English Purtians of the seventeenthcentury guarded against looking upon the rosy side of life

Because Christmas is really a survival of the Celts' Yule, and is not the actual anniversary of the birth of Christ, they refused to countenance Christmas festivities Not only did they refuse to recognize the day, but they made laws to that effect.

The parliament of 1611 passed an act ordering all law abiding citizens. to observe December 25 as a solemn fast, to be spent in silent atonement for previous Christmas days that had passed in riotous living and merrymaking.

Naturally the community did not shure in these hard and fast miles, and many a turkey was surreptitiously killed, and many a plum pudding cule quietly bolled. The Christmas Spirit

建制的公共在1

Christmas! One dayspring of checrfulness and freedom from cankering care and selfishness and envy in a year of toil and strife and consuming unrest. Christmas, mar relous boon to humanity, springing legitimately from the br ef, eventful life of the carpenter's Son, is a fixed institution. The twentieth century could not spare. it if it would ; wouldn't if it could. The Christmas spirit is everywhere pervading the world for this brief, blessed day. Leveling ranks, stlencing selfishness, dwarfing care, ignoring toil, forgetting creed and cult and birth and environment, it makes peace and good will not only possible, but inevitable. The gifts it bears are the spontaneous fruit of the omnipotent, all pervading spirit of Christmas-a wellspring in the desert, a sunbeam on a wintry day, a single exception to a steadfast rule. The spirit of Christman never cloys. We cannot have too much of it . Morning, noon and night, for breakfast, dinner and supper, the first thing on awaking and the last thing on going to sleep, every hour of every day of every week of every month of the year we want the spirit of Christmas, for it is the spirit of ministration, of giving, of service, of doing for others.

"Not to be ministered unto, but to minister"-this motto lived out on every day of the year would dispel the sorrows of the world, smooth out its wrinkles, abolish its poverty, soothe its pain, comfort its heartaches, heal its diseases, make it a heaven. This is what is typified by every Christmas tree and every gift it bears, by every bulging little stocking that hangs in the chimney corner, by every wreath of holly, by every greeting and merry wish.

A Christmas Carol. "What means this glory round our feet," The mast mused, "more bright than morn :

And angels chanted dear and sweet, "Today the Prince of Peace is born!"

"What means that star." the shepherds sald. "That brightens through the rocky gten 7 And angels, answering overhead,

Sang, "Peace on earth, good will to men!"

Tis eighteen hundred years and more Since those sweet oracles were dumb. We walt for him like them of yore. Alas, he seems so slow to come!

But it was said in words of gold No time or sorrow e'er shall dim That little children might be bold In perfect trust to come to him.

All round about our feet shall shine A light like that the wise men'saw If we our loving wills incline To that sweet life which is the law.

So shall we learn to understand Simple faith of shepherds there And, clasping kindly hand in hand. "Feace on earth, good will to Sing. men

And they who do their souls no wrong. But keep at eve the faith of moth, Shall daily hear the angel song. "Today the Frince of Feace is born" James Russell Lowell

HAVE been looking on this even ing at a merry company of children assembled around that pretty German toy, a Christmas free. Being now at home again and alone. the only person in the house awake, my thoughts are drawn back by a fiscination which I do not care to resist to my own childhood. Straight in the middle of the room, cramped in the freedom of its growth by no encircling walls or soon reached ceiling, a shad owy tree arises and looking up into the dreamy brightness of its top for Labsense in this together an and prop.

What images do I assochte with the Christmas music as I see them set forth on the Christmas tree! The thing is to have the Christmas spirit so strong within us that it soars above unhappy environments.

As Dr van Dyke has put it in his 'Christmas Prayer For Lonely Folks.' Lord God of the solitary

Look upon me in my toneliness Since I may not keep this Christmas in the home

Send it into my heart. the dreaded day will be passed, not in sadness and loneliness, but with inward comfort to sweeten it into for getfulness of a happler Christmas long since gone

A CHRISTMAS PRAYER.

WHERE wee feet patter down the

Of Want- and Wretchedness and

Where wee eyes shine and wee lips

Upon a dream they may not know

Or where a mother marks their plea

And turns her misty eyes away

From where they cluster at her

God hear their prayer through snow

Or wailing wind and driven sleet.

To find their dream of Christman

Shall look in vain through blur

And find beneath afes shadowed

The hurt-the beartache of the God, answer them who still hold

Or clasp a dream so brave and

To those whose message wings to

That Christmas sends no phantom

To those who whisper through the

Of one to come at morning a gleam

Give them to know their day of

Where love is prone or vanished

Where life's gray shadows haunt

Give them to know the costern star

Which guides them to the ball

Give them for this their day, al

Refreshing Drink.

A teaspoonful of black currant felly dissolved in a glass of cold water makes a delicious and refreshing drink for a patient in a sick room, or on hot days to serve as a family beverage in place of tea or coffee. Black currant jelly dissolved in hot water is very soothing to a sore throat.

Evils of War.

War is one of the greatest plagues that can afflict humanity; it destroys religion; it destroys states; it destroys families -- Luther.

Christmas Homecoming

One of the great features of Christmas is the home meeting. Now many bundreds of thousands who have been separated throughout the year will now be gathered together once more under the old home roof! It is well that it should be so. It warms the heart to read of the trains to the north and the trains to the south, cast and west being filled with people going home for their Christmas bolidays. "I am told," said Gladstone once. "that the strain of our commercial life has loosened even the bonds that unite the family; that in the struggle for existence the parents forget the child and the child forgets the parents. Well, I read the other day that some hundreds of thousands of people were leaving London to spend their Christmas holidays at home. That is a pleasing and practical refutation of much of this pessimism." It is. If the parents did not think of the children they would not have them home, and if the boys and girls did not think of the parents they would not go home, Blood is a great deal thicker than water, and nothing will alter it. Go home for Christmas!

On September .11 the dread news . that the enemy's fleet was off the harbor was made known. This fleet consisted of 50 ships, an extremely powerful armada for that day, carrying 9,000 veteran troops.

Troops were landed from the fleet on Monday, September 12, and on that day began the first fight, known as "the battle of North Point." For the number of men engaged, it was an exceedingly sanguinary affair. It began by an untoward happening to the British and ended with the Americana in possession of the field, after a hot fight of doubtful issue.

The summer of 1814 was not a bright one for the arms of the United States. On land it was marked by constant defeat, culminating in the burning of Washington August 23. But the end of that summer, nevertheless, witnessed a glorious event, celebrated in douthless verse wrung from the heart of a burning patriot, who had witnessed the night bombardment of the fortress which protected his native shores and knew not until morning whether the brave little fort had successfully withstood the assault or not.

There was no telegraph in 1814, few and sparse means of communication. but after the skirmish of August 23, sometimes called "battle" of Bladensburg, a little Maryland town, six miles from Washington, where about three thousand raw militia, mostly farmers, were quickly routed by the trained veterans of Gen. Robert Rosm the British commander, the air about Baltimore was alive with news and runiors of disaster.

The British fleet, which had left Bermuda a month before, was sailing along the Chesapeake bay and its tributary rivers, burning and destroying; Washington was in ruins, owing to a disgraceful act of vandalism perpetrated mainly through the agency of Admiral George Cockburn, who afterwards conveyed Napolcon to St. Helena.

Baltimore - second irretrievably doomed. In its defense it could only marshal a "home guard," principally consisting of boys and old man of Haltimore, a few country companies of militia, hastily recruited from surrounding Maryland towns and from York and Hanover in Pohnsylvania, and about one thousand real soldiers spared to the defense of the city, in to this end sent a storming party of hulks was sunk across the river. This acted as an effectual barrier and the bombardment of the ships was from off the mouth of the stream.

The British ships had better offensive weapons than the fort. Their cannon carried farther and sent a ver-Itable rain of bombs and shot into the fort all that day and the following night.

Major Armisicad at first replied sturdily, but he found that his canuon had not sufficient range to reach the enemy's ships. Wisely, then, he held his fire and awalted events. As a hostile vessel essayed to creep closer to the fort the defenders' fire drove it off. One ship was quickly disabled and was towed out of range by smaller boats. The fort, although inflicting little damage, was sturdily holding its own. Admiral Cockburn, in charge of the furing the terrible night of Sentem ber 13, in all the horrors of the bombardment, Key and Doctor Heanes paced the deck of the Minden; fearful at every full in the firing that the brave little fort had fallen. The fact that the fort's guns could not carry to the hostile ships and therefore early ceased firing until the chips came within range, lent apparent corroboration to their fears Morning broke, a fair bright September morning, and in the soft have the blushing sun revealed the great flag which had been especially made for the fortress by Mrs. Mary Pattersgill of Baltimore in her home at 60 Albemarle street. 'In a house which still stands. Key's joy was boundless. The words of the first stanza of his glorious song of freedom formed themselves in his mind. He and his companions were released a few hours afterward, and in a small boat, on their way to Baltimore, the song-was written.

It was found to fit perfectly to a then popular English tune. "Anacreop in Heaven." The poem was finished. that night-September 14, 1814. The: next morning it was printed, and that evening, September 15, it was sung with rejoicing in all the taverus and public places in Baltimore, for by that time the British fleet had salled away and the city was safe.

We have one of the finest lines of Christmas goeds ever shown by any store in this whole community. We bought them early, before prices advanced, in anticipation of a heavy holiday trade. We have a tremendous stock-entirely too much-and simply MUST unload before the holidays are over. There is no "if" about it, they MUST BE SOLD, and they ARE GOING TO BE SOLD. We are just simply reducing the price on all Christmas goods so that EVERYBODY WILL WANT THEM.

Don't wait, thinking that you can run in at any time and get them. Others are going to rush right in and commence picking them over-making their selections-hunting out the best-taking prompt advantage of our slashing cut in prices.

Toys Will be Sold at Cost

We want you to come in and look them over, and see what a great variety we have, and how very reasonable they are in price, and what delightful presents they will make for just a little money, and often for only a few cents. It is doubtful if you ever have another opportunity to make a dollar go as far and buy as much.

Never has there been a time when the Christmas event stood under so impressive illumination as it does in this year's Christmastide. The birth of Jesus is this year a larger fact for the thought and life of the world than in any year till now. The phenomenon of the life of Jesus and his power in the world forms the summit question in the thinking of our times. Though there are some mournful defections from the divine truth of the manger event, the aggregate state of Christendom exhibits the ever enduring power of the grace that then and there came to seek and save the lost. No period has ever seen such wide circulation and study of the Boly Scriptures as the present, although recent events have demonstrated the still titsting need of closer adherence to the divine principle of "peace on earth, good will to men." The evangel of a Saviour come thrills more hearts this Christmas than in any other year of this dispensation.

A YULETIDE THOUGHT.

THE following story of the origin of the Yule log in Virginia is told in the Pictorial Review by La Salle Corbell Pickett in an higher en bigger en bigger, de crackles article dealing with Christmas in the south fu wartime:

One time an old black man was sitting in his little cabin on a mountain ade on Christman eve listening to the cold wind howl over a well of snow and wishing that he had a fire to warm him when he heard the cry of a little child away out in the cold. The old man hobbled to the door and looked out across the snow, and the wind rame rushing in and made him shiver that his "onliest two teef" chattered with cold Again the cry came across the snow, and he wished with all his power of longing that he could go out and ford the main Numate little one. for the plaintive cry of a little child always goes straight to the heart. A thirt time the cry came, and a miraculous power seemed to fill the old man's velas. His muscles became tense and strong, and he stepped from the threshold into the snow, the crutch falling back in the cabin.

In an instant he was walking over the expanse of frozen snow with an activity he had not possessed since he used to "go to camp meetin" By and by he came to a little child caught in a mow bank. He lifted the child, and as its little form touched him a new strength came into him, and the small barden seemed to give him wings to speed back to the little cabin. He put the child on the bed, drew the ragged guilt around it and looked about to see if there might be a piece of furniture of which he could make a fire to warm ble small guest.

'At that instant he saw a great log coll across the threshold and into the freplace. The little child was looking a it with eyes like stars, and they gent gleams of light that kindled the log with the most brilllant fire the old man had ever seen, and the dingy little room was filled with radiance and warinth that brought a glow to the soul as well as to the body and seemed to flood the world with light.

As the light wrapped the child in a shining glory he laughed a laugh that was like a song of the heart and float ed up and away. The old man turned his eyes to where the fire burned and watched the flames leap in opalescent tints over the log forming the shape of a cruss in fire.

At this point in the narrative Brief Simon usually became greatly excit ed, and his eyes kindled as he went on in his rich dintect:

Peace on Earth.

Peace? Yes; that is after all and above all our Christmas gift. To make joy for others, to behold their joy, to rejuice in it, is the joy unspeakable. And why? Because It is godlike and divine. Even so the Father lays lu our joy, and the Son perfects his joy In completing ours. Peace is the profuct of passing out of the human into the divine element and activity. It is not a mere figure of speech that Christ, the anniversary of whose birth we celebrate, is to our moral and spiritual what the sun is to our planetary system The dependence in both cases is allke. If the body has appetites the soul has ambition, and both must be antisted or human equilibrium is lost. We must powers the two, linked together in some mysterious way, or we shall fly to social and moral chaos. DECEMBER 15, 1914

THE major felt a vague sense of personal griuvance. It was Christmas morning. Everything was most agreeable at the hotel. As he had distributed his customary gold pieces to the "bells," the telephone girls, the check-room boys, his walter bermald on his floor; he felt oddly disturbed.

"Carter, my boy," he told the tall, gray-haired image in the mirror. "You're getting sentimental. You're thoroughly disappointed because there isn't a soul in the world who can call out a 'Merry Christmas' to you, and mean it from the bottom of his heart. You're like a boy with nothing in his stocking. Her ashamed of you, . sir; I am indeed."

Yet that didn't help matters. Ho wandered ground the deserted hotel corridors in the morning feeling utterly lost. Nearly every one seemed to be going out to dinner to some place where he was urgently desired. Four times he strolled over to the desk and looked easually up at bls box, but there were no mail and no presents for Maj. Robert Lee Carter. The last time he had really decided to give up and ring up some business associate to take dinner with him at the hotel. But he saw a letter in his box, and the clork handed him a curiously shaped parcel, rather bulky and oval. He took it up to his own rooms, and opened it with a funny little thrill of anticipation.

By George, he was wrong. There was somebody, he didn't know who it was, but there was somebody who had comembered him. The last wrapper fell off, and he stood staring down at a little homeniade willow basket, filled with mistletoe. A card on top read, "Love and Merry Christmas from Pam,"

Pam? He remembered no Pam. He opened the letter for enlightenment, and as he read, his heavy gray eyebrows drew closer together, and every now and then he ejaculated. "God bless my heart and soul!"

"You won't remember me at all, but I'm Pamela Grayson, and my mother

Eh, but she was bonnie; thought the major approvingly; very much like her grandmother in her girlhood, soft brown Bands of hair around her small head, and wistful, childlish gray eyes. It look him about ten minutes to coar her into a "real" dress, as she said, and down into the waiting taxi.

And how fast she talked. There were years to catch up, she told him, and as long as there was only the two of them left in New York to uphold the pride of the Cartera-

And he, wanted to know if I had more Virginia scenes. So J sent down the oak grove at sundown along in November, with a blg orange harvest moon stealing over the edge of the hill, and he bought that. And now I'm painting the old flagged walk under the grape arbor, with it all sunshiny, and Mammy Martha Ann comtag-slong from the outdoor kitchen with a big covered platter of fried chicken, and he's going to take that."

> The major leaned back his head, laughing and shaking with pure enjoyment. Up on the Hudson, at Hastings, stood Ralph Carter's bachelor home, and he had made it almost a replica of the old one in Virginia.

These are the sort of presente which will restore the old time thrills that have been well nigh lost in the loveless gift giving of recent ybars.

Teach your children that Christmas time is a giving time as well as a getting time. Teach them particularly to think of children whose nests d are less downy than their own. There are so many such. And there is no more tragic thing in a child's life than to be forgotten on Christmas day. Is there any picture on earth so appealing as to see a child at a shop window with only a windowpane between his pinched nose and pointing finger and a high piled. world of dolls and drums and skates and picture books? Can you imagine a keener pang, a more sorrowful thing, than the unanswered prayer of a little child at Christmastide 2  was your sister's daughter, so I'm your grandniede, see? Mother died about a year ago, just after we came north, and I have been here along ever since. I didn't even know you were alive until cousin Florrie, of Carter's Landing, down home, wrote and told me to share this mistletoe with you, for she had gathered it in the old oak grove where you used to go when you were a little boy. Here's wishing you a merry, merry Christmas, and I wish I knew you, because it does certainly get fearfully lonesome here in New York holiday time when you haven't any one of your yery own."

The telephone bell rang sharply just as the major was about to say "God bless my heart and soul" once again. But he lifted the receiver, and smiled at the voice that answered his hail.

"Dolighted, Ralph, delighted, my boy, but you see, I am going to have a young lady guest here to dinner with me, my grandniece, sir, from Virginia. Now, instead of my joining you in your bachelor apartments, supposing you join us, and try and compensate to her for having a surely old chap for a dinner partner. Name's Miss Pamela Grayson. Come right down."

Then he smiled, and kept on smiling in the oddest, happlest way. And he leaned back in his deep leather ohair, and lit a cigar, and watched the smoke rings form overhead, and amiled up at them. He had four sisters. Pam's grandmother had been the youngest. And now somehow, they were all gone, as he thought, "the way of the roses," and he was alone. He had rather lost track of all the nieces and nephews and grandnieces and grandnephews. Sentiment does not thrive in the New York atmosphere, yet as he looked at the letter, he felt an odd glow of pride, and he held the little basket of mistletoe out at arm's length, smiling retrospectively. Many a time he had gone up to the old oak grove to gather it for his mother to decorate the great hall at Christmas. And now this little Pam-

The major rose suddenly with quick intention. Five minutes later he was on his way up to the address in the letter. Upstairs two flights he climbed, and tapped at the low top door with its modest card:

"Pamela Grayson."

She stood at the easel with her back to him, a big blue apron on, and she was singing. "Oh, holy town of Bethlehem, How still we see thee lie. Above thy deep and dreamless sleep The silent stars go by."

The major stood at attention, but when she turned and caught sight of him, she gave a little cry of joy.

The First Christmas Card.

The honor of the Christmas card is ascribed frequently to the late W. C. T. Dobson, an English painter. In December, 1814, a date carller, than that given to any other claim, he was anxious to send some more novel Christmas greeting than that of a letter to a distant friend, and the idea occurred to him to make a little sketch symbolizing the spirit of the season. The sketch depicted in its center a his gaze. The major's voice hailed family party -cathered around the Christmas dinner table raising glasses to the health of abseut friends. Uddemeath were the words "A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to Ralph stooped, and pressed a kiss gon." while on each side was a smallor sketch representing an act of benevolence. Mr. Dobson's card so' pleased its recipient that the following year he designed another card, of which he sent lithographed copies to a large circle of friends. Other artists followed his example, and the circle sending out Christmas cards grew wider and wider until an enterprising printer naw there was money in the business, and within a few years from its birth the Christmas card was to be seen in hundreds of shop windows.

"Give Him Something Useful"

At this time of year the stores are crowded with "things to sell." Thousands of ingenious minds have schemed for months to provide countless articles---most of them really valueless,---to "get the money." Millions of people are buying gifts,---it's always hard to know what to give,--- and the result is that enormous sums are wasted, every Christmas, on worthless "presents," which bring the same in return. Why not make up your mind to give only useful things this year. You'll find them here in great variety,---in fact, you'll find only useful gifts here, sensible, desirable things that every man and boy wants, and will be pleased to get. For instance,

Christmas Gratitude.

Do we think enough about saying "Thank you" at Christmast We hurry and rush through the busy days before Christmas, and then when Christmas actually comes we put off the mood of giving and sit down intent upon the culmination of our effort, which is reached when we receive. We take what comes-sometimes eagerly, sometimes with a disappointed shrug -but we take what comes, do we not, and are we always prompt to give our thanks? A certain benevolent lady said last year, "I gave thirty-eight presents this Christmas and received only nine letters of thanks." This seemed dreadful beyond words. "And what of the others ?" I hastened to ask. "Some of them thanked me when we next met," she said carelessly, "and some of them never thanked me at all. You know," she added after a pause, "one of the hardest things to do is to give thanks graciously. Some people can never do it. It is the distinct mark of high breeding. I don't suppose any one but a king or a princess has really the perfect art of taying 'Thank you " The mark of mont breading to be prompt and gracious in giving thanks. Even if the gift is a pincushion and you already have ninety-nine others, say "Thank you" sweetly. affectionately and in the spirit of Christmas. Do not let twenty-four hours pass by without taking sufficient time to write an appreciative, affectionate little note to every one who has remembered you at Christmas time. Though this may be looked upon as a duty to others, it is far more than that; it is a duty to yourself, a very real duty, for to be discourteous is to be selfish, and to be selfish is to be outside of many of life's keenest loys. As a matter of self training, if for no other reason. say "Thank you" as quickly and attractively and sincerely as you can.

"Well, what are we going to do about the Snivelys" growled Mr. Smith.

"Jack," said she in a moment, "l've had an inspiration. Why couldn't we send the Snivelys the book that Cousin Lucy sent us? Neither of them will ever know it."

"It's your handkerchiefs. How many dozen have you?"

"Seven or eight. You see, I have seven of the dearest grandchildren in the world. It's queer, isn't it, that your nose should be so especially honored when you grow old?"

But Stella's gray eyes forgot to laugh back at grandmother's. Something had disconcerted her. She put the handkerchiefs back, made some trivial excuse, and ran up to her own room, where her sister and cousins : were holding a Christmag coliciave. "I wonder," the burst out, "that grandmother can endure Christmas at all!"

"What under the sun do you mean?" Corinne and Isabella erclaimed together.

"Coringe, what did you give grandmother for Christmas last year?" "A box of handkerchlefs. Why?" "And you, leabella?" or An embroldered handkerchief with little weeny initials." "Mollie?"

demanded Mrs. Smith.

"About ten minutes."

"Get your things on. Be quick, and maybe you can reach the Snivelys' before the boy and get that dreadful book away from him! How could you have been so careless?"

Mrs. Smith was almost frantic. Down to the nearest street car tore Mr. Smith, fairly consumed with rage. He had arrived at the down town district when, with a thrill of joy, he upled the messenger boy. Without waiting for the car to stop, Mr. Smith jumped off and started on a run for the boy.

At the same moment the measenger boy saw him, and, without knowing present home last night, and my wife why he was being pursued, he obeyed his first impulse and ran too.

In a moment a dozen had joined in the chase. Down the street came the poor messenger boy, frantically straining every muscle to get away from the mob pursuing him. Suddenly two men from a cross street ran in front of the boy. One threw his arms around the fugitive, holding his fast: the other man selzed the package the boy was carrying.

"Why, Snively! This package is addressed to you!" he exclaimed. "Why, so it!" said the man who had caught the boy.

In a moment they were surrounded by a crowd. A policeman rushed up and took charge of the boy.

"Hold on there, officer, the boy's all right!" cried Mr. Bmith, who had arrived upon the scene by this time.

"What do you know about this affair?" said the policeman respectfully. as he recognized Mr.48mith.

But Mr. Smith was standing as one dazed. He had caught sight of Mr. Snively with the book under his arm.

"Hello, Smith," said Mr. Snively. "I just now caught this boy, and found him carrying a package addressed to me, so took charge of it. Do you know anything about it?"

"Why-why-er-yes," stammered Mr. Smith, trying to collect his with "You see, I sent the package."

"Well, why were you chasing the boy?" asked the policeman, a little impatiently.

The perspiration stood out on poor Mr. Smith's forehead.

"I-I was afraid I hadn't given the boy the right address, and was trying to stop him to find out," he blurted in desperation.

The policeman looked at Mr. Smith curiously. He was convinced that he was lying, though with what object he could not imagine.

"The package has come to the right fellow anyway," said Snively, laughing. "I'm going right home, so I'll take it along with me."

"Oh, I couldn't think of allowing you to do that, old man!" cried Mr. settled himself in comfort, "Christ-Smith. "Just give it back to the boy; mas comes but once a year!"

"Oh, that's all right," said Snively, laughing. "It deen't make a particle of difference

They parted, laughing good-naturedly over the blunder.

Smith arrived home soon after, congratulating himself on his generalship. "Oh, Jack," cried Mrs. Smith, as soon as he stepped into the house, "I hope you haven't had any trouble!"

"Well, I've had just about the most strenuous time I've experienced in many moons," said Smith. '"I came out all right though."

"I'm so sorry," said 'Mrs. Smith. 'Now I hope you won't be angry, Jack, but you hadn't been gone but a few moments when I discovered that you hadn't sent Mrs. Snively's book, after all. I found her book lying on the floor by the center-table, where, in some way, it had been knocked off." The only book that is missing is the one that Mr. and Mrs. Perkins sent us, so that must have been the one that you sent to the Snivelys."

Mr. Smith collapsed into the nearest chair.

"Ding-a-ling-a-ling," went the telephone.

Mr. Smith, still in a dazed condition, rose and answered it.

"Hello, is that you, Smith?" said : voice. "This is Perkins."

Smith braced bimself for the worst "I didn't quite understand about that present you gave me down at the office. When I got home I found that it had Snively's name on it."

"Oh." "I thought there must be some mistake about it, so I didn't open it."

"You say you didn't open it?" "No."

"Thank Heaven!" "What do you say?"

"I said that you did right. It was just a little joke on Snively."

"Is that so? Well, I'll bring the package down to the office with me diate forestand in seen the location of a great facon, where the classic outlines of the palace will be reflected

The most striking feature of the palace is its great glass dome. The architects of the building turned back the pages of history to the days of the Satacens for their inspiration, the domes and minarets of the palace being similar to the famous mosque of the Sultan Ahmed I, which was based upon the celebrated dome crowning the Byzantine mosque of St. Sophia, the mother of most of the architectural marvels of the Levant. The details and ornaments of the many smaller domes and trellis work give an eighteenth century Renaissance effect, the minor garden architecture being of the period of Louis XIV of France The glass dome of the Palace of Horifculture is said by engineers to be the largest hemispherical dome in the world, being 155 feet in height and 152 feet in diameter. An idea of the magnitude of this dome may be bad when it is compared with some of the most famous domes now in existence. The diameter of the Pantheon of Rome is 142 feet - that of the Duomo of Santa Maria del Flore at Florence, 139 feet, the United States capitol, Washington, D. C., 13532 feet; while the famous dome of St. Peter's at Rome is 139 feet in diameter. The other dimensions of the Palace of Hortleulture are equally imposing, the building covering 223,000 square feet of ground as against 62,000 feet covered by the mosque of St Sophia. The building was erected at a cost of $311,000. This panorama was taken late in August. The exposition will open February 20 and close December 4, 1915

BEST WAY TO PUT UP

THE best and easiest way to put - up a Christmas tree has never been patented or published-in fact it is so simple that it could not be patented. Having failed one Christmas eve to provide a suitable foot or bue for the family tree, necessity compelled me to invent one, because the two youngest members of the family would not hear of Christinas without a tree.

So I sawed the butt of the tree square, then trimmed off a few of the iowest branches and set the tree in a reed sized stone jar. The jar was then filed with stones, pebbles, pieces of brick and coal. All this material was packed down firmly and the position of the tree so adjusted that it stood perfeelly straight When the tree was in position little. Greiel had a happy thought. "Let us] give the tree some water." she said. "hat as if it were a hig flower" And we diled the far with water. Then we covered the stones with bits of silrer linsel and artificial show, and now our tree looked as if it was actually crowing in a big jar.

From time to time, as the water was driwn up by the tree, we reflied the hr, and the result was that, we kept for trea, green and fresh for a month Ence that year our Christmas tree is always pht up in that way, and we ean keep it as long as we wish. A tia pail, a tub or any deep vessel can be used to take the place of the stone jar, and ploces of cont or coke can be med instead of stones to hold the tree in place.

A Ghristmas Garol 🖲

By CHARLES DICKENS

I CARE not for spring. On its fickle wing

Let the blossome and bude to borne.

He woos them hmoth with his treacherous

And he scatters them are the morn.

He'll wither your soungest-flower.

He shall never be saught by me.

And cars not how sulky he be-

That sports in Berne fever a train

As many have to and to their pain.

Of the modest and gentle moon

Hut every leaf awakens my grief

So let autumn air be ever so fair,

It by ho means agrees with ms.

By the way of Christman lesson, then, let us remner ourserves of the simple, human ways in which God comes to earth. To Bethlehem he came as a baby, to Sazareth as a lad, to Jerusalem assteacher aud friend. As the came to those diffes of old, so he is made of fat raisins, with clover always coming. I do not forget, of course, that he comes also in supsets and fields, in storms and earthquakes. Earth's crammed with heaven

And every common bush affame with God. But the supreme advent is always by a man. The real gospel is not a gospel of heauty, but the gospel of a person. Perhaps if we had spent more time by the Christmas manger we might have somer censed expecting salvation to drop from the skies. Godcomes most and bost by men and WOIDCH

Within the year, the court house has been established in the Welborne block, a three story brick building of fine appearance. The building was thoroughly renovated throughout, and an elevator installed. The court room is located in a large hall on the third floor, while the second floor is given up almost exclusively to the offices of the county officials. The Seminole County Bank occupies the corner of the building on the first floor, and the remainder of that floor is used by business firms. The first session of the Circuit Court in Seminole County demonstrated more than any other event, that county division assisted to a great extent in plaicng the new county seat on the map in red letters.

One of the most notable improvements around Sanford is the laying of thirty miles of brick roads in the county. The work is now going on and within a short time will be completed, and will be of untold advantages to the entire community. Perhaps no one improvement is of more Importance to Sanford than these roads, unless it is the bulkheading of the lake front.

TO THE CALL FROM AMERICA

Col R W Davis, also of Gaines, and Highington C. Dec. 17.s 15,600 ville, to the position of register of While American rein Acements were ready to entrain today for Naco, Ariz., administration officials learned through unofficial advices that Gov. Maytorena, commander of the Villa troops besleging the Mexican town of Naco had announced he would discontinue firing into American territory. This compliance with the or ders uf Playmonal President Gutierrez, it was believed here, would relieve a tense situarion.

The Washington government had been notified that the orders of Gutierrez, to his commander had been dispatched. It had warned both fuctions that unless the firing ceased American artillery would shell the Mexican troops out of their positions. The reinforcements ordered yesterday to proceed to Naco to reinforce Brigadier General Biss were expected to reach their destination within three days and ,t was the general impression here that if at the end of that period bring across the border had not ceased the Amertean troops would be ordered to re-Bratiti Silver Bager
