BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

HEBREW BENEEDICTION: The Lord bless thee, and keep thee: The Lord make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace. Numbers 6:24, 25, 26.

Broad Line—Christmas Eve

Here are such patient faces, Anxious and mild, As bent in adoration Above a Child Cradled in a manger— Poor men and worn Who trembled when the heavens sang That hope was born. The shepherds stared on splendor With eyes like these From which the foolish hearts look out Through miseries Childishly eager still, and ask, "When, oh when Will there be peace on earth, On earth good-will to men?" JEAN BATCHELOR.

If you are still writing it 1933, that shows you are normal.

The time may come when the "little fellow" will mean former international bankers and ex-industrialist.

The year of 1933 added a new word to polite society anyway: chiseler—one who places stockholder rights above human rights.

Oh well, if the old man hadn't broken up the children's toys, trying to find out what made them go, the children probably would have.

We understand that the CWA is going to appropriate some of its funds for the purpose of excavating Indian mounds in Florida. Even a dead Indian isn't safe these days from the march of progress.

Found on the night before Christmas in a Sanford store was a pocketbook with some money in it. An advertisement in the Sanford Herald brought it to the attention of the public. Twenty persons answered the ad insisting they had lost their purses. But not a single one of them had any idea how much money the purse contained. Memory is such a fleeting thing.

During the year just closed lynch law claimed the lives of twenty-eight persons, which is twenty more than the number in 1932, and fifteen more than in 1931. Lynching seemed for a time to be on the way out, to possible extinction. But the record of the past year would indicate that there is still much to be done before crime can be handled in a legitimate manner.

Sanford shipped its first celery Thursday, when Julius Dingfelder opened the market for that section. Sanford is slowly but surely coming back and before long it will return to its place in the sun. It is in the center of a rich agricultural section, has water transportation and other advantages which make it a potential metropolis between Orlando and Daytona Beach. We have also noticed during the past two years a more healthy spirit in Sanford civic life, and a lessening of political bickering. This is progress.—Orlando Sentinel.

The federal government is setting an example in budgetary principles which the average person should consider in connection with his own fiscal problems. The government now has two sets of budgets. One, which concerns the ordinary expenses of government, it seeks to balance. The other, which is devoted to relief expenses, is hopelessly out of balance. What the average citizen should do is to see to it that his ordinary expenses can be met out of his own income. All his other expenses like his new automobile, his hospital bills, should simply be paid in the other budget.

Kindergartens

One of the "frills" of education which seems to be in grave danger of elimination is the kindergarten. At least the United States Office of Education views with alarm the growing tendency of school officials to trim budgets by abolishing classes for the children of pre-school age. Exploring economies of this kind, the Office of Education insists that the kindergarten of today is a vital introductory section of the elementary school. It is as indispensable as any other grade.

In the kindergarten the children are introduced to real life, the Office of Education explains. They see places and things and learn the proper relationship of their conduct to the well-being of others. They visit the post office, the grocery store, the zoo, the farm. They are taught through actual experience to learn names and the description of objects which they see. In the kindergarten, for the first time, a boy or girl becomes a member of a social group outside his immediate family. He begins to learn how to get along with others who have similar rights and privileges.

The kindergarten discovers and frequently corrects physical and mental tendencies that might become difficult of correction in later school life. Kindergarten experience is particularly valuable because it introduces boys and girls to the beginning of curriculum subjects of the coming school years.

Kindergartens did not have their beginning in America. Frederik Frobel, a German educator, who believed that natural activity of children could so be organized that it would assist in their physical, mental and moral development, is the world's founder of kindergartens or "children's gardens." In the use of games, occupations, exercises and plays, Frobel saw children learning self-control, learning how to think and suspend judgment, learning how to observe and see relationships. He established the first kindergarten 93 years ago.

Before 1870, 10 kindergartens had been established in the United States. The movement for the education of four and five-year-old children has spread until today nearly all large cities and hundreds of smaller cities provide kindergarten facilities. Records of the Office of Education show that today one out of every four children 4 to 5 years of age goes to a kindergarten.

Frobel defined education as a setting free of the powers inherent in the individual. The kindergarten embodies this idea, says the Office of Education. It guides children in their own development through contacts and experiences at a period when personal attitudes and habits are formed.

The Redistribution Of Guns

Calling attention to what struck many people as peculiar when they read that a pistol, once seized in Miami after a shooting scrape, had been seized again, as a professional bandit was making use of it in his trade. One naturally wonders how guns once taken from criminals find their way back again into the channels of the underworld. This particular pistol was at one time in the hands of the court.

"When the weapons of criminals find their way back into the hands of criminals through the processes of law," asks the Miami Herald, "what can be expected in the efforts to halt American violence? An automatic pistol wrested from a Miami bandit was identified by the police as one of the 12 guns alleged to have been purchased by a Capone bondsman while the Chicago gangster was in Miami in 1928. It was also the same gun seized by the police in August, 1928, following a shooting on West Flagler Street. Then it was used as evidence in the trial of the gunmen in Criminal Court and presumably was left in the possession of officials. It disappeared—back into the trade.

"That calls for an investigation. Follow the trail of this specific weapon from the court into the hands of bandits. Then learn what becomes of all the pistols seized by the law from the lawless. If the law is supplying the bandits with their guns the people would like to know it. Possibly the pawn shops and other stores are not altogether to blame. "Naturally every weapon confiscated by the police should be kept by them. They should never be sold, auctioned or disposed of, except to officers of the law or persons fully licensed and identified as responsible and qualified," the Miami paper concludes. It seems as if there should be some safe way of getting rid of guns which are taken from criminals by police. Guns locked in vaults are not always safe. Vaults can be opened. Perhaps the best way would be to load them all on to a barge about once a year and take them out to sea where under court orders they should be dumped.

SANFORD, TWENTY YEARS AGO

Among the many social affairs given on Christmas Day was a delightful dance in the Woman's Club rooms with Miss Anna McLaughlin and Miss Gladys Morris as hostesses and Miss Kate Underwood, who is home for the holidays from the Woman's College in Tallahassee, as the pretty honoree. Mrs. C. O. McLaughlin was the chaperone of the evening. The two hostesses and the guest of honor wore beautiful gowns of pink crepe de chine. Those present were: the Misses Kate Underwood, Charlotte Hand, Margaret Wight, Hoakins Jones, Gladys Morris, Anna McLaughlin, Helen Rowland, Elizabeth McLaughlin, Sadie Williams, Linda Connelly, and Gene Roumillat, Billy Hill, George McLaughlin, Pope Wicker, Henry Purdon, Willie Shelly, Ned Roy and Joe Chittenden, McDowell Butt, Frankie Woodruff, Paul Jones, and Dr. and Mrs. Cecil Butt.

Whitner, superintendent of the Sunday School, led the opening service which was followed by appropriate remarks by the rector, the Rev. A. S. Peck. A special feature of the evening's entertainment was the Christmas entertainment in which Sidney Chase made a merry old Santa Claus. Fannie Heba Munson a most lovable Mrs. Santa Claus, and Hawkins Connelly a postman. Frances Gonzalez played the role of mother of the four mischievous children who were represented by Norma Herndon, Sarita Lake, Esther Miller, and Dorothy Rumph.

Miss Beaulieu Schumper has returned from Atlanta where she spent Christmas with her sister, Mrs. Charles Bell. Mr. and Mrs. Will McKinnon are the holiday guests of Mrs. Wise at her home in Winter Garden.

Mrs. Ernest Molnar of Gallesville is the guest of her mother, Mrs. B. E. Takach, and expects to remain for several weeks. Her many Sanford friends are glad to welcome her back home. The Christmas celebration for the Sunday School of the church of the Holy Cross was held at the residence of Mrs. C. M. Hand on Park Avenue Friday night, B. P.

Citrus Control Board Acts To Bolster Market

ing proposal before Secretary Wallace, before taking action. 2. Trucks: Committeemen moved to check the movement of trucks very closely. It was asserted that citrus truck men have been hauling culls in the bottom of loads with proper grades of fruit thrown on top to hide the inferior loads. 3. Violations of the Citrus code: Secretary of the Control Committee O. G. Straus reported the Weaverville Citrus Growers Co-Operative as having shipped six carloads of tangerines which were of third grade and therefore shipped against rules laid down by the board recently. Attorney Francis Whitehair will investigate. 4. Action was taken to place stamps "on the market" which will be used as evidence that the fruit is boxed on all citrus (to pay for the control board set-up) has been paid.

5. The "frost belt" problem: Committeemen listened to an appeal from W. J. Crosby, Citrus, to allow growers and shippers in the northern part of the citrus belt to move fruit to avoid danger of destruction by freezes, to which this area is now subject. 6. Valencia shipments: This variety of orange will be held in the state until Mar. 1.

7. A Philadelphia, Pa., citrus packing house was reported handling fruit illegally shipped in field boxes before maturity. Attorney for the Philadelphia house threatened to ask for a hearing in court, if the movement of citrus was curtailed.

8. Express shipments of cull fruit: Senator Young of Vero Beach reported that Miami "mail order houses are shipping thousands of 'cull boxes' of citrus which are really cull fruit. The committee appealed to Secretary Wallace. 9. No. 2 Russet fruit and tangerines: It was discovered that through error, shipment of fruit of this class was prohibited recently, though it had been intended originally to permit movement of this grade. 10. Membership of the national committee scheduled for meeting in Washington the second week in January: Barney Kilgore moved to have the personnel of this committee reconsidered. Members elected recently were I. A. Yarnell, John S. Taylor, C. C. Commander and Lawrence Gentile—a lineup which left the Florida Clearing House Association without representation.

deputy public works administrator in Washington, for an immediate review of the county's application for $3,000,000 in flood control funds was sent by County Supervisor Hugh A. Thatcher. He estimated the damage at several million dollars. State road machinery and workmen were placed at the disposal of the county by Governor Rolph, who flew here yesterday and made a preliminary survey. Most of the families who evacuated 1500 homes in the Ballona creek watershed between Culver City and Venice were able to return yesterday. Approximately 2000 homes were damaged in that flat area, but none were crushed and splintered as many were in the Montrose section by torrents shooting down canyons and normally dry washes. At Glendale, between here and Montrose, the damage was estimated to be at least $1,000,000. Unprecedented in the 57 years that weather records have been kept here, the storm, starting Friday at midnight, brought 8.27 inches of rain to Los Angeles. The fall was even greater in the foothills, the town of Duarte registering 15.86 inches. Harold J. Ryan, county agricultural commissioner, estimated that $1,000,000 damage was done to crops. Preliminary reports to him showed that some 1300 acres of celery land in the Venice and Sawtelle area had suffered to a large extent. These crops are valued at $1000 an acre. More than 5000 acres of fruit and vineyards were damaged around Montrose and from Sierra Madre and Baldwin Park came reports of water-cut gashes in citrus groves.

NEWELL SAYS UP SHOLTS' RECORD FOR FIRST YEAR

Major Achievements Are Enumerated By Governor's Aide

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Jan. 2.—J. P. Newell, secretary to Governor Sholts, today issued a statement to newspapers as a "resume" of the first year of Governor Sholts' administration, which ended last night.

"I shall endeavor to enumerate the major achievements," Newell's statement said, although "even as closely as I have been associated with the Governor it is impossible for me to call to mind every accomplishment of his administration."

Newell listed 43 points in his statement "without any effort to list them in the order of their importance."

"The Sholts administration," he said, "can be credited among other accomplishments with the following:

1. Observance of an uncompromising program of the Democratic platform, both state and national.
2. Perfect cooperation with President Roosevelt and the development of unprecedented cordial relations between the state and national administrations.
3. The maintenance of pleasant relations between the state government and the people of the state.
4. Establishment and maintenance of cooperative relations between the state government and the political party responsible for it.
5. Loyalty to party and friends.
6. Refusal to harass the people by levying of new and onerous taxes.
7. A simple and businesslike manner in which problems of state were approached and solved.

"NOTE: The foregoing achievements were enumerated by Governor Sholts, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, who added: 'You may include as many of these items in your resume as you desire, and you may credit them to me as chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee.'"

8. To continue:
8. The type of appointees with whom he has surrounded himself as department heads and as members of boards and commissions.
9. Teamwork with his advisors and associates.
10. Recognition of women in state politics.
11. Holding the first legislative session for the constitutional 60 days, and consistent refusal to call a special session at an expense of several hundred thousand dollars to the people, which has been given in the face NOT only of great political pressure but also of inconceivable pressure from selfish financial interests.
12. Elimination of county officers' lobby during the legislative session.
13. Establishment of an uniform system of accounting through the state under the direction and supervision of the state auditor.
14. Consistent efforts with collecting agencies to enforce the collection of taxes, especially for the benefit of our schools.
15. Insistence that school guards budget the 1933-34 expenditures on the basis of the five million dollars reasonably to be anticipated as state aid rather than upon the basis of $7,500,000, guaranteed thus preventing what clearly would have been a $2,500,000 deficit in our schools this year.
16. Frank dealing with all situations affecting the welfare of the people without regard to political effect.
17. Initiation of a safety campaign to reduce the heavy death and accident toll on public highways of our state.
18. Compelling counties to levy proper millage for school purposes and thereby carry their fair proportion of school costs.
19. Securing the American Legion national convention for Miami.
20. The setting of pay for increased expenditures with an appropriation for saving, amounting to $1,750,000 per annum—$500,000.
21. General reduction of salaries.
22. School book cost investigation.
23. Disposition of state appointments without transfer of funds.

to make personal inspection of all properties at regular intervals.

In his report for the year Chief Cleveland states that the amount of property involved in fires last year is estimated at $310,587. It was necessary to put down 5759 feet of hose in handling the 100 fires during the year, and 293 feet of ladder space was utilized during the year.

Not in years has such a small amount of chemicals been used, the report indicates for only 160 gallons and one quart were needed to quench the 100 fires.

Practically every fire reported for last year, Chief Cleveland stated, resulted because of carelessness. "We can keep our fire losses down to a minimum every year if our residents will lend us a hand in removing all fire hazards as rapidly as they are noticed," he added.

Among his recommendations were: Cut grass and weeds away from every residence for a distance of at least 20 feet; be careful of oil or gasoline stoves, never permitting them to burn in homes while the owner is away, even for a short time; have all faulty electrical wiring repaired at once.

Here is the comparative estimate of fire losses in the city since 1912:

Year	Damage	No. Fires
1912	$ 3,250	10
1913	11,975	24
1914	3,415	26
1915	15,728	26
1916	4,125	19
1917	5,275	41
1918	24,775	41
1919	20,750	32
1920	4,750	22
1921	12,810	42
1922	26,100	49
1923	41,300	44
1924	22,187	47
1925	15,900	74
1926	8,900	132
1927	6,875	128
1928	8,615	128
1929	11,325	128
1930	9,925	104

Girls, Music Feature New Marx Bros. Movie

The Mad Marxs—all four of them—girls, girls, girls, led by vicious Keweenaw Turtles, and songs you'll be smirking for months.

Put them all together and they spell "Duck Soup," the comestically newest Paramount rib-tickling special, which opened a two day run at the Milane Theatre today.

In addition you'll see Margaret Dumont, the dignified actress who has been stamped on an elephant with several of the Marx Brothers' other pictures and Louie Calhern, who plays the minnow.
