Judge Lober named as chief

On July 1, Judge Jere Lober becomes chief judge of the Seminole-Brevard Circuit Court replacing Judge John Antoon II.

Judge Antoon, who has been handling probate cases in Seminole County one or two days a week along with his chief judge duties, will be moving to the Brevard County section of the circuit court fulltime.

Administrative Judge Seymour Benson said during July and August the Seminole County probate cases will be handled by Judge Leonard Wood, who also oversees juvenile cases.

Judges Robert McGregor and Newman Brock will then preside in the probate cases until the end of the year.

In January, when the judges get their assignments for 1994, Benson said it will be determined which judge will receive the probate caseload.

Marder talks to SHDWA

SANFORD — The city's Director of Planning and Development, Jay Marder, spoke to members of the Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Association this morning outlining progress being made by the Lake Monroe Waterfront Steering Committee.

Marder was originally hoping to display a sample of proposed signage to be placed along the waterfront, but withheld the showing until tomorrow afternoon's steering committee meeting.

SHDWA's Kay Bartholomew said the signs will be placed at strategic points along the lake shore, to indicate various points of interest including the historical downtown district.

Marder is expected to display two examples of the signs during the meeting tomorrow afternoon, scheduled for 4:30 p.m.

An announcement will be made several weeks before the rescheduling of the event. For further information, contact the Sanford Senior Center at 330-5699.

Sanford official calls for a legal opinion over Howell's residency

By NICK PFEIPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Whether Lon Howell is legitimately serving as Sanford's District 1 commissioner remains a question his fellow commissioners will have to answer since the Seminole County property appraiser has denied his homestead exemption.

In an opinion by City Attorney Bill Colbert, made public yesterday, Colbert said seated commissioners are required to be qualified voters of the City of Sanford and be legal residents of the district in which they run.

"The city commission is the judge of the qualifications of its members and of the grounds for forfeiture of their office," he wrote.

Howell said he will contest the denial of homestead for his Park Avenue residence.

"1109 Park Avenue will remain my home," Howell declared, reading from a prepared statement during yesterday's workshop meeting. Only commissioners, city staff and a few others were on hand when he made his remarks.

Earlier this month, Seminole County Property Appraiser Bill Suber denied Howell's application for homestead exemption at 1109 Park Ave., based on a lack of residence. Howell has 30 days to See Howell, Page 5A

Eight schools report crimes

By NICK PFEIPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Eight separate incidents of theft and vandalism at area schools were reported to law enforcement agencies in the past week.

Seminole County Sheriff's spokesman George Proechel said, "Actually, it was relatively quiet compared to the problems at the end of school in past years."

"This is typically what happens when children get out of school," he commented, "they are really hyped up and have a tendency to take their excitement out on others."

At Seminole High School, a balance scale, valued at $2,546 was reportedly stolen from room 1604.

Two separate thefts were reported from the band room at Greenwood Lakes Middle School in Lake Mary. A trombone, valued at $300 and a flute valued at $800 were both reported stolen on Tuesday.

At Lake Mary High School on Longwood-Lake Mary Road, a teacher's car was reportedly damaged last Monday by scratching the

FBI arrests fugitive at crisis center

SANFORD — Mark Edward Stein may be heading toward his former home in Brockton, Mass. soon, but he won't be doing it voluntarily.

After he appears before a U.S.

Magistrate in Orlando this afternoon, FBI officials said, extradition procedures will get underway to return him to his home state to face prosecution on charges of assault by a dangerous weapon, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and unlawful possession of a dangerous weapon.

Four years ago, Brockton Police investigators said, Stein fled the state after he assaulted his wife with a knife.

"He had a history of domestic violence problems," Det. Thomas Enos of the Brockton Police Department said. "On Feb. 26, 1989 he went after his wife with a knife and then fled."

Enos said they had reason to believe he left the state and the FBI was called in to investigate. A

Support grows for the July 4th fireworks fund

By NICK PFEIPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Efforts are increasing in fund raising for the July 4th People's fireworks display. Almost half the money needed for this year had been donated as of the end of last week.

The program is being organized by members of the Sanford Seminole Jaycees, with assistance by many area businesses. This year's event will include the "Car Show Extravaganza", with participation from the Celery City Cruisers, Time-Travelers, Inc., and a number of local entries.

Most of the activities will take place in Fort Mellon Park.

Jaycee president Steve Alford and treasurer Brent Adamson appeared before the Sanford City Commission last night to request a special events permit for the July 4th event. The request also asked that the cost of police charges, estimated at $2,214 for overtime during the event, be waived by the city.

Commissioner Whitely Eckstein commented, "Last year, this fireworks was the biggest PR (public relations) disaster in Sanford's history, and I would support this request if it will help get us back to prominence as we were before."

Bomb threat probe under way

JACKSONVILLE — FBI officials say they're investigating a bomb threat mailed to the NAACP office here, the site of a mail bomb less than three years ago.

Willye Dennis, president of the Jacksonville branch, turned the letter over to federal authorities on Monday.

Adorned with a swastika, it was postmarked Pensacola and had a rubber-stamped return address with the initial and last name of a person in Valparaiso, north of Fort Walton Beach.

"I've already shot one of you niggers. I think all of you should be killed," the letter says. "Just think this letter could have been a bomb. I think I might send you one."

FBI spokesman George Wianovsky said sending such a threat through the mail is a federal crime.

The Jacksonville NAACP office received a bomb in the mail in December 1989, the same month mail bombs killed a federal appeals judge in Alabama and a civil rights lawyer in Savannah, Ga. The Jacksonville bomb was disarmed.

Officer slain with own gun

BELLEAIR — A police officer, responding to a prowler call at a condominium, scuffled with a man he was trying to handcuff and was slain with a bullet from his own gun, authorities said.

Belleair policeman Jeffery Tackett, 28, radioed for backup before the man apparently broke free, grabbed the officer's gun and shot him once.

"He was attempting to arrest someone and needed backup," Pinellas Sheriff's Sgt. Greg Tita said Monday. The shooting occurred shortly before midnight.

Lorenzo L. Jenkins, 31, of Clearwater was taken into custody early Monday on a first-degree murder charge and ordered held without bond at the Pinellas County Jail.

Investigators said they recovered Tackett's .45-caliber pistol in a ditch near the Pelican Point Condominium complex.

Jenkins' estranged wife alerted police after he showed up at her house with one hand cuffed, investigators said. Police said he was not wearing the handcuffs when he was arrested later. Tackett had worked for the department for five years.

Residents seek end of historical district

BAGDAD — Some residents in Florida's only county-regulated historical district want it abolished. They say it is devaluing their property and infringing on their rights.

"When you own property and pay taxes on it and somebody has the power to tell you what color you can paint your house and what kind of fence you can have, or even if you can have a fence, then things have gotten out of hand," Jimmy McDaniel told the Northwest Florida Daily News of Fort Walton Beach for a story Sunday.

McDaniel began circulating a petition to abolish the Bagdad Historical District last month after Santa Rosa County denied his request for a zoning variance so he could build a garage across the street from his house.

District supporters say McDaniel's anger is misdirected because his garage would have violated a county-wide zoning ordinance, which prohibits garages on residential property unless the parcel also has a dwelling on it, not a district regulation.

Shaking legs gave suspect away

PENSACOLA — An Escambia County sheriff's deputy says a robbery suspect's shaking legs convinced him he had the right man.

Deputy Barton Fryer stopped Frank Johnson, 25, of Pensacola because he and his truck matched descriptions given by two convenience store clerks who had been robbed earlier Sunday by a man who pulled a knife or screwdriver.

When Johnson got out of the truck his legs were shaking so badly he almost fell down, Fryer reported.

Sheriff's officers said Johnson admitted he had a drug problem and had robbed the stores of $25 and $15 for money to buy crack cocaine. Fryer said he found a piece of crack in the back of his squad car where Johnson admitted he had dropped it after hiding it in his mouth.

Couple, son found dead

PALM BAY — A couple and their 12-year-old son were found dead in their home in Palm Bay, apparently from gunshot wounds to the head, police said.

Police went to the house Monday after 39-year-old Joan Selles failed to report to work at the city building department.

Officers found Selles and her 36-year-old husband, Rodrigo Selles, in their bedroom. The body of their son, Dylan, was found in another bedroom.

Palm Bay police spokesman John Sherbert said the family had been dead several days.

"We definitely haven't ruled out murder-suicide," Sherbert said. "But because we have three bodies all sustaining gunshot wounds, we're treating it like a homicide situation."

A semi-automatic handgun was discovered in the house. Sherbert said.

He said autopsies were expected to be completed Tuesday.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Getting HRS computer right

Project to take state years, money and more experts

By GUY ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — It will take years, money and more outside experts to get the troubled state welfare department computer working properly, a legislative committee was told.

Jim Zingale, a top Revenue Department official brought in as a computer troubleshooter by Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay, the temporary head of the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, sketched a bleak portrait of the system Monday for the Joint Legislative Auditing Committee.

Zingale said the total price tag for the computer will likely reach $173.1 million: $162.8 million in costs to install, analyze and repair the original system and $10.5 million to upgrade its capacity.

But even that figure — substantially more than the $104.2 million original contract price — won't cover future needs to add staff, more computer capacity, correct errors and modify software, Zingale said.

"The truth of the matter is, this is a nightmare," Zingale said. "In the short term, HRS can't win. They can't do all these things."

HRS spokeswoman April Herrle said MacKay wants to hire an outside expert to run the agency's computer operations and is working with the Council of 100 business group to find some potential candidates.

"We've got to get somebody here who knows what they're doing," Herrle said.

HRS could probably pay slightly more than $80,000 a year to such an expert. MacKay wants to explore a contract with the university system to boost the salary.

"It would be hard to attract the right person at that salary," she said.

The computer, which is the largest non-military system of its kind in the nation, has been plagued by multimillion-dollar errors in welfare programs and is the focus of a grand jury probe into allegations that IBM was improperly favored in awarding of contracts.

In addition, original contractor EDS Federal Corp. has filed a $48 million suit for non-payment of bills. HRS contends the product EDS provided didn't work right.

Zingale told legislators that parts of the computer are working well, but it needs both more capacity and additional staff to meet future demand. There are also still programming errors that must be fixed and some functions that should probably be dropped because they're inefficient.

He traced part of the problem to a 100 percent increase in Aid to Families with Dependent Children and Medicaid cases from the time the original contract was signed until 1992, when HRS took the system over from EDS.

HIV Haitians

Refugees ready to get on with lives in USA

By RAJU CHEBIUM
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Armelle Nelson, who spent nearly a year at the U.S. Naval Base in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba — criticized as "an HIV prison camp" — is anxious to get on with her new life in the United States.

"I'll do whatever I need to survive in this country," said Nelson, who used to run a shop in Haiti and is now counting on help from the large Haitian community here to find work.

Nelson, 38, was among 27 Haitians who arrived Monday. She's going to stay with her sister in Miami.

"I have a lot of people here behind me, and they'll be helping me and showing me the way," said Nelson through an interpreter.

Justice Department spokesman Ron Tomalis. The remaining Haitians will be flown to the United States in the next 10 days, federal officials said.

Many of the refugees were at the naval base for 20 months after being stopped at sea by the Coast Guard. The refugees, including six children, arrived from Cuba aboard an Air Force C-130. Many of the adults are said to carry the HIV-virus; the children haven't been tested.

Nelson said she is going to see a doctor here.

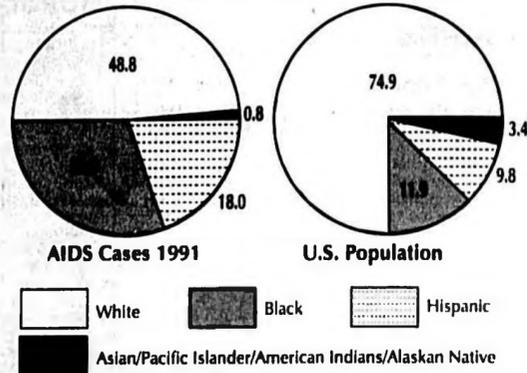

"I am feeling fine," she said. "I am not in any pain."

Other refugees have reportedly expressed doubts as to whether they are HIV-infected.

Raul Hernandez, director of the U.S. Catholic Conference, one of the social service agencies under contract with the federal government to help resettle the refugees, said most would be examined by independent doctors and re-tested for HIV.

WHO HAS AIDS?

Race/ethnicity of persons with AIDS, and the U.S. population

Before boarding the plane in Guantanamo early Monday, several of the refugees spoke to reporters.

"Twelve-year-old James Deudonne said he was eager to go to school and happy to be leaving a place where he had nothing to do for 14 months. His first priority is "to learn to play basketball," he said. His favorite player? "Magic Johnson," Deudonne said.

The refugees are in the United States because on June 8, U.S. District Judge Sterling Johnson Jr. of New York ordered them released from the Guantanamo compound, which he called "an HIV prison camp."

Predicting hurricane path still uncertain

By The Associated Press

MIAMI — Modern technology failed forecasters last year in predicting where Hurricane Andrew would hit, and experts warn the art of foretelling where a killer storm will roll ashore remains chaotic.

Forecasters and scientists at the National Hurricane Center these days know when a storm is brewing before it's strong enough to have a name. They can track every shift of its path as it crosses thousands of miles of ocean and can measure its size and strength on an hourly basis.

But predicting where it will go next is as much an art as science, says Jerry Jarrell, the center's deputy director.

Three days before Hurricane Andrew struck South Florida, not a single computer model used by forecasters indicated that the storm would hit where it did — Homestead.

"Our forecasting models are improving, but they're not improving very fast," he said.

Warning time is a key not only to prevent destruction, but to save lives.

Hurricane watches are now issued 36 hours before a storm is expected to hit land, and hurricane warnings only 24 hours.

That's not enough to evacuate congested areas with limited access, such as the Florida Keys or Miami Beach, experts say.

"We really need to make the watch and warning period longer," Jarrell said. But the current uncertainty makes that impossible.

When the Andrew warning went up the day before the Aug. 24 storm, the degree of uncertainty was so great an evacuation had to be ordered in flood zones from Key West to Vero Beach, a stretch of about 300 miles of coastline where 1.1 million people reside. Twelve hours earlier, the hurricane warning went as far north as Daytona Beach, covering almost 450 miles.

The storm itself, however, impacted only about a 30 mile-wide swath in southern Dade County.

To predict its course, Hurricane Center computers include data on water temperature, air pressure, wind direction and speed, as well as other variables.

But scientists have only a rudimentary understanding of some of those factors — and even a difference of a hundredth of a degree can throw a computer model way off.

Of the seven computer models used by the Hurricane Center, the most accurate is called NHC90. But in Andrew's case, NHC90 performed worse than several other models that are usually less reliable, said Jarrell.

There is some hope of improving predictions, however.

Teen charged in bizarre death

By The Associated Press

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. — A 16-year-old boy was charged by police in the bizarre beating death of a 78-year-old woman who was hit on the head with the youth's radio after she complained about the lyrics of a rap song he was listening to.

Victor Brancaccio told friends he beat and kicked Mollie Mae Frazier to death and left her body in a vacant lot near his home Friday night after she complained that the rap music contained obscenities, police said Monday.

The youth then returned to Frazier's body the following day to try to remove any fingerprints, said Martin County Medical Examiner Frederick Hobin.

Brancaccio first tried to burn her body with crumpled newspaper and matches, but he succeeded only in burning her shorts and part of a leg, authorities said. Brancaccio then spray-painted the woman's body red, leaving only her clothing untouched, Hobin said.

Friends of Frazier and Brancaccio were still in disbelief of the brutal beating.

"I still can't believe what happened," said Reggie Fleeman, who lives across the street from Frazier's St. Lucie home. "I don't understand how a child could do something like this."

At the Brancaccio home Monday, shocked relatives arrived to console each other while police searched the home, where they found a pair of bloody shorts and shoes, cans of red spray paint, a cassette player and other items linking the teen-ager to the crime, police chief Chuck Reynolds said.

Brancaccio's immediate family declined any comment.

Police said the case started to unfold after Brancaccio told four friends about the beating, and one of those told Larry Winchester, 24. After driving by the vacant lot Sunday night and seeing the woman's body, Winchester contacted police. By Monday morning, police had stopped Brancaccio as he drove to work and charged him with murder.

Brancaccio, who did lawn work and helped his parents at their pizza restaurant, gave a taped statement to police.

Assistant State Attorney David Morgan said he expects to take the case to a grand jury and seek a first-degree murder indictment. He said it's too early to say whether prosecutors will seek the death penalty if an indictment is issued.

Driving rain

Thunderstorms in Sanford are now a standard part of the afternoon schedule in Central Florida. Drivers along U.S. Highway 17-92 just north of Park Drive in Sanford splashed through the puddles as they made their way across town yesterday.

Escaped prisoner found in woods

By The Associated Press

GULFPORT, Miss. — Searchers caught a self-described serial killer early today, a little more than a day after the man escaped from prison.

Donald Leroy Evans was found in a woods shortly after daybreak and returned to the county jail, sheriff's deputies said.

Evans escaped with three other prisoners from the Harrison County jail Sunday night after one of the others pulled a homemade knife on a guard, authorities said. Anthony L. Hayes was still missing today.

The 35-year-old Evans boasted of killing 72 people on a 10-year multistate killing spree, but has been charged in only two slayings — a 10-year-old girl in Gulfport and another in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Authorities searched for Evans among thousands of tourists flocking to the area's sand and casinos. Traffic was bumper-to-bumper on one beach highway.

Officers dotted the coast with roadblocks, took to helicopters and unleashed dogs in pursuit of the escapees.

The jail complex is near Interstate 10, the congested east-west route that goes into New Orleans. It was the first escape from the 3-year-old lockup, which Sheriff Joe Price claims was inadequately staffed.

Evans is to go on trial Aug. 23 in the 1991 death of 10-year-old Beatrice Louise Routh of Gulfport. On Aug. 11, 1991, Evans led police to her decomposed nude body. She had been raped, sodomized and strangled.

He faces the death penalty if convicted. Evans was already serving a life sentence on federal kidnapping charges after pleading guilty to Beatrice's abduction.

Evans later was taken to Arizona and Texas to look for bodies of other victims he claimed to have murdered. Months later the investigation was quietly dropped. No bodies were found.

Evans also has been charged with murder in the death of Ira Jean Smith of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Husband and wife exhibit at gallery

SANFORD — A new exhibit is showing at First Street Gallery in downtown Sanford. Called "Husband & Wife In Contrast," it represents the work of Mark and Licia Priest.

Working mostly in acrylic on canvas and masonite, Mark Priest's paintings are described as bold, full of energy and telling a story. "This work portrays my experience while working on the railroad," he said. "Not trains, but with the conditions under which we worked."

A graduate of Yale University with a master's degree in art, he is an instructor at Seminole Community College.

Licia's sculptural abstracts reflect her studies in North Africa, and to some degree, her time spent at Parson's School of Design in New York, as well as her personal perspective as a mother.

She holds a BA degree in fine arts from the University of Louisville.

In honor of the exhibit, the gallery will be holding a reception for the couple Friday, June 18, from 5 until 8 p.m. The public is invited to attend, see the works, and meet the artists.

Summer hours are now in effect at the gallery. It is open from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday.

The "Husband & Wife Contrast" will be on exhibit at the gallery through July 8th.

For further information, phone the First Street Gallery, 203 E. First Street in Sanford, at 323-9178.

Dealing with kids vandalizing their schools

Within a few days prior to and after the end of the school term, eight separate crimes were reported at area schools. They ranged from grand theft to massive damage.

Sheriff's spokesman George Proechel said this was a relatively quiet year compared to previous end-of-school periods.

Proechel may have been correct. The crimes however, did occur, and people should take a serious look at the situation.

Is this a case of youngsters getting revenge for poor grades? Are they displeased with the efforts they must make to obtain an education?

Some of the thefts may be the result of a student who is aware of an item in a classroom, and believes it can be stolen easily after school closes for the semester. Such could have been the case with the theft of a $2,546 balance scale from Seminole High School, or two musical instruments valued at $1,100 from the bandroom at Greenwood Lakes Middle School in Lake Mary.

We can only wonder what it will take to convince youngsters that theft and destruction of school property is not an example of good citizenship.

Lake Mary police have tentatively identified four juveniles they believe may have been involved in a massive vandalism at Lake Mary Elementary School last Saturday.

No doubt, other law enforcement agencies will eventually find who caused the other incidents.

There are certain restrictions on publishing the names of juveniles, unless they are to be tried as adults for a crime. This is to prevent embarrassment.

A bad name, brought on by a childish prank should not be held against someone throughout their growing years. But when thousands of dollars of equipment and/or damage is the result, we believe it has ceased to be a mere prank.

What will it take to end this annual outburst of crime during the last days of school?

Proechel says this year was less violent than the past. Perhaps if there was a severe crack-down this year, next year would be more crime free.

Cops seeking to arrest children may sound un-American. But cops seeking out criminals, regardless of their age, is necessary.

Mis-used phrases

Three of the most overworked, overused and almost criminally mis-used phrases in today's American society are: "It's unconstitutional," "That's discrimination" and "I'm gonna sue." Hardly a day goes by when we don't read or hear of someone or some group of someone's bellowing one or more of those phrases.

Seems like everytime something different comes up there's somebody around to holler "It's unconstitutional" or "That's discrimination," "You can't do that." It also seems like there is never a shortage of lawyers around just chaffing at the bit to help them with their "I'm gonna sue" attitude.

Speaking of lawyers and lawsuits in the same breath brings to mind a story about a hypothetical group of lawyers attending a hypothetical dinner party given by a hypothetical judge at his home in honor of something or other.

It seems that, while eating and drinking at this dinner party, lawyer #1 suddenly developed a bad case of hiccups...and promptly "sued for damages."

Lawyer #2 was genuinely enjoying the dinner party until he looked around and discovered that "his hiccups" were missing...and promptly sued lawyer #1 for "theft of personal property."

Lawyer #3 who was quietly eating and drinking, minding his own business, paying no heed to lawyers #1 and #2 until they got physical and knocked a cup of scaldingly hot coffee into his lap...promptly sued lawyers #1 and #2 for "pain and suffering."

Needless to say, the application of the scaldingly hot coffee to lawyer #3's lap quickly activated his vocal chords wherein he loudly and ferociously questioned the ancestry of lawyers #1 and #2, until lawyer #4 (an alleged lady) promptly sued lawyer #3 for his verbal assault on her eardrums with "language unfit for human consumption."

It was shortly after this that their host, the judge, instructed his wife, lawyer #5, to sue lawyers 1, 2, 3 and 4 for "disrupting the peace and tranquility of their dinner party" and then promptly threw the dinner guests bodily out of the house. End of story.

Now, before you legal beagles out there get hot under the collar and get so warped out of shape that even your mothers wouldn't recognize you...back off. After all — this was a "hypothetical dinner party" story about something or other.

However, if the shoe fits....

What are the roots of homelessness?

Back in the days when the homeless problem was in vogue, before the politically correct set began adorning their breasts with red ribbons to prove their empathy for AIDS victims, I decided to investigate for myself whether the economic policies of Ronald Reagan were to blame for the growing legions of street people who seemed suddenly to have invaded America's cities.

So I spent a night at New York's Grand Central Station, which was a favorite gathering place for many of the city's homeless. I chatted with scores of the dispossessed who passed through the doors that night.

I quickly discovered that, contrary to the news reportage at that time, the homeless were not "people like you and me" who simply had fallen upon hard times. I saw, for instance, no yuppies in threadbare suits sifting through the trash bins for a discarded Wall Street Journal. I saw no middle-class families huddled on benches with all their worldly possessions in tow.

What I did see were dozens upon dozens of pitiable men and women who were suffering from some dysfunction or another. Some were afflicted with mental problems. Others were drug or alcohol abusers. Clearly their homelessness owed not to economic dislocation, as I had been led to believe, but simply to self-destruction.

It is now eight years later, yet we're still hearing the same explanations of the nature and causes of homelessness. Homeless advocacy organizations continue to promulgate the myth that homelessness is primarily an economic problem rather than a mental health and substance-abuse problem.

Among the more prominent purveyors of this misinformation is the National Law Center on Homelessness and Poverty, which, as its name suggests, sees a link between poverty and the growing hordes of street people.

It notes that 40 percent of poor people spend two-thirds of their income on housing. "This means that for growing millions of Americans, a missed paycheck, a health crisis or a high utility bill brings the threat of homelessness," the lawyers assert.

The law center advocates were less than happy with President Clinton's recent executive order calling for a homeless plan to be developed within nine months. They saw no reason why he shouldn't have given his imprimatur to a plan that they already have drawn up.

So what is the lawyers' solution to the homeless problem? Have the federal government turn over former military bases and other vacant property to the homeless. Create a jobs program for them. Give them income assistance. Offer them day care and health care. And, oh yes, remind them of their right to vote.

It's the typical liberal response to a social problem — spend more money, create new programs. Meanwhile, they miss the boat. In 1963, there were as many poor people in America as there are today. And they spent much of their income on housing. Yet, in 1963, the only homeless seen in cities and towns across the country were the occasional bums and hobos.

Two things happened between 1963 and 1993 to give us the present homeless population: All but the most dangerous patients were disgorged from state mental hospitals, and illegal drug use exploded.

This is borne out by a 1992 survey conducted by the U.S. Conference of Mayors (which, ironically, continues to view homelessness as primarily an economic problem).

Health-care details now clear

WASHINGTON — A value-added tax to finance the Clinton health-care package is a dead idea. It will be paid for instead by various new taxes and fees. This and other facts about the plan were given to top Democrats as they left town for the 10-day Memorial Day recess.

Each Democrat received from the White House a 10-page, 25-answer talking paper marked "confidential." Its purpose was to allow congressmen to begin drumming up support for the president's plan by being able to answer the most anticipated questions by constituents. Many of the suggested answers reveal parts of the plan not yet publicly confirmed.

The most controversial aspect of the health-care package has been the value-added-tax trial balloon floated by the White House some weeks ago. It was confirmed that a VAT, a kind of national sales tax, was being considered as a way of financing universal health coverage.

The talking paper makes it clear that this idea has been rejected. Instead, the plan will be financed by a series of new and higher "sin taxes" — on cigarettes, liquor — as well as by new taxes on health-care providers, new and higher payroll taxes, and by fees charged to employers and employees who are covered under the plan.

The plan was to have been ready in May; now the White House says it will be July at the earliest before it is unveiled. Insiders are actually saying it might not be made public until November. The reason is given is that the additional time is needed to iron out all the bugs, but these same insiders say the two reasons are really to allow support to be built in key groups before the plan is announced, and to prevent the plan's controversial funding mechanisms from interfering with passage of the budget.

In the talking paper, congressmen were urged to lay the blame for the present health-care mess on five villains: soaring costs, too much paperwork, profiteering health-care providers, bureaucrats and insurance companies that offer too little coverage at too great a cost.

The central theme of the sales pitch: "It cracks down on the health profiteers who are making a killing off the present system, rather than taxing the middle class." At the same time, the new program will be said to try to eliminate "those crazy lawsuits," referring to malpractice tort reform, a bone being thrown to doctors to gain their support.

Over and over, friendly congressmen were told to allay fears that patients will not be allowed to choose their own physicians and that the quality of health care will suffer under the Clinton plan.

"There will be less interference than there is by insurance companies now," the Democratic congressmen were urged to argue if asked about physician selection. They were told to say that questions raised by groups about health-care quality under the plan "are just scare tactics being used by special interests that profit from the current status quo."

The talking paper recognizes that small insurance companies are already arguing the plan — which is said to primarily utilize the huge health-insurance companies — will put them out of business. Congressmen were urged to argue that health insurance is only a small fraction of the overall insurance market, and that "well-managed companies will simply put greater emphasis on other kinds of insurance."

Democratic political strategists have already concluded that Clinton's presidency will be judged in great measure on whether the health-care plan is adopted and is a success, or whether it is cut to pieces in Congress and fails to bring about the systemic change Americans seem to want.

Privately, some Democratic insiders are putting it starkly: If the health-care plan succeeds, Clinton will likely win re-election; if it fails, he will probably be a one-term president. So the Democratic National Committee is planning a $37 million-dollar blitz to whip up support for the plan.

Originally the DNC planned to announce the formation of a not-for-profit foundation to fund the so-called "National Health Care Campaign." The money was to be raised entirely from private sources, and because of the not-for-profit nature of the foundation, donations would likely be declared tax deductible.

The plan brought a groundswell of opposition, not only from Republicans, but also from inside the White House where questions were raised about the ethics of using tax-deductible donations to sell health-care reform.

So, DNC Chairman David Wilhelm has announced that the National Health Care Campaign will become an official DNC "project," which will be financed through normal Democratic Party channels. The DNC will make a major effort to sell the Clinton plan to the nation. The future of the Democratic Party in the White House may depend on it.

A value added tax to finance the Clinton health care package is a dead idea.

JACK ANDERSON

Byrd pushes original charge

WASHINGTON — In a year when the halls of Congress echo with shouts of "change," at least one member of the Senate's Old Guard wants his colleagues to remember the analogy of the coffee cup and the saucer.

Senate President pro tempore Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., recently reminded us of the conversation between George Washington and Thomas Jefferson to illustrate what's wrong with the institution he has served for more than 33 years.

As he relates it, the House of Representatives is the cup, where emotions, like the proverbial coffee, are hot and action can often be swift and reactionary. The Senate is the saucer, where the product has a chance to cool down.

"(The Senate) is supposed to be a forum of debate, and a forum in which a subject can be studied, debated, amended, maybe killed," Byrd told us recently. In testimony before the Joint Committee on the Organization of Congress last February, Byrd put it even more succinctly: "The Senate has lost its soul."

This was supposed to be a watershed year for congressional Democrats, especially committee chairmen, who have spent the past dozen years pitted against Republican presidents. The Democrats control both houses of Congress, and have one of their own in the White House. Lawmakers were falling over each other to declare an end to "politics as usual." Candidate Clinton won rousing applause at the Democratic National Convention by declaring war on the "brain-dead politics of Capitol Hill." The goblins of gridlock were supposed to be defeated at last.

Where does Byrd fit into this picture? Senators from both sides of the aisle, as well as current and former staffers, suggest that Byrd is a victim of a crisis of confidence — not in the Clinton administration, but in the place he loves more than anything else: the U.S. Senate. In the telegenic, hyperkinetic world of 1990s Washington, Byrd may be at once a reminder of the past and a harbinger of things to come.

Some Byrd intimates describe him as "really unhappy" and "emotionally down" at the beginning of the current legislative session. Like most people who try to psychoanalyze Byrd, our sources insisted on anonymity. No political figure at once elicits the combination of fear and respect that greets any questions about the chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee. Even the greenest Capitol Hill freshmen know that the only thing more powerful than Byrd's control over discretionary domestic spending — road, highways — is his memory.

It's a memory strengthened by discipline and fertilized by decades of self-education. In the midst of his Senate chores and a reading list packed thick with ancient philosophers, Byrd has also found the time to pen a 1,300-page, two-volume account of Senate history. Now he finds himself in a political climate where progress no longer seems to be measured by the quality of the laws that pass, but by the speed with which Congress can get its work done.

"The Founding Fathers did not have in mind making this Senate an 'efficient,' smoothly operating piece of legislative machinery," Byrd told us. "It was meant to slow down the process." In the course of a 90-minute interview, Byrd returns frequently to the theme of change vs. continuity. And as the joint committee hears testimony and studies ways for Congress to reform its process — one proposal wants to eliminate the Appropriations Committee altogether — Byrd has a prescription that many senators perhaps do not wish to hear.

At least one member of the Senate's Old Guard wants his colleagues to remember the analogy of the coffee cup and the saucer.

Hurricane blew melaleuca seeds across everglades

By Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH — Officials worry that just as huge quantities of melaleuca seeds may have been blown across the Everglades by Hurricane Andrew, the budget to wipe out the menacing trees is being cut.

South Florida Water Management District officials are spending $1 million to wipe out melaleuca trees this year. But that amount would be cut in half next year under the proposed budget.

Executive Director Tilford Creel said his agency needs help with the two-year anti-melaleuca campaign. But state and federal officials, who are spending considerably less than water managers, insist that they can't afford to play a bigger role in the battle.

Concerns about melaleuca were heightened after Andrew's 140 mph winds ripped through south Dade County on Aug. 24. Experts suspect that the storm scattered vast amounts of seeds from melaleuca forests lining the eastern edge of the Everglades.

An abnormally rainy dry season has allowed officials to keep much of the Everglades inundated for the past several months, raising hopes that many of the melaleuca seeds drowned before they could take root.

It is too soon to tell whether enough seeds have survived to pose a threat to tree islands damaged by Andrew, said Tom Armenato, the acting research director at Everglades National Park.

But a lack of money is forcing experts to search for novel — and inexpensive — weapons against the imported Australian tree that covers about 500,000 acres in the Everglades and is spreading by up to 50 acres per day.

The only proven method for killing the hardy trees is a time-consuming process in which herbicides are squirted on gashes cut into its bark.

However, a promising new tactic involving an Australian weevil, which resembles a small fly, and the native black fungus may be used later this year to attack the plants.

Melaleuca trees, which consume three to six times as much water as sawgrass and other native plants, were imported to South Florida in the early 1900s to help drain wetlands.

A lack of natural enemies enabled the tree to flourish in recent decades. Melaleuca trees are growing in dense stands throughout the fragile ecosystem that are thick enough to keep sunlight from reaching the ground. Native plants and animals must struggle to survive in these areas.

submit documents to prove the house is his full-time residence.

"I am definitely going to appeal the decision," Howell said.

Last fall Howell signed an oath to qualify for re-election to his commission seat, specifying his legal residence as 1109 Park Ave. in Sanford.

Earlier, in an application to enter his son in Volusia County schools, Howell had also signed a statement indicating his residence was in DeBary. Howell said he does not recall signing the statement.

Suber said the decision for denial was partially based on those statements.

In his statement, Howell said, "First of all, I want to thank those who have stuck with me during this past year, while I was trying to get my son situated in a special school. These efforts, as well as personal business trips have taken me out of town a great deal recently."

Howell said his son has now been enrolled in a special school elsewhere in the state.

"I have been in Sanford as much as possible," he said, "but in the daytime hours when many people are at work and don't have time to reach me. But I still feel I have been and am still available to the people of my district."

He said a DeBary friend, Laura Sollien, has helped with his son. "I couldn't have made it without her assistance," he commented. Sollien was present at the work session.

"But on July 19, she and her children will be moving to Sanford and joining me at my home at 1109 Park Avenue," he said.

Following Howell's announcement at the work session, Mayor Bettye Smith supplied each of the commissioners with copies of the opinion she requested from the city attorney on the eligibility requirements for commissioners.

"This is not any suggestion or accusation," Smith said. "I just asked for a clarification on this matter, and am presenting it to each of you for your information."

"I don't believe anything further needs to be said," she added.

Colbert's opinion states residency requirements for persons serving on the commission. Included was the state law requiring commissioners to be "...a legal resident of the county where he wishes to register."

The opinion also states commission candidates must be residents of the district in which the candidate runs for commission office.

Referring to the 1984 redistricting in Sanford and the Florida Statutes, Colbert wrote, "These two documents require seated commissioners to be qualified voters of the City of Sanford and legal residents of the district in which they run."

"The city commission is the judge of the qualifications of its members and of the grounds for forfeiture of their office," he wrote.

"The city commission has the power to subpoena witnesses, administer oaths and require the production of evidence to determine if a commissioner is qualified to continue to hold his or her office."

Howell did not bring the subject of his residency up during the regular meeting of the city commission last night.

Following the meeting, Howell said he had nothing further to say about the matter, and that he will be concentrating on getting his homebased exemption denial overturned.

drivers door. Damage was estimated at $300.

Also this past Monday, a girl student reported getting doused with water by another student in the hallway of Lake Mary High School. She told police when she asked for an apology, the boy student struck her several times.

Prochel said the sheriff's Department is also investigating a girl at Milwee Middle School who was apparently stabbed by another girl with a pencil.

A 10 speed bike, valued at $130 was reportedly stolen Sunday from Eastbrook Elementary School in Winter Park.

Lake Mary police meanwhile, are completing reports regarding the vandalizing of Lake Mary Elementary School on Saturday.

Two boys, age 8, and two girls, ages 7 and 13, are being accused of causing extensive damage to eight classrooms, and breaking 22 windows.

"There weren't major crimes as in the past," Prochel said. "Most of the reason is because our law enforcement agencies are better preparing school personnel to expect problems like these."

Investigators find problems at center for AIDS babies

By Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH — State investigators said Florida's only designated shelter for babies infected with AIDS has several problems.

The Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services found during a six-week investigation of Connor's Nursery that it had malfunctioning medical equipment, lax supervision of narcotics and lack of staff training.

The investigation of the 3-year-old facility began last month, after a letter from former volunteer Rita Reilly of Royal Palm Beach raised concerns about the way the children were being treated.

Reilly said she made her complaint after being told unqualified people handled medication and equipment.

"To me that was putting a child at risk," she said. "And to say they wanted to open Connor's Two was more than I could deal with."

Among some of the findings were narcotics boxes were found unlocked, three non-medical workers had to change IV bags, monitors used to alert if children stopped breathing in their sleep regularly malfunctioned, and only two employees were on duty at night.

"We have to see [the investigation] as a positive thing," said Kathy Carter, executive director of the nursery. "We are always striving to provide the finest care possible. These things brought to my eyes some things we can do better."

More nurses will be hired to cover the four 12-hour shifts that lack supervision, costing $130,000 a year. New employees will be tested on their duties before working and trained by a nurse on medical procedures during their first three days on the job.

In a letter to Connor's board President Thomas Devline, HRS officials praised Carter's responsiveness but noted that her administrative duties may have distracted her from the social-work aspects of her job.

The 12-bed nursery, the first of its kind in Florida, opened three years ago to serve children from infancy to age 6 who test positive for the AIDS virus. Named after Connor Cray, the founder's nephew who died of the disease, the center has been visited by former first lady Barbara Bush; Sarah Ferguson, the Duchess of York; and folk singer Arlo Guthrie.

Poll says more may flee from next hurricane

By Associated Press

MIAMI — The closer people were to Hurricane Andrew's wrath, the stronger their feelings were about evacuating the next time a storm approaches, a poll indicates.

The survey said officials will encounter less public resistance than emergency agencies usually expect when mandatory evacuation orders are given.

"As you go south, the percentage of people who were afraid for their lives increases significantly," said professor Juan Clark, whose sociology students at Miami-Dade Community College conducted the poll.

The after-Andrew survey was of 1,160 people in randomly chosen neighborhoods where storm damage ranged from minor to widespread devastation.

A sense of urgency was greatest in the worst-hit places on matters of pre-hurricane readiness, post-hurricane help and resolve to get out of their homes fast the next time a hurricane threatens.

The farther south people lived, the nearer to Andrew's center, the stronger their feelings on those issues.

Andrew struck south Dade County on Aug. 24, becoming the world's most costliest nature disaster. The powerful, but relatively compact, hurricane caused more than $30 billion in damage to areas south of the city of Miami.

The poll said 39.6 percent of those surveyed said they intend to get out of town before the next storm arrives. North of downtown Miami, only 30 percent will leave town, but south of the Cutler Ridge area of Dade County that was heavily damaged, 53 percent said they will leave.

In another question, 43 percent of the respondents, even those in northern Dade County which sustained far less damage, admitted to fearing for their lives during the hurricane.

Fugitive

warrant for his arrest on charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution was issued in March of 1989.

Yesterday morning, he was found in Sanford after he voluntarily had himself admitted into the Bay Avenue Crisis Center for drug treatment.

"We don't know how long he had been living in the Sanford area or if he was living in the Sanford area at all," Special Agent Larry Curtin of the FBI office in Tampa, said. "We know that he was receiving treatment at the Bay Avenue Crisis Center and that is where he was arrested."

According to Curtin, the FBI was involved once Brockton Police failed to find him and had reason to believe he had left the state.

"We conducted an investigation and located him in Sanford," Curtin said.

Enos said that Brockton Police hoped to have him back in their jurisdiction within a month.

Sanford Police assisted U.S. Marshalls and the FBI with yesterday's arrest, but Stein was turned over to the Orange County sheriff's office and is presently in the Orange County Jail where he is awaiting extradition.

According to Curtin, the federal charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution will be dropped this afternoon. Authorities in Brockton will handle the case on the assault and battery charges and on the weapons charges when Stein returns there.

Consumer prices up just 0.1%

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices edged up a tiny 0.1 percent in May as the biggest drop in energy costs in more than two years helped offset a sharp jump in food prices, the government said today.

The small advance in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index was welcome news after a worrisome 0.4 percent April surge. The Clinton administration is hoping that an easing of inflationary pressures will convince the Federal Reserve that it has no need to boost interest rates.

President Clinton met for an hour last week with Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan amid a steady drumbeat from administration officials that they saw no reason at the present time to be worried about inflation.

So far this year, consumer prices are rising at an annual rate of 3.8 percent, compared to last year's 2.9 percent rise. Many analysts believe that the price moderation seen in the May report will continue in coming months and for the year inflation will be only slightly higher than last year.

Robert Diell, an economist at Northern Trust Co. in Chicago, said the good inflation news in May following April's scary report should convince the Fed to keep interest rates unchanged.

"All the things that went wrong in April seemed to have gotten better," Diell said.

For May, energy prices dropped 1 percent, the biggest decline since March 1991. Fuel oil costs were down 1.2 percent and gasoline costs were down an even sharper 2.5 percent.

The good news on energy was offset somewhat by continued inflation at grocery stores, where prices were up 0.6 percent, their biggest advance since last August. More than two-thirds of that advance reflected sharp increases in fruit and vegetable prices, which were up 2.1 percent in May.

The price increase was led by the biggest jump in tomato prices in almost 2½ years, a 48.2 percent surge. Lettuce prices, however, were down, falling 8.3 percent last month.

Fruit prices also registered their first increase in six months, rising by 1.4 percent.

Excluding the volatile food and energy categories, inflation was up a tiny 0.2 percent in May.

Consumer prices performed even better than expected. The good news on retail prices followed an equally encouraging report last Friday that wholesale prices held steady in May.

Outside of food and energy, medical costs were up 0.8 percent in May, the biggest jump of any single category. The Clinton administration is still working on a health care plan that the president has promised will hold down soaring medical costs while extending coverage to 37 million uninsured Americans.

The May inflation reports were a dramatic change from the April performance, which had prompted widespread concern that inflation could be getting out of hand.

At a strategy session last month, officials at the Federal Reserve reportedly voted to give Greenspan authority to push interest rates higher if inflationary pressures persist.

Such a development would have spelled trouble for the administration, which is counting on interest rates staying low to offset the economic drag from the tax hikes and spending cuts

The request for the special event permit and waiver of police costs were approved during the regular commission meeting by a unanimous vote.

According to Alford, "We've planned a day with food, fun and festivities, and it's going to be a big event."

Alford, along with Adamson, Jaycees Vice President Henry Hardy, and members John Schinke and Bill Griffin, will be personally calling on area merchants and organizations seeking financial support for the July 4th celebration.

"This year to date," Alford said, "we have collected $3,594 and need the balance of $3,906 to accomplish a $7,000 contract for the fireworks, and $500 for the car show and festivities."

The pyrotechnics this year will be done by Santore Brothers, of Garden State Fireworks, Inc.

Louisiana men report finding syringes in Pepsi cans

By The Associated Press

Syringes reportedly found in Pepsi cans in Missouri and Ohio brought to six the number of tampering cases police and the Food and Drug Administration are investigating.

The most recent cases followed reports of two syringes found in cans of Pepsi in Louisiana and two in Washington state.

"We can't speculate on whether they're related," Anne Ward, a spokesman at Pepsi Cola's New York headquarters, said Monday. "It really could be anything."

A man in St. Charles, Mo., who asked that his name be withheld, said he found the syringe in a can of Diet Pepsi he bought Monday at a gas station in the St. Louis suburb, said police Sgt. Gaylord Daleen.

After tasting the beverage, he spat it on the ground because it tasted terrible. He then looked inside the can and saw the syringe, Daleen said. The man drove himself to a hospital and was treated after complaining of a burning sensation in his mouth.

Also Monday, Deborah Garner of the Akron, Ohio, suburb of Cuyahoga Falls found a broken syringe in a Diet Pepsi can, WKYC-TV in Cleveland reported. She videotaped her son emptying the can and two parts of a syringe falling out. She gave the tape, the can and the syringe to FDA investigators.

On Sunday, Lenny Schouest, a New Orleans shipyard worker, said he bought a can of regular Pepsi Sunday and a bent needle cut his lip when he took a swallow. He said he and the store owner emptied the drink into a cup and the needle and syringe fell out.

Schouest said he had not heard about the needles found in Washington until reporters told him.

A spokesman for the New Orleans Pepsi distributor, Bryan Quarls, said another man, Antoine Lewis, reported finding a needle in a Pepsi can Monday morning.

"We are taking the claims very seriously," Quarls said. "But we're looking at it as an isolated incident."

A woman in Southern California also claimed Monday that she was struck in the gums by a syringe found inside a sealed Diet Coke can, but Los Angeles police said that incident appeared to be a hoax.

After the two incidents in Washington state, the FDA advised people in Washington, Oregon, Alaska, Hawaii and Guam to inspect Diet Pepsi cans closely and pour the soda into another container before drinking.

'Jurassic Park' sets two box office records

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES — The dinosaurs running amok at "Jurassic Park" sold nearly 10 million tickets during opening weekend for the Steven Spielberg film, bringing in a record-setting $50.2 million. Last year's "Batman Returns" had held the record for the highest-grossing premiere weekend with $47.7 million.

Assuming an average national ticket price of $5.20, "Jurassic Park" was seen by an estimated 9.65 million moviegoers. "Batman," which opened in 1989, when tickets cost an average of $4.44, collected $42.7 million — or about 9.62 million tickets sold. "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial," the highest-grossing film of all time, made $1.18 billion in its first weekend in 1982, approximately 4 million tickets sold.

Ticket sales for movies released before 1980 cannot be compared because ticket price averages are unavailable and movies debuted in far fewer theaters.

Trailing "Jurassic Park" at the box office was Sylvester Stallone's "Cliffhanger," which brought in $7.6 million. "Made in America" was third with $4.7 million.

Rounding out the Top 10 were the Don Johnson thriller "Gully as Sin," with $3.7 million; "Dave," with $3 million; "Menace II Society," with $2.6 million; the Michael J. Fox comedy "Life With Mikey," with $2.1 million; "Hot Shots! Part Deux," with $2.09 million; "Silver," with $2.04 million and "Super Mario Brothers," with $1.7 million.

Here are Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.'s estimated ticket sales Friday through Sunday, with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater locations, average per location, total gross and number of weeks in release.

Search for Supreme Court justice: 'Torture'

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Wearing a purple shirt and matching slacks, President Clinton returned from shopping with daughter Chelsea and strode into the Oval Office to review a report on his Supreme Court finalists. Shortly, he looked up at a handful of aides and said "I'm going with Judge Ginsburg."

Thus ended what one senior administration official called "three months of torture" — a nerve-fraying expedition of twists and turns across a political mine field where another misstep meant another explosion.

According to aides who agreed to discuss Clinton's appointment on condition they would not be identified, the odyssey began in earnest March 20, the day Clinton and his staff concurred on a list of 50 judges, politicians, academics and lawyers to be examined for the upcoming Supreme Court vacancy. Federal judges Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Stephen Breyer of Boston and Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt were on that list.

Some names were added, several of them by the president; others were dropped. Eventually, exhaustive biographies were prepared on 42 candidates, and 3,000 opinions and 5,000 articles were reviewed by 75 outside lawyers working at no charge.

"We'd narrow it down a bit, and he'd turn and say, 'Hey, what about what's-his-face?'" one aide said of Clinton. The method puzzled even Clinton's top aides, who often disagreed about who was the leading candidate.

Heading into the final week, Clinton narrowed the field to Babbitt and Breyer after scratching federal appeals court Judge Gilbert Merritt of Tennessee. Merritt, backed by Vice President Al Gore, was hampered by an old and unsubstantiated accusation of interfering with a federal investigation.

Babbitt's stock slid late in the week when environmentalists lobbied Clinton to keep him at Interior. The president called Western governors to question them about the negative ramifications of appointing Babbitt.

Republicans grumbled that he would be too political.

While Babbitt was fading, Clinton told his staff to take another look at Ginsburg, a federal appellate judge in Washington, D.C., in case he wanted to pass on Breyer. The president told senators at midweek that he was considering Breyer, Babbitt and Ginsburg.

Summoned from a hospital bed following treatment for a bicycle accident, Breyer met with Clinton on Friday as the apparent front-runner. Aides said publicly that the interview went well. But Breyer came nowhere close to matching the chemistry Clinton sensed in his meeting with Ginsburg on Sunday, aides said.

While Breyer was lunching at the White House, Ginsburg was attending a judicial conference at a retreat in Irvington, Va. Her husband, Martin, pulled her from a meeting for a call from the White House, and she scheduled a Saturday meeting with White House counsel Bernard Nussbaum.

On Friday night, White House aides showed television crews where they would be positioned for the next morning's announcement. Inside the White House, Clinton surprised his dinner guests by saying Breyer had failed to pay Social Security taxes for household help. He asked if that would make his confirmation difficult.

Clinton met past midnight with key advisers to go over the choices. He decided to drop Babbitt, and ordered his staff to crank up the final review process of Ginsburg to give him an alternative to Breyer.

"I'm going to sleep on it," a bleary-eyed Clinton told the group, breaking up the meeting. If the momentum had not already shifted, it certainly did when CBS News reported Saturday that Breyer had failed to pay Social Security.

The White House insisted that the tax issue did not disqualify Breyer. But a senior administration official acknowledged "it was a factor that was weighed."

While Breyer's tax troubles were being made public Saturday, Ginsburg met with Nussbaum. The next day, Clinton met with her for nearly 90 minutes at the White House. Aides said he was moved by how closely her life seemed to match her judicial philosophy.

Sunday night, Clinton had the White House operator place a call to Ginsburg's home, but it took two tries to get through. "Did I wake you up?" the president asked. But because of static on the line, Clinton asked Ginsburg to hang up so he could call again.

"If I'm going to propose, I might as well have a good line," he joked.

A profile: Ginsburg relishes the pleasure of being No. 2

By MIKE FEINSLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Standing in the brilliant sunshine on the White House lawn, towered over by the president, Ruth Bader Ginsburg seemed to delight in being the second woman ever put forward for the Supreme Court. It exactly made her point.

She embodied her own argument that it shouldn't be so extraordinary for a woman to have a place at the table.

Her appointment, she said in a speech that brought tears to President Clinton's eyes, "contributes to the end of the days when women, at least half the talent pool in our society, appear in high places only as one-at-a-time performers."

It was quite a different answer than the one Sandra Day O'Connor gave at a confirmation hearing 12 years ago when senators asked what she wanted history to say about her.

"Ah," smiled O'Connor, "the tombstone question," and while she said she'd be pleased if her tombstone said simply, "Here lies a good judge," she added that she would be happy to be known as the first woman on the court.

With her, suggested Ginsburg Monday, the continuum had begun, the logical conclusion to a revolution she'd helped start.

Clinton, rather than dwell on Ginsburg's gender, stressed her work. On the court, he said, she would be "a force for consensus-building ... an instrument of our common unity."

Those who know Ginsburg as a judge — President Carter put her on the Circuit Court of Appeals here 13 years ago — praise her reasoned, restrained approach and her respect for the powers of the other branches of government.

Those who knew her as a lawyer for women's rights cite her as an inventive advocate for a theory now taken for granted, that women are constitutionally equal to men.

The Constitution doesn't say that, and Ginsburg, as an ACLU lawyer, had to find the words there that would allow a court to read it her way. She found them in the post-Civil War 14th Amendment, adopted to guarantee the legal rights of former slaves.

"She invented that constitutional theory," said Jane Larson, a law professor at Northwestern University. "To have called her a moderate 25 years ago would have been ridiculous."

At 60, her dark hair pulled tightly back, she is a private person, married for 39 years to her sweetheart from her teens.

"She's not a backslapper," says an admirer, Janet Benshoof, president of the Center for Reproductive Law and Policy.

"She's very shy," adds Kathleen Peratla, a former colleague at the American Civil Liberties Union. "She hardly ever talks about herself. She talks about business and her grandchildren."

Peratla adds: "She has enormous dignity and enormous gravity. That's the reason the president didn't hang her out like he did the others he considered. You don't mess with Ruth."

Ginsburg came to her radical-in-its-day feminism the hard way, on experience street.

Accepted as one of a handful of women at Harvard Law School (and already a mother) and graduated from Columbia Law School in New York (and a member of the law reviews of both), she still couldn't get a job in New York practicing law.

She had to settle for clerking for a judge.

(By coincidence, Justice O'Connor, only three years her senior, tells a similar story. "I interviewed with law firms in Los Angeles and San Francisco," she once told an interviewer, "but none had ever hired a woman before as a lawyer, and they were not prepared to do so.")

Ginsburg taught law at Rutgers and Columbia and wrote extensively on women's rights and sex-based discrimination.

By the time she had made a name for herself, Harvard officials offered a law degree, based on her two years of work there, but she turned them down.

Richard Epstein, a friend, said she often told about the time the Harvard Law dean invited the women law students to his home and, in the course of a social evening, remarked to them, "You know, all of you are taking the place of a qualified man."

Ginsburg's husband, Martin, teaches and practices tax law in Washington. He and she both rate biographies on the same page of Who's Who in America.

At home, he cooks. She doesn't like to, and he does, so early in their marriage she liberated herself from the kitchen.

"Marty is a first-rate cook and always has been," says Peratla. "When I have them for dinner, I always hold my breath." She said she doesn't worry about the judge's verdict, but rather the judge's spouse's opinion.

Miles of cabinets and millions of objects: Smithsonian's hidden stuff

By KIM I. MILLS
Associated Press Writer

SUITLAND, Md. — Vince Wilcox opened a set of double fire doors, stepped into a storage room the size of a football field and flipped on a tier of lights. Stretched before him in semi-darkness were rows of neat white storage cabinets that hide untold treasures.

Inside are the Smithsonian's leftovers — Oriental rugs, Japanese armor, Indian pottery, African textiles, petrified wood.

This is the Smithsonian Institution's Museum Support Center, a low-slung, sandy-colored building, which spreads over 4.5 acres of suburban Washington. It is the world's largest museum storage facility.

Closed to the public, it houses the millions of bones, animals, plants, insects, minerals and anthropological objects that the Smithsonian has no room for at its Natural History and American History museums a few miles to the west.

"Of course, the Smithsonian is always short on space," said Wilcox, the facility's director, during a tour of the facility. "But the idea of having a museum that doesn't grow is ridiculous."

The Smithsonian already has about 140 million objects, and continues to acquire about a half-million more per year, spokeswoman Linda St. Thomas said.

Preservation and study are the goals of the center, but the two aims are not compatible, Wilcox said.

"The optimum environment for preservation is not the optimum environment for research and study," he said. "If you want to preserve the objects, you want to lock them away in the dark ... and especially keep them away from people, who are the greatest risk to collections."

The Museum Support Center is uniquely designed to marry its competing missions. The main storage areas are four separate, climate-controlled "pods," each the size of a football field, with walls a foot-and-a-half thick. Wilcox said a fire could burn inside a pod for more than four hours before breaching a door — a safety feature that protects the rest of the collections.

The pods are separated from laboratories by a brightly painted hallway, called "the street," three stories high and wide enough for a truck or forklift.

Wilcox and Deborah Hull-Walaki, who oversees the anthropology collections, walked down the zigzagging street, past blown-up photos of staffers on the walls, under stuffed whales and sailfish hanging overhead.

Inside an anthropology pod, Hull-Walaki opened several cabinets to reveal multicolored African textiles that smelled faintly woody, Apache baskets and Hopi kachina dolls carefully wrapped in paper. The center has about 10,000 specially designed cabinets, which if set in a direct line would stretch over 8 miles, Wilcox said. The doors seal tightly, to keep out insects and dirt, and the cabinets are coated with an inert paint that won't interact with the specimens.

In a work area, anthropologist Marc Frank directed four young staffers as they sorted through thousands of bones, from tiny fragments to huge, tawny limbs. In the shadows around them, the skulls of giant horned mammals loomed on shelves, staring down with empty eye sockets.

Why does the Smithsonian collect so many bones? "Anyone who's doing biological research is interested in a statistically significant sample," Frank explained.

So, if a researcher is comparing rhino jaws over time and location, he would want to look at as many as he could find from as many habitats as possible, Frank said.

"Even with all the specimens here, they're not enough for scientists to get a significant sample," he said. "They have to go to other museums, too."

Next to people, one of the biggest dangers to the collections is insects, Wilcox said. In fact, the center has one employee whose fulltime job is pest management.

Tucked in a drawer with some hippopotamus bones was a "Mr. Sticky" bug trap, a little cardboard tent lined with an adhesive.

"We have 2,000, maybe 2,500, of these insect traps," Wilcox said. "What's interesting about these is the insect gets stuck, it dies, it drops its egg cases and the eggs hatch and all the little ones are caught in here."

Lake Mary Mudcats cruise to NABF opening win

By GARY COATOAM
Herald Correspondent

WINTER PARK — The Lake Mary Mudcats used timely hits to take advantage of five errors by Lake Howell Bates Team Sports as they claimed a 7-3 victory in an NABF (National Amateur Baseball Federation) contest at Lake Howell High School on Monday night.

The game was the NABF opener for both squads. The two teams will play at Lake Howell again today, starting at 5:30 p.m. The Mudcats will also play a doubleheader at Oviedo on Wednesday, starting at 5:30 p.m. and will play their first home game Friday evening, hosting Winter Park at 7 p.m. Bates Team Sports will play away games at Hishop Moore on Wednesday and Colonial on Saturday.

Bates Team Sports head coach Dito Benjamin said that poor defense and poor hitting contributed to his team's loss.

"We kicked the ball around on plays that we should have made," Benjamin said. "At the plate, we didn't help ourselves, either. We didn't hit the ball well today. If you don't play good defense, it's tough to win unless you have the power to go out and score 10 or 15 runs in a game. We just don't have that."

Jimmy Razuri led off the top of the first inning for Lake Mary with an infield hit and stole second base. Razuri advanced to third on a single by Brent Wehmeyer, and both scored when Chris Kleibl reached on a throwing error.

Kleibl moved up to second on a fly ball off the bat of Rene Perez and advanced to third when Rich Alexander reached on a throwing error. Both runners then scored as Scott Bryan doubled into left field.

The Mudcats added three insurance runs in the fifth inning to make the score 7-0. Danny Story hit a lead-off double to right center field, and Kleibl walked. Perez then reached on an error to load the bases. Story and Kleibl scored when Alexander singled to right center and Perez later scored on a single by Michael Buky.

Bates Team Sports answered with three runs in their half of the sixth. Chris Tolliver led off the inning with a double, and advanced to third on an infield hit by Mike Ganci. Rich DiToro then singled to drive in Tolliver. Ganci and DiToro scored as Kyle Feldman doubled to left field.

Lake Mary head coach Alan Tuttle attributed his team's success to good overall defense and a solid performance by starting pitcher Russell Haney. Haney (1-0) struck out seven and walked two as he scattered three hits over five innings.

"We got out on top of them early, and Russ did a really good job holding them to no runs," Tuttle said. "We just played good defense all night long."

Buky was three for four with one RBI and Bryan was two for four with two RBIs for the Mudcats.

Six-foot, seven-inch righthander Mike Johnson (0-1) pitched all seven innings for Bates Team Sports, allowing eight hits and striking out four.

Post 53, Trinity trade rallies

From Staff Reports

DELTONA — It was a day for comebacks.

Sanford American Legion Post 53 and home-standing Trinity Christian Academy both posted come-from-behind victories in an American Legion B Division doubleheader Monday afternoon at the Trinity Christian Academy baseball field located at Trinity Assembly of God Church in Deltona.

The American Legion B Division is set up for high school teams as opposed to the A Division, which is for players 19-years-of-age or younger.

Post 53, the summer team for Seminole High School, scored two runs in the fifth inning to erase a 3-2 deficit and pitcher Chris Youmans made the lead stand up as Sanford won the opening game 5-4.

But in the nightcap, Trinity took advantage of five Post 53 errors to come back from 4-0 and 6-4 deficits and went on to beat the visitors 12-7.

Sanford's record went to 5-3 with the split. The team will play three more games this week. Wednesday Post 53 will travel to Pierson for a doubleheader at Taylor High School starting at 6 p.m. before returning home Friday for a 5:30 p.m. game with Lyman High School on Alumnet Field at the Seminole High School Baseball Complex.

"I was proud of the way we came back in the first game," said Sanford Post 53 head coach Mike Powers. "(Mike) Meadows had a big home run to tie the game in the fifth inning and Chris (Youmans) threw a fairly good game. We also played good defense.

"In the second game they hit the ball and we were plagued by errors. We know if we are going to win we have to hit and play good defense, and we didn't in the second game."

Is it unethical to change surgeons?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My orthopedic physician recommended a total right knee replacement. Taking the advice of friends, I sought a second opinion and was so impressed by the second physician that I asked him to perform the procedure. He refused, indicating it would not be fair to the other surgeon. Don't I have the right to select the physician of my choice? I don't feel that I've committed any breach of ethics. What's your view?

DEAR READER: This is a sticky situation. The consultant, whom you like, is not eager to step on the orthopedic surgeon's toes. He doesn't want to gain a reputation for stealing patients, which could lead to a sudden and complete loss of referrals.

Nonetheless, you're entitled to seek the services of whatever doctor you wish. You have not breached any ethics; you're merely a victim of the real world of medicine.

Inasmuch as your original doctor seems to be capable, I'd allow him to do the surgery. The end result will probably be the same; a successful operation. You'll be no worse off and the two doctors will remain on cordial terms.

If you are absolutely convinced that you can't live without the second doctor, return to your orthopedic surgeon and discuss this with him. It's important to emphasize that surgeon No. 2 made no attempt to take you on as a patient; this was simply your decision for personal reasons. Once surgeon No. 1 understands the predicament, he'll accept it gracefully (I hope) and you can return to surgeon No. 2, who will then be free to assume your care.

For obvious reasons, the first option (having the original surgeon operate) will keep more peace in the family. Do you sometimes get the feeling in this situation that you're back in high school having to juggle who's going steady with whom? To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Consumer Tips on Medicines." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Ask most experts about their life away from the bridge table and you will probably uncover some interesting talent. For example, if you had quizzed Englishman Jeremy Flint, he would have told you that he was a wizard at identifying perfumes. He also used his discerning sense of smell in wine-tasting competitions. And he had an excellent nose at the bridge table, as exhibited by today's deal.

Against Flint's contract of five hearts doubled, West led a diamond. East won two tricks in the suit before switching to the spade king. How did Flint continue?

In the balancing position, a jump overall shows a good six-card suit and about 15 high-card points. North was too strong for this action. Instead, he doubled first and bid his suit on the next round.

East doubled five hearts in the faint hope that his partner would read it as asking for a lead of dummy's suit. Not on the same wavelength, West led the diamond eight, the middle card from a low tripleton. This is known as MUD (middle-up-down) and is curiously popular in Britain.

After winning trick three with dummy's spade ace, Flint cashed the heart ace and played a heart to his king, dropping West's doubleton queen. Why didn't he take the finesse, apparently a better percentage play?

Because if East had started with queen-third of hearts, he would have played a third round of diamonds, forcing dummy to ruff.

A good nose knows how to avoid the no-nos.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
JUNE 16, 1993

Bonds with a person about whom you deeply care will be strengthened in the year ahead. The increased mutually shared devotion will make this an enviable relationship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Trying to keep your budget in balance could be an arduous task for you today. It may be the little expenses that get things out of kilter. Gemini, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Partnership arrangements might not work out too well for you today, because of your desire to be an independent thinker. To succeed, you must blend your thoughts with your counterparts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be very selective today regarding with whom you discuss your financial affairs. Don't talk about facts or figures that could be distorted.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your intuitive perceptions could be misleading today and create complications for you if you let them take precedence over your logic.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you do something for another today in hopes of getting back more in return, you might be disappointed. Quid pro quo isn't apt to be operative.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In order to placate another today you might take a position on a matter in which you do not truly believe. It's better to be honest than expeditious.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you find it necessary to give someone verbal as well as written instruction today, be certain what you write or say is very explicit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today in hopes of pleasing another you might agree to do something without thinking through the consequences. This decision could have unfavorable effects later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't let your thoughts drift today if you are working on a task that requires both mental and manual dexterity. Lack of attention could ruin the endeavor.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A friend who has disappointed you previously might do so again today. Sooner or later you're going to have to make a decision about this off-again-on-again pal.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This might not be one of your better days for making critical decisions, because you may deal in rationalizations instead of facts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Juicy tidbits you know to be gossip rather than gospel shouldn't be disseminated to others today. It's better to say nothing than to repeat something erroneous.
