the "day after tomorrow." Interesting. Too deep for me, however. To come to understand there's so little nifference between past and future, that's pretty profound. Nice notion for the gaunt philosopher. But how can a western worlder comprenend it? He can't, maybe, I am a petty, pushy, pannchy fellow, who would kill a cow in her tracks if I were hungry, and still this prejudice clings, this manic consolation, this mid die-aged hope, this visceral conviction that the slow yesterday was different, goodbye to it and godspeed, but on the quick tomorrow will be something else at last.

For Bus Stop Change

NORTH ORLANDO - A situation was brought to the attention of Village Council at a meeting held last night. Councilman Pat Del Villaggio reported that on the first day of school he observed children standing in the middle of the highway waiting for the school bus. Del Villaggio said that he called school officials and inquired as to why they did not utilize the regular bus stops.

He was told that the bus would pick up the children at First Street and Edgemon Avenue regardless of inclement weather, Del Villaggio said that he also asked the reason for this decision, and was told that "they had a problem with two or three children."

Del Villaggio said that it was "ridiculous to punish all the children because of the actions of a few, and the street with two good bus stops." Mayor Clifford Jordan concurred and said that he saw "no good reason why the buses couldn't use the routes which were constructed for the health and safety of the children," Jordan continued, "If we have to The council voted to issue a letter to School Supt.
