More flak for casinos

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - A casino gambling amendment proposed for Florida would unfairly benefit selected property owners and should be thrown off the November ballot, Gov. Lawton Chiles and the state attorney general say.

"When all the cards are laid on the table, casino gambling is a bad deal for Florida," Chiles said Thursday. "It's bad for our economy, strains the state's resources and threatens the safety of our citizens."

Seminole County's three part-mutual facilities and aboard a riverboat cruising the St. Johns River. Gerald Briley, promoter of the failed Safe Bet for Florida riverboat proposal, is supporting the effort. Briley wants to offer riverboat gambling cruises from Port of Sanford west of Interstate 4.

Chiles and Attorney General Bob Butterworth petitioned the state Supreme Court to rule the proposal unconstitutional. Butterworth also requested a rehearing of an earlier decision that it qualified for the ballot.

"What are they afraid of?" said Randy Lewis, spokesman for Proposition for Limited Casinos

Inc. "They know as we do that the people of this state want limited casinos."

If voters approve writing casinos into the constitution, the amendment says one will be in the South Pointe section of Miami Beach. Butterworth's petition noted.

It cited April news reports saying Thomas Kramer, who owns or controls 63 properties in the South Pointe area, had contracted with Mirage Resorts for construction of a $800 million casino and hotel.

This has already caused area property values to rise, Butterworth said. "This proposal is con- See Casinos, Page 7A

Sky's the limit for bucket truck driver

By VICKI BOGDANSKI Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Perched precariously above the ground in a gleaming white bucket, Ann Williams said a bright green bubble with a click.

Two and a half years ago, Williams traded in her tailored suits and fancy coiffures for jeans and naturally sun bleached hair.

As the only female bucket truck driver in the Southern Bell fleet in central Florida, she said a man's matter of wanting to do a "man's job." She just wanted a job that didn't require her to sit all day behind a desk.

After a dozen years as a customer service representative, an operator and a directory service operator for Southern Bell, she "just had to get outside," she said.

Williams giggles and kicks the heel of one boot against the toe of the other.

"I don't think I'm anything special," she said. "I just come out here and do a job that I love to do. Just like the rest of these guys."

The daughter of a Florida Power and Light lineman, Williams didn't always want to do what she does. It was a matter wanting to be outside.

told me I was crazy.

Her mother, on the other hand, thinks it is wonderful. "Because I'm happy," Williams said, "she thinks it's great."

The 35-year-old outside plant technician (formerly known as a lineman) said she has been a role model for her 9-year-old niece.

"On career day a couple of years ago Corey went to school dressed as a lineman like me," Williams said. "Her teacher pointed out that women can be linemen too. She thought it was pretty neat."

It doesn't bother her to be the lone woman driving a bucket truck and working on the lines.

"They all treat me very nicely," she said. "I guess I get special treatment, but it's because I'm a nice person not because I'm a woman."

Though she says she tries to be feminine, even on the job, she admits it's not easy to do while driving a 3,300 pound truck in jeans, sweaty shirts, heavy work boots and a hard hat. Her nails, unpainted, are chewed to the quick.

Her hair, however, is pulled carefully into a bouncy ponytail and dainty gold and pearl earrings adorn her ears. She jokes that she took the job for the money and to meet men. See Williams, Page 8A

Community library opens to the public

By VICKI BOGDANSKI Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - A library can be a comforting oasis in the life of a child.

Adventures to far away places with exciting people. Imaginary creatures. Historical events. Every book is something new.

Until now, students at Midway Elementary School had the opportunity to read and check out books from the school media center, but there was no other choice in reading materials.

A community library for children ages 3 to 9 will open Tuesday, Sept. 20 at the school.

"We wanted to open the library up for the whole community," Jimmy Blake, one of the organizers of the library said. "Most of the kids in the community go to Midway Elementary, but we wanted to make sure everyone had the chance to read more books."

The library, which will be staffed by volunteers, will be open on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Blake said he worked with County Commissioner Daryl McLain to enlist the assistance of community businesses to get the program off the ground. Sprint-United Telephone of Florida See Library, Page 7A

Lake Mary incumbent runs again

By MICK PERRIPAU Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY - Two commission seats and the mayor's position in Lake Mary are up for election this November. All three incumbents have now officially qualified to seek reelection.

David Meador qualified on Sept. 8 to seek another two-year term for Seat 3. Prior to his election in that position in 1992, he had served two 2-year terms in Seat 1.

Meador, 47, has lived in Lake Mary since 1980, and has been very active as the city's representative to CALNO, the council of cities organization made of up representatives from Casselberry, Altamonte Springs, Longwood, Lake Mary, Sanford, and Winter Springs, as well as other governmental bodies.

As a professor at the University of Central Florida, he has been considered a staunch advocate for education and the protection and improvement of youth in Lake Mary. He has been involved in working with Seminole Community College in many projects which pertain to Lake Mary.

Meador won election to Seat 3 on the commission in the November, 1992 general election by defeating his opponent with 51.4 percent of the total vote.

His opponent at that time, Sheila Sawyer, has subsequently been elected to the commission to replace See Meador, Page 7A

WEST PALM BEACH - A judge has ruled that a 19-month-old South Dakota boy in a coma since nearly drowning two months ago will be kept on life support through October, prolonging the estranged parents' battle over their son's fate.

The ruling Wednesday on Tylor Croteau's case was the latest move in the legal tussle between Tabitha and Kurt Croteau, who are divorcing, over whether the toddler should live or die.

Tabitha Croteau wants her son kept on life support, while Kurt Croteau has asked Palm Beach Judge Gary Vonhof to discontinue life support and let his son die naturally.

Trial date set for teens in shooting

TAMPA - An Oct. 31 trial date has been set for three Massachusetts teens charged in the shooting death of a 73-year-old man during a robbery attempt at his home.

The youths, from Athol, Mass., will be tried as adults. The trial date was set Thursday.

Police believe the retired bus driver fell victim to runaways who stole a car in Massachusetts and hit the road on a weeklong crime spree that took them up to Maine, then south to Tampa.

"Apparently, they ran out of money and were looking for someone to rob," Tampa police Maj. Ken Taylor said after their arrests.

Burglary suspects nabbed

Sheriff's deputies arrested two persons early Thursday, believed to have been connected with burglaries to three vehicles parked on Sun Lake Loop, at Sun Lake Apartments near Lake Mary. With a description of the men, deputies searched the area, found the suspects on Grassy Point Drive, at adjacent St. Croix Apartments. The men were reportedly identified by witnesses who were said to have seen them at the vehicles. Arrested were Michael Patrick Meehan, 18, of 2882 Grassy Point Drive, in St. Croix Apartments, and a 17-year-old male, of the same address.

Each was charged with burglary to a vehicle. Meehan was taken to the John E. Fulk Correctional Facility, while the juvenile was taken to the Juvenile Detention Center. Deputies said they found some of the items reportedly stolen from the vehicles, hidden in a wooded area near the apartment complexes.

Men's room fight

Sheriff's deputies arrested Kenneth Duane Pearson, 26, of 3202 Orlando Drive, at a howling alley Wednesday. Deputies responded to a call regarding a fight in the men's restroom. They said when they arrived, they found Pearson holding a man down on the floor, with other customers watching. When the deputy attempted to apprehend Pearson, he reported Pearson kicked him in the leg and attempted to attack him. Pearson was arrested on charges of disorderly conduct, and battery to a law enforcement officer.

Burglary case

Longwood police arrested Orlando J. Namos, 26, of Apopka, at the Longwood police station Wednesday. Following an investigation, Namos was brought to the station for interrogation. Police said on Sept. 6, he reportedly stole $90 from the cash register at a convenience store on U.S. Highway 17-92 in Longwood. In connection with that case, he was charged with unarmed burglary and petit theft. Police also found Namos was wanted on a capias for reportedly robbing the same store on Sept. 11, and said they were checking on a third similar incident.

Meat thefts

Two persons were arrested by Sanford police Wednesday, in connection with what eventually proved to be two separate grocery store burglaries on Orlando Drive south of Sanford. One store manager had given police the license number of the vehicle used in the get-away. Police located and stopped the vehicle in the 2500 block of E. Portal Drive. They said they found the passenger to be in possession of cigars and meat reported stolen from one of the stores. A search uncovered other meat and shrimp packages reportedly stolen from a second grocery store. The passenger, Howard Warren Robinson, 30, of 801 Orange Avenue, was charged with retail theft. The driver of the car, Valerie Mosella Jean, 24, of 1124 Pomegranite Drive, was charged with retail theft and having no driver's license.

Runner nabbed

Sanford police arrested James Deliafield, 22, of 41 Lake Monroe Terrace, at 12th Street and Lincoln Avenue Tuesday. A passing officer reported seeing Deliafield running in the area around 4 a.m. in the morning, and gave chase. After he was apprehended, Deliafield was charged with resisting an officer without violence.

Invading Haiti

Florida's lawmakers in D.C. don't support invasion

By GREGG BOONICCONTI
Associated Press Writer

President Clinton's case for the military invasion of Haiti to restore democracy didn't sway most members of Florida's Congressional delegation.

In a terse ultimatum from the Oval Office Thursday night, Clinton told Haiti's leaders, "Your time is up. Leave now or we will force you from power." Clinton wants to restore democracy to Haiti, but the most vocal members of the delegation elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who was ousted in 1991.

"I wouldn't spend 10 cents to put Aristide back in office," said Rep. C.W. "Bill" Young, R-St. Petersburg, after Clinton's address. "Aristide's human rights record is just as bad as (military leader Lt. Gen. Raoul) Cedras."

Young, who serves on an Appropriation Subcommittee for National Defense and the House Select Committee on Intelligence, said he has been in too many intelligence briefings detailing Aristide's human rights violations.

"What I hope is this tremendous show of strength will convince Cedras to leave," Young said. Rep. E. Clay Shaw, R-Port Lauderdale, echoed Young's concerns.

"The answer to Haiti is to remove Jean-Bertrand Aristide from negotiations and to proceed with democratic elections," Shaw said. "He has endorsed necklacing (the placing of burning tires around a person's neck), and is on record as being anti-American."

Many others in Florida's Washington delegation — 14 of the 25 members are Republican — said the United States doesn't have a compelling national interest in the Caribbean nation to warrant an invasion. Clinton said the United States is obligated to restore democracy and end human-rights abuses.

The impending invasion is the culmination of three years of diplomatic wrangling between military rulers in Haiti and the White House over the restoration of Aristide.

Many of Florida's Washington lawmakers are urging a debate in Congress before the United States sends troops.

Rep. Porter Goss, R-Sanibel, authored a bill to prevent the invasion unless Clinton first proves to Congress that there "is a clear and present danger" to Americans or the United States.

"To say that all terror will end in Haiti if Cedras leaves is a dramatic oversimplification," Goss said. "In my view if the president's goal tonight was to convince the American people to support military action, he failed."

Even some Florida Democrats such as Rep. Peter Deutch, D-Lauderhill, are calling for congressional action. And powerful House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Sam Gibbons, D-Tampa, has not taken a position on the issue.

Republican Sen. Connie Mack favors an invasion, but criticized the president from backing down from previous threats to invade the Caribbean nation.

"Ultimately, Floridians will continue to live with the threat of an immigration crisis on our shores until democracy and freedom are restored in Haiti," Mack said.

Rep. Alcee Hastings, D-Miami, like Florida's other black members of Congress, supports the invasion.

"We as a nation, as a world leader, can no longer ignore the desperation and victimization of our hemispheric neighbors. We must act and we must act now," Hastings said.

"Otherwise, we tacitly endorse the raping, pillaging and murdering of innocent human beings."

Youngest brother with AIDS arrested for sexual battery

By The Associated Press

ORLANDO — Robert Ray, one of three hemophiliac brothers who contracted the AIDS virus from tainted blood products, has been arrested on a sexual battery charge.

Ray, 17, faces one count of sexual battery and one count of performing a lewd act on a 15-year-old girl. Arrested Thursday, he is scheduled to be arraigned Tuesday.

"I think when all the facts come out and the motivation behind these charges come out, Robert will be cleared," said his attorney, Kirk Kirkconnell.

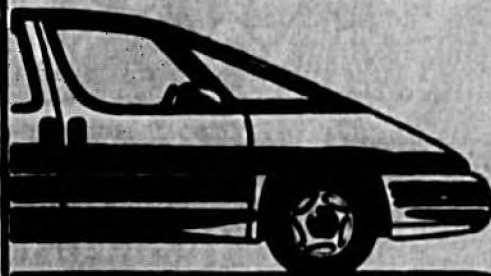

The family issued a written statement through their attorney saying, "Louise and Clifford both love and support their son and believe in him. At this time, their chief concern is for Robert's health and emotional well-being."

Ray was diagnosed with AIDS four years ago, while his younger brother, Randy, learned last year that he also had the deadly disease. The oldest brother, Ricky, died of complications from AIDS in 1992 at age 15.

The Ray family gained prominence after the brothers were harassed at school and their Arcadia home was burned in an arson that was never solved.

Plan in place for invading Haiti

WASHINGTON - The Pentagon's plan for invading Haiti relies on a tactic unstrengthened in combat - launching thousands of Army soldiers and dozens of their helicopters from Navy aircraft carriers.

And as Marine amphibious units storm ashore to capture key ports, Air Force F-15 fighters and AWACS radar planes will be high overhead to ensure that no aircraft - from any nation - interferes with the operation.

Should President Clinton order an invasion of Haiti, senior Pentagon officials and other military experts say the operation will require precision teamwork among America's often-contentious military services.

"It appears there's a new era of 'jointness,'" said Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., chairman of the House Armed Services personnel subcommittee, said of the Haiti preparations.

Parents get what they want

BATON ROUGE, La. - The parents of a Japanese exchange student shot to death by a man who thought he was an intruder got what they wanted - and it wasn't money.

"The point had to be made that what happened that night was wrong," said Charles Moore, the lawyer for Masachi and Micho Hattori, after a judge ordered the shooter to pay the couple $653,000 for the wrongful death of their son.

"To a large degree, this verdict is symbolic," Moore said. "Sometimes, justice can be served by a symbol."

Kenneth Peairs used the same defense that got him acquitted last year of manslaughter: He thought 16-year-old Yoshitomo Hattori was a crazed attacker.

State District Judge Bill Brown rejected that argument. "Self-defense is not acceptable. There is no justification that the killing was necessary to save himself or his family," Brown said.

Peairs and his wife, Bonnie, would not comment after the verdict. Peairs' lawyer planned to appeal.

Moore said Peairs, a 32-year-old supermarket butcher, probably couldn't pay the award. But the Hattoris wanted to show the injustice of their son's death more than they wanted the money, he said.

Astronauts focus on spacewalk

SPACE CENTER, Houston - With their major chores behind them, Discovery's astronauts concentrated today on the high point of their 10-day mission - a spacewalk to try out a new jet pack.

"It's a great day for an untethered spacewalk in the payload bay," Mission Control told the crew in this morning's wake-up call.

Astronaut Susan Helms used the shuttle's mechanical arm to haul a 2,800-pound satellite into the cargo bay Thursday. The satellite, Spartan, had orbited 65 miles ahead of Discovery for two days to study the sun.

With Spartan safely tucked away for the ride home, astronauts Carl Meade and Mark Lee were able to focus on today's spacewalk, the first in a decade that had astronauts venturing into the void of space without safety tethers.

The two were to test a new $7 million jet pack designed as a rescue device, or life preserver, should future astronauts become untethered while constructing a space station.

Stocks surge toward all-time high

By FANELLA SCHEER/AP Business Writer

NEW YORK - The weather may be cooling and the days getting shorter, but the late summer stock rally is showing few signs of abating.

The Dow Jones industrial average of 30 big-name stocks surged 58.56 points Thursday to 3,973.36. Its highest close in seven months and within 26 points of its all-time high. Since Tuesday, the market's most widely watched barometer has gained more than 90 points.

"My guess is we have a rendezvous with 4,000 somewhere immediately ahead of us," said Peter J. Canelo, chief investment strategist at NatWest Securities Corp.

But Canelo acknowledges 4,000 is a psychological barrier the market will not easily break.

Thursday's gain came during an unusual day. Many traders and analysts were off for the Jewish holiday of Yom Kippur. Also, anticipation of today's quarterly expiration of futures and options generated some extra activity as traders worked to improve their holdings.

Economic news reported Thursday played a role in the rally.

A manufacturing report from the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia showed factories in the Northeast were expanding production, but relatively slowly. That helped reduce inflation fears. And the government said business inventories grew moderately in July, easing concern that the stockpiles of goods would slow the economy.

Concerns about inflation and higher interest rates in the future hang over the market, poised to throw a wrench into the plans of the most avowed bulls.

But market analysts like Canelo say the Dow's performance since Tuesday and its overall gains this summer indicate real strength.

They credit several factors: The economy appears to be doing well; corporate profits are exceeding expectations; and the recent surge in merger activity suggests money is available and buyers have confidence in U.S. companies.

"What we are seeing is an increase in walk-in traffic in conjunction with the increases we've seen in the market," said Cynthia Batista, a brokerage branch manager for Fidelity Investments in Los Angeles.

"What that says to us is individual investors are coming off the sidelines a little bit."

Batista said inquiries at her office by investors wanting to set up brokerage accounts began to pick up over the past two or three weeks and are about 25 percent above levels seen in July and August.

While people still speak with some concern about the market, they seem to be jumping back in, she explained.

Stocks began moving steadily higher in late August, when the Dow was trading at about 3,750. Despite concerns about inflation - and the possibility the Federal Reserve will raise interest rates again to slow the economy and rein in price increases - the market has continued its climb.

Thursday's rally put the Dow within striking distance of its all-time high of 3,978.36, hit on Jan. 31.

"This move comes as a surprise, but it's more than just a one-day wonder," said Eugene Peroni, director of technical research at the brokerage Janney Montgomery Scott in Philadelphia. "It's an ongoing trend."

The Dow's finish Thursday was its highest since Feb. 3, when it hit 3,967.66.

Mixed blessings: Translating fervor into votes

By JILL LAWRENCE
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — The religious right movement heads into the general election with a mixed pre-season record that highlights the problems of turning Christian activism into statewide electoral victories.

In a scenario in Minnesota that could well be repeated this fall in Virginia, religious conservatives dominated a Republican state convention, but their candidate went on to lose an election.

Republican Gov. Arne Carlson, a moderate, trounced the extremely conservative Allen Quist 66-34 percent in the Minnesota GOP primary this week, although Quist had won the state party endorsement. Quist carried fewer than two dozen of 87 counties.

Quist, a father of 10, campaigned against abortion and homosexual rights and created a stir by saying men have a "genetic predisposition" to head families. Even leaders of the 750,000-member Christian Coalition conceded that comment was damaging.

One of the coalition's major victories this year was helping Oliver North win the Virginia Senate nomination at a convention last summer, but North's prospects for election this fall are uncertain, particularly in light of the collapse Thursday of Democrat Douglas Wilder's independent bid. Sen. Charles Robb, D-Va., is expected to pick up most of Wilder's support.

There are several statewide candidates closely identified with the religious right who are in a position to win. They include former Missouri Gov. John Ashcroft, running for Senate, and David Beasley, running for South Carolina governor. Neither is campaigning on the religious-right agenda.

Ashcroft, a retooling, anti-abortion composer of gospel songs, is not advertising his rock-ribbed Christian Coalition support. And Beasley, whose religious-right backing propelled him to a runoff win against two other candidates, reassured Charleston business leaders this week the Christian right would not have "undue influence" in his administration.

New research for a liberal watchdog group confirms the risks of such associations. Only a quarter of the 1,002 people polled for People for the American Way, a liberal watchdog group, said they'd be more likely to support a candidate identified with the religious right; four in 10 said they'd be less likely

Concern about declining values is central to the religious right's appeal. Most Americans share that concern, the poll found, but disagree with Christian activist remedies such as an abortion ban, private-school tuition vouchers and sex education that's limited to urging abstinence.

Though its influence may at times be problematic, there's no doubting the importance of the religious right to the GOP. One indicator is the lineup at the Christian Coalition conference beginning today in Washington: four 1996 presidential prospects and the wife of a NRh coalition founder Pat Robertson, "Book of Virtues" author Bill Bennett and a number of other prominent Republicans.

There's also a prominent Democrat, Pennsylvania Gov. Robert Casey, an anti-abortion crusader on the outs with the Clinton administration.

Last year's token Democrat, by contrast, was David Wilhelm, the Clinton campaign veteran who became chairman of the national party.

It was an outreach attempt that failed. Religious right groups have been among President Clinton's most virulent critics. Some frustrated Democrats have responded with name-calling and harsh attacks, leading in turn to charges of Christian-bashing from the other side.

People for the American Way says its research shows that's the wrong approach. It is distributing a manual called "Winning Through Reason, Not Fear: 10 Rules for Meeting the Challenge of the Religious Right."

The guide advises Democrats to engage in fights over specific issues rather than general values; pay attention to concerns about declining values; don't use exaggerated language to describe the religious right; and don't exaggerate the "threat" it poses.

Yet, the group warns the threat should not be underestimated. There are more groups raising more money than there were two years ago, and president Arthur Krupp, the movement "seems to have no limit on growth."

He offers a cautionary fable about local politics, the most fertile territory for the movement this far.

"You hear that they're organizing somewhere and instead of organizing yourself, you say it doesn't really matter," says Krupp. "You wake up a few weeks later, and your school board is no longer your school board."

When disabled workers were rehabilitated and returned to the same job they had, an average of $96 was saved for every dollar spent on rehabilitation expenses.

• The key to achieving these savings was the employer adopting a return-to-work culture focusing on the abilities of workers and making accommodations to help workers do their jobs despite physical limitations.

IN BRIEF

Convenience store robbed

SANFORD - The Cumberland Farms convenience store at 3800 S. Orlando Drive was robbed last night. Only $35 to $40 is believed to have been obtained.

Sanford police Commander Dennis Whitmire said at approximately 9:17 last night, what was described as a clean cut white male, approximately 20 to 25 years of age, entered the store and asked the female clerk for some quarters.

"When she opened the cash drawer," Whitmire said, "the man reached over the counter and grabbed money from the register."

Whitmire said the clerk told officers the man indicated he had a gun and ordered her to the rear of the store. "But there was apparently no actual proof that the man had a gun," Whitmire observed.

The clerk reportedly said the man was wearing a brightly striped shirt, white, pink, and possibly green. He was described as having short dirty-blond hair.

Man shot on street

SANFORD - James Campbell, 33, of 2400 Water Street, Midway, was reportedly shot last night as he was walking down the street. He was taken to Orlando Regional Medical Center, where his condition this morning was listed as stable.

According to sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, Campbell was shot in the shoulder as the result of what was believed to be an ongoing dispute with a girlfriend, who Campbell reportedly said had shot him two months ago, at which time he had refused to prosecute.

Longwood races

LONGWOOD - Races are shaping up for both city commission seats up for election in November.

Mayor Steve Miller qualified for re-election last week and will face challenger Jim Carrico, 966 Bucksaw Place. An employee of Delta Airlines, Carrico qualified to run for the commission seat in district 3 this morning.

Bill Winston, 655 Sweetbriar Branch, is running for the seat currently held by commissioner Paul Lovstrand in district 5. Winston works for AT&T.

Lovstrand is expected to qualify for re-election later today before the qualifying period ends. Lovstrand stepped down as Longwood mayor in June to run for state representative but changed his mind after Rep. Bob Starks (R-Winter Park) chose to seek re-election. Lovstrand retained his commission seat.

Ann Williams probed high in the air.

"The money is great," she said, tossing her head back with a tiny laugh and a fringed post. "but most of the men are married."

Her co-workers say she is a hard worker, but a lot of fun.

"She makes me laugh and she's a lot of fun to work with," said Mike Johnson, who wears the FSU Seminoles ball cap that Williams, who is a big FSU fan, gave him as a gift.

J.R. Robertson, a 30-year-veteran of the phone company, works with Williams as a supervisor. He nicknamed her Bubbles for her "bubbly personality." He said she makes the job fun with her quick laugh and ready hugs.

"And it's not every day you get hugged by six women," he joked.

Though she works in Sanford, Williams maintains the home she bought across the street from her mother's in Palatka.

"Family is real important to me," she said. "I could move here to Sanford. It's a nice place and I'd be closer to home. So I'd get off of work at 4 and be home by 4:15. Then what? I'd be by myself."

She says she'd rather make the 90 mile trek home and spend time with her mother and her niece and nephew.

"Maybe if I was married it'd be different," she speculates. "But I want to be near family."

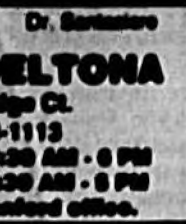

Williams has just gotten a new Telega T-40 bucket truck, which she said is her pride and joy. She keeps the cab and the truck itself clean and makes sure that others who ride in it do the same. "I think the company was glad to give this truck to a woman," she said. "They know I'll take special care with it."

Williams said she looks forward to coming to work every day.

"When I worked inside, the alarm would go off every morning and I'd be there trying to think of an excuse not to go to work," she said. "Ever since I started working out here, the thought of not coming in has never crossed my mind not even once."

Vitamins alone don't fight depression

DEAR DR. GOTT: As a longtime student of nutritional therapy, I wish you would address the value of vitamin B12 tablets, together with folic acid, in helping depression at bay, especially for pre-teens and teens.

DEAR READER: Vitamin B12 and folic acid, which are present in well-balanced diets, are necessary for body metabolism, including the formation of blood cells and the function of nerves. A deficiency of either substance may lead to anemia, malaise, numbness of the feet, and other symptoms. Such a deficiency is diagnosed by blood tests. Despite their importance for good health, B12 and folic acid are not effective treatment for depression, for which other therapy, such as Prozac and other drugs, is more suitable. Therefore, I do not endorse your view that vitamins are appropriate for this medical condition.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Fads I: Vitamins and Minerals." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please elaborate on what makes someone crave sweets. I'm in this situation and can't seem to control my desire.

DEAR READER: Athletic persons, who often exercise strenuously, may crave sweets to replace the calories they have burned for energy. Also, diabetics may feel a need to ingest large quantities of sugar-products -- a practice that, obviously, they should avoid.

In addition, healthy people may simply like the taste of sweet edibles and develop a craving for them. This may lead to obesity and other health problems, including diabetes.

Therefore, someone who is otherwise fit and well who craves sweets can overcome such a "sweet tooth" if he substitutes diet products (such as those sweetened with artificial substances, including NutraSweet). The switch-over should be gradual, because synthetic sweeteners do not taste exactly like the "real thing" and the body must adjust. Ask your doctor about this.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Do you find the mathematics of bridge baffling? Do you hate trying to remember the odds for the various suit breaks? If so, welcome to the human race! The vast majority of players have the same problems as you. Only experts hold most of the key figures in their heads. And no one knows all the answers. However, if you would like to learn a little more, a good place to start is "Bridge Odds for Practical Players" by Hugh Kelsey and Michael Glauret. Originally published in 1980, it has just been reissued by Gollancz in a paperback edition. It is available for $16.05 from The Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025-7124.

contract, West leads a spade. You capture East's jack with your ace, cash the heart ace, play a club high. Both opponents follow, but the king doesn't appear. You draw the last trump by playing a heart to dummy's king. The decisive moment has arrived. Do you play a diamond toward the king, hoping East has the ace, or ruff a club, hoping the suit was originally split 3-3? A priori, the location of one card (here, the diamond ace) is a 50-percent chance; whereas a 3-3 split is only 35.5 percent. However, when both opponents follow to two rounds of clubs, you learn that they weren't 6-0 or 5-1, and that the king wasn't doubleton. This changes the odds. The chances of a 3-3 split have risen to more than 52 percent. It is right to ruff a club. Copyright 1994, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Cool YOUR BIRTHDAY Sept. 17, 1994

In the year ahead, you might profit in a rather large way from an unusual chain of circumstances involving two close friends. They'll initiate what occurs and find room for you to get aboard.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you could be luckier than usual with ideas or concepts that are practical, yet grand in scope. Don't implement them in a rash manner, but don't sit on them either. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The means might be made available at this time to enable you to buy something expensive you've been wanting. Make a quick decision because existing conditions may change.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

Your drive and initiative today could lead you to the exact spots where opportunity is buried. "Seek and ye shall find" should be your motto.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Past experiences, aided by instinctive insights, could put you out in front of the pack today. Trust your natural gifts and abilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Whether you win or lose today will be predicated on your outlook and attitude. If you think "win," you'll behave like a winner. If you are negative, you might trip over your own shoestrings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're now in a brief cycle where you might be rewarded for your past efforts where your career is concerned. Don't be modest about your accomplishments.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A lesson you've learned from a painful experience could serve you well today, because you know what you did wrong in the past and you're not apt to repeat it when confronted with it now.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) As of today, you could come out better than you thought from an arrangement that has appeared bleak. It may have looked hopeless previously because you lacked the right facts and perspective.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Giving more of yourself than your counterpart does in a partnership arrangement could prove to be the right course of action today. The account will be balanced later.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your possibilities for fulfilling ambitious aims look excellent today. You'll be aware of Lady Luck's presence, but you'll also know what's expected of you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) With a little extra effort and imagination on your behalf, you have the power to sway others today. Be sure to use it for the right reasons.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Charm, congeniality and helpfulness are assets you possess today which will help you reap dividends from friends with whom you'll be involved socially.
