

POLICE IN BRIEF

Orlando man arrested on drug charges during traffic check

SANFORD — Wilbur Adkins, 29, 645 Livingston, Orlando, was arrested by Altamonte Springs police Saturday at about 11 p.m. for possession of a controlled substance, possession of drug paraphernalia, having an open container of alcohol and driving with a suspended driver's license.

Adkins was stopped in a routine traffic check at Salina Avenue and North Street and police reported finding two marijuana cigarettes, various drug paraphernalia and a plastic cup of alcohol. Adkins was arrested and taken to the Seminole County Jail, where bond was set at $500.

Driving under the influence

The following persons face a charge in Seminole County of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol:

• John Carver, 22, of USS Spiegel Grove, FPO New York, N.Y., was arrested by a Seminole deputy at 10:20 p.m. Sunday after he was seen driving erratically on Winter Woods near S.R. 436. Bond was set at $500.

• John P. Martin, 23, of 600 Hermit Trail, Altamonte Springs, was arrested by Winter Springs police shortly after 6 p.m. Sunday after an accident at Hayes Road and Panama in Winter Springs. Martin has also been charged with careless driving, failure to stop at a stop sign, failure to wear a seat belt and failure to carry a driver's license or a vehicle registration. Bond was set at $500.

• Stanley Graham Burleigh, Jr., 41, 616 E. Orange Drive, Altamonte Springs, was arrested by Altamonte Springs police outside the Barrel Pub, 596 E. Altamonte Drive, at 11:45 a.m. Saturday. Bond was set at $500.

Cash register stolen

SANFORD — Thieves stole a cash register from the Tenneco Service Station, 1800 French Ave., early Monday morning, but the machine was worth more than the money it contained.

The cash register, valued at $800, contained $4 in cash. It was reported to police. The theft occurred at 3:10 a.m., according to the report. Police are still investigating.

In other police action: • Police are looking for two known suspects in connection with a robbery to the Tender Loving Care Coin Laundry. Police report $453 in cash was taken in the Sunday incident.

• A guest of the Cavalier Motel, 3200 S. Orlando Drive, had $460 worth of property taken from his room late Saturday evening, it was reported.

• A television and a video cassette recorder, total value $1,000, was stolen from the residence of Walter Shane Steele, 2415 Key Ave., on Saturday, it was reported.

• A car was broken into at the Sanford Tire Service Center, 420 French Ave., and $2,240 of property taken from the vehicle, it was reported. The vehicle was at the center for repair.

• The automobile mechanical repair shop at Seminole High School, 2701 Georgia Ave., was robbed of $3,000 worth of tools sometime late last week, it was reported.

Man saves neighbors from fire

MIAMI SPRINGS, Fla. (UPI) — A Miami Springs man saved 12 sleeping neighbors from an early morning fire, extinguishing the flames in their living room and waking them in time to flee the smoky house.

Richard Castro, who had just moved into his home three weeks ago, was hailed as a hero by his new neighbors. He said he awoke when he heard a small explosion and the sound of breaking glass about 5:30 a.m. Sunday.

Castro jumped out of bed, dashed to the living room and saw flames and smoke in the living room of the house next door, just 12 feet away.

"He just grabbed the extinguisher from the kitchen and ran next door," said Laureen Castro, who called 911 as her neighbor.

Castro said he pounded the extinguisher against the front door of the smoke-filled house. When no one answered, he smashed a window, reached for the lock and let himself inside.

"It was so smoky in there, I was dying for air," he said. "I kept having to step outside."

Castro's banging finally awoke the Uriarte family, who had a family reunion Saturday night that lasted until 4 a.m.

"I thought someone was going to rob the house," said John Pereira, Irma Uriarte's brother-in-law. "We got up when we heard the noise and then we saw the smoke."

Castro found the fire's origin, a lamp and the living room couch, and doused the flames with the extinguisher. He herded the Uriarte family outside. No one was injured.

The fire was out when firefighters arrived 10 minutes after the 911 call. The neighbors met for the first time on the front lawn.

"Mr. Castro is a hero," said Pereira, who is visiting from New York for the reunion. "If it wasn't for him we wouldn't be here now."

Pereira said the fire may have been started when a plastic lamp fell or had a short circuit.

The Uriartes estimated the damage at $3,000. The fire melted their television, VCR, stereo turntable and speakers. But a pet lizard in a terrarium next to the stereo and TV survived.

"I don't feel like a hero," said Castro. "It was just doing what felt natural. I'm glad everyone is OK."

Naegleria fowleri: Florida's deadly amoeba

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Signs sometimes alert people not to swim in central Florida lakes because of pollution, no lifeguards or dangerous plant growth, but few warn of a silent summer killer lurking in the water.

A deadly amoeba, Naegleria fowleri, exists naturally in freshwater lake bottoms but multiplies rapidly and starts swimming around looking for food as water temperature warms, said Dr. Jerome Brand, acting director of the Orange County Health Department.

The amoeba can enter a swimmer's nose and migrate to the brain. The resulting disease, primary amoebic meningoencephalitis, manifests within 72 hours with such symptoms as headaches, nausea, fever and stiff neck.

Although rare — the Centers for Disease Control estimates the chances of swimmer death from the amoeba are 2.5 million to 1 — death can occur in days if the disease goes untreated with the anti-fungal drug amphotericin B.

Dr. Elia Ayoub, chief of pediatric infectious diseases at the University of Florida Health Science Center, said children are most at risk because they play in water near lake bottoms or shores where the amoeba lives.

He said he has seen six children contract the disease over the last 10 years, all of them died.

"Luckily, it is very rare," he said. "Nevertheless, Ayoub said, 'I think it's worthwhile making parents aware of it.'"

Brand said Sunday lake swimming is out of the question when water temperature hits 86 degrees, which will occur shortly if current hot weather continues. July through September is the time for most concern.

Starker Lake in Ocoee is the only lake in Orange or Seminole counties posted in warning of the amoeba. The city and its insurance company are being sued for $1 million in the amoeba disease death of 8-year-old Billie Jo Nobles two years ago.

U.S. pushing herbicide use in cocaine war

By Tim Johnson

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — U.S. officials fighting environmentalists' complaints about a plan to kill coca plants with herbicides argue that cocaine traffickers already have poisoned the jungle beyond repair.

Tons of chemicals used to process coca leaves into cocaine have been dumped into Peruvian rivers and millions of acres of forestland have been stripped bare to grow the plants, the officials say.

"When you talk about environmental damage, we're not talking about virgin land," a U.S. Embassy spokesman said, defending a U.S. plan to spray coca fields with herbicides.

"This is land that already has been heavily damaged... It's not a question of rights and wrongs. It is a question of trade-offs."

Peru, the only nation in South America to tentatively approve U.S. financed aerial testing of herbicides against the coca plant, is having second thoughts. It will now only allow manual spraying on the ground pending further studies of the herbicides' effect on humans and the environment.

A U.S. manufacturer, Eli Lilly Co., dealt U.S. plans a setback in May when it refused to sell a potent herbicide to Washington for aerial spraying in Peru. But the Americans are searching for other herbicide manufacturers who might be willing to sell the deadly chemicals.

Environmentalists had complained that the herbicide never had been tested on populated areas that it could contaminate farm products, kill legitimate crops and filter into water supplies.

To show that the real threat to ecology comes from drug traffickers, U.S. diplomats are promoting scientific studies that say cocaine producers already have disrupted the fragile 5,770 square mile tropical Upper Huallaga Valley on the eastern flanks of the Andes.

One such study, by the National Agrarian University, said drug traffickers are dumping huge quantities of noxious chemicals into rivers.

The study estimated that in 1986, traffickers in a three-province region had polluted rivers with 15 million gallons of kerosene, 8.4 million gallons of sulfuric acid, 1.7 million gallons of acetone, 17,600 tons of lime, 3,520 tons of carbide and 16,000 tons of toilet paper.

Traffickers use the chemicals to extract cocaine alkaloids from the bitter coca leaf. Toilet paper is used as a filter.

"Many species of fish, amphibians, aquatic reptiles and crustaceans have already disappeared" from the region, wrote the author of the study, Buenaventura Marcelo.

Additionally, farmers have razed an estimated 1.73 million acres of wilderness to grow coca, said Marc Dourojeanni, a forestry expert and World Bank adviser.

"Coca is now grown on bare steep hillsides, provoking spectacular and violent erosion," he said in a study.

The U.S. Embassy in Lima, eager to show the massive deforestation caused by coca growers, flew a group of local journalists over the region in March. Editor Enrique Zileri wrote in his weekly magazine, Caretas, that the valley was littered with "millions of fallen trees, as if an atom bomb had exploded on the horizon."

The coca plants in the Upper Huallaga Valley, one of the most ecologically diverse areas in Peru, are the source for nearly half the world's cocaine.

The United States persuaded Peru to test aerial spraying after a $70 million program to manually uproot the plants fell short. Last year 462 laborers pulled up only 877 acres of the estimated 300,000 acres of plants in the Upper Huallaga Valley.

President Alan Garcia, who Washington praises as a drug fighter, approved testing of herbicides in the valley in 1987. U.S. and Peruvian authorities began the tests on a 2.5-acre lot there Oct. 21 to identify the most effective plant killer among six herbicides.

The herbicide manufactured by the Eli Lilly Co., known as Tebuthiuron and sold under the tradename Spike, was pronounced the most effective after tests with 30 different herbicides.

Aerial tests of Spike were to begin on a larger plot when Lilly announced it would not sell the herbicide. Jose Barsallo Burga, interior minister until May 16, said in an interview that Peru already had agreed to manual application of Spike.

The U.S. Embassy dismissed charges that Spike could be harmful, saying in a statement the herbicide causes "less damage than aspirin" in humans. Peruvian authorities nonetheless demanded further tests before aerial spraying in populated areas.

"You have to agree that aerial application is much more effective" than applying herbicide by hand, Barsallo said. "But who is to guarantee that a plant besides the coca plant is not going to be killed?"

Abnormal lightning hits west

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — With forests left under dry in many western states because of the drought, a weather pattern sits poised to produce above-normal lightning that could mean a disastrous year of wildfires.

Jack Wilson, director of the Boise Interagency Fire Center that coordinates fire fighting activities nationwide, says the situation "is going to be very, very dangerous."

In just one day last week (Thursday) west of the Mississippi, there were 54,000 lightning strikes — the main cause of western timber and grass fires, he said, although no major blazes were reported.

All indications suggest that lightning will be above normal during the drought, Wilson said, because of a weather pattern in which a high pressure area seems entrenched over most of the nation at least into mid-July.

"I really don't see much change after that," he said. He predicted the pressure area will suck in moisture from the Gulfs of Mexico and California into much of the West as far north as Montana where, given the heat, thunderstorms will build up. The result is lightning.

Last summer California had minimal fire activity until Aug. 26. Suddenly there were 12,000 lightning strikes in a week, mostly without rain, and in dry lightning one out of 10 strikes ignites a fire. Accompanied by rain, lightning starts fire in one out of 100 strikes.

California wound up its season with wildfires that burned for two months, its worst in decades. Twenty-two thousand firefighters were deployed, whole towns were threatened, and 775,000 acres burned in spots so hot the soil fused into rock.

Rainmakers won't dampen drought

When it doesn't rain, trouble pours on the nation's farm belt. The driest spring in more than half a century appears to be giving way to a drier-still summer. Already vast expanses of the nation's farmland are parched; crops are threatened everywhere.

The drought of '88 is driving up commodity prices, forcing cattle to be slaughtered, grounding river barges and creating fears of soaring inflation. The word from White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater is to expect higher food prices in 1989 when the higher crop prices work their way into the food-production chain.

An extended drought period will be especially threatening to the fragile recovery of agriculture-related businesses that have only recently emerged from a seven-year depression. Some farmers are said to face the worst of all possible worlds: They have reached limits on federal crop-support payments and owe money to the government, yet have no crops to take to market. Farm-equipment sales are suffering, and banks are showing more timidity in making loans.

Although experts are cautioning that a long, hot summer won't necessarily lead to economic disaster, the drought timing could hardly be worse for the Reagan administration. Only recently, the administration's farm policy was credited with helping farmers by emptying grain-storage bins with subsidy programs that encouraged exports. A prolonged drought, however, could spell real trouble for the Republican Party in farm-belt states in the November election.

Whether farmers and consumers blame their troubles on a severe drought or the White House, the Reagan administration isn't taking any chances and is dealing with the crisis with a flurry of activity. It has appointed an interagency group to deal with the drought and declared 1,000 counties in 21 states to be drought-disaster areas, thus making a host of disaster programs available.

Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, for example, has allowed idled farmland under the government's Conservation Reserve Program in 13 states to be used for forage crops. Government agencies also have been ordered to identify and determine by this week the adequacy of federal relief programs.

Some drought relief may not be available until the harvest period, which the administration asserts is the best time to assess crop damage. Such delay, however, puts the White House at risk of partisan attacks from Democratic lawmakers who demand immediate action.

Uncle Sam can't be a rainmaker. And farmers may not get much benefit out of a downpour of hastily conceived legislation. What the White House and Congress can and should provide in a time of severe drought is coordinated, bipartisan support.

Mistrust pervasive between leaders

By E. Michael Myers
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Long after American troops came home, the Vietnam War still rages, not in the bloody paddies and sweltering jungles of the tragedy-scarred land, but in Washington.

The combatants are the president of the United States — Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter, and Ronald Reagan — and surely either George Bush or Michael Dukakis — against the leadership of Congress.

The divisive issue is restraining the executive authority of the commander in chief to deploy the vast military and intelligence resources of superpower America, and his willingness and obligations to consult with and act on the advice of a distrustful Congress.

Lyndon Johnson's deployment of American ground, air, and naval forces in an supremely unpopular war, without the formal approval of Congress, sowed a bitter legacy in relations between the executive and legislative branches.

Over Nixon's veto, Congress enacted the War Powers Resolution of 1973 in an effort to restrict a president's ability to send troops into an undeclared, undefined, and open-ended conflict.

The law requires that once deployed, U.S. forces must be withdrawn within 60 days from a situation involving actual or imminent hostilities unless Congress authorizes an extension.

American naval and air forces are patrolling the volatile Persian Gulf, on the edge of the Iran-Iraq war, and men have died in the service.

But President Reagan has avoided the restrictions of the War Powers Resolution by unilaterally deciding that it just doesn't apply, thank you, to his Persian Gulf policy of naval escorts for oil tankers.

Congressional leaders have complained and blustered and appealed for cooperation, but Reagan has stood firm. He has sometimes called them down to the White House for consultations, but has refused to invoke the formal process of notification that triggers the resolution. And his supporters in Congress have enough clout to derail efforts in the House and Senate to trigger it, too.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia calls the current law unworkable, and wants to change it so Congress gets a guaranteed, prompt vote that would decide if U.S. forces should stay in an area of combat, whatever the president does.

Even with a new War Powers Resolution and a definite notice requirement on covert actions, presidents will seek new avenues to do as they wish to do despite the wishes of Congress. And Congress will rise in fury and consider even more restrictive legislation.

The broad consensus of American foreign policy of the Eisenhower years, resting on respect and a willingness to give an edge to the experience of a war hero, is one of the many casualties of Vietnam.

It cannot be restored and the disease of distrust cured by straitjacket legislation, but by knowledge, mutual respect, and leadership.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Third world subsidy

WASHINGTON — Jesse Jackson's advocacy of a Third World-oriented foreign policy for the United States hasn't had a sympathetic hearing from the American people. The U.S. public knows that America has nothing in common with countries such as Zimbabwe, Libya, Nicaragua or Tanzania.

Nevertheless, the U.S. government continues to take money from American taxpayers and shovel it into Third World countries hostile to the United States. One way it does this is by providing money for the World Bank to lend to such countries.

Moreover, the Reagan administration is asking Congress to take even more — $14 billion more — from American taxpayers in order to increase the resources of the World Bank.

The taxpayers of this nation should know that the World Bank isn't responsive to the United States. The Heritage Foundation recently reported that for the U.S. fiscal years 1983-1987 "all 73 loans of the World Bank Group which the U.S. has opposed, through either abstention or voting 'no,' nonetheless were approved by the Bank." The loans the U.S. disapproved of totaled $5 billion. The same pattern prevailed from 1978 to 1982.

Given this situation, it certainly isn't in the U.S. national interest to provide another $14 billion to the World Bank. The World Bank loans aren't simply unwise; they are positively harmful to the United States. The Mexican state steel industry has received World Bank loans, which result in more competition for American steel companies and their employees. Brazil also has received loans for its state steel enterprise. Loans have been made to India which will help displace private capital. Numerous loans have been made to Ethiopia, a Marxist dictatorship that wars against its own people.

The People's Republic of China has received World Bank loans for industrialization. This will enable communist China to compete more effectively against American free enterprise in the future.

For these reasons, Congress should reject the administration's request for another $14 billion contribution to the World Bank.

Soviet apology a long time in coming

By Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta

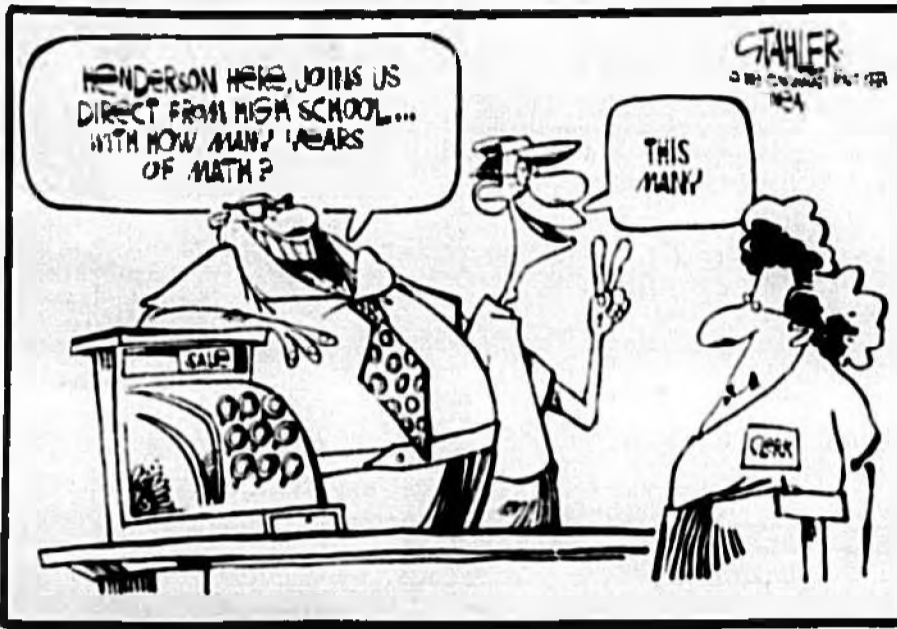

WASHINGTON — It took three years, a few summits and glasnost, but the Soviets have finally apologized for killing an American Army officer in East Germany in 1985.

The apology won't bring back Arthur D. Nicholson, but a simple "I'm sorry" from their defense minister helps the healing begin on this side of detente.

On another level, the uncharacteristic humility from the Kremlin is a clue that glasnost is making a difference.

Nicholson was killed March 24, 1985, in Ludwigslust, East Germany, while he was inspecting a Soviet tank shed. He was part of a 14-man military liaison team stationed in East Germany under an agreement with the Soviets that dates back to 1947. Americans are allowed to monitor certain Soviet military facilities in East Germany, and Soviets can do the same at U.S. facilities in West Germany.

A trigger-happy Soviet sentry either didn't know the rules or panicked. He shot Nicholson to death while the major was taking

VINCENT CARROLL

Fonda learns slowly

Sixteen years after she sat gleefully at an enemy anti-aircraft gun in Hanoi, described American soldiers as "war criminals," and charged POWs with lying about torture by the North Vietnamese, Jane Fonda has said she's sorry.

Sort of. Maybe in another 16 years she will have matured enough to finish her apology.

Although she recently told ABC's Barbara Walters that she regretted her "thoughtless and careless" actions, Fonda's main concern seems to be that she hurt and angered U.S. soldiers. After all these years, she still doesn't understand that the problem with her personal anti-war crusade was not merely its tone or emphasis, but that it relied on obnoxious falsehoods.

There were always two defensible positions regarding the Vietnam War, and Fonda shared (and apparently still shares) neither.

The first was that the war was worth fighting as an attempt to save millions of Vietnamese, Cambodians and Laotians (and possibly Thais) from a form of government far more brutal and oppressive than anything they'd experienced — a government that furthermore would be allied with or in thrall to our principal enemy, the Soviet Union.

The other respectable position held that the war was not worth fighting because Indochina was not vital to American security, the cost in lives and treasure would be huge, and that the effort simply had to fail given the history of colonialism in Vietnam and its people's resolve to control their destiny. Moreover, any such effort would brutalize U.S. soldiers unable to distinguish friend from foe and wreak horrible, little devastation on Vietnam itself.

There are many variants of these two themes, yet Fonda and a number of other anti-war activists took another tack. They viewed U.S. intervention as evil and the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong as heroic, gentle, far-seeing patriots.

In short, some anti-war activists, Fonda included, consistently suggested Ho Chi Minh led a noble cause, while in fact he was just another radical, anti-democratic nationalist thrown up by the collapse of colonialism in World War II.

Vietnam today survives, a living rebuttal of Fonda's romantic, mischievous notions about the morality of U.S. behavior. Its people are so miserable that thousands continue to flock onto boats in the South China Sea, braving storms, pirates and the prospect of months or years in refugee camps.

Even the country's leaders now admit they've bungled, that their party has sullied freedom and economic progress.

Yet Jane Fonda still doesn't get it. "We all did what we felt we had to do," she told Walters in self-absolution. By traveling to Hanoi, she argues, she and others brought back damning information that hastened the end of the war.

In fact, they mainly lent moral support to a vicious totalitarian regime high-stepping its way to expansion. Most Americans, both for and against the war, understood that Fonda had gone too far at the time. But Fonda, always a slow learner, even now requires more time.

National sex study urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Covering a subject with "illegal, illicit and embarrassing" aspects, sex research has never gotten much government support, according to June Reimisch, the director of the Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender and Reproduction.

"There's never been a good national study on human sexuality in the United States," Dr. James Curran, head of the Centers for Disease Control AIDS unit, said during the Fourth International AIDS Conference in Stockholm recently.

But Reimisch, head of the Bloomington, Ind., research institution established by Alfred Kinsey, said the time is ripe for change. Reimisch said the lack of current studies on American sexual practices and attitudes "has been a terrible barrier to setting up behavior change programs that are our only defense right now against the spread of this (AIDS) infection."

Many experts acknowledge that they must base their estimates of the spread of AIDS and the design of AIDS educational efforts on information collected by Alfred Kinsey in the 1940s.

"If we had been doing national surveys of sexuality in the major groups of people in this country since late '40s... we'd be in a much better position," Reimisch said in a telephone interview. "You can't develop behavior change programs unless you know what behaviors people are engaging in."

Reimisch said the National Institute of Mental Health has not funded sex research during the Reagan administration, or even invited researchers to submit proposals for the studies. "It's an obvious place where this kind of research should be going on," she said.

"This is a very touchy topic. It's not that they are being stubborn, but whenever they do anything like this, there are very vocal groups. They are concerned it will cause a lot of problems."

"But I have great hopes for them," said Reimisch, who is on one of the mental health institute's advisory panels.

pictures of the tank shed.

We pressed the Army for a year to give us the investigative report of the incident. Then, after they released it, we reported the details of that investigation in a series of columns in January and May. For three years, the Soviets claimed Nicholson was in restricted territory. They blamed the officer for his own death or blamed the American commanders or simply refused to say anything at all about the incident.

The Pentagon continued to press for an apology, and on May 31 at the Moscow Summit, that apology came from Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov. In a statement to Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, Yazov said, "I express my regret over the incident and I'm sorry that this occurred. This does not promote improved relations. Secretary Carlucci and I have agreed we will do all we can to prevent these kinds of incidents in the future."

Carlucci had demanded an apology in his first meeting with Yazov in March. The Pentagon released the news of the apology earlier this month.

The apology must give U.S. officials a sense of satisfaction, but it doesn't answer the lingering questions raised by the Army's own investigation.

(BU) Why did the sentry shoot Nicholson? Army intelligence analysts have theorized that the sentry may have feared for his job. Nicholson and his driver, Sgt. Jesse Schatz, were near the tank shed for 25 minutes before the sentry saw them. The sentry walked out of the woods and began firing without warning. Perhaps he had been away from his post and panicked when he saw that the Americans had arrived unnoticed.

(BU) When did Nicholson die? The Soviets did not turn over his body to the Army for more than 24 hours after the shooting. In fact, Soviet military men on the scene left Nicholson's body lie on the ground for eight hours while they interrogated Schatz. The Army investigation could not determine whether Nicholson could have been saved with prompt medical attention.

(BU) Was Nicholson in the wrong place? The U.S. Army claims the tank shed was not on the map of restricted zones where the American liaison team was not allowed to observe. For three years, the Soviets refused to budge from their story that Nicholson was in a restricted zone. Yazov's apology expresses regret for the incident but does not go so far as to admit wrong.

The tragic incident was a learning experience for at least one man. Brig. Gen. Roland Lajoie was in charge of the liaison team and was the one who arrived on the scene to free Sgt. Schatz. Lajoie had to listen as the Soviets claimed that the unarmed Nicholson charged at the sentry. Lajoie heard the abuse from a Soviet general on the scene who blamed the Americans for the incident. The Soviet general said Lajoie was personally responsible for worsening relations between the two countries. The Soviets even demanded that Lajoie sign a statement on the spot agreeing to their version of the events.

Lajoie refused to give in to the Soviet's bullying. It is a skill that will serve him well in his new job as the head of the U.S. inspection teams that will verify whether the Soviets are adhering to the intermediate-range nuclear forces treaty.

Afghan rebel attack triggers inferno; Soviet planes destroyed

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — An apparent Afghan rebel rocket attack at Kabul airport triggered an inferno and destroyed eight Soviet jetfighters in one of Moscow's largest air losses of the war in Afghanistan, a Western diplomat said.

The diplomat, who requested anonymity, also said the U.S.-backed guerrillas shot down an Afghan military transport plane bound for a rebel-besieged garrison of government troops at Khost near the Pakistan border, killing or injuring at least 30 soldiers, mostly Afghans.

The blaze at the Afghan capital's airport erupted early Friday as the result of explosions, the diplomat said.

Burning out of control for hours and forcing a halt in air traffic, the inferno destroyed eight Soviet SU-25 fighter planes parked at the airport — "one of the largest Soviet air losses of the war," said the diplomat Sunday.

He said incoming guerrilla rockets may have struck one aircraft, causing the other planes to go up "one after the other." Secondary explosions and blue and white smoke from the fire suggested there was ammunition aboard at least one aircraft, the diplomat said.

Laos holds national elections

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Lao voters cast ballots "in a joyous and orderly manner" during the first direct national elections since communist forces seized power 13 years ago, Radio Vientiane said today.

The broadcast, monitored in Bangkok, said that nearly 1.8 million people, or about 47 percent of the population, participated in the voting Sunday for members of district-level people's councils.

"This is the first election since the formation of the Lao People's Democratic Republic and the first time the Lao people will directly elect their own representatives to administer the country," said the radio.

Reports from many localities say that the district-level election was carried out in a joyous and orderly manner throughout the country, said the broadcast.

Laos, one of the poorest nations in the world, was declared a republic on Dec. 2, 1975, seven months after communist forces seized the landlocked nation wedged between northeast Thailand and Vietnam.

Canada prepares response

OTTAWA (UPI) — External Affairs Minister Joe Clark prepared a response to Moscow's latest assault in its diplomatic war with Canada that has led to the expulsions or expulsions of 32 government representatives and threatened trade relations.

A department spokesman said Sunday Clark would reveal in an address to the House of Commons today Ottawa's retaliation for the Soviets' expulsion of Canada's top military attaché and seven other officials.

The tit-for-tat expulsions, initiated by Canada, which accused the Soviets of engaging in spying operations, has soured ties between the two nations and jeopardized future trade, especially of Canadian wheat.

The Ottawa Herald, meanwhile, reported Sunday the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa inadvertently revealed the first Canadian expulsions, which were not made public until Wednesday.

External Affairs Department spokesman Paul Fraser indicated Canada would launch a third round of expulsions after senior department officials met for several hours Saturday in an emergency session to consider their response.

Justices held top cases to closing days

High court enters last week

By Henry J. Reeske
UPI Supreme Court Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court heads into the last week of its 1987-88 term with some top cases still pending, including those concerning the death penalty for teenagers, the "Chastity Act," and the constitutionality of the independent counsel law.

With just about a week to go in one of the most unusual terms in recent years, the court must still issue some 13 opinions, many of them the most controversial.

Among those top issues pending are the constitutionality of sentencing juveniles to death, whether an act of Congress that would give religious groups money to counsel teenagers on sex and pregnancy violates the First Amendment, and whether the independent counsel law, a key factor in continuing prosecutions and investigation of top Reagan officials, is unconstitutional.

The court was hampered for half the term by being a member short as the Senate battled the White House over administration attempts to replace Justice Lewis Powell, who announced his retirement at this time last year.

After two false starts, which saw Robert Bork rejected by the Senate and Judge Douglas Ginsburg withdraw under fire, the court finally reached its full complement of nine in February when Justice Anthony Kennedy joined the bench.

As a result of having only eight justices, which can lead to a 4-4 split, the court reconsidered three cases, including two presenting controversial issues.

The court also split 4-4 to uphold a decision striking down an abortion law from Illinois that had been held over for a term, and dismissed on a legal technicality a case that dealt with the constitutionality of moment-of-silence laws.

A.E. Dick Howard, a University of Virginia law professor and former Supreme Court law clerk, said the special circumstances of the term and tradition are behind the big

Justice Anthony Kennedy
Reagan's latest appointment cases being left to the end. "The special factor was the court was one justice short for so long a time," he said.

"They may have marked time on the big issues because of it. But it seems to happen term in and term out. The big cases bunch up at the end of the term, but being one justice short doesn't help."

In the top cases pending, the court must decide:

—Whether it is unconstitutional to sentence juveniles to death — the case of William Wayne Thompson of Oklahoma, who was sent to death row for a murder he committed when he was 15 (86-6169) — Thompson vs. Oklahoma.

—Whether an act of Congress, dubbed the "Chastity Act" by detractors, that would give religious groups money to counsel teenagers on sex and pregnancy violates the First Amendment ban on entangling church and state (87-253) Hoven vs. Kendrick.

—Whether the post-Watergate Ethics in Government Act violates the Constitution's separation of powers principle by giving the judicial branch the power to appoint special prosecutors — in a case affecting the Iran-Contra investigation and other probes of Reagan administration officials (87-1279) Morrison vs. Olson.

—The liability of military contractors for injuries or deaths suffered by military service members in the line of duty (86-492) — Boyle vs. United Technologies Corp.

—Whether unions in the private sector must set up detailed procedures to refund portions of dues to non-members who object to using the fees for political lobbying (86-637) Communications Workers of America, et al. vs. Harry Beck, et al.

—Whether employers can be sued under anti-discrimination laws for subjective hiring and promotion decisions that favor whites over minorities (Watson vs. Fort Worth Bank).

—In a case that will test the limits of freedom of speech, whether protesters can be barred from picketing outside the home of a Wisconsin doctor who performs abortions (87-168) Russell Frisby, et al. vs. Sandra C. Shultz, et al.

Court ruling gives new life to those exclusive private clubs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The paradoxical result of last week's Supreme Court decision upholding a New York City law opening exclusive private clubs to women is to give new life to these turf of the century in institutions built on snobbery and class distinctions.

Let there be no doubt about it, the women that will join the clubs found in major cities across the country will do very little in the way of letting in fresh air. No housewives will be invited to join, no factory workers or women who toil in the pink-collar ghettos.

The women who will be invited to join will mostly be of the same upper class of those men already in and they will have gone to the same schools and be members of the same occupations.

They will bring in new money and lots of it in the way of membership dues and lunches and dinners and parties and room reservations, all of which have fallen off in recent years as it became unacceptable to spend money at the clubs that didn't accept women.

Instead of dying, the clubs will, despite their best efforts, be revitalized and the division between the haves and have nots will be even greater.

The clubs have been under assault for sometime by women's groups, such as the National Organization for Women, and municipal governments whose city officials found it uncomfortable to hang out at old haunts that were charged with discriminating against half the population.

New York's law, upheld by a unanimous court, was a result of those efforts.

In October 1984, the city narrowed its legal definition of a private club. The revised ordinance specified that to be a private club — and thereby exempt from anti-discrimination laws — a group cannot have more than 400 members, provide regular meal service or receive regular payment from non-members for services, such as renting rooms for parties.

That law, which covers most of the private all-male clubs, has been replicated in other cities and more are sure to follow now that the Supreme Court has given its imprimatur.

And that's good news for the clubs whether they believe it or not.

According to published accounts, the 110-year-old Cosmos Club in Washington, which recently voted to admit women, was some 300 members short of its ceiling of 2,500 and had lost such notable members as Supreme Court Justices Harry Blackmun and Antonin Scalia.

A federal personnel regulation also prohibited federal employees from taking part in meetings at facilities that have discriminatory membership policies.

The socially unacceptable nature of such club memberships also caused the court's newest member, Justice Anthony Kennedy, to resign from two California clubs that barred women.

But instead of letting nature take its course and have the dinosaurs become extinct, a new, unisex dinosaur was invented.

The arguments in the case define what is at stake. New York City argued that the "clubs provide entry into what is popularly known as the 'Old Boy Network.' The exclusion of women has greatly hampered their ability to meet with other professionals and has limited the opportunity for lateral mobility or upward advancement." Lynn Hecht Schafran of the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund said the court's decision will give women access to "organizations and clubs central to the business and civic life of the community." She said some private women's clubs may suffer because some women will choose to go "where the power is."

And there it is, power and money and elitism, poor topics for the Supreme Court and for city governments and women's groups because those few, privileged, handpicked women who pass through the portals of these clubs will surely close the door behind them.

Shuttle's trip to launch pad will be marked by ceremony

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The space shuttle Discovery's roll out to the launch pad late this week will be marked by an elaborate ceremony complete with astronauts, grandstands and spotlights, officials say.

Discovery, scheduled for blastoff late this summer on the first post-Challenger shuttle flight, was towed from its hangar into the Kennedy Space Center's Vehicle Assembly Building last Tuesday and by early Saturday, the orbiter had been bolted to its external tank and boosters.

Engineers had planned to begin an extensive "shuttle interface test" Sunday to make sure electrical and mechanical connections between the orbiter, its tank and boosters and its mobile launch platform are working properly.

But a NASA spokesman said Sunday the test had been rescheduled to begin late today. Whether the schedule change would translate into a one-day slip for roll out to the pad was not immediately known.

But whenever Discovery emerges from the assembly building for roll out, it will be bathed in high-intensity spotlight beams to provide a backdrop for a planned morale-building night-time ceremony to mark NASA's return to manned space flight, 2 1/2 years after Challenger's demise.

Earthquake jolts California

UPLAND, Calif. (UPI) — A moderate earthquake followed by two measurable aftershocks rattled a large area of Southern California, knocking out power in a hospital but causing no serious damage or injuries.

The quake struck at 8:04 a.m. Sunday and measured 4.5 on the Richter scale, said scientists at the California Institute of Technology Seismology Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif. Officials at the National Earthquake Center in Golden, Colo., logged the quake at 4.7.

The epicenter was located about 3 miles west-northwest of Upland and about 36 miles east of downtown Los Angeles, officials said.

The two measurable aftershocks struck about an hour after the quake. The first measured 3.5 on the Richter scale and was recorded at 9:10 a.m. and a second struck at 9:12 a.m., measuring 3.1. Caltech spokesman Robert Finn said.

Police examine bomb fragments after blast at Singleton home

TAMPA (UPI) — Police are examining the fragments of a homemade bomb that exploded outside the house paroled mutilator-rapee Lawrence Singleton lists as his address.

There are no suspects in the bombing which stung grass at the home belonging to Singleton's brother but injured nobody, said Debbie Carter, a spokeswoman for the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office.

Although anxious residents have protested Singleton's reported move to Tampa since he was paroled from a California jail earlier this year, Carter said Sunday deputies currently had no reason to link the blast to neighbors.

"It could have been because he's there but then again it could be (a house) picked at random," she said.

No additional patrols will be added to the neighborhood.

"We have not added anything or done anything out of the ordinary," she said.

The blast occurred Saturday about 8:45 p.m. in the suburban Forest Hills home of Walter Singleton, 50, and his wife Dana, 49. The couple was home alone in the single-family, one-story home.

Thief makes tape for police

WEST PALM BEACH (UPI) — A suspected thief who says it took him only five minutes to pick a lock and empty a house of its valuables has made a videotape showing homeowners how to prevent burglaries.

Johnny "Blue Eyes" Morgano, 41, is currently being held under maximum security in the Palm Beach County Jail, where he is awaiting trial this week on escape charges.

Police say they followed his trail for 10 years before arresting him six months ago in a Miami hospital, where he was recovering from a bullet wound in his face, which he said he received from one of his fences.

Morgano says he has no idea how many houses and hotel rooms he has burglarized, but police from West Palm Beach to Sarasota said that he may have helped them close 2,000 unsolved cases.

Southern Bell denies allegations

MIAMI (UPI) — Southern Bell has released secret testimony in which a witness charges that the telephone company manipulated its bookkeeping practices to conceal high profits. It was reported Sunday.

The company denies the charges, but its spokesman Larry Mixon told The Miami Herald that Southern Bell was releasing the critical testimony in an effort to stem growing controversy over secrecy in setting rates.

The testimony comes as the Public Service Commission, which regulates Florida's utilities, considers a proposal from Southern Bell to lower rates by $336 million over the next three years. The commission is expected to rule in September.

Consumer advocates argue that Southern Bell's proposed reduction is far too low because the company has earned such high profits. They are seeking a $1.2 billion rate savings over three years instead.

Skateboards may be outlawed

ORLANDO (UPI) — The city commission, reacting to complaints from downtown property owners, will hear public testimony Monday and give preliminary consideration to a proposal making skateboards illegal.

The ordinance would ban skateboarding from both public areas, such as streets and sidewalks, and private property unless the owner's permission was first obtained. Violators would face up to $500 in fines and 60 days in jail.

"We expect this will be a pretty emotional hearing," said Joe Mittiga, spokesman for Mayor Bill Frederick. "I think there are going to be a lot of people show up to speak for both sides."

By last week the mayor's office had received only a handful of calls about the well-publicized skateboard ban. Mittiga said the few calls that had come in were running about 2-1 against the proposal.

Even if the commission approves the proposal Monday, it would not take effect at least until passed on the routine second reading, which usually comes the following week, Mittiga said.

Computerized jetliner crash kills three

MULHOUSE, France (UPI) — The government grounded the new, computer-controlled Airbus A320 because of a crash that killed three people and injured nearly 100 others aboard a demonstration flight watched by thousands of spectators.

Officials of Air France, Airbus and the Transport Ministry began an investigation into Sunday's disaster, which threatens potential multimillion-dollar sales to American and European airlines.

"It is too early to say whether this accident puts in question the future" of the aircraft, said Robert Alzart, spokesman for Airbus Industrie, a consortium of European manufacturers based in Toulouse, France.

The downed Airbus A320 jetliner, delivered to Air France last Thursday and the target of a strike by French pilots questioning its safety, crashed and burst into flames Sunday during a demonstration flight at an air show, killing three of about 136 people aboard officials said.

Police and other officials said nearly 100 people were injured in the accident at the Mulhouse-Habsheim Airport 15 miles from the Swiss border city of Basel. About 40 people were hospitalized, three in serious condition, an Haut-Rhin province official said.

Police said none of the several thousand people watching the air show was hurt.

All flights of the A320 were suspended on orders by France's General Directorate of Civil Aviation. The ill-fated A320 was the third of its kind delivered to Air France.

Controversy surrounded the A320 even before it came into operation in France. Pilots for the domestic carrier Air Inter have been on strike for months, saying the two-man A320 crew is too small. All previous Airbus models took a crew of three.

But Air France President Jacques Friedman said the size of the crew had "nothing to do" with the accident. "The A320 is conceived to be flown by two, and it will be flown by two," he said.

Witnesses said the aircraft made a low-level pass over a runway with its flaps and landing gear down, clipped the tops of a stand of trees and plowed through woods to slam down in a clearing.

"At the end of the runway the plane didn't regain the power it needed to climb again," said Yves Ressel, organizer of a hang-gliding club who was at the airport. "The tail of the Airbus struck the tops of the trees and it crashed."

Firefighters quickly extinguished a blaze that engulfed the fuselage. But the plane's wings and cockpit roof were torn off in the crash at the airport, about 230 miles southeast of Paris, witnesses said.

Most of the passengers evacuated down emergency chutes of the twin-engine jet.

"We had just passed over the Habsheim runway when I heard the scraping of the trees beneath the fuselage," said a 25-year-old woman passenger who was unhurt.

"After that everything happened very quickly," said the passenger who identified herself only as Abide. "The airplane skidded along the ground and then suddenly stopped. We felt it was abruptly stopped, and then fire broke out in front."

The crash was a severe blow for Airbus Industrie, which has firm orders for 319 of the craft from European, U.S. and other airlines around the world. It hopes to sell more than 8,000 of them by the year 2006.

Proudly unveiled in March with an inaugural flight above the Champs-Elysees in Paris, the twin-engine Airbus A300 has a seating capacity of 180 and a range of 3,650 miles.

It is the first civilian aircraft to be entirely electronically controlled, eliminating the traditional system of cables and pulleys. Pilot handling of the craft is assisted by a computer.

Airbus jets to date have had a good safety record. Until the crash Sunday no passengers had died in an Airbus crash, an Airbus Industrie spokesman said. An Airbus A300, larger than the A320, crashed in Egypt in September on a training flight, killing all five members of the crew.

Airbus Industrie is a European consortium set up in 1970 to manage the development and manufacture of the twin-engine, large capacity, short and medium range transport aircraft.

The main partners are the French Aerospatiale, Deutsche Airbus of West Germany and British Aerospace.

Democrats wrap up work on platform

DENVER (UPI) — Democratic platform writers are confident they have produced a framework for their fall campaign that can unite the party and raise the election prospects of Michael Dukakis and Democratic candidates nationwide.

Fears of a divisive battle between supporters of Dukakis, the Massachusetts governor and prospective Democratic presidential nominee, and rival Democrat Jesse Jackson proved unfounded at a weekend meeting of the party's platform committee, which went so smoothly that the 186-member committee completed its work early and did not have to meet Sunday as planned.

"The emphasis is on direction and values," rather than specifics, said Chris Edley, issues director for the Dukakis campaign.

Jackson's supporters did lose their bid to insert planks calling for higher taxes on the rich, a freeze on defense spending, no first use of nuclear weapons by the United States and self-determination for Palestinians — but aides to the civil rights leader said they were treated fairly and had succeeded on other issues.

The more controversial Jackson amendments were opposed by Dukakis forces who argued that the governor, if elected president, should not be bound by specific budget and foreign policy positions, including those urged by Jackson during his unsuccessful bid for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Work on the platform started in earnest two weeks ago at the committee's gathering on Mackinac Island, Mich. The platform will be presented to the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta on July 19.

Amendments can be offered then, but Jackson strategists indicated no decision had been made on whether to carry their fight to the convention floor.

The self-restraint shown during the platform-writing extended even to many of the special interest groups that normally insist that the platform specifically endorse their agenda.

"The Democratic Party has matured," said former Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., Dukakis's chief strategist at the platform session. "It's a reflection of the tremendous desire of Democrats to win this election. ... These groups that in the past have cared more about getting their page into the document than they did about whether we won the election have learned that winning the election means a lot to their success in achieving the kind of goals that they seek."

Eleanor Holmes Norton, Jackson's chief representative at the platform meeting, agreed the proceedings had been a unifying exercise, and Dukakis and Jackson "moved closer together on issues that had divided them in the campaign, indicating that as we get closer and closer to November the party polls together."

In making the case that Jackson forces were successful on several issues, Norton said the document includes language wanted by Jackson to curb corporate abuse, support same-day registration and voting to encourage minority voters, urge significant increases in child care for low- and middle-income families.

Pentagon defense probe

Weinberger says he's not to blame

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says he is not to blame for the Pentagon procurement scandal but lawmakers charge that hands-off management condoned the actions of a "shadow government" controlling military purchasing.

While many details about the scandal are under court seal, the two-year investigation has unearthed evidence that consultants paid off Pentagon procurement officials in exchange for secret documents that were in turn sold to defense manufacturers.

Weinberger, defense secretary from January 1981 until November 1987, defended his stewardship on two Sunday television talk shows, saying he does not believe himself culpable for the actions that prompted the sweeping investigation.

"I don't have any basis whatever for saying I didn't do enough, and I certainly don't feel culpable," Weinberger said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"I certainly feel that everything that happened in the Defense Department was my responsibility, but I don't feel that if we have some dishonest people who committed crimes and will, if they have to go to jail, then I don't think you should taint the entire department," Weinberger said.

Weinberger also rejected fresh criticism from lawmakers Sunday that he did not hold a tight enough rein on his department — noting he often spent as many as 16 hours a day, seven days a week, on the job and, "With all of that, you cannot guarantee that there's going to be total, complete, 100 percent honesty in the chain of people, about 3 million involved."

But Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said on the NBC program, "Anything that's as extensive as that would seem to me to cause some culpability at the top."

"If you've got an individual case, one or two people, that's one thing. But when you're talking about the numbers of people that we're talking about here, I think that does reflect at the top."

"Operation Ill Wind," conducted by the FBI and the Naval Investigative Service, was revealed June 14 when 38 search warrants were executed on the offices of Pentagon officials, consultants and defense companies.

Foreman wins 10th consecutive fight

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Former heavyweight champ George Foreman won his 10th straight comeback bout Sunday night, stopping Carlos Hernandez at 1:36 of the fourth round.

Foreman, 40, started slowly but battered Hernandez early in the fourth round. Foreman, 245, pressed his 20-pound weight advantage and caught Hernandez with a left hook that hurt the smaller fighter.

Foreman came in with four straight headshots, including a left hook that wobbled Hernandez on the ropes. Hernandez spit out his mouthpiece and waved Foreman toward him.

Foreman pointed toward the floor and told referee Paul Venturi, "Give him his mouthpiece."

Venturi refused. Foreman stepped in and and landed a right-left uppercut to the head that staggered Hernandez backward. Venturi then stepped in and stopped the bout.

Colorado's Miller seeks help for temper

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Colorado basketball coach Tom Miller, accused of physical and verbal abuse by several former players, says he has sought professional counseling to help control his temper.

Athletic Director Bill Marolt said the second-year coach has been told any further incidents could lead to his dismissal.

"Everyone is entitled to one mistake," Marolt said Friday.

"Coach Miller has been put on notice so that these things will not happen in the future. His future employment is conditioned on this being eliminated."

Colorado is 16-40 record under Miller, finishing last in the Big Eight in both seasons.

The Colorado Daily, the school newspaper, reported Friday that three players — Matt Bullard, Ken Countryman and Tom Williams — said they transferred because of Miller. They related several incidents in which Miller lost his temper and "manhandled or otherwise abused players."

British Crusader takes Yacht title

LULEA, Sweden (UPI) — The British Crusader II Saturday snatched Australia's string of three straight victories with a triumph in the fourth race of the 12-meter Yachting World Championships.

Australian-built yachts had captured the top three places of the first three races, before Crusader skipper Eddie Owen celebrated his 30th birthday with the first major race triumph for the British syndicate since 1982.

Tyson, Spinks: Fighter vs. boxer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — The heavyweight championship bout between Mike Tyson and Michael Spinks tonight matches fighters with opposing styles and attitudes vying for a common goal.

"I'm a fighter. I'm not a boxer," Tyson says.

"I'm a boxer. I'm not a fighter," Spinks says. "I don't even like the word fighter."

Tyson and Spinks will battle for the undisputed title in a bout scheduled for 12 rounds at the 21,500-seat Convention Center. The fight will be the richest heavyweight title bout in history.

Both are undefeated, and the winner becomes the first undisputed heavyweight champion since Leon Spinks in 1978.

As in the ring, the fighters have different styles when dealing with the countdown to the bout.

Tyson, a puncher, puts on a macho face before fights, and says the pressure of a big bout makes him perform better. Spinks, a more cautious boxer, admits feeling trepidation, but says that does not mean he is afraid of his younger and stronger opponent.

"I just want to get it on," says Tyson, a 7-2 favorite. "The threat of losing is exciting to me. I love the excitement of a challenge with my health and title on the line."

"It psyches me up. Anyone who threatens me with losing is in trouble," Spinks says he will show up to win.

"I'm nervous as a lead on a tree but I'm going in anyway," Spinks says. "I've outgrown my days of being afraid of people. Most athletes are afraid of not performing well."

"But I've never run from anyone. I would hope my best performance is still in me. I think I have what it takes to win."

Spinks, who is 6-foot-2 1/2, weighed a career high 212 1/4 at Saturday's weigh-in. Tyson, 5-11, was 218 1/4.

Draft beginning to take shape

NEW YORK (UPI) — Little by little, Tuesday's NBA draft is taking shape.

The Los Angeles Clippers made it known upon winning last month's lottery they are taking Danny Manning of Kansas, who will be the first non-center chosen No. 1 since James Worthy went to the Los Angeles Lakers in 1982.

And Friday the Pacers, with the No. 2 choice, announced 7-foot-4 Rik Smits of Marist will be in an Indiana uniform next season.

"A player like him comes in once every 20 years," Pacers General Manager Donnie Walsh said of the native of Holland.

"You have to be deranged not to take Smits with the second pick, and there's not a whole lot to offer to get that pick."

Centers are a rare commodity in the NBA and Smits is projected as the best available.

"The key to the draft is Indiana," said Marty Blake, the league's scouting director. "Indiana's pick will solidify the draft or throw it open to multi-trades."

Barring a deal, Philadelphia picks third, New Jersey fourth, Golden State fifth, the Clippers sixth, Sacramento and Phoenix seventh.

The Charlotte Hornets and Miami Heat, joining the league next season, choose eighth and ninth respectively, and perhaps more than other clubs, need a center on which to build a foundation.

"There are really four good big players at the top of this draft after Danny Manning," said Gene Lintley, Charlotte's player personnel director. "That's (Syracuse's) Ronyl Seikaly, (Temple's) Tim Perry, Rik Smits and (Pittsburgh's) Charles Smith. The way NBA teams want size, all of them could be gone and we have to be ready for that."

Vanderbilt's Will Perdue is the other center virtually assured of going to the first round.

Among the forwards, Chris Morris of Auburn, Oklahoma's Harvey Grant, Derrick Chievous of Missouri, Pittsburgh's Jerome Lane and Mark Bryant of Seton Hall are likely first-round selections.

Guards make up most of the top players, with Rex Chapman, who bypassed his last two seasons at Kentucky, and Hersey Hawkins of Bradley, the nation's scoring champion, considered the best. Kansas State's Mitch Richmond, like Manning a complete player, also is top 10 material.

"I think it's an even draft and whenever you say it's an even draft it means there are a lot of guards and few big men," New York Knicks General Manager Al Bianchi said. "I don't know how many great players there are, but there are a lot of good players."

"There are guys who could be chosen anywhere from 10 to 30 who could be as good as the lottery picks," Walsh said.

"There's no such thing as an impact player anymore — the league is too good," Blake said.

"There are a lot of people who feel somebody out there may be better than Manning. He's gonna be a heck of a player but he's not going to turn them around."

Last year, New York picked Mark Jackson 18th, and he wound up Rookie of the Year.

Starting with the 10th selection, teams that did not trade their picks choose in reverse order of finish, with the Boston Celtics and Lakers — the teams with the best records — closing out the first round.

The Suns have two first-round picks, also selecting 14th, while Sacramento and Detroit traded their first-round choices.

The draft was reduced to three rounds as part of the league's collective bargaining agreement with the players' union.

stripped last year for refusing to fight the No. 1 contender. He maintains he is still a champion because he never lost the title in the ring.

Tyson enters the fight after a troubled training camp, which was marred by marital and managerial problems. If he performs poorly, his relationships with wife Robin Givens and manager Bill Cayton will probably be blamed.

But Tyson said he can shut out all his personal problems when he steps in the ring. He said Gus D'Amato, Tyson's legal guardian and trainer for seven years before his 1985 death, taught him to focus on boxing.

"Ever since I was 13 I was groomed to be the heavyweight champion of the world," Tyson said. "I didn't go to school, I had tutors and everything was brought in to me. I was taught to handle the pressures."

"Why should I be afraid?" He is the one who should be afraid. I'm the best fighter in the world."

Tyson and Spinks have already had careers of which to be proud. Tyson became the youngest heavyweight champion in history when he won the WBC crown at the age of 20. Spinks, a 1976 Olympic gold medal winner, stood as undisputed light heavyweight champion before moving up in weight to stop Larry Holmes in 1985. His decision victory over Holmes made him the first reigning 175-pound champ to win a heavyweight title, and is the basis for his claim as the true champion.

But Spinks' career is winding down — win or lose Monday — and he may be judged in history largely by his fight against Tyson.

"This is a test for me," he said. "I'll take my chances."

"I'm nervous as usual. But I'm not here just making a show. I come to fight. I'm not much of a talker. I never have been. I'll be

Eddie Harrison and Jody Radkewich (dark glasses) hit the road during the Orlando Sports Festival triathlon held Saturday at the Heathrow Raquet Club. Graf's stock soaring WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Steffi Graf needs just one thing to seal her status as the best women's tennis player in the world — victory over eight-time champion Martina Navratilova at Wimbledon.

The 19-year-old West German will likely move one step closer to that today, when she faces American 16-year-old Mary Joe Fernandez in the round of 16.

Last year Graf arrived at Wimbledon fresh from her first-ever Grand Slam victory, in the French Open, only to lose to Navratilova in the final. Since then, Graf has won this year's Australian and French Open titles and ousted Navratilova from the world No. 1 ranking. Nevertheless, her supremacy won't be firmly established until she beats Navratilova at Wimbledon.

Navratilova, seeded second in accordance with her world ranking despite the fact that she is looking for a record ninth Wimbledon singles title, was to play Larisa Savchenko in the fourth round. The two met a week and a half ago, when Navratilova ousted the Soviet player en route to winning a women's tournament at Eastbourne, England.

Margaret Smith Court, the Australian who was the last person to complete the Grand Slam in a single year, 1970, said she thinks Graf's time has come.

"I think on all surfaces Steffi would beat Martina eight times out of 10," she said. "In the past year, Steffi has got better and better and Martina has only got worse. It's not due to age. I played some of my best tennis when I was 31 and 32, but I believe Martina has made a big mistake in reducing her schedule and not playing as many tournaments."

"It depends on the speed of the court," she said. "But I feel Steffi will play the big points better and is more tournament sharp."

The two may get the chance to meet in the final.

Third seed Pam Shriver, seeded to meet Graf in the semifinals, is suffering from mononucleosis and by her own admission struggling. No. 4 Chris Evert, Navratilova's greatest rival over the last decade, has had an erratic season due to a foot injury that forced her to withdraw from the Italian Open and hastened her exit from the French Open.

Both were to play Monday, Shriver against 14th seed Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria and Evert against American Katrina Adams, who upset 15th seed Sylvia Hanika of West Germany in the third round.

Despite her problems this spring, Evert was cautiously optimistic about her second-week chances.

"I think I've got a chance of winning the tournament," said the 33-year-old American, who claimed the title in 1974, 1976 and 1981. "I just need to get a little quicker and hit my strokes a little more aggressively. I have to shift gears."

Wilander had to struggle to beat Zivojnovic at the French Open, and admitted the Yugoslav's game put him off his own steady style of play.

Wallace wins Michigan 400

Sets track record in taking first super speedway victory

BROOKLYN, Mich. (UPI) — Rusty Wallace overcame a fuel miscalculation midway through the race Sunday and held off pole-sitter Bill Elliott to win the NASCAR Michigan 400.

Wallace's Pontiac covered the 200 laps at Michigan International Speedway in 153:55 mph to break the race record of 153:485 set by David Pearson in 1973. Wallace finished 25-hundredths of a second ahead of Elliott.

"I've run out of gas before," Wallace said after his first super speedway victory.

"When that happened today, all I wanted to know was where I was at the time so I could plan my assault and pick off the cars I needed to make up the lost ground. I guess you could say I drove my rear end off."

Wallace, 31, of St. Louis, ran out of gas on the 128th lap when he had a 12-second lead over Terry Labonte, who was running second at the time. He regained the lead on the 172nd lap when he passed Dale

NASCAR

Earnhardt after a caution lap had bunched the field on the 166th lap.

Wallace led three times for a total of 106 laps.

"We sure didn't need those last two caution flags," said Labonte, who finished third behind Elliott. Labonte had led from the 136th through 159th lap before turning the lead over to Earnhardt after the first of the two late caution flags.

"I just wish we could have stayed green the rest of the way when I got up front," Labonte said.

Wallace leads the Winston Cup point standings after finishing in the top three in his last six Grand National starts.

Elliott, who set a qualifying record of 172.687 mph Saturday, closed in on Wallace during the final 28 laps.

"When I got close to Rusty the car just got tight," said Elliott, who had won six of the previous eight NASCAR events at MIS. "We just couldn't beat him. When I got in his draft, his car messed my car up."

Wallace said he was watching Elliott through his rearview mirror.

"I wasn't sure when Elliott was going to slow down," Wallace said. "Usually when you put on four new tires you'll run like a rocket for a while. He drove so hard to catch up to me I think he probably wore off some of his edge... plus all during that time I was driving 200 percent."

Earnhardt wound up fourth and Geoff Bodine fifth. The victory was worth $64,100 to Wallace and car owner Ray Beadle and boosted their season earnings to $418,655.

There were only four caution flags and no serious accidents. Twenty-five cars were running at the end, seven on the lead lap.

Flanagan leads Jays over Tigers

United Press International
Toronto's Mike Flanagan didn't mind surrendering a few meaningless hits Sunday afternoon.

"My track record along the way has been better control," said Flanagan, 7-5, who captured his 150th lifetime victory. The 6-foot left-hander scattered eight hits over eight-plus innings and walked none in leading Toronto to a 4-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

"You may give up a few more hits that way but I'd rather take my chances on defense with people like (two-time Gold Glove shortstop) Tony Fernandez out there," Flanagan said.

Flanagan had allowed six hits, all singles, entering the ninth inning, but failed to notch his first complete game as a Blue Jay. Luis Salazar led off the ninth with a single and Alan Trammell doubled. Tom Henke relieved and yielded an RBI groundout to Dave Bergman en route to his 15th save.

"I'm starting to get into a bit of a groove," Henke said. "I've got better velocity and I'm keeping my changeup down. But that's just a matter of getting in more innings."

Detroit starter Jeff Robinson, 8-3, had his seven-game winning streak snapped. He lasted 5 2-3 innings, walking five and striking out seven.

"He didn't have any control today at all," Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson said. "I don't care how many times you send a guy out to the mound, occasionally he's going to have bad stuff."

Toronto went ahead in the first inning when Lloyd Moseby doubled, advanced to third on Rance Mulliniks groundout, and scored on Fred McGriff's two-out single.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

The Blue Jays took two out of three from the first-place Tigers, who are one game ahead of the New York Yankees in the American League East.

Yankees 4, Indians 3
At New York, Claudell Washington beat out an infield single to score pinch-runner Rickey Henderson with two outs in the ninth inning to spark the Yankees. Dave Righetti got two outs in the ninth to raise his record to 3-0. Bud Black fell to 3-2.

Red Sox 10, Orioles 3
At Boston, Mike Greenwell and Jim Rice smashed two-out, two-run homers in the first inning and Mike Smithson pitched his first complete game since September 1986 to help whip the Orioles. Smithson, 3-2, making his fifth start for Boston this season, allowed just four hits. Rookie Oswaldo Peraza fell to 1-3.

Mariners 8, Royals 0
At Seattle, Billy Swift hurled a six-hitter and Rey Quinones hit two home runs to lead the Mariners. Swift, 6-4, walked four and struck out two in his first shutout and fifth complete game this season. The Royals have scored just 20 runs in the 10 games that Charlie Leibrandt, 3-10, has lost this season.

Angels 4, Brewers 3
At Anaheim, Calif., Willie Fraser and Bryan Harvey combined on a five-hitter and Dick Schofield cracked a two-run homer to key a three-run fifth inning for the Angels. Fraser, 5-7, yielded four hits over seven innings and Harvey earned his seventh save of the season. Ted Figueroa fell to 6-5.

Rickey Henderson takes his lead. Henderson scored the winning run on Claudell Washington's infield single in the Yankees' 4-3 victory over Cleveland on Sunday.

Twins 11-5, A's 0-0.

At Oakland, Calif. (UPI) — Frank Viola became the first American League pitcher to reach 12 wins to help the Twins sweep a double-header. Viola, 12-2, helped pull Minnesota within four games of first-place Oakland in the AL West as Keith Atherton picked up his third save. Dave Stewart dropped to 10-6.

In the opener, Charlie Lea and Juan Berenguer combined on a six-hitter in an 11-0 Minnesota rout. Lea, 4-3, extended his scoreless-inning streak to 13 and Berenguer earned his first save. Curt Young fell to 5-5.

White Sox 7, Rangers 5
At Arlington, Texas, Daryl Boston hit his first career grand slam to spark the White Sox. Chicago starter Jack McDowell, 3-6, ended a personal four-game losing streak. Bobby Thigpen worked two innings to record his 14th save. Jeff Russell, 7-1, had won all of his starts coming into the game.

Torrid weekend puts Pirates back in race

United Press International
Last week, the Pirates were shut out twice in New York to fall 7 1-2 games behind the first-place Mets in the National League East. However, a torrid weekend has put Pittsburgh in position to close within a game and a half of first by Wednesday night.

Sid Bream lifted a sacrifice fly and Mike LaValliere hit a two-run double in the 10th inning Sunday to help Pittsburgh defeat the Expos 3-0 and complete a sweep of their four-game series in Montreal.

The Pirates swept a four-game series on the road for the first time since July 1983 against San Diego. The last time Pittsburgh had swept as much as a four-game series anywhere was July 1984, against San Francisco in a five-game set at home.

Meanwhile, the Chicago Cubs were busy taking three out of four from New York, helping the Pirates pick up three games on the Mets over the weekend to pull within 4 1-2 games of the top. New York opens a three-game series in Pittsburgh Monday night and a sweep would draw the Pirates within 1 1-2 games of first.

"That's just another example of how much this team has improved," Leyland said about his team bouncing back from losing two of three games in New York last week. "When you play hard and pitch well you've got a chance. This series we caught a break (Expos All-Star outfielder) Tim Lincecum was injured and he missed three games."

Jose Lind led off the Pirate 10th against Tim Burke, 2-2, by reaching second when shortstop Luis Rivera threw wildly past first for an error. Lind moved to third on Andy Van Slyke's groundout. After Bobby Bonilla was intentionally walked and Mike Diaz walked to load the bases, Bream lifted a sacrifice fly to center to score Lind.

LaValliere then doubled to right to make the score 3-0 and help make a winner of Jeff Robinson, 5-2.

The game featured a pitching duel between starters Doug Drabek of Pittsburgh and Pascual Perez. Drabek lasted eight innings, allowing two hits, walking one and striking out six. The Expos managed just three hits in all.

"We really made Drabek look good today," Expos Manager Buck Rodgers said. "We're just not scoring any runs. It's frustrating, especially when you see how well a guy like Pascual pitched. We wasted a real good performance."

Perez worked eight innings, yielding six hits, with three walks and three strikeouts. He was making his second start since going on the disabled list May 7 with a broken finger.

Elsewhere in the NL, Chicago stopped New York 6-3, San Diego nipped Atlanta 2-1, Houston blanked San Francisco 6-0, Los Angeles outscored Cincinnati 9-6 and Philadelphia edged St. Louis 7-5 in 10 innings.

In the American League, it was: Boston 10, Baltimore 1;

New York 4, Cleveland 3; Toronto 4, Detroit 1; Seattle 8, Kansas City 0; California 4, Milwaukee 2; and Chicago 7, Texas 5. Also, Minnesota swept a doubleheader from Oakland, 11-0 and 5-0.

Cubs 6, Mets 3
At Chicago, rookie Jeff Pico pitched a six-hitter and Shawn Dunston capped a six-run outburst in the sixth with a two-run single to spark the Cubs. Pico, 3-2, walked one and struck out two in pitching his second complete game. Loser Ron Darling, 8-5, allowed six runs on 10 hits over six innings.

Padres 2, Braves 1
At Atlanta, Andy Hawkins combined with Mark Davis on a five-hitter, and Dickie Thon drove in one run and scored another for the Padres. Hawkins, 7-6, gave up five hits over 7 1-3 innings. He walked one and struck out five. Davis went 1-2-3 hitless in his 13th save. Zane Smith, 3-5, was the loser.

Astros 6, Giants 0
At Houston, Bill Doran drove in three runs to support the combined seven-hit pitching of Jim Deshaies and Larry Andersen, pacing the Astros. Deshaies, 5-5, allowed five hits over 6 1-3 innings. Andersen relieved 2 1-3 innings of two-hit relief with four strikeouts. Mike LaCoss, 5-6, lasted just 1 2-3 innings.

Dodgers 9, Reds 6
At Cincinnati, Steve Sax stroked a three-run double in the ninth to give the Dodgers a three-game sweep. Barry Larkin's three-run homer in the eighth had put Cincinnati up 6-5. Tim Belcher improved to 5-4 and Brian Holton earned his first save. John Franco slipped to 1-5 as the Reds lost their fifth straight.

Phillies 7, Cardinals 5
At St. Louis, Phil Bradley singled home one run and Bob Dernier squeezed home another in the 10th to lead Philadelphia. Loser Larry McWilliams, 4-3, yielded consecutive singles to Lance Parrish and Chris James prior to Bradley's hit. Steve Bedrosian improved to 1-2 and Bruce Ruffin notched his first save.

BEAT THE HEAT
ST. LOUIS — In the recent three-game series between the St. Louis Cardinals and Philadelphia Phillies at Busch Stadium, the on-field temperature registered 130 degrees.

However, Ozzie Smith and Vince Coleman found their own solution to beat the heat. Under the direction of nutritionist Mackie Shiltstone, Smith and Coleman drank a special liquid designed to re-hydrate and put nutrients back into the system.

Coleman says it helps prevent cramps and provides help for the body's natural defense against heat.

The liquid may be fine for them, but most of the players opted for using towels soaked in ammonia water or returning to the air-conditioned locker room between innings.

Billy's gone...but George is still around

By RICHARD L. SMOOK
UPI Sports Writer

Well, we don't have Billy Martin to kick around any more. But, thankfully, we've still got George Steinbrenner.

If any single factor will keep the Yankees from winning the American League East it is the "creative tension" Steinbrenner puts his team through. It creates just enough tension in the New York clubhouse to keep the Yankees from winning.

Don't be misled by a temporary calm marking the return of Lou Piniella. Remember how grueling things got for New York last August and September? What makes you think it's going to be any different this time?

Piniella deserves better. But by going back into the trenches — in effect, announcing this is where he'd like to be — perhaps Lou is better off in the long run. Especially after the inevitable firing later this season or next....

Anybody notice how poorly the Mariners have done since canning Dick Williams?

That nine-game losing streak the club went on shortly after the firing spoke volumes. Mainly, it said that maybe Dick Williams wasn't doing such a bad job with the club. After all, he had it near .500.

SCOUTING REPORT

It also spoke volumes about the character on the club. They had a chance to step forward but quietly declined. Following all the whining about Williams, there is nothing but silence now....

Interesting note the other day about how much lower home run output is this season when compared with last.

This season's AL club leader might only barely surpass the total hit in 1987 by Seattle, whose 161 was worst in the league.

Remember all the screams last year about the rabbit in the baseball? How come nobody's calling for an autopsy this season to find out how the bunny died?...

Who are the Kansas City Royals punishing, Dan Quisenberry or themselves? Here's a guy signed to a lifetime $12 million contract. The way the club is using him it's costing them about $500,000 per pitch.

The underarming reliever didn't put on a mask and take a gun up to the front office when he signed that contract. The Royals offered it to him.

Quisenberry understandably wants out of the situation. If they won't use him, which quite logically Kansas City won't because of a minor flaw (he can't get anybody out), then it only makes sense to cut him and give him a chance to work elsewhere.

But Kansas City reasons it doesn't want him to pitch somewhere else on the Royals' money. Especially for another AL team. (Is the NL still around?)

So, in effect, the Royals punish themselves by going with a 23-man roster and by keeping a pitcher they only use in lost causes. While Quisenberry also suffers by hanging around — even those two times a month when he picks up a fabulous paycheck he feels he isn't earning....

Every day the Los Angeles Dodgers don't put more ground between themselves and the upstate rival Giants is another day San Francisco gains to make a move in the NL West.

General Manager Al Rosen did an excellent job patchworking a starting rotation for the second half of the 1987 season and now it's time for him to go to work again.

Rick Reuschel, a man who's almost as big and nearly as old as the Statue of Liberty for goodness sakes, leads the staff with 10 victories. And no other starter is even close.

Radkewichs excel in triathlon event

By Chris Pister
Herald Sports Editor

HEATHROW — The Radkewichs, Central Florida's first family of triathlon, were at it again Saturday at the Heathrow Racquet Club. The event was the Orlando Sports Festival triathlon, and Radkewich was once again the dominant name.

Jody Radkewich blazed to first place in the 12-year-old girls division, posting a time faster than most boys in the competition which consists of swimming, cycling and road running.

Katy Radkewich finished second in the competition among younger girls as she competed in the 8-year-old age group.

Jody and Katy are the younger sisters of Nick Radkewich, one of the top young triathletes in the nation. Nick will be a senior at Lyman High School this coming school year.

In the 11 and over girls competition on Saturday, Jody Radkewich finished with a time of 31:15 which was over one minute faster than the winning time in the three other age divisions. The next-fastest time among girls 11-14 was a 32:39 by Laura Rebeck in the 13-year-old age group.

Katy Radkewich, competing in an age group which covered a shorter distance than the older girls, finished with a time of 18:01 which was second by only five seconds to Jennifer Boscart who finished in 17:56.

To gauge just how good Jody Radkewich's time was, the top time among boys age 11-14 was a 31:04 by 14-year-old Eddie Harrison. Radkewich's time was better than all boys competitors except Harrison.

WEIGHTLIFTING
Seminole County lifters had a good day Saturday in the weightlifting competition at Lake Mary High School.

In the men's open division, Longwood's Ivan Carbia added another gold medal to his long list of first places as he won the 132-pound class.

The teenage girls winner was Vicki Futch of Longwood, who lifted on the Lake Mary boys team this past season.

In the 13-18 boys age group, Longwood's Chris Bravo won the 181 pound class while Longwood's Shane Hancock was first in the 148 pound division of the 17-19 age group.

WRESTLING
Lake Mary High coach Doug Peters showed he knows what he's teaching as he won the 149 weight class in the men's open division held at Rollins College.

Expos' Youmans suspended

NEW YORK (UPI) — Montreal Expos pitcher Floyd Youmans has been suspended indefinitely for failure to comply with his drug-testing program, the Office of the Commissioner announced Saturday.

Youmans, who underwent a rehabilitation program in October, has been subject to periodic drug testing since as part of the after-care process.

The suspension is indefinite pending further evaluation and will take place immediately, a spokesman for the commissioner said.

A statement released by the Expos said: "While extremely disappointed with the situation, the Expos will continue to support Youmans and to offer assistance in whatever areas are required."

The Expos recalled right-hander Brian Holman to take the place of Youmans on the roster. Youmans was scheduled to start Saturday night's game against Pittsburgh. Holman will make his major-league debut in Youmans' place.

Youmans, a 24-year-old right-hander who went to high school with the Mets' Dwight Gooden in Tampa, is 3-6 this year with a 3.2 ERA. He has pitched 84 innings, allowing 64 hits, walking 41 and striking out 54.

In his three seasons, Youmans has at times been brilliant with a powerful fastball.

Postlewait outlasts Sheehan

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI) — Sidelined recently by an injured back, Kathy Postlewait prepared for the $500,000 LPGA McDonald's Championship by playing the Du Pont Country Club course in her mind.

Those mental preparations paid off in the form of a $75,000 winner's check Sunday as Postlewait shot a 1-under-par 70 to win the tournament by one stroke over Patty Sheehan.

"Since I have not been able to play physically, I've been playing mentally," Postlewait said. "While I've been working out in the fitness trailer, I would play golf holes in my head. Last week, I was playing this week's tournament in my head."

"I played the golf course before I teed it up even though I didn't physically tee it up." Taking advantage of a birdie on the 11th hole and overcoming a disastrous tee shot on the 18th, Postlewait finished with a 72-hole total of 8-under 276 to post her third victory in a 15-year career.

It was a win, however, that she never envisioned, particularly because of her injury. "If you haven't been able to practice or hit balls for five weeks, how can you expect to hit the ball good in a tournament?" she said. "When I did misfire, I just chased it and hit it again."

Postlewait felt something go in her back five weeks ago when she was making a shot in the Mazda LPGA Championship. She managed to play three rounds in the Rochester International two weeks ago but had to withdraw because of the pain.

All the while, she had her sights set on Wilmington. "Winning this golf tournament was never in my stars," she said. "But I was getting my physical therapy for the past few weeks to get to this tournament."

Postlewait showed no ill effects on the course, making three straight birdies on the front nine of the final round to the Sheehan.

Patty Sheehan reacts to a chip shot she didn't like. Sheehan led most of the way, but ended up finishing second to Kathy Postlewait in the LPGA McDonald's Championship.

who had held a two-shot advantage after 54 holes. Postlewait then sank a 15-foot putt for a birdie on the 11th hole and took the lead as Sheehan 2-putted from six feet for a bogey.

Postlewait was in trouble on the par-4 18th hole when her tee shot went in a creek and she 2-putted from 25 feet for a bogey. Sheehan could have forced a playoff but she missed a 10-foot putt for par and had to settle for a round of 3-over 74, a 72-hole total of 7-under 277 and a second-place check of $46,250.

"I feel like I might have stolen this one a little bit," Postlewait said. "I played very well and I also felt that Patty could have played better." Dottie Moehring, Jan Stephenson and Nancy Lopez finished in a tie for third at 6-under 278.

Nelson takes Atlanta Classic

MARIETTA, Ga. (UPI) — Atlanta Golf Classic winner Larry Nelson was thinking survival — not PGA Tour record.

The two-time PGA champ and former U.S. Open winner went into Sunday's final round of the $700,000 Classic with a realistic chance for going farther under par than any Tour golfer had gone before in a 72-hole tournament.

But after early troubles quickly erased that bid, Nelson said he was just trying to "recapture my game" when he hung on down the stretch to win the Classic by a single shot.

Nelson saw a four-throw lead turn into a one-throw deficit (behind Paul Azinger) before winning the Classic for the second time in eight years by making a pressure-packed birdie putt on the final hole.

"I figured if I could hold it long enough and no one blew by me, I could pull it together," said Nelson, who had to overcome an early double bogey that was almost his undoing before nipping Chip Beck by 1 and Azinger by 2.

"You just shake your head and say 'what happened?'" said Nelson, who had a 1-over-par 73 Sunday for a 20-under 268 after going 63-66-66 the first three rounds on the course where he has lived for nearly a decade.

"Sometimes, you don't know whether it's mechanical or mental. I knew scores were going to be higher (Sunday) because the wind was swirling. It was difficult to pick a club."

"I felt I had to birdie 14 and 18 to win after looking at the scoreboard when I came off 13," the 40-year-old veteran said. "I didn't care what anybody else was doing. I was just trying to recapture my game."

Nelson, who earned $126,000, wound up with a 1-over-par 73 and a total of 20-under 268 after going 63-66-66 the first three rounds. Beck, with a closing 66 was at 269 and Azinger, who fell out of contention with a double bogey at No. 15, closed with an eagle-3 for a 71-270.

"The way I won it, I might have learned more than if I had won it by four or six," Nelson said. "I didn't know exactly what was wrong, but I felt if I held in there long enough, I'd figure it out."

Sunday was the 10th time Nelson has won during his 15 years on the Tour. He has now earned $256,906 this year and $2,430,569 during his pro golf career.

"It's been eight years since the last time I won here," Nelson said.

Continued from 7A there to do whatever I can to win.

Spunks' cautious attitude puzzles Tyson. "In my camp we don't 'try,' we do or we die," Tyson said. "And we're going to do."

"I'm not a predictor, but it won't go the distance. My objective is to knock him out in spectacular fashion."

The fighters' purses will be the richest in boxing history. Closed circuit coordinator Shelly Finkel said Tyson will earn at least $22 million for the fight. Spinks will receive $13.5 million.

Market active, prices dip

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened lower today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which rose 38.94 last week, was down 0.76 to 2136.20 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 406,239 among the 982 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 19,580,000 shares.

The stock market last week celebrated a dramatic surge in the value of the dollar and sent the Dow to a new post-collapse closing high.

The Dow, which slipped 5.33 Friday, closed the week at 2142.06. For the week, however, the index rose 38.94 points, or 1.9 percent.

On Wednesday, accompanied by a sharp advance in the dollar, stock prices soared, adding 43 points to the Dow and pushing the index to 2152.20, which surpassed the previous post-collapse closing high of 2131.40, set June 15.

Dollar sharply higher; gold, silver open down

By United Press International

The dollar was sharply higher today in active trading on major world money markets, rising to a 6-month high in Tokyo and climbing to an 8-month high in Europe. The price of gold slipped.

In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar zoomed past the 131-yen level in heavy buying in Tokyo, closing at 131.70 yen, up 2.00 yen from 129.70 yen on Friday.

Monday's close was the highest exchange rate for the dollar in Japan since Dec. 10, 1987, when the dollar closed at 132.18 yen.

Dealers said the dollar remained a heavy buying favorite with no signs of central bank intervention to stem the dollar's hike.

The dollar was actively purchased by trust banks and securities firms, they said. Some speculative sources, mainly foreign exchange banks, sold the dollar for profit-taking, they said.

The dollar's rise pushed prices downward on the Tokyo Stock Exchange as it raised speculation that the central bank may tighten its money policy to prevent possible inflation, brokers said.

In Europe, the dollar began the day more than 1 percent higher in Frankfurt and Zurich and was trading at its highest level in those foreign cities since October.

In Frankfurt, the dollar opened 1.827 West German marks, up from 1.8035 and began the day in Zurich at 1.5125 Swiss francs, up from 1.4925.

The dollar began trading in Paris at 6.1495 French francs, up from 6.042 in Brussels at 38.40 Belgian francs, up from 37.93 and in Milan at 1,355.25 lire, up from 1,331.60 on Friday.

Payments deficit scores Brits

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's balance of payments deficit ballooned in May to $2.04 billion, the highest monthly deficit in the nation's history, the government announced Monday.

The news was worse than expected and sent both the British pound and the London stock market plunging.

The 100-share index fell 33 points to 1838 and the pound fell to $1.6985, down more than 2.5 cents on Friday's close.

The "visible" trade deficit of such things as manufactured goods was $2.89 billion, but was somewhat offset by a surplus of "invisibles" — such things as services — of $850 million.

The current account of the balance of payments in April was $892 million in deficit.

Britain's exports fell in May and imports increased to make the month's deficit figure more than double.

Citrus Shipments

WINTER HAVEN (UPI) — Today's citrus shipments reported by the Division of Fruit and Vegetable Inspection. Shipping total in 4-5th bushel cartons and cannery totals in 1.3-5th bushel boxes:

Rail — 4,320 late oranges.

Export — 2,585 grapefruit, 5,622 late oranges.

Cannery — 1,922 grapefruit, 248,520 late oranges.

Shipping total — 12,527.

...Nurses

It awards an associate in science degree and qualifies a graduate to apply for a state license as an RN. The school already had a one-year licensed practical nurse (LPN) program and a transition program for those continuing their education.

Ketsenbroek asked for $160,000 for the RN program. However, the hospitals — Central Florida Regional, South Seminole Community, Florida Hospital Altamonte, and West Lake — decided to boost that figure by $50,000 so more students could be included. Contributions were based on the number of beds in each hospital. Final approval was received in April and classes started May 9.

Education is not the sole issue being considered to increase the supply of nurses. The quality of work life is also being addressed.

To aid working mothers, Central Florida Regional Hospital pays a percentage of nurses' child care costs. "Through scholarship incentives and child care programs we hope to keep our nurses happy so they will want to stay with us," said Barbara Farr, the hospital's new director of nursing.

Farr has initiated a program called the flexy-pool to reduce the hospital's reliance on outside nursing agencies. In the program, nurses are scheduled to fill gaps in needed areas that were formerly filled through nursing agencies. Participating nurses are paid at a higher rate than normal, but receive no benefits for work performed in the pool.

Kay Bartholomew, spokeswoman for CFRH, said the flexy-pool serves the hospital in two ways: it offers better care for patients because regular staff nurses are more familiar with procedures and it reduces the hospital's cost for outside nursing help.

South Seminole Community Hospital has formed a Nurse Practice Committee to give nurses a forum to voice their concerns. Mary Jack, administrative director for nursing services at the hospital, said the committee was formed nearly three years ago and includes representatives from each area of nursing. Jack calls it participatory management.

Nurses on the committee bring both areas of concern and try to address those concerns.

Florida Hospitals offer a pay incentive to their critical care nurses. The time-off option allows nurses to work two 12-hour weekend shifts and receive base pay plus 60 percent, which allows them to earn nearly the same pay as if they had worked a 40-hour week. Kermack said Florida Hospital nurses also have the option of working four 8-hour night shifts per week, 11 p.m. to 7 a.m., for which they receive base pay plus 25 percent, or a full week's pay.

South Seminole Community Hospital has a successful program to attract nurses who have stopped practicing. Jack said the hospital obtained from the state Board of Nursing a list of nurses whose licenses were inactive. The nurses were contacted, 11 signed up, and five were later hired.

Jo Manion, administrator for the Center for the Promotion of Nursing, cautions against exaggerating the number of nurses who have left the profession. "Nurses are not leaving the profession in the great numbers reported," she said. "More than 80 percent of all RNs work in nursing. The majority of those not working are over 50 years old and unlikely to pursue employment in hospitals."

She acknowledges that today more opportunities exist for nurses, so there is more competition for their services. They're being sought by industry, business and private health programs, besides hospitals, she said.

There seems to be no simple solution to the nursing shortage problem. Educators and health providers agree that the shortage is serious and shows every sign of worsening. They also agree that higher salaries will have to be part of the solution, and that an educational program aimed at elementary and high school students should be launched to attract them to the profession.

...Accidents

The power company truck was parked in the eastbound lane and had several red traffic cones placed in the front and rear of the vehicle, according to the police report.

The police report lists improper parking obstructing traffic and careless driving as contributing causes to the accident.

Redding was pronounced dead at the scene by responding fire department rescue units and was taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital.

Wells was eastbound on State Road 46 when he tried to turn north on Brisson Avenue and his vehicle was struck by a car driven by Brett Allen Morrison, 21, of Winter Springs.

Wells was pronounced dead at Central Florida Regional Hospital. Morrison and two passengers in his car were treated at the scene for minor injuries.

The Florida Highway Patrol said today that charges are pending completion of the accident investigation.

Funerals bring out unforgiveness in families

DEAR ABBY: I can certainly relate to that woman who had a falling out with her brother. She hadn't spoken to him for seven years, and when he died, she didn't go to his funeral. She said, "I'm no hypocrite."

Three years ago, I learned that my brother had stolen from our elderly parents. When I confronted him with the evidence, he asked me to lie to cover up for him. I refused. That's when he hit me in the temple with a full can of beer, beat me up, took all my cash and left.

The day he did that to me, my love for him died. As far as I am concerned, I no longer have a brother, and if he were to drop dead tomorrow, I wouldn't attend his funeral.

Abby, you said "Funerals are for the living. The deceased will not know who was there, but the grieving family will. Perhaps if that woman had attended her brother's funeral and buried her grievances, it might have made her feel better."

I rarely disagree with you, but this time you were wrong. Some grievances can never be buried.

NO HYPOCRITE NO. 2

DEAR ABBY: Regarding your recent letter from the woman who didn't attend her brother's funeral because she wasn't a hypocrite, I think your answer was way off.

A funeral may well be for the living, but the living should apply first to the immediate family of the deceased, i.e. wife, husband, children—not brothers and sisters.

My father had a brother who ignored him in his later years despite repeated attempts by my father to initiate contact. This hurt my father deeply, but there was no falling out—they just never spoke. Then my uncle showed up at my father's funeral.

His presence upset my mother and me because we both knew how much one short visit from this brother would have meant to my father when he was alive.

You'll probably say that we shouldn't carry a grudge, and maybe my uncle was trying to make up for what he had failed to do before, but nothing could make up for the hurt he caused my father in his final years.

Bitter? You'd better believe I'm bitter.

TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE

DEAR ABBY: Speaking of hypocrites and funerals, when my wonderful mother died at 81, many of her friends came to her funeral. Did it give me pleasure to see such a turnout? No, it didn't.

Where were all these "friends" when my poor mother lay partially paralyzed in a nursing home for six years? Mother would have so enjoyed a visit from these so-called friends, but none of them came.

When I saw them "paying their last respects" at my mother's funeral, I wanted to say: "It's too late now. Where were you when she needed you?"

PESHE'S DAUGHTER

DEAR ABBY: The letter written by "Perplexed," who received an oil painting as a wedding gift from a co-worker, could have been written by me some 20 years ago.

When I moved into a new home, a friend presented me with a painting as a housewarming gift and said he hoped I would enjoy it. Like "Perplexed," I did not know what to do with it as it was "not to our liking." It sat on the floor, leaning against the wall in my living room for weeks. I would look at it daily and ponder its fate.

Then I remembered what my parents (rest their souls) said to me as I was growing up: "Accept with graciousness that which is presented to you, be it a reward or a gift, being mindful of the feelings of the giver." Today that painting hangs with pride in my living room, surrounded by some other paintings purchased over the years that have less meaning to me than the gift which was given.

The "artist"? You should see the grin on his face when he comes to visit! There is no price on that painting, but I treasure it more than the others. Tell "Perplexed" that there are many things in life that are "not to our liking," but we can make a difference in someone else's life by showing a bit of compassion. If they don't know what to do with their painting, send it to me and I'll find a place for it. Thank you, dear lady, and God bless.

GRANT MASTERS, CLEARWATER, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend and I broke up four months ago and I am having a hard time getting over him. He has a new girlfriend now, but he still calls me to talk because he considers me a friend. I really don't know what he wants from me.

Abby, I find it very hard to talk to him because I still care for him and it tears me up to hear him talk about his new love.

I would like to tell him to please quit calling me, but I'm afraid it would be a mistake. I really don't know how to handle this. Please help me.

ACHING HEART

DEAR ACHING: The next time he calls you, cut the conversation short. And do it each time he calls you. Make it plain that you have no time to talk to him. Although it's not as honest as coming right out and telling him it's too painful to listen to him talk about his new love, it's your right to avoid pain whenever possible. Good luck.

Courses range from investment to assertiveness

SANFORD — The Leisure Time/Lifelong Learning Program at Seminole Community College will offer the following classes during the week of July 4.

Assertiveness Training

This course is designed to help participants identify, learn and practice assertive techniques, examine verbal/non-verbal/body language communication, recognize and more effectively handle manipulation by others and deal with anxiety that frequently blocks assertive behavior. Differences between passive, aggressive and assertive personalities will be discussed at length. Saturdays from July 9-30, 9 a.m. to noon. Hunt Club location in Altamonte Springs, $5 fee.

Dog Obedience Training and Behavior Modification

This basic class will show the dog owner to teach his animal to heel, lead and sit, sit and stay, down and stay, recall, respect the word "No," and other basic skills. Dogs must be three months old or older and on a training collar and a leash at all times. Wednesdays from July 6 to Aug. 17, 7-8 p.m., Hunt Club location in Altamonte Springs, $30 fee.

Fundamentals of Investments

Learn about the wide variety of investments available to help you meet your financial goals for increased income, growth and tax savings in investments. Mondays from July 11 to Aug. 1, 7-9 p.m., main campus, $5 fee.

Spanish I

This course is designed to develop the ability to understand, read and speak fundamental Spanish dealing with everyday situations. Participants will be able to converse in areas such as food, time, weather and travel. Tuesdays from July 5 to Aug. 23, 7-10 p.m., Altamonte Springs, $5 fee.

For more information, call 323-1450 or 843-7001, ext. 303, and ask for Claudette.

Slide shows aside, how memorable was your little jaunt?

Your friends are back from their vacation! They invite you over, take their 20-year-old slide projector out of its Christmas box, and sit you down for two hours of humdrum.

"Here I am making the travel arrangements... Here we are at Yellowstone, feeding the bears... And there's Martha buying an 'Old Faithful' water pic..."

We at the Sanford Herald are looking for the best and worst vacation experience, not the run-of-the-mill, suitable-for-postcard outing.

Perhaps, by chance, you got in on a diving expedition in the Bahamas that discovered a booty downed in a Spanish galleon. Or you may have crossed paths with an intriguing but misanthropic mountain man who rarely sees other humans.

On the other hand, your hotel in Dublin might have been the scene of the worst high-rise fire in Ireland's history. Or despite Carl Maldin's warnings, you were ripped off at La Guardia Airport, had no traveler's checks and were left in a real bind.

If you've been retelling the story of your vacation throughout the years, it's probably worth repeating in our paper. In celebration of summer, the favorite time for getaways, we invite our readers to tell us about "My Believe-It-Or-Not Vacation."

In entering our contest, follow these instructions: Type or print clearly your name, street address, city and daytime phone number at the top of your entry. Then write your vacation experience, good or bad, without embellishing beyond the truth. There is no length limit, but the Herald reserves the right to edit as necessary. Mail to Vacation, c/o The People Editor, P.O. Box 1857, Sanford, FL 32771. Deadline for entries is noon on Monday, Aug. 1.

The top winners in the categories of best and worst vacations will have their experiences featured in the Aug. 14 edition of the Herald. Photographs should not be mailed, but winners will be asked permission to reprint any available photos from their vacation.

T-shirts are hot items this summer

By Helen Burgral
Newspaper Enterprise Association

They rarely appear on fashion runways, and when they do, as they did recently in Paris, it's news. But though they may lack official fashion certification, T-shirts quietly hold their own in the wardrobes of most fashion-conscious men and women.

When fashion dictates an oversized silhouette, they're capacious, when the look is sleek and tight-fitting, such as now, smaller sizes prevail. For a richer look, they come in silk or cashmere.

The T-shirt is a tremendous common denominator, explains Bernard Ozer, a fashion expert who advises stores on behalf of the Associated Merchandising Corp. "It can be worn sloppy, or clean and preppy. It travels well, and it fits practically everyone."

Right now, with summer just beginning, Americans are stocking up on tees. Of course, the overwhelming majority of these aren't cashmere or silk, and only a handful will cost more than $20 each. Instead, nearly all are a variation on the classic 100 percent cotton knit standard that's hardly changed a stitch since the Navy issued "skivvy shirts" during World War II, and Marlon Brando popularized them in "A Streetcar Named Desire" in 1951.

Indeed, the main difference between most tees today is nothing more than their printed message. For the right message or design, people will eagerly pay a premium, but a shirt with the wrong message can barely be given away.

Perhaps the most common message that T-shirts feature is the names of colleges, universities and baseball teams. City tees, printed with the names of municipalities the wearer has presumably visited, are also ubiquitous.

T-shirts got a shot in the arm a few years back when Don Johnson wore them with expensive Armani suits on TV's "Miami Vice." Although the vice "Vice" look is no longer the rage, the notion of pairing tees with suit and sport jackets appears to have permanently entered the American male's wardrobe lexicon.

Last summer, the hottest T-shirt among style-conscious women here and abroad was the black and white Chanel No. 5 tee. This year, it looks as though the Chanel tees will be just as hot—despite retailing for around $180. This year's styles are slightly different, including one with a white camellia flower pinned to a printed black bow above the word "Chanel."

"They came into the stores in January, and they were all sold out by April, so we don't have a one," reports Camilla Mackeson, a New York-based spokeswoman for Chanel. "Even our samples have been sold."

This year, T-shirts that have been hand-printed, tie-dyed or "anything else" that suggests they've been handmade will be hot, according to Ozer. Larger logos will also be popular, he notes, as well as "anything with a surfing or Australia motif."

Joe Boxer, a San Francisco manufacturer, is offering Republican and Democrat motif T-shirts. At press time, the tees' sales were pointing to a Dukakis victory in November. However, Republicans had the lead in sales of matching boxer shorts, suggesting possible ideological differences between wearers of T-shirts and boxers.

With another group of tees, J.G. Hook taps the current interest in WWII nostalgia.

For purists, then, one of the best sources of virgin, 100 percent cotton made-in-the-USA tees in a rainbow of colors is the Gap, where they run $9.50. Then there's always Woolworth's, where you can get an all-cotton, U.S.-made Hanes' men's tee for only $3.47.

Reactions caused by hereditary angioedema

DEAR DR. GOTT: My uncle was diagnosed with hereditary angioedema (HAE) a few months ago. American Express unveiled a purchase protection plan, which insures purchases made on the company's 10 million credit cards for up to 90 days against theft, damage or loss.

Since the program began, the credit card giant has received about 75,000 requests for refunds and has made a number of refunds.

American Express will not say how many refunds have been made, but it will not deny that it has had very little evidence of fraud by consumers.

Under the American Express program, refunds of the purchase price are granted for damaged or lost goods.

This factor would prevent consumers from double-dipping — collecting from two sources for the same loss.

We have procedures to limit our checks. Perils such as when asked how the company can prevent fraud.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband has a terrible odor and has a terrible odor. He has a terrible odor. He has a terrible odor.

DEAR READER: The odor of your husband's hat could be due to a medical condition, such as a bacterial infection.

Acute attacks often are treated with corticosteroids and epinephrine. Provided the low sodium diet is followed, patients can be treated with transfusions of fresh frozen plasma.

Long-term prevention of HAE attacks can be obtained by using daily corticosteroids, particularly prednisone.

These medications increase the levels of protein in which patients are deficient.

Amex: Consumers honest
