New Head Of School Came To Sanford In 1926

...suitable for use as a propeller, and he and a group of scouts after three weeks' search, were given a medal for having located the most trees of this kind of hardwood in Texas. He became an Eagle Scout in 1915, receiving three palms, and later became assistant scoutmaster of a troop in Waco, Tex. Sanford, he was for 12 years scoutmaster of Troop "5" sponsored by Kiwanis, resigning only in order to take up civilian duties. He is now committee head for Troop "80".

In 1928, he married Miss Gladys Stempert, whose birthplace was Phoenix, Ariz. They have two sons, Robert, born in 1928, and Ernest, born in 1938. For 17 years, Mr. Morris has directed a summer camp for boys at Camp Winona near DeWitt, Fla. His scout training camp at Camp Winona near DeWitt, Fla. has made him a leader in the woodcraft, boating and outdoor life. In athletics, he is competent to direct, having been baseball captain in his senior year at high school, and co-captain of the basketball team in his senior year at Paris Junior College.

In church work he has been very active, being secretary of the Board of Deacons of the First Baptist Church, and chairman of the Open House Committee for maintenance of service men. For two years he was superintendent of the Sunday School.

Active in defense work, Mr. Morris is chairman of the committee on Education, Information and Morale of the Civilian Defense Council, chairman of the Seminole County Red Cross committee of First Aid, Life Saving, and Swimming, a member of the County Chamber of Commerce and an honor member of Kiwanis.

"I am looking forward with much interest to my new duties this fall as principal of Seminole High School," said Mr. Morris recently. Many of the students enrolled there, he has already taught. I will endeavor to carry on the work which Mr. G.E. McKay has so ably administered during his 21 years of service as principal.

Army Brings Peace To Riot Torn Detroit

...today ranged from 5:30 to 10 p.m. The streets were closed to traffic, probably would not be apparent until today.

Cancelled were Cleveland-Detroit baseball games and the day's horse racing program at the Michigan state fair grounds. Theaters were permitted to remain open until 9:15 P.M. and a curfew ordering all lawabiding citizens off the streets from 10 P.M. until 6 A.M. also continued in effect.

Governor Kelly, who invoked these restrictions, announced after a conference with army officers that the troops would stay in the Detroit area indefinitely. In recorder's court 20 Negroes convicted of disturbing the peace in Monday's rioting were sentenced to 90-day terms in the Detroit house of correction.

Troops Patrol Streets

Sent into the area under a proclamation of President Roosevelt that took note of "unlawful and insurrectionary proceedings," the troops in trucks and jeeps from which protruded machine guns and rifles and machine guns, patrolled the main streets and yesterday's battle sectors.

Monday those streets and the outlying sectors were the scenes of a hand-to-hand conflict between Whites and Negroes. The troops were enforcing a limited form of military control. There were more than 1000 of them on duty with no many more held in reserve in nearby army posts. In the speedy jeeps and trucks they were available for quick movement to any affected area in a tri-county zone declared by Governor Kelly to be in a state of emergency. Their equipment included armory cars and a Red Cross unit.

Governor Kelly's state-of-emergency order covered Wayne county (Detroit) and adjoining Oakland and Macomb counties, where many of the metropolitan area's larger armament factories are located.

The army forces were under command of Brig.-Gen. William E. Guhner of the sixth service command. He explained that martial law had not been proclaimed.

Rioters beat a negro whom they have just pulled off a street car during the height of the race rioting in Detroit. Six negroes were shot and killed, two policemen and more than 150 persons were hurt in the race rioting. At least 238 persons are held for assault and disturbing the peace. ...ment and not of the mine ownership.

"This arrangement," the statement said, "is predicated upon operation of the mines and their industrial production units by the United States government, and will automatically terminate if government control is vacated prior to the above mentioned date."

The indication of reliance on courts to get underground travel pay came in this paragraph of the announcement:

"The executive officers of the international union are hereby expressly authorized to exercise their discretion in the filing of suits at law or by any other necessary means, to protect the equity of the membership in the matter of portal to portal compensation, both as to current and deferred liability."

The UMW chief was asked after the policy committee meeting if there were any other arrangements with Sec. Ickes, government custodian of the mines. He said the committee statement spoke for itself. Asked whether the check off of union dues would be continued, Lewis merely pointed to the statement which said that "minimum wages and conditions" will be continued.

Operators Lose

While Lewis appeared to have given ground, in that he ordered the miners back without getting the $1.30 a day he has demanded, the mines by the same token appeared to be lost to the operators temporarily, if not for the duration of the war. How extensive a form government control will take, remained to be seen.

One point still was at issue—there had been no compliance with a W.L.R. order that the miners sign a contract embodying substantially the conditions under which they were ordered back to work.

Long Range Effect Of Labor Strife Is Analyzed

By John Grover

WASHINGTON—Possible long-range effects of the on-again, off-again coal strike have been overshadowed by its immediate threat to war production, but analysts here see it leaving its mark deep on the next several years.

Veteran observers attach great significance to Assistant President James Byrnes' espousal of anti-strike legislation. This move by the Administration's No. 2 man indicates a revolutionary Administration tack.

Always before, the administration fought off all attempts to pass legislation restricting organized labor. Within the past three weeks, Madame Secretary Perkins and other Administration spokesmen were all too ready to concede that the anti-strike proposal, if R.K. Justice were pre-approved at the White House, Cabinet members do not customarily run counter to the boss man's policy.

Startling Development

The startling development that Byrnes has thrown his considerable weight in favor of anti-strike laws marks the first time the Administration has tried anything but sweetly reasonable persuasion in dealing with labor chiefs.

The growing group of political wiseacres which sees Byrnes being groomed for a place on the 1944 presidential ticket reads deeper meaning into the choice of the assistant president as the first Administration spokesman to support restrictive laws.

It is their thesis the Administration has concluded that the lack of a firm labor policy has been increasingly unpopular over the country, and has determined to bow to this political wind. Byrnes, already being given a build-up, was named sponsor of the new labor line to increase his stature further.

It is the informed consensus that organized labor's days as a pampered political darling are numbered. But no well-posted observer contends that this means an era of labor-baiting and unpopularity is about to begin. Far from it.

What the Smith-Connelly bill presages is simply labor's coming attend the regular weekly drill tomorrow evening at the Army in order to make definite arrangements for the Sunday morning rifle target practice at the Country Club Range. This practice will be held early in order that members may return by noon, he said.

Students of the elementary schools, Junior High School of Sanford, Fla., will be required to attend morning sessions for the next six or eight weeks in order to make up work they register any morning at the Junior High School. It was announced today by H.E. Morris. Classes will begin next Monday, he said, and full credit will be given for any make-up work completed.

of age, if the interpretation of majority analytical opinion is correct. In other words, labor will be forced, by the middle-of-the-road legislation, to accept responsibilities to the national community commensurate with the privileges granted in the past ten years.

Another development freely predicted in the press galleries is the indicated eclipse of the old time labor boss. The recent troubles in industry have caused even staunch friends of organized labor, who support labor's gains to conclude that some curb on personal powers is necessary.

Reforms Favored

It is notable that many who favor continuance and even expansion of organized labor's social gains at the same time differentiate sharply between rank-and-file labor and its entrenched leaders. It is also reported by some congressmen that large blocs of organized labor also favor reforms forced if necessary, to prevent labor dictatorship and to make the labor movement more a democracy and less an oligarchy of self-perpetuating policy committees who give orders instead of carrying out the directives of the membership.

Even Senator Robert Wagner, labor's elder statesman and best friend, protested sharply at the reported use of the Labor Relations Act bearing his name to justify the coal strike.

So, these are the developing trends in the labor picture, accelerated by the coal strike, as generally seen in Washington: (1) labor's basic gains will be protected; (2) labor will be forced to accept added responsibilities; (3) the Administration will not be so amenable to every whim of labor chiefs; (4) powers of the labor titans will be curbed.

Reginald Birch Is Dead At 87. Drew Little Lord Fauntleroy

NEW YORK CITY, June 23.—Reginald Bathurst Birch, artist and illustrator, who was best known, perhaps, for his illustration of Frances Hodgson Burnett's "Little Lord Fauntleroy," died recently at the home for incurables, 343rd Avenue and 183d Street, the Bronx. He was 87 years old.

Surviving are a son, Rodney B. Birch, and a daughter, Mrs. H. D. Ferguson.

Mr. Birch was an epicure of the 19th-century era who found it impossible to adjust either to his taste or his talent to either of the 20th-century eras, or to the cocktail-hour smartness. But, although he passed his later years in virtual poverty alone in a fourth-floor studio of the old Bloodgood home at 178 Fifth Avenue, he was wont to remark as he flicked cigarette ashes on the floor, "Although I was what was called a successful man, I never saved any money. But I had a good time, you know, and I don't regret it."

As advancing years brought deep lines of good living rather than worry to the face of the man who illustrated "Little Lord Fauntleroy," he found himself restrained by his meager pocket-book from enjoying life's pleasures. He became almost a total stranger at The Players, his only club, where once he was a familiar figure. "When you can't return drink at the bar, it's embarrassing, don't you know?"

Reginald Birch, as he was invariably known to his contemporaries, was born in London on May 2, 1856, the son of William Alexander and Isabella Higgins Birch. His father was president of the Hooghly River Navigation Company in Calcutta, and the last was placed in the care of his grandfather, who owned an estate on the Isle of Jersey. The old man was the prototype of the Earl in "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

It was during this period that Mr. Birch received an indelible impression of the type of character he was later to portray. Each night, following dinner, the ladies would retire, and the eighty-four-year-old grandfather would then reach for the decanter of port, pouring two glasses of it. One he held, the other he proffered to the five-year-old boy beside him.

Then, standing, the two would face each other. "Reggie, my lad, to Her Majesty the Queen!" his grandfather would toast Victoria gravely as the youngster clinked wine glasses with him.

All Spars Located In Luxury Hotel At Palm Beach

PALM BEACH, June 23.—(Special)—In at least one respect Uncle Sam's worries in connection with the SPARS, members of the U. S. Coast Guard Women's Reserve, are over for the duration. He knows where his hundreds of enlisted trainees may be found at any given time. Instead of being scattered through seven or eight naval training stations from Stillwater, Okla., to Boston, Mass., they are all in one place now—the former Palm Beach Biltmore Hotel here.

Informally opened a week ago last Monday, June 14, amid scenes of confusion caused by hasty alterations to ground and lobby floors of the $10,000,000 resort structure, inadequate male personnel and special equipment, delay shipments of uniforms and other supplies, this newest Coast Guard Training Station is now pretty well "in the groove," according to Comdr. F. T. Kenner, Executive Officer.

Lt. Teresa M. Crowley, Assistant Executive Officer in charge of training, reported over the week-end 351 "boats" from all sections of the country, 367 trainees transferred from other stations, a ship's company of 88, and 31 SPAR officers, have of the kinks ironed out of what is expected to be among the smoothest of training routines.

Captain William J. Keester, recently named Commanding Officer of the station, arrived in Palm Beach Sunday, June 20. Mr. Keester is a native of Chicago, and a graduate of the U. S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn. He came to Palm Beach from Washington, D. C., where he was assigned to duty as the Chief of Operations.

Lt. Virginia Blunt, national SPAR training officer, visited the Training Station in Palm Beach last week to inspect and observe the operations and to interview department heads. Lt. Blunt played an important part in selecting the site for the Training Station and has been the officer in charge of purchasing supplies and equipment. She returned to Washington on Sunday.

The formal commissioning will be held July 7, at which time Vice-Admiral R. B. Wessche, Lt. Comdr. Dorothy C. Stratton and other Washington officials will be present.

Classes In Canning To Start Monday

New classes in canning, preparation and processing of foods for home use will be started Monday, June 28, at the High School home economics room and cafeteria by Mrs. Gladys Smith and Miss Gertrude Vinson. It was announced by Alex. T. Johnson, director of the Rural War Production program. These classes will be held in the afternoon and evening and the only cost will be for containers.

He also announced three new classes to open on the same date at the school farm building. W. D. Hoffman will direct a course in tractor, automobile and truck repair from 8:30 A.M. to 1:00 P.M. daily, which while open to anyone is designed to enable farmers to make their own repairs. Young people who wish to take this course may obtain high school credit by doing so, he said.

James Webb will direct a course in farm machinery repair and construction, held at the school farm Monday and Friday evenings, which is also designed to aid farmers make repairs to their machinery, and to relieve the pressure on repair shops.

A woodworking class will be conducted, starting Monday, by R. A. Spier, who will aid farmers in construction of needed wooden articles, poultry brooders, fattening bins or shopwork benches. Arrangements to enter these classes may be made by either contacting the instructors or calling Mr. Johnson at the school farm.

Birds of Different Feather May Yet Flock Together

By JOHN GROVER
AP Features Writer
BELTSVILLE, Md.—Science has almost succeeded in getting birds of different feathers to flock together, at least for military purposes.

They've made the "wrong" kind of feathers look and feel like the "right" kind. That's mighty important, because from the Army's point of view there's an acute shortage of the right kind and a plentiful supply of the wrong.

And what does an Army need feathers for? Alaska, the Yukon, Iceland and Greenland happen to be a quarter of key strategic areas. They also happen to be colder than a mother-in-law's kiss. Feather-insulated sleeping bags are a must for northern troops.

Eiderdown, best of feathers, is best and scarcest. It happens that the ducks nest in those same strategic areas from which the Eskimo down-gathers have been evacuated.

Down and feathers from domestic geese and ducks can be used, and the military has grabbed the whole supply. There's even a premium ceiling price for ducks shipped to market with their feathers on, instead of plucked.

That exhausts the normal source of "right" feather. That's where science grabbed the ball. In the person of J. J. Hardy, fibers expert with the U. S. Department of Agriculture experimental farm here.

By far the largest number of fowl sent to U. S. markets are chickens. It happens that chickens have the poorest feathers for insulation and warmth. Chicken feathers sell for about a nickel a pound, while down markets for about $5, which gives you an idea of relative value.

There are a few "right" feathers on the average chicken, but they are so outnumbered by the "wrong" feathers that chicken dealers don't bother to separate them. Chicken feathers were sold in pre-war days for the cheapest kind of upholstery and mattress stuffing.

Hardy had two problems: (1) Separating the "right" chicken feathers from the "wrong" ones; (2) making the "wrong" ones good.

"Right" feathers are downlike and fluffy. Most chicken feathers have a heavy central rib and not much fluff. Hardy uses a "puff" principle to separate the good from the bad. It's like a kid keeping feathers in the air by puffing at it.

The scientist built his "puff" separator—a vacuum cleaner and four big pasteboard cartons. The vacuum cleaner air current "puffs" the feathers through the four boxes, connected by big pipes at different levels. Only the fluffiest feathers are wafted into the fourth box.

Puff Test

The "wrong" feathers that flunk the puff test go into a maceration machine. This is like a hammer mill for chopping stock feed. It gives the feathers an awful beating, breaking up the spiny central rib and fluffing the feather fluff and down. Fed through the pulper again, the chicken down is collected and rib remnants discarded.

This processed chicken down is only slightly inferior to duck or goose feathers. Natural duck and goose feathers for a sleeping bag weigh three pounds chicken down only a quarter-pound more.

While developed primarily to check-out for unavailable duck and goose down for military purposes the new technique for processing chicken feathers opens up possibilities for added revenue for chicken farmers. Both the maceration and puffing operations can easily be done on the farm. After the processed down can be sent to the Army.

The Nash-Kelvinator Corporation is now turning out Sikorsky helicopters in quantity for the Army. Civilians look forward to employing them for every day transportation after the war, as they are readily adapted and extremely simple to operate.

So Sorry Spectacle

Detroit's race riot which started Sunday and continued throughout Monday has caused the deaths of some 28 persons, all but three of them negroes, and serious injuries to over seven hundred. Property damage affecting both sides, while not officially estimated, has been described by reporters on the scene as making the section look as if it had been hit by a German panzer division.

No doubt many of these negroes were from the South. They had been lured to the factory districts by the fabulous tales of the high wages paid in the war industries. They had been led to believe that they would find in Detroit the fair treatment, the fine living conditions, the wonderful opportunities which they were told they had been denied in the South. They went looking for the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow and they found death, destruction and humiliation.

In the city of Detroit 25 negroes were lynched within one 24-hour period. Last year in the entire South, there were five negroes lynched. The year before there were four and the year before that three. It is doubtful if in the last ten years there have been 25 negroes lynched in the whole South. Certainly there has been no such disgraceful tragedy as characterized this barbaric outbreak in Detroit. We would not say that race riots cannot occur in the South—ignorant and prejudiced groups on both sides are continually stirred up by outside influences.

But in the South where the negro and white man have lived side by side for generations, and where both are dependent upon each other for their economic welfare, there should be no excuse for misunderstandings. There should be greater effort than ever among responsible leaders of both groups, to avoid bitterness and conflicts. And there should be no tolerance of outsiders who try to stir up trouble.

The negro can help by carefully observing the traditions of courtesy and respect as he knows them, and by giving an honest day's work for a fair day's pay. And the white man can help by trying a little harder than ever before to see that the negro is treated with justice and fairness, to see that his opportunities for better health and education are increased and that his living standards are improved.

The Man Goes In For Banks
It looks as if C. H. McNulty of Melbourne never goes on a journey without coming home with another bank. For he now has four in Central Florida, including that at Melbourne, the First National of Kissimmee, the Florida State Bank of Sanford and the Bank of New Smyrna.

Since the war is all thriving and growing, Banker McNulty evidently knows his business and of course, as every good banker must, the business of quite a number of other people, although credit must be shared with his skilled staff and the able directors with whom he works.

We are glad that Mr. McNulty sees in Central Florida an opportunity on which he is willing to venture his fortune, his experience and his time, for he could have located in any other place of his selection but chose Florida—Orlando Sentinel.

Five Year Food Plan

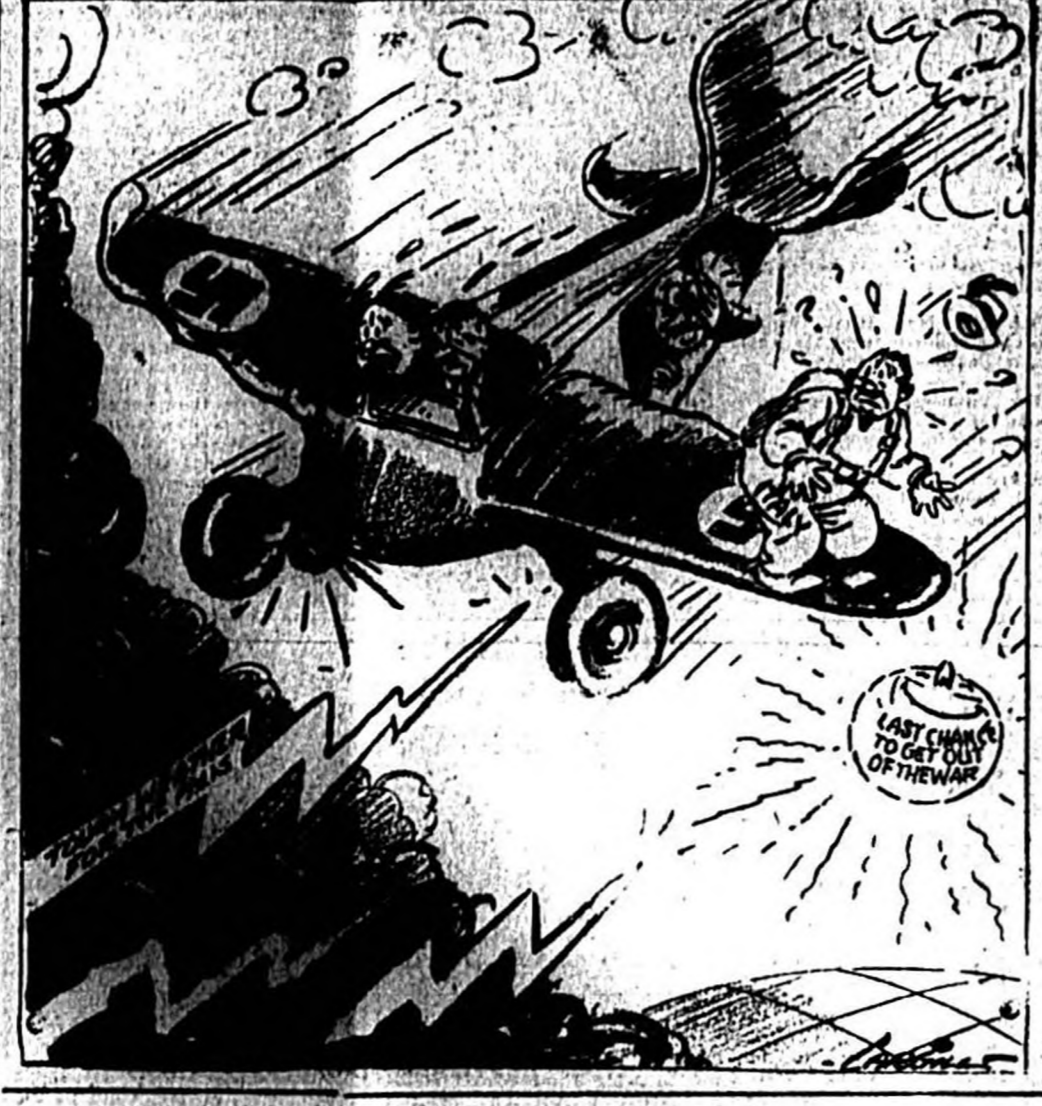

The Department of the Interior has worked out a five-year program for increasing food production. This year the increase will not be large. It takes time to get such a plan into operation. But the gains should show up more plainly beginning the year afterward, and keep on increasing.

It is evident that the war will be needed in the next few years. As soon as the war is over, the nation now engaged in fighting will begin to grow their own food. All of them, it is true, produce some food now, but in nothing like the amounts that are needed at present or will be needed immediately after the war.

Twenty Years Ago Today

Twenty years ago today, the United States was still a young nation, and the world was in the midst of a great struggle. The American people were united in their support of the Allied forces, and the nation was producing more goods than ever before.

Food Subsidies

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Grant that many of the difficulties in this war-time food situation are inherent, they are not insurmountable, especially if the government is willing to take the necessary steps to increase production and distribution.

Wounded Major Writes Wife 'Got 14 Germans'

Brooklyn Veteran Of World War 1, Adds Two More Medals

NEW YORK CITY, June 23.—Casualty files released recently by the War Department contained the names of a New York bank teller killed in action, two former Brooklyn physicians wounded while on duty with the Army Medical Corps and a major from Brooklyn wounded just before the Germans capitulated in North Africa on May 8.

Two days after he was wounded, the major, Major Charles A. Ellis, wrote to his wife, Mrs. Nina L. Ellis of Brooklyn, that "I got fourteen Germans in two days and two machine-gun nests." He said he had been wounded in the right leg and suffered contusions of the spine and the pelvis. The story of the actual fighting he led in Italy. Major Ellis received the oak leaf sprayer "to go with the Purple Heart medal which he won in the World War." He was said nine times in the other war and in action last Nov. 1, 1918, at French Morocco, when he saved the lives of two Army men. Major Ellis received the Silver Star.

A veteran fighter, Major Ellis joined the Army in 1915 and served in the Mexican campaign in 1916. He left the Army after the World War and became a Secret Service agent but rejoined the Army two years ago.

His wife, Mrs. Helen Nadelman

Hickory, of 45 Hawthorne Street, Brooklyn, visits him every day. He is twenty-five and was graduated two years ago from New York University Medical School. Mrs. Hurwitz's mother said yesterday that her son-in-law says he "will be happy to go back wherever they send him."

Another Brooklyn physician wounded in North Africa, Captain Sidney Benfeld, is thirty-two. He entered the Army two and a half years ago. Shortly before he was wounded last month he wrote to his mother, Mrs. Molly Benfeld, of Brooklyn, that "We are doing a good job. Don't worry. Hope to be home soon."

Railroad Travel 26 4/5% Greater Than In 1939

Williamson 'Declares Range Up To 618%

NEW YORK CITY, June 23.—During the first three months of 1943 the volume of passenger travel in the United States, measured by the number of passengers carried, was 26 4/5 percent greater than the corresponding period over the corresponding 39 percent period, F. E. Williamson, president of the New York Central system, announced yesterday following a meeting here of the Eastern Railroad Presidents' Conference, which he is chairman.

Mr. Williamson warned that the summer period for passenger travel will provide further stiff tests for the passenger-carrying capacity of the railroads. The increase in passenger travel, reflecting principally war activities, has been far from uniform throughout the country and ranges from 133 percent higher compared with early 1939 in New England, where runs are relatively short, to 618 percent in the Southwest, where runs are long, he pointed out.

The Eastern district as a whole shows an increase of 168 percent, well below the national average. This district, comprising New England, the central Eastern and Great Lakes states, in the first quarter of 1939, accounted for more than one-half of the entire passenger travel in the United States, but in the first quarter this year it represented only 58 percent of total travel.

OPA Bans Director's Black Restrictions

JACKSONVILLE, June 23.—(AP)—Newly announced restrictions on the sale of gasoline to Negroes in Jacksonville, Fla., were declared null and void by the War Relocation Authority.

"It is simply common sense to prohibit the sale of gasoline to the colored race in the same manner as it is prohibited to the Japanese race," said a spokesman for the War Relocation Authority, Jacksonville, in a statement.

"The War Relocation Authority is in the same position as the War Relocation Authority in the United States," he said. "It is the policy of the War Relocation Authority to treat all races equally and to prohibit the sale of gasoline to the colored race in the same manner as it is prohibited to the Japanese race."

He further stated: "We have when they are fair and practical, but we don't want to be concerned with rationing for the sake of rationing, and if this matter were left to me I would remove Florida and Georgia from the Eastern restriction zone until such time as the matter now in question is such that it will ever exist unless it is artificially created."

The most appalling event, as far as the ladies were concerned, in connection with Winter Haven's war bond rally, was the auctioning of 25 pair of Nylon hose.

China's history goes back to 2505 B.C.
