

Fiery Fourth Of July

FIREWORKS, FIRES GLOW

Sanford's "Fun Fair" at Fort Mellon Park Friday drew hundreds of local citizens for games, good food and — of course — fireworks. As the crowds (below) watched the glowing displays (left and right), a brush fire (below right) was touched off by a person playing with a sparkler. The small blaze was quickly extinguished by Sanford firefighters.

Civil Board Seeks Cover

By DONNA ESTES
 Herald Staff Writer

Sanford city officials are looking into the possibility of expanding the duties of the civil service board to give board members legal protection in the event they are sued.

The action comes in the wake of a recent Florida Supreme Court decision that civil service board members can be sued.

Civil service boards were created by the legislature in the 1960s and given the responsibility to recruit, test and certify new employees and to act as an appeal board for employees that have been disciplined by cities.

The boards serve without pay and are entirely independent of city government. And therein lies the problem.

As an independent entity, the board is not entitled to legal protection under the city's insurance.

When the court ruled in a little publicized case in Jacksonville — Thurston vs. Dekle — that civil service boards could be sued, local board members began to wonder how much they should be expected to risk to serve their community.

The local board is composed of Merle W. Warner, chairman, who has served since 1965, Dr. Lois Perez, attorney Robert Morris, Dr. John Darby and Donald R. Jones. Darby and Jones were appointed by the city commission. Perez and Morris were elected by the employees and Warner was appointed by the other four members. Members' terms, except for Warner are for two years. Warner's term is for one year.

Morris, in conferences with City Attorney Vernon Hines, has come up with the idea of expanding the duties of the civil service board to give it city protection.

The idea is to expand the board's duties to create a personnel board-civil service board. The duties would be expanded to include work on position classification, pay plans, administrative rules, policies and regulations governing leave, absence, sick leave and pay raises, in addition to what the board is now doing.

These duties are now handled through the city manager's office by staff personnel. The personnel board-civil service board would serve in an advisory position in the personnel matters, while retaining its authority as a civil service board.

The only appeal from civil service board decisions is to the court.

City Manager Warren Knowles said today the issue is entirely a civil service board matter and that he will support the board in whatever it wishes to do.

The first step in looking into the possibility of expanding the functions of the board, according to Warner, is to mail a letter to city employees to inform them of exactly what is taking place. The same letter will also be mailed to the individual city commissioners. The commissioners would make the ultimate decision on whether the board's duties are expanded.

The issue is to be discussed by board members at the next meeting, scheduled for 8 p.m., July 15. Warner said the letter is for the purpose of soliciting feedback from employees. The meeting will be held at city hall in the city manager's conference room.

In a related matter, Frank Plapp, civil service board examiner for the past seven years, has retired. The city's equal employment opportunity officer, Francis Wynalda, is temporarily handling the work of the examiner.

At the July meeting a replacement for Plapp will be considered.

Knowles said he will be recommending to the board that a clerk-typist Bill Hill be hired as a clerk-typist. Hill is qualified for the post as the person filling the position have a pleasant disposition.

But Her Mother Was Actress

Cathy Crosby No Relation Of Bing's

DEAR DICK: Could you please tell me who Cathy Crosby, on "That's Incredible," is? I say she is not Bing's wife, and my husband says she is. Or is she the wife of one of Bing's sons? Bing's daughter, Mary, is on "Dallas," right? Mrs. George Tazelaar, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Cathy is not related to the Bing Crosby clan, either by blood or marriage. She is from an entirely different bunch of Crosbys. Her mother was an actress, Linda Hayes, by the way. And, yes, Mary Crosby of "Dallas" is Bing's daughter.

DEAR DICK: A friend told me that before the current series of James Bond films there was a version of "Casino Royale" made by Columbia in the 1950s, called "The Hot To Handle." Is this true, and, if so, who played James Bond? Mike Kelly, Whinn Lake, Ind.

No, your version isn't true. There have been two movies called "Hot To Handle," but neither involved Bond — in 1959, Clark Gable was in a movie by that name, playing a nervous cameraman, and, in 1960, there was an English gangster film by that name. In 1964, on a TV show called "Climax," there was a version of Ian Fleming's "Casino Royale," with Barry Nelson as Bond.

DEAR DICK: Please help me test my memory. I recall a movie serial in the '30s called "Tallpa Tommy."

Ask Dick Kleiner

By DICK KLEINER

Naturally, the hero had an always-green comical sidekick. His name was Shooter, I'm betting that Neek Beary of "The Rockford Files" played the role of Shooter.

You win. Beary was Shooter in "Tallpa Tommy."

DEAR DICK: Could you tell me what happened to Daniel (I don't know her last name)? I haven't seen her on any of the programs for a long time. I first saw her on Robert Schuller's services, and then on a program with Max Robinson. She wrote songs and played religious music. I think I heard somebody say it was and what happened to Daniel, but what happened? Dorcas

Cayson, Fort St. Luke, Fla.

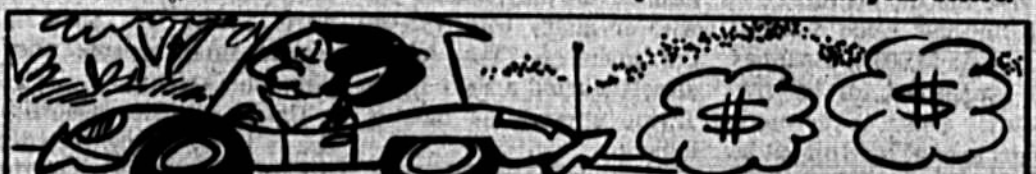

As far as I can find out, nothing particularly and happened to her. Her name is Doretha Hill, and she is alive and well, and mostly travels around, singing gospel song.

DEAR DICK: Can you find out the names of the movies made by the late great Lucille Ball? One of them was "Two Sisters From Boston." I understand he was quite successful in movies after retiring from opera. Wilson W. White, Santa Cruz, Calif.

The Waggoner tenor made only a few films — "Thrill Of A Romance," "Luxury Liner" and "The Stars are Singing."

DEAR DICK: Who was the cook on the TV program years ago with Chad Eastwood called "Eatable"? I have a small wicker with my husband and friends. They say it was Gabby Hayes. I say so, Mrs. R.B., Wabonga, Wash. You win. It was Paul Bringer.

DEAR DICK: We need to know the movie release dates for two of Clint Eastwood movies, "The Good, the Bad and the Ugly" and "The Outlaw Josey Wales." This question has evolved into name calling and wagging. Your interrogation is required to settle the issue. Paul Reginald, Pangle, Colo. Control yourselves. "The Good, the Bad and the Ugly" dates from 1977, and "The Outlaw Josey Wales" from the year before.

The symbol of affluence used to be two cars in every garage. Now it's one car with a full gas tank.

Myriad Celebrations Mark 4th

By United Press International
 Americans celebrated the 140th anniversary of their nation's birth with everything from traditional and not-so-traditional fireworks to Memorial Day parades, marathons for the American flag and Independence Day parties.

Millions of Americans jammed the nation's parks and waterfronts, picnicking in the afternoon and watching fireworks after dark.

Mohammed Ali, Coretta Scott King and civil rights leader Ralph Abernathy headed a New World Patriotism Day parade in Chicago. Just down the street, the Taste of Chicago food festival tickled the palates of fast-food junkies and gourmet alike.

Booths representing more than 40 restaurants lined Michigan Avenue's Magnificent Mile, offering passers-by anything from hot dogs to haute cuisine.

In New York, men in replicas of uniforms worn by U.S. troops during the War of 1812 fired a 50-gun salute.

Famine
Stalks Africa

A largely unpublicized disaster of huge proportions is bringing famine, suffering and death across the breadth of Africa from Senegal to Somalia. Hundreds of persons, mostly children and the elderly, are dying from starvation every day.

Spreading drought is the chief cause of the famine, but the agony is compounded by primitive farming methods, a high birthrate, and wars that have driven more than 3 million refugees from their homelands.

Unlike the tragedy of the Vietnamese boat people and Cambodia's refugees, who were mostly victims of man's inhumanity to man, the African calamity has been a creeping, undramatic thing of nature. And then, too, the world's sensitivity and sympathy for Africa's endemic problems have been dulled because they seem to go on and on.

In the sub-Saharan region across Africa that is known collectively as the Sahel, changing rain patterns have increased the spread of the desert. Once thought temporary, this vast climatic drying now appears to be permanent. Studies carried out in the Sudan, for example, indicate that since 1960 the highest has advanced almost 100 miles and is continuing to spread southward at the rate of about five miles per year. In Western Africa the Sahara is reported to be advancing even faster.

Mix the continuing drought and spreading desert with civil strife, the never-ending wars, and the world's highest population-growth rate, and we have catastrophic consequences beside which most of the world's other troubles pale by comparison.

The most immediate need is in the Karamoja district of northern Uganda, where 400,000 face starvation and as many as 500 are dying each day. Some Ugandans have fled for Kenya, but drought has reduced Kenya's food production by 40 percent.

Famine and pestilence now stalk in the wake of war between Ethiopia and Somalia, where 1.5 million refugees have taken shelter. It is estimated 500 infants are dying of starvation every week in Somalia's 21 camps. A third of Ethiopia's southern population is reported to be hungry.

Conditions are even worse now in Western Africa's sub-Sahara than in 1973 when 150,000 are said to have died of starvation.

The UN High Commission for Refugees describes Africa's camps as the "worst refugee problem in the world." Yet it has managed to send only six officials to struggle with mass starvation in a primitive area of all-but-impassable roads and severely restricted communications. By contrast, it has about 10 officials looking after 300,000 refugees in Thailand.

Voluntary agencies from Europe, notably Britain, Sweden and France are helping as much as they can, but they are overwhelmed by the magnitude of their tasks. Clearly, they and the UN relief efforts must be massively reinforced in global terms.

According to the London Economist, at least 80,000 tons of food must be delivered to the refugee camps long before September to avert death for hundreds of thousands. Such tonnage must be multiplied on a nation-by-nation basis from the Atlantic to the Indian Ocean. More than this, some transport helicopters should be brought to bear for food deliveries not otherwise possible for lack of roads.

The United States, it seems to us, has a potentially decisive role to play in persuading its six industrialized allies, so recently together in Venice, to join in providing enormous assistance immediately required to rescue this endangered humanity. In the long run, the developed nations should jointly undertake an overhaul of food production—a modernization of agriculture.

Surely, historians one day will marvel at how the world's warped vision could focus almost completely upon black unrest and problems in South Africa, where there is no famine, while largely ignoring the fate of starving millions elsewhere in Africa.

Seminole County may soon have a new public housing project within its borders, if the plans of Sanford Housing Authority Director Tom Wilcox are successful.

Wilson has applied for federal money allocated to this region for 74 public housing units. But Seminole County Commissioner Bill Kirby's Commissioner Richard Williams and County Administrator Roger Neiswander were less than enthusiastic about the project when Wilcox asked the county to sign a "Cooperation Agreement."

The HUD document requires the county provide a number of services for the project. Neiswander said the federal government will hold the county in strict stipulation in the agreement, regardless of the county's ability to comply.

"And they have a track record of being around and providing," Williams added.

Kirby said questions need to be answered before he would be willing to unenthusiastically go the county involved in the public housing business.

"The public housing has been successful in accomplishing what it was supposed to do," he said. "Is it workable? Is it beneficial?"

The plan is contained in a recent article by black columnist William Raspberry. Raspberry quoted testimony of Willie J. Hagerty, a Washington D.C. city council member, before the House Committee on the District of Columbia.

Hardy, who represents one of the poorer sections of the city with the largest proportion of the city's public housing, called for an end to public housing construction in its present form, at home and abroad.

The reason: public housing entraps poor people in public housing ghettos. "Government-owned slave quarters," she called it, Raspberry said.

Instead of public housing as it exists, Hardy called for programs that foster upward mobility, he said.

"She said she believes all government welfare programs should have the common goal of rendering themselves unnecessary by giving individuals the opportunity to stand on their own, he said.

Seminole County could make the desire for such programs known to the federal government before cooperating blindly with entrenched, but false, practices.

Thoughts Of A Columnist

The academic year has ended at Dartmouth. A fall prevails in presidential politics. I sit in my office, looking out over the delicious green of the campus. Across the four 18th-century buildings of Dartmouth row, the original college.

It is good to have a moment for reflection, for definition. Just what am I doing as a journalist?

Pondering the work of my fellow columnist, I conclude that—for better or worse—my own combination of activities, of perspectives, is just about unique.

Like other columnists, I am very much concerned with politics and what is going on in the general culture—in what is called "lifestyle." But I also try to bring to bear on these facts of experience the truths to be derived from literature and history.

My assumptions here are nothing new. They hold that works of literature and the study of history crystallize a great deal about human experience. They add to the individual experience—mine, say—the experience of countless others.

It's for this reason that I find that teaching literature at Dartmouth and writing about it in the journals have actually been invaluable to my activities as a journalist.

Until 1968, I was largely academic and literary. In 1968 I began to move outside the academy and acquire a good deal of political experience at the highest levels.

I have worked closely with Ronald Reagan, Richard Nixon, James Buckley—and many of the front-line political skirmishers from these campaigns remain my close friends, and some of them will be in key positions in this year's presidential and Senate races.

The sometimes sublime but often absurd and absurd reality of electoral politics looks a great deal different from inside than it does on the front page of the newspaper.

As a college professor, I am also at the heart of a multi-billion dollar national industry. Americans now spend $100 billion a year on education. In any given year, nearly 10 million students are attending colleges across the country. For better or worse, the college campus plays a potent role in shaping national moods and attitudes. What is happening on the campus matters, and I try to report it.

Finally, I live as a writer at another important focus of contemporary feeling, the religious one.

I was raised in an essentially secular, suburban environment. Nevertheless, secular learning and reading—G.K. Chesterton, C.S. Lewis, T.S. Eliot and others, plus the relevant scholarship brought me to the conclusion that Christianity not only is true, but true in its traditional sense. By that I mean Eliot, Lewis, Niebuhr, Murray, Maritain—and no, not Harvey Cox, Dan Berrigan, or Hans King.

Like many others who have meditated on the subject, I conclude that the famous "crisis of Western civilization" is at bottom religious.

Politics in the arena, education, literature, religion—there you have it: a combination of perspectives which would have been familiar to Dante, Milton, and T.S. Eliot. That is what I try to combine in this column, and that, I believe, is as focused as I can be as a writer.

Africa's Flash Point

Only one country has been found by the International Court of Justice to be illegally ruled by a foreign power.

Algeria?

That distinction belongs to Namibia, which has become Africa's latest flash point in the struggle against colonial rule and foreign domination.

Namibia, the former German territory of South West Africa, was invaded during World War I by South Africa in the name of the Allies. In 1920, the League of Nations took responsibility for the "well being and social progress" of Namibia and gave South Africa a mandate to fulfill that trust.

All other trust territories have long since been granted independence, but South Africa has repeatedly refused to withdraw from Namibia.

South Africa's occupation has been so brutal that it has been long known as the "white man's burden" in Africa. Namibians were forced to move from their homes to make room for "white development."

Members of the Herero tribe were forced into the desert where, their chief admitted, "no human being ever lived before... it is a country only good for wild beasts." The Namias had to leave their hunting grounds to make way for white farmers. In Orombembu, villages were bombed to glass, the population.

In August 1979, the U.N. Security Council ordered the termination of South Africa's mandate over Namibia. In June 1978, the International Court of Justice declared South Africa's presence in Namibia illegal. And in December 1977, the Security Council voted to end a year-long embargo with South Africa on Namibia's future. The United States and other nations are not acting in good faith.

Five years of protracted South African Prime Minister John Vorster in April 1979 to accept a U.N. plan for free elections in Namibia. That plan would have freed all political detainees, ended all armed hostilities and restricted South Africa's military forces to bases within the territory.

Four months later, Vorster resigned and announced that South Africa would hold elections in its own in Namibia.

Members of the South African Cabinet have been looking for a way out of the planning stage for that country.

In fact, it should be noted that they are not alone. As for the United States, the CIA said, "the practice is to send their cables to the State Department rather than back to Cuba for manipulation."

With tight control over the media, Castro is able to prevent the population at large from learning the extent of Cuban losses overseas. The only publicity accorded Cuban soldiers or "volunteers" killed in combat abroad is when the individual dies and can be exploited for political propaganda.

Obviously, the only way the average Cuban can become aware of the cost of Castro's gambler's diplomacy is to have it bit close to home. "When a neighbor down the block did come from Angola or Ethiopia," the Cuban paper said in an analysis of just how expensive Castro's foreign policy is.

At Great Oxy, That expensive project happens to be in the district of Rep. William Holtzman, D-N.Y. The newly forged Holtzman and his colleagues, Rep. Carl Albert, D-N.Y., are powers on committees that control the Labor Department's funds.

Memoirs, Holtzman said, he should have been in the planning stage for that country.

BERRY'S WORLD
The Labor Department's Job Corps, a training bureaucracy survivor of Lyndon Johnson's Great Society, has shown an irresponsibly prodigal and shortsighted attitude in building the training centers that should be helping to relieve the nation's steadily rising unemployment. Jack Mitchell has turned up some glaring examples of waste and poor planning.

The Job Corps brass has spent $1.8 million on a training center in remote Chitina, Alaska, and then abandoned the project uncompleted. Part of the loss for the taxpayers included $18,000 for architectural services which are now unusable. Not a single unemployed worker will be trained at Chitina, though officials insisted some of the money will be recovered.

ROBERT WALTERS
Racism White's Plight

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Seven McNichols's credentials as a civil rights activist are impeccable. Throughout the past two decades, he has battled to gain equality for blacks, Hispanics and members of other minority groups.

In the 1960s, for example, he participated in a Congress of Racial Equity "Freedom ride," organized a tutorial program to aid young Hispanics in this city and raised money to help feed poor black sharecroppers in the South.

But today McNichols himself is the apparent victim of racism discrimination—a white employee of a city government whose political hierarchy and municipal bureaucracy have, in recent years, become dominated by Hispanics and blacks.

Although his record is impeccable, the 41-year-old McNichols personifies the plight of whites throughout the country who offer compelling evidence to demonstrate that they have been unfairly subjected to the most insidious type of discrimination—rejected because of skin color by sophisticated bosses who have no evidence of their racist motives.

In a similar case resolved last year, a federal court noted:

"Business managers, labor union leaders (and) government supervisors do not normally take the witness stand to admit to such a purpose and as a rule, they are equally careful not to reveal their purpose in conversations conducted or documents prepared outside the court setting."

In that case, a white employee of the Washington, D.C. municipal government repeatedly sought promotions for which he was rated "highly qualified" or "best qualified" on the basis of objective civil service tests—but was rejected each time by black supervisors who selected instead less qualified blacks.

McNichols' case has unfolded in a city where whites now are a minority group, representing less than half of Los Angeles' population. The mayor, Thomas Bradley, is black and one of his two deputy mayors, Grant Morrison, is Hispanic.

McNichols began work in August in 1975 in the city's Office of Urban Development, but in 1977 that office was scheduled to be consolidated with other municipal departments into a new super-agency, the Community Development Department.

The intense competition for six high-ranking supervisory positions in the new department ultimately was resolved through civil service examinations—but instead the following events occurred:

March 20: The city's Personnel Department released the test results, showing that McNichols had scored first among 97 candidates who had been tested for the preferred jobs.

April 15: Although McNichols never had received a formal evaluation of his performance in almost two years on the job, he suddenly was given an "improvement needed" rating by Carmen Diaz, a Hispanic supervisor.

June 21: Diaz and Deputy Mayor Davis announced McNichols to a meeting where he was subjected to "a vicious and racist onslaught—with unmistakable racist overtones—in order to provoke his resignation."

Job Corps Spends Much, Trains Few

Similar lack of foresight led to the expenditure of $1 million for a center at a former military installation. The project is now on indefinite hold.

More than $3 million was spent on a proposed center at Bethel, Alaska, before unanticipated community opposition stalled the project in protracted and expensive court litigation. Meanwhile, the money that had been spent there has not only gone to waste but has been trained there on job training.

Because of facilities available at the Bethel (Ala.) Naval Base, the Job Corps center, fully staffed, was opened in January 1978.

Two centers provided space in their 1978 fiscal year and yet little the second year beyond costing the taxpayers at least $1.8 million. Inspectors say training costs at such centers are high.

Chester, the first center, cost $1,600,000 per man per year.

The last, Ketchikan, cost $1,800,000 per man per year.

It is the only one of the Job Corps centers that has been closed.

RECHARGEABLE SHAVERS
May Be Worth High Cost

An electric shaver frees you from shaving lather, hot water and cuts. But, electric shavers apparently aren't for every man.

In a survey of Consumer Reports readers, more than half the men who reported using a blade for shaving said they also owned an electric. An majority had received their shavers, now largely neglected, as gifts.

So, if you're thinking of switching from a blade to an electric, try to get one on a trial basis. And, if a shaver seems like a good gift for a man you know, consider discussing it with him before you go shopping.

Assuming that you've decided to buy an electric, making a good choice can be a tricky business. When Consumer Reports tested 20 shavers to evaluate 22 shaver models for extended periods, some interesting preference patterns emerged.

Electric shaver models, for the most part, were the favorites. The Remington and Wards shavers—twins under the skin—were generally well-liked too, as were the Eltrons. However, even low-priced models had a few staunch supporters, while the top-rated shavers had their detractors.

Aside from personal preference, there are other important factors to consider in choosing an electric—for instance, chords. Most of the tested shavers are available either in "plug-in" or rechargeable styles.

The plug-in shavers tended to be less expensive. But you may find the convenience of a rechargeable model well worth the added cost. (Overall, list prices ranged from $25 to $100.)

Some rechargeables are more convenient than others. With most, the electricity that converts household power to the low-dc voltage required to charge the batteries is located in the line cord plug. With these, when the battery runs down, you can run the shaver off the household current and then leave the shaver plugged in to recharge.

Somewhat less convenient is the type of shaver that must be recharged in a special stand. When the battery runs down in such a model, you can't use it to shave. It has to be kept in its charging stand for much or all of a day before being ready for use again.

For brand-and-model ratings of 22 electric shavers, see the November 1979 issue of Consumer Reports. It also covers manual typewriters, radio-recorders and popcorn poppers. (To order, send $1.25 to: From Consumer Reports, P.O. Box 9902, Orangeburg, N.Y. 10962.)

Even though the top-rated Norvelco was rotary head model, no one type of shaving head can be considered best for all users.

Patriotism and practice of the principles of Christianity were the themes of Horace Orr in his address to the members and supporters of the Seminole Economic Employment Development Corporation (SEEDCO) annual breakfast meeting recently.

With more than 200 persons in attendance, Orr, SEEDCO executive director, told the gathering that "Too many of us take this country for granted" and that "Americans, as a people, have moved away from the morals and ethics of Christianity."

"I've traveled in 14 countries and have learned that no where on Earth is there a more prosperous or potentially greater nation as the United States," he said.

Noting that SEEDCO is celebrating its 10th year of existence, Orr recalled that in 1971 an elected official told him that SEEDCO would not survive.

"But God has a way of maintaining what is done in his behalf," he said. Orr pointed out that the organization which fosters, assists and sponsors the development of business is to provide employment and economic growth to the area, has brought $18 million in federal grants to the county.

He said the grants represented 1,200 man-hour-years of work with 120 new persons employed annually for a $1 million payroll.

Orr said SEEDCO plans to develop 30 acres of land into an industrial park. He said the organization is also planning development housing, and commercial and industrial areas.

To be successful all these projects require hard work, effort, diligence and a struggle, he said. "Nothing just happens." "You can't wait for time to solve a problem."

U.S. Rep. Richard Kelly, R-New Port Ritchey, will be in Seminole County for a town hall meeting for the first time since the Alsbam scandal broke several months ago.

Kelly will hold one of his meetings at 3:30 p.m., July 9 at the Alamo Springs city hall, 225 Newburyport Ave., Altamonte Springs.

Public Loses When Troopers Leave For Higher Pay

Verbal gobbledeygook; clichés; the same old song, repetitious cliché... so much for the merial, adolescent buffoonery that canvasses the beat of the drum.

Tonight a fellow trooper called me at home and said, "I wanted to let you know, I'm going to work with another department. I really love what I'm doing but the economics aren't working out. I'll be starting with the new department at a salary of over $1,000 more a year (as a rookie) than I'm making with the Highway Patrol after three years of service."

Folks, you know what you lost? I'll be glad to tell you.

You lost a state trooper that had the ability to reason, decide and act in a manner demanded of the position.

You lost a guy that was concerned, compassionate and sympathetic to human needs.

You lost a fellow that strives, works hard and projects the image of confidence and competence.

You lost a trooper, who at the ring of the phone in the middle of the night would respond to an emergency and, on arrival, calm and stabilize the situation even though his greatest enemy is the fatigue he is feeling.

You lost a man that through intensive training and hard labor marveled at the thought of being a state trooper.

You lost a guy that has proven himself and his ability as a state police officer.

You won't be seeing this fellow appearing your disabled car and stating, "It's not me what we can do help you," or standing with you as he calmly questions, soothes and reconstructs the events of the mangled wreckage, of which, you are astonished to be a "non-fatal" statistic. Folks, I could go on and on and on.

What I'm really telling you, even though I, myself, and my department will feel the loss, you really lost, too. And you know what? The names, faces and identification numbers change but the story doesn't. Your Florida Highway Patrol and your state troopers can be no better than the public. Allow them to be.

And in a nutshell folks, state troopers minus a competitive salary equals your loss.

You should be proud to have such a talented young man on your staff. He is very personable and interested reporter.

Of all the articles ever written in the five years I have been portraying Abe, Tom's article was the most comprehensive and interesting ever done.

to impoverished migrants from many lands.

They placed a statue in New York harbor and the invitation reached throughout the world:

"Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free.

The wretched refuse of your teeming shore,

Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed, to me."

"Freedom," they call it. Floundering boat-people rescued in South Pacific waters, Cambodians and Laotians escaping from fratricidal genocide, starving Haitians slipping into American coastal ports and stampeding Cubans fleeing in mass freedom-exodus across the Gulf to Florida say, "We want to live. We want to be free. Help us find a way."

But some reply that they're not our responsibility, they'll increase unemployment, they'll take away "American" jobs, we can't take care of everybody, it will cost us a lot of money and it will raise our taxes.

Shall we drop the torch in liberty's uprising arm?

Shall we blow out the flame of freedom?

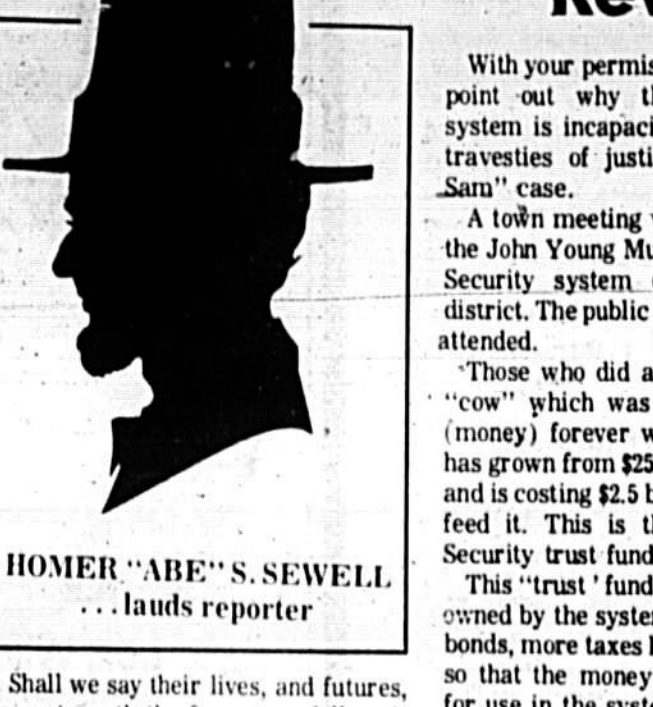

Shall we tear off the invitation inscribed within the Statue's entrance?

Shall we close our eyes, our ears, our minds to the pleas and cries hear, and still "conscience" pang?

Proclaim the invitation to all who search in hope for life and freedom. For "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," is still our American life-style. With compassion, initiative and God's help, we can find a way to share this life-style with the "huddled masses," the homeless and the "tempest-tossed" who are streaming in refuge into our land.

Independence Day, then, will not lapse into a mere life mockery, but a real celebration of "freedom" for American and refugee alike.

Revamp Social Security Trust Fund

With your permission, I would like to point out why the Social Security system is incapacitated, besides such travesties of justice as the "Son of Sam" case.

A town meeting was held June 14 at the John Young Museum, by the Social Security System of this five-county district. The public was invited but few attended.

Those who did attend found out the "cow" which was to provide "milk" (money) forever was a "bull." Which has grown from $25 billion to $40 billion and will cost $23 billion to $3 billion to feed it. This is the so-called Social Security trust fund.

This "trust" fund is in bonds, wholly owned by the system. To redeem these bonds, more taxes have to be collected so that the money becomes available for use in the system.

No one seemed to know what happened to the money. The bought-in bonds or the money that is held in interest at 5 to 6 percent on these bonds. The inequity of having this "bull," which has to be fed by the Social Security taxpayer, could be rectified by loaning the surplus system money, that is used to buy these bonds, to banks and savings and loan companies. Loan this at 3 percent and require the banks and savings and loans to make this money available for housing loans at 6 percent. This would save the taxpayer 9 percent on this $50 billion "bull."

Considering the projected shortage of housing, can you imagine the shot in the arm $50 billion at 6 percent interest would be to the economy.

Now all that has to be done is for the taxpayers to rise up in their wrath and provide us with a Congress that will make the necessary laws to accomplish this much desired object. I believe that this same thing—the loaning of the money, instead of putting it in interest-bearing bonds—could be applied to all other funds, such as the highway trust. I do not believe there would be any "flick" from the bankers, as they would be making 10 percent on this money they are loaned.

what are the food stamp recipients going to do? By law, as Social Security goes up, food stamps are cut back. But with inflation as it is, this is no help. You lose ground as far as food stamps is concerned.

What is the Carter Administration trying to do? Starve them out?

If people don't have enough to eat, they might have to go to a hospital, and that will sure cost the government and the food stamp recipients.

When Social Security goes up, so do the insurance rates, personal expenses and taxes. So, this makes it twice as difficult for those not getting $200 or $300 a month.

The sun keeps our world alive. It provides light and warmth. It is the source of solar energy.

The sun makes crop grow to feed us. It paints a bronze patina on our bodies that makes us look better and possibly even feel better.

It can also give us cancer.

The American Cancer Society estimates that about 600,000 Americans have skin cancer and that 6,000 die of it each year. If not treated early, the disease can be disfiguring and deadly.

A friend who recently underwent surgery for removal of a cancerous growth from his bald head suggests that just as smokers are warned about cigarettes, all of us should be cautioned that "the sun" is a great danger to your health.

You don't even have to bask in the direct rays of the sun to develop skin cancer. Reflected sunlight at pools, at sandy beaches and even under trees and awnings can give you skin cancer.

Skin cancer is primarily a white person's disease. Black skin has a pigmentation that largely prevents this type of cancer. Light-skinned, blue-eyed people are more susceptible than those with darker complexions.

More men than women are affected by skin cancer, probably because men have more often worked and played outdoors while women shaded themselves from the sun.

Skin cancer seems to appear mainly on people over 60. That doesn't mean it is another physical penalty for growing older, however. Cancerous growths may have started 20 or 30 years ago but are only manifesting themselves today.

People in the Sun Belt where the sun shines almost every day have a greater chance of getting skin cancer than those who live in more temperate climates.

But with the arrival of warm weather, Northerners are also out golfing, swimming, fishing, sailing or just basking in the sun on a beach. Without proper precautions, that's where cancer can begin.

I know. I never wore a hat when I lived up North. I moved to Florida seven years ago and began wearing a cloth hat or cap when going into the sun. (I don't wear a straw hat, which permits the ultraviolet rays to penetrate.)

Recently I detected small scabby sores on my hand and face. A dermatologist diagnosed them as actinic keratosis, a pre-cancerous condition.

The growths were removed with cryosurgery, a painless freezing process using liquid nitrogen. Even if they had been cancerous, they could probably have been treated successfully.

Worship the sun with moderation. Take the rays in easy, short doses.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

100 Demonstrators Greet Carter Before Miami Speech

MIAMI (UPI) — President Carter came to Miami Friday night to warn the NAACP convention that the man who wins the presidency this fall will have an opportunity to name the next three or four Supreme Court justices.

Carter reached Miami after a whirlwind political tour of California, where he emphasized he has to plans to lift the Soviet grain embargo, and is searching for new ways to win the release of the American hostages in Iran.

About 100 demonstrators, carrying signs charging federal aid for the riotous Liberty City area of Miami was little more than a road across the street from the convention hotel when Carter arrived. Police formed an all-but solid wall in front of the demonstrators.

After his appearance at the convention, Carter is to fly to Palm, Ga. — his first trip home in nine months — and return to Miami on Tuesday, when he flies to Japan via Detroit.

Washington Is A Funny Place

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Capital humor, past, present, imperfect.

Why does Senator Kennedy carry a turkey around with him when he campaigns? Spare parts.

Like most Washington jokes, the victim is usually recognizable. Look for Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan to be the turkey carriers this fall.

Until the polls started improving, the Carter White House was not particularly polite for its current host. But press secretary Jodie Powell was credited with telling this one to the White House Correspondents Association this year.

"I walked into the Oval Office. I didn't pussyfoot around. I didn't mince words. I looked at the leader of the Free World straight in those steely blue eyes and I said, 'Rosalynn, make Jimmy do it!'"

AREA DEATHS

MRS. LUIS LANIER — Mrs. Luis Lanier, 48, of 2820 Pleasant Hill Road, Kissimmee, died Friday, June 29, at St. Joseph's Hospital in Palm Bay. She was the widow of the late Mr. Luis Lanier, who died in 1952. She was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star for 21 years, serving as secretary, worthy matron, and grand instructor. Survivors are two sons, R.E. Tapscott of Sarasota, and Walter M. Turner, of Tampa; two daughters, Mrs. Marjorie Drake, Goshalton N.C., and Mrs. L.E. Turner, Palm Bay; a son, 13 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren. Burial Funeral Home-PA in charge.

Funeral Notices

COLE, EUNICE T. — Funeral services for Mrs. Eunice T. Cole will be at 11 a.m. Monday at Palm Bay Baptist Church. Mrs. Cole was born in Florida and lived in Sanford for 20 years. She was active in the First United Methodist Church and the Palm Bay Avenue Baptist Church. She was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star for 21 years. Survivors include her husband, Mr. Cole; three sons, Mr. Robert Cole, Mr. James Cole, and Mr. Donald Cole; two daughters, Mrs. Mary Cole and Mrs. Laura Cole; and seven grandchildren. Burial Home-PA in charge.

Clerk Escapes From Bandits

ORLANDO-BOACER, Fla. (UPI) — An Ormond Beach convenience store clerk abducted by two bandits during a robbery was recovering from the post-traumatic stress disorder that has been plaguing her since the robbery. She was hospitalized in St. Augustine, Fla., after the robbery. She was released from the hospital on Monday. She is now living with her family in Ormond Beach.

Hueytown Hero Sets Sizzling Pace

Allison Scrambles To Firecracker Flag

From The Sidelines

By JOE DeSANTIS
Herald Sports Editor

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — In one way Bobby Allison's Firecracker 400 win at the Daytona International Speedway Friday proved that the race does not always go to the swiftest. But then again in another way it did.

The Hueytown, Alabama, native started the 160 lap race halfway back in the pack, from the 14th position, but scrambled his Mercury to the front of the pack early in the race and survived a rabbit chase to the checkered flag just in front of second place finisher Dale Earnhardt.

The car handled so well today that despite starting 14th we felt we had a good shot at winning the race," explained an exhausted Allison in Victory Lane.

"I was complaining to Bud (crew chief Bud Moore) all week long about the 14th starting position but the crew just worked and worked on the car until it felt right. We won today because the Mercury handled the track better than the Oldsmobiles."

Allison, Pearson and Earnhardt played bumper-to-bumper tag for most of the race but it was Allison's blistering record setting pace of 173.473 miles per hour and some crafty maneuvering on the final lap that iced the narrow victory, his first ever at the Firecracker 400.

"I was where I wanted to be on the last lap," explained Allison, who pocketed a total of $24,805 for his first place finish including lap money.

"I knew that Earnhardt and Pearson were right on my tail and I wanted to be in front rather than to have to make a gozno on the back stretch."

Allison's strategy worked to perfection as the crafty veteran, whose best previous Firecracker finish was a trio of third place showings, used the traffic of slower cars to box out Earnhardt who attempted to drop under Allison on the fourth turn of the 2 1/2 mile course and take the lead.

"They drove good races," Allison applauded of Pearson and Earnhardt's efforts.

"And Earnhardt proved to be a real gentleman on the last lap when he got boxed out."

Pearson piloted his Oldsmobile for the second place showing and pocketed $14,250 as the runner up in the high speed ballet. Buddy Baker finished an official fourth while Richard Petty came in fifth.

All drove Oldsmobiles.

Following a delay caused by sudden wreck of Phil Finney's Oldsmobile on the final lap, Allison made his way into victory lane but needed help to get out of the car and a little oxygen before he could start celebrating.

"It was so hot out there I've got a blister on my foot," pointed out the sweat-soaked winner.

Track temperatures were well above 100 degrees on the asphalt with the temperatures inside the cars well above the 120 degree mark.

Allison repeatedly gave the victory credit to his pit crew. "The car worked so good that we could stay pretty much wide open, especially on some of the high turns," pointed out the winner.

Allison's victory Friday was his first in the Firecracker since some 20 years of NASCAR racing.

"I'm sure doing this will give me a little extra edge. We've been here 14 or 15 times before and the best we could do was third place."

The race was slowed only three times under yellow caution flags and was crispy run throughout with the exception of Phil Finney's wreck on the final lap.

Coming down the final stretch, Finney's Oldsmobile spun out of control, smashed the retaining wall and finally rested in the infield after traveling some 12 feet in the air.

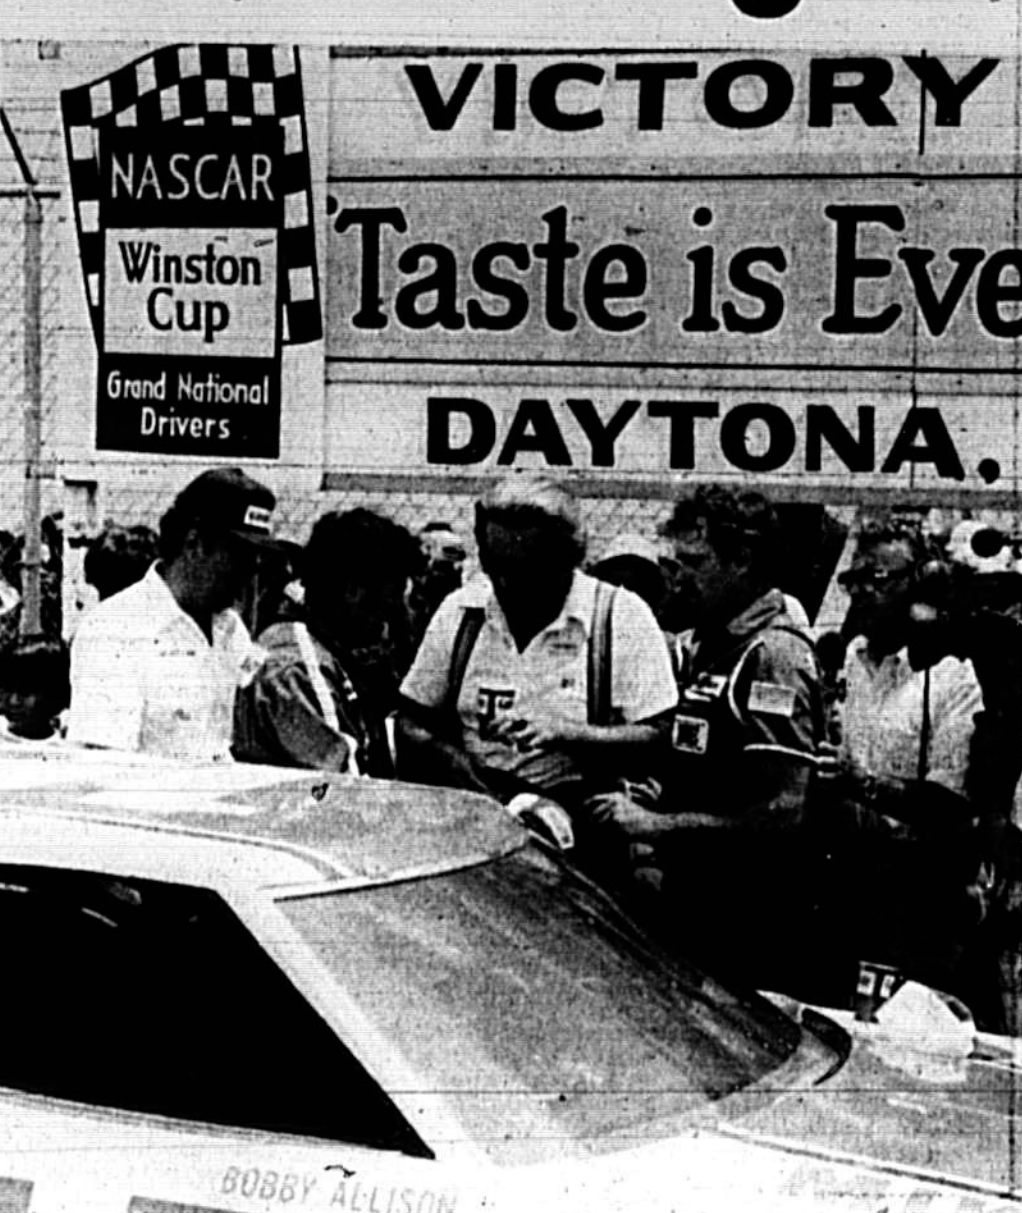

Finney, 30, a Merritt Island based driver was taken to Halifax Hospital where he was reported in satisfactory condition with cuts, bruises and a possible concussion.

Earnhardt started the final lap of the race side-by-side, just inches off of Allison's bumper.

"That's what cost them a move on the final lap, it slowed them down a little," observed the winner. "Earnhardt tried to make that move on the back stretch but he didn't have a whole lot of room sitting right next to Pearson, then I got a little help from the slower traffic in the final stretch."

To the victor goes the spoils. Firecracker 400 winner Bobby Allison enjoys the pleasures of Victory Lane.

With temperatures soaring above 100 degrees on the track, Allison needed help and oxygen to leave his car after the race.

Crew chief Bud Moore uses a garden hose to cool down Firecracker 400 winner Bobby Allison during a pit stop on the 124th lap.

Getting in and getting out of the pits quickly and at the right time played a major role in Allison's Firecracker 400 win. His pit crew managed to fuel him up and change a pair of tires in a shade over 16 seconds during Allison's final stop in the pits on the 133rd lap of the 160 lap race.

Wilson Finishes 15th

By CARL VANZURA
Herald Motorsports Writer

Rick Wilson had just completed his first Grand National race and was the subject of conversation of the record Fire Cracker 400 crowd. Wilson didn't win the race, Bobby Allison did that, nor did he lead at any time, but Wilson won the hearts of the crowd. Many of the fans came from the Central Florida area just to see him race as Wilson is one of the top short track drivers in Florida. The 27-year-old construction worker from Bartow is a regular at New Smyrna Speedway and just last Saturday night won the feature.

In less than 3 years of racing on the short tracks he has won over 60 feature events in his 1963 Buick Wildcat. One of his big thrills this week was bumping Richard Petty from the top 30 Wednesday as he qualified his Howard Racing sponsored Oldsmobile at 188.348 miles per hour. In practice he ran laps in the 161 mph range and said "a lot of these guys have more experience here than me, but with a little luck I think I can whip them."

Right before the race Wilson was as at ease as if he had been doing this all his life. When talking about the car he said, "I'm real pleased. The car is probably capable of going faster. But it felt loose to me. I guess that is because I'm more used to sportsman cars."

He said that he had become friends of race car builder Dick Hutcheson, a former top driver himself, and that Hutch had really helped him set this car up. "I am still young and would like to start working on a Grand National career. Finishing today's race would be a good start."

Wilson ran as high as 10th place late into the race and finished in 15th place after having to slow down in the final laps. He received the "Cool Head" award over Duane Waltrip and Bobby Allison. This award is given by the Motor Sports Network to the driver who showed the coolest moves during the race.

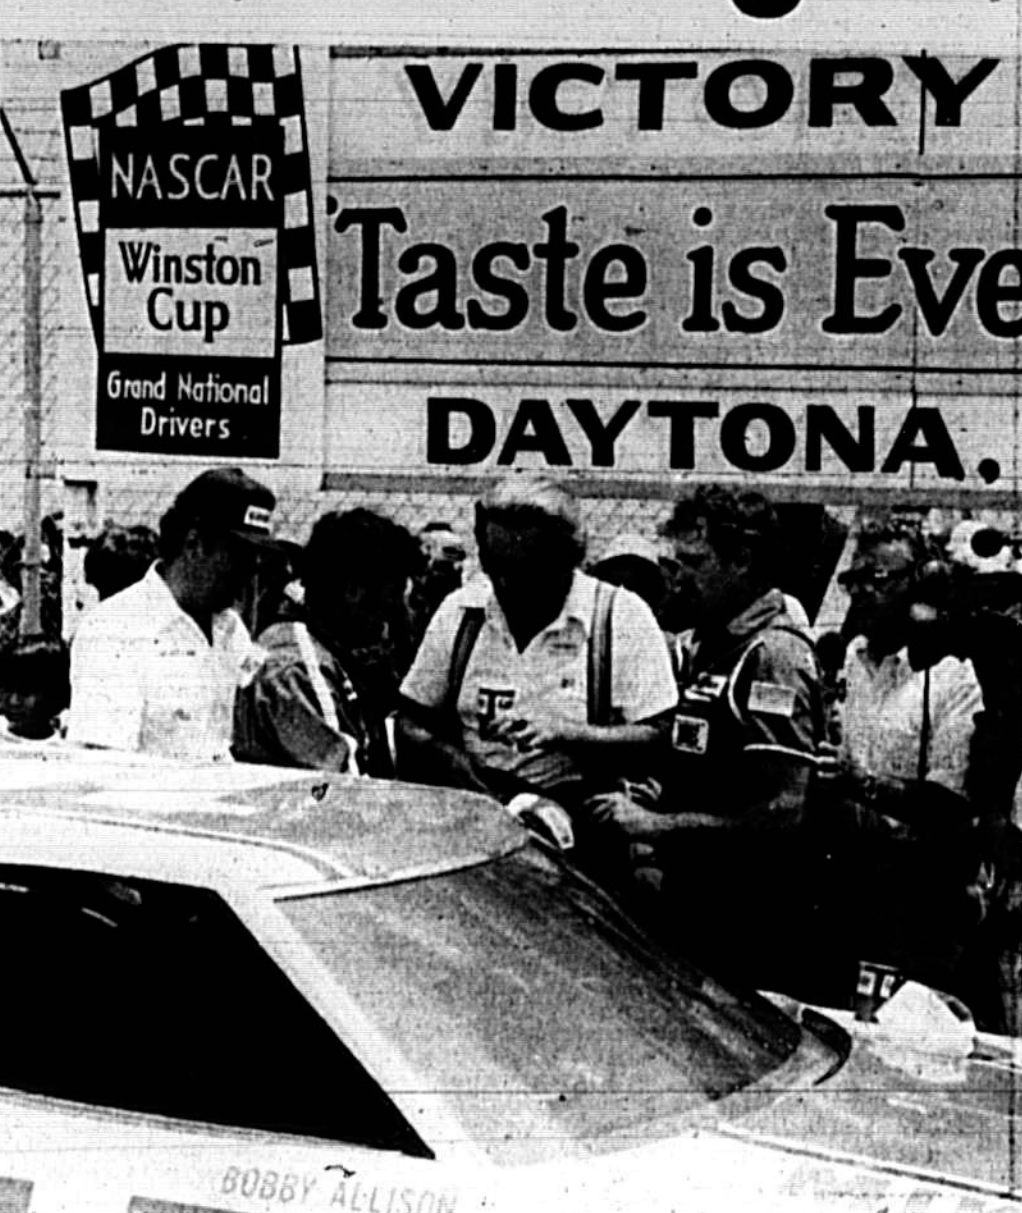

Wilson wasn't the only local based driver doing well in the 400 as John Greenwood racing out of Altamonte Springs did well in his first Grand National outing. Country music singing star Marty Robbins drove the Orlando based Native Tan Dodge of Frank Warrens well into the standings until a blown engine took him out in the 143rd lap.

Phil Finney was in the only wreck during the day as he crashed into the fourth turn retaining wall just in front of the pit entrance. The checkered flag had already fallen and the race was over at the time of the wreck. Finney was getting ready to cross the start/finish line to complete his final lap when he hit the wall, throwing him into the air and totally destroying the car.

At last report he was in Halifax Hospital in stable condition. Finney is another competitor on the local short tracks in the area and lives in Merritt Island.

Track officials examine the wreckage of Phil Finney's Oldsmobile moments after the conclusion of Friday's Firecracker 400. Finney's Oldsmobile suddenly went out of control on the final lap, smashed into a wall and bounced 12 feet in the air before coming to a stop on the infield. The Merritt Island driver was taken to Halifax Hospital and is reported in satisfactory condition with cuts, bruises and a possible concussion.

To the victor goes the spoils. Firecracker 400 winner Bobby Allison enjoys the pleasures of Victory Lane.

Lumbering Link Hurls 2-Hit Shutout In Firecracker

By JOE DeSANTIS
Herald Sports Editor

(DELAND) — Stocky Seminole High pitcher Mike Link looks matter into his own hands in a big way Friday afternoon by losing a 2-hit shutout to lead Sanford's Post 53 American Legion baseball squad to a 4-0 win over the Volusia Manatees in the Firecracker Invitational at Deland.

The victory by the local squad, a loser's bracket win, sends Post 53 into action Saturday morning against Leigh Acres. A win over Leigh would bring Post 53 back to action Saturday night in the 14-team event in quest of a possible third place finish.

Link, who teamed up with regular season pitching partner George Porzig just a week ago for a similar 2-hit shutout performance looked in command throughout the game with a strong fastball and diving curve that continually kept the Volusia batters off stride.

"I was getting the fastball over early when I felt really strong," confirmed the Tribe mound ace. "Then I got the curve to break nicely later on when I started to tire because of the heat."

Post 53 scored the 4-0 win under a broiling sun at Deland's Clark baseball field with temperatures hovering in the high 90's.

Timely hitting aided Seminole to take an early lead in the contest.

Lyman's Rob Reich led off the second inning with a sharp single up the middle of losing pitcher Jeff Bond. Reich reached second on an error and advanced to the first run two outs later when Juan Dealba raced to second following a two-base throwing error on Volusia shortstop Franklin Drury.

Post 53 added its second run an inning later when Lyman star Jeff Kerr belted a Bond offering just inside the fence to deep center field and hustled the bases for an inside the park homerun.

Bob McCullough's crew came right back with another run in the bottom of the fourth to push the lead to 3-0.

Juan Dealba looped a sharp double to left field with one out to start things off. Mike Wright followed by working Bond for a base-on-balls. Walt Law then followed with a line double up the left-center alley to drive in Dealba and move Wright to third. With Mike Link at the plate attempting to move Wright across the plate Volusia catcher Mark Zebberth caught the speedy Wright in a run down trying to come home for the third out of the inning.

Big Mike was in control all the way as he limited Volusia to just two base hits in notching a 4-0 win for Seminole Post 53 Friday afternoon.

The Seminole County squad added an insurance run in the bottom of the sixth to give Link a cushion. Dale Spain opened the inning by reaching first on a throwing error. Dealba followed with his second hit of the game and Mike Wright backed it with a crisp single to right to drive in Spain with run number four. Link was in trouble only twice in the ball game. Volusia got right fielder Tommy Doyle to third base in the fifth inning following a walk and a pair of passed balls, but the Manatee rally was snuffed just as quickly when Link regained his composure to entice Mike

Caught in the middle. Seminole Post 53's Mike Wright was in the wrong place at the wrong time in his team's 4-0 win over the Volusia Manatees.

Sowell into a harmless ground out to Walt Law at short stop. The Manatee's final threat came in the bottom of the seventh when third baseman David Small singled and reached second on a passed ball. Link then fanned center fielder Ed Smith for one out, got left fielder Kiner Grandall on a grounder for the second out and after walking Tommy Doyle came back strong to strike out his mound rival Bond on three straight fast balls to ice the victory. Link finished the contest by allowing just the two

Big 'M' Takes SCC Tourney

The first Annual SCC men's and women's tennis tournament was completed last weekend. Doug Malicovozki, the pro at Bayhead and Jolyn Wytrowski, SCC's newest signee and from Orlando won the women's final. The tournament was a huge success and proved that there are still several folks out there who still play singles when given an opportunity. All in all about 40 players participated. Matches were held all day Friday, all day Saturday and most of Sunday. Since play was scheduled not only in the winners brackets, but also in the first and second round loser categories, the courts were kept busy all weekend.

In the men's final Malicovozki defeated Todd Stutzman of Winter Park. The score was 7-6, 6-1. Stutzman was unseeded and was the surprise of the tournament. He beat three seeded players to reach the final. Only 15, Stutzman looks like a star of the future.

In the women's final, Jolyn Wytrowski's steady baseline game was too much for Quinn Bornely. Quinn was also not seeded and knocked off the number 2 seed, Jamie Bellamy in the semi-final.

The women's first round consolation was won by Patti Edgemon over Barbara Wornach. Patti plays for Seminole High and seems to be one of the most improved players in the area.

In women's second round consolation, Suzie Holt, of Sanford and SCC, defeated Betty Reagan of Lake Mary. In the men's first round consolation, Ron Grasha, of Altamonte defeated Craig Ketting of Deland and in the men's second round consolation, Ronnie Walker of Orlando beat Scott Reagan of Lake Mary.

Next event on the tennis calendar for Seminole Community College will be a men's and women's doubles tournament. Play will begin Friday, July 18th. Those interested should contact the tennis office at SCC.

All-Star Game A Mismatch?

By HOWARD SINDER

NEW YORK (NEA) — How did baseball's All-Star Game start out? It was a mismatch, says Ralph Kiner, ex-home run king of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who looks back 30 years to when the National League began to dominate the American League.

"To my thinking, the greatest All-Star game was 1950," says Kiner, a Hall of Famer. "That started the swing to the National League."

Recalling the 4-3 NL victory in Chicago at Comiskey Park, Kiner jokes: "I think it was the greatest because I hit a homer in the ninth (with two outs to tie the game 3-3) and Red Schoendienst hit one in the 10th to win it."

Going into the 1960 All-Star game July 8 in Los Angeles, the Nationals held a 31-18 edge (with one tie) against the Americans. That included triumphs by the NL in the last eight baseball games. And in 20 of the last 22.

"It's getting to be almost ridiculous," admits Kiner. "It's hard to believe you could have that go against you like that."

Kiner, a play-by-play broadcaster of New York Mets games, was chosen by Gillett to help promote the fan voting for this year's All-Star teams. With about 12 million ballots, it's America's biggest non-political election.

By the 1950 game, the National had not yet won back-to-back contests in the annual exhibition series — which started in 1933. The Americans held a 12-4 lead. Next to NL won four straight games. Then six of seven. And '7 of '33.

Kiner says that 1950 loss really hurt the American League. "I hit a hard line drive to Ted Williams in left field in the first inning," Kiner explains. "He dove at the ball, crashed into the wall and made the catch. And despite his pain, he played to the ninth inning.

The next day, it was revealed he had broken his elbow when he hit the wall. It was remarkable that his single drove in the tie-breaking run in the fifth inning. It was to be the final AL run — good for a brief 3-2 lead."

"I could always hit the ball a long way," he remembers. A right-handed outfielder, Kiner signed with the Pirates organization after high school and spent two years in the minors. After two more years as a Naval cadet during World War II, he joined Pittsburgh in 1946.

As a rookie, Kiner led the NL in home runs with 23. And for the next six years, he led or tied the league in homers. No player has topped that record.

Kiner is the only player ever to hit four straight homers in two games twice in a career. And five homers in two successive games twice. He also set the National League mark for the most home runs in a calendar week — eight.

"I felt the pressure to have to perform," says Kiner, who never played for a pennant-winning team. "People expected me to hit home runs."

Kiner says it was a personal challenge to try to carry the Pirates.

"The best club I ever played for in Pittsburgh was in 1948," Kiner says. "We finished fourth. But we had a chance to win."

In 1953, Kiner moved to the Chicago Cubs, another loser. Then he played his final season in 1955, with the Cleveland Indians in the American League. Back trouble forced him into early retirement at age 32.

His career totals: 369 homers, 1,015 RBIs, and a .279 batting average.

Honestly trying to measure the value of his performance against today's free-agent bonanza, Kiner says: "I would have been worth $1 million a year."

After stepping down, Kiner ran the San Diego team in the Pacific Coast League until 1960 when he became the play-by-play announcer for the AL Chicago White Sox. He quickly switched to the Mets when the NL expanded.

"I like baseball people," says Kiner about his radio and TV work. "You're living the same job without having to be in good shape."

Are today's All-Stars much different than they used to be? Claims Kiner: "The changes in baseball players are no more than in people today. The only thing difficult for me to understand is a halflayer — who won't have to work again ... why he isn't more appreciative of baseball."

Kiner does acknowledge that today's hectic pace — the travel, the media, the competition — hinders the efforts of modern baseball greats.

He says: "I think it's tougher to be a star than it ever has been."

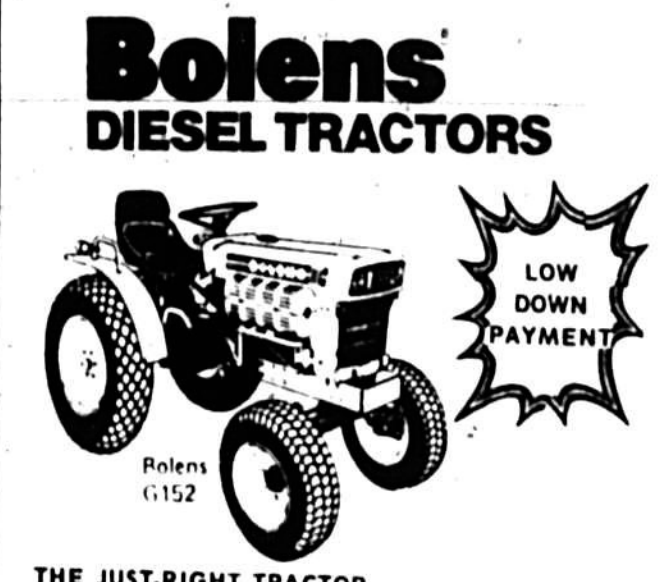

Yet, Kiner says, fans still are just as anxious to root once a season for their favorite All-Stars — even after three decades of NL victories.

"I don't think the average fan cares too much about who wins," he says.

After all, Kiner explains, it is an exhibition game.

In the 1950s, Ralph Kiner was one of the athletes featured in the famous Gillette Cavalcade of Sports ads.

Alcott Sailing

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (UPI) — Amy Alcott looked at the leader board and smiled.

"I like seeing my name at the top of the list," she said Friday, heading into the third round of the Mayflower Classic LPGA tournament with a 10-under par 134.

"I like to build up a cushion early, then really go for the stick," she said, describing her aggressive play over the Harbour Tross course. "I was just kind of breezing along out there."

Alcott, 24, of Santa Monica, Calif., shot a 7-under-par 65 for the day, a record for the Mayflower. She topped first-round leader Penny Puz by two strokes. Puz was alone at 8-under-par 136 after Fridays 33-33.

Alcott's first nine included a 22-foot putt for a birdie on the first hole. She also birdied No. 4, 5, 9, and 17. She got into No. 17 from six inches, where the ball came to rest after a soaring 90-yard sand wedge shot. Her eagle came on the sixth hole.

Alcott's 65 topped a tournament record set by Judy Rankin last year.

Third among the 70 professionals who made the cut of 152 or better was Robin Walton, of Clarksburg, Wash., with a 5-under-par 139, five shots behind the leader.

Beth Daniel was easily the most disappointed player Friday.

"It was like giving the field a present," she said after a double bogey on the 18th hole. She was six under for the day and the tournament coming into No. 18, when her tee shot splashed into the water. After taking the drop she missed the putt to end the round at 140, tied with Dale Lundquist.

Simpson Holds Halfway Lead

OAK BROOK, Ill. (UPI) — Scott Simpson says he knows what the pressure of leading a golf tournament is all about and he isn't going to worry about faltering over the final two rounds of the $300,000 Western Open.

Simpson, a two-time winner of the NCAA championships while at Southern Cal, fashioned a 5-under-par 69 Friday at the tough Butler National Golf Course for a two-round total of 5-under par 138.

But in hot pursuit of the 24-year-old San Diego, Calif., golfer are two experienced veterans. Former U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin and Andy Bean, the 1978 Western Open champion, were only one stroke back at 4-under par 140.

"I've played well under pressure," said Simpson, whose best finish this year was a tie for fifth at the Los Angeles Open. "I've also played poorly under pressure."

Simpson insisted he was more concerned with a high finish than worrying about whether he would be able to notch his first PGA victory.

Kingman Blanks Chisox

By United Press International
Brian Kingman, who will wed Diane Ellison Tuesday, fired a five-hitter and Mike Heath scored on Brett Burns' base-loaded balk for the winning run to lead the Oakland As to a 2-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Heath opened the Oakland fifth with a single and Cox followed with an infield hit. Dave McKay sacrificed the runners over and one out later, Rickey Henderson walked to fill the bases. Burns, 9-6, then committed a balk to score Heath and Cox stole home later in the inning, marking the third successful theft of home this season for the As.

Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa questioned home plate umpire George Maloney call on the steal of home and was ejected from the game.

Kingman, 4-8, hurled his fourth complete game in 15 starts. He walked four and struck out three and allowed only one Chicago runner to reach second base.

Telephones For The Deaf Keyboard Devices Expand World Of Communications

Western Electric Gives Figures

Western Electric Co. — the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System, including Southern Bell — spent $81.1 million in material and services in Florida in 1979.

Many hearing- and speech-impaired area residents who use teletypewriters and other keyboard devices to communicate over telephone lines will be able to use an expanded 24-hour operator service that will vastly extend their world of communications.

The Bell System's new 24-hour operator services for users of telecommunications devices for the deaf will go into service at 11 p.m. Sunday. It will feature a single toll-free number that will permit the device user to reach a special operator when assistance is needed to complete calls using the device.

This service also will be useful for speech-impaired customers who require visual communications provided by keyboard devices.

This expanded service will immediately benefit approximately 50,000 device users in their homes or offices, nationwide, in addition, it will assist the device user who travels, and stops at hotels and motels. It will aid greatly the business and professional people who require the special service services the new centers will provide.

By dialing 800-855-1155, device users calling from anywhere in the continental United States now can reach a special Bell System operator who will help complete person-to-person, collect, credit card and third-number billed calls.

The new 24-hour directory assistance service will help the device user get telephone numbers not easily found in their local directories.

Precisely, many deaf customers had to seek the assistance of a third party to interface with the telephone operator. Now, they can complete the calls themselves.

The deaf traveler who has a portable device also will be able to place long distance calls from public coin telephones by using the 800-855-1155 number.

Crushing Car Care Costs

Vehicle Repairs Prove Expensive Today's Cost of Fixing Crash Damage

Special to The Herald
CHICAGO — What costs four times as much to repair as to get new? Answer: A totally wrecked automobile.

Obviously, no one would ever pay over four times original cost to rebuild a completely demolished car. But the study shows why even partial crash damage can make a car not worth repairing and why defensive driving — being alert for any accidents in the first place — makes good sense now or any time.

Consumers are well aware today of the cost efficiency of mass production in making new cars. But many forget that the repair of auto crash damage does not enjoy the same mass production efficiency. Auto crash repair demands a variety of skills applied individually to each crashed car according to the nature and extent of the damage.

Adjust Car Engine Before Gasohol Use
If alcohol-replaces gasoline as an automotive fuel, you can expect to have your car running smoothly after some relatively minor engine adjustments, says a University of Florida agricultural engineer.

More fuel is needed for combustion because of alcohol's lower energy content. According to one estimate, about 1.3 gallons of 180 proof alcohol are needed to replace one gallon of gasoline.

For Avid Hobbyists

It's A Small World

By TOM NETSEL, Herald Staff Writer

Think small. The smaller, the better. If it has been made regular size, it can be made in miniature. The Miniature World of Central Florida is a group of hobbyists who do things in a small way, but there is nothing small about the enthusiasm they have for building and collecting almost anything that has been miniaturized.

After the business meeting a show-and-tell was held for members who brought samples of their collections. A doll house and furniture was on display along with a miniature meat market built by Julia Kuetner. Pork chops and steaks, sausages and roasts were in the display cases next to a tiny butcher.

Galloway Family Heritage Is 'On The Line'

Now retired Galloway has more time for greenhouse.

By TOM NETSEL, Herald Staff Writer
 The first telephones in Maitland were installed because the son of a grocer found it difficult riding his bicycle on dirt roads. He would ride around town picking up shopping lists, but he thought a phone call would make his life easier.

In order to help his father's grocery business, the late Carl H. Galloway would pick up their shopping lists, stop at the homes of their better customers. In those days of personalized service, the young Galloway would pick up their shopping lists, have them filled at his father's store and deliver the groceries with a horse and wagon.

Al Galloway has early pay phone in his collection.

Two brothers were also in the family business. Before officially joining the company, Galloway helped his father stringing telephone lines to outlying areas. To serve the Bradshaw family in Forest City who owned a citrus packing house and fertilizer company, Galloway and some men were running a line out from Altamonte Springs. One morning they stole a watermelon, tied a string to it and tossed it into a stream. When they broke for lunch they pulled it in and had cool watermelon with their noon meal.

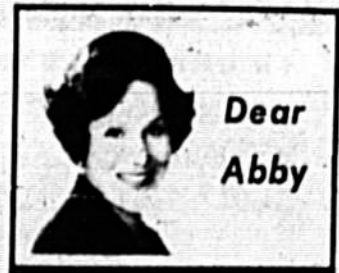

Somehow the U.S. managed to win the war and Galloway continued his corporate climb in the family business. In 1956 he became vice president-planing in 1960. He was named senior vice president in 1978 and held that position until he retired late last year.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Yancey at 2100 Cordova Drive, Sanford with its shady lawn was chosen by the Sanford Garden Club to receive the Garden of the Month Award for July.

'Tired' Is Ready For Bed Rest

DEAR ABBY: My husband has been reading up on the subject of sex, and he is of the opinion that if a woman doesn't enjoy sex right up to the grave, there must be something wrong with her. At age 50, and after 30 years of marriage, I would like to forget about sex altogether. Believe me, I've paid my dues.

Dear Abby

Where is it written that a woman should be ready and willing to perform every time her man beckons? I suspect that many (if not most) women get very little physical satisfaction out of sex; they just go through the motions because they want to do something for the men they love.

I can't believe that I'm the only woman who feels this way. Please poll your readers, Abby. And if they're honest, I think you will find that I am right.

TIED IN LINCOLN, NEB. DEAR TIRE: Now that we have become more enlightened and less inhibited about sex, a survey would probably turn up statistics as significant as the Kinsey Report of 1953. I invite all women to send a postcard (or

DEAR ABBY: You aren't going to believe this, but maybe I'd better start at the beginning. My mother buys all her Christmas presents for the family at a discount store. Because the store doesn't deliver, Mom put out the word for all of us kids to stop by her Christmas presents.

He served as president of the Winter Park Presbyterian Men of the Church and as past president of the Winter Park Kiwanis Club, an organization Galloway has been active in since 1933. He is also a recipient of the Silver Beaver award for his outstanding work with the Central Florida Council of the Boy Scouts of America. Galloway's latest honor came when he was asked to be the Grand Marshal of this year's Fourth of July parade in Maitland.

Myths About Sewing

There are over 45 million women in the United States who sew. Yet there are more misconceptions about home-sewing than about almost any other segment of the fashion industry.

Fact: Fashion is utmost in the minds of home-sewers. The fashions shown here, all in "Trevira" fabrics from leading pattern books, illustrate this point.

Myth: There are more home-sewers in the middle and lower income brackets than in the upper income brackets which start at $18,000.

Fact: Home-sewing is big business. The 45 million American women who sew spend nearly $2 billion a year on 1 billion yards of fabric.

19th Birthday For Man Accused Of Killing Sunbather

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Daniel Floyd finished celebrating his 19th birthday in jail, charged with third degree murder after he allegedly drove his car over two sunbathers on Daytona Beach.

Floyd, who was held without bond, also was charged with leaving the scene of an injury accident and grand theft auto.

Cathy Zapeda of Ocala died on the operating table five hours after other beachgoers lifted the car off her, police Sgt. W.M. Champion said Sunday.

Her mother, Sharon Newell, 35, was in serious condition with two broken legs. Police Sgt. W.M. Champion said Floyd tried Saturday to steal the car of Phyllis Baker, 31, of Temple Terrace. She was lying on the ground sunbathing next to the auto and leaped into the back seat when she heard it being started.

Floyd swerved onto the beach, Champion said, and ran over two more sunbathers.

The car stopped with Cathy Zapeda, 14, of Ocala, underneath, Champion said. Floyd jumped from the car and ran, pursued by other sunbathers. They caught him and held him until police arrived, Champion said. Others lifted the car from Miss Zapeda.

Qualified? Competency Test Trips Many New Teachers

By DIANE PETRYK
Herald Staff Writer

Prospective teachers can no longer get permanent teaching certificates in Florida unless they pass a new teacher competency test. Few teachers, however, should worry. The test, according to some who took a trial version, is easier than the functional literacy test students are expected to pass.

Still, the state commissioner of education was disappointed when the test was given to about 1,100 new university graduates about two months ago, said Seminole County School Board Chairman Allan F. Keith.

Keith said the test is a challenge. It is based on the cut-off scores we recommended," he said. Keith has a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering.

"I like to think all of the teachers in Seminole County can pass the functional literacy test for 12th graders," Keith said. "But I don't think they can."

Office Seekers Beckwith Gets Opponent

For the fourth time in 20 years, Clerk of the Circuit Court Arthur H. Beckwith Jr. will be challenged in an election.

Beckwith, a Democrat who announced last week that he will seek re-election, received an opponent today. Eugene Duffey, 33, of 1321 Windsor Ave., Longwood area, said today he will be filing his candidate qualifying documents this week.

The qualifying period opens at noon Tuesday and will close at noon July 22. A native of New England, Duffey has been a resident of the state for 28 years and involved in commercial development and planning and zoning for the past 22 years. He also owns an insurance agency.

Although he has been active in numerous political campaigns over the past 30 years, this is Duffey's first bid for public office. He is a Democrat.

Duffey served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He and his wife, Eleanor, have one son, Lawrence, assistant director of the dental technician's program at Jones College. He served a three-year term, on appointment from the county commission, on the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council and another three-year term on the Orange-Seminole-Osceola Transportation Authority.

He has been active in the Longwood Winter Springs Chamber of Commerce, has participated in the Kiwanis Club for the past 20 years, is an honorary member of Soritona International and is an usher at St. Mary-Magdalen's satellite church, Annunciation parish, Altamonte Springs.

If the Nov. 30th date had not been acceptable, Mrs. Christensen would have had to resign from the Casselberry City Council effective immediately.

Mrs. Christensen, the fourth woman to run for the county commission in Seminole county's 67 year history, is a Republican.

Extension Aids Candidate

The extension of a deadline for a resignation will permit Casselberry Councilman Barbara Christensen to continue in office until Nov. 17 while she is seeking the office of county commissioner.

State law, according to Dot Gilson, who heads the state elections office in Tallahassee, requires a candidate already holding office to submit a resignation from that office 18 days before the opening of the qualifying period. The qualifying period opens at noon Tuesday.

Mrs. Gilson said the law would have required that the resignation be received no later than Saturday, June 28, but because that date was not a working day the time period was extended.

The deadline then was Monday, June 30, Mrs. Gilson said. Mrs. Christensen said today she mailed her resignation to Casselberry City Hall on June 27 and it was received June 30. The resignation is effective Nov. 17, one day prior to the time Mrs. Christensen would take county office, if elected.

If the Nov. 30th date had not been acceptable, Mrs. Christensen would have had to resign from the Casselberry City Council effective immediately.

Mrs. Christensen, the fourth woman to run for the county commission in Seminole county's 67 year history, is a Republican.

The state law applies only to candidates, who are serving in public office and whose terms of office overlap the term of the office they are seeking. Mrs. Christensen's term as a city councilman extends to January 1980. The new term for county commissioners begins Nov. 18.

She is seeking the office currently held by Bob French, Democrat. French completed his first four-year term in office, has announced he will seek re-election.

YOUTHS LEARN, BUILD, EARN

Members of the Youth Conservation Corps of Seminole County have converged on Sanford Middle School to build a 12-foot teaching-learning platform and a 107-foot access catwalk in a wooded area behind the school. Above, Jeff Biddle uses a rasp to smooth a piece of wood as Mary Bledsoe watches. Below, William Hill (left) and Chris Parglow pound nails into the catwalk. The corps employs 30 county youths between the ages of 15 and 18 and is also involved in projects at Winter Springs Elementary School, Oviedo High School and the Seminole County Nature Center. The youths earn a high school credit for the conservation projects.

2 Communities Dig In For War Of The Sinkhole

WINK, Texas (UPI) — Call it a tale of two cities that both want to claim a hole in the ground.

The battle between Wink and neighboring Kermit is over which West Texas town will have its name affixed to the growing sinkhole that has drawn tourists, reporters and television crews and even volcano groups.

Although the residents of Kermit, population 7,804, call the 400-by-300 foot sinkhole the Kermit Krater, the residents of Wink, population 1,000, point out they are closer to the cavity, and therefore it should be called the Wink Sink.

The depression began growing June 3 in the arid range of West Texas and attracted national headlines and scores of tourists.

Milliken Says GOP Must Back ERA

DETROIT (UPI) — Michigan Gov. William Milliken warned the Republican Platform Committee today that if the party abandons support for the Equal Rights Amendment it deserves to be repudiated by a large segment of the American population.

"To drop the ERA plank from our platform now would be a public demonstration that this party had abandoned its goal of equal rights for women," said Milliken, the head of the witness as the committee began the process of drafting a party platform.

The committee members were the advance guard of 4,000 delegates and alternates due in town next Monday to officially designate Ronald Reagan the party nominee at the GOP convention. See Related Story, Page 2A
