They're Voting With Their Feet

Time and again, the creation of a Communist state has been accompanied by the massive flight of its people. The pattern is too well known to require documentation, but it happened in Hungary, East Germany and Cuba, and it is happening again today with tragic consequences in

The facts of the exodus are well known and an international convention has attempted to deal with the misery of nearly a million persons who have, as it is said, "voted with their feet." against the regime.

In their case, the vote is deadly serious. As many as 50 percent of those who attempt escape by sea the estimates run as high as 200,000 men, women and children — have perished when their leaky fishing boats ran out of food and water or foundered in the South China Sea.

So desperate a risk indicates alternatives that are worse, and these have been well documented by the experiences of Vietnamese citizens in all walks of life in attempting to survive the communization of their homeland

Their agony demonstrates again how antithetical are communist theory and human nature. The torments they endured at the hands of Marxist zealots intent upon bending human nature to conform to communism make a heartbreaking

The zooming price of gasoline — and the lack of it — makes it mandatory that other means of transportation are expanded. rather than diminished.

There's good reason to expect the cost of gasoline to continue to rise, making rail transit even more important and acceptable

Perhaps we should take a close look at rail service in Europe where currently there is a huge surge in new railway construction and track improvement. France, Germany and Italy all are investing heavily in new,

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Has Common Cause, with its persistent demand for more open and honest government, become outdated? Some capital observers say yes, that what former Vice President Spiro Agnew dubbed the "post-Watergate morality" has run its course and that the Common Cause advocates have lost favor in the halls of government.

Not surprisingly, Common Cause leaders contend their influence remains high as the organization prepares for its second decade. The truth lies somewhere between. The world's largest democracy at the moment is not a very encouraging example of that form of political organization.

India, after weeks of parliamentary maneuvering, has acquired a new government that seems assured of surviving until the end of August, but quite possibly not much beyond that. The new prime minister, Chaudhury Charn Singh, has patched together a coalition cabinet that is notable less for who is represented than for who isn't — a lady by the name of Indira Gandhi. By agreement, the former prime minister is not receiving any posts in return for her support. But it is upon the promised 73 votes of her faction of the many-splintered Congress Party that Singh must base his shaky claim to a parliamentary majority.

More On Willie Mays...

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (UPI) — Leo Durocher had offered his opinion and nothing in the world was going to change it. He had said the best ballplayer of his generation, the greatest one he had ever seen in his three-quarters of a century, was "Say Hey" Willie Mays, for whose enshrinement into Baseball's Hall of Fame he made a special trip Sunday. I had asked him what about "I played on the same club with him," Durocher said, intending that to be the clincher. "He was a great player but Willie here was Willie Mays was alongside his old New York Giants' manager listening silently and thoughtfully to the conversation. Over the past 30 years no one ballplayer ever did more things better, in my opinion, than Willie Mays.

I said that to Durocher and also said I knew he had played on the same club as Ruth with the Yankees in 1925, 1928 and 1929. Durocher's opinion on ballplayers is good and carries weight with me. I let him know that, too, but I also told him I saw enough of Ruth to convince me he was a better all-around ballplayer than Mays. Ruth was the greatest I ever saw.

Some of Ruth's records as a pitcher still stand and all you ever had to do was see him throw from the outfield to appreciate the kind of extraordinary arm he had. When it came to speed, true, Ruth was no jackrabbit, but he was no tortoise, either, and he ran the bases with the same sound instinct as Lou Brock or Maury Wills. In the field, he was everything you could possibly ask for. He always got to the ball and always caught it.

"That's absolutely true," Durocher agreed with me, "But I'd like you to think about this: Ruth could hit; he could hit with bower and he could move. But could he make the plays in the field Willie could? Never. Could he run with Willie? No, sir. And could he throw with Willie? No way. You can't tell me he was a better

"Lemme tell you a story about that," Durocher went on. "We were playing the Indians in the spring in Arizona when I was managing the Giants and Willie was new with us. You remember ed, right? Could do everything, hit, run and throw and is right re in the Hall of Fame. Anyway, he's broadcasting the Indians' mes for them this particular spring and I say to him Mays is the playing the game," continued Division flag. ballnlayer I've ever seen. We played the Indians something 23 games that spring and he says to me, wait until these 23 mes are over and I'll let you know. When the trip was over, seeker came to me and shook my hand. 'You're right,' he said. 'Bo's the best ballplayer I ever saw, too.''' to a twenty. I'd say to him 'Twenty dollars for a picture show?' And he'd say, 'But I gotta eat somethin' afterwards, too, don't I?'

I'll tell you one thing, though — for every dollar he took from me, e put a thousand back in my pocket. Durocher recalled an occasion when Willie was to appear at his first speaking engagement. Leo was going to be there also, so he called for Mays where Willie lived not far from the Polo Grounds. "He must have told everyone in the neighborhood I was coming to get him because there were about 400 people waiting when I pulled up in my car," Leo laughed. "Willie got into the back seat, pulled down the window on his side so everone could hear and said to me in a loud voice, 'All right, chauffeur, we can go now!' "When we got to the place Willie was to speak, there was one of had a question way in the back. It was hard to hear him, so I blinking an eye, and he was barely 20 years old at the time."

Men may be losing the battle of the bulge, but women - particularly those over 30 -- are winning it, says the Health Insurance Institute. A major new study by the Association of Life Insurance Medical Directors and the Society of Actuaries found that the average man today is heavier than he was 20 years ago and the average woman is lighter.

Specifically, the average man is 4 to 17 pounds heavier in his early 20s, 2 to 8 pounds heavier in his 30s and 1 to 4 pounds heavier in their 30s they are lighter by 1 to 2 pounds. In their 40s women are lighter by 3 to 7 pounds; in their 50s, by 2 to pounds; and in their 60s,

'Sheepherder' Luckily Missed Attack On Pearl Harbor

Herald Staff Writer

Ponce L. Elmore of Sanford was recently awarded a plaque by the USS Wasp CV-7 Stinger Club at the annual reunion in Charleston, S.C. The plaque, inscribed as the 1978-1979 President Emeritus Special Award, was given Elmore for his strong support and loyal membership in the club since 1974. According to the citation presented Elmore in addition to the plaque, he was also given the award for his act of volunteering to serve as editor of the "Wasp Stinger," the club's publication, even though he had had no prior editorial experience. He edited the publication in Seattle. Elmore, known affectionately by club members as "Sheepherder", is a native of Eden, Texas, near San Angelo, but grew up in Wyoming when his family moved there when he was 5-years-old. Elmore has had some interesting Navy service. He retired from the U.S. Navy with 20 years service. Not long after he enlisted, Elmore was assigned to the USS Indianapolis, a heavy cruiser, the last vessel sunk when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. Luckily, he wasn't on the Indianapolis when it was sunk; he had previously shipped out to Corpus Christi, Texas, where he was assigned to TS-12, a training squadron. From Corpus Christi, he was sent to Hitchcock, Texas where he trained at a lighter-than-air (dirigibles) operational station. The dirigibles, known as "Droopie Bags" by the men at the station (and by other, more colorful-but-not for-afamily-publication names) patroled the Gulf of Mexico. At the Droopie Bag station Elmore was leading chief for ground operations, in charge of ground lights and masts (for the dirigible). He stayed in Hitchcock for five months. "Five months there was enough for me," Elmore said. 'I found out it was not all it was cracked up to be. No pun

"Then I discovered the beauty of Africa. It was pure, stateside duty," Elmore said. In Africa, Elmore was based at Port Lyautey (now known as Port Kenitra) in Morocco, a city of 130,000 in ATLANTA (UPI) - The Southern Regional Council said today state development agencies and governors of the region - while boasting the nation's fastest economic growth - have really cultivated low-paying, anti-union industries.

Steven Suitts, executive director of the 11-state panel and author of its report on industrial development, said a major reason the region still concentrates on "low-growth industry" is that only 3 percent of the state development board members across the South are black and only 1 percent are women. He said the agencies are dominated by white businessmen intent on "business as usual."

The SRC survey was conducted in the 11 states of the old Confederacy - the Carolinas, Louisiana, Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, Tennessee, Arkansas and Texas - all of which have "right to work" laws against compulsory union membership. Suitts said development board members and business leaders surveyed in the 11 states almost unanimously ranked the "right to work" laws as the best industrial attraction Southern states have to offer.

"They thought it was the best strategy for the future development of the South," Suitts said in an interview. "You don't really expect businessmen to embrace the concept of trade unionism and welcome it, but this is an awfully bewildering strategy for them to take."

Suitts said the SRC felt more women, blacks, merchants and small businessmen should be appointed to state delvelopment boards. He said the states should "make absolutely certain that the first priority of any industrial expansion is gainful employment," rather than production of products. He said much of the industrial growth of the South in recent years has been in industries such as food processing, which he said have historically low payscales and little growth prospect "It's a situation where most of the development boards proclaim a balanced growth policy and a preference for highergrowth industries," he said. "The sad fact is that when we asked them, most of them really preferred areas that have not had high growth. They were mostly low-wage, low-growth industry." In the SRC report, Suitts wrote that "the pre-eminence of antiunion laws as a strategy and the absence of a clear choice for high-wage industries demonstrate that Southern development boards have not relinquished the region from its reliance upon relatively cheap labor as the major attraction for industry."

Is It Time For A Woman President? Yup, Says Texan

Prepared By Advertising

only Texans running for president - Betty Jean Coyle plans to gas that are in those lands but are tied up ..." move into the White House in 1980 because she says the time for a woman president is long overdue. Miss Coyle has had a number of slogans printed on bumper stickers to aid her quest for the presidency: "It's Time for a Lady in 1980," "Put Manners, Morality and Motherhood Back in America" and "America First with Mother Power." She produces children's beauty pageants, is the mother of five and is running as an independent

Miss Coyle, 45, has a quick response to questions about the chance of moving into the White House: "I didn't think Jimmy Carter's chances were worth a darn and he won." An executive secretary for 18 years, Miss Coyle said she's running for president "Because I'm very concerned about what's happening in our country." She said she would not run a feminist-oriented campaign and her response to criticism of beauty pageants is simple.

"The only people who criticize children's beauty pageants are those who are not involved in them. The only people who do the criticizing are the outsiders.

"Of course, the feminists do criticize this kind of thing but I believe that women were made to be women and men were made to be men and they should appreciate each other." Upon her election as president, she would insist upon immediate staff loyalty and would meet frequently and informally with members of Congress. "You cannot make enemies of Congress or the media," she said. "And I would try to keep from becoming paranoid — up to now, creeping paranoia seems to go along with the job." Miss Coyle described herself as "very basically conservative" and favors "deregulation of oil companies." "I'm most interested in the effects that the environmentalists have in holding back the country to a great degree," she said. "I would like to support all the Western states and Alaska where the governors are asking government to turn loose of federal

According to Beasley, the caller's message is similar each time. He said it usually begins with the man asking the woman if she is alone. Next, he tells the woman that he is on a telephone pole in her back yard and that he plans to rob her.

The women then are asked to put their jewelry and valuables in a pillow case and leave it on the porch, police said. In some instances the women are told to put a pillow case on their head so they won't see the caller when he enters the house.

man living in the area are remote, however. Police recommend that in the future women should not list their first names in the phone book if they live alone. If a woman receives a call from the prankster, she should tell him she is not alone or hang up immediately, ac-

Goldberg Appeals Ruling

"The city deserves to have at least a four-member commission working on the budget for the new year," Longwood City Commissioner Larry Goldberg said today, explaining his court fight to retain his city commission berth for at least the next 26 days. Goldberg earlier this week appealed a ruling from a Seminole-Brevard 18th judicial circuit judge ordering him to resign from the city commission or face a contempt of court citation and the possibility of a 15-day jail term.

The basis of the appeal, according to City Attorney Ned Julian Jr. is a contention that Circuit Judge Richard Muldrew erred in ordering the city commission to vacate the seat or in the alternative ordering Goldberg to resign by Aug. 7 or be in contempt of authority to declare a city commission seat vacated," Julian said today. Julian explained a mandamus action is one in which a person petitions the court to order an officeholder to perform a clearly administerial duty which the petitioner is entitled to have Muldrew's order to vote on whether the Goldberg seat would be vacated and the city commission voted not to vacate the seat. Completing his fourth year in office, Goldberg already had tendered his resignation effective Sept. 3 to seek election to the split term of the district five city commission post. The post was vacated by Stephen Barton several weeks ago after Barton moved out of the city.

The problem with Goldberg's right to remain on the city com-Sandalwood subdivision in district one to Tiberon in district five. He had been elected to the district one seat. According to both the old city charter and the new one adopted in September, 1978, a commissioner must be a resident of a given district - certain geographical area - to be elected and to remain on the city commission. Through several interpretations and several legal opinions by Julian, Goldberg retained his District One post. A lawsuit was at the airport which might hub airports by making neighfiled in circuit court by a past unsuccessful city commission candidate, Robert Daves, seeking Goldberg's ouster.

Judge Muldrew ultimately ordered Goldberg's resignation. Between rulings from Judge Muldrew, the first of which called on the city commission to consider whether Goldberg should be removed from office, Barton re-elected in December, 1978 resigned his office, leaving the district five seat open.

Goldberg's new home is in District Five. While under the new charter, the commission could have appointed Goldberg to Barton's unexpired term, extending to January, 1981, the board declined to do so, preferring to call a special election for Sept. 4. Goldberg is being challenged in that election by William Mitchell of Winsor Manor. Goldberg said today the appeal filed in the Fifth District Court of Appeals in Daytona Beach of Judge Muldrew's order, effectively stopped the order. Goldberg said filing the appeal automatically stayed the order. "The city commission is in the middle of working out the city's budget for the 1979-1960 fiscal year. When I went into office I swore to serve the city," Goldberg said today, explaining his an court fight to remain in office another 26 days. "The people deserve at least a four-member council working on 2A the budget."
