More gang violence erupts

LOS ANGELES — At least three people were killed during the weekend in gang violence, despite another in a series of police sweeps designed to take gang members off inner-city streets, authorities said.

A fourth person was shot and killed during an attempted robbery in a beach parking lot along Pacific Coast Highway early Sunday, and police were investigating it as a possible gang-related attack.

In that shooting, Francisco Gutierrez, 22, was killed and James Whaley, age unknown, was wounded about 12:35 a.m. Sunday, said detective Bernard Rogers of the Police Department's westside anti-gang unit.

Rogers said someone approached Gutierrez and a group of his friends, who did not appear to be gang members, and tried to rob the victim.

Landlord suspected of murders

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The boarding house manager suspected of killing at least five elderly residents for their Social Security checks and burying them in shallow graves was once convicted of drugging people she met at bars and robbing them, police said.

Investigators digging through the yard of the neat, two-story Victorian boarding house Sunday discovered the fourth and fifth bodies, and planned to obtain a search warrant today so they can examine bank records and look for more possible victims in a shed, the ground under it and the dirt floor of a lean-to.

Police said social workers and others had provided a list of eight people who are missing and may be linked to the case, but said they believe two of the people are still alive.

Igwebulike lifts Bucs to win

PONTIAC, Mich. — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers finally found somebody they can beat that isn't named Green Bay.

"It's a good win."

Tampa Bay coach Ray Perkins said Sunday after his Bucs stopped the Detroit Lions, 23-20, on Donald Igwebulike's 52-yard field goal with 10 seconds to play.

Tampa Bay is now 3-8 after stopping a five-game slide.

"Any win is a good win," said Perkins, whose team had not recorded a non-strike victory over any team except Green Bay since opening last season with a win over Atlanta. That was 23 games ago.

Partly cloudy and mild today

The fog this morning will return Tuesday but not quite as dense. Highs today and tomorrow in the 80s, dropping into the 60s tonight. Very little chance of rain but humidity will stay high.

Mock countdown begins

Atlantis blastoff just 16 days away

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — The crew of the shuttle Atlantis, decked out in bulky spacesuits, climbed aboard their ship early today for the final hours of a practice countdown setting the stage for blastoff in 16 days on a secret military mission.

Atlantis' crew — commander Robert "Hoot" Gibson, co-pilot Guy Gardner, Richard "Mike" Mullane, Jerry Ross and William Shepherd — left their quarters about 7:45 a.m. EST and headed for launch pad 39B, duplicating launch-day procedures in a full-scale simulation required of all shuttle fliers.

all shuttle fliers.

All five were strapped into Atlantis' split-level crew cabin by 8:50 a.m. as the countdown conduct in secrecy, ticked down toward zero.

The astronauts are scheduled to blast off for real on the 27th shuttle mission around Nov. 30, although the date could slip a day or so because of work to replace a balky valve in a hydraulic unit.

To make the practice countdown as realistic as possible, the shuttle crew put on bright-orange 70-pound spacesuits that are part of a new emergency bail out system implemented in the wake of the Challenger disaster.

"Wish it was launch day," Gibson said at the launch pad Sunday under a clear blue sky. "We want to save some of this weather for another couple of weeks."

Soviet shuttle set for Tuesday launch

United Press International

MOSCOW — Soviet rocket engineers readied the first Russian space shuttle Buran for blastoff Tuesday on an unmanned maiden voyage that was delayed two weeks ago by last-second mechanical problems.

The official news agency Tass reported Saturday that blastoff was planned for 6 a.m. Tuesday Moscow time — 10 p.m. EST

Defeated candidates cry foul

By SANDRA BOUCHANINE
Herald staff writer

Two local candidates who were defeated in elections last week say negative campaigning may have been the determining factor.

David Gunter, Longwood's incumbent mayor, and Randall Morris who gave up a Lake Mary commission seat to run for mayor of that city, offered candid assessments of their unsuccessful campaigns.

Gunter was defeated by Gene Farach and Morris was defeated by Dick Fess. Both the winners disputed the negativism charge, attributing their victories more to their positions on issues.

Fess won by 37 votes although his opponent spent nearly $2,000 more than him in the campaign. Farach spent $3,368.05 in defeating Gunter, who spent $1999.39. Farach, Gunter said, was supported by Longwood Commissioner Hank Hardy.

When asked to respond about whether the outcome of the election had something to do with negative campaigning, Morris and Gunter said that it did.

In Lake Mary, Morris pointed to the challenge by Fess, at a forum held in Lake Mary one week before the elections, that candidates submit to a drug test to prove to the community that they are drug free. The act of being tested was intended to coincide with drug-free week and school children's pledges to remain drug-free.

Morris and Paul Tremel, an incumbent who was re-elected to commission seat 4, refused to take the drug test, saying it was unconstitutional. "From a constitutional standpoint, it's not a good precedent to set," Morris said.

Because Morris refused to take Fess up on his challenge, Morris said it was an "automatic assumption of guilt." He said, "The thing was hammered very quietly behind the scenes."

Fess said, "The drug test was for everyone. If you're going to eat at the public trough, you have to be subjected to public scrutiny."

He also said, "We don't want to talk about negative campaigning. I can't stand the negative side of it."

Work under way on two major wastewater treatment contracts

By BRAD CHURCH
Herald city editor

SANFORD — Work was under way today on two major contracts in Sanford's wastewater treatment system and the related water reclamation system.

One contractor is working at the wastewater treatment plant at the end of Poplar Avenue, where a giant hole has been excavated for an additional clarifier to be built where the drying beds were formerly located. A clarifier removes impurities.

Bill Simmons, city engineer, said the third clarifier will allow the city to take one out of service for repairs without affecting the system.

That contract also involves construction of two tertiary filtering beds which are designed to take almost all suspended solids out of the wastewater.

High-speed chase

This car and another vehicle collided this morning on Interstate 4 in the vicinity of State Route 430. Authorities said one of the vehicles crossed the center divider and collided with the other. The southwest lanes were blocked as a result of the accident. Altamonte Springs rescue workers indicated the vehicle in the eastbound lane was being pursued by a Florida Highway patrolman when the accident occurred. No other details were available at press time.

Lorenzo cannibalizing Eastern

Stripping continues despite 1986 promise

Concrete reef may reduce erosion

PALM BEACH — Environmental regulators are studying an innovative 600-foot reef built of concrete blocks to determine whether the wave-breaking barrier can be used to reduce beach erosion elsewhere.

German-born engineer Hans Rauch laid 23 pre-stressed blocks end to end to form the barrier six months ago in front of Willis du Pont's oceanfront mansion in Palm Beach.

The $180,000 reef, paid for by du Pont, uses a stair-step design facing the ocean to catch incoming waves. As each wave is tipped, its energy force is broken by the 20-ton segments.

Florida Atlantic University engineer Newman Lin, who has been studying the reef on a contractual basis, said the slower-paced waves actually travel higher on the beach than unchecked waves.

But the mild current carries trapped sand from behind the barrier, depositing it north and south along the nearby shore, Lin said.

Since the reef was installed, the beach directly behind it has stabilized and there have been positive effects up to 300 feet north and south of it, Lin said. To the north, erosion caused by an old seawall has stopped, and to the south, the beach has widened by up to 3 feet, he said.

FSU student killed in dorm accident

TALLAHASSEE — A Florida State University student was electrocuted when he touched two vending machines while standing on his head in an attempt to cure the hiccups, campus police said.

Police identified the victim as Patrick O. Wallis, 26, of West Palm Beach, who at about 12:15 a.m. Saturday either touched or fell against a candy machine and a change machine in Rogers Hall dormitory.

The English and philosophy student was pronounced dead at Tallahassee Memorial Regional Medical Center at 1:26 a.m.

University officials were being cautious in their statements about the incident, but an autopsy showed Wallis' death was "consistent with electrocution," said Lt. Jack Handley of the FSU police.

It will take three to six weeks to complete the official report, Handley said.

$8 million lotto prize has winner

TALLAHASSEE — A ticket sold in Winter Garden matched all six numbers in this week's $8 million Lotto drawing, marking the fourth week in a row that someone has won the jackpot, lottery secretary Rebecca Paul said.

"This continues the longest Lotto winning streak we've had since the game began," Paul said.

Clyde and Alberta Thompson of St. Cloud claimed $8.9 million Nov. 1. Three yacht builders from Jacksonville won a similar prize the week before that, and two sisters from Indiantown won $31.5 a week earlier.

Lotto computers showed a single ticket, sold in the Orlando suburb of Winter Garden, had all six numbers in this week's drawing. The owner had not come forward Sunday. The winning numbers were 9, 22, 23, 29, 31 and 44.

The jackpot was estimated at $8 million, though the actual figure may climb. Next week's jackpot is also estimated at $8 million.

In addition to the grand prize winner, 339,000 other tickets matched some of the numbers to qualify for $4.1 million in smaller prizes. Payouts were:

- 307 tickets had five winning numbers, good for $3,524.50.
- 17,085 tickets had four winning numbers, good for $92.50.
- 322,548 tickets had three winning numbers, worth $4.50.

Haitians' drowning prompts call for probe

MIAMI — The head of the Haitian Refugee Center in Miami called Sunday for an investigation to determine what role the Coast Guard's interdiction policy played in the drowning of two Haitians.

Gerard Jean-Juste, the center's executive director, said he wanted to know what happened when the Coast Guard boarded the Haitians' 25-foot wooden boat in the Windward Passage off Haiti Friday.

"It's the result of this interdiction policy that we're seeing Haitian boats capsize," Jean-Juste said. "I want the Coast Guard to bring them to the United States to find out what happened. Was the Haitian boat hit by the Coast Guard or what?"

"If they can not bring back all the survivors to the United States, at least bring some of them back for history. We should find out what happened," Jean-Juste said.

Petty Officer Jerry Snyder said the Coast Guard's ship did not collide with the Haitian's boat.

He also said an agent with the Immigration and Naturalization Service decided to return the passengers to Haiti. "We just pick them up and do what INS says to do with them. We are just doing the job of transportation," Snyder said.

From United Press International reports

MIAMI (UPI) — In the two years since Eastern Airlines was sold to Texas Air, nearly one in three employees has left or been fired, its only profitable assets have been sold, and its losses continue to mount.

Eastern continues to shrink while Texas Air's other airline, the barely unionized, lower cost Continental, continues to grow, according to a Sunday report in The Miami Herald.

The newspaper noted that when Texas Air owner Frank Lorenzo took control of Eastern Nov. 15, 1986, he promised he would make no changes in the airline.

"We have no plans to diminish the size of the airline," Lorenzo said when he agreed to buy Eastern.

Lorenzo, however, said that considering Eastern's huge losses — $233.7 million so far this year — he had no choice but to raise cash by selling the company's best assets.

"We are committed to ensuring the liquidity of Eastern Airlines. As the company loses the kind of money it is losing, that requires selling the infrastructure of the company," Lorenzo said.

Lorenzo's Houston holding company, Texas Air, already owned Continental and New York Air when it bought Eastern. Lorenzo soon acquired People Express and Frontier and folded them and New York Air into Continental.

Lorenzo broke Continental's unions by taking the company into bankruptcy proceedings. Eastern's union leaders insist Lorenzo also wants to force them out and turn Eastern into a lower-cost, non-union operation.

They accused Lorenzo of cannibalizing Eastern for the benefit of Continental and Texas

Air, the newspaper reported.

Eastern has had three major rounds of layoffs since Texas Air took over, and now has some 12,500 fewer employees than in the fall of 1986.

"There's a lot of stress," said Michele Glover, a nine-year flight attendant who is trying to hold on for one more year to qualify for a pension. "This is almost a textbook study of how to run an airline into the ground."

In other changes at Eastern since Texas Air took over, the paper noted:

— Since the fall of 1986, 30 of Eastern's 286 jetliners have been grounded, sold or leased and Eastern has retreated from 14 cities.

— According to reports filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission last year Eastern paid $15.1 million in management and administrative fees to Texas Air.

— Eastern also agreed to pay Texas Air a service fee of 1 cent for virtually every gallon of fuel it used, an agreement the unions say could siphon millions of dollars a year from Eastern.

— Eastern also funneled at least $30 million to Continental for maintaining standby non-union pilots and flight attendants for possible strike-breaking duty at Eastern. The arrangement ended last month.

— Eastern also failed to collect a $16 million debt owed by Texas Air since the 1986 take-over.

— Eastern sold its System One reservations system to Texas Air for a $100 million note. Two years ago, Eastern's investment banker valued the system at more than $200 million.

Eastern then ended up paying a Texas Air unit $1.65 for every seat it booked through the system, spending $130 million a year to use the system it once owned.

— Earlier this year, Eastern tried to transfer its Northeast shuttle, its only consistently profitable operation, to a Texas Air unit for $225 million in cash and notes. The unions blocked the deal and Eastern later sold the shuttle to Donald Trump for $365 million in cash.

MackKay sends recount requests to officials

TALLAHASSEE — Democrat Kenneth "Buddy" MackKay asked Saturday for a recount in his 27,649-vote loss to Connie Mack in Florida's U.S. Senate race as top state Republicans said he should accept defeat.

Messengers were carrying petitions for recounts to five counties to local elections officials, who were expected to receive them within the Sunday midnight deadline, said Pat Seitz, an aide to MackKay.

"By tomorrow afternoon, everybody will have them," Seitz said Saturday.

MackKay acted as Florida Republican leaders warned he would soil his reputation if he contests the election results.

"Buddy MackKay is well respected and has a long history in Florida politics. It would be a shame to see his reputation tarnished by not recognizing that the people of Florida have spoken," said state GOP chairwoman Jeanie Austin.

"Buddy MackKay is simply wrong not to let the decision of the majority of Florida voters stand. He shouldn't deny Florida voters the final say on the Senate race," she said.

"After all, in baseball, when you're down 3 to 2 and the ninth inning is over, the losing team does not get extra innings to reverse the score," said Mitch Batwot, an aide to Mack.

MackKay's petitions were being sent to elections officials in Dade, Broward, Palm Beach, Hillsborough and Orange counties, where the number of votes cast in the Senate race were as much as 24 percent lower than the number cast in the presidential race.

Copies of the petitions were delivered to Mack, the Republican, as a courtesy, Seitz said.

About 170,000 ballots were being questioned.

Extinction near for Key deer

United Press International

BIG PINE KEY — Biologists estimate there are fewer than 300 Key deer left in the lower Florida Keys, and warn that extinction is almost certain for the tiny, dog-sized cousin of the white-tailed deer.

Forty-six endangered Key deer have died this year and 65 died last year. The Miami Herald reported Sunday. Most were struck by vehicles.

"The key deer is in serious trouble, no doubt about it," said W.D. Klimstra, an expert on the species. "Whether we can turn it around, I just don't know."

The deer have lived for centuries in the pine forests in the lower Keys. But their numbers have dwindled rapidly as the once-isolated islands have become covered with paved roads and housing subdivisions.

The remaining deer lounge on lawns, nibble in vegetable gardens, and graze along the highways, where they are killed by the score. They have become so tame they walk right up to humans.

"The Key deer are just an indicator, like the canaries that coal miners used to carry down into the mines," said Deborah Holle, director of the National Key Deer Wildlife Refuge. "The dying Key deer are telling us that we're losing the ecology of the Keys."

The deer were on the verge of extinction 40 years ago, with only an estimated 50 left. The public rallied to save them in the 1940s.

Bush nears end of post-election vacation

United Press International

JUPITER ISLAND — President-elect George Bush capped his post-election vacation Sunday by going with his mother to church, where the minister noted that parents are pleased when children "are showing promise."

Bush spent a final day of his four-day vacation in the exclusive Jupiter Island community — where his mother, Dorothy, 87, has a home — before he planned to return to Washington to begin in earnest the transition to the White House.

Bush and his wife, Barbara, attended services at the Christ Memorial Chapel, a Spanish-style stucco building at the seventh tee of Jupiter Island's country club.

The president-elect's mother arrived at the chapel in a golf cart driven by her daughter, Nancy Bush Ellis. The Bush family sat together during the services by the Right Rev. John Allin, who drew chuckles from the elderly congregation when he noted how good it is when children visit their parents.

"It is especially pleasing when those young people are showing promise and they've gained employment," Allin said, "and even when they've gotten promotions. And so we rejoice with the parents who have that to celebrate."

Bush was to return to Washington Monday, and some nominations to his Cabinet are anticipated. Bush's first selection was for his close friend and campaign manager, James Baker, to become secretary of state.

After the church service, Bush, with his mother at his side, was asked if he had made any more decisions on Cabinet appointments. Dodging the question in a Reaganesque fashion, Bush said, "I'll have to ask my mother."

Bending to her and pretending to listen, he said, "She says no comment."

Bush also had no comment about last week's drop of more than 60 points in the stock market and the declining value of the dollar.

In Washington, President Reagan, returning to the White House from Camp David, was asked why the market had not responded more favorably to Bush's election.

"I've given up on trying to guess why the market does that," he said. "I don't think it has anything to do with George Bush."

Bush was a bit more open in discussing his fishing efforts. When asked how many fish he caught, Bush held up thumb and forefinger to make a zero sign.

"But how much fun am I having? A lot," he said, throwing out his arms.

After a brief visit with his mother, Bush abandoned his motorcade and rode back speedboat to his hosts' oceanfront home in Gulf Stream, Fla., about 45 miles away.

Bush has spent a long weekend recuperating from the campaign at the home of longtime friends William and Sarah Farish. The vice president has kept a low profile, spending his time fishing, golfing, swimming and jogging.

More charges filed on inmate

SANFORD — An 18-year-old Sanford man already in jail on Sanford forgery charges had similar charges added by Longwood police at the Seminole County Jail Friday.

The Longwood charges against Travis Boutwell of 71 Sanford Court are uttering a forgery and grand theft.

The charges stem from accusations that he cashed three stolen checks in October at First Federal of Seminole, 901 E. State Road 434, Longwood, police said. He was arrested last week in the Sanford case. Bond is $1,000. In the Longwood case the checks had a combined value of $2,400.

Gunplay brings arrest

SANFORD — A man whom Sanford police say stood in a woman's yard, fired shots and threatened to kill her, has been arrested.

Sammie Lee Miller, 45, of 1936 Lake Drive, Sanford, was arrested on 13th Street at Palmetto Avenue, after he fled from the house of Shirley Stile, 42, of 1311 Pine St.

Miller is charged with aggravated assault, carrying a concealed firearm and possession of a firearm by a felon. Bond is $1,000.

He was arrested at 8:33 p.m. Saturday after he left the scene of the gunplay and was stopped by police. Police said they found a handgun under the front seat of Miller's car.

Man shoved deputy, arrested

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A man accused of shoving and cursing a Seminole County sheriff's deputy and then lighting the deputy who prevented his flight, is charged with battery on a policeman.

Troy Rossa Bouey, 21, of 129 Salem St., Altamonte Springs, was arrested at 5:18 p.m. Sunday on Magnolia Avenue. The confrontation occurred outside 411 Magnolia Avenue, Altamonte Springs.

Deputies reported Bouey was confronted in an area known for narcotics sells. He was crouched down on a sidewalk and jumped up and pushed the deputy away and tried to flee. He struggled with two deputies and was arrested, a sheriff's report said.

Bank photo brings arrest

The man was confronted and arrested as he left the shop.

The man reportedly told police he broke a window of Centrust Bank and entered the building through the hole.

Antonio Louis Rega, 23, of 285 Wymore Road, Altamonte Springs, is charged with burglary. Bond is $1,000.

Stolen bicycle recovered

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — One of two men found by Altamonte Springs police outside the Handy Way, 151 Lynchfield St., at about 9:30 p.m. Sunday, was arrested after police identified a stolen bicycle he found beside a man.

Police had responded to a report of suspicious persons outside the store. David E. Armstrong, 31, of 520 Clemons Drive, Altamonte Springs, was charged with burglary and theft with bond at $1,000.

The bicycle, stolen from Altamonte Bay Club # 283-104, was returned to its owner, police said.

Man accused of burglary

CASSELBERRY — A man who Casselberry police said broke a door window and burglarized the house of his ex-girlfriend, is charged with burglary to an occupied dwelling.

Clyde Darrell Achord, 36, of 275 Plaza Oval, Casselberry, was arrested at 11:22 p.m. Sunday after allegedly burglarizing the house of Carol Spear, of 315 Seminola Blvd. # 49-C. Spear and a man were inside her house at the time of the forced entry. Spear told police the suspect fled when she called them to the scene. Achord was arrested at Jack's Place, Casselberry, after Spear and her companion told them they feared for their safety. Bond is $5,000.

Strange sleeper arrested

FERN PARK — William Snyder, of Fern Park, awoke at about 7:30 a.m. Sunday to find a stranger he couldn't awake sleeping on his living room floor.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies were called to awaken Robert Lewis Lockhart, 30, of Orlando, who was charged with burglary in an occupied dwelling at 6350 U.S. Highway 17-92. Lockhart reportedly said he thought he was in a house on Holden Avenue in Orlando. Bond is $5,000.

Two men arrested on burglary charges

SANFORD — The burglar alarm at the Army-Navy Store, 310 S. Sanford Ave., Sanford, sounded at about 3 a.m. Sunday. Police reported seeing two men carrying two yellow bags behind the store.

One man, Rufus T. Carter, 18, was arrested at the scene. Larry Eugene Williams, 18, of 2009 Lincoln St., Sanford, was captured by 8 a.m. and arrested at the police station. Both are charged with burglary and Williams is charged with resisting without violence. Bond is $1,000.

Knight's Inn robbed

SANFORD — A gunman got $407 in a 9:44 p.m. Sunday robbery of the Knight's Inn, State Road 46, west of Sanford.

A sheriff's report said the robber fled on foot after taking the cash from a clerk.

Several arrested on DUI charges

SANFORD — The following persons face a charge of driving under the influence in Seminole County:

- Robert John MacBeth, 58, of 205 Adelaide Blvd., Altamonte Spring, was arrested at 6:10 a.m. Saturday after his car towing slow moving, homemade trailer was stopped for traffic violations.
- George Whitaker Bunch, 56, of New Smyrna Beach, at 9:57 p.m. Saturday, after a pedestrian approached a Sanford police car parked at Zayre's Plaza. The pedestrian told the policeman he had just been hit by a car on U.S. Highway 17-92. Bunch, who was also on foot at that point, approached the policeman and told him he was looking for something his car had just hit. He was also charged with carrying a concealed weapon after a handgun was found in his pocket.

Policemen injured during arrest

By SUSAN LOREN

CASSELBERRY — Casselberry police are searching for a man who slightly injured two policemen Sunday after they determined the man was sleeping in a stolen car.

The incident occurred at about 10 a.m. at Tiffany Square Apartments, 200 Fern Park

Boulevard, when police said they awakened Charles LeRoy Smith, 29, of 1020 Miller Road, Longwood, who was sleeping in a car. Officers Jim Rick, 24, and Richard Baldwin, 22, reported that a police records check showed the car had been reported stolen in Orange County and Smith was wanted on a violation of probation for grand theft.

Smith had been ordered out of the car, and when police told him he was going to be arrested he got back into the driver's seat. Rick got into the car on the passenger side and struggled with Smith as he started the car, a Seminole County sheriff's report said.

Rick, who was only halfway inside the car when Smith sped away, was thrown from the car. The open door of the car hit and dented a police car, the report said.

Both Rick and Baldwin were slightly injured in the confrontation and were checked at Florida Hospital-Altamonte Springs, the report said. Smith eluded capture and is the object of a manhunt.

Two black teens surrender in racial attack

United Press International

NEW YORK — Two black teenagers have surrendered to authorities to face assault charges in what police described as a racially motivated attack by a group of black youths on two white brothers on Staten Island.

Accompanied by his mother, 14-year-old Norbert Grigger gave himself up to officers at the 120th Precinct at 11:45 p.m. Sunday, several hours after the attack, said Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell, a police spokesman.

Grigger allegedly pulled a gun and fired three times in the direction of the fight and hit one of his friends participating in the attack on the whites, O'Donnell said.

The black teenager was charged as an adult with first-degree assault and illegal possession of a weapon, which was not recovered, the sergeant said.

Another black youth, Michael Boone, 16, followed suit and surrendered at 1:50 a.m. today.

Boone was charged with third-degree assault and aggravated harassment for allegedly punching the whites. He was released on his own recognizance while Grigger was held pending arraignment, the sergeant said.

A third black teenager who allegedly fired several shots into the air during the incident was being sought by police, he added.

The gunfire erupted early Sunday as Grigger, Boone and about 18 black youths shouting "white boys!" chased and pummeled Daniel Marsac, 29, and his brother Dean, the two white men told police.

Lloyd Bryson, 17, who O'Donnell said was part of the group of blacks attacking the two whites, was shot in the left side during the incident.

Bryson was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, where he underwent surgery for a "penetration wound to the abdomen" and was recovering in stable condition, hospital spokesman Ray Pohlod said.

The Marsacs suffered cuts and bruises in the incident. They were treated at St. Vincent's Hospital and released.

Daniel Marsac said the incident left him bitter about his home borough.

"I don't like this neighborhood anymore," he said. "I don't like Staten Island. It's getting bad."

"They just bumrushed us. It happened so fast," said Marsac.

The attack, which Marsac said lasted only about 90 seconds, ended abruptly when several gunshots suddenly rang out, striking Bryson.

Detectives from the police anti-bias investigation unit termed the assault racially motivated.

Marsac said he and his brother were not armed.

Police said there was nothing to connect Sunday's incident to a controversial Oct. 7 confrontation between white and black youths in Staten Island's Rosebank section in which a black youth was struck and killed by a car.

Daniel Marsac told United Press International he and his brother were attacked as they walked to their family's home in the borough's integrated Port Richmond section.

Two reports point toward rise in child abuse

United Press International

CHICAGO — Increased national attention to child abuse has prompted researchers to wonder if the incidence of the problem has increased, or just willingness to discuss a taboo subject.

Two reports released over the weekend suggest abuse itself is increasing.

Writing Sunday in the journal Pediatrics, Dr. John Leventhal of the Yale University School of Medicine said that since the 1940s sexual abuse of children has become more common, more serious and more likely to be committed by an adult relative or friend of a child.

Comparing studies done by famed sex researcher Alfred Kinsey in the 1940s and another study done by Diana Russell in 1978, Leventhal said the 1978 study showed a "higher prevalence of sexual abuse, a greater proportion of perpetrators who were relatives or adults known by the child, and a greater proportion of serious types of abuse."

Kinsey's study — still the largest ever conducted on the prevalence of sexual abuse — showed 24 percent of the 4,441 women interviewed had had at least one pre-adolescent sexual contact with an adult male.

Half of these women said the abuse included no physical contact, but rather verbal abuse or genital exhibition. About the same percentage said strangers were the perpetrators of the acts, while 22 percent said family members — typically an uncle — were responsible.

Kinsey included women from 48 states but excluded black women and women who had been in prison. In contrast, Russell interviewed only women in the San Francisco area. Her interviews of 930 randomly selected women showed 48 percent experienced at least one incident of sexual abuse before age 14.

Russell found 29 percent of the incidents of physical contact involved relatives, 60 percent involved other acquaintances and 11 percent involved strangers. Where Kinsey found 8 percent of women had been victims of "very serious" abuse, Russell found 23 percent experienced this level of abuse.

Leventhal said the two studies and another recent study suggest "exhibitionism has decreased during the 20th century."

Leventhal acknowledged that "there would have been a great reluctance to talk about such matters in the 1940s," leading to some under-reporting in Kinsey's study. When Russell's study was conducted 28 years later, state laws required reporting of abuse to child protection agencies.

Also, he said, "San Francisco is not necessarily representative of the United States," with an over-estimate possible in Russell's study if "women who had been sexually abused preferentially migrated to a city like San Francisco, with its more liberal attitudes toward sexuality."

In spite of the differences in the way the two studies were conducted, Leventhal concluded it is likely "there have been real changes in the 20th century in the epidemiology of sexual abuse."

Within Russell's data, a trend showed that the more recently a woman was born, the more likely she was to have been abused by a family member.

Study: Nearly 2 percent of U.S. adults penalized

United Press International

WASHINGTON — A new Justice Department study reports that about 3.4 million people, nearly 2 percent of the U.S. adult population, are in the custody of federal, state and local corrections departments.

The survey released Sunday also found the number of adults in the United States on parole rose 11 percent from 1986 to 1987 while the number of adults on probation rose 6 percent during the same period.

The number of adults in custody in 1987 represented an increase of 6.8 percent over 1986 and a whopping 40 percent increase over 1983, said the study by the Bureau of Justice Statistics, part of the Justice Department.

"The total number of adults under the custody of federal, state and local correctional authorities, including men and women in prisons and jails, was 3.4 million people, which is almost 2 percent of the nation's adult population," said Joseph Bessette, the bureau's acting director.

"An estimated one out of every 53 adults in the United States was under some form of correctional supervision on a given day in 1987," the study said.

The study also noted that the total number of adults on parole or probation rose last year to a record 2.6 million men and women — 362,000 people on parole and 2,242,000 on probation.

The increase in the probation population occurred in every region of the country, with the Midwest and West reporting the highest gains at 8.7 percent and 8.6 percent respectively, and the South reporting the lowest gain, 3.8 percent, the study said.

The West's parole population showed the largest percentage increase over the year, gaining almost 22 percent, the study said, while the Northeast had the slowest growing parole population of 3.1 percent.

Among the study's other findings:

- Six states reported increases of more than 12 percent from 1986 in their probation populations: Missouri (21.4 percent), Washington (17.6 percent), Delaware (16.3 percent), New Hampshire (15.8 percent), Minnesota (14 percent) and Indiana (12.1 percent).

● Seven states reported increases of more than 20 percent in their parole populations: Louisiana (73.9 percent), Nebraska (51 percent), North Carolina (39.9 percent), Washington (36.3 percent), California (24.6 percent), Missouri (21.6 percent) and Idaho (20.7 percent).

● Georgia had the largest number of people on probation, 2,463 for every 100,000 residents. Texas, Maryland and Massachusetts also had more than 2,000 people on probation for every 100,000 adult residents.

● At the end of 1987, Texas reported the largest number of people on probation, nearly 290,000, and the largest parole population, more than 67,000.

● The Northeast, the region with the smallest increase in the number of people on parole, had the highest ratio of parolees to residents: 238 for every 100,000 adults.

Gatorland woes are symptomatic

An absurd situation is developing at the University of Florida, the state's largest and oldest public institution of higher education. The school's football program was caught with its hand in the cookie jar and was whacked by the NCAA with a three year probation and sanctions. Allowed numbers of recruits were reduced for each year; TV and bowl appearances were forbidden. The penalties were reduced by one year based on compliance.

The present coach, Galen Hall, was named head coach following the firing of the previous one. This year marks the last of the penalized years: television appearances are now okay but the effect of the reduced scholarships is evident. Add to that a number of critical injuries and the results are losses on Saturday. The record is still respectable, but not good enough for a few so-called boosters suffering from a petter pan complex who are dashing around in their orange blazers, waving money, and crying "fire the coach."

The irony is that these same individuals gifted with tunnel vision will refer to the players as "student-athletes."

The situation at Gatorland is symptomatic of a basic flaw in the education system, and that includes the secondary level. It was the Council of Presidents of the NCAA which brought Proposition 48 into being, and even that was a difficult undertaking. The standards established were minimal, far below those required for entrance into any accredited college or university in Florida, except as an athlete.

A focus in our high schools is to keep the superior athlete eligible, so student tutors plow their efforts into the task. Fortunately, with the advent of Proposition 48, the minimum grade point average must be in a sensible, and spelled out, core curriculum so flower arranging and native dancing is out as disciplines open for athletes.

Florida's commissioner of education, Betty Castor, has been at the forefront in the efforts to reward superior teachers and the establishment of merit raises, yet the two teacher's unions in the state fight this concept right into the trenches. With this situation it is no wonder that so many inferior teachers fill classrooms in Florida.

William Bennett, the former U.S. Secretary of Education, was on the cutting edge of curriculum reform and teacher improvement. His influence was great but most of his creative ideas and plans remain just that: ideas, plans.

We are quick to criticize our schools, and parent's can easily tell when their child has a poor teacher. But how many voice opinions, or go to PTA meetings to learn more about the school and the school system? Problems in high school and college education are not solely the responsibilities of the professional educators. Concerned parents and other citizens can, and must, do more than just pay lip service to solutions.

And people that can afford to buy out a coach's contract to the tune of several hundred thousand dollars, should re-read the manual on the role of boosters and student-athletes, then give the money to a local high school to buy lab equipment.

South has turned cold for the Democrats

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Southern white men who voted in this year's presidential election preferred Republican candidate George Bush over Democratic contender Michael Dukakis by a margin of more than 2-to-1.

That statistic, from ABC News' poll of voters as they emerged from polling places, illustrates the extent to which the South, once unwaveringly loyal to the Democratic Party, has switched sides — at least in presidential contests.

Specifically, the exit poll shows that in the South white male voters supported Bush by a 68-32 margin, while white female voters backed him by a 62-38 margin. That pattern is probably the single most important factor in the Democratic Party's abysmal performance in recent presidential races.

Since 1960, the Democrats have won only two of seven presidential campaigns. In both of those contests, the party's national ticket was headed by a Southerner — Lyndon Johnson in 1964 and Jimmy Carter in 1976.

The South's preference for Republicans in other years (including 1980, when Carter unsuccessfully sought a second term) indicates that the region is undergoing a degree of political realignment unmatched anywhere else in the country.

But that realignment is coming from the top down rather than the bottom up, and so has primarily affected the presidential contests and some campaigns for major statewide offices such as governor and senator.

Thus, when the 101st Congress convenes early next year both of Mississippi's senators will be Republicans — an unprecedented development in contemporary politics. In all of the region's most fiercely contested races for House seats, however, the Democratic candidates prevailed this year.

In the battle for an open seat in Mississippi's 4th Congressional District, for example, the Democrat handily defeated the Republican. In Georgia's 4th congressional district, scandal-tainted Republican Rep. Pat Swinford was unseated by a Democratic challenger.

Realignment is coming from the top down rather than the bottom up.

In South Carolina's 4th Congressional District, Republicans targeted Rep. Liz Patterson as the region's most vulnerable Democratic member of the House — but she won her race.

In the 13th Congressional District in the Texas Panhandle, the Democrat defeated the Republican in a race for an open seat. Along Texas' Gulf Coast, an incumbent Republican was unseated in the 14th Congressional District.

Republicans have achieved limited success in the contests lower on the ballot — for seats in state legislatures and county and municipal offices — but Southerners still tend to vote for Democrats in local races.

Does the "solid South" support for Republican presidential hopefuls preclude the Democrats from winning the presidency at any time in the foreseeable future unless they nominate a resident of the region for president? Probably not, although it does complicate the task.

In one of its few visionary moments, the Dukakis campaign developed a strategy that ceded to Bush all of the South except Texas, then combined the Lone Star State with three regional groups of states to achieve a theoretical Electoral College majority.

How Dukakis lost momentum

BOSTON (NEA) — Old-line Democratic campaign pros are charging that three major mistakes by Dukakis campaign manager Susan Estrich and those around her allowed the momentum to swing to George Bush. The mistakes: the lack of a unifying theme, and no clear response to the GOP's negative campaigning.

Dukakis emerged from the Democratic convention with a big lead in all national polls, but then his campaign simply drifted while Bush came out swinging. By Labor Day, the momentum had shifted completely to Bush. He had wiped out Dukakis' lead. Dukakis was relegated to spending the rest of the campaign reacting to Bush, and doing so very ineffectually.

This happened, the political pros assert, because those in charge of the Dukakis campaign were simply unprepared to run a national presidential contest, and by the time they finally got organized, it was too late.

The Dukakis plan, as they see it, was divided into three parts. First was to win the nomination through a series of state-by-state campaigns, as opposed to a coordinated national effort; then gain control of the national convention in Atlanta, and finally run the actual presidential campaign. The problem, though, as the political pros see it, was that each part of that strategy was separate. One almost came to a complete stop before the next one started.

For instance, after each primary the Dukakis operation in a given state was shut down as resources and personnel were moved to the next state. This continued even after all the other candidates except Jesse Jackson had dropped by the wayside, and it was clear that Dukakis was going to win the nomination. This meant that as the national campaign was started in August, campaign operatives in most states had to gear up almost from scratch.

For instance, when California campaign manager Tony Podesta — one of the few experienced national Democratic political operatives given a major task in the Dukakis effort — showed up in Los Angeles in early August he found nothing in place. "I didn't even have a phone," he says. Weeks that should have been spent in hard campaigning were spent in simply organizing.

By contrast, the Bush campaign was run as a start-to-finish effort from the beginning. Each state office was kept open after the primaries. As a result, while the Dukakis forces were just gearing up during the critical weeks of August, the Bush forces were able to get a flying start.

The second problem seen by hardened Democratic pros was that the Dukakis camp did not enter the presidential campaign with a clearly defined message. Reportedly, the Dukakis hierarchy struggled vainly to settle on a unifying theme. There are stories circulating about hundreds of TV ad scripts written — even ads shot and edited — only to be finally rejected. The campaign lurched from one day to another, going in different directions, while trying to find itself.

Again, by contrast, the Bush camp long ago settled on its theme of promoting peace and prosperity while attacking Dukakis as inexperienced, soft on crime and weak on defense. From the first, everything the Bush camp did — from the candidate's speeches to their ads to their use of surrogate campaigners — continually hammered away at this central theme.

This forced Dukakis into a defensive posture, and it's a given in politics that you simply can't win if you are continually reacting to your opponent.

Then there is the question of Bush's massive negative campaign, which is clearly what turned things around for the president-elect.

The truth is that while most Americans decry negative campaigning, they are nonetheless swayed by it. Experts say this is because a majority of Americans are predisposed to believe that most politicians are either crooks or incompetents or both. Negative advertising reinforces this stereotype.

Political operatives who have run local and congressional campaigns know this all too well. Bush campaign manager Lee Atwater cut his political teeth on South Carolina campaigns. He learned early on that you can win by driving up your opponent's "negatives." He simply translated this lesson into the central theme of the Bush campaign.

This kind of experience was completely lacking at the top of the Dukakis campaign. When faced with a negative campaign it is imperative to respond quickly and forcefully. But the Dukakis campaign refused to believe that Bush's charges would stick. By the time they realized it was working, and had convinced their reluctant candidate to respond, the damage was done, and it was too late to counterpunch.

House probes drug approvals

WASHINGTON — The race by rival drug companies to win government approval for generic drugs has led to a federal probe into allegations that gifts and favors may have swayed the Food and Drug Administration.

Between 1981 and 1986, generic drug sales tripled to $5.1 billion a year. As the popularity of generic drugs has soared, so has the competition to market them. For a drug company, the cost of producing and selling a nameless copy of a proven drug is negligible compared to the cost of developing, testing and marketing new drugs. Federal investigators were tipped off to the potential scandal early last summer. A subsequent raid of FDA files led to a joint probe by a House subcommittee and the inspector general's office of the Health and Human Services Department.

The investigators are also considering the findings of a private detective hired by officials at a drug company who became suspicious when competitors repeatedly beat them to the punch in winning FDA approval for generic drugs.

In late July, an FDA chemist and two drug industry officials refused to submit documents to the House subcommittee that is looking into the allegations of preferential treatment.

Our associate Jim Lynch has obtained copies of the material now under federal scrutiny. It points to a questionable relationship between the FDA chemist, Charles Chang, and at least seven private drug firms. Chang was a supervisory chemist in the FDA's generic drug division before the investigation began. He has since been reassigned to another division.

The federal investigators are looking into allegations that Chang manipulated application procedures in return for favors from the companies seeking approval to sell generic drugs. The favors are alleged to have included furniture, dinners, entertainment and other gifts.

On Nov. 19, 1987, three boxes of furniture were sent to Chang's Maryland home, according to the documents under federal scrutiny. It is not clear who paid for the queen-sized bed frame and chair, but shipping records indicate that the shipping costs were paid by Raju Vegesna, the president of American Therapeutic Industries, a drug company.

Federal investigators also are looking into allegations by some of Chang's colleagues that he may have given preferred companies some of the confidential information in their competitors' application files and that he may have manipulated the approval process by directing the speed at which certain applications were reviewed.

The sleuths also are examining Chang's travel expenses over the past several years including visits to Los Angeles, the Bahamas, England, Hong Kong and Taiwan. Documents from the Mayfair Hotel in London indicate that Mohammed Azem apparently paid for Chang's room on Aug. 1, 1987. Azem has served as a consultant for American Therapeutics Industries and other companies in the generic drug business. He was one of the people who refused to submit documents to the House committee in July.

Chang, Azem and Vegesna declined to comment to us on the investigation. When they were subpoenaed by the House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, they each claimed that turning over the information requested by the subcommittee would violate their Fifth Amendment right against self incrimination.

Stocks open slightly higher

United Press International

NEW YORK — Prices opened slightly higher today in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which plunged 47.66 Friday, was up 8.89 to 2075.92 shortly after the market opened.

Advances led declines 449-255 among the 1,103 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 6,314,000 shares. Interest rates to slow things down.

"I think the producer price index report left the (Federal Reserve Board) convinced that inflation is under control," said Hays.

"The Fed will probably hang tough through Christmas, however, to keep consumer spending down," he added, forecasting a slight hike in the prime rate in the next few days.

"We are entering into the third intermediate decline since the (Oct. 19, 1987) crash," said Joseph Barthel, director of technical strategy at Butcher and Singer Inance of Veterans Day kept many investors from participating.

Hays pointed to conflicting signals from the last two economic reports as adding pressure on the market.

The Labor Department said wholesale producer prices remained steady from September to October, indicating the economy may be slowing and inflationary pressures cooling off.

Dollar lower in Japan; turns mixed in Europe

United Press International

The dollar was mixed today on major foreign currency markets after falling to a 10-month low in Tokyo. Gold was mostly higher.

On the Tokyo foreign exchange market the dollar continued its plunge against the Japanese yen in heavy trading, closing at 123 yen, down 0.70 yen, for the dollar's lowest closing rate in more than 10 months.

It was the lowest rate for the dollar since Jan. 4, 1988, when the dollar closed at 121.65.

The dollar opened at a 10-month low of 122.55 yen and dropped to 122.50 yen before the Bank of Japan intervened to stem its fall.

One dealer said that Tokyo currency dealers were moving nervously to sell dollars because they were jolted by a continued fall in the dollar in overseas markets.

Another dealer said the difficulty in projecting the course of the U.S. economy would make world currency markets jittery.

Earlier, Bank of Japan Governor Satoshi Sumita tried to cool the dollar's decline at a news conference in Osaka, in western Japan. Sumita said traders were driving down the dollar with strong speculative trading without any real basis.

Sumita said he expects President-elect George Bush will move to reduce the twin budget and trade deficits, which have been blamed for the dollar's recent slide.

A foreign currency market

source said Japan, the United States and European countries were prepared to coordinate an intervention to stop the dollar's fall, and the intervention would continue at least until the release of U.S. trade figures for September due out Wednesday.

Traders, however, remained skeptical.

Masao Takaishi, vice president of the Tokyo branch of the Chemical Bank, said there is no longer any doubt the dollar will fall below 120 yen this year.

In Europe, the dollar opened marginally higher in Frankfurt at 1.742 West German marks, up from Friday's close of 1.74.

The dollar also rose in Milan to 1,300.405 lire, up from 1,297.50, and in Zurich to 1.4635 Swiss francs, up from 1.457.

In London, the dollar strengthened to $1.8075 comd with $1.815 on Friday. Belgian and French markets were closed Friday due to the Armistice holidays, and the dollar dropped upon reopening Monday.

The dollar opened in Paris at 5.96 French francs, down from last Thursday's close of 6.009, and in Brussels, the dollar opened at 36.81 Belgian francs, down from Thursday's close of 37.16.

and I didn't participate in it. I ran a hard race."

Newspapers, Morris said, there was a "whisper campaign" with a lot of nasty brochures and phone calls going around the Lake Mary neighborhoods and given to the press.

"Am I disappointed? Yeah, I'm very disappointed," Morris said. He said that he was told Lake Mary's campaign was the most negative of all the local campaigns.

He said he thought, however, that no one wins an election on negative attacks. "I think there was a lot of negative campaigning across the board," he said. Morris said he had the chance to do the same thing to his opponent, but refrained, basing his campaign more on issues and on Fess' record.

"I went very aggressively at him (Fess) on issues. I never went after his personal life," Morris said. He said he could have said a lot of "incredible things" and made "a lot of innuendos about what happened in his (Fess) administration."

In Leeswood, Gunter pointed to what he said was the tactics of Commissioner Hank Hardy, who supported Farach, and who disliked him. "Farach said how much he appreciated Hardy's advice and contribution. They fished around in both their little camps," Gunter said.

Gunter said that his opponent's campaign brochures mentioned that he violated the sunshine law. Farach's political brochure featured an unbalanced scale which represented citizen satisfaction. Nothing was on the "satisfied" side of the scale while the "unsatisfied" side was weighted down by reasons citizens were said to be unhappy. Things such as a one-mill tax increase and violation of the sunshine law were mentioned. Gunter said it was slanderous to say he violated the sunshine law because there was nothing to back up the allegation. He said that the accusation was "derived from Hank Hardy."

"Innuendos is their style. Half-truths is their style," he said of his opponents.

Gunter said he wasn't liked because he "wouldn't do what they told me to do."

Gunter said he was attacked for a number of things, including being in favor of an at-large election for a mayor rather than a mayor being elected by the commissioners. "The first thing that was said is that I would help my own coffers by doing it," Gunter said.

Farach said, "He lost only because of one reason and the reason he lost was because he cared about only his own purpose not about the will of the people."

Farach said Gunter's decision to purchase the Sanlando Utilities for $21 million after the county refused it for $8 million had a lot to do with his defeat.

"I don't think he can blame Hank (Hardy) for that," Farach said. "He (Hardy) backed me up because he wants the same thing I want, democracy," Farach said.

Hardy said, "I'm one person and I have one vote. How can he blame me because he lost? That's ludicrous. The only reason he lost is because the voters were unsatisfied with

h. I'm More than the effect on the outcome of a campaign, negativism also has an impact on the candidates, they said.

Morris, for example, said the campaign hurt him in more than one way.

"The thing that really hurts me, I busted my butt as a commissioner. I had very good supporters. When things get dirty, when they get ugly, when you impugn someone's reputation, it's permanent damage to the community," Morris said.

He said he is against drugs. Morris said he felt good about the elections until the last weekend when the drug challenge was made.

"The hardest thing about losing," he said, "is not what you personally feel but for the people who supported you. The tragedy in negative politics is people still live in the community. It's people's lives you are talking about," he said.

Will Morris run for office? "Running for office again is something I have to look at," Morris said.

Gunter promised that he will attend the meetings and voice his opinions.

"I was un-elected. In one respect, thank goodness," he said.

Gunter said he will never run again for office. He said he will devote more time to his family and two businesses. He said he will get more involved in his church and take classes to become a deacon.

Simmons said the filters will remove suspended solids to meet the federal Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) limits of 5 milligrams of solids per liter of water.

Once the treated water leaves the filters it will pass through a sensor in a building to be built west of the wastewater treatment plant. The sensor will test the water to see if it meets DEQ standards both for suspended solids and chlorine levels.

If the water does not meet standards it will be automatically piped to large adjacent holding ponds and will go back through the treatment system. If the water meets standards, it will be piped to two holding tanks, and from there go into the water redistribution system for use in irrigation. Those holding tanks will be built under a separate contract to be let soon.

The second project now underway is construction of the main distribution lines for the water reclamation system. Workers are now laying pipe along Seminole Boulevard as part of a main line which will completely encircle the city.

Another crew is at work at the junction of Mangoustine Avenue and State Road 46 preparing to push the water reclamation pipe under the highway. A large casing will first be pushed under the road, and the pipe which will carry the reclaimed water will be pushed through that casing.

The city commission will get its first look at the proposed water reclamation ordinance at tonight's 7 p.m. meeting. The ordinance sets fees and rules for use of the reclaimed water.

Simmons said once the ordinance is approved by city commissioners, letters will be sent to all utility customers inviting them to become customers of the reclaimed water for irrigation. Like the fresh water distribution system, the city will lay the reclaimed water lines to property lines. It will be the customer's responsibility to run lines from there onto his property and connect it to his irrigation system.

The main encircling line is being laid with about 200 T-stubs so that pipe can lead off the main line into every neighborhood in town.

Each of the contracts is for about $3 million of work and are the largest contracts in the entire project, Simmons said. The system is expected to be operational in about a year. Simmons says lines will be in place to irrigate all city property and parks, and he hopes enough prospective customers indicate interest early enough so that lines can be laid to their property lines by then too.

A large portion of the reclaimed water is going to Lake Mary to irrigate the Timucuan Golf Course. Simmons said it will not take as long to lay that line. A contract for that work will be let as soon as turf studies of

City warned against paint factory

United Press International

TERRE HAUTE — A federal official has warned Terre Haute area officials they would be creating health risks by approving the siting of a vehicle paint factory and adjoining hazardous waste incinerator and landfill.

Hugh B. Kaufman, of the Environmental Protection Agency said in an interview with The Indianapolis Star Sunday that, sooner or later, all hazardous waste landfills leak, as he outlined reasons why Vigo County should reject a proposal by BASF to build its complex.

He said the permit to build the complex is worth between $250 million and $500 million to the company.

Weight Loss Pill Approved for U.S. Gov't. Patent

"Lazy Way" to Lose Weight Already Sweeping U.S.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)—An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and caloric reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors' claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It's a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally" Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

Flushes Fat Out of Body The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a 'lazy way' to lose weight because the pills alone 'automatically' reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk," highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+ $3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+ $3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W248, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. (Unconditional money-back guarantee if not 100% satisfied.) Visa, MasterCard and American Express OK. (Send card number, expire date, and signature.) For fastest service for credit card orders ONLY call anytime 24 hours, toll free (800) 527-9788, ext. W246.

Atlantis

Asked how pre-flight preparations were going, Gibson said: "It looks pretty good so far."

Meanwhile, half a world away, Soviet engineers were readying the first Russian space shuttle, Buran, for its unmanned maiden blastoff at 10 p.m. EST today — 6 a.m. Tuesday Moscow time — from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Soviet Central Asia. A launch try Oct. 29 ended in failure 51 seconds before liftoff when a service gantry malfunctioned.

Because Atlantis's flight is a classified military mission to launch a spy satellite, all major details are being kept secret, even seemingly harmless information such as where the astronauts will sit for launch.

Gibson, however, said he and Gardner will occupy the front left and right seats of the crew cabin respectively with Ross, serving as flight engineer, seated directly behind the two pilots. Mullane will sit to Ross's right and Shepherd will be strapped in alone on the cabin's lower deck. Mullane and Shepherd will trade places for re-entry.

Atlantis's "terminal countdown demonstration test," a traditional milestone in a shuttle's launch processing, began Sunday at 7:40 a.m. EST. The test is designed to give astronauts and ground engineers a last chance to practice the final stages of the complex procedure required to launch a space shuttle.

A firm launch date is expected to be announced this week after a formal flight readiness review Tuesday and Wednesday at the Kennedy Space Center.

Gibson and his crewmates visited Atlantis's launch pad Sunday to review procedures that would be used in the event of a pre-launch emergency that required a speedy exit from the pad.

Astronauts board the shuttle at the 195-foot level of the main distribution lines for the water reclamation system. On the opposite side of the gantry from the shuttle access arm are seven "alidewire" baskets hanging below cables that stretch 1,200 feet to the ground below.

In an emergency, astronauts and launch pad technicians could jump in the enclosed baskets for a swift ride to a bunker at the base of the launch pad. Depending on the situation, the group could get out of the area in an armored personnel carrier stationed nearby.

Gibson and company reviewed those escape procedures Sunday and watched as an empty basket was released to slide down the wire to an arresting net at the base of the pad.

today — and that the shuttle's countdown was underway at the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Soviet Central Asia.

It was not clear late Sunday whether the launch or landing would be televised live. In any case, few details about the progress of the countdown were released over the weekend.

A Radio Moscow English-language news broadcast monitored in the United States Sunday noted that two cosmonauts aboard the Mir space station, Vladimir Titov and Musa Manarov, had surpassed a 326-day space endurance record Friday.

"Meanwhile, another important event in the Soviet space program will soon take place," Radio Moscow said. "On the 15th of this month, at 6 a.m. Moscow time, this country is to launch its first reusable spaceship, Buran. Buran ... will perform an unmanned flight in an automatic mode."

At the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, meanwhile, engineers are readying the shuttle Atlantis for blastoff around Nov. 30 on a classified military mission. The ship's crew was at the Florida spaceport today to participate in a practice countdown.

The launch preparations going on in the Soviet Union and the United States marked the first time in history that two reusable shuttles built by different nations stood on launch pads ready for blastoff.

Atlantis astronaut Jerry Ross told United Press International he was impressed with the Soviet shuttle program even though the Russian version looked like a carbon copy of NASA's.

"Obviously we have documented our program very well and they've had access to it," Ross said. "I'm not sure that that's good or bad, quite frankly. Even though we document it, they still have to have the technology and the capability to use that documentation to go build a vehicle."

"I am impressed that they have got the vehicle to the point that they do now. Overall, I think it's an extremely bold step and quite frankly, I hope that it works."

The first American shuttle, Columbia, was launched with a crew of two when it blasted off on its maiden flight in April 1981, but the Soviets elected to launch their new shuttle unmanned because of the technical risk involved.

Buran, which means snow storm in English, relies on a powerful Energia liquid-fueled booster for the trip into space. The shuttle itself is scheduled to complete at least two orbits before a fully automatic landing is attempted on a 3-mile-long runway at Baikonur just 7 miles from the launch pad.

In any case, the advent of a Soviet shuttle, in concert with a mature fleet of unmanned rockets and trusty Soyuz manned spacecraft, gives the Russian space program an unmatched capability when it comes to carrying payloads into orbit or returning cargo to Earth.

The Soviets had hoped to launch Buran before the American could launch the shuttle Discovery on the first post-Challenger flight, but technical problems delayed the Russian test program and Discovery got off the ground first on Sept. 29.

Toxic landfill fire burns for 3rd day

MILTON, N.Y. — A fire in a controversial Saratoga County landfill sent toxic fumes into the air for a third day, keeping 30 families away from their homes while authorities fought unsuccessfully to smother the blaze.

The families, living within a half-mile of the landfill in the town of Milton, were first ordered from their homes as a precaution Friday evening after tests showed the smoke was toxic.

Paul Lent, director of the county's emergency services, said Sunday afternoon the families were permitted to return home for no more than 45 minutes to collect needed possessions.

Firefighting efforts were expected to continue over the next several days, according to Milton fire officials.

The source of the blaze and what exactly is burning in the 78-acre dump remain unclear, officials said.

Results of a crucial test for cancer-causing PCBs, conducted by the state Health Department, were not released Sunday as expected, he said.

The stubborn landfill fire was discovered about 12:20 a.m. Friday and burned unabated through the weekend, resisting efforts of firefighters brought in from departments throughout Saratoga County.

Workers from New England Marine Contracting, a toxic cleanup company apparently hired by the dump's owners, were using two bulldozers to tear away the debris above the fire, Lent said.

Cholesterol topic of convention

WASHINGTON — Doctors and scientists gathered to discuss today more than 2,000 studies on topics such as cholesterol and cardiac arrest as the American Heart Association opened its 61st Scientific Sessions.

Leading worldwide researchers and other experts on heart disease planned to exchange ideas and findings during the four-day event.

In a message to participants of the meeting, Bernadine Healy, president of the association, said, "We received nearly 8,000 abstracts, up 5.8 percent from one year ago, and have accepted 2,067 for presentation."

"American and foreign scientists are well represented, with more than 35 percent of our presentations coming from outside the United States."

In the days leading up to the huge meeting, a number of medical organizations met in the nation's capital to discuss some of their latest findings.

Delegates to the National Cholesterol Conference were told that while three quarters of the population is aware of the dangers of high cholesterol, fewer than half of those surveyed are concerned about their own cholesterol levels, and less than a quarter are attempting to control their diets.

William Novelli, who conducted the survey for the National Cholesterol Education Project, called the phenomenon "nutritional schizophrenia" and noted, "Although many people are aware of the dangers of cholesterol, they choose to ignore the issue in order to avoid making dietary changes."

Woman suspected of killing boarders

United Press International

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The boarding house manager suspected of killing at least five elderly residents for their Social Security checks and burying them in shallow graves was once convicted of drugging people she met at bars and robbing them, police said.

Investigators digging through the yard of the neat, two-story Victorian boarding house Sunday discovered the fourth and fifth bodies, and planned to obtain a search warrant today so they can examine bank records and look for more possible victims in a shed, the ground under it and the dirt floor of a lean-to.

Police said social workers and others had provided a list of eight people who are missing and may be linked to the case, but said they believe two of the people are still alive.

Police Lt. Joe Enloe spent much of Sunday defending the decision to allow the white-haired, well-dressed manager walk away from the yard where searchers were unearthing the first body Friday night.

Dorothea Montalvo, 59, agreed to the search after neighbors complained there was the stench of death coming from the property and a social worker reported a boarder was missing although his checks were still being cashed.

After Montalvo, who also uses the name Puente and is known to have ties to Mexico, talked with police Friday night she told them she was going to a local hotel, but she never showed up, and an all-points bulletin was issued for her capture.

Police said they suspect she killed the elderly boarders, perhaps with drugs, to collect their Social Security or other checks. Four of the bodies were wrapped in what appeared to be bed sheets or plastic bags. By the time digging was halted Sunday night, none of the victims had been identified, and autopsies were scheduled.

A paroled ex-convict, Montalvo served a portion of a five-year prison sentence in the early 1980s for drugging the drinks of several people she met at bars and stealing their checks or other valuables.

A tenant at the boarding house, John McCauley, 59, was arrested Sunday on charges of being an accessory to murder after police said he lied to them during questioning.

Gunman kills one, takes own life during chase

United Press International

WEST GARDNER, Maine — A man who was driven from his job as manager of a home for the retarded apparently was bent on revenge when he shot four people, one of them fatally, then killed himself during a high-speed car chase with police, authorities said.

Alan Matterson, 36, of Cumberland drove more than 100 miles through New Hampshire and Maine late Saturday and early Sunday, stopping just long enough at each victim's home to open fire, investigators said.

State police said three of Matterson's four victims were believed to be involved in the closing last year of the Androscoggin Community Home which Matterson had managed in Mechanic Falls, Maine. One evidently was a bystander, they said.

A 1987 probe of the home's finances showed "several thousand dollars" unaccounted, prompting two state agencies to revoke the home's license and leaving Matterson out of a job, Maine state police spokesman Steve McCausland said.

The shootings began about 10:10 p.m. Saturday in Milton Mills, N.H., a small town bordering southern Maine, where Matterson shot and wounded Howard Hedegard, 43, formerly an accountant at the community home, police said.

Hedegard's sister-in-law, Patricia Collins, 27, of Derry, also was wounded in the living room of Hedegard's home, McCausland said. Collins was treated at Frabic Memorial Hospital in Rochester and released, and Hedegard was held overnight for observation.

Matterson then crossed the border and drove about 50 miles into Maine, where he shot and killed William Twarog, 44, in the living room of his Poland home, McCausland said. Twarog was a regional administrator of the Maine Bureau of Mental Retardation.

He then headed 30 miles south to the town of Topsham, where he shot and critically wounded Louis Derugi, 46, the director of licensing and Medicare certification for the Maine Department of Human Services, McCausland said. Derugi was in serious condition at Regional Memorial Hospital in Brunswick, a spokeswoman said.

Afghan rebels attack Soviet base, airport

United Press International

MOSCOW — Hours after a senior Kremlin official wound up a "solidarity" visit to Afghanistan, rebels launched a rocket attack on a Soviet helicopter installation, the Kabul airport and other targets in the capital, the Tass news agency reported.

In a five-line dispatch, Tass said the attack occurred Sunday shortly after Soviet Communist Party Central Committee Secretary Oleg Baklanov left Kabul.

The report, which gave no casualty figures, said, "Afghan extremists launched two rocket attacks on Kabul today. Three missiles fell within the disposition of a Soviet helicopter regiment, seven exploded near the Kabul airport, and three hit an integrated home-building factory."

Diplomats noted that it was unusual for Tass to describe an attack on a Soviet target and said the report was probably intended to underscore the continued fighting and support Moscow's decision last month to provide the Afghan army with an undisclosed number of Scud-B surface-to-surface missiles.

Tass said Baklanov, at a dinner Saturday night, told his hosts that Moscow would continue to provide the Afghan army with the aid "necessary" to defend itself against attacks by the Pakistan- and American-supported Moslem rebels.

"Let those who hamper national accord know that the armed forces of Afghanistan will get the necessary aid reliably to defend the peaceful population of the country from the barbarous encroachments," he was quoted as saying.

Soviet television, covering his return to Moscow, said Baklanov visited a military hospital where he chatted "warmly" with Soviet soldiers wounded while fulfilling their "international duty."

Tass quoted him as saying, "In our country they make sure that internationalist soldiers find their place in peacetime life and participate in the constructive perestroika (restructuring) drive."

None of the reports mentioned rebel claims in Islamabad that they had blocked the main highway between the Soviet Union and the Afghan capital of Kabul.

Rebel sources were quoted as saying their recent offensives were in response to a Kremlin decision announced Nov. 4 that it was suspending the withdrawal of its remaining 50,000 troops. The withdrawal started May 15 and half the Soviet contingent has been pulled out on schedule.

Tass said rebels "are firing missiles at cities and villages and Soviet troops are also being bombed. The situation is not facilitating the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan, although no one doubts the deadline for the withdrawal Feb. 15 under the Geneva accords."

Rebel ambush kills 34 bus passengers

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Minority Tamil rebels ambushed a bus today, killing at least 27 members of the troubled island's ethnic Sinhalese majority and wounding three others in an attack aimed at derailing local elections scheduled for this week, officials said.

Meanwhile, Sinhalese extremists pressed a drive in the south to force the downfall of President Junius Jayewardene, blowing up an electricity pylon, erecting roadblocks and staging attacks that left at least one person dead and three injured, officials said.

The bus ambush was staged around 8:30 a.m. by about 15 guerrillas of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) near Gomarankadawala, some 160 miles northwest of Colombo, the officials said.

The rebels stopped the vehicle and opened fire on the occupants, killing at least 27 people, including a soldier and a police officer, and wounding three others, they said. The total number of occupants was not known.

The victims all belonged to the Buddhist Sinhalese majority, said the officials, who added that the attack was part of the LTTE's plan to force the cancellation of Saturday's scheduled elections for a new council for Northeastern Province.

PLO units caught in southern Lebanon

JERUSALEM — PLO guerrillas apparently trying to cross into Israel were stopped in southern Lebanon, one commando unit by an Israeli army patrol and the other when it lost its way and stumbled into a United Nations position.

Soldiers with the U.N. Interim Forces in Lebanon overpowered a nervous, apparently intoxicated PLO gunman Sunday after he shot and killed a Lebanese interpreter involved in negotiations to end a 19-hour standoff at the UNIFIL post.

Less than six hours before the ordeal ended, an Israeli army patrol less than 4 miles southeast of the UNIFIL position captured three guerrillas trying to cross into Israel from southern Lebanon to carry out a "murderous attack" in the Jewish state, the Israeli military said.

The heavily armed guerrillas, who were wounded during the confrontation with the Israelis, said they were members of Naif Hawatme's Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Damascus-based faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Walesa casts doubt on round-table talks

WARSAW, Poland — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa says the political climate in Poland has worsened to the point that he fears round-table talks with the government are not possible until the situation improves.

Walesa made the comments in Gdansk Sunday as some 80 people on a hunger strike in southwest Poland demanded the reinstatement of scores of workers fired after a round of strikes last August.

The banned Solidarity union has made reinstatement of workers fired or drafted into the army after the August strikes a prime condition before it begins proposed round-table talks with the government on Poland's future.

Walesa said he has responded to a written request from Interior Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak for another meeting — the two have met three times — but he refused to give details of his reply.

Church sources said that in a three-page letter to Walesa, Kiszczak said the difficult questions separating them justify the urgent need to hold the round-table talks, and should not be considered impediments to holding them.

Israeli religious parties side with Likud

United Press International

JERUSALEM — With the support of Israel's ultra-religious parties now assured, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's right-wing Likud party is in position to begin forming a government that some Israelis fear may impose orthodox Jewish practices on the nation.

Leaders of two religious parties, Shas and Agudat Israel, announced Sunday night they had agreed to join a Likud coalition, a move that gave Shamir's right-wing bloc a 63-seat majority in the 120-member Knesset, or parliament.

The announcement ended intense negotiations, rumor and speculation on the makeup of the next coalition government, Israel's other major party, the center-left Labor Party, also had tried to woo the religious parties.

The four religious parties became the key players in forming a coalition government after their surprise showing in the Nov. 1 elections in which they captured 18 seats.

"Most of the supporters of the Shas party are mainly from the right of the political spectrum and it was just reasonable that Shas would support the Likud rather than the Labor," said Shas spokesman Moshe Peretz.

"There was some hesitation throughout because we didn't want to give our support without getting the things we thought were coming to us, some benefits of our success in the elections," Peretz said.

Of the two other religious parties, one of them, the National Religious Party, pledged its five seats to Likud last week. The other, Degel Hatorah, pledged its two Knesset seats to a broad-based coalition of Labor and Likud.

Labor leader Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, whose party now appears to control a 55-seat minority in the Knesset, said he accepted the outcome.

"We did what we could. These are the results," he told Israel Radio. "I didn't promise different things."

Peres said there was little chance of another Likud-Labor coalition. Peres and Shamir have governed together for the last four years in a divisive "national unity" coalition.

In return for their support, the religious parties received assurances they would be given important government posts. Agudat was promised control of the Immigration and Absorption Ministry and the Labor Ministry as well as two deputy minister spots.

Shas was pledged the Housing and Construction Ministry as well as the Interior Ministry, which specifically will go to Shas leader Rabbi Yitzhak Peretz. Peretz also will become deputy prime minister, Israel Television and a party spokesman said.

Shamir visited Shas spiritual leader Rabbi Ovadia Yosef on Sunday night and promised that within three months new laws governing the validity of Jewish conversions would be brought before the Knesset. Shas wants the rabbinical courts to be given greater power so that only Orthodox conversions will be recognized.

Likud also promised Shas that municipalities would have the right to decide about laws on religious matters, such as banning public transportation and public entertainment on the Sabbath, Peretz said.

Many of Israel's secular or traditionally observant Jews were shocked by the religious parties' election showing, saying they feared the parties' new-found clout would lead to a society ruled by Orthodox Jews. About 15 percent of Israeli Jews are ultra-religious.

Leaders of 27 U.S. Jewish organizations appealed to Israeli leaders not to change laws governing conversion. They warned that such an action would cause "enormous damage" in relations between Israel and Jews worldwide.

The religious parties' leaders said they would convey their decisions to President Chaim Herzog Sunday night.

After hearing the recommendations of all 15 parties that won seats in the Knesset, Herzog will pick the party he believes has the best chance of forming a government, most likely Likud.

Shamir then has three days to decide if he will accept the task and another 21 days to forge the coalition. If he fails, he can ask for another 21 days.

Further negotiations between the religious parties and Likud are expected while Shamir tries to form the government.

"Politics is politics, and the days to come will probably present some surprises. I hope things will settle down quickly," said Peretz, brother of party leader Yitzhak Peretz.

Nuggets blast Blazers

The Denver Nuggets are showing their offense is no longer centered just around Alex English and Lafayette Lever.

Michael Adams scored 25 points Sunday night, including 17 in the second half, adding 12 assists along the way to lead the Nuggets to a 143-132 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers.

"Adams can absolutely wear you out," Portland Coach Mike Schuler said. "He would penetrate and our guys would rotate off him when they didn't have to."

The Nuggets still got contributions from English and Lever, who each scored 23 and Wayne Cooper who added 20.

"We have a lot of balance," Lever said. "Last year it seemed that if Alex was stopped or I had a bad game, we were in trouble. But now if they key on Alex, someone else steps forward."

The Nuggets, who had seven players score in double figures, won in Portland for the first time since February 1986.

In the only other NBA game Sunday night, Houston kept Sacramento winless with a 129-127 victory.

Hlasek outlasts Svensson

LONDON — Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland down two sets and a break, rallied against Jonas Svensson of Sweden Sunday to win the $452,500 Benson and Hedges Indoor Championships for his first Grand Prix title.

Hlasek, sidelined 14 weeks because of a car crash last January, won 6-7 (4-7), 3-6, 6-4, 6-0, 7-5 in 3 hours, 34 minutes.

"I have been playing very well for the last couple of months and I came hoping and expecting to do well here," said Hlasek, who won $67,000 and celebrated his 24th birthday Saturday. "Now I have won a Grand Prix Super Series tournament the confidence will stay and grow."

Glasson wins Centel Classic

TALLAHASSEE — Bill Glasson, the leading money winner competing in the $500,000 Centel Classic, shot birdies on two of the last three holes Sunday on his way to a four-under-par-68 win over Tommy Armour.

Glasson, 32nd on the PGA money list coming into the tournament, birdied the 16th and 18th holes to end with a 16-under-par 272 at the 7,124-yard, par-72 Killcare Golf and Country Club. He added $90,000 to his annual winnings.

After leading for most of the final round, Armour bogied the 17th hole and fell to second place for $54,000.

Armour started the day on top. Two strokes off the lead after the third round, he birdied five of the first six holes to record a tournament low 31 on the front nine en route to 68.

Red Wings win 4th in row

Detroit captain Steve Yzerman refuses to accept his coach's compliment of being "the best player in the National Hockey League."

Yzerman and Gerard Gallant each had one goal and two assists Sunday night to spark the Detroit Red Wings to their fourth straight victory, a 5-3 decision over the New York Rangers. Dave Barr scored at 13:16 of the third period to snap a 3-3 tie.

Yzerman, who opened the scoring 2:38 into the game, has eight goals and six assists in his last six games. The center has scored 16 goals with 15 assists in 17 games this season.

"I think Steve Yzerman is the best player in the National Hockey League," Red Wings Coach Jacques Demers said. "I wouldn't trade him for (Wayne) Gretzky and (Mario) Lemieux."

Elsewhere in the NHL, Edmonton beat Buffalo 5-4; Winnipeg downed Montreal 7-3; Quebec and Chicago tied 5-5, and Pittsburgh tripped Vancouver 4-2.

Bucs, Igwebuike boot Lions

United Press International

PONTIAC, Mich. — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers finally found somebody they can beat that isn't named Green Bay.

"It's a good win," Tampa Bay coach Ray Perkins said Sunday after his Bucs stopped the Detroit Lions, 23-20, on Donald Igwebuike's 52-yard field goal with 10 seconds to play. Tampa Bay is now 3-8 after stopping a five-game slide.

"Any win is a good win," said Perkins, whose team had not recorded a non-strike victory over any team except Green Bay since opening last season with a win over Atlanta. That was 23 games ago.

"It's something our squad needed right now, after losing five in a row," he said. "It was like a shot in the arm, or like an aspirin. It wasn't pretty — but who said it had to be?"

"Our team is very low at this point, I believe," Detroit quarterback Rusty Hilger after the Lions dipped to 2-9 with their third straight loss. "We thought about it all week long. If we lose to a team like this it would be the bottom. I know I did."

Hilger's 19-yard touchdown pass to Garry James with 45 seconds left appeared to salvage a 20-20 tie for Detroit after the Lions blew a 10-0 first-half lead. Hilger completed 20 of 27 passes for 212 yards.

But Vinny Testaverde, intercepted for the 25th and 26th times in a turnover-plagued first half, completed a 7-yard pass to William Howard and a 26-yard toss to Bruce Hill to set Igwebuike up for his field goal.

Hill caught the ball in the midst of a flock of Detroit defenders but squirmed his way to the sidelines and out of bounds with 16 seconds left to permit Tampa Bay to get its field goal unit on the field. The Bucs were out of timeouts.

"The disappointing part was we didn't make the tackle on Hill to keep him from going out of bounds," Detroit Coach Darryl Rogers said. "They may have had time otherwise (to get their field goal unit on the field), but..."

"The point is we weren't able to hold up at the point we needed to hold up at the time we needed to hold up. There's a few 'hold ups' in there," Rogers grinned thinly.

Perkins didn't ask Igwebuike if he thought he could make the kick. He just ordered him onto the field.

"It's what he gets paid for," Perkins said. "He also gets paid to kick off and he didn't do a very good job of that. In practice, he was kicking well." See Bucs, Page 2B

Spotlight on Bandy, Reinighaus

LONGWOOD — When swimming in the Class 4A-District 5 championships, the fastest district overall in the state, swimmers know going into their races that it's do or die, winner take all, and only the strong survive. Some come out on top while others get left in the wake of defeat.

Even though Winter Park was leaving everyone in their wake by running away with the team title, the Lyman Greyhounds and the Lake Mary Rams were racking up the individual titles and setting their sights toward scoring big in the state meet next weekend.

Winter Park took the team title in the boys over a strong Dr. Phillips team, 269-219, while the 'Hounds and Rams battled to a third place tie with 162 points each. Never in the history of county swimming have two teams been so close in so many meets. Two weeks ago the Greyhounds nipped the Rams for the Seminole Athletic Conference title by one and one-half points.

"Our boys swam great," Ram head coach Walt Morgan said. "Our medley relay could contend for the state title if everyone is on. We should be taking a very strong boy's contention."

The Greyhounds flexed their muscles once again with the superb swimming of senior extraordinaire Chuck Reinighaus and the grit and determination of junior Dave Bandy. Both Reinighaus and Bandy scored double individual victories and helped the Greyhounds' 400 free relay team to a victory.

Bandy started things off for the 'Hounds with a crushing triumph in the 200 free with a winning time of 1:44.88. Bandy later showed his endurance and strength by notching the 500 free to his victory collection. Bandy's time of 4:46.34 should put him well in contention for a top three finish at the state meet.

"Dave had some good swims today," 'Hound head coach Don Clark said. "He took the meet seriously and it showed in his swims. He was our leader at this meet. I felt that everything went." See Boys, Page 3B

Chuck Reinighaus, Lyman's senior standout, won 3 events at Saturday's district meet.

Lady Pats close in on Triple Crown

By CHUCK BURGESS

LONGWOOD — In horse racing, the pinnacle of excellence is the Triple Crown. This past weekend at the Shartan Aquatic Center in the Class 4A-District 5 swimming championships, the Lake Brantley Lady Patriots opened up the gates, let their thoroughbreds run wild, and captured the second jewel of high school swimming's version of the Triple Crown.

The Lady Patriots demolished the rest of the field by bolting out of the blocks, setting the pace of the meet, and coming down the homestretch to capture their first district title in the history of the school. Two weeks earlier, the powerful Lake Brantley stallions captured the first gem of the three swimming crowns by running away with the Seminole Athletic Conference title. The Lady Pats added another stone to the throne by defeating last year's district champion Lady Wildcats of Winter Park 343-243. "We knew we would win going into the meet," a confident Clay Parnell, who has groomed his mustangs into the class of the state, said. "It feels good to finally win the district title. I was happy that it was kind of a runaway. It's a big boost for them going into state."

The leading colt for the Lady Patriots was once again junior sensation JoDee Lake. Lake, who is the Alysbea of Florida swimming. See Brantley, Page 3B

Five state teams in 30 win club

By CHRIS FISTER
Herald sports editor

To get to the state volleyball tournament in 1988, you almost had to be a member of the 30-win club. Practically every team involved in the Class 4A and Class 3A Final Four this year have 30, or close to 30, victories.

Five of the eight teams in 4A and 3A enter Friday's semifinals with 30 or more victories. The state tournaments for both classes will be held at Orlando Dr. Phillips High School with semifinals on Friday at 2 p.m., 4, 6 and 8.

Leading the way in Class 4A is defending champion Miami Sunset, which comes in with an impressive record of 37-0. Sunset, which dispatched Coral Springs Taravella in the Section 4 playoff, opens the state tourney Friday night at 4 p.m. against Section 1 winner Pensacola Pine Forest.

Raiders outgun Gulf Coast

SANFORD — Seminole Community College placed five men in double figures to offset the scoring exploits of journey Most Valuable Player Brian Dawson as the Raiders posted a thrilling 78-77 victory Saturday over Gulf Coast Community College in the finals of the Burger King/Raider Tournament before 201 fans at the SCC Health Center.

Seminole Community College has two home games on tap this week as they play top 10 ranked Palm Beach Junior College Tuesday night and Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University Thursday night. Both games will start at 7:30 p.m.

Seminole got 14 points each from Terrell Barnes and Robert Thomas as they improved their record to 4-0 on the young season. Also scoring in double figures for the Raiders were Robert Ricciardelli with 13, Vincent Emerson, 12, and Nick Milldakis, 11. Dawson, a sophomore guard from Durham, North Carolina, scored 34 points, includ- See Raiders, Page 4B

Pats build foundation with state berth

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

With expanding goals and a bright future, the Lake Brantley boys cross country team heads into this week's state meet with the hopes of finishing in the top 10 and building a foundation for the future.

The Patriots will make their first appearance in the state meet in 10 years and will look to gain valuable experience. Brantley has a young team and will use this race to build for the future.

"We feel real good about finally getting to the state meet," Lake Brantley coach Charlie Harris said. "The only thing we're disappointed in is we don't think we ran well at the regional meet. We want to change that this Saturday."

Lake Brantley began the season with the goal of just getting to the regional meet. But with a pair of transfers and a group that molded together quickly, the Patriots are making a bid to become one of the state's top teams.

Darin Tugman

Junior Darin Tugman has led the Patriots this season and has been on the varsity squad for three consecutive years. Tugman finished seventh in the regional meet and will be seeking a top 10 finish this Saturday in the state finals.

Seniors Andrew Ogilvie and

Andrew Ogilvie

Ron Gordon have come on strong for Brantley in the past few meets and aided greatly in the team's late season surge.

Ogilvie, an established pole vaulter, ran cross country for the first time this season and has been a huge plus to the Patriots squad. Ogilvie finished seventh in the district meet and 16th in the regional meet. Ogilvie will have to come through with a strong race Saturday for Brantley to improve on their performance over last Saturday's regional effort.

Gordon, a four year runner, is making his first trip to the state meet and his second appearance out of the district meet. Gordon began his career running in the 20 minute range and has dropped down to the mid 16s this season. Harris is hoping Gordon can come up with a good race this Saturday in his last race at Lake Brantley.

A trio of sophomores solidifies the Patriots' team with John Feola filling in the third spot. Feola has run well all season long and was impressive in the regional meet with a 20th place finish.

Patrick Eason, who is just now rounding into shape, also ran well in the regional meet, placing 31st at 16:57. Eason is one of two transfers who have helped the Patriots tremendously this season. Eason is from Colorado and is just now getting used to the heat in Florida.

Craig Streetman is the final sophomore and he placed 34th in the district at 17:01. Streetman has improved in nearly every meet this season and has shown he is quite a competitor.

took top honors in both the 50 and 100 freestyles in convincing fashion with times of 24.74 and 53.93, respectively.

"I was a little slower than I thought I would be," Lake, who was last year's runner up at the state meet in both the 50 and 100, said. "I'm satisfied with the wins though. This meet was good for our team. I'm really excited about all of the people making state on our team. It's going to be a great state meet."

Lake had previously anchored the Patriots 200 medley relay team of Dani Ohnsman, Ryann Pauley, and Beth Rosenbluth which came from behind to nip the Lady Wildcats 1:53.95 to 1:54.04.

Freshman filly Ryann Pauley cruised to two victories with decisive wins in the 200 individual medley at 2:13.53 and the 100 breaststroke in 1:08.05. However, Pauley was off of her best times because of being in the middle of her taper, according to Parnell.

Beth Rosenbluth, another freshman gelding for the Lady Pats, kept the ball rolling by capturing the district title in the 100 fly with a winning time of 1:01.39 while teammate Jennifer Moon had the lucky horseshoe in her corner by claiming the 100 back title in 1:01.63.

The only other win for the Lady Pats came in the 400 free relay where they ran away with the victory in 3:44.24.

The other Lady Pats qualifying for the state meet include senior captain Kristen Pauley who took a pair of seconds (200 free and 100 free) and Manda Davis and Kristen Camino who placed second and third respectively in the 500 free.

Rounding out the county with possible at large bids for the state meet include from Lake Howell: Tricia Defrates in the 200 and 500 frees and Lora Cotter in the 50 free, Lake Mary: Sasi Bojanowski in the 100 fly and the Ram 400 free relay team. Lake Brantley: Jill Spiller in the 50 and 100 frees, and Dani Ohnsman in the 100 breast and the 200 IM.

Lyman vs. Brantley for 5A-4 crown

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

With one week remaining before the prep football playoffs, the district races have become very cut and dry.

Lyman and Lake Brantley will meet this week for the district 5A-4 title. Seminole, Oviedo and Leeburg tied for the district 4A-7 title and will have a tiebreaker while Evans won the 5A-5 title.

Lyman and Lake Brantley should be a classic matchup of size against speed. Brantley has the size and should be led by quarterback Clint Johnson and fullback Elroy Dantzier. The Patriots will hope to continue their strong running attack against a quick Lyman defense.

Lyman has the speed in tailback Cedric Bouey and quarterback Steve Jerry. Jerry will be hobbled, though, as he went down in the game against DeLand last week with an ankle injury.

The game will without a doubt be a tough confrontation as both programs are hungry for a district title. Neither team has been to the playoffs in the last five years and both would like to change that this season.

Brantley, 5-4, won this past week against Spruce Creek, racking up a 42-14 score. The Patriots came through in a must win situation and will face the same confrontation this week against the Greyhounds. Johnson ran for four touchdowns while rushing for 113. Dantzier added 139 yards as Brantley racked up 302 yards on the ground.

"Lyman is a real tough team,"

Lake Brantley's Johnson said. "We'll have to play as well as we did against Spruce Creek to beat them."

Lyman, 7-2, must be effective on both passing and running but with Jerry injured the offense may be slowed. Backup quarterback Mike McNamee has come on to run the offense well but is not as mobile or as deadly as Jerry is in the pocket. Jerry poses a double threat in that he can run and pass. McNamee is a stationary quarterback with a strong arm.

Lyman trimmed DeLand, 10-7, in a game that was filled with controversy. The Greyhounds, though, won the big game and are ready for this week's showdown.

Lyman's defense must rise to the occasion with Willie Grayson and John Scherpf having to come up with strong games. Grayson and Scherpf must compete against the strong front line of the Patriots, one of the largest lines in the Central Florida area.

In the 4A-7 race Oviedo knocked off Edgewater to send the district into a three way tie, the tie will be broken on Monday, Nov. 28. The schools must now decide whether they will play a Kansas tiebreaker (one plays from the 10 yard line) or quarters.

Seminole, 3-8 overall, will not have a winning record but coach Emory Blake feels the "Noles have just as good a shot as anyone of winning the tiebreaker."

"Our offense has really come along," Blake said. "Our defense is just a little weak. It was our defense that carried us in the early going, and now we're looking for them to come around again."

Oviedo, 8-1, tied for the 4A-7 title with its win over Edgewater. The Lions were in a must win situation as a loss would have given Leesburg the title. Seminole, 3-8, is the only team to defeat Oviedo this season in a 10-6 battle three weeks ago.

Oviedo was led by the play of Frank Diaz and Chad Duncan on offense while Willie Pauldo, Duncan and Hector Diaz did the job on defense.

Seminole was whipped by Lake Howell last week with Lake Howell's Marquette Smith running circles around the Tribe defense. Smith has become one of the area's premier running backs in only his sophomore season with over 1,200 yards rushing in nine games.

Lake Howell, 6-3, lost any shot at a district title when both Lyman and Lake Brantley won. A loss by either of those teams would have given the Silver Hawks a glimmer of hope but now they must play for personal pride.

In district 5A-5 Evans jumped out to a quick 14-0 lead over Apopka and held a 21-7 halftime lead. The Trojans then held off a late surge by the Blue Darters.

High's Kerry Wiggins completed 18 of 25 passes for 255 yards. Wiggins, only a sophomore, now has 1,042 passing yards and has a shot to break the school record set by Jeff Blake.

Lake Mary's Carlos Hartefeld also went over the 1,000 mark on Thursday as he threw for 104 yards in the Rams' 21-0 win over Mainland. Hartefeld now has 1,010 passing yards.

Jamboree pries open girls soccer season

27.35. The game between Seminole and DeLand, a pair of teams in the learning and growing stage, looked more like an advanced game of kickball. On the other hand, the Lyman/Bishop Moore shutout was the result of fine defensive play.

LAKE MARY — Eight high school girls soccer teams pried open the 1988-89 season Saturday night at Lake Mary High School, going through a brief preseason before the games start counting later this week.

In the first 40-minute period, the host Lake Mary Lady Rams made short work of the Deltona Lady Wolves, dealing the first-year school a quick and painless 6-0 defeat.

That exhibition of offensive firepower was followed by a pair of defensive standoffs, DeLand and Seminole playing to a 0-0 tie, which was duplicated by Lyman and Bishop Moore in its mini-game.

In the nightcap, Lake Howell shut out Oviedo 3-0.

"Basically, what we did was work on skill areas, like taking the ball back and bringing the ball out from the back," said Bill Elmsle, coach of the Lady Rams. "When you get up a couple of goals early, it allows you to do what you want."

Lake Mary could have done anything it wanted, including make the score two or three times as worse. It took just 3:45 for the Lady Rams to score as senior Michelle Mattingly played a long crossing ball to senior Marcy Lazar, who tapped it in past an out-of-position Deltona goalie.

Since Deltona didn't manage to take a shot, that was all Lake Mary needed. Still, playing conservatively, the Lady Rams added five more goals. Mattingly scored next on an assist from Amy Alexander. Then Mattingly sent in another crossing ball, this time in the air, to Lazar, who nodded it home.

Mattingly struck again six minutes later, deking a Deltona defender out of position and blasting a long shot home. Lazar netted her hat trick when a botched clear attempt by Deltona went straight to her. After settling quickly, she launched a long shot that went in off the hand of the Deltona keeper.

Crisie Snow ended the scoring with a spinning shot at

"It was ridiculous," said Seminole coach Suzy Reno. "We're mostly a new team. We have some experience, but we have a lot of freshmen. We should have had one sure goal, but there was nobody running in on the right wing."

When Lyman's Lady Greyhounds and the Bishop Moore Lady Hornets took the field, the game was different but the score remained the same. The Lady Hornets carried most of the play and had the better opportunities, but Lyman's defense, anchored by senior Julia Callarman, didn't give an inch.

"If we could have switched the field (go from one side to the other), we could have created some things," said Laura Rountree of Lyman. "We had the far side of the field open a couple of times but we couldn't swing it over there."

Both the Lake Howell Lady Silver Hawks and Oviedo's Lady Lions came into the jamboree intent on doing some good work to prepare for the start of the regular season. While both teams substituted freely, moving players from position to position, Lake Howell was able to put away a few goals for the win.

At 12:13, Dana Boyesen scored the first of her two goals on a blast from the left side past Oviedo goalie Michelle Freeman. Two-and-a-half minutes later, Boyesen took a long cross from Valerie Higgins and, after dancing with it around a Lady Lion defender for a moment, knocked it home.

Higgins also created the third Lake Howell goal, sending in another long cross from the right wing that Christine Frankenberg was able to tap home.

On the other side of the field, Oviedo mounted a couple of drives but always seemed to be pushed aside by the Lady Silver Hawk defense.

County's 1,000 yard club getting crowded

The Seminole County 1,000 yard club inducted three new members Friday night, one in the rushing department and two in the passing category.

Oviedo's Frank Diaz became the third county running back to go over the 1,000 barrier as he ran for 148 yards in the Lions' 21-12 victory over Edgewater. Diaz now has 1,008 yards on the season.

Lake Howell's Marquette Smith bolted for 182 yards and extended his lead in the rushing category as he now has 1,237 yards. Lyman's Cedric Bouey, held to 63 yards vs. DeLand, now has 1,115 yards in nine games.

There is a good possibility of a fourth running back joining the 1,000 yard club. Lake Brantley's Elroy Dantzier picked up 139 yards Friday vs. Spruce Creek to run his season total to 927 after nine games.

DePaul, Irish rely on newcomers

United Press International

Notre Dame and DePaul need instant help from unproven talent to remain the nation's class independents.

Fighting Irish Coach Digger Phelps, in his 19th season, hopes to overcome the departure of stars David Rivers and Gary Voce with seven returning players and five freshmen.

Notre Dame, 20-9 last season, will rely on 6-foot-9 LaPhonso Ellis and 6-11 Keith Tower, both freshmen, to contribute quickly.

"It is not just an ordinary freshman group," said team captain Joe Fredrick, a junior guard. "This year we'll be able to gamble a lot more because with LaPhonso we have a shot blocker, which will give the guards a lot more leeway on defense where they can go for steals and stuff."

Besides Fredrick, returning Irish players include forwards Keith Robinson, Kevin Ellery and Tony Jackson, center Scott Paddock and guard Jamere Jackson.

Rivers, an NBA first-round draft choice, and Voce combined to average 32 points per game last season. Rivers providing ballhandling and Voce an inside presence.

"I am going to have to take a leadership role now that David and Gary are gone," Fredrick said. "It's more like a team like Arizona was last year. It is not a jealous team. It is just a team."

DePaul, 22-8 last season, enters the 1988-89 season without guards Rod Strickland and Kevin Edwards, both NBA first-round picks. The Blue Demons will count on seniors Terence Greene and Stanley Brundy, and junior Kevin Holland.

"You really can't replace them (Strickland and Edwards)," Coach Joey Meyer said. "You have to mold a different kind of team. Every year, your team has a personality. We're going to have to develop a chemistry. We have to play well together."

"The youth factor, especially at guard, is a key to this season. The total minutes played by our guards isn't much. With Melvon Foster, Gilbert Miller and David Booth, we have three guys who have never played a minute for DePaul. Sometimes that helps them not be nervous. They could be young enough not to know they should be worried about a particular game."

Marquette, another Midwest independent based in Milwaukee, plans to improve its 10-18 record of last season by getting tougher.

Senior forward Mike Flory, who sat out last season for academic reasons, is recovering from a fractured leg and wrist suffered in a car accident. The Warriors need him back.

"We got beat up last year by too many teams," Coach Bob Dukiet said. "That's the first order of business we're going to address. We're going to try to play more physical this year, and if we can't, play smarter and handle the ball smarter."

"He's (Flory) contributed already in many positive ways. In his therapy, in his work ethic in getting himself back in shape. Michael's going to help us, no question about that."

Miami, four years after re-starting its program, has eight seniors. The Hurricanes have gone 14-14, 15-16 and 17-14. With senior forwards Eric Brown and Dennis Burns leading the way, hope to earn their first postseason tournament.

The Hurricanes will use a "no-center" look (three forwards and two guards) with the departure of center Tito Horford.

Oral Roberts at Tulsa, Okla., added five junior-college transfers to bolster a team that finished 8-21 last season.

"We're on the way back," Coach Ken Trickey said. "Last year, our kids just weren't ready for the schedule we faced. Now, with the addition of several junior-college transfers, hopefully we'll be more mature and ready to go."

Wright State at Dayton, Ohio, a former Division II power, finished 16-11 last season in its Division I season.

"We had the fourth-best record last year among the independents, and I think that's pretty respectable," Coach Ralph Undershill said. "I'd like to nail down 20 wins and keep gaining respect in Division I just like we did in Division II."

Raiders

ing 19 in the second half. Also in double figures for the Commodores were Byron Davis with 17 and Alan Glover with 12.

Seminole jumped out to a 24-14 lead in the first nine minutes of play behind the outside shooting of Thomas and the inside work of Barnes and Ricciardelli. But, as in their first game with Brevard, Gulf Coast turned to Dawson, who decided to take the game over himself and scored 15 points to close the score to 37-35 at halftime.

Seminole came out of the intermission fired up and behind Emerson, who scored 10 of his 12 points in the second half, and jumped out to a lead of 18 points on a couple of occasions. Seminole's defense was awesome as they held Gulf Coast scoreless until the 15:40 mark of the second half and held them to no field goals the first five minutes.

Seminole took a 59-50 lead with 10:33 left in the game. But then foul trouble and Dawson started to haunt the Raiders as the Commodores refused to give up. Gulf Coast out scored the Raiders 19-11 over the next eight minutes and cut the score to 70-69 with 2:44 left.

A jumper by Thomas and two free throws each by Ricciardelli and Woods offset a basket and two free throws by Dawson and a basket by Davis. Then came the play of the night for the Raiders. Woods and Mike Gaskill, who replaced a fouled out Thomas, combined to steal the ball at midcourt. Gaskill picked up the loose ball and drove for a layup to give Seminole a 78-75 lead with 14 seconds left. After Gulf Coast used its last time out Dawson missed a three point attempt, but Davis grabbed the offensive rebound and scored to cut it to 78-77 but the Raiders ran out the last three seconds and Seminole had its fourth straight win.

Ricciardelli led the Raiders with 11 rebounds and Barnes grabbed seven. Woods led in assists with seven and Thomas added five. Glover grabbed ten rebounds for Gulf Coast while Davis got eight. Dawson also led in assists with six.

In the consolation game Brevard defeated Patrick Air Force Base 99-78 to take home third place. Brevard was led by Phillip Dumes who made the most of his first start to score 20 points.

Named to the All-Tournament team, in addition to MVP Dawson, was Davis of Gulf Coast, Dumes of Brevard, and Ricciardelli, Thomas, and Woods of Seminole.

Rear admiral wanted to flunk out of Navy

LONGWOOD — For someone who originally planned to flunk out of the Navy's hospital corps school, Longwood resident Joseph P. Smyth, M.D., has made a name for himself in the Navy's medical community.

On Aug. 1, the doctor became one of just 15 flag officers in the Navy's medical corps when he was promoted to rear admiral (lower half).

The son of an Irish-born grocery store owner, Smyth joined the Navy in 1953, two years after graduating from LaSalette Preparatory School in Hartford, Conn. While his parents, Helen P. Smyth and the late Patrick Smyth, wholeheartedly backed his decision to enlist, the future officer began to have second thoughts while in basic training.

"When I was finishing boot camp I took a battery of Navy tests to find out which field best suited me," the admiral remembered. "I wanted to be an electronics technician. However, much to my chagrin, the tests showed that I was better suited as a hospital corpsman."

"So I decided I'd show the Navy just what I thought of their tests by flunking out of corpsman's school and being sent to a ship where I could become an electronics technician through on-the-job training. The only trouble was, when I got to school I found out I loved it."

The admiral credits his instructors for his change of heart. He said he graduated second in his class from hospital corps and laboratory technician schools, missing class honors by one-tenth of a point.

Following school and a 15-month tour at the naval hospital in St. Alban's, N.Y., Smyth went to Kaneohe, Hawaii, where he served with the Marine Corps. In just four years he worked his way up to petty officer first class, but decided not to re-enlist.

"I was toying with the idea of continuing in the medical field," the admiral explained. "But I wasn't so sure about going to college."

The Marines with whom I was serving were holding a re-enlistment drive," he continued. "The commandant of the Marine Corps, Gen. Randolph M. Pate, was visiting the base, so they set up an appointment for me to talk with him."

After a 45-minute interview, the general advised the petty officer to take a sabbatical from active duty and go to pre-med and medical school. Smyth joined the reserves and enrolled in a pre-med program at Fairfield University in Fairfield, Conn. He received a bachelor of arts degree there in 1960 and later entered the Creighton University School of Medicine in Omaha, Neb., earning his medical degree in 1964.

During his senior year at medical school, the doctor was commissioned a regular Navy officer. He served his internship and completed his internal medicine residency at the Philadelphia (Pa.) Naval Hospital from 1964-1968.

From Philadelphia, Smyth went to Da Nang, Vietnam, where he was chief of medicine at the naval hospital from 1969 to 1970. Subsequent assignments included duty in Orlando, Oakland, Calif., and Yokosuka and Okinawa, Japan. In August 1986 he reported to the staff headquarters of the commander in chief, U.S. Naval Forces, Europe, in London, England, for duties as fleet medical officer. Smyth also holds the post of commander, Naval Medical Command, European Region, a position that places him at the head of all Navy medical and dental facilities in

From the time I was a corpsman's school 35 years ago, Smyth knew the Navy's medical program ranked high with its finest civilian counterparts. In fact, Navy doctors have an edge, he added, because they can better focus on their profession without the usual day-to-day business concerns of civilian practice.

"In a nice sense I've been able to pursue medicine divorced from a patient's financial concerns," Smyth concluded. "I've never had to do things to balance a billing ledger. By not working from the profit motive I derive a great sense of freedom and personal satisfaction."

Celebrity fragrances smelling sweet to noses in the industry

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

It is perhaps not surprising that fragrance manufacturers would begin to market their wares to appeal to a nation that reads 3 million copies of People magazine a week and eats dinner while watching "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous."

But the sheer number of celebrity fragrances newly on the market or scheduled to appear shortly is staggering—even though they still account for a relatively small percentage of the more than 800 fragrances now available in the United States.

Cher has launched "Uninhibited," a $175-an-ounce scent by Parfums Stern, which has kicked off with a promotional blitz. Industry experts are comparing it with the $10 million campaign that helped make "Elizabeth Taylor's Passion" one of the top five fragrances in stores where it's sold.

On Nov. 15, in California, musician Herb Alpert will raise the curtain on "Listen," an $85-per-half-ounce women's scent.

Next year, ballet superstar Mikhail Baryshnikov will bring a women's scent, called "Misha," to market, even as Latin crooner Julio Iglesias woos us with his own potion, Joan Collins, "Dynasty" actress and former "Scoundrel" spokeswoman, will unveil a perfume in 1989. Priscilla Presley and teenage tennis ace Gabriela Sabatini are concocting scents with Colonia Inc., both of which are scheduled to be served up in 1990. Even mega-developer Donald Trump and Olympic Gold Medalist Florence Griffith-Joyner have reportedly been approached about doing fragrances.

These brews will compete for attention on fragrance counter shelves that are already crowded with such earlier smells as "Sophia" (as in Loren); "De-neuve" (as in Catherine); "Dionne" (as in Warwick); "Glorious" and "Vanderbilt by Gloria Vanderbilt"; "Paloma Picasso"; "Niki de Saint Phalle" (after a French sculptress by the same name); and "Pavlova" (as in ballerina Anna Pavlova). There's even a Bjorn Borg fragrance.

"Forever Krystle," the scent inspired by the character played by Linda Evans on "Dynasty" and promoted by the blond actress, is still the No. 4 best-selling fragrance in mass market four years after its introduction. "Carrington," a complimentary men's fragrance introduced in 1985 and promoted by "Dynasty" colleague John Forsyth, can also still be found.

Royalty groupies can still buy "Wedding Bouquet," an unofficial tribute to Prince Charles and Princess Diana launched at the time of their marriage, and "Fergie," named after the Duchess of York, Michael Jackson fans, however, are out of luck: The Gloved One's "Magic Beat" line of scents disappeared quickly after its debut.

Celebrity scents permit consumers to indulge in fantasies that, by buying a pricey elixir bearing the name of someone they admire, they can somehow become like that person. For perfumers, celebrities furnish a ready-made identity package around that they can easily build a fragrance and marketing campaign. And once on the market, celebrity scents have immediate and strong name recognition.

But celebrity scents also have a built-in disadvantage: They come with high expectations that they must live up to.

"Elizabeth Taylor's Passion" is the perfumer's textbook example of a celebrity fragrance done right. The faceted crystal bottle brings to mind the actress's famous jewels. The lavender color of everything from the perfume's bottle to a recently added scented bath powder suggests Taylor's famous violet eyes. The floral Oriental fragrance itself hints of romance—something the off-married Taylor is associated with on- and off-screen.

The first individual to see the potential in fragrance as an extension of one's persona was Paul Poiret, a colorful, avant-garde French fashion designer who introduced the first designer scent around the turn of the century. Although Colleen Moore, a movie actress in the 1930s and '40s, is believed to have been the first celebrity to have her own fragrance, and Candler Bergen launched "C" back in the '70s, Annette Green, executive director of the Fragrance Foundation, dates the birth of the modern celebrity fragrance craze to the introduction of "Forever Krystle" and "Carrington."

Green thinks celebrity scents represent additional business rather than competition for designer fragrances, but some other industry experts disagree, suggesting that celebrities and other universally recognized people, places or things will replace fashion designers—who are generally less well known—as the inspiration for new products.

Meanwhile, at least one designer scoffs at the celeb-scent trend. "Fragrance belongs in the hands of designers, not celebrities," menswear designer Bijan recently declared. "Do I get up on the stage and try to act or sing?"

The first paper money was scolded and refused, but when precious metals grew scarce during the Civil War, there was no other choice but to use it.

Less fortunate kids to witness Disney World

LAKE BUENA VISTA — Area children will join thousands of underprivileged kids from more than 100 cities for a weekend at the invitation of Walt Disney World on Thursday and Friday.

The occasion? A party in honor of Mickey Mouse's 60th birthday.

The more than 5,000 children will be given a chance they may never have had otherwise—to see Walt Disney World in person.

Children will be flown in from throughout the United States, Canada, the United Kingdom, Ireland, France and West Germany. The cities' mayors, who selected the children with input from children's welfare institutions and other special programs, will accompany the children in most cases.

Locally, the invitation list reads: Altamonte Springs, 30 children; Apopka, 51; Casselberry, 30; Eatonville, 50; Lake Mary, 30; Longwood, 37; Maitland, 41; Orlando, 500; Oviedo, 29; Sanford, 38; Winter Park, 48; and Winterville, 16.

Activities will include the cutting of a 1,000-foot-long birthday cake, Mickey's All-American Birthday Parade, rides on all attractions, and fireworks.

Getting holiday mail there on time is no trick

ORLANDO — Early mailing, correct addresses and proper wrapping are the keys for cards and parcels reaching their destinations in plenty of time for the holidays.

Orlando Postmaster Gerald L. Edwards asks holiday shoppers to mail early this year and make certain that addresses are correct, including zip codes.

For parcels, addresses should also be written on a separate slip to be enclosed in the parcel.

For foreign mail, the bottom line of the address should show only the country name, written in full rather than abbreviated, and in capital letters. All international parcels must bear a Customs declaration form completed by the mailer.

Mail can still be sent to military installations in Alaska and Hawaii through Nov. 23 at surface rates.

Exhibit shows intricacy of first dollars

United Press International

MIAMI — Unbelievable as it may seem, there was a time when Americans turned up their noses at dollar bills.

A traveling currency exhibit now in Miami tells how paper money gained acceptance and offers beautiful examples of the bills that persuaded the populace to give up gold and silver for promiss.

"People are shocked when they see it. They can't believe that money was so beautiful then and so plain now," said Teresa Morales, publicist for the Goldome bank in Buffalo, N.Y., which owns the collection.

The exhibit contains 70 original U.S. dollar bills dating from the early 1860s. It is on display at the Miami Museum of Science and Space Transit Planetarium Nov. 14 to Dec. 26.

The money exhibit drew thousands of gawkers during a New York display on Wall Street earlier this year. It travels next year to Washington, D.C., Chicago, Denver, Phoenix, Ariz., Seattle and Tacoma, Wash.; Portland, Ore., and Newport, Calif. Exhibit curator Thomas Ruffino, a former coin and antique money dealer, sees the bills as relics of the ultimate marketing success.

There was no government-issued paper money in the United States until 1862, except for the rapidly devalued bills issued by the Continental Congress in 1775.

"Different banks issued some but when they went under a lot of people got burned. The government had to step in and offer a centralized system. But it was a difficult sell on a public used to trading in gold and silver coins," Ruffino said.

The first paper money was

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing tried to buoy the public's confidence by printing colorful bills with intricate etchings that make today's greenbacks seem plain dowdy.

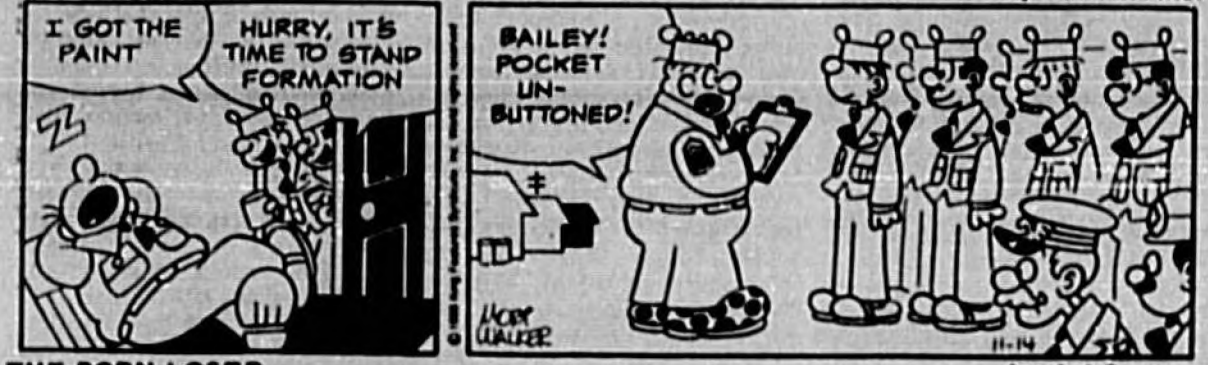

"Basically, you have a promise to pay from the government. People had to be convinced they had value. When you make something look beautiful and put a lot of work into it, you create value," Ruffino said.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

This week we will look at some card combinations, with a view to understanding why certain plays are correct. In today's auction, South was comfortable rebidding two no-trump with the spade ace and a double stopper in hearts. When North then supported diamonds, South bid three hearts to show strong controls in that suit. Since North was afraid of spades in no-trump, he simply bid four diamonds, and South carried on to game.

Making 11 tricks is easy provided declarer loses no more than one diamond trick. But South played carelessly. He won the ace of spades and led the jack of diamonds. West played low and declarer played low from dummy. East won the singleton king. Later the defenders made another diamond trick and a club.

Whatever declarer does in diamonds is immaterial if the suit splits 2-2, but when East has a singleton, declarer must make the right play. If East has the singleton 5, nothing matters. If East holds the nine alone, today's declarer's play is right. But if East holds either the king or the queen alone, it is right to play a low diamond to the ace. Since playing low to the ace wins twice (king or queen alone with East) and playing the jack wins only once (singleton nine), obviously the correct play is a low diamond from the South hand. The only exception to this would be if the bidding showed absolutely that West held the K-Q of diamonds; then you might as well lead the jack and hope that either the suit is splitting or East has the lone nine-spot.

Sweater-coat ($320) and jacket ($225) look dapper in graphic basket-weave mohair blend from Tomatsu.

Mohair is Texas' softest resource

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

One of America's lesser-known natural resources roams, for the most part, in southwestern Texas. It is there that most of that state's 1,800,000 angora goats are raised. The angora goat produces mohair—that long, lustrous hair, which in the fashion world, is being woven and knit into more and more fashions.

"We've been seeing a renewed interest in natural fibers," explains Madeline Daddiego, director of promotions for The Mohair Council of America. "And with texture being so important in fashion, mohair lends itself to those boucle and brushed looks."

Currently, mohair fashions may be found in collections by big gun designers such as Bill Blass, Linda Allard for Ellen Tracy, Mary Jane Marasiano, Pamela Morris, Jhane Barnes, Pauline Trigere and Helen Sidel. As fashion silhouettes are reduced to slimmer proportions, the texture effects of this fiber are released in beautifully colored sweaters and mohair-blend jackets and sweater coats.

"I like the contrast and texture of mohair, especially with coordinating fabrics and other natural yarns," observes Blass. "Mohair has a great way of enriching styles."

Current styles created from mohair include sweaters in beautifully colored patterns. At Blassport, for instance, a blue crew-neck sweater is accented by wide windowpane stripes of black, white delcately colored flowers circle around the chest and shoulders. Pamela Morris for Gioia fashions an oversized cardigan with gray, black and yellow stripes of softly brushed mohair.

What increasingly attracts designers to mohair is its natural sleek finish. "Compared to wool," explains Daddiego, "mohair is a longer fiber and has a sleeker finish. If you look at the actual fiber surface, it is smooth, which gives mohair its luster and sheen."

In fashion terms, that means that mohair holds dye very well, and because of its sheen, it is a good reflector of light. Consequently, colored mohair has a rich intensity, perfect for the many jewel tones like amethyst and ruby found in current collections. Conversely, the palest of pastels—rosigat, peach, mint and cream—appear even richer. Designers, in a season predominated by blacks and browns, are drawn to color as a pivotal accent.

Mohair colors are of mohair ensures a longer life.

•Dyeing is recommended, since mohair is frequently woven with other luxury fibers, such as wool, silk and cotton.

•Sweaters may be hand-washed. Wash in cold water with a mild detergent like Woolite, and block to air dry.

•If mohair becomes wet from rain or snow, shake to remove excess water and hang to dry. Once dried, gently brush the garment with a natural bristles for warmer temperatures.

Enlarged glands may prove to be problem

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have enlarged glands around my carotid arteries. My old doctor said it was dangerous and had me take medicine. Now he's retired; the new doctor doesn't seem concerned and has stopped my medicine. I have a constant headache and my neck on each side has a very hard place about 1 1/2 inches wide.

DEAR READER: I do not know whether your "enlarged glands" are lymph nodes or the thyroid gland.

If you have swollen lymph nodes, you need a medical examination. Enlarged lymph glands can indicate infection or, in some cases, the presence of tumors.

I suspect that you have a goiter, an enlargement of the thyroid gland. Ordinarily, this is not a serious condition, and can be easily controlled by using thyroid-hormone pills with or without iodine supplements. Thyroid hormone medicine and iodine usually cause shrinkage of the thyroid gland by suppressing its manufacture of thyroid hormones.

You raise another question that has to do with the confusion of your experience when their doctors disagree. Medical disagreement is a healthy sign of a vigorous profession, in which new and important findings are literally reported weekly.

When doctors disagree, they owe their patients the courtesy of resolving the issue so that patients will not be placed in the middle. Here is an instance where a third opinion would be helpful. Because your new doctor has not taken the time and trouble to enlighten you about your condition, I suggest that you seek another opinion. In this way, your enlarged glands can be explained to you and you can consider what, if any, treatment might be appropriate.

For more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Choosing a Physician." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 48 and have been quadriplegic since age 18. No pain pills have been able to touch the burning pins-and-needles feeling in my legs. I've been suffering from them for the last three years. What do you suggest?

DEAR READER: Chronic pain syndrome from any cause is a terrible burden to bear. If your doctor is unable to help you overcome your symptoms, I suggest that you request a referral to a pain clinic. Many teaching hospitals offer this service to patients. In such a setting, specialists will assist you in coping with the problem, using medication, hypnosis, biofeedback, acupuncture, transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulation (TENS) and other techniques.

You can be helped. The problem is finding a facility close enough to be convenient. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report, "Managing Chronic Pain." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been storing water in half-gallon clear glass jugs. My neighbor said it will deteriorate and that I should change it every few months. How true is this?

DEAR READER: Stored, unsterilized water can become stale and contaminated with mold. I suggest that you either sterilize the water and the containers (by boiling) or change the water weekly.

Mothers able to express love after losing anger

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing the letter from "Feeling Guilty"—the mother who couldn't bring herself to show love to her 15-year-old daughter. I know exactly how she feels.

For the first four or five years of my son's life, I simply could not show him any affection and I was miserable because I couldn't do anything about it. Deep down I really loved Tommy and would have killed anyone who tried to harm him. Yet I held him at arm's length.

Why? Because I was crazy in love with his father, "Mike," who ordered me to get an abortion when I told him I was pregnant. (We were not married.) I considered an abortion, made all the arrangements, but couldn't go through with it at the last minute. That cost me my relationship with Mike.

I married someone else for all the wrong reasons, but that marriage didn't last long.

As time went on, I found myself being unreasonably hostile to Tommy. It got so bad that I actually gave him to a friend for a few days so I could get my head screwed on straight. After hours of soul-searching and praying, God finally spoke to my heart. He said, "You are blaming Tommy for being born and coming between you and Mike." When I finally admitted it to myself, it was as though a heavy weight was lifted from my shoulders.

Tommy is 11 now, and I'll never forget one day about three years ago, we were driving down the street, and I just felt like reaching over, giving his arm a pat and saying, "I love you." He turned toward me, his big brown eyes filled with tears, and said, "Mommy, I don't remember ever hearing you say that before."

Abby, that just about broke my heart. Imagine being 7 years old and never hearing your mom say "I love you" before.

From that day on, I changed my ways and have said, "I love you" every day. And you know what? I really do.

ADVICE
ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

"Feeling Guilty." I thought I was the only mother in the world who had that problem.

I had a 13-year-old daughter I couldn't love. To make matters worse, I had two younger children from my second marriage and I had no trouble loving them at all.

I knew my feelings were wrong, unfair and downright mean, but I couldn't change my feelings. Things got so bad, I went to a psychiatrist because I wasn't able to sleep nights for the guilt I was feeling. In less than a year, everything became perfectly clear. I didn't realize it at the time, but this innocent child was the image of my first husband's mother who detested me because, as was the case in "Feeling Guilty," her son had to marry me. There was more to it, of course. I was still in high school, and he was in college and had to drop out and go to work to support me and the baby. His mother always thought I ruined his chances for a college education and a successful professional career.

Anyway, I know it's irrational for me to have blamed my daughter, but that is what I did. It wasn't her fault that she was the image of her father's mother. It all came out on the psychiatrist's couch. Thank God, I sought the help I needed.

Keep recommending professional help, Abby. I shudder to think what could have happened to me and my family had I not had it.

HOROSCOPE

What the day will bring...

By Bernice Bede Osof
YOUR BIRTHDAY
November 15, 1988

Your material prospects look encouraging for the year ahead, provided you don't involve yourself in frivolous ventures with questionable people. Stick to things and people with proven track records.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In-laws or parents could be a trifle more difficult to deal with today. Try not to do anything that could divide your household into two armed camps. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The AstroGraph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You might be associated with someone today whose methods and tactics are contrary to yours. Take care in this arrangement, because you could be blamed for this person's mistakes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Opportunities that will be difficult to recognize could develop for you today through an unusual chain of events. If you're not alert and observant, however, they will count for little.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your image and reputation are rather fragile today, so be mindful of your behavior, especially where your career is concerned. Stains made at this time will be hard to eradicate.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

Your hunches and perceptions regarding ways to further your ambitions could be slightly off target today. Don't let your emotions override your logical evaluations.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If your desires are limited to material matters today, some disappointments are likely. Broaden your horizons and think about enriching your spirit as well.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Associates will assist you today because they want to, and like you, not because they feel obligated. In fact, being demanding could have an opposite effect.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try not to take yourself or your involvements too seriously today. If you let yourself get uptight, your behavior could be self-defeating.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Even though you may prefer to do otherwise, it's best that you manage important matters for yourself today rather than look for someone to ease your burdens for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Associate today only with people with whom you are in harmony. If you get tied up with someone who is abrasive, small differences could lead to mammoth oppositions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you have a tough assignment confronting you today, analyze its problems in advance. Don't dive into a pool before you know the depth of the water.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be very careful today about handling business situations with risky elements. If you get reckless or careless, your impulsiveness could create serious complications.

Sexes segregated on subway

United Press International

MEXICO CITY — Mexico City's subway system not only moves the greatest number of passengers per mile for the cheapest fare in the world, it is also the only subway that separates men from women during rush hours.

"I'm lucky to ride in the segregated cars—at least during the morning rush hours," said Martha Elena Mendoza, 17, who uses La Raza subway station every morning to go to school.

At her station instrumental music is piped in as if to soothe the frantic bustling morning crowd. At the front of the pristine tiled platform, devoid of a single gum-wrapper or cigarette butt, a policeman guards a gate that admits only women.

Though pushing people wedged shoulder to shoulder on the platform, women slipped through the gate when another train arrived and took seats in the first two relatively uncrowded cars set aside for them and children.

The men in the other eight cars exploded out like wild bulls, colliding fearfully with the men on the platform who simply muscled their way onto the train.

Metro system officials do not say outright that the segregation program was designed to prevent sexual harassment. Most women, however, believe that it protects them from that.

"Many men take advantage of the overcrowding and are really ride," Mendoza said.

"As long as men and women are together in a crowded car, men will act with no shame," said housewife Adriana Martinez, 26. "They just take advantage of the situation and feel more bold in their anonymity."

Sex-segregated cars first appeared in 1980 in response to an avalanche of complaints lodged by women at information booths in various Metro stations.

"Once we heard about the increasing number of complaints, we initiated a study to investigate and saw that there was a problem of overcrowding during certain hours," said Jose Guzman, press coordinator for the Metro Public Transportation System.

To avoid "incidents"—Guzman would not elaborate—it was decided to provide separate cars for women between 5 and 10 a.m. and 5 and 9 p.m. on the most crowded routes.

Many women don't think these hours are enough and would like to see segregated cars provided all the time.

"While it protects women during the rush hours from those men and boys who act like perverts, the rest of the time it's the same problem and women are at risk again," said Paula Salazar, 50, as she rode in a segregated car to work.

"I travel on this Metro everyday and I have to prepare myself mentally every time," said a British woman of 23 who lives and works in Mexico City. "It's a nightmare."

Men who would talk also approved of segregating men from women.
