BRIEFS

Funds raised for trooper

ORLANDO — A car wash benefiting a Florida Highway Patrol trooper seriously injured two weeks ago raised more than $3,600 Sunday. Lt. Chuck Williams said off duty FHP troopers, FHP retirees, office personnel and communications officers gathered at the Orlando patrol station on East Colonial Drive for the event to benefit Trooper Michael Jordan. The trooper's car was forced off the Eastern Bellway, crashed into a wall, light pole and guardrail before the car burst into flames. Two passers-by, one a Sanford resident, pulled him from the burning wreckage. Jordan is being treated for second and third degree burns and a broken leg. The FHP volunteers washed about 500 cars and the money will be deposited in the First Union Bank trust fund set up for the injured trooper. "I have never in my twenty years with the FHP seen such an outpouring of public support for a trooper. One motorist came into the driveway, wrote a check for $100 and left without even getting his car washed," said Major Jim Lee, the FHP Troop Commander.

SANFORD — The State of Florida Department of Juvenile Justice, Dist. 7, will hold a meeting Wednesday, March 1, at the Reflections Center, 532 W. Lake Mary Boulevard. The meeting is scheduled to get underway at 1 p.m. and is expected to conclude by 4 p.m. The meeting is open to the general public.

Winn Dixie robbery

FERN PARK — The sheriff's department is investigating the attempted armed robbery of the Winn Dixie Store, 7800 S. U.S. Highway 17-92 in Fern Park early this morning. A robber reportedly walked into the store at approximately 5:25 this morning, wearing a ski mask and armed with a handgun. Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough says the suspect ordered the employees to lie on the floor. As the man was demanding the store's money from one employee, another reportedly managed to escape and phone 911. The suspect reportedly panicked and fled from the store, without taking any money. He was last seen driving away in a late model white vehicle. He was described as a black male, approximately six feet tall, dressed in dark clothing. None of the store employees were injured in the attempted robbery. See Briefs, Page 5A

SANFORD — If every applicant gets their way before the Sanford Planning and Zoning Commission this Thursday evening, Sanford can look forward to some relatively large-scale growth.

Among items scheduled for consideration are a new 83-unit housing area, a larger downtown bank with a parking garage, and the first look at a proposed new shopping plaza to be located near the Seminole Towne Center. The housing area is to be called McCracken Subdivision, and will be located at 2601 McCracken Road, between Airport Boulevard and Persimmon Avenue.

The developer is proposing a planned development which will include a single-family residential development of 83 units at a density of 8.3 dwelling units per acre. Lots proposed would be See Growth, Page 5A

Merchants will air ideas for displays

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Whether or not downtown merchants will be allowed to have displays on sidewalks and in front of their shops remains undecided, but approval appears to be a strong possibility.

The Sanford City Commission discussed the matter during a work session Monday afternoon. It was prompted during the Feb. 13 commission meeting by Sara Jacobson, speaking on behalf of a group called The Sanford Advertising Co-Op.

She recommended consideration be given to downtown merchants, especially antique dealers, to allow them to have displays in front of their storefronts. "This adds charm, definition and intrigue to our streetscape," she had commented.

Monday afternoon, Community Development Director Charles Rowe and City Manager Bill Simmons both gave reports on their research into the matter. Rowe said he checked with similar antique-related cities such as Winter Park, Mount Dora and DeLand, where codes against such displays may have been in place, but were hardly enforced.

Rowe and Simmons explained how the city used to allow outdoor displays, but that was discontinued possibly 13 to 17 years ago.

"I have come up with a formula," Rowe explained, "that is somewhat liberal, but it would allow displays, but of course, with certain exceptions and restrictions."

"Once a common determination is made by the commission," he suggested, "I believe it should be codified, then sent to all downtown groups such as the Chamber of Commerce, Waterfront Master Plan Committee, Sanford Advertising Co-Op, Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Association (SHDWA), Historic Board, Preservation Board, and several others."

During discussion, commissioners took turns presenting their observations.

"If we do have certain restrictions," Commissioner Lon Howell questioned, "how are we going to enforce this. Sure, if it is just for antique stores it might be OK, but who is to determine what antiques are. We would just be opening up a can of worms if we can't control how this is handled."

Parent company of jewelry store irked over use of name

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The parent company of a local jewelry store is requesting a federal district court prevent a competitor from using the same name on its retail outlets claiming it confuses customers. Further, the company wants the court to stop its competitor from expanding in certain geographic areas until legal issues are resolved.

The Friedman's Jewelers store in Seminole Center, Sanford is part of A.A. Friedman Co., Inc.

A.A. Friedman Co., Inc., a family-controlled retail jewelry store chain based in Augusta, Georgia last week filed a motion for a preliminary injunction in U.S. District Court against Friedman's, Inc., a Delaware corporation headquartered in Savannah, Georgia.

Both companies operate retail jewelry stores under the Friedman's Jewelers name in the southeastern United States. A.A. Friedman sued Friedman, Inc. last year alleging the Savannah-based company has engaged in an active campaign calculated to mislead the public, to foster confusion and to trade off the goodwill of A.A. Friedman. The plaintiffs further claim that the defendants, through the bad faith adoption of the Friedman's Jewelers name in certain geographic areas, had the specific intent of preempting A.A. Friedman's expansion plans.

The Augusta company is seeking immediate court action to protect the paramount public interest in avoiding confusion and to protect A.A. Friedman's interest in its valuable trademark and related rights.

In papers filed with the U.S. District Court in Augusta Friday, A.A. Friedman told the federal court that without its immediate action to stop the Savannah company from using the Friedman's Jewelers name in its trade areas and from otherwise engaging in unfair competition and trademark infringement while the case is pending, it will suffer irreparable harm and the rampant public confusion caused by the Savannah company's recent actions will continue.

Chief Miller, A.A. Friedman's president said, "It is our company's hope that the court will move swiftly to stop the unfair actions that are continuing daily. A.A. Friedman Company welcomes competition from any source. See Jewelry, Page 5A

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Son of former sheriff dies in crash

PENSACOLA BEACH — The son of a former Santa Rosa County sheriff who figured in his father's arrest and suspension has died in a single-car crash near this barrier island resort community.

Jeffrey Coffman, 28, of Milton died and two teenagers were injured when a car traveling at about 80 miles per hour rolled out of control and ejected all three Sunday on Santa Rosa Island, the Florida Highway Patrol reported.

Troopers had not determined Monday who was driving or whether alcohol was involved but said none of the passengers had been wearing seat belts.

Coffman's father, Maurice Coffman, was arrested on charges that included interfering with investigations of sexual battery, theft and illegal weapons allegations against his son, and then suspended in 1992. The father also was accused of stealing departmental money and taking bribes from a marijuana grower.

The elder Coffman declined to seek re-election and was allowed to plead no contest to reduced charges for which he received probation and a $10,000 fine. His son had served jail time or probation on convictions that included auto theft, trespassing, petty theft and criminal mischief.

Pipe bomb explosions continue

PENSACOLA — No one has been hurt yet, but authorities are worried someone may be injured or killed if a series of pipe bomb explosions continues across the Florida Panhandle.

Federal and local law enforcement officials had no solid leads as of Monday, said Escambia County sheriff's Lt. Ron McNeasy.

"Innocent people could be injured," McNeasy said. "They could also cause injury to the person building them, to the person igniting them."

So far, eight bombs have exploded in mailboxes and trash cans in Escambia, Holmes, Washington and Calhoun counties.

Three juveniles were arrested in December in the single bombing in Calhoun County, but they are not suspected in the seven other explosions, said Special Agent Brian Lett of the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Four of the bombings have taken place in Escambia, including the first on Dec. 19 and the last on Feb. 10.

Typically the bombings have come at night or on weekends. Investigators believe the targets have been randomly selected.

The U.S. Postal Service is offering a reward of up to $10,000 for information resulting in an arrest and conviction.

Immigrants form savings clubs

MIAMI — Immigrants settling across South Florida find that building new lives can be made much easier by a traditional financial idea brought from their native lands — a network of informal savings clubs.

By banding together in groups, they can pool their money — every week, every two weeks, or every month — then take turns receiving the lump sum each time the money is collected.

In a savings club with 50 members each contributing $50 weekly, for example, one member household each week would get a lump sum of $2,500.

That's enough money for a security deposit and first month's rent on a new apartment or a down payment for a car or several major appliances — or enough to start a home down-payment fund.

Best of all, the system works without credit checks, contracts or even signatures. Verbal agreement to stay in the group and completely pay back each debt, and a lot of trust, are all that's needed.

The importance and impact such savings clubs can have on those reaching this country to begin a new life are indisputable.

Hospital investigating HIV-positive calls

JACKSONVILLE — A patient treated in a hospital emergency room tried to kill herself after a prank phone caller told her she had tested positive for HIV.

Sixteen-year-old Amy Bulmer was among at least seven patients who received similar bogus phone calls after visits to University Medical Center's emergency room last weekend.

"She was hysterical," Shirley Vesie, Bulmer's mother, told The Florida Times-Union in Jacksonville. "She went after a gun and was going to end it all."

Relatives kept Bulmer from getting her father's gun. "I wanted to kill myself," she said. "My husband and Dad calmed me down."

Hospital officials said they don't know how someone could have gotten a list of patients' phone numbers.

"We've asked for police assistance, and we are conducting an internal investigation," said Jan Olson, interim director of public relations for the hospital.

The hospital released a statement saying that it does not conduct HIV tests in its emergency department and does not give out lab results over the telephone.

Florida may gain from base closures

By The Associated Press

PENSACOLA — Supporters of Florida's military bases will remain on guard even though they may have avoided the Clinton administration's hit list.

Defense Secretary William Perry was expected to release his 1985 proposal for closing and realigning bases today.

Florida's congressional representatives were optimistic Perry would leave off his list the major facilities in the state, hit hard by the last two commissions in 1981 and 1982.

However, the final version will come from the Base Closure and Realignment Commission later this year. President Clinton and Congress will be able to reject or approve it but cannot make changes.

"We have another battle in front of us," said Rep. Tillie Fowler, R-Jacksonville. She is worried the commission may close the Naval Aviation Depot in Jacksonville.

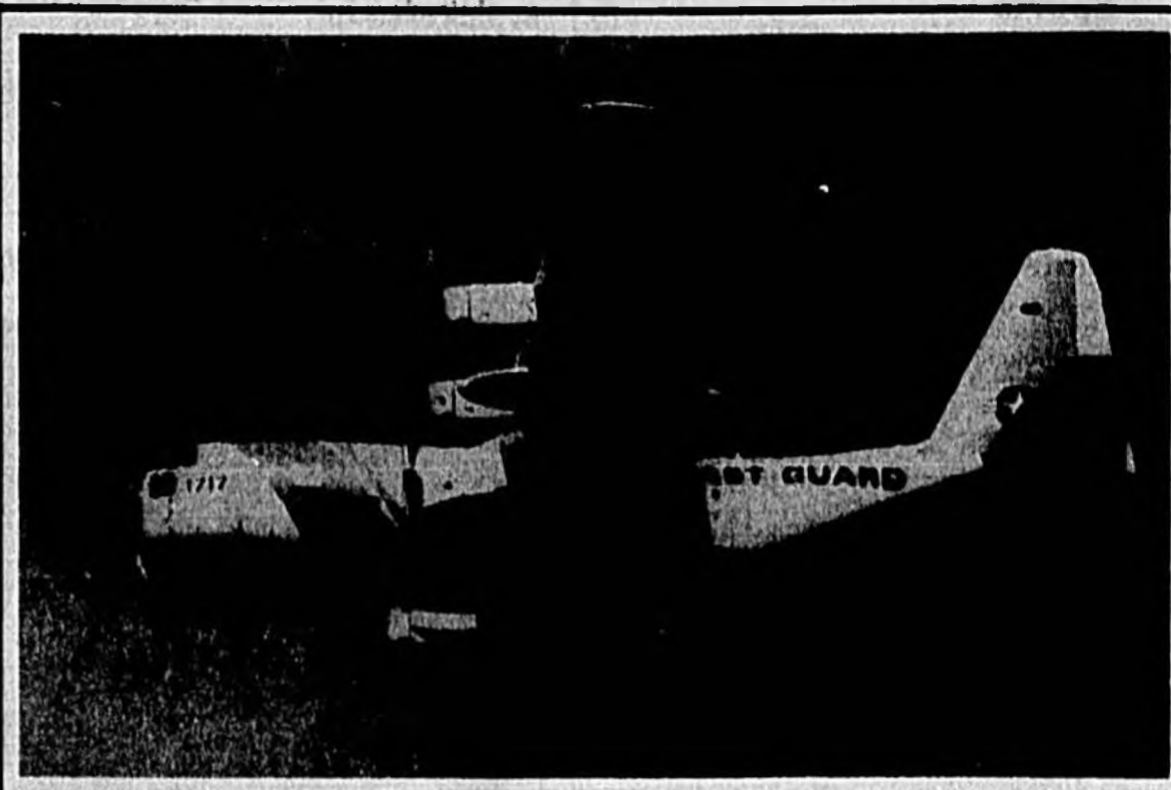

Other potential targets are Eglin Air Force Base and Whiting Field, the Navy's busiest flight training base, both in the Panhandle district of U.S. Rep. Joe Scarborough.

"The Pensacola Republican said he has been told Perry not only would recommend keeping Whiting and Eglin, the nation's largest Air Force base, open but would propose adding units and personnel.

Whiting and nearby Pensacola Naval Air Station would get three squadrons of aircraft — 71 T-34C basic trainers and 57 T-44A multi-engine trainers — from Corpus Christi Naval Air Station in Texas, Scarborough said. The squadrons have 316 staff members and train about 480 students each year.

Supporters of the Corpus Christi base and nearby Kingsville Naval Air Station have been trying to persuade military officials to move flight training from Whiting and Pensacola to the Texas bases. They are expected to make the same pitch to the commission.

"Not only will they try to extol the benefits of keeping air training at Corpus, but they will attack their competitors and say they have no airspace," said retired Rear Adm. Jimmy Taylor.

Statehood: Three major wars boost Florida tourism

By PAUL LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA — In the shadows of Tampa's skyscrapers are secrets of the past that touch on prehistoric times, three wars, the budding of the state's lucrative citrus and phosphate industries, the first scheduled airline flight in the United States and the birth of radio in Florida.

The second half-century of Florida's existence as a state — 1895-1945 — brought pestilence to the groves, a devastating hurricane that claimed 2,000 lives near Lake Okechobee, a fire that destroyed the heart of Jacksonville, testing of the first guided missile, a notorious land boom and bust, the tourist influx and an assassination attempt on Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"For Florida it was a monumental period, a time of growth and discovery," said Paul George, a Miami historian. "This was the land of gold, perpetual weather and water."

The populous Gold Coast of South Florida was still a swampy frontier in 1895. "There was almost no one here," said George. From the northern tier of the Florida Keys to Jupiter Inlet there were fewer than 1,000 people. A century later, 4 million crowd the area.

Ironically, war brought people to Florida. In a span of 80 years, the state played an important role in three wars, housing and training troops.

The wars indirectly fueled Florida's growth, introducing millions of northerners to the state's tropical treasures.

A welcoming winter climate, hawked by developers and speculators and buoyed by air conditioning, later lured them back as visitors and retirees.

Drainage of the Everglades, state land giveaways and growth of the transportation industry were mighty contributors to Florida's growth. The Depression and over speculation served as detractors.

Miller hurricanes — at least five in about a decade — changed the face of Florida.

During the 1898 Spanish-American War, Tampa served as the staging area for American troops in Cuba's battle for independence. Railroad magnate Henry B. Plant pitched the tiny backwater Gulf Coast town as an ideal supply base. With 100 ships to the port. And 68,000-plus troops choked Tampa.

Among them was former President Teddy Roosevelt, then a lieutenant colonel who led a volunteer cavalry known as the "Rough Riders" on a charge up Kettle Hill in San Juan.

Soldiers, stationed for months in Tampa, lived in tents in mosquito-infested camps. Their quarters flooded during the rainy season.

Officers stayed at Plant's plush minaret-crowned Tampa Bay Hotel on the banks of the Hillsborough River. It opened in 1891 catering to wealthy visitors and today houses the University of Tampa.

During the World War I era, tens of thousands of military personnel were stationed around the state. Aviation was still in its infancy. But it helped Florida with the development of the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, a military field at Miami, and Carlstrom and Dorr fields at Arcadia.

POLICE BRIEFS

Dog days

Sanford police received a phone call Saturday regarding dogs fighting in an alley in the 1000 block of South Cyprus Avenue. They said when they arrived they didn't see any fighting in progress but noticed two Pit Bulls in a fenced area nearby. When they investigated, they said persons in the area refused to cooperate with them. One of the Pit Bulls was seen to have lacerations and bloody areas. The owner of the house where the dogs were located reportedly refused to say how the dog was injured, but eventually allowed the Seminole County Animal Control officer to take it into custody.

During their investigation, police said rocks and stones were being thrown at them from an unknown location but none of the officers were struck.

No charges were filed in connection with the incident.

Food for thought

Our leaders in Washington are getting ready to make another decision which will affect many average citizens and their children. The House Republicans are looking into eliminating the national school lunch program.

According to the latest word, Republicans, in the majority in the House for the first time in 40 years, insist that the current system does more harm than good. They say it is their turn to try something different.

In effect, they want to give grants, three per year, to individual states, and let them handle whatever (if any) school lunch program they might deem appropriate.

We may not know all of the intricacies of why our Congress is doing this. It may be to help reduce overall federal government spending or take some of the load for this program's administration off their backs.

We do know, however, that we have children right here in Seminole County and its various cities, who, because of financial difficulties, may have relied on that one hot meal in school as the only one of the day.

The same holds true for daycare programs, and persons involved in reduced-price school lunches or breakfasts. This isn't to say some people don't take advantage of it, but it is a reality in today's life that, in some homes, there simply isn't enough money, even to pack a small lunch or provide a hot meal in the evening.

Not knowing all the facts or reasons, it is not at the present time, appropriate to say whether the federal government should continue the program or whether it would be better administered by the states.

What we must insist on is that this program be continued for the sake of these children. If the state takes over, we must be assured that it is properly executed and will continue to provide this help. We must watch closely, very closely, to insure that the money doesn't end up being diluted because of high costs of administration or funneled into some other area. If such becomes the case, we will, in effect, have eliminated this assistance, and that will be something which should cause all of our heads to bow in shame.

Yes, we know. There is no such thing as a free lunch. We, the taxpayers pay for them either administered nationwide or state-by-state.

But it's our money, and, similar to most other government expenditures, we must keep a very cautious eye out on what happens. Continuation of the federal programs or allocation to the states may not matter as long as our children don't suffer because of it.

Conservatives not so conservative

It's just past the half-way point for the Republican "Hundred Days" program in the House of Representatives. The first GOP cattle show for next year's presidential primary season has taken place in New Hampshire. It's time to ask, again: What are these folks up to?

Now, one could seek an answer by asking Republicans. But you know what they would say. "Tarsan-like, professional Republicans always grum. 'Ugh, watch out, we tough guys, we conservatives, we cut government, we roll back welfare state, ugh, we make Great Society go away.'" But most of them are teddy bears. They talk that way to cover up a much-disguised fact of American politics. Contrary to common belief, conservatives are more liberal than they used to be.

Consider: Conservatives are putting the issue of quotas and/or affirmative action on the table, and about time too. But whom do they quote? Martin Luther King and Hubert Humphrey? Republicans say they want a "colorblind" society that will not judge people "by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character" -- just as intoned in Dr. King's soaring cadences. When Republicans look at the original intent of color-blind legislation they cite Humphrey, Mr. Liberal, who said of the 1964 Civil Rights bill that if anyone could find language for racial preferences in it, "I will start eating the pages."

What about abortion? Watching the candidates in New Hampshire, it's apparent that Republicans have decided -- accurately -- that abortion is a "divisive" issue. That's not something Republicans want to mess with when they have a chance to carry the White House and the Congress in 1996. Even Pat Buchanan says that the GOP must be an inclusive party under a big tent; reach for your Richter Scale. If there is a tough anti-abortion plank in the 1996 Republican platform, I will start eating the pages, one after the other.

It's time to ask, again: What are these folks up to?

How about immigration? It's said that Republicans are against it, which shows how truly retrograde they are. What they (most of them) are against is illegal immigration. Even I'm against that. But listen to Newt Gingrich talk about (legal) immigration; he thinks it's the magic stuff that makes America the greatest.

This not-really-very-conservative posture can be seen even in the fabled "Contract With America." Most of it is about procedure: line-items, balanced budgets, term limits, legal reforms, taxes. If the goal is to cut government and roll back the welfare state, the place to start would be where the big money is -- Social Security. What part of the Contract is that on? If it was an anti-Great Society proposal you'd think it would come out for repealing the civil rights laws. (A former colleague of mine on the LBJ staff says, "Newt uses the word 'opportunity' almost as much as Johnson did.")

The two major items of substance in the Contract deal with crime and welfare.

If Clinton ran that way in 1996, it couldn't be very conservative, could it? Republicans (wisely) want to enact what Clinton ran on, because Clinton and liberal Democrats couldn't, or wouldn't. That's what Republicans are up to.

This is political junk food

BOSTON -- In the beginning there was ketchup.

The year was 1981, the Reagan Revolution had just begun, and the policy chefs cooked up a Nouvelle Right Cuisine for the kids. The newcomers to power decided that if they could play around in the country's kitchen they could save a bundle on the school lunch program.

Among their recipes for social change was one that set out to reclassify ketchup and pickles as vegetables. Carrots, beans or ketchup. Eat your peas and pickles.

The idea of ketchup belonging to a basic food group caused a national upset stomach. Within a matter of weeks, this particular genie was put back into its aqueous bottle.

Now we fast-forward to 1995 and the early days of the Newt Revolution. This time the whole school lunch is on the table. So is the school breakfast. So is the nutrition program for pregnant women, infants and children known as WIC. So is the meal money for poor children in day care.

Until this week there was less of an uproar over the proposed menu for a leaner '90s than there was over a single condiment in the '80s. Maybe there are just too many other programs on the table, or should I say the chopping block? In this, the Robespierre phase of the revolution, there is hardly time or energy enough to organize all the rescue missions.

But maybe too these chefs have been more artistic in the presentation of their dish. Instead of replacing green beans with ketchup, the Republican bill proposes to replace federal programs with block grants at lower funding to the states.

In the theory espoused by the contractors with America, lump sum grants give states the freedom to decide how to use money. In this theory, the states have less red tape chewing up the dollars and so the programs cost less. But there are ingredients that make this a lot less palatable on the plate than it appears on paper.

Doing away with the federal school lunch and breakfast program is not just a matter of accounting. It eliminates the guarantee that any poor child can get a subsidized meal.

Under the current bill the money going to the states will be fixed at a 1995 rate and can't go up more than 4.5 percent a year. The money can't rise with the need.

In the last recession 1.3 million low-income children temporarily went on the school lunch list. Under welfare reform, we can safely predict that thousands of poor kids will be added to the day care rolls as their mothers go to work, but the block grants make no allowances for any new kids on the block.

By the estimates of the Center for Budget and Policy Priorities, the new bill would actually cut $1 billion from the food programs in 1996 and $6 billion over five years. As Ed Cooney of Food Research and Action Center (FRAC) says, "The local school boards are in for a shock. They're about to receive a huge, unfunded liability." The states would have to raise the money or cut the food.

Then there is the matter of nutrition. The new proposal would also eliminate federal standards. Schools won't have to make sure that their lunches provide a third of the daily dietary requirement because there won't be any federal requirement.

The states will also be "free" to lower their nutritional rights to fit their budgets. Forget the vegetable called ketchup. Under this plan, a snack can qualify as a meal. As Cooney says wryly, "They can tell you to get your fiber out of the wrapping paper."

How did we get to this moment? I don't remember a huge amount of public dissatisfaction with the school lunch program, unless it was with the chipped beef they served in seventh grade.

This proposal was slipped into the contract, hidden inside the popular principle that government should do less and spend less. But feeding poor school children is not one of the lesser that government should do.

When asked about ending this food entitlement program, Newt Gingrich responded flippantly, "It doesn't say anywhere in the Declaration of Independence ... that anyone is entitled to anything except the right to pursue happiness."

Maybe not. But when did we declare that children are independent? How do you pursue happiness on an empty stomach?

This country is simply not too broke to feed poor school children. Nor is it too morally undernourished. What we have is a policy that's being sold without a proper nutrition label. Mark it clearly. This is political junk food.

The idea of ketchup belonging to a basic food group caused a national upset stomach.

Influencing GOP convention

SACRAMENTO, Calif. -- Gov. Pete Wilson has told at least two friends recently that he plans to run in the California primary as a "favorite son" for the 1996 Republican presidential nomination.

According to these friends, however, Wilson hedged his statement as a "90 percent probability" -- leaving himself room to change his mind.

As a "favorite son," Wilson would only put his name on the California ballot -- a race his advisers believe he could win easily. That would leave him in control of 16 percent of the delegates needed for nomination heading into the GOP convention. It would also give him significant influence in the convention while sparing him from the hardships of a full-scale presidential run.

One confidant summed up Wilson's thinking: "The governor told me he liked the idea of going into the convention in San Diego that August (1996) -- his hometown where he was mayor as well -- with those delegates committed to him. And then he brokers them out as a power broker."

Another Wilson friend confirmed that the governor likes the idea of running solely in California as a means of "having more influence on the platform, and with the candidate he supports for president. The friend added that Wilson has "also said that there would probably be a lot of relief among Republican candidates if he did run as a favorite son, because they would write off California to him and not have to come out here and spend millions of dollars in a primary battle."

As of last week, Wilson had not publicly ruled out a full-scale run for the presidency, and friends say he remains privately ambivalent on the issue. He has had aides working full-time on both coasts, in California and Washington, putting out feelers about a possible candidacy. He has also been besieged by confidential calls from fellow governors, members of Congress and national fund-raisers urging him to enter the race.

Wilson's supporters see a centrist Republican who was re-elected in a landslide last November after being left for dead by many analysts two years earlier. With a giant political base in California, they believe his tough stance on illegal immigrants would appeal to GOP voters in large states like Texas and Florida. Wilson is also expected to support a controversial initiative expected to be on the California ballot in 1998 that would repeal affirmative action. This could earn him critical support from white males -- whose votes were pivotal in the GOP's congressional sweep last November.

Why not run? Our associate Dale Van Atta recently spoke with several Wilson intimates about the pros and cons of campaigning for the Oval Office.

"There's no question that his natural preference would be not to run," one longtime Wilson aide said. "He is a finisher. He is a hands-on person who doesn't like to split his concentration. So his natural mode would be to devote all his time and energy to governing until 1998. And then all his time and energy for two years toward campaigning for president in 2000. Splitting that level of attention would be very difficult for Pete."

Another concern for Wilson, according to a recent dinner companion, is the reaction of his chief financial backers. Wilson fears that many of his largest backers might be let down should he abandon California for the lure of national office. Certainly most of his chief contributors would support a run for the presidency, but would they feel cheated that he wasn't pushing a Republican agenda in the statehouse, as they had hoped?

It would also give him significant influence in the convention while sparing him from the hardships of a full-scale presidential run.

 approximately 40 by 90 feet. The property is presently vacant, and is considered as being in the Goldboro area. It contains approximately 12.7 acres, of which 10 acres would be utilized for housing.

According to information from Jay Marder, Sanford's director of planning and development, the city has directed substantial community development block grants and related HUD programs in the Goldboro neighborhood, primarily for the purpose of improving and rehabilitating housing.

He commented that the prospect of additional new housing in the Goldboro area is seen as a positive development that will contribute to the city meeting goals and objectives set forth in the housing element.

The banking expansion is being proposed by SunBank, located at 300 W. First St. in downtown Sanford.

The bank proposes utilizing 2.84 acres to the north of the present facility, extending to Fulton Avenue. The overall bank-owned property is basically developed at the present time, and includes a 28,500 square foot office building plus parking areas and drive-in tellers.

Now, SunBank wants to expand the office use to 144,000 square feet which would include a new building to be located on the northern side of the property facing Fulton. Between the two buildings, a parking garage which should accommodate 400 automobiles is proposed.

Regarding the parking garage, Marder observed that a parking garage is proposed in conceptual plans developed by the Waterfront Steering Committee, which has recommended a garage containing possibly 300 to 500 parking spaces. They would be designed to serve the Seminole County Courthouse expansion, and be located on the City Hall parking lot. If that proposal comes to fruition, it would be just north of the new SunBank facility being requested, and just north of Fulton.

Regarding the new plaza, it will be at the southeastern corner of the intersection of State Road 48 and Town Center Boulevard, and directly east of the new mall. Preliminary plans presently released call for six major anchor stores, the largest of which is approximately 54,000 square feet, as well as some out-parcels.

The facility is to be called Gateway Plaza.

All of these items are scheduled for this Thursday's Sanford P&Z Commission meeting beginning at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Ave.

Department links lunch program and farmers

By ROBERT GRIGGS
 AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration is warning states they stand to lose billions in federal funds under a Republican push to end the national school lunch program.

On Monday, it tried to bolster its argument that children will be shortchanged and nutritional standards will disappear if states take over lunches and other nutrition programs, paying for them with block grants from Washington. Farmers would suffer too, the administration says.

The House Committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities approved such a takeover last week.

Ellen Haas, under secretary of Agriculture for Food, Nutrition and Consumer Services, said states will lose $7.3 billion in funding over five years if the measure passes.

Haas released the figures at a Capitol Hill event attended by Democratic lawmakers, including Vermont Gov. Howard Dean, Dean, chairman of the National Governor's Association, called the GOP plan a "war on children."

But Republicans said they would be giving more money to the nutrition programs, not less.

House Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas called the Democratic rhetoric "completely out of touch not only with reality but any sense of good manners or good taste."

Besides children, farmers also stand to lose, the Agriculture Department contends. The federal program, which provides meals to more than 25 million children daily, also subsidizes farmers through purchases of beef, pork, fruits and other foods.

Acting Secretary of Agriculture Richard Rominger made that point last week during a trip to California when he told pear growers the department bought $8 million worth of the fruit in the last budget year.

"Under the individual programs they would set up, states might make much smaller purchases — or none at all," Rominger told the growers in Rohnert Park, Calif.

More quietly, commodity groups already have rallied to protect their share of the nearly $6 billion in annual school lunch spending by the Agriculture Department.

The Commodity Distribution Coalition, representing farmer organizations and commodity groups such as the American Meat Institute and National Milk Producers Federation, says the federal government can buy products in larger volumes and lower prices than school districts can.

Lunches are served in 92,000 schools, with some poor students receiving them free or at reduced prices.

"There is no way that individual schools can have the market impact of USDA, which can make a major purchase of an agricultural commodity when a price is depressed," the group argued in a letter this month to Congress.

About 80 percent to 85 percent of the department's spending on school lunches goes to the schools, provided the meals they serve follow nutritional guidelines. The department spends the remainder directly on commodities that are given to schools.

Displays

 different approach. "I think we should give credit to our merchants. They will do what they are asked to do if they know what our code specifies. We don't need to worry about this. Let's just allow merchants to do this. They will protect their own rights if we give them the opportunity to do so. They won't abuse it."

Commissioner Kerry Lyons agreed with Thomas.

"But if we open the gates downtown," Howell continued, "how are we going to treat them, including other antique stores, elsewhere in the city?"

"We now have two code enforcement agents," Simmons observed, "and they can certainly provide reasonable enforcement."

"But take garage sales," Howell said. "People are only allowed three a year. How many people are going beyond that. How many citations have we handed out for that?"

"Not many," Simmons admitted, "but right now our concern is to do something to benefit our downtown area, and not several blocks away where they have garage sales. That's not the point here."

Following further discussion, the commission gave a consensus opinion to have the proper documents drawn up for consideration at a future meeting, but only after downtown merchants and organizations have been given the opportunity to comment on the suggestions.

Sara Jacobson was on hand during the discussion, and asked if the displays would only be allowed on weekends.

Although one recommendation submitted to the commission for consideration Monday specifically suggested weekends only, Mayor Betty Smith said the final document would not include that restriction.

It was not immediately determined how soon a downtown street display plan could be presented for further consideration.

Jewelry

 Competition is good for the jewelry industry and, more importantly, for the consuming public but, that competition must be fair. This is not now the case and, unfortunately, court action is needed to protect both the legitimate interests of our company and of the public."

Train

 "We have a plan to replace all of the cars on the AutoTrain by the end of this year or the beginning of next year," said John Lombardi, director of passenger services on the AutoTrain, based in Sanford.

Lombardi did not have information regarding the cost of the new train cars, but said they are "top of the line."

The sleek, new trains arrived in Sanford last week. Workers have been preparing them for passengers in the yard near the Peraimmon Avenue terminal.

They will be hooked up to the AutoTrain for the inaugural trip north this afternoon. Before pulling out of the station at 4 p.m., however, there will be a kick-off party for those passengers holding tickets for today's trip.

The SuperLiner cars are two levels with passengers riding on the second level and storage and other facilities down below.

The seats are wider and more comfortable than in the older trains. The sleeping berths are slightly more spacious.

"These are first class accommodations," Lombardi said.

Passengers have a better view from the higher train and the ride is smoother than on traditional lower cars, he said.

He noted the SuperLiner cars have been used on western routes, including the Los Angeles-to-Miami "Sunset Limited," which passes through Sanford, but this is the first time they will be used on any east coast route.

Animals

 devastation of the hurricane.

He emphasized, "People would know by supporting this album they would be supporting animals everywhere." He said, "I get calls all the time for families in distress after fires or other disasters and about their animals in need. I want to help the families too. I'm not cold to the homeless; I just choose to work with the animals. My first love is animals because they can't help themselves."

A country version of "Animal Magnetism" is already on the back burner but West admits that, "this album is a dream come true." West has frequently used his musical talent and influence to produce annual benefit concerts to aid humane societies and animal shelters across the country. In 1991, he received the Volunteer Service Award and was recently named Honorary Board Member of the Orlando Humane Society.

The "Animal Magnetism" CD cover was quite impressive with a color photo of a cocker spaniel with a fluffy striped cat. Two curious raccoons adorn the back cover with a dedication above stating, "To all creatures great and small."

West spoke of the release and what went into its production.

Businesses abuzz about BEE

By NICK PFEIFER
 Herald Staff Writer

JUNO BEACH — The BEE is coming. It's a new project from Florida Power & Light Company. Through intensive studies, FP&L plans to help improve business operating efficiency, and thus help reduce overhead costs for consumers.

BEE, Business Energy Evaluation, is considered as the first step to achieving energy and operating cost savings through participation in FP&L's conservation programs.

According to Jack Sheahan, FP&L program manager, "The goal of any size company is to operate as energy-efficient as possible. We can help businesses conserve energy and start the new year off right."

"The BEE is especially helpful for planning energy efficiency right from the drawing board," Sheahan commented. "For businesses contemplating a new facility, a renovation or expansion, building energy-efficiency into the design is the most cost-effective way to go."

He concluded, "We'll work with architects and engineers in the mutual interests of our customers."

The BEE can take from a few hours to a few days, depending on the size of the business and complexity of its operations. Following an initial evaluation, FP&L develops an action plan which focuses on savings projections.

To request the BEE, or for additional information about FP&L's energy management programs for business, phone 1-800-FPL-5568.

"We went through a lot of trouble to get the animals on the CD. I knew what I wanted. I found a pet photographer in the yellow pages. She was a member of the Humane Society."

Photos of the various artists with their pets also line the inside cover. West, himself, had some posed and not-so-posed shots with the furry loves of his life. A large dog is pictured with a sleeping West as pillows and blankets surround them.

"Animal Magnetism" has been released in Central Florida with Peaches Records. The cost is $11.99 for CD and $7.99 for cassette. Plans are for release nationally by the middle of the year. Proceeds go to PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) and PAWS.

Go West Productions will ship at the cost of $4. For more information call 1-800-990-PAWS or write to Go West Productions, Box 533511, Orlando, FL 32853.

Rams, Dogs, 'Hounds win openers at Lake Mary

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — It was almost a perfect opening day for the local teams as county squads won three of four games on the opening day of the second annual Raminole Invitational Baseball Tournament Monday.

Seminole High School (3-0) edged Trinity Prep (0-1) 2-1 in the only game played at Seminole High School.

In the games played at Lake Mary High School, the host Rams (3-1) scored all six of its runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to defeat New Smyrna Beach (0-1) 6-2. Tom Dixon ran his record to 3-0 as Lyman (4-0) crushed Leesburg 11-1 in five innings, and Oviedo (3-3) led until St. Cloud (2-3) scored three runs in the sixth inning to post a 6-4 triumph.

Lake Mary High School will host the rest of the tournament, with two games a day through Friday at 4:30 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Today, in loser's bracket games, Leesburg will play Oviedo at 4:30 p.m. and New Smyrna Beach will face Trinity Prep at 7 p.m.

The winner's bracket semifinals will be played on Wednesday, with Lyman meeting St. Cloud at 4:30 p.m. and the co-hosts, Seminole and Lake Mary, battling at 7 p.m.

ERRORS DOOM LIONS

Oviedo scored three runs in the bottom of the fourth inning to erase a 3-1 deficit, but the Lions could not make the lead hold up as the St. Cloud Bulldogs rallied for the 6-4 win.

Oviedo starting pitcher Mark Metcalf (four strike outs in six innings) was again victimized by his own defense, which committed seven errors. The miscues only led to one unearned run, but they also required Metcalf to throw more pitches and work out of several jams.

"Mark has been pitching excellent □ See Baseball, Page 2B

Seminole pitcher Jimmy Rabun tossed a four-hitter as the Tribe became one of three county teams to win their opening games of the second annual Raminole Invitational Baseball Tournament Monday afternoon.

Seminole improves to 3-0

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Super pitching by Jimmy Rabun and some unplanned trickery allowed Seminole High School to remain unbeaten with a 2-1 victory over Trinity Prep in the opening round of the second annual Raminole Invitational at Alumni Field in the Seminole High School Baseball Complex.

Rabun scattered four hits, striking out three and walking three to get his first decision of the year as the Fighting Seminoles improved to 3-0 on the season. Trinity Prep fell to 0-1.

The Satins took a 1-0 lead in the top of the second inning on an RBI single by Terry, but Seminole came back in the bottom of the inning to tie the game without the benefit of a hit.

Brian Wilcox walked and Terrell Jackson went in to pinch run. After Jackson stole second, Chris Youmans walked and Joe Tittle laid down a bunt as Jackson took off on an attempted steal of third. When Trinity Prep made the play on Tittle, Jackson never stopped running, scoring without a throw. "I was watching the bunt and by the time I turned around Terrell (Jackson) was already rounding third," said Seminole head coach Mike Powers. "I tried to stop him, but it was too late. He basically ran through a stop sign and made me look good."

The Tribe, which still did not have a hit, scored the winning run in the sixth inning. Phillip Eubanks led off with a walk and stole second before Alexts Acosta ripped a run-scoring double. Mike Meadows later singled to account for Seminole's only other hit.

Trinity Prep will play New Smyrna Beach (which lost 6-2 to Lake Mary) today at 7 p.m. at Lake Mary High School. Seminole will take on Lake Mary in a winner's bracket game at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Lake Mary.

Tough start—finish dooms Tribe in softball

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — The Seminole High School softball team won innings two-through-six of its game with Leesburg Monday afternoon at home. But you have to play all seven innings and the first and second innings proved to be enough as the Yellow Jackets downed the Tribe 15-8.

Leesburg (3-0) outscored Seminole 12-4 in the first and seventh innings (both by 6-2 counts), while the Tribe (1-3) won the other five innings 4-3.

Brown's dominates Cupid Classic

Special to the Herald

CLEARWATER — Brown's Gymnastics Central Level 8 recreation squad ran away from the competition to capture the team championship at the Cupid Classic for the second consecutive year.

So dominant was the locals' victory that every gymnast on the team placed in at least one event, with eight girls placing in all four. The final medal count of 57 included 10 Gold, 11 Silver and seven Bronze.

Brown's Metro of Orlando finished a distant second, with International Gold Gymnastics of Tallahassee placing third.

The top performers were Alexis Ford and Allyson Nelson, both finishing with scores of 32.30. Ford captured the All-Around in the 12-14 age group, with Nelson placing second in the 10-11 bracket.

Ford led the way with three Gold medals in vault, bars and floor. Sharon Wain added the Gold medal in balance beam to give Brown's Central a Gold medal sweep in the 12-14 group. Wain also collected a Silver on floor, finishing second All-Around with a score of 31.95.

Lindsay Robinson earned a Silver on vault and fourth place All-Around with a score of 30.75.

Jamie Byrd, Amanda Strickler and Summer Adams all earned placements among the top nine to close out the efforts of the 12-14 year olds.

Nelson also collected a trio of Gold's on vault, beam and floor. Whitney Shepard shared the Gold on balance beam and earned a Bronze on floor to finish fifth All-Around (31.75).

Jessica Dematels edged out Shepard for fourth All-Around chiefly on a pair of Bronze medals in floor and bars. Dematels' score was a 31.85.

Carrie Brown earned Bronze on vault, finishing seventh All-Around (30.80). Ashley Huffman grabbed Silver in vault and floor, good enough for eighth All-Around (30.05). Kim Poor placed ninth All-Around (29.40) and Jill Cody capped the 10-11 age group with two placements among the top nine.

Can't sleep? Read something boring

DEAR DR. GOTT: The longest time I can read is usually 10 minutes, after which I become very sleepy. This occurs regardless of the time of day or night. It almost appears that reading is a sedative. Why does this occur?

DEAR READER: Probably from boredom. If you're already tired and the stuff you're reading isn't especially interesting or challenging, you may become sleepy.

I must admit that this is puzzling. From a medical perspective, your drowsiness during reading does not suggest a disease or disorder. Nonetheless, you may wish to review your symptoms with your doctor.

There is an affliction called narcolepsy, a brain disorder of unknown cause, marked by a tendency to fall asleep suddenly and without warning at inappropriate times. However, narcolepsy is not ordinarily associated with reading.

I suspect that when reading, you simply relax and become sedated. I'd be interested in what your family physician has to say about this.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My daughter has a cracked vertebra from a riding accident. Her doctor indicates she should not have surgery at this time. Would you suggest exercises for strengthening her back?

DEAR READER: Like any bone, the vertebra can be fractured during accidents. And, like any bone, they invariably heal with time. Vertebral (spinal) fractures do not ordinarily need to be "set" or surgically repaired.

Following a vertebral fracture, the patient is usually confined to bed for two or three weeks, after which he or she may gradually begin a rehabilitation program of special exercises and progressive activity, as dictated by pain.

After about six weeks, the bone should have healed and the patient is ready to resume a normal life.

During the healing process,

Do you like to read books containing prose like this? "Dressie begins with a diamond, his left minor, a bid that Jenny Mae later learns is wrong when playing with another sport, but may be correct when partnering the likes of Ora Landoga, who tends to open her eyes at the sound of diamonds, and when Ora has her eyes open, it is easier for her to see her cards."

If so, buy the new book "Jenny Mae the Bridge Pro" by Matthew Granovetter and Martin Hoffman (Granovetter Books; 218-371-8848; $11.95). I assume the 128 pages were written by Granovetter around the interesting deal supplied by Hoffman. Today's deal from the book will give you a good idea of what to expect.

West, Dissy Agnes, leads the heart nine; three, 10, king. Declarer draws two rounds of trumps as East (Jenny Mae) discards a discouraging club three. Now comes a low diamond.

To defeat the contract, Dissy Agnes must rise with the ace and lead her second heart. But she has been taught that second hand plays low, so she does. And when dummy's diamond 10 forces East's king, the contract is safe. Declarer sets up dummy's diamond queen for a heart discard.

To make matters worse for Jenny, her arch rival, Feather Pickles, and his client, Eileen Diamond, beat the contract. First, Pickles opens with a weak two hearts to direct the lead. Then, Pickles discards not the club three but the diamond three on the second round of trumps. Now seeing no future in ducking
