Yolanda Baker, Krickel Snow and Heather Brown to lead this young group. Shawna Cohen is another senior who played junior varsity as a freshman and sophomore before having to take last season off.

The juniors with two years of junior varsity experience Curao is counting on are Jennifer Bengt, Lynn Guy, DeAnne Rathbun, Kelly Epps and Melodyc Brorup. A pair of newcomers who have never played volleyball before — sophomore Charlene Guy (Lynn's younger sister) and junior Heather Pegram — are also SANFORD — J & J Electric split a pair of games Tuesday night as the Sanford Women's Fall Softball Slowpitch season opened at the Fort Mellon Softball Field.

Because there are currently only three teams in the league, the teams will take turns playing two games in an evening. On Tuesday, J & J Electric dropped an 8-7 decision to Sanford Electric in the first game and defeated SEKO Air Freight in the night-cap.

In the first game, J & J broke a

Steroids get 13 players suspension from NFL

United Press International

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle Tuesday suspended 13 players for 30 days for taking anabolic steroids, marking the first time an American professional sports league has punished players for using the muscle-building drugs.

The most prominent player on a list comprised mainly of rookies and marginal players is Philadelphia offensive guard Ron Solt, a 1987 Pro Bowl choice with the Indianapolis Colts who was acquired by the Eagles last season.

All the suspended players are eligible to return Sept. 27, but must first pass another drug test to prove they are clean of steroids. The 13 players will miss the final exhibition game and the first three games of the regular season.

Florida State recruit, mom arrested for selling crack

United Press International

GAINESVILLE — One of the nation's top college football recruits and his mother have been arrested at her Gainesville home on charges they both sold crack cocaine there, authorities said Tuesday.

Eric Wyndall Shaw, a freshman signee with Florida State University and an all-state high school linebacker, was arrested Friday after Gainesville/Alachua County Combined Narcotics Unit officers made undercover cocaine buys and then served a search warrant at the home of Shaw's mother.

He was one of 33 people arrested in Gainesville as part of a statewide series of drug arrests dubbed "Operation Rockpile II."

His mother, Pamela Johnson, 34, was charged with maintaining a dwelling where drugs are sold, possession of cocaine and possession of drug paraphernalia. Her bond was set at $25,000

The commissioner's action came one day after U.S. District Judge Thomas Hogan refused a request by the NFL Players Association, which represents some 1,600 NFL players, to block the suspensions and the release of the names of players found to have used steroids.

The list of players suspended did not include those who tested positive for steroids but have already been released by individual clubs. NFL Director of Public Relations Jim Heffernan said the league would not disclose how many players no longer under contract with teams tested positive for steroids.

The suspended players came from eight teams, with the Buffalo Bills having three players and the Green Bay Packers, New York Jets and Super Bowl and she was still in jail on Tuesday, jail officials said.

FSU football Coach Bobby Bowden said late Tuesday afternoon that he had decided to withdraw Shaw's football scholarship. He said he was sorry to hear the news about the arrest and that it was sad Shaw had jeopardized his football career.

"It's a waste of life," Bowden said. Shaw, 17, was taken to the juvenile detention center in Gainesville, where he was still being held Monday. Less than a month away from turning 18, Shaw was classified as a minor and jail officials refused to confirm his presence Tuesday.

Shaw, who graduated from high school last spring and was billed as one of the top 25 football prospects in the country, was considered a prize of the FSU recruiting class. But he lost his eligibility to play this season after failing to meet the academic standards of Proposition 48 that requires he make at least a 700 on his SAT test.

NEW YORK - Chris Evert, making her farewell appearance at the tournament that launched her to stardom, wore down Bettina Fulco, 6-4, 6-2, on a wet, overcast afternoon Tuesday to gain the second round of the U.S. Open.
Since reaching the semifinals as a 16-year-old in 1971, Evert has won the championship six times while failing only once to gain the semis. However, she admitted she wasn't match-tough and said, "It would be almost a miracle for me to win this tournament. It would be beyond my wildest dreams."
The victory was the 98th for Evert at the U.S. Open, a record for men or women. Her next opponent will be Elise Burgin, a 7-5, 6-4 winner over Lori McNeil.
"In the first round all you want to do is get by," the 34-year-old third seed said. "I certainly didn't impress myself much, but I was in the match and I concentrated well."
Knocking down the image that she will turn into a housewife, Evert joked, "I'm not going to be washing the pots and pans. I'll pay someone to do it."
Jimmy Connors, winner of the Open five times, routed Tom Nijssen of the Netherlands, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2. The 36-year-old left-hander has lost 16 pounds in the last month.
This was Connors' 103rd singles match at the U.S. Open, moving him one ahead of Vic Seixas as the all-time men's leader.
Ivan Lendl, the No. 1 men's seed who has gained the final seven successive years, was leading Diego Perez of Uruguay,

CINCINNATI - Tommy Giolosa, who once lived with Pete Rose, often carried between $5,000 and $10,000 in cash in his sock, purchased expensive cars and exotic birds, but some years reported no taxable income, government witnesses testified Tuesday.
"Tommy was the kind of person who wanted people to know he had lots of cash and was always flashing it around," testified car dealer Peter Neumahr. "I had a pretty good idea where his money came from by listening to his conversations - gambling and drugs."
Giolosa, 31, of New Bedford, Mass., is charged with distributing cocaine and defrauding the Internal Revenue Service. If a seven-woman, five-man federal jury convicts him, Giolosa could be sent to prison for up to 38 years and fined up to $2 million.
Although Rose is not personally involved in the trial, the name of the baseball legend came up several times in testimony Tuesday because Rose and Giolosa were previously very close friends.
Although Giolosa refused to cooperate in major league baseball's investigation of Rose that led to Rose's banishment from the sport last week, baseball investigators concluded that "Giolosa ran bets for Rose."
Giolosa, a bodybuilder who claims his use of steroids impaired his ability to make rational decisions, often wore shorts and high athletic socks in public several years ago. Neumahr

"In the first round all you want to do is get by," the 34-year-old third seed said. "I certainly didn't impress myself much, but I was in the match and I concentrated well."
Knocking down the image that she will turn into a housewife, Evert joked, "I'm not going to be washing the pots and pans. I'll pay someone to do it."
Jimmy Connors, winner of the Open five times, routed Tom Nijssen of the Netherlands, 6-2, 6-1, 6-2. The 36-year-old left-hander has lost 16 pounds in the last month.
This was Connors' 103rd singles match at the U.S. Open, moving him one ahead of Vic Seixas as the all-time men's leader.

CINCINNATI - Tommy Giolosa, who once lived with Pete Rose, often carried between $5,000 and $10,000 in cash in his sock, purchased expensive cars and exotic birds, but some years reported no taxable income, government witnesses testified Tuesday.
"Tommy was the kind of person who wanted people to know he had lots of cash and was always flashing it around," testified car dealer Peter Neumahr. "I had a pretty good idea where his money came from by listening to his conversations - gambling and drugs."
Giolosa, 31, of New Bedford, Mass., is charged with distributing cocaine and defrauding the Internal Revenue Service. If a seven-woman, five-man federal jury convicts him, Giolosa could be sent to prison for up to 38 years and fined up to $2 million.
Although Rose is not personally involved in the trial, the name of the baseball legend came up several times in testimony Tuesday because Rose and Giolosa were previously very close friends.
Although Giolosa refused to cooperate in major league baseball's investigation of Rose that led to Rose's banishment from the sport last week, baseball investigators concluded that "Giolosa ran bets for Rose."
Giolosa, a bodybuilder who claims his use of steroids impaired his ability to make rational decisions, often wore shorts and high athletic socks in public several years ago. Neumahr

Believe it or not, Ripley comes back from crash to post win

NEW SMYRNA BEACH — After severely damaging his race car in a crash the previous week, Sanford's John Ripley headed a large field of "B" Bombers to score a well deserved victory last Saturday at New Smyrna Speedway.

"I took the car apart and rebuilt everything," said Ripley. "My 354-cubic-inch Chevrolet engine performed very well, but I'm going to go to a smaller 350 motor. All that extra weight up front is too hard on the tires."

In the Sportsman feature, Osteen's Marc Kinley made several gutsy moves on his way up from his eighth-place starting spot. But once he was in contention, Kinley outpowered early leader Wayne Marshall on the fifth lap and went on to the win at the wheel of the Longwood Lincoln/Mercury Cougar.

Bruce Lawrence drove the Sunbelt Auto Carriers Pontiac to victory in the FASCAR-sanctioned 50-lap End of the Month Late Model Championships on Saturday night.

After turning a fast time in qualifying, Lawrence started sixth. But he and Pete Orr used the high groove and were up in front by the sixth lap. Lawrence ran on Orr's back bumper for six more laps, then tapped him and blasted by for the lead and the win.

In other action Saturday:

● Gene Van Alstine out-drove a large field of Mini Stocks to win his third feature of the season.

● For the 17th time this season, the "A" Bomber final went to Allen Rhodes.

● Back after three weeks of inaction, Mike Fitch scored his 24th Florida Modified win of the season in the Pioneer Motors/All Pro Race Cars Cavalier.

champion San Francisco 49ers having two pieces.

Among Buffalo's three suspended players were brothers Sean Doctor, a running back, and Tom Doctor, a linebacker, along with linebacker Matt Jaworski. Also suspended were safety Maurice Douglas of the Chicago Bears, offensive tackle Mike Arley and Keith Uecker of Green Bay, defensive end Mark Mraz of the Los Angeles Raiders, tight end Vernon Kirk of the Los Angeles Rams, running back Vince Amos and wide receiver Bobby Riley of the Jets and running back Keith Henderson and defensive end Rollin Putzier of the 49ers.

Rozelle, who maintains broad powers to suspend players to protect the league's "integrity" ordered the teams to place the players on the non-football illness-injury list. Teams are not obligated to pay players on that list.

"If their systems are shown to be clear of anabolic steroids (on Sept. 27), they may return," the league said in a statement. "If not, they remain sidelined until they no longer test positive."

The league tested players for steroids during training camps before the 1987 and 1988 seasons. However, Rozelle, who resigned in March but is remaining on the job until a replacement is named, did not take disciplinary action against those who tested positive.

The commissioner announced March 21 that all players who tested positive during this summer would be suspended for 30 days, with those testing positive a second time after serving the first suspension being banished for the rest of the 1989 season.

The league tests samples of urine given by some 2,200 players during mandatory pre-season physicals for traces of steroids and masking agents, as well as alcohol and street drugs, such as cocaine and marijuana. The samples were tested at Vanderbilt University or at the Calgary lab used during the 1988 Winter Olympics.

While the league maintains it used "state-of-the-art testing procedures," it acknowledged in Tuesday's statement that our testing has detected, or will detect, every steroid user in the NFL.

In 1988, Rozelle suspended 25 players, including stars Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants, Dexter Manley of the Washington Redskins and Bruce Smith of the Buffalo Bills, for testing positive for drugs. Under league policy, steroid users are suspended after one positive test; street drug users are suspended after two positive tests.

Also on Tuesday, Rozelle issued 30-day suspensions for Denver tight end Orson Mobley and Rams defensive back LeRoy Irvin for violating the league's substance abuse policy. They tested positive for undisclosed drugs.

Calling the league's drug-testing procedure "sloppy and inaccurate," NFLPA Executive Director Gene Upshaw criticized Rozelle for suspending players who have one positive test for steroids, while waiting to suspend players who use street drugs until they have two positive tests. Upshaw also criticized Rozelle for releasing the names of the players.

"Any time that your name is put out into public scrutiny without having all the facts, there is a certain amount of humiliation that goes on," Upshaw told United Press International. "That is why we were fighting so hard to prevent this."

Solt, a fifth-year player out of the University of Maryland, had surgery on both knees during the off-season.

with three runs in the bottom of the third inning to take a 6-3 lead. But Sanford Electric scored two runs in the fourth and fifth and one in the sixth to take an 8-6 lead. They then held J & J to only one run in the sixth to take the victory.

Theresa Walburger came off the bench to lead the Sanford Electric seven-hit attack as she went 1 for 2 with a triple and two runs scored. She also showed a great arm in the outfield, gunning down a runner at third that could have tied the game.

Others contributing were Tina Kimball (two singles and two RBIs), Pam Murray (single and one run scored), Holly Lunders (single and one RBI), Paula Richey (single and one run scored), Joy Weaver (two runs scored), Tammy Culp (one run scored) and Cindy Miller (one run scored).

For J & J Electric, which also had seven hits, Sharon Paulk had a triple, double, single, three runs scored and two RBIs while Julie Ellenberg added three singles, one run scored and one RBI. Jackie Suggs had a double, one run scored and two RBIs as Michelle Widener and Lisa Jones each scored one run.

In the second game, SEKO Air Freight seemingly took control by scoring three runs in the top of the first, but J & J came back with four runs in the bottom of the inning to go on top and never looked back.

J & J added five runs in the second inning and put the game away for good with eight runs in the third. The game was called after four-and-one-half innings by the mercy rule.

J & J pounded out 12 hits in the second contest as Kim Eltonhead led the way with two singles, two runs scored and two RBIs. Anita Smith contributed two singles, three runs scored and one RBI while Jones had two singles, one run scored and two RBIs.

Suggs singled twice and scored once; Paulk doubled, scored three runs and had three RBIs; Beth Sparks had a single, one run scored and two RBIs; Widener and Kelly Bierfreund both singled and scored two runs; Lisa Rumley scored twice; Sue Sojka scored once; and Dana Leonard had one RBI.

For SEKO, which had 10 hits, Susan Taylor with a triple, double, three runs scored and two RBIs as Kerrie Jones added two singles and two RBIs. Bobbie Mosley had two singles, one run scored and one RBI; Sonya Poole singled and scored a run; Amy Smith, Renee Carter, and Michelle Green each singled; Jennifer Templin scored a run; and Lori Spivey had an RBI.

The Women's League will play every Tuesday night at Fort Mellon Park through October. Games will be played at 6:30 and 7:30 p.m. on the Seminole varsity roster.

Coach Jo Luciano and the Lake Howell Silver Hawks are in a similar predicament as Seminole. Loaded with a bunch of young, inexperienced talent, Luciano says her team will need the first couple months of the season to come together.

"We have limited varsity experience and junior varsity experience," said Luciano. "Now it's a matter of maturing their abilities to the level of varsity competition."

Going into the season, which starts on Sept. 7 against Lake Mary, Luciano has only three returning seniors from last year: Dana Boyesen, Heather Brann and Missy Martinez. Tanya Lewis and Christy Dees are the only returners among the five juniors on this year's roster, which also includes seven sophomores.

At Oviedo High School, the Lions will be trying to come up with an encore of last year's season that saw them go 23-3 and advance all the way to the semifinals of the 3A state tournament.

The Lions are hampered by the fact that five of their six starters graduated last year as did several key substitutes. Junior Betsy Hughes is the only returning starter while Corey Lawson, Mimi Tran, Shannon Wilcoxson and Michelle Wynn also saw some playing time with the Oviedo varsity.

Finally, Lyman High School lost four players to graduation last year and only had two juniors: Michelle DeLuca and Angelique Tossie. Other potential returners include Juniors Katina Burden, Toni Herrbach and Jennifer Kruger, as well as sophomore Melody Hillsman.

LONGWOOD — Our Cook of the Week would make a good foreign ambassador. Long interested in international people, places and art forms, Irma Webb of Longwood lived in Mexico for 10 years, Spain for one and a half, and Puerto Rico for one year. She became an accomplished flamenco dancer (she once danced for the wife of Francisco Franco, the late dictator of Spain) and studied Mexican folk dancing and Spanish guitar. She received her undergraduate degree in Spanish and taught the language for several years.

Webb was born and raised in Philadelphia, Penn. When she met her first husband-to-be at the age of 21, she had already taken two extended trips to Spain, to study flamenco dancing and guitar. Having returned home, she was working as an Arthur Murray dance instructor and was representing Spain as a dancer at the International House, a Philadelphia gathering place for people of all cultures. It was here that she met Jaime Delgado, a native of Mexico and an international patent attorney practicing law in Philadelphia.

Webb has always been interested in nutrition, and she was impressed by the way Mexican food is inexpensive, yet nutritionally complete. Even fast-food vendors on the streets sell snacks like cucumber, corn-on-the-cob, or jicama, sprinkled with lime juice and chili powder, she said.

Irma Webb takes her hand-sized Biscuit Pizzas fresh out of the oven.

"I had to learn to cook the native food, and everything was made from scratch," she said. Preservatives in her food were drastically reduced, but her time at the stove was not. "I was in the kitchen from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. every day. Our main meal was at 2 in the afternoon," she said. Dinner would be leftovers—rice and beans or just sandwiches.

Tostadas became a favorite meal and she still hosts "tostada parties" for friends today. She provides the tortilla shells and chorizo (Spanish sausage); each guest brings an ingredient, such as chopped lettuce, onions, tomatoes or cheese, and everyone assembles his own tostadas.

Although soft drinks can be bought, various kinds of fruit juices are plentiful in Mexico, Webb said. She still makes her favorite at home by peeling a whole ripe cantaloupe, blending it (one-half at a time), seeds and all, with lemon juice, honey and water. After pouring the mixture through a strainer, one melon makes a large container of juice.

Webb and Jaime separated, and she left Mexico in 1968, following her mother and sister to Florida. With three young children to support on her own, she found her money to be in short supply. "We lived on rice and beans, and hotcakes made with lots of eggs," she said.

Determined to get ahead, however, she enrolled at the University of Central Florida, Orlando. With the aid of grants and scholarships, she finished the undergraduate degree in Spanish she had started at Temple University in Philadelphia. It was an exhausting period: Webb held a full-time job, attended classes at night and fit her work at home around the two. "I would shop on Saturday and cook on Sunday for the whole week," she said. Most weekends would begin with a 5 a.m. Saturday trip to the supermarket.

Webb went on to complete a master's degree in administration and supervision at UCF. She currently works as the dean of students at the Seminole Regional Juvenile Detention Center in Sanford. "I love where I am," she said. "I love my job. It's never dull, it's never routine. It's always a challenge and it leaves lots of room for creativity. We try to make it a positive program, rather than a negative one. We try to recognize the good in all the students."

Webb has four children: Linda, David and Leann Delgado, and Duane Webb, her son from her second marriage. Duane is an 8th grader at Milwee Middle School; each of Webb's older

Microwave is an enemy of cholesterol

If you are concerned about reducing cholesterol or want to control weight by eliminating unwanted fats in your diet, the microwave can be an important and helpful part of the solution.

The first step is to eliminate the obvious fats—those that are added. Most microwaved foods do not require additional fats because they cook in their own juices and because it is unnecessary to grease dishes to keep foods from sticking.

The second step is being aware of hidden fats. Read package labels and become familiar with foods that are naturally low in cholesterol. Meats, especially beef and pork, contain fat and cholesterol in varying amounts. Choose meats that are low in marbled fat and/or have fats that can be trimmed away. Use turkey and chicken with the skin and fatty tissue removed before cooking.

Here is a reduced-cholesterol salad dressing that is easy to prepare.

RANCH-STYLE DRESSING
1 small onion, chopped
3 tablespoons water
2 cups buttermilk
2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon parsley flakes
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ cup reduced-cholesterol mayonnaise

Combine onion and water in a 4-cup glass measure. Microwave on 100 percent power for 3-4 minutes or until onion is tender. Stir in 1 cup of buttermilk and the flour until the flour is dissolved. Stir in salt, parsley, garlic powder and pepper. Microwave for 2-3 minutes or until the mixture boils and thickens, stirring once. Cool 15 minutes. Blend in the remaining buttermilk and the mayonnaise. Store in a tightly covered jar in the refrigerator. Serve over vegetable salads or as a topping for baked potatoes. Has 1.4 Mg. cholesterol.

This easy, low-cholesterol dish can be enjoyed by the entire family. Use extra lean ground beef, or ground turkey, or Italian turkey sausage.

SPAGHETTI AND MEATBALLS
Sauce:
1 medium onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon water
1 can (16 ounces) tomatoes
1 can (12 ounces) tomato paste
1 cup water
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon parsley flakes
½ teaspoon oregano
¼ teaspoon basil
¼ teaspoon pepper
Meatballs:
1 pound extra-lean ground beef
3 tablespoons skim milk
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 package (7 ounces) spaghetti

Combine onion, garlic and 1 tablespoon water in 1½-quart casserole dish. Cover. Microwave on 100 percent power for 3-4 minutes or until onion is tender. Add tomatoes; cut each into pieces. Mix in remaining sauce ingredients. Cover. Microwave on 100 percent power for 5-8 minutes or until mixture boils. Stir. Then microwave on low power (30 percent) 25-30 minutes or until flavors are blended, stirring once or twice. Set aside.

Combine ground beef, milk, Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper; mix well. Form into about 18 meatballs, 1½ inches in diameter. Arrange on micro-rack on a 9-inch pie plate. Cover with wax paper. Microwave on 100 percent power for 5-6 minutes or until meat is set. Discard fat and juices. Add meat to the sauce. Cover. Microwave on 100 percent power for 4-6 minutes or until steaming hot. Serve sauce and meatballs over cooked spaghetti. Has 50 Mg. cholesterol.

Carrots combine with raisins for this delightful low-cholesterol dish.

GLAZED CARROTS AND RAISINS
2 cups matchstick-sized carrots, 1½ inches long
1 tablespoon water
2 tablespoons raisins
1 tablespoon margarine
1 tablespoon brown sugar
¼ teaspoon grated lemon peel
¼ teaspoon salt

Combine carrots and water in ½- to 1-quart casserole dish. Cover with lid. Microwave on 100 percent power for 4½ to 5½ minutes or until tender-crisp, stirring once. Drain. Add raisins, margarine, brown sugar, lemon peel and salt. Mix lightly; cover. Microwave on 100 percent power for 1-1½ minutes or until margarine is melted. Stir to coat evenly. Has 0 Mg. cholesterol.

What's for dessert that is low-calorie, low-cholesterol? A refreshing fruit dessert.

FRUIT PUDDING
2 cups cranberry-raspberry juice
3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
¼ cup sugar
1 can (16 ounces) sliced peaches
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Combine fruit juice, tapioca and sugar in 2-cup glass cup; stir to dissolve sugar. Microwave on 100 percent power for 7-8 minutes or until mixture boils and tapioca is clear, stirring once or twice.

Chop peach slices into small pieces. Add chopped peaches, peach liquid and lemon juice to tapioca mixture; stir to combine. Cool. Serve warm or chilled. Store in the refrigerator. Has 0 Mg. cholesterol.

children, following her lead, put themselves through college. Linda, who lives in Stewart, had a baby boy named Brian in January. Webb's first grandchild.

Webb's hobbies include guitar, dancing and snoring. "Send and you won't break," is her philosophy of life. "Be positive," she says. "Try to concentrate on the good things and be thankful for what you have."

Following are some of her favorite recipes:

EGGS FLAP

- 3 cups rice
- 1 cup butter
- 1 onion, finely chopped
- 1 garlic clove, chopped
- 12 cloves
- 12 cardamom seeds
- Whole allspice
- 1-inch piece stick cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ground turmeric
- 1/4 cup blanched almonds
- 1/4 cup raisins
- 2 teaspoons salt

Wash rice thoroughly in cold water. Drain. Sauté onion and garlic in 1/4 cup butter in large saucepan for 5 minutes. Add rice and continue cooking for 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Add 4 cups boiling water and all the spices. Cover and simmer 30 minutes or until all water is absorbed. Melt remaining 1/4 cup butter in skillet, add almonds and cook, stirring constantly, until golden brown. Stir almonds and raisins into cooked rice. Makes 6 servings.

BOILED SHRIMP FROM MALABAR

- 3 pounds shrimp
- 1 1/2 cups oil
- 5 garlic cloves, crushed
- 2 tablespoons chopped mint
- 2 1/2 teaspoons chili powder
- 1 tablespoon ground turmeric
- 1 tablespoon basil
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Freshly ground black pepper

Shell and wash shrimp. Marinate in remaining ingredients for at least 6 hours. Pour shrimp and marinade into shallow pan and broil under high heat 6 to 10 minutes, turning once. Serve with the marinade. Makes 6 servings.

BISCUIT PIZZAS

- 1 large can dairy case biscuits (10)
 - 2 cups pizza sauce
 - 1/2 cup each mozzarella, Parmesan and Romano cheese, grated
- Place biscuits on cookie sheet and spread each very thin, starting at center of biscuit and working out. Top with pizza sauce and cheeses. Bake at 350°F for 10 minutes. Makes 10 small pizzas.

MARINATED CHICKEN BREASTS

- 6 chicken breasts
 - 1/2 cup honey
 - 1/2 cup mustard
 - 1-2 tablespoons curry
 - 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- Wash and skin chicken breasts. Mix remaining ingredients and marinate breasts in mixture overnight. Bake at 350°F for 45 minutes covered and 15 minutes uncovered. Makes 4-6 servings.

SCRUMPTIOUS CARROT CAKE

- Sift the following:
 - 2 cups flour
 - 2 teaspoons each of cinnamon, baking soda and baking powder
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 2 cups white sugar
 - Beat together the following:
 - 1 1/2 cups light Wesson Oil
 - 4 eggs
 - Then add the following:
 - 3/4 cup chopped walnuts
 - 3 cups grated carrots (3 large or 4-5 medium carrots)
 - 1/2 cup golden raisins (optional)
- Combine egg and flour mixtures and mix well. Bake in a greased, floured sheet cake pan at 350°F for 30-40 minutes. Frost with Cream Cheese Icing and sprinkle with chopped walnuts.

Cream Cheese Icing for Scrumptious Carrot Cake

- 8 ounces cream cheese
 - 1/2 stick butter
 - 3/4 box confectioner's sugar
 - 2 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
- Mix together well.

PINEAPPLE CREAM CHEESE DELIGHT

- 1 yellow cake mix
 - 1 package instant vanilla pudding
 - 8 ounces cream cheese
 - 1 cup milk
 - 1 cup crushed pineapple
 - 1/4 cup cocoa
 - Approximately 1/2 cup maraschino cherries
- Prepare cake mix as directed and bake in sheet cake pan for 15 minutes or as directed on instructions. Blend pudding, cream cheese and milk until smooth. Spread over cooled cake. Drain crushed pineapple; spread over cream cheese mixture. Sprinkle with cocoa and cherries.

She won woman's husband, wound up losing

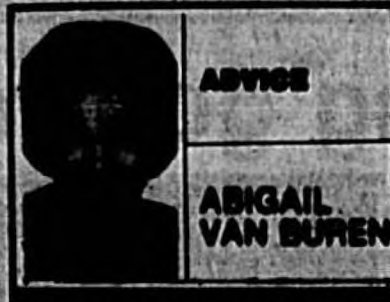

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is off on a two-week vacation, but she left behind some of her favorite letters taken from her best-selling book, "The Best of Dear Abby.")

DEAR ABBY: How about a letter from a "winner"? My married lover left his wife for me! I was told that I wasn't breaking up anything, his marriage was dead long before he even met me. His wife had gotten fat. I was married too, but I assured him that my marriage was also over—my husband had gotten dull and boring.

So I divorced my boring husband and he divorced his chubby wife. Oh, yes, we both had children, but we explained that we were in love and when they were older they would understand.

Our marriage was a dream come true. No more lying and sneaking around. At long last we were legally man and wife for all the world to see.

Our apartment was filled with modern furniture and old-fashioned gilt. And plenty of doubt and mistrust.

ADVICE
ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Two years later he was meeting someone new. I told him he was a liar and a cheat. He said it took one to know one.

And by the way, he's gotten a little dull and boring, and I've put on a little weight.

A WINNER

DEAR ABBY: I will never again say that a letter in your column is to be believed to be real. Listen to this:

My husband and I recently attended the 25th wedding anniversary party of a couple we have known for years. It was a beautiful dinner party at a club for about a hundred guests.

Around midnight, the husband said that he and his wife had an announcement to make. They stood arm in arm, and said, "We've had 25 years of marriage. Our children are married now, and there is no longer a reason to go on pretending our marriage is a success. It has been a failure for many years, so we've decided that while we are both young enough to enjoy life we're getting divorced. It's nobody's fault. It's mutual and friendly, and we hope you will continue to be our friends."

They kissed each other and danced together as the band played. "Good Night, Sweetheart."

Can anybody top this?

WAS THERE

DEAR WAS: I hope not.

DEAR ABBY: I am an Italian man, age 34. I am medium build and am told that I am good-looking. I drive a nightseeing bus by day, so I speak a little English. I am single and would like to correspond with an American woman between the ages of 30 and 60.

She doesn't have to be beautiful, but I want one who has a steady income and owns a late-model American automobile.

If you know of a woman who would like to correspond with me, please ask her to send a picture of the automobile.

VITO IN NAPOLI

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl who just celebrated her 21st birthday. On this occasion my boyfriend took me out to dinner. He doesn't drink much and neither do I, but before dinner we each had three martinis. During dinner (just to celebrate), we split a bottle of champagne. After dinner, we each had four brandies.

Did I do wrong?

BLOWN

DEAR BLOWN: Probably.

DEAR ABBY: What's the difference between a wife and a mistress?

DEAR ABBY: Night and day.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married to a good-looking cross-country truck driver for 10 years. I'm not the suspicious type, but Friday night he came off the road with two long scratches on his left hip. They were fairly deep scratches, yet neither his shorts nor his trousers were ripped.

When I asked him where he got the scratches, he said they were probably from a feather in the bed. Now, Abby, I'd like to believe him, but do they still have featherbedding in modern motels? And could anybody get scratched like this from a feather?

NOT BURN

DEAR NOT: It's unlikely that the scratches came from a feather. It was probably the whole chick.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 68446, Los Angeles, Calif. 90068. All correspondence is confidential.)

Anisette spices barbecue sauce

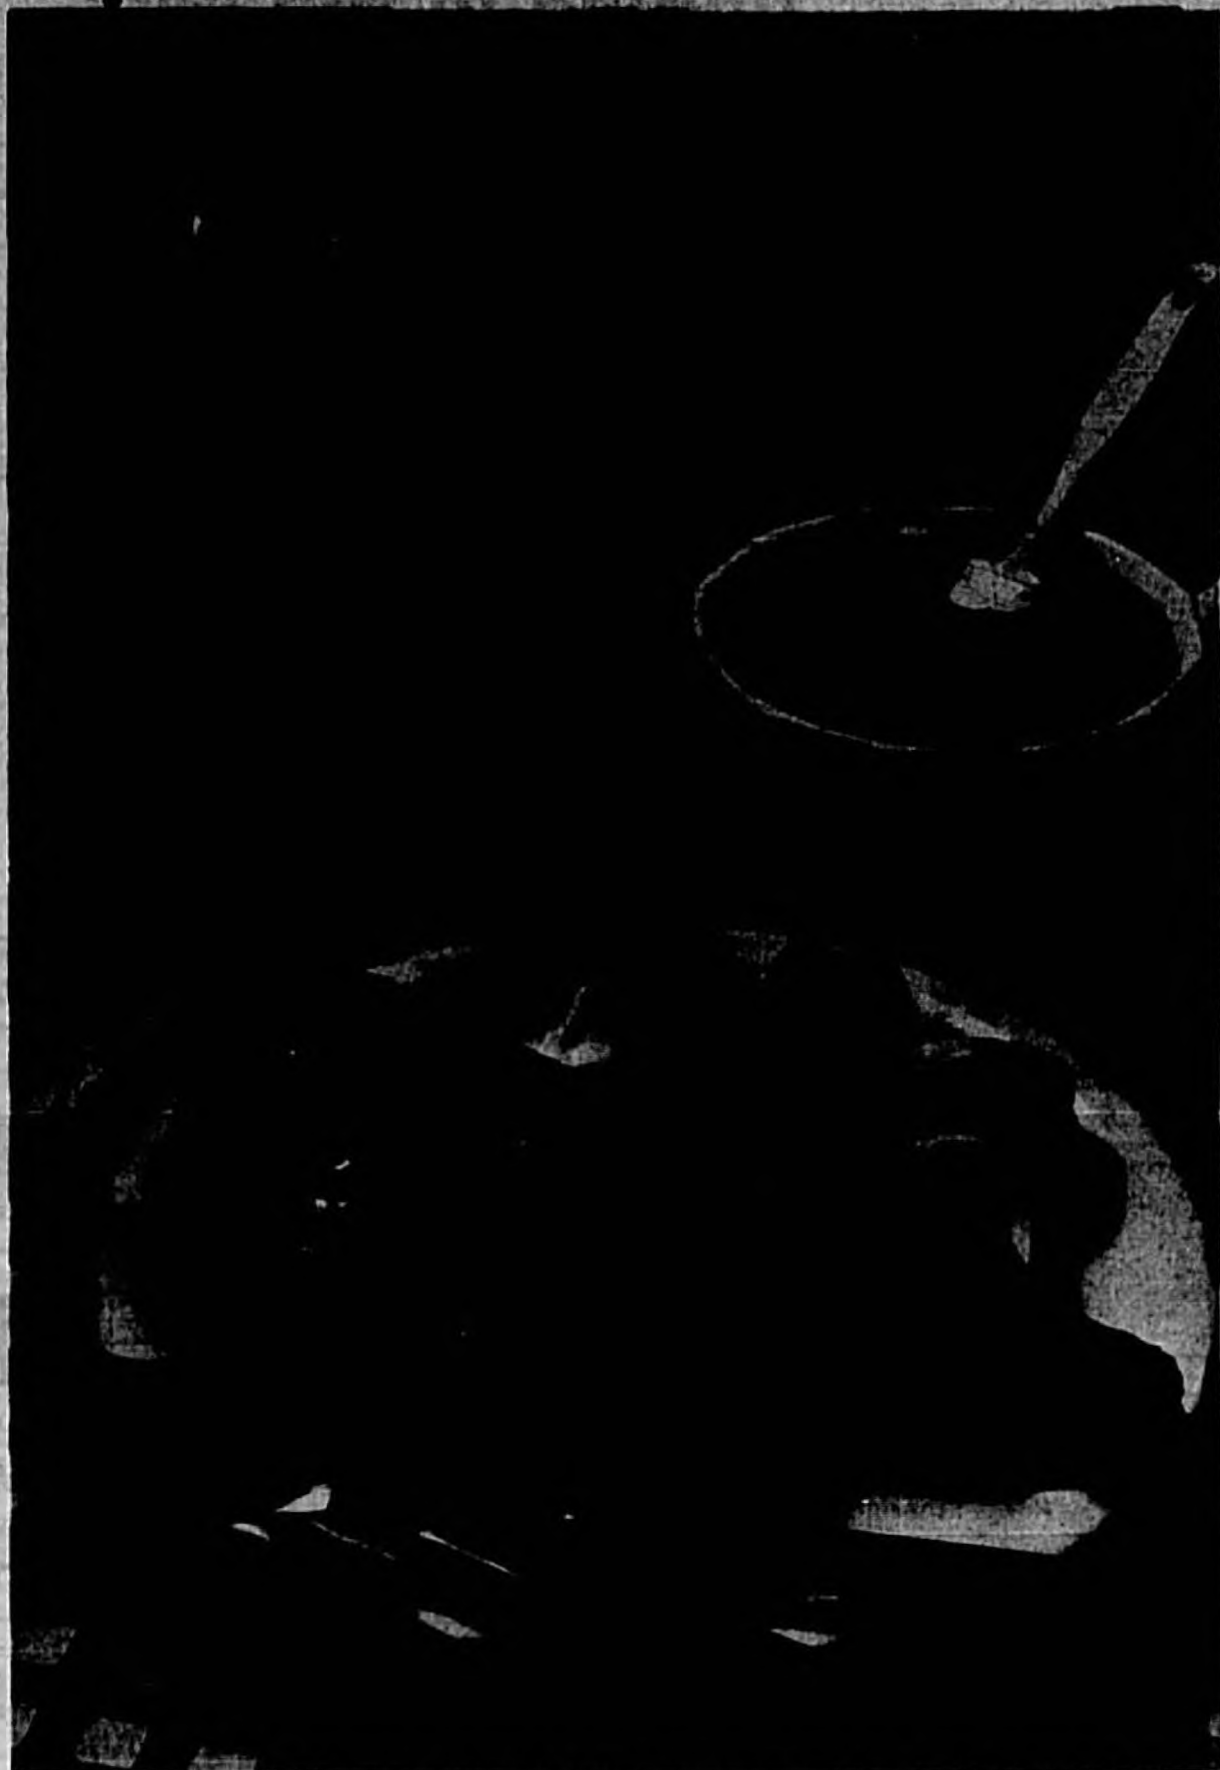

Piquant potato salad with fresh dill. Fruit tarts on sweet sorbets. Ripe cherry tomatoes on crisp beds of lettuce. Summer evokes thoughts of fresh and easy entertaining — simple foods with pungent flavors. The newest ingredient to spice up summer cooking: anisette.

Now Americans can extend their own anise tradition beyond the long licorice whips that highlight children's summer visits to the country. And what could be more American than an innovative barbecue sauce for cooking on the grill?

Simple ingredients and easy-to-follow steps render a barbecue sauce delectable for chicken, fish, ribs and other barbecue meats alike. Because alcohol evaporates when cooked, the key to cooking with a liqueur is to utilize the highest quality available. That quality rests on the choice and blend of flavoring substances, as well as the balance of sugar and alcohol. Liqueur manufacturers zealously guard the "secrets" to their recipes.

MARIE'S BARBECUE SAUCE

(Yields about 1 1/4 cups)
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 medium onion, peeled and finely chopped (about 1 cup)
1 large garlic clove, peeled and minced (about 1 teaspoon)
1 cup prepared chili sauce
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
1/4 cup anisette
2 tablespoons light brown sugar
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon prepared mustard, preferably Dijon
In a medium, heavy-bottomed saucepan, over medium heat, melt the butter or margarine. Add the onion and garlic and cook, stirring occasionally, for about five minutes until the onion is softened. Stir in the chili sauce, lemon juice, anisette, brown sugar, Worcestershire sauce and mustard and bring to a simmer. Reduce the heat to very low, and cook the sauce, stirring often to prevent scorching, for 30 minutes, until thickened slightly. The sauce can be prepared up to two days ahead of serving time, covered and refrigerated.

Marie's Barbecue Sauce gets its kick from the liqueur ingredient of anisette.

Susan Wyler's Southern Shrimp Boil is tailored to satisfy a hungry crowd.

Cook entertains her party guests casually

Newspaper Enterprise Assoc.

Some people love to entertain large groups of people. Susan Wyler does—but she doesn't like to spend three days in the kitchen cooking for the party.

This doesn't mean, though, that she doesn't enjoy cooking for her friends. Her theory is that if you can cook well, you can eat well. She has been practicing this for several years as a cookbook author, caterer and former food editor of Food & Wine magazine. Although she and her husband, artist Rollie Erickson, live in a loft in New York City, Wyler does most of her entertaining at their country home—having people over as frequently as once every two weeks.

Her country extravaganzas led to her collection of recipes and advice in "Cooking for a Crowd" (Harmony Books, $24.95). In it she draws on her experiences entertaining 10 to 50 people, usually alfresco, when weather permits.

Wyler has a charcoal grill, a gas grill and a smoker, and loves to experiment with them. Although she would prefer to do all the cooking herself, she occasionally rents and lets friends bring a dish because "it makes them feel a part of the party."

She likes parties to be casual and enjoys serving finger foods.

Wyler believes in do-ahead recipes, and even blanches corn on the cob in advance, then smears it with mayonnaise and hot sauce before grilling it for five minutes. She likes to squeeze lime juice on the corn or toss on some grated cheddar.

Another trick to dress up a casual party is to use large, colorful kitchen towels for napkins.

One casual dish Wyler enjoys is a shrimp boil. The shrimp is dumped on a paper-covered table and served with finger foods.

SOUTHERN SHRIMP BOIL

7 to 8 pounds medium shrimp (25 to 30 per pound) in the shell

1/4 cup mustard seeds
1/4 cup coriander seeds
1/4 cup allspice berries
2 tablespoons black peppercorns

2 tablespoons crushed hot red pepper flakes
12 whole cloves
6 blades of mace
3 bay leaves, broken in half
2 1/2 tablespoon coarse (kosher) salt

3 onions, thickly sliced
2 celery ribs, thickly sliced
6 garlic cloves, smashed
1 lemon, sliced
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice

Rinse the shrimp very well but do not shell. Drain and set aside. Fill a stockpot with 6 to 8 quarts of water. Add all the remaining ingredients. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat and simmer for 15 minutes. (The court bouillon can be made several hours ahead.)

Just before you are ready to serve the shrimp, bring the court bouillon to a boil. Dump about one-third of the shrimp into the pot and boil for 2 to 3 minutes, until pink, loosely curled and opaque throughout. Remove with a skimmer or slotted spoon and transfer to a bowl. (The shrimp in their shell will stay hot for a good 5 to 10 minutes.) Repeat twice with the remaining shrimp.

Serve with Creole Butter Dipping Sauce (recipe follows). This kitchen-tested recipe makes 20 to 24 servings.

IN THE SERVICE

Cadet Phillip O. Hagan, son of Joseph H. and Virginia L. Hagan of Sanford, has completed a U.S. Air Force ROTC field training encampment at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.

Field training, attended by cadets normally between their second and third year of college, gives an opportunity to evaluate each student's potential as an officer.

The summer curriculum consists of orientation on jet aircraft, career opportunities, human relations education and equal opportunity training. Physical fitness and survival training is also emphasized.

The field training is for four weeks, but cadets in the two-year ROTC program receive an additional two weeks of instruction in the development of air power and the contemporary Air Force.

Hagan is a 1986 graduate of Lake Mary High School.

Tech. Sgt. Paul E. Gleason Jr., son of Paul E. and Grace I. Gleason of Sanford, has been decorated with the second award of the Air Force Achievement Medal at Carswell Air Force Base, Texas.

The Achievement Medal is awarded to airmen for meritorious service, acts of courage or other accomplishments.

Gleason is a storage and handling crew chief with the 7th Missile Maintenance Squadron. He graduated from Penn Yan Academy, N.Y., in 1972.

Army Pvt. Henry E. Bell has arrived for duty at Fort Campbell, Ky.

A 1988 graduate of DeLand High School, the private is an infantryman with the 502nd Infantry Regiment.

Bell is the son of Camilla J. Huddleston and stepson of James O. Huddleston of DeBary.

Air Force Reserve Airman 1st Class Thomas J. Garver, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hartmann of Alamonte Springs, has graduated from Air Force basic training at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

During the six weeks of training the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree through the community college of the Air Force.

Garver is a 1989 graduate of Rochester High School, Ind.

John Calvin Curry Jr. of Sanford recently enlisted in the Army's Delayed Entry Program. According to Sgt. Jorge Rivera of the Sanford Army Recruiting Station, Curry has been guaranteed training as a combat engineer.

Treatments vary for ringing in the ears

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there any possible way to reverse a tubal ligation?

DEAR READER: Using a technique called microsurgery (a delicate operation under a microscope), a qualified gynecologist may be able to reverse a tubal ligation. Regardless of the length of time the tube has been tied, it is astonishing how skillful surgeons are at correcting this method of sterilization. Microsurgery has also been successful in reversing male tubal ligation (vasectomy). Despite the successes in reversing it, remember that tubal ligation is something that should be undertaken only if you are sure you want to be sterilized.

DEAR DR. GOTT: On occasion I must manually remove fecal matter from my anus. I'm concerned that if I become too crippled in the future from my arthritis, rheumatism and bronchiectasis, that a nurse or attendant might have to do this for me. Is this procedure harmful? I'm too embarrassed to ask my own doctor this question.

DEAR READER: As people age, modify their diets and become less physically active, they tend to become constipated. The situation can readily progress to impaction, when a person is unable to expel a large mass of fecal matter that becomes trapped in the rectum. In this case, the feces must be broken up manually before they can be passed. The procedure is harmless but unpleasant. However, doctors, nurses and medical attendants are usually well-versed in ways to do this. Prevention is the key. Speak to your doctor about ways to prevent impaction. Your options include: bran, stool softeners, mild laxatives — or in a pinch — enemas. You needn't feel embarrassed about sharing your concerns with your doctor. He or she is trained to respond to this kind of situation and relieve your apprehension by suggesting ways to solve your problems.

PETER GOTT, M.D.

Horoscopes

By James Jacoby
In standard bridge one leads fourth best from suits that are not trump, even in the middle of a deal, though of course it's common sense to lead high from a bad suit just to prevent partner from thinking you hold a significant honor. But there can be other reasons for departing from the norm. When South reached the three no-trump, West selected the jack of spades for opening lead. South ducked in dummy, and East won the king. Many defenders would now switch to a low club, but notice the poor result. Declarer would duck, and West would win the jack. If West continued with another club, it would be into the A-Q, and declarer would have time to play to the spade ace and take a diamond finesse. He would then make three diamond tricks, three spades, two clubs and a heart. If West won the club jack and switched to a heart, declarer would take dummy's ace and finesse in diamonds. Now West might lead another heart, but that would set up the ninth trick for declarer in that suit. Unfortunately for declarer, East was Mike Lawrence. Having recently written a book on card combinations, including problems for the defender, Mike made the killing play of the 10 of clubs. If declarer put in the queen, West would win the king and continue with the jack. If declarer played low, East would hold the lead and continue with a second club through the A-Q. Going up with the ace would not help either, since South would have to try for an extra heart trick eventually, and East would win the king and lead through the queen of clubs. Yes, I know there are many club holdings in which this play won't help the defense. But in most of those cases three no-trump is going to play well in any event.

YOUR BIRTHDAY

Sept. 1, 1989
Friendships are likely to take on new meanings for you in the year ahead. A number of new associations will be formed and closer bonds will be established with several old friends.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Friends will comply with your wishes to a limited degree today. If you are too dictatorial or demanding, even people who are usually supportive could work against you. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your hunches could provide you with valuable insights today, but they will still require some monitoring on your behalf. Be able to distinguish between positive impulses or wishful thinking.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Chances are if you pay a lot of money to have a good time today, you won't. Conversely, activities that are free or very inexpensive could turn out to be really fun.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's admirable to be independent and have strong self-identification, but don't go to foolish lengths today to prove your point. Victories of this ilk will have a hollow ring.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Although you mind will be keen and your intentions good today there is still a possibility you might do or say something thoughtless that could hurt a sensitive friend's feelings.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be willing to share today because it will encourage the person with whom you're involved to do likewise. Both will come out winners.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today you are likely to be more at ease with companions who are thoughtful and gentle. Aggressive or abrasive types will make you feel very uncomfortable and their behavior might embarrass you.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) You won't go wrong today in whatever you do if you operate in accordance with your highest standards. If you start to hedge a bit, complications are possible.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Social conditions should be to your liking today, but you might not feel as happy about financial arrangements. Be extremely cautious today as to how and where you use your money.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There is a delicate balance that must be maintained in your commercial affairs today so that you do not swing from a favorable position to a negative one. Subdue impulsiveness.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) No matter how hard you try today you'll find it will be impossible to please everyone with whom you'll have dealings. Don't get upset, instead be grateful for the happy arrangements.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your possibilities for personal gain continue to look encouraging again today, but what you eventually get might be less than your expectations.
