

SANFORD

IN A NEW ROLE

The season of 1925-26 will find Sanford equipped with an attractive modern tourist hotel, and actively competing with the recognized resort cities of the State for the tourist business.

There are many factors which will influence the visitor to spend his winter vacation in Sanford. In the matter of climate, Sanford is on a par with any of the resorts of Peninsular Florida. Its location on the headwaters of navigation of the St. Johns River permits the opportunity of enjoying the superb scenic sub-tropical St. Johns River trip, which has ever been popular with visitors to the State, while on the upper reaches of the St. Johns River fishermen can spend many profitable days.

The city has built an 18-hole golf course which is conceded to be one of the sportiest and most attractive courses in Florida.

The municipal yacht basin is also expected to draw to Sanford a large number of visitors who make annual cruises to Florida in private yachts.

Every effort of the community is bent toward making Sanford a prominent tourist center. With the completion of all projects essential to the popularity of any pleasure resort, Sanford is destined to become one of Florida's great cities.

The demand of tourists for varied accommodations gives an impetus to the construction of apartments, cottages, bungalows and all classes of residential construction. At this time there is no place else in the state which offers the opportunities for people of vision and means, as does Sanford, Florida's new resort city.

Sanford Chamber of Commerce

Sanford Golf Course Recognized As One of the Finest in Florida

Appointment of S. O. Chase As Chairman of Chamber Committee Is First Step

Once Home of Sea Captain

Issue of $40,000 to Acquire and Improve the Course

The unique among golf courses in the history of the Sanford links bears a striking resemblance to that of many other larger undertakings of the city that it is the result of united effort. The course is a city created and city and as the result is in the phrase "one of the courses in the country."

the appointment of a committee of which S. O. Chase was chairman and F. P. Forster was one of the workers. Mr. Chase accepted the chairmanship of the committee in November, 1921.

Then followed a hunt for a site for the course and the club house. It was announced on Mar. 31, 1922 that a site had been procured. This site, formerly known as the Amory estate had been the home of a retired sea captain. It consisted of 153 acres, on which was situated an old mansion and a grove of approximately 800 bearing orange trees. The old mansion in due time was renovated and converted into a club house and in the process every care was taken to retain the picturesque charm of the building and surroundings while adding the modern essentials to comfort and convenience.

Then came the organization of the Sanford Country Club. Mr. Chase and Mr. Forster disposed of 100 memberships at $100 each. The greater part of this money was paid but there were some that never made payment.

The course was originally designed to consist of nine holes. It was constructed under the supervision of Cameron Trent, then

Members of The City Commission

Sanford's City Commission is composed of three of the most prominent business and professional men of this city. From left to right they are: S. O. Chase, pioneer resident and head of Chase & Company, citrus and vegetable shippers; Mayor Forrest Lake, president of the Seminole County Bank and who is now serving his eleventh term as mayor, and Dr. C. J. Marshall, prominent physician and large property owner.

of Hartow, Fla. By May 1, 1922 there had been completed five holes of the course and the promise of opening up for play that part of the course, was made. The work, however, was not carried forward as fast as many at the time hoped it would for it was October 10, 1922 before the formal opening of the club was held. This opening was to have been a gala affair and doubtlessly would have been so had not the inclemency of the weather intervened. There was to have been a women's tournament in the morning while the men were to have had the links in the afternoon. The women golfers drove off under the lowering clouds and had barely reached the fourth hole before a downpour overtook them. The tournament was broken up and the participants were loaded into a "coupe" which was dispatched post haste to their rooms. Judging from the capacity of the orthodox coupe the participant in the tournament for women could have been no more than four in number.

The men, however, aided by a change in the weather managed to play around the nine holes between showers. Bridge and other attractions at the club house filled in the gap that was caused by the elimination of golf.

The Sanford Country Club, all in all, was not the success that had been anticipated and, on July 21, 1923 a movement was begun to have the city take over the course. It was then proposed that a bond issue of $40,000 be voted in order to improve the course and increase the number of holes to 18. The bond issue was voted on Oct. 9, though not for the sum of $40,000 but for $160,000. In this issue the amount originally sought to improve the course was set aside for this purpose while in addition there was $35,000 set aside to procure land and build a municipal athletic field.

The course is declared to be very different from the traps of various kinds to keep the player in a state of high concentration without making the course unnecessarily difficult. The outstanding characteristics of each of the holes are given as follows: Number One offers a fine chance to get away from the first tee. There is very little trouble until the green, which is surrounded at the back by traps and pine trees, is reached. The hole is perfectly straight and not over 400 yards long. Number Two is considered one of the best holes on the course. The green is hidden from the view from the tee, and some what below the level of the fairway at the two hundred yard mark. Traps at the back and two sides of the green make a perfect second shot necessary to reach the green.

Number Three also has a rise in the fairway which obstructs the view to the green from the tee. The green is almost entirely surrounded by traps and a high masha-pitch is necessary to make the ball grip. Water at the right is ready for anybody who slices, and a road is waiting for the unlucky one who hooks.

Number Four the finest hole on the course. The green is hidden from the tee and a long midiron shot is needed to get on in two. Water at the left, and a road at the right penalize bad shots.

Number Five is a short hole, being about 175 yards in length. There is water in front of the tee and three-fourths of the distance to the green. A large trap at the left of the green and a shallow trap in front make all the trouble necessary to penalize the careless or the inefficient player.

FINE POULTRY BRINGING FAME FOR LONGWOOD

Fowl Raisers Fine Example of Working Together; Prizes Have Been Taken In All of Bigger Poultry Shows

Town Has World's Largest Fernery

Ducks and Squabs of Town in Discriminating Markets Bring Gratifying Prices

Ten miles south of Sanford on the Dixie Highway and on the Atlantic Coast Line Railway to Tampa is Longwood. It is in Seminole County and has a population of more than 600 prosperous people who devote much time to citrus fruit and to fine poultry raising. Longwood is much and widely noted as a poultry producing section; that is, a producer of prize winning poultry for birds raised at that little town having taken so many prizes than listing them is a long task.

Great pines, magnificent oaks, many beautiful orange groves and plenty of good water and fine drainage are some of the reasons for successful poultry raising at Longwood, but of course these things alone will not begin to produce prize winners. Coupled with the right location must be the knowledge and the will; but Longwood has shown all this and to spare and blue ribbon, cups, trophies and similar awards are in the hands of many breeders there.

Co-operation on the part of the Longwood poultry breeders is manifested in more ways than one. They not only buy collectively but they ship in the same manner, exhibit solid cars to some fair or poultry exhibition to be judged by America's experts. Winnings having been made at shows in Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia and Alabama, and in this state at every show held in Tampa, Orlando and Jacksonville.

The Niemeyers One farm in Longwood is owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. Niemeyer and is known as the "Keystone Poultry Yards." These progressive people not only raise fine birds and win prizes with them, but they sell prize-winning stock to others and hatch and sell "day-old" chicks, making this a profitable phase of the industry. The Keystone Yards occupies an ideal location, is handled in a business-like way and is recognized a thorough success from every viewpoint. It has been in operation for many years and is known far and wide.

On the edge of an orange grove near an attractive white house in which George Stuart lives, is located the Sunnyside Hatchery, of which he is owner and to which he devotes his personal attention.

Work Of Chamber Of Commerce Seen In Sanford's Progress

Body Plays Big Part In Awakening Civic Pride of Sanford Sells City to Sell

Proves To Be "Melting Pot" Chamber Has Been Uniformly Successful In All Of Work

Baby chicks by the thousands are shipped to many buyers. Few "babies" of any species receive more care than Mr. Stuart gives to these little chicks. By such care he has built such sales that he has three times doubled the capacity of his hatchery.

"Welcome to Short's Muscovy Duck Farm" is the way a sign reads that indicates the entrance to one of the best known duck farms in the section. Mr. and Mrs. Short have developed the business to the stage where it pays handsomely. Lawns, a small lake, a clear stream and the other things incident to duck raising are on the farm. The young ducks weigh when six to ten weeks old, from three to five pounds each. It takes five weeks for the eggs to hatch and the mother duck does the incubating.

Pigeons and Poultry. J. A. Bistline owns and operates the Longwood Squab Farm and finds a ready market for all the squabs he can produce. He also is authority on Silver Wyandottes. His birds of that variety have won numbers of prizes in the big national shows such as those in New York, Chicago, Washington, Hagerston, "oonoke, Nashville, Atlanta and in most of the Florida shows.

Mr. Bistline, usually receives a premium above regular market prices for his squabs as his customers are glad to pay it in recognition of the quality of the young birds which he supplies. The marketing of the dressed squabs is done with the same system given to other phases of the work.

Having Telephones May Oust British

LONDON, Mar. 20.—Members of the British parliament who have telephones in their homes were somewhat startled recently when they ascertained that, because of the instruments, they might be deprived of their seat in the house. They are asking whether they committed a breach of the famous act of George The Third's parliament, which says that any person undertaking a contract with a government department shall not be entitled to sit in the house. The telephones here are owned and operated by the government.

TELEPHONE PLEASANTER

STOCKHOLM, Mar. 20.—The "line's busy" nuisance in telephoning has been mitigated in this city through the installation of an ingenious arrangement called the "waiting line." It will apply the first come first served rule to places much in demand such as hospitals, drug stores, doctor's offices, ticket agencies, information bureaus and newspapers.

Altamonte Springs One Of Beauty Spots Of Florida, Situated In This County

By C. J. MOTES

Altamonte Springs, the beautiful, there is no other way to express it unless the superlative is used. A traveler as he hurries along the Cross-State main road of Florida, between Tampa and Daytona, makes a short detour about 10 miles from Orlando and suddenly finds himself along a magnificent road of giant overhanging waterfalls. A glance to right and left gives him a fleeting glimpse of comfortable house and spacious grounds here and there a hotel on a corner amidst a mass of shrubbery and flowering a glimpse of shimmering water here and there seemingly in some basin. He is passing through Altamonte Springs; he but knew the hidden beauty back from the highway, monumental development of an industry just beyond view marked residence lawns and trees with their varicolored and fine crystal and other glazes, gold tones and spend a whole day or a week in enjoying the and more than all else, the who live there.

Altamonte Springs has been for the winter home of big men who come winter after winter to enjoy the seclusion and the stress of that beautiful life hidden away in Seminole county, just over the line from the county. It is a winter resort little known to the general public.

Doubtless orange trees must bloom and to bear wonderful beautiful golden fruit surrounding as are found and so it seems quite in order that hundreds of thousands of the finest oranges, grown in Florida grow and are sold from there. An immense house, keeps the railroad main line of the Atlantic line between Tampa and Orlando—busy all the shipping and hauling off cars of fruit. The office is crowded with mail box shipments going to all parts of the country, and even the office has to handle hundreds monthly via parcel post. The grown the Royal Fern, graceful and beautiful of the ferns belonging to the family. At the Royal Fern, are 65 acres under one roof, 40 acres under one shelter, additional acres being planted the entire area is covered with one variety of fern. Mill graceful sprays in sight, the variegated lattice of the fern covering, makes a sight of which the beholder is first time to say more astonished "Oh!" house and grow this "crop," every few weeks requires:

13,000 9-foot posts;
210,000 lineal feet of 2x8 cypress stringers;
100 miles of covering 1 foot wide;
950 miles of wire;
3,500,000 lath, which end to end would measure 2,402 miles;
30 miles of irrigation pipe;
A large pre-cooling plant;
An electric light and water system;
Its own public parks;
44 buildings, including homes for employees, store, church, school house and moving picture theater for the employees.
Cost of enterprise to date $500,000.

The head of this great Florida Development is Hon. Charles D. Haines, builder and manager of railroads, who before and after his term in the 53rd National Congress, as representative from the Troy, N. Y., district built and managed 18 steam, and 16 street railroads in 15 states of this country and in Canada. The National Encyclopaedia of American Biography says that at the age of 16 he accepted a position as "night telegrapher in the office of the Central-Hudson railroad at Hudson"—at the age of 17 he was dispatcher on an eastern road—on his 18th birthday he became assistant superintendent of the road and a year later was made its general superintendent.

Captured by Florida. A conceiver of big ideas, and a man who developed his big ideas into practical paying successes, Mr. Haines, after his many years active construction life in the railroad building world, came to Florida, first for his health, and became enamored of the climate the beauty of its diversified topography, and convinced of its great coming importance as a state of big things, bought an estate at Altamonte Springs, where he has spent most of his time the last 12 years—except when abroad, or on business and pleasure trips to other states in this country, developing on a gigantic scale his idea of catering to the esthetic scene of the nation, and assisting to make more beautiful the surroundings of those who have not access to the incomparable beauties of nature, by growing ferns.

Today Mr. Haines believes that in Florida are the greatest and the most valuable opportunities for the developing of big things, to be found anywhere in the United States. He does not minimize the accomplishments already made by growers, farmers, business men, and state governments; but he does believe the people, and the state itself, have never realized how big are the things yet to be undertaken, or how necessary it is for them to begin real construction on a scale that will at once command the attention and assistance of the nation itself.

...to the right of the fairway and in back of the green is no great trouble experienced in making a five.

...very pretty hole though not a hard one. Number Nine is a hole at the right of the fairway, the only hazard except for the water in front of the tee. There are shallow traps around it except for a little water at the front.

...Number Ten is a five par, though a four, is a sharp "dog-leg" right, a 175 yard carry over a large groove makes it possible to the green with a mid-iron shot. There are orange trees on both sides of the fairway and the green.

...Number Eleven is about 400 yards long with orange trees at the end and traps around the green. It is a dry hard hole if the ball stays straight down the fairway and doesn't overshoot the green.

...Number Twelve is a three par hole at the right of the fairway and traps at the back are principal hazards. A bid-iron will just carry over the tree.

...Number Thirteen the green is visible from the tee and only after an exceptionally long shot can a player see the green at all from the fairway. Traps at the left and trees at the end of the green are the main hazard. It is a small green and is a hole in the middle.

...Number Fourteen is a long four par, 425 yards in length and reaches two long shots to reach the green. A big trap at the right and trees at the end of the green offer trouble for the golfer.

...Number Fifteen is a very fine hole from a scientific standpoint, very long, with a narrow fairway and a small green surrounded by deep traps. Number Fifteen is about 350 yards long and is a great deal of accuracy in home in two shots.

...Number Sixteen is a short hole, 150 yards long. Very deep traps are to be found all around the green. It requires a perfect shot to get on the green in one.

...outsiders in Sanford, unless a similar confidence was prevalent among the citizens at large.

It was also realized that nothing could be accomplished for the general good until the co-operation of every one could be secured. This meant the elimination of factionalism, which unfortunately prevails in a great many communities throughout the country. That intra-community friction has been eliminated is evidenced particularly by the splendid support given every progressive bond issue which has been submitted to the people for approval.

The Chamber of Commerce has proven to be the melting pot converting the dross of antagonistic factionalism into the gold of harmonious civic co-operation.

The high calibre of the men serving as presidents and members of the board of governor has always inspired the confidence of local people and caused the latter to give their strongest support to any measure advocated by the commercial body. These men, some of whom have been members of the governing board since the inception of the organization, have successfully kept the organization free from politics and policies which have spelled ruin to more than one commercial organization. They have given of their time without any thought of personal gain except that which would accrue to them indirectly as the city as a whole grew and prospered.

A careful retrospect of the records of the Sanford Chamber of Commerce will show that it has been uniformly successful in every movement it has fostered, and work in which it is now actively engaged. Through no large in that progress can be noted in the membership from a numerical standpoint, it has on its roster the names of the most prominent men in the business and official life of the community, and its influence is recognized not only locally but throughout the state.

The next annual report of the organization will show a record of accomplishments for the local chamber that will be second to none in the state, and will prompt a feeling of just pride amongst the membership who have played a prominent part in the work of the organization. It would take no great amount of time to convince the most exacting of skeptics that the Sanford Chamber of Commerce is today a vital factor in the life of the community, and as a democratic institution, and as such, has always been able to interpret the wishes of the people into action.

LOCAL NOTES SPONSOR WORK OF BOY SCOUTS

During Four Years of Existence Organization Has Been One of Most Active Bodies of Sanford in Civic Affairs
Club Now Has 27 Members
Members Representative of all Lines of Business; Co-operation Always Stressed

Organized Apr. 1, 1921 and headed by representative citizens throughout the four years of its life the Sanford Rotary Club has had much good work to do and has done it.
From the excellent start given the club by first president, H. R. Stevens, to the present year, under R. J. Holly, as president, the membership of the organization has steadily increased from 18 to 27 and is continuing to draw and hold the attention and co-operation of men closely identified with the city's progress.
The other former president, D. Thrasher (1922) and George Knight (1923), each did constructive work and give freely to help their time and best efforts. Among the outstanding accomplishments of Rotary in Sanford is the part the Club played in the establishment on Silver Lake, near the city of a Boy Scout Camp. The camps consist of ten acres immediately on the lake and is equipped with huts, camp-sites, swimming facilities and all the things dear to the hearts of boys. This entire property belongs to the Sanford Boy Scouts, having been deeded to them by Roy F. Vimes and then equipped largely through the interest of Rotarians, individually and collectively. The Silver Lake Camp is used each summer by the Scout Troups of Central Florida.
The Sanford Rotary Club has always co-operated with other civic organizations and with the local churches in work for the less fortunate of this section. The club has an able aid to the Seminole county Welfare Board in matters handled by the Board where the spirit and aid of Rotary can be made useful.
Like all Rotary Clubs, the one in Sanford is a luncheon club and the weekly meetings, which are held in the dining parlors of the Seminole Cafe, are well attended and highly enjoyable. While most business is transacted at these lunch-oons, time is found and taken to enter into complete fellowship and to renew the pledges of friendship and service. Entertainment of out-of-town Rotarians who find themselves in Sanford from time to time is another means employed to cement friendships and to further the prestige of the city of Sanford, in which kind of work Rotary is famous. The officers and members of Sanford Rotary Club are: R. J. Holly, president; W. M. Haynes, secretary; and Randall Chase, treasurer.

The members are: George Brockhahn, S. O. Chose, H. C. DuBose, E. L. Dean, A. W. Epps, M. C. Haddock, E. F. Houtholder, Edward Higgins, Charles Henry, Geo. W. Knight, Frank B. MacNeill, A. R.
