Sanford Cuts Loose Financial Albatross

City of Sanford officials today handed over to Howard Hodges, president of the Atlantic Bank of Sanford, a check for $1,652,000 to pay off the city's 40-year-old bond ssue. Hodges is to forward the check to a New York bank, which holds the

The debt had been owed since the early 1900s for a myriad of projects ranging rom construction of the bulkhead around the Lake Monroe lakefront, road paving, the old city hall soon to be replaced by the new facility now under construction, the water works, and the old Sixth Street incinerator defunct for many years. All of the projects had been constructed prior to the "boom bust" in the late 1920s.

"The bond issue has been an albatross around the city's neck for 40 years and it has been difficult to pay off," said City Clerk Henry Tamm. The debt, which originally totaled more than $5 million and was contracted during the teens and 20s of this century, was consolidated into a refunding issue on March 3. 1937, Tamm said. The interest on the several original bond issues had not been paid during the years from the bust until the refinancing in 1937.

The city, after the bust, was forced to "pull in" its city limits to survive, Tamm said. The bulkhe and filling in of part of the lake to create new land had extended into the areas, later deannexed by the city, making it impossible to collect money owed to the city from property owners there, he added. In

When the refunding bond issue was acquired in 1937, the city named a threemember board as trustees of the issue, financial advisers to assist in management of the debt and its reduction, he noted.

Among those who served as trustees over the years were the 'late Volie Williams Sr., father of the current circuit judge, Volie Williams Jr. and J. H. Van

Abortion Clinic Files Suit

Against City Of Cocoa Beach

ORLANDO (AP) An abortion clinic has filed a federal suit here against the city of Cocoa Beach, seeking a permanent injunction against a health care ordinance and $750,000 in damages.

The Aware Woman Clinic has also filed a request seeking a temporary injunction against the ordinance. The request will be heard today by U.S. Dist. Judge George C. Young.

Clinic attorney Ray Lucas, of Washington, D.C., who has been successful in 15 similar court fights, filed the complaint.

Lucas claimed a city ordinance regulating the operations of the clinic is unconstitutional because it deprives women of their right to have an abortion within the first three months of pregnancy.

Jobless Picture Brightens

TALLAHASSEE (AP) - Some 6.5 per cent of Florida's work-force wasn't working last month, but officials say that was a threeyear low and that for the second time in two months Florida's jobless rate was less than the national rate.

The state Commerce Department noted Tuesday that the state jobless rate has been above 6.5 since August 1974. The June state rate was 6.9 per cent and the national rate for July was 6.9 per cent — both higher than the July state mark.

Florida's unemployment has consistently been higher than the national average since the beginning of the recession in 1974. Economists say most of the rest of the country has pulled out of the recession but that Florida is lagging behind because of its narrow economic base.

Drug Force Increased

PENSACOLA (AP) The U.S. Customs Service is moving five patrol detectives to Pensacola to help combat the growth of drug and boat smuggling in the Florida Panhandle.

The detectives and their new headquarters vill be on "on-duty" status starting Sunday. said Harvey Perry, Customs district director in nearby Mobile, Ala.

"The main objective is to be increase the patrol investigation function," said Perry "We are merely expanding our area and levels of coverage on the Gulf Coast."

Canal Pact

Is Essential The treaty on the future status of the Panama

Canal faces an uncertain reception in the Senate, where ratification demands approval by a twothirds majority.

But the pact, envisioning a gradual U.S. withdrawal from operation of the canal and from the 10mile-wide Canal Zone, which it has controlled for 74 years, is essential to our changing relationships with Latin America.

Terms of the treaty announced recently by the negotiators, who have put the finishing touches on a task that took 13 years under four presidents, call for transfer of the canal to Panama by the year

Until then, Panama and the United States will share operation, maintenance and defense of the waterway and jointly guarantee its neutrality.

A separate treaty will require guarantees from Panama that the canal will remain open to ships of all flags upon expiration of the 23-year agreement. The United States would have the right to intervene in case of attack by a hostile power.

The United States has made concessions in the proposed pact that will arouse the wrath of critics converned with American "sovereignty" in the Canal Zone.

About 70 per cent of the 500-square-mile zone would revert to Panama upon ratification. The rest would be transferred later under still undisclosed procedures. American courts would be dismantled within three years. Other services would be taken over by Panama. Panamanian law would be paramount at the end of three years. American payments for use of the canal will increase from a little over $2 million annually to from $50 million to 60 million

The transition is potentially painful for many Americans who have felt pride since their childhood in the canal as a symbol of American engineering achievement.

But the terms of the agreement are realistic, acknowledging Panama's stake in the canal and the pressures of Latin-American politics. The anguage eases the apprehensions of t e who fear ingering U.S. intervention in Latin-American affairs. It reassures those who are concerned that the United States could be barred from the waterway.

There are still questions to be answered before the treaty is sealed, but ratification should be forthcoming to define the new U.S. role in Panama as partner instead of intruder.

An Ignorant Stand

It was the first time, said the radio newsperson, that "encommentalist" and "peace activists" joined forces in the fight ainst nuclear energy. Which is balderdash. Anyone who's watched the last 10 years knows that antiwar marches and ntipollution demonstrations were frequently composed of the ame (militant and wasteful) people, whose antecedents lie in the Luddite movement of the 19th Century.

They gathered in San Onofre, Calif., these latter-day ophobes, hoping to smash the latest phase of the Industrial evolution, the development of nuclear energy. Having failed to lose the nuclear facility at Seabrook, N.H., they turned their attention to the San Onofre plant. Seabrook, the courts have uled, will be built anyway, and so, no doubt, San Onofre will

But not without being dealt certain mischief. The same protest that hit the East, as Victor Riesel has reported, tied up Con Edison in such legal ropes that the huge East Coast power ompany was inhibited in its ability to make needed capital improvements. If the demagogic Federal Power Commission really wants to fault Con Ed for the massive New York blackout in July, it should look first to the environmental mania some nents of which turned up at San Onofre recently.

It was (such poetry!) the anniversary of the atomic bomb drops on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Aug. 6, the demonstrators selected to protest nuclear energy. That San Onofre somehow will be converted into a production line for nuclear warheads is tremely improbable, if not impossible, does not occur to them. Fearing the future, and lacking intelligible targets, they strike out in the void to make any old kind of protest.

They are truly the descendants of Ned Ludd, that halfhical figure who went down before the juggernaut of the Industrial Revolution, spasmodically protesting - what? Why, protesting the growth of the very system that fed and clothed the greatest numbers of people in all history.

By the way, my dear, how long has it been since the last sex scandal around here?"

The Clock

By MARK WEINBERG

Once I worked in an office which I shared with a secretary everybody called, "Timi," a shortening by several syllables of her last name. Timi would have been any office manager's dream secretary. She was cheerful, thorough, precise and usually had a task half done by the time the boss asked her to

But Timi had a probem, one that was beyond her control - she was within a few months of age 70, the mandatory retirement age of her organization. Timi didn't want to quit. She enjoyed her work and, though she was happily married, she took pride in paying her own expenses. When her mandatory retirement date rolled around, she forbade her officemates from throwing any retirement party. She didn't want to leave, but she didn't have any choice. Legislation now moving through Congress would end this unfortunate situation by allowing those approaching the traditional retirement age of 65 to continue working if they want to.

It is high time society understood that forced retirement is unfair to the individuals involved and robs us all of the benefits of years of experience. The current system has produced sorry results that may be observed in any shopping mall, where many senior citizens spend countless hours sitting idly on benches, unhappily watching the passing parade of their juniors. In Florida, one of America's retirement capitals, the evidence is plentiful that at least a sizeable minority of senior citizens don't like the current system.

It is true that Americans are happy to retire at 65. It is also true, however, that many do not, and they are unwillingly relegated to the status of retirees whether or not their productivity is behind

There is a more practical reason for abolishing the concept of mandatory retirement, and it probably the major motivation for congressional action on the subject: the social security system is going broke

ANGLE-WALTERS Civil Rights Candle Is Flickering

WASHINGTON - Americans for Democratic Action, the faithful torch-bearers of liberalism, have warned that the flame of civil rights is flickering on Capitol Hill this year. Congress, according to ADA, is bowing spinelessly before an ill wind from the right and indermining 20 years of hard-won progress. The evidence? Why, it's right there in the negative votes on busing, abortion, gay rights, 'affirmative action" and veterans benefits for Vietnam holders of less-than-honorable discharges that may be upgraded in the future. Well...maybe. Perhaps ADA is right. Yet its analysis may say as much about the changing nature of "civil rights" challenges as it does about the cooling of congressional ardor on such natters.

It was all so much simpler, a decade or so ago, to distinguish civil rights from wrongs. Those on Capitol Hill and elsewhere who fought to guarantee all Americans the right to vote, access to places of public accommodation, equal employment opportunities and fair housing were blessed with an unshakeable faith that their cause was just.

The courts said so, and the churches. The college professors said so, and their students. Community leaders said so, and common folk. And in the White House, a towering Texan arageously confronted the shame of a century and told his countrymen that "we shall over-

But where, on issues like busing and abortion, is the glorious moral certitude of yesteryear? How can members of Congress be expected to discern the paths of righteousness, let alone follow them, when our society is so deeply and passionately divided on such questions? Take busing, for example, since it falls within the racial context we commonly associate with "civil rights" issues. Where is it written, in the laws of man or God.

that busing is a "right," civil or otherwise? It is no more than a tool to remedy past wrongs and promote a goal of equal educational opportunity. Like any means to an end, its effectiveness is a legitimate subject for debate. Rejecting the means does not necessarily signify a disavowal of the end.

Abortion is an even stickler test congressional commitment to civil rights. Both the House and Senate have voted to deny federal funding for abortions sought by women too poor to pay for them on their own.

Obviously, that is a discriminatory act since affluent women will still be able to obtain abortions with a doctor's approval under terms of the Supreme Court's original ruling that created such a furor earlier in this decade.

Yet who is to say that congressmen who refuse to vote for public financing of abortions are violating civil rights of the poor if they genuinely believe that the willful termination of a pregnancy constitutes a denial of the most fundamental right of all, the right to life?

Angels," is one of the tempting ads that have been appearing in German newspapers for several years now. One of the "angels" - a 25year-old deafmute girl found lost and weeping on a Hanover street - returned to Thailand recently, and her story has exposed the sordidress of this human traffic.

For about $1,600 you can buy a package tour that includes a round-trip ticket to Thailand. marriage to a shapely Thai girl and a return ticket for your new bride. The first week is devoted to sampling the goods. If a Thai girl does not appeal, there are Chinese, Laotians or Burmese. Selection takes place in week two, and is followed by an engagement celebration, a flying visit to the girl's parents, a spell by the seaside and a smattering of local culture. Week three brings the wedding and collection of the necessary documents.

Not time enough for much of a courtship, but it is a tempting proposition if, like Bai Sae Lor, you are one of nine children in a poor farming family. She was offered marriage, but found herself imprisoned in a brothel and spent two months there before she escaped. Some girls find that their new husbands seize their passports when they get back to Europe, put them to work and pocket their earnings.

Other girls go not for marriage but for jobs us waitresses or maids, with salaries that are astronomical by Thai standards. Not all of them are wide-eyed and virginal, and some know that prostitution awaits them, but the money and access to a hard-to-get passport blind them to the risks. A Thai public welfare official just returned from West Germany estimates that more than 1,000 Thai girls are working as prostitutes there.

Japan and Hong Kong. Thailand is starting to worry. A crackdown on the Thai end of the operation is promised, and already some of the more notorious Bangkokbased brokers have gone to ground. But there is little cause for alarm among European and Japanese lonely-hearts with a taste for the exotic and expensive.

The authorities confine themselves to toke ehabilitation schemes for prostitutes in Bangkok itself, outbursts of moral indignation when an enterprising reporter discovers a 12year-old sold into prostitution for $50, and the ccasional token raid on some of the more trageous establishments.

But the odds are against any fundamental change: for many girls, the alternative is 12 hours a day bent double in a rice paddy; for an ill-paid police force protection payoffs are an important income supplement; for the country as a whole foreign exchange is foreign exchange. The latest revelations may interfere with the "take-away" service, but libidinous tourists will still get what they want on the premises.

Visiting Bulgarians Got The Red Carpet

Department has been arbitrarily blocking selected Communists from entering the United States by invoking a law from the Red Scare . days of Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

The McCarran Act, passed in 1952, established nearly 30 categories of people who could not visit the United States unless they were recommended for visa waivers by the State Dept. Among the undesirables were prostitutes, polygamists, paupers and advocates of the "international doctrines of world communism." Now, thanks to a recent bill passed by Congress, the McCarran Act will soon be less estrictive. Over the years, nevertheless, the law has often been selectively applied. Out of some 19,000 waiver applications last year, for example, only about a thousand were denied.

During the Richard Nixon-Henry Kissinger era, Communist leaders from Western Europe were considered anathema, because official visits to the United States would give them credibility at home. In 1975, for instance, a prominent Italian Communist, Sergio Segre, was invited to speak at the New York Council on Foreign Relations. The waiver was denied and the conference had to be cancelled

WASHINGTON - For 25 years, the State were also considered verboten by the Nixon administration. One such case involved a prominent British citizen, Carmel Budiardjo, who wanted to lecture in the United States on uman rights violations in Indonesia. Under pressure from the Indonesian government, the State Department temporarily withheld her visa on the grounds that she had previously lied about being a Communist from 1946 to 1948.

In contrast, Communists who have the State Department seal of approval are speedily granted visa waivers and are ushered in on a red

In a May 9 cable to the State Department, the U.S. ambassador in Sofia, Martin Herz, was ecstatic about Shopov's pending tour. In addition, the current 25-to-35-year-old element of the population is disproportionately large. When this group of people approaches retirement age, it will constitute America's most powerful voting bloc. If mandatory retirement isn't abolished now, it certainly will be eliminated within 30 years.

There is no persuasive reason we should perpetuate a system that each year relegates large numbers of our citizens to the situation detailed in an old Appalachian folk song: "old and gray and only in the way."

DON OAKLEY

Sea Law Pact Is Foundering

The three-mile limit was originally established a few centuries ago, we are told, because it was as far as cannons of the time could fire out to sea.

In other words, international law regarding freedom of the seas was less a matter of agreement by the countries of the world that the oceans were a common highway than it was a measure of their ability to molest each other.

We have since progressed to the point where, in 1970, the United Nations declared the resources on the floor of the sea itself were "that common heritage of mankind."

Yet for the past eight years, 156 countries participating in law of the sea conferences have been unable to reach agreement on putting that noble principle into international law.

At stake are untold billions of dollars worth of manganese nodules - little potato-shaped accretions scattered over the ocean floor at great depths - which also contain nickel, copper and cobalt. Methods have been perfected for scooping up the nodules and refining them.

Four U.S. companies, allied with Japanese. West European and Canadian partners, are eager to get at the nodules, but they want understandably so - guarantees operations will not be confiscated if and when a law of the sea treaty is signed.

A treaty seemed within reach only a few days ago. Other issues in the treaty "package" had been resolved, such as fishing rights, offshore oil exploration, pollution control and the like.

Unfortunately, the seabed minerals issue has foundered on a move by certain Third World countries - some of them landbased producers of the minerals involved - to make undersea mining entirely a U.N. monopoly run by U.N. bureaucrats. They also would limit the growth of mining and possibly require private industry to turn over its mining know-how to the United Nations as a condition for mining rights.

All of which caused normally unflappable Elliot Richardson. American ambassador to the conference, to throw up his hands and suggest that the United States consider withdrawing from the deliberations.

Others are urging that the United States go ahead unilaterally and begin tapping a resource which, it is said, could make the nation selfsufficient in the above-named four vital minerals by the year 2000.

Eight years is long enough to spend trying to reason with the countries of the Third World, many of whom have shown themselves to be a greedy and exploitive as any 19th-century colonial power.

Failing some convincing arguments from the administration as to why yet another try for an agreement should be made at the next law of the sea session in Geneva next March, it would seem to be the time to begin mining the oceans.

But the scholarly Shopov, a State Dept. of ficial told us, "squeezed in" the cultural sights only when he had spare time. The Bulgarian decided to forego Disneyland, which "disappointed" State Dept. officials.

Convicted Gov. Mandel Awaits Word On Pension

BALTIMORE (AP) - Gov. Marvin Mandel convicted of racketeering and mail fraud with five friends, is appealing his case and awaiting word on the status of his pension. Convicted in U.S. District Court Tuesday on a single racketeering charge and 17 mail fraud counts, Mandel will remain governor under the state constitution until sentenced by Judge Robert Taylor on Oct. 7. Lt. Gov. Blair Lee III will then become the state's 57th chief executive.

Chemical Disposal Problem

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Tons of the widely used pesticide DBCP are buried in California soil. Much more is stored in warehouses and railroad cars, and farm experts are hunting for a way to gather and dispose of those stores. The chemical DBCP -dibromochloropropane - was banned by the state this month after tests revealed that 10 workers regularly exposed to it at an Occidental Chemical Corp. plant at Lathrop, 75 miles east of here, were sterile or had almost non-existent sperm counts.

DBCP Controls Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) - A chemical workers union and an environmental group are urging the government to move quickly against a pest-control substance suspected of causing sterility in men and cancer in animals. But a government spokesman says the Occupational Safety and Health Administration was considering an emergency standard for the pesticide, DBCP, before the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union filed a petition Tuesday asking for controls.

WIN AT BRIDGE By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Once in a while you will find yourself in a 4-3 trump fit for a game contract. This isn't a fate worse than death. Sometimes trumps break 3-3 when playing a high card to (36 per cent of the time according to the mathematicians). Sometimes careful play can handle the expected 4-2 break. "I regret I could not be there in person, but there were prior ommitments," said former President Gerald R. Ford. The ball, with which he scored a hole-in-one on the 157-yard fifth hole at the Colonial Country Club in the Memphis Classic last Mike Cox who started the June, was received by Don Collett, president of the Hall of Fame first four games last season and and presented to a gathering of movie and sports celebrities at induction ceremonies Tuesday night.

When Grocery Shopping Decide What's

Wednesday, Aug. 24, 1977-18

Evening Herald, Sanford, Fl.

This is the second in a three-part series on how to save money at the grocery store by following the shopping patterns suggested by Cornell professor, Heinz Biesdorf. Associated Press Writer

The first step, says Biesdorf, is to determine family spending priorities. Decide what things are most important. If you decide you want steak once a week, fine. But you must be ready to pay the price.

"Economists call this opportunity cost," says Biesdorf. "If you spend something on one item, you spend it at the expense of not spending on something else." Once you know priorities, you can work to eliminate impulse items that don't contribute to your goal. Weigh each purchase carefully.

Before you can cut your grocery bill, you have to know where your money goes. That's where the record-keeping sheets come in. In the beginning, you probably will have to refer to your records fairly often to check prices and products; as time goes on, you will remember the figures automatically, says Biesdorf.

Although there are over 10, 300 items in the supermarket, most families will find their weekly purchases are fairly similar. You know there are some items you never use. Other items - toilet paper, for example - are things you will always need, no matter what. These staple items are the things you will want to stock up on.

Start shopping at home by going through the newspaper to check advertised specials. Although only a few items in a given store are likely to be on sale in a particular week, the savings can be large. Remember, however, to check your record sheets to make sure the prices are lower than Once you have determined that the price is right, be prepared to buy more than you need for one week. Suppose, for example, 46-ounce cans of tomato juice are on sale at two for 99 cents, compared to a regular price of $1.30. Assume your family uses tomato juice regularly, at the rate of two cans a week. If you buy 12 cans, you have six weeks' supply and have saved $1.86.

Reminder: read the fine print in the ads. Some stores make savings conditional on a minimum purchase. If you have to buy items you don't really need in order to meet the minimum, you haven't saved. As a rule of thumb, Biesdorf says that if you have to buy only $5 of groceries or less to get the special, it's usually worthwhile.

Over a period of two or three months, you will probably find specials on most of the items and, a little at a time, can build up your own stores of various products. Once you have this backlog, you can pick and choose your shopping times, buying replacement items only when they are on sale.

In order to buy now for future use, you need extra mon-"If you have $ which you have not planned to spend in a supermarket, you're well on your way," Blesdorf says, "because the first week there is no way you could find everything you use at the best price." You can even start with as little as $1 extra, he says.
