SENATE, HOUSE AGREE ON MART CONTROL BILL

Majority Points Won By 2 Houses, Final Enactment Is Seen; Labor Act Studied

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(A.P.)—Settlement at last of the Senate-House differences over the stock market control bill, and progress of the Wagner labor board measure were today's main capital developments.

Congressional branches still have to ratify a conference agreement under which an independent board will regulate exchange, a Senate victory, and the House 45 percent marginal requirement.

But inasmuch as each chamber won a majority point, final enactment is taken for granted.

Also President Roosevelt is expected to sign, despite his preference for trade commission jurisdiction.

Before returning to a protracted reciprocal tariff debate, the Senate Labor Committee endorsed the creation of a re-enforced NRA labor board to arbitrate capital-labor conflicts. Administration impetus for a quick passage is sighted.

The House took another week end holiday.

CAMPAIGN BOOK SENT VOTERS IS TERMED 'RACKET'

TAMPA, May 26.—Failure of refusal of the 1934 legislature to kill the old "campaign book" racket will cost Florida taxpayers $15,000 this year.

But before this happens Governor Shultz is expected to check up on a report that the book was printed outside of Florida.

About 250,000 copies were printed, one for each registered voter in all of the 67 counties.

Several days ago a book, part came by express to John Dikle, supervisor of registration who is required under the campaign book law to mail one to every voter whose name is on his books.

Dikle had the package delivered to a concern which addresses and sends out the matter.

"The man in charge of the concern," Dikle said yesterday, "told me the package had come from some place in Pennsylvania or New Jersey. I don't recall which at the moment but the express company record would show."

Tampans were unable last night to determine definitely from what point the shipment was received. It was said however, that the man had been reported to the Governor with a request that he look up the express bill.

But whether the booklet, its 12 pages, was published in Pennsylvania, New Jersey or Tallahassee the tax still falls on the people.

There were 20,000 copies in the package for Dikle getting them, he had a Tampa printer buy 20,000 long envelopes from the postoffice, each bearing a cent and a half.

HYDE ATTACKS ROOSEVELT'S 'DICTATORSHIP'

Hoover Aide Invites People To Join Republican Party In Fight For Liberty

KANSAS CITY, May 26.—(A.P.)—Declaring "American institutions and American liberties" for the first time are in need of defense against a national administration, Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of agriculture, in the Hoover administration, last night invited all Americans to support the Republican party principle in the defense of rights, the opportunity and the liberties of a free people.

Hyde, a former governor of Missouri, spoke at the rally opening the state's primary and fall election campaign.

"In criticizing the policies of the Roosevelt Administration, Hyde said, "do not believe that prosperity will return through the forced regimentation of industry, or the planning of industrial administrative agencies."

"A Republican is one who believes the fundamental duty of government is to create and preserve conditions of peace, order and security under which every citizen has an equal opportunity."

"That does not mean the government shall produce a back-up for the winners, nor shall the government shall regulate and control all competitors shall have the same reward."

Touting on the unemployed, Hyde said, "The name of the government should not be used to promote expensive, non-productive projects, to employ men in vain and useless tasks, or to indulge or to recklessly dissipate the resources of those people who are still able to care for themselves."

"The Administration of relief, he said, "is always a local problem. The Red Cross and local agencies of community services should be used. They should not be supposed to build upon the sympathy and the distress of the people a political machine."

"The Administration will need necessary abrogation of the good clause in public obligation, and its abandonment to private contracts. The former secretary of agriculture said, "we and an act of moral and intellectual dishonesty which is also dishonorable and unnecessary."

The Republican party, he said, believes in sound, stable, unimpaired honest money, and the experience of centuries has demonstrated that gold is the most solid and lasting basis for such a currency."

Cracker Day Fair Brings Over 1500 Persons To City; Trammell, Wilcox To Speak

A crowd which swamped in size that which visited the city last year had gathered in Sanford, shortly after noon today to participate in a series of events that composed the second annual Cracker Day celebration program, staged by the county Federation of Women's Clubs, the Elks Lodge and its Auxiliary.

The streets were well filled early in the morning, and at 10:30 a clock, when a parade of over 30 mounted cowboys and cowgirls, as well as gleeful school boys on Skelton ponies, moved through the downtown area, a estimated throng of 1500 persons lined along the line of march.

Although much of the parade was centered on the livestock athletic field at the end of the parade, where spirited ponies were raced through sets and by men practicing for the tournament riding later in the afternoon, a large audience gathered near the athletic field to hear several candidates present their cases for election in the United States Senate in 1935.

First speaker to be introduced to the audience was Charles E. Trammell of Vero Beach, candidate for the Senate. As a former member of the county Federation of Women's Clubs, the Elks Lodge and its Auxiliary, he was particularly well known to the audience.

Troops Vs. Strikers

Strikes spreading throughout the whole country, the necessity for calling out militia in an attempt to prevent property damage, and the deplorable firing upon strikers by troops, are certainly among the most regrettable and disturbing spectacles upon the horizon today. It is said that recovery from every depression has been marked by strikes and rioting, but it had seemed that it would not be too much to hope that with the efforts being made by the government to benefit the laboring man, this depression might be overcome without undue bloodshed.

The most pathetic thing about this clash between soldiers and workers is that really there are no differences between them. Such grievances as labor has, and undoubtedly there are many, must lie between the workers and their employers. If bricks are to be thrown, they should be thrown at the employers. If shots are to be fired, they should be fired by the employers. The troops have no interest in the controversy, except as they respond to the call of duty, and their training to obey orders happens to place them between the workers and the bosses.

The troops, or the policemen, in many cases come from the same class as the workers. They too are workers. Often in the very mobs upon which they are ordered to fire or from which bricks are hurled at them, are their own brothers, fathers and friends. If these troops were permitted to follow their own inclinations, they would no doubt in many cases be on the side of the strikers. Only the most rigid adherence to military discipline keeps them in line to stand between the strikers and the employers.

Such a clash as took place in Toledo yesterday affords ample evidence that the world has a long way to go before it can lay claim to being civilized. We expect Germany and Poland to settle by means of arbitration through the polite language of polished diplomats, so knotty a problem as the Polish Corridor, and yet in our own country, which we like to think of as the most advanced on earth, we must resort to blood and iron when a dispute arises between employers and employees over the recognition of a union.

It is not, however, too much to hope that leaders of both labor and industry may yet come to their senses and realize that the interests of all are dependent upon willing co-operation and combined action against a common enemy which is the depression. Differences which result in rioting and clashes with troops and police should be postponed until a more auspicious occasion, when furnishing jobs to millions of unemployed is not the principal objective of the country.

To do otherwise will only delay recovery.

An Uncertain Pen

Since typewriters came in vogue, handwriting has become almost a lost art. The hieroglyphics of the average citizen these days more nearly resemble the ramifications of hen tracks than anything we can think of. When men have no more use for pen or pencil than signing checks or political petitions, it is small wonder that their right hands have become as clumsy as their left.

But in our grandmother's day, we are told, folks could really write. In those times all a person had to study in the public schools was reading, "riting, and 'rithmetic, so if he could not learn to write, it must have been his own fault. And in those days, all letters, all books, short stories, essays, and manuscripts of all kinds were written in long hand. People had plenty of opportunities to perfect their penmanship.

And yet we read that one of the most notable writers of his time couldn't write at all. At least he couldn't write so that anybody could read it, except his own type setters. It is said that he could not even read his own handwriting, and the only reason his type setters could read it was because they interpreted it to suit themselves. We refer, of course, to Horace Greeley once famed editor of the New York Tribune.

The story is told of Greeley, who was always in great demand as a speaker, that he once received an invitation from a little town in Illinois to go there and deliver a lecture in the town auditorium. He hastily scribbled an answer which his type-setters would have read as follows:

"I am overworked, and growing old. I shall be sixty next Feb. 2. On the whole, it seems I must decline to lecture henceforth, except in this immediate vicinity, if I do not, I cannot promise to visit Illinois on that errand, certainly not now. Yours truly, Horace Greeley."

The answer which Mr. Greeley received read in this way:

"Your acceptance to lecture before our association next winter came to hand this morning. Your penmanship not being the plainest, it took some time to translate it; but you succeeded and would say your time, Feb. 3, and the terms, $50 are entirely satisfactory. As you suggest, we may be able to get you other engagements. Respectfully, M. B. Castle."

DARROW'S NRA REPORT
BY MARK SULLIVAN

The history of it all began with Senator Borah and Nye. They emitted powerful speeches complaining that N. R. A. was bearing down hard on the little business man. For that kind of criticism Johnson has a unique technique. To all complainers Johnson says in effect, "Come on, don't hore in the sweat and sweat with me to make this thing work."

In answer to invitations, Senators Borah and Nye visited Johnson. General Johnson had President Roosevelt send for them also. To the Senatorial champions of the little fellow, General Johnson and President Roosevelt said, in effect, that the little fellow would be taken care of, but that it must be done within the framework of N. R. A. that N. R. A. must be preserved. Senators Borah and Nye were actually invited to sit in with N. R. A. themselves. They replied that their Senatorial duties would not leave them time. Then General Johnson asked Senator Nye to name somebody to head a commission to consider the hardships of the small business man. Senator Nye named Clarence Darrow.

If General Johnson had thought a moment he would hardly have accepted Mr. Darrow. What General Johnson had in mind was somebody who would sit permanently at the head of a committee as a subordinate and comparatively inconspicuous part of N. R. A. Mr. Darrow decided it was not the kind of a man to subordinate or to be inconspicuous, or to take on prolonged routine duties. In his day, attorney Darrow was about as ruthless an individual as ever practiced law. He was spectacular and very successful. His line was to play the role of lone wolf, rather than the conservative and conventionally minded lawyer. Aside from his practice of law, Mr. Darrow carried, as a kind of intellectual diversion, socialism and miscellaneous unconventional ideas. Always, and increasingly in recent years, he has rather liked publicity.

When Mr. Darrow took the appointment from General Johnson he "teamed up" with another elderly and life-long Socialist, Charles E. Russell. Mr. Russell is seventy-three and Mr. Darrow is seventy-seven. Mr. Russell's official connection with Mr. Darrow's commission, but Washington Socialist says the two Socialists worked together in the happiest time of their lives. They produced, as everybody knows, an explosive report which amounts to a plea for socialism. When the report was finished, those of us who watch things in the White House felt that President Roosevelt and General Johnson would be able to make the report their own. They were to receive it if Mr. Darrow had had the report first for the tactics of publicity he would have given out the report to the public the day he finished it. That would have been ruthless individualism. Mr. Darrow, however, played this part of the game according to the rules and gave the report to the President without making it public.

ed States Senate was held in her remarks. Declaring that "I feel confident that each of my opponents has succeeded in convincing the people of Florida that the other is not the proper one to represent the state in the Senate," Mrs. Wells paid particular attention to the candidacy of Park Trammell during the remainder of her talk.

As she concluded with a pledge that she had the state's interest at heart, Mrs. Wells said that "A few days ago, the Senator, in one of his campaign speeches, made the statement that he had 'stood like the rock of Gibraltar' against the money interests of Wall Street. Presbyterians Pick Georgian As Moderator

The Second Presbyterian Church of Little Rock, Ark., were received and assigned to a committee. Some of the half dozen overtures asked that the Presbytery of Arkansas be directed to reopen the case.

What is the answer to it all? Of course, N. R. A. bears down hard on the small business man. In the nature of things it was pretty certain to N. R. A. originally in spirit mainly by big business institutions. The head of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Henry I. Harriman, was about the earliest formal proposer of it. Since about April of last year, extremely needed. They knew they had a much larger capacity for making goods than the capacity to consume the goods. They feared cutthroat competition. They wanted the privilege of agreeing among themselves not to cut prices and otherwise to practice fair competition.

When the N. R. A. bill got into Congress, Senator Borah, fearing that N. R. A. meant suspension of the anti-trust laws, proposed and got into the law a phrase reading that N. R. A. "shall not permit monopolies." This phrase, however, really doesn't amount to much. There are two separate types of violation of the anti-trust laws. One is monopoly. Senator Borah's type is what the law calls "agreements in restraint of trade." There is nothing in the N. R. A. statute to prevent that. The N. R. A. codes are precisely and essentially agreements in restraint of trade. Since most of the codes are written by the larger units of an industry, it follows that the little units are not given first consideration.

In one concrete way N. R. A. is extremely burdensome on the small business man. N. R. A., when it got under way, prescribed minimum wages and maximum hours. This made it necessary for practically every business to take on more employees. A large corporation could take care of this provision of N. R. A. without adding more than 10 or 20 percent of its total labor cost. With the small business man it was a different story. An employer having two workmen, faced with the requirements of N. R. A., was obliged to take on one more. That meant a 50 percent increase in his labor costs. To many, small business men it was deadly.

In all this commotion there is one little important angle. The "mean trust," the intellectual and the Frankfurter lawyer, are glad to see N. R. A. "in hand." They have always opposed General Johnson. The reason is that, speaking loosely, N. R. A. works in the general direction of Fascism, the corporate state. The intellectuals in charge of A. A. and most of the other innovations, on the other hand, work in the general direction of collectivism of the Russian type. If N. R. A. breaks up, the ever law and resourceful intellectuals will try to absorb the area of industry now covered by N. R. A. and will try to turn in their favored direction of collectivism.

every day in the year, and it would provide employment for hundreds of persons, depending upon the size of the structure.

Mr. Dorner's report also included much data gathered from various local shipping organizations, data which revealed that the quantity of produce shipped from Sanford this season, by truck alone, was "amazing" as Mr. Dorner stated, and that on many occasions, truckers' demands could not be supplied.

The first speaker was L. M. Rhodes, state marketing commissioner who was asked to speak on the importance and value of a wholesale distributing market. After pointing out the tremendous number of persons engaged in the production and marketing of food products in the United States, Mr. Rhodes also said that "Since we are living in an age of unbelievable progress, we must ever bear in mind that we've got to step lively to meet the demands and requirements of the age."

In a reference to the "Unusually fine produce which comes into this country from foreign nations, packed even better than we pack it," Mr. Mayo warned growers that "We've got to meet this competition or go out of business."

Declaring that "Stabilization of the production and distribution of food is one of the nation's biggest problems," Mr. Rhodes outlined what he termed as the "Tremendous possibilities that lie at your very door."

"Within a radius of 60 miles of Sanford," he said, "58,000 freight car loads of citrus and other perishable products were shipped to the markets of the world in one year, not counting that shipped by truck or boat. Conservatively speaking, that means about 20,000,000 crates of perishables, and at an average of $2 per crate, that means you've got $40,000,000 worth of produce right at your door."

"Fellow growers," he said, "This immense sum of money and this tremendous amount of produce ought to be brought to Sanford and distributed from a great central market such as you propose, and if you folks will help us a little, we'll try and get some federal aid."

"I don't see where there is such a place in the state," he said, "and I say this without in any way casting reflection upon any other section for I'm really trying to be the state marketing commissioner in every section, but really, I don't see that there is a city in all Florida that is more accessible to all of the producing areas than is Sanford."

Mr. Rhodes stressed the point that when the market does come, "You folks will have to improve your own and quality a great deal, and you'll have to be taught to grade products better than in the past. The markets of this country are growing more strict in their demands as to pack and quality, and we've got to keep step and give it to them. To do this will require co-operation, unity of action, and above all, business intelligence."

In stating that truck traffic that passes this section and crosses further south must be stopped here, Mr. Rhodes said that "You can criticize all you want to, and you may not like it, but the trucks are here to stay, and you might as well get out and get their business."

He concluded with the statement that as a member of the State Marketing Board along with Governor Shotts and Commissioner Mayo, "I am ready to do anything in my power to help you folks get your market. We need to get our heads together and work out this thing, and I say to you all that if you're a good citizen and have the interests of this state at heart, you'll put your shoulder to the wheel and we'll see what we can get out of this project."

Other speakers were Mr. Hald and Mr. Risher, who heartily endorsed the project, the latter pleading for the poultry and egg producers, "Who would like to have you build a small cold-storage space for eggs and poultry in your market."

The above is a scenic view of the Seventh Day Adventist camp meeting now being held on the campus of the Forest Lake Academy, on the Forest City highway, three miles east of Apopka. Over one thousand are in attendance, which increases to fifteen hundred or more over the week end. National speakers from Washington, D. C., Chattanooga, Tenn., and other parts of the country are in attendance. Hundreds of small family tents have been erected, surrounding the large tabernacle shown in the background, as a temporary home for the many campers who are attending from every section of the state. The meeting continues for nine days, ending next Sunday morning with the 11:00 A. M. service. Fifteen services a day are held. A few weeks later, July 4-8, there is to be held on the same grounds a "Youth's Congress" which will draw two thousand or more Seventh Day Adventist young people from all over the South.

The printing, paper, mailing and other costs were estimated around $16,000. To offset this, the state got only $950 from 10 candidates, who put their pictures and a lot of stuff about themselves in the 10 pages. One candidate for Congress paid $50, the legal rate. The others paid $100 each. Two of those who paid—Chief Justice Davis and Associate Justice Brown of the supreme court—threw their money to the birds, because they had no opposition and didn't have to go into the primary. The others, in the book and whose pictures were scattered in 20,000 homes in the county, were Pepper, Sikes and Trammell, for the Senate; Calhoun for Congress in the first district; and Wells, Caro, Carter and Good for railroad commissioner.

Frank Buck's "Wild Cargo" to be shown at the Milane on Wednesday, May 30th, is an able successor to "Bring 'Em Back Alive". The new picture deals definitely with the filling of orders for circus, zoo and carnival. The scenes show how Buck makes a business of trapping elephants, panthers, tigers, rhinoceros, flying foxes and monkeys for his "Wild Cargo".

WILCOX DENIES USING BILLS AS VOTE GETTERS

Solon Says West Palm Beach Attorney Did Not Need Passage Of Acts To Be Elected

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(A.P.)—Having heard that the political fortunes in the Fourth Florida district have hinged on the Everglades park bill, many House members were wondering yesterday how they will fare in the impending elections if their local measures fail to pass.

In debate on the Everglades House Thursday, Representative Treadway (R., Mass.), recalled that "it was said" two years ago that Ruth Bryan Owen was defeated by Mark Wilcox because she was unable to obtain approval for this legislation.

"Let me say to the gentleman from Florida (Wilcox) for whom I have the highest admiration," said the Massachusetts member, "that of course, we realize this bill is an extremely important thing in his primary campaign."

Wilcox, who left his campaign in Florida and flew here to be present during consideration of the bill, forthwith denied the measure, had any bearing on his political fortunes.

Treadway countered by reading a telegram he said he received from Mrs. Owen, dated June 7, 1932, as follows:

"It would greatly assist me if you would send me a telegram whether or not you feel that Everglades park bill has been loyally and effectively handled by me. The suggestion that the filibustering against the bill in the House had been due to the fact that the members disliked me personally and did not wish to pass any bill bearing my name will appreciate your assistance in setting this straight."

The Republican said he replied to his Democratic colleague, then in the midst of her campaign with Wilcox, thus:

"While I have, personally opposed this bill, I am sure you will appreciate my opinion."

REVISION OF NRA RULING AUTHORIZED

Service Groups Will Be Permitted To Set Up Local Codes Of Fair Practices

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(A.P.)—By executive order, President Roosevelt has modified an NRA provision to allow some of the so-called service industries to adopt local codes of fair practice.

The desirability for this, he said, in a statement accompanying the executive order, was shown in a trial period which disclosed that while most industries could operate under national codes, there are some in which a greater degree of uniformity local self-government is desirable.

The major point involved in the order is the modification of the local codes which are to be adopted by an 85 percent vote of the industry. All such local agreements would be subject to approval by the Administration.

In the National Recovery Administration, Hugh S. Johnson, director, said that the task of deciding which of the service industries they in which such concerns as hotels, restaurants, barber shops, laundries, and cleaning and dyeing plants should be allowed to set up local codes of fair trade practices.

Although the local groups may determine their own codes of fair trade practice, they will remain bound by blue-ribbon regulations in such matters as excessive bargaining, child labor, and hours and wages are concerned.

"Most industries," Roosevelt said, "have a national community of economic interest even though the operation of some of them is local. There are others which, notwithstanding their local nature, have national trade associations, and it is not unusual for them to be nationally integrated themselves."

A trial period of some months will show that while most industries, after organization for the first time, and a little experience with them, some uniform national rules, there are others to whom a greater degree of autonomous local self-government is desirable. Among these are some, but not all, of the so-called service industries.

"Some industries engaged in the same business, rather than those which are geographically separated, would give up the benefits of a national code and the stability of minimum wages and hours."

ROSSI, CODOS LAND SAFELY IN NEW YORK

Minor Trouble Forces Them To Alight At Floyd Bennett Field After 38 Hour Jump

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 28.—(A.P.)—The French flyers, Rossi and Codos, brought their trans-Atlantic plane, "Joseph Le Brix" to a safe landing at Floyd Bennett Field at 1:38 o'clock, Eastern Standard Time today.

Their elapsed time since taking off from Le Bourget Field at Paris was thirty eight and one-half hours.

They dumped gasoline in order to make a landing which messages had said was to their advantage.

Interceptors Paul Codos and Maurice Rossi, near North American last night on their audacious attempt to fly from Paris to California, but they were headed into one of the most dangerous parts of their 6,000 mile voyage—the fog banks of Newfoundland.

Frequent messages, humming from the wireless set on their plane, the Joseph Le Brix, told of a successful flight over the North Atlantic in excellent weather.

DURABLE GOODS GROUP RELEASES RECOVERY RULES

Re-Establishment Of Investors' Confidence Held Vital

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(A.P.)—The durable goods industries committee, created to answer the Administration's question of "how are we going to activate the capital goods industry," last night held that "the establishment of confidence" on the part of investors was most important.

Coupled with this were the suggestions that replacement of worn out equipment and the financing of new ventures, currently the subject of study by the government, "will be undertaken only in anticipation of profit" and that "private enterprise must replace the government expenditure."

The report was made to President Roosevelt by a committee of 16, headed by George H. Huston, president of the Baldwin Locomotive works.

The committee's program of "fundamental conditions for recovery" was summarized as follows:

A free flow of private capital into private business.

A sound real estate mortgage market.

Industrial relations on a basis which will assure cooperation instead of strife.

A balanced price parity between agricultural commodities and manufactured goods.

The committee was elected at the code authority assembly in March. Its report said the "re-establishment of confidence" could be accompanied by:

"Assurance to private enterprise."
