

The Sun, The Eclipse...

It's Up There...Isn't It?

By LEN KRANSDORF
Herald Staff Writer

"I guess the sun didn't come for our parade," said Kay Bartholomew clutching her arms as she walked around the vacant lot across from Seminole Memorial Hospital (SMH) where she works as public relations director.

"I know the sun is up there somewhere, but where?" asked Ann Cole, a nurse at the hospital.

Both ladies along with about six other employees had gathered at the lot today to view the total eclipse of the sun.

As the sky above remained darkened and temperatures dipped into the 40s, Mrs. Cole, a member of the Central Florida Astronomical Society shrugged. She was disappointed.

"The next one will not be until 2024 and I'll be 80-years-old by then if I live that long."

Mike Smith, supervisor of the SMH maintenance department who had seen a partial eclipse several years ago but never a full eclipse, added: "I was really just curious because I've never seen one before."

"I've never seen one either," observed Johnnie Harris, SMH maintenance worker also at the field, "so I came here because I was just curious."

Nick Harris, director of housekeeping at SMH saw his last total eclipse in 1962. "Lord yes, I was looking forward to it since I last viewed it in Mississippi, and I expected to see lots of people here but I can understand why they didn't show," he said noting the adverse weather conditions.

A solar eclipse is a rare occurrence. The last one visible in Florida took place about seven years ago, but was obscured also by heavy cloud cover.

At the Goldendale Observatory in the southern town of Goldendale, Wash., thousands gathered to view the last total eclipse of the sun visible from the continental United States in this century.

About 10 miles further south, at a replica of Stonehenge, dozens of Druids — members of the Church of All Worlds — and other neo-pagan groups gathered for religious rites that one leader, Isaac Bonewitz, had confidently predicted would bring a perfect view of the sun.

The eclipse began just after sunrise in the eastern Pacific as the moon passed directly between the Earth and sun. It reached totality at 8:09 a.m. PST. (12:09 p.m. EST.)

Not until 2017 will another total eclipse of the sun be visible from continental United States.

The eclipse was being televised through the observatory's 24 1/2-inch telescope by NBC with a feed to public TV through KWSU of Washington State University. The thousands converging on this little town included residents of Uganda, Burma, Holland, Hungary, Canada and "a lot from California" and throughout the Northwest.

Amidst warnings that severe eye damage could be inflicted on anyone looking at the sun, schools changed their opening hours so children would not be unsupervised en route to school when the eclipse occurred. Motorists were warned to turn on their lights as the daytime darkness gathered.

1980 Our Big Chance, Baker Tells Area GOP

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

U.S. Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker issued a call for party unity to "meet the challenge of 1980, the greatest chance the Republicans have to prosper since 1952" Sunday night before Central Florida members of the GOP.

Guest speaker at the Orange County Republican Executive Committee's annual Lincoln Day Dinner, the Republican senator from Tennessee hammered away at the Carter administration's "series of foreign policy mistakes," problems with the economy and national defense.

"Not since 1952 has there been a serious question about the national defense of the United States and whether it is adequate to the challenge of this time. The second great challenge is the prosperity and economy of the country," he said.

Saying the nation's foreign policy lacks coherence and stability, Baker, an unannounced presidential candidate said the "world doesn't understand what it takes to conclude the United States cannot handle leadership in the world." He called a serious mistake President Carter's cancellation of the B-1 bomber, adding Carter apparently thought his action would inspire the Russians to cancel its Backfire bomber.

"That was nonsense," Baker said at the function held at Howard Johnson downtown Orlando grand ballroom.

He said since the first Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT I) the Russians have developed five new missiles.

"Carter is about to commence a debate on SALT II. I support strategic arms limitation efforts, voted for SALT I and would like to vote for arms limitation," Baker said, adding however, it is possible under the present treaty for the Russians to make great increases in weapons.

"Will SALT II freeze us into a position of inequality?" he asked, noting this question will be asked more and more.

He said the Senate will thoroughly debate the issue and the nation will ultimately make a judgment on the adequacy or inadequacy of the treaty.

"The nation's greatest asset is the good common sense and wisdom of its people," Baker said, adding SALT II is a "most important decision that cannot be made in a vacuum and sterilized from the touch of the political system."

"I will not stand by and allow national defense and foreign policy decisions to be made outside the view of the people," he said.

"National defense and foreign policy are too important not to be debated in the public arena," Baker said.

"I want a national defense and foreign policy that shows our leadership in the world," he said.

Baker was treated to a standing ovation when he was

Property Use Eyed; Sales By Sanford?

By MAX ERKLETTIAN
Herald Staff Writer

The Sanford City Commission, at 7 p.m. at city hall, will review the use of 1,808.3 acres of city property in an effort to see how much of that land can be sold, thereby placing it back on the tax rolls.

The property totals $25,765,650 in assessed valuation spread over 118 different pieces of property.

The property, 65,276 acres totaling an assessed valuation of $20,290 is in vacant land. That land, because it is owned by the city, is not taxed.

However, if it was sold to private investors, it would again become taxable property. "What it boils down to is there are certain parcels of property that some people feel should be put back on the tax rolls," said Mayor Lee P. Moore.

"What we'll be doing tonight is just a matter of making an inventory to see how much of the land the city owns could be disposed of," commented

Moore, "some of it is too small to do anything with."

City Manager Warren E. Knowles agreed with Moore that some of the land is too small to be put to use. However, he also added that some pieces of property presently going unused may be put to use in the future.

"A lot of that land is vacant now, but may be used somewhere down the road," say Knowles.

In addition, some of the land is property donated to the city many years ago with certain stipulations dictating how it is to be used, noted Moore.

"Some of that land has a string attached," said Moore. "For instance, I know there is some of the land that has a provision that it can only be used for recreational purposes."

Commissioner John Morris asked for the inventory of city-owned property.

"I want to look at what we have, because the city's got so darn much land that it's not

Chinese 25 Miles Into Viet, Hanoi Charges

United Press International

Hanoi radio said today Chinese forces have pushed up to 25 miles into Vietnam and claimed China has more divisions in the country than the United States did during the 1960s. Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping said he hopes the war will last only about a month.

Hanoi radio claimed Vietnamese troops battling Chinese invaders in three northern provinces killed or wounded more than 2,300 Chinese troops over the weekend and said bodies still lie rotting.

The Vietnamese Radio, in a commentary broadcast in Hanoi, said China has lost at least 20 infantry divisions in Vietnam in five army corps — "more divisions than the Americans put into the war in Vietnam."

Intelligence sources in Hanoi had estimated the Chinese forces at about 20 divisions, 170,000 to 200,000 men with half of them inside Vietnam.

The new Hanoi claims were broadcast on Saturday night in northern Vietnam and both the Soviet Union and United States stopped up their radio.

evacuated civilians in the first reported atrocity of the war. Japanese news reports from Hanoi said today.

In Peking, Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping told the Japanese Kyodo News Agency he expected the war would end in fewer than 20 days and he saw little chance of Soviet intervention.

But, Teng added, "We would not make that a bargaining condition." In China's own withdrawal timetable, Teng said Vietnam had to be "punished" for its invasion of Cambodia.

On one side in its sixth day today, and the Soviet Union reported their intention to Peking to stop the invasion "before it is too late." Teng also said he "whole-heartedly welcomed" a U.S. Security Council resolution calling for withdrawal of Chinese troops from Vietnam and Vietnamese troops from Cambodia.

At the United Nations, the Security Council, sponsored by Soviet bloc nations, adopted its resolution for immediate cease-fire in Cambodia and Vietnam, withdrawal of all Soviet troops from the two countries and suspension for a permanent peace in Indochina under U.S. auspices.

Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, in Peking on a trade mission, said China is the "transgressor" in the Vietnam war and warned that Peking's relations with Washington "will only flourish in a world of peace and stability."

Iran Nabs 4 Yanks 'Trying To Escape'

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Four Americans have been arrested near Abadan in Iran's southwestern oilfields "while trying to escape" and have been handed over to aides of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's Revolutionary Radio said today.

The radio said the Americans were working for a foreign company at Aghajari northeast of Abadan, Iran's chief refinery town, and "were arrested while trying to escape."

"They were handed over to Khomeini's staff by Islamic revolution fighters," the announcement said.

The announcement gave no further details and did not name the Americans.

The radio said the Americans had been arrested Sunday night. A U.S. embassy spokesman said the embassy had not been officially informed of any arrests.

for London this morning on a regular British Airways flight.

The government radio originally announced the Britons were being held for "misappropriating national funds," but diplomats indicated two are being questioned about the tanks on which they were giving instruction.

The British community in Iran has dwindled to about 1,000 and the American community to some 4,000 since the evacuation ordered after the assault on the embassy. There were once 41,000 Americans in Iran.

In Tehran Sunday, Khomeini said ousted Premier Shapur Bakhtiar has fled the nation, and revolutionary sources announced the formation of commando hunt squads to bring "criminals" back from abroad, including the ousted Shah.

Woodcock's confirmation vote has been held up by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., until he and other conservative senators are satisfied with language in a pending resolution establishing unofficial ties with Taiwan. They want stronger security assurances for the Nationalist Chinese.

located on two parcels just west of the sewer plant, according to Knowles.

The largest parcel is 8.4 acres and is owned by Warner Unlimited, Inc., Sanford. The other parcel, once the site of a land, is 4.1 acres.

The assessed valuation of the two pieces of land total $65,000, according to Knowles.

However, the owners are asking a combined price of $287,000, he said.

Knowles plans to ask the commission to designate himself and City Attorney C. Vernon Mize, Jr. to act in the city's behalf in trying to negotiate a better price for the land.

If negotiations break down, noted Knowles, the city may consider exercising its power of eminent domain to assume ownership of the land.

To sell any city land, the commission would have to declare land it owns "no longer a public necessity," said Moore. The city would then advertise the land for sale by public bid. The city would be able to accept the highest bid or, if no bid was acceptable to the commission, could reject all bids, according to Moore.

"I really don't know how much of the land we will be able to sell or put to other use," commented Knowles.

The commission tonight also was acquiring more land to facilitate the expansion of the city's sewer plant by the lakefront on U.S. 17-92.

"We need 10 to 12 acres of land to facilitate the expansion we will need for the regional sewer plant that will serve Lake Mary and north Seminole County," said Knowles.

SEN. TALMADGE

'DRIED OUT'

Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., said today "it was not easy" to overcome alcoholism but that he is ready to "take charge" again in his marathon race for reelection and to resume his Senate duties this week.

The 60-year-old Talmadge is expected to leave the Long Beach, Calif., clinic, where former First Lady Betty Ford dried out, Wednesday and return to Washington, where he will convene hearings of the Senate agriculture committee Monday and introduce some changes in Medicare and Medicaid for hearings Feb. 22.

introduced and another at the conclusion of his talk which was also sprinkled with applause from the audience.

But one person yelled out a demand that he talk about the Panama Canal.

Baker obliged, saying United States' rights at the canal will be determined by "whether we have the national resolve to enforce our rights. During time of war we have first rights over the Panama Canal. I know because I put those rights in the treaty with two amendments.

"Let's not have a face-off with Panama. If we must have a face-off, let's have it with someone who matters. If we take a strong role, the world will applaud us. Let's treat kindly small nations on the one hand and treat strongly large nations on the other," Baker said.

He urged Republicans to put "our best face forward. We must show the people we are better suited to sing their song for them than the Democratic Party which has brought us to this point of peril. Let's make the Republican Party in Florida the majority voice," he said.

Early in his speech Baker predicted 1980 will be the biggest year Republicans have ever seen in the state of Florida and all over the United States.

He said 1975, after the embarrassing Watergate incident of 1973, saw Republican officeholders in his state of Tennessee virtually wiped out. Before then, the party held the governorship, two U.S. Senate posts and controlled one house of the legislature. After Watergate, Republicans "were inundated with abuse," he said.

'National defense and foreign policy are too important not to be debated in the public arena'

He spoke in glowing terms of Congressman Richard Kelly who introduced him to the audience of Republicans who paid $50 each for the privilege of hearing the senator talk and attending a cocktail party prior to the banquet.

Baker said while Republican candidates were jockeying all across the nation, Central Florida chose Kelly, the only new Republican elected in the southeast U.S. in 1974.

"I'm pleased and proud to serve with Kelly," he said.

Baker said he comes from a "family of strong women," noting both his father and mother served in the Congress and his grandmother three earlier was elected sheriff.

"My grandmother is now 90 years old and a resident of Florida part of the time. She spends her time taking care of a 75-year-old daughter," he said.

$$-Sharing Fine With Governors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's governors overwhelmingly favor a balanced federal budget — but not at the expense of eliminating their $2.2 billion federal revenue sharing program as proposed by President Carter.

Carter campaigned on not renewing revenue sharing when it expires at the end of fiscal 1980, and a number of senators want it dropped by the end of the current fiscal year.

At the opening meeting of the National Governors' Association Sunday, the executive committee unanimously passed a resolution calling for the renewal of federal revenue sharing, while saying the states were willing to absorb "our fair share" of the cuts needed to balance the budget.

Earlier, Gov. Julian Carroll, D-Ky., told a news conference the states could live without revenue sharing.

"We could absorb the dollar loss," Carroll said. But he later wavered with the others asking that it be renewed.

"We believe revenue sharing is vital and should not be phased out," said Gov. Richard Snelling, R-Vt. "If you package some of the other grants and cut the paperwork you could easily save the $2.2 billion cost of revenue sharing."

Carter's tight federal budget and the attack on revenue sharing and other state aid programs promise to dominate the three-day governors' conference. But the state chief executives are not complaining too loudly of budget cuts because they are sensitive to studies that show state budget surpluses in the nation total $4.3 billion.

"We're willing to take our share of the cuts," said Gov. James Thompson, R-Ill. "When we went down to the White House, President Carter said we were the only group who had come in here and said we'd take our share of the cuts."

While the governors want a balanced federal budget, they don't want it done through the route of a proposed constitutional amendment requiring one.

A survey by United Press International showed 26 governors either are opposed to or leaning against a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget. Twenty favored it, one refused to comment and the remaining three did not respond to the survey.

The governors said the amendment would restrict the federal government too severely, even if provisions were allowed for deficit spending in case of war or other emergencies.

Some of the governors who favored it said they wanted it passed by Congress. They joined opponents of the budget proposal in saying they opposed a constitutional convention to write such amendments.

Those who said they feared a constitutional convention included governors from some of the 28 states where the legislature has called for such a convention. Thirty-five states must pass such a resolution before a convention can be forced.

Uniting Israel's Many Voices

Conciliatory statements by Israeli officials as peace talks with Egypt are renewed should be encouraging to a world hopeful for a resolution to the ancient conflicts in the Middle East.

Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman has announced a reduction in Israel's military budget of about 25 percent over the next 10 years, because, Weizman says, his government expects to sign a peace treaty with Egypt.

And Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan has indicated that the position of the Palestinian Liberation Organization must be a factor in reaching an agreement on administration of the West Bank of the Jordan River.

But neither Weizman nor Dayan speaks for the Israeli people, whose views range from "peace at any price" to the hard-line conviction that rejects all concessions to the Arab world.

Neither, in fact, speaks for the government of which they are a part — a government as fragmented as the populace it represents.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin promptly rebuked Dayan for his acknowledgment of an "organization of murderers that wants to destroy the state of Israel that kills Jews because they are Jews."

Weizman, according to columnist Joseph Kraft in an analysis in The New Yorker magazine, has described Israel as fearful of a "peace calamity," suggesting that the nation, which was born in strife and has survived in strife, may be unable to cope with the prospect of peace.

Despite President Carter's reluctance to assume a role in the negotiations at Camp David between Dayan and Egyptian officials, it seems apparent that the United States must exert its influence to implement the accords reached last fall by Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

The future of the West Bank as a Palestinian homeland remains the key issue in completing the treaty between Israel and Egypt.

The United States, as chief supplier of arms and economic support to Israel and as probable political protector of its eventual borders, has undeniable clout.

At the same time, recognizing Israeli suspicions, intensified by events in Iran, that U.S. support is not always firm, our participation must be restrained.

This meeting may be the last chance to reap the promise in Sadat's dramatic trip to Jerusalem more than a year ago.

As a possible Carter re-election bid nears, the president will be less willing to exert, and the Israelis less willing to respond to, the U.S. capacity for pressure.

The many voices must be united in the plea for peace.

The Invasion

Peking says its troops invaded Vietnam border areas to teach Vietnam a lesson — not to provoke its bigger neighbor by causing border incidents.

From here it seems more likely that Vietnam's friendship with Moscow, its expulsion of ethnic Chinese residents and its recent invasion of Cambodia caused the Chinese reaction.

This is a bloody and dangerous business. What will be the reaction of Soviet Russia — now trouble on the Russo-Chinese border?

A Russo-Chinese war is not unthinkable, and such a war involves a high risk of the use of nuclear weapons.

The United States condemned the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia and the Chinese invasion of Vietnam.

Such good our condemnation is likely to accomplish in either case.

The combatants are not greatly concerned about world public opinion.

About all we can hope for at this point is a quick withdrawal of the Chinese forces to their own border.

The lesson has been taught — as it was in the Himalayas along the Tibetan border with India in 1962.

China is not a good neighbor.

Congress Has Some Notorious Truants

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some members of Congress — although certainly not all — are notorious truants.

Their names Senate and House sessions with occasional displaying frequency and can be had by consulting the Congressional Record. In a research report printed late last year, pointed out that a law, dating back to 1866, allows Congress to dock the pay of its members.

The law provides that a day's pay be deducted for each day that a member or congressman is absent from the House — in 1866 and again in 1914 — and particularly in the Senate from 1866 to 1914.

The proposal was a rider to a bill hitting the salary of members of Congress and was approved, as the foundation notes, when "abandonment was pervasive."

The foundation found that the law was enforced in the House — in 1866 and again in 1914 — and particularly in the Senate from 1866 to 1914.

Attorney Tom Freeman, representing the Seminole County League of Civic Associations, struck out this week when attempting to sell the legislative delegation on a bill to create a local government study commission.

Freeman can list among his credits not only having been county attorney, but also formerly city attorney of Winter Springs and Lake Mary and assistant city attorney of Casselberry.

His presentation to the delegation appeared to be very good as he demanded that the legislators represent the views of the many thousands of homeowners belonging to the 29 member organizations of the league.

But toward the end of his presentation, Freeman said the county since its creation in 1913 has never cooperated with the cities of Seminole.

County Commission Chairman Bob French pointed out, however, the cities and the county, while not cooperating 100 percent, have in recent months joined together for a solid waste transfer and currently on a tax equalization-double taxation study through the Council of Local Governments in Seminole County.

county, could be interpreted to mean the delegation believes the officials elected by the people locally are not representing their constituents.

Vogt said accepting the bill would have the delegation saying a study of this sort is needed. Usually, Vogt said, a government study has a goal in mind, like consolidation.

Hattaway said the commission envisioned in the legislation would be a very powerful one and the proposed law would mandate city and county officials to turn over records to the members.

But the major objection to the legislation was to determine whether or not the league is in fact a political pressure group.

Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Longwood, a member of the league, said the biggest crowd he has ever seen at its meetings were at functions when political candidates were present.

Vogt, Rep. Bobby Hattaway, D-Altamonte Springs, and Brantley said accepting the legislation, without input from the cities and the Con Con: Caution Please!

WASHINGTON (NEA) — It may be a case of too little too late, but opponents of a constitutional amendment to require a balanced federal budget — including the White House — are finally beginning to mobilize.

The immediate objective is slow the stampede of state legislatures demanding that Congress call a constitutional convention to write a balanced-budget amendment.

At least 25 states, by most counts, have already petitioned Congress to call a "con con." If eight more join them, a convention theoretically must be called — although there is a good deal of dispute about the validity of some of the existing petitions.

President Carter has publicly opposed the amendment drive, but his White House staff is just now starting to seek ways of dissuading more state legislatures from acting.

Cabinet secretary Jack Watson, who is in charge of intergovernmental relations, and political aide Anne Wester, in charge of liaison with outside groups, are at the core of the staff group grappling with the problem.

"We haven't decided on a strategy yet," one White House source said. "We've got to be very careful in the negotiations. The president is opposing a balanced budget when he's been the foremost advocate of one for so long."

"This amendment business is hard to stop. It's a visceral thing. People don't want to be considered irresponsible and they don't want to see an amendment drive seriously. Now the momentum has built up to the point where it may be impossible to stop."

Technically, the president has absolutely no say in the constitutional amendment process. Only Congress and the state legislatures play a role. Yet both Carter and his wife have hesitated to use their moral influence on behalf of the Equal Rights Amendment, in some instances actually telephoning key legislators in states which have not yet ratified the ERA.

Moving Right Next Door

Some years back, well before the unraveling of such home-grown mysteries as Watergate made local reporting not only respectable but glamorous, a popular criticism of the American press was its alleged predilection for "afghanistanism."

This was defined by the critics, typically academically based, as a tendency of newspapers to focus editorial attention on far-away developments, overlooking matters of greater immediate concern occurring in their own front yards.

It still is, geographically. And as recent events all too vividly demonstrate, it still is a focus of press attention.

The murder of the American ambassador, which at first shock might have appeared a local concern in the eyes of the press in neighboring Iran, turned out to have no connection. Or maybe it does.

The fatal abduction was the work of conservative Moslems of the Shiite sect, opposing the pro-Soviet Afghan government which came to power in a bloody coup last April. The fact that the American rather than the Soviet ambassador was chosen as sacrificial victim for this local feud may say something about the relative prestige of the super powers even in a Soviet ally, but we certainly did not need to hear it this way.

The Shites, as we have been informed repeatedly in recent months, are dominant in Iran. Theirs is the revolution that toppled the Shah. They are the guerrilla opposition to the Soviet rule in the north of Afghanistan. So there is at least that connection.

Not many months ago, few Americans knew the difference between a Shiite and a bedouin, let alone a Sunni. Or cared. Many may still wonder why they should care in what way it matters to them.

It does. The chaos in that part of the Moslem world, however complex the origins and alien to American concepts it may be, has consequences that are as close to this country's immediate interests as the gas station at the corner. It is in the process of determining what the price of a gallon for American drivers may be in the very near future, and conceivably in the worst of scenarios even the availability of gas at any price.

No wonder, then, that details from these remote regions are dominating the pages of American newspapers. If this be "afghanistanism," however, it is not the once-criticized strips. The intermingling interests of the world's disparate peoples and cultures in recent decades has given it new meaning.

Algerians and Iran are still geographically distant. But when it comes to the impact of their turbulent affairs upon the concerns of Americans, they have moved in right next door.

In curtailing the supply of oil, the Iranian turmoil figuratively has pulled the rug out from under energy-addicted Americans.

It's also doing it literally to a well-to-do few of us. Until the revolutionary dust settles and the weavers go back to their looms, the supply of Persian rugs is expected to dwindle. Importers in major U.S. cities are reported expecting prices, already averaging well into the thousands of dollars per respectable rug, to zoom as competition develops for quality carpets.

Briefly

Law Of Averages Favors Wadkins, And He Triumphs

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The law of averages finally caught up with Lanny Wadkins on the 18th hole at the Riviera Country Club Sunday.

After bogeying the closing hole of the tough 7,029-yard layout for three straight days, the 29-year-old pro from North Carolina made a par and that was the margin of victory over Lon Hinkle in the $250,000 Los Angeles Open.

Blalock Defends Title

ST. PETERSBURG (UPI) — Defending champion Jane Blalock carried a three-shot lead into the rain-delayed final round of the $75,000 Orange Blossom Classic Sunday.

Blalock, seeking to become the first champion to successfully defend her title since Kathy Whitworth did it with three straight victories in 1968-70, had a 36-hole total of 9-under-par 135.

7-1 Cartwright Honored

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Bill Cartwright, the University of San Francisco's 7-foot-1 senior center, Sunday was selected as the West Coast Athletic Conference player of the week.

Cartwright collected 61 points in the Dons' weekend victories over Pepperdine and Loyola-Marymount. USF captured its third consecutive WCAC title.

He Who Runs Fastest...

WOODSTOCK, Vt. (UPI) — Tom Karrim of Burke Mountain Academy posted a combined two-run time of 90 seconds in the slalom Sunday to win the men's division of the Flak Trophy Race, the oldest continuous ski race in the nation.

Teammate Amy Bergstrom won the women's division with a combined time of 95.49 seconds through the steep 45-gate course at the Suicide Six ski area.

Whittier Hosts Tourney

WHITTIER, Calif. (UPI) — Whittier College hosted the NCAA Division III Western regional basketball playoffs this weekend, with the winner going to the finals.

Chaminade of Hawaii, 23-3, faces William Penn College of Iowa, 19-5, and Whittier, 15-11, faces Humboldt State of California, 18-7, Friday. The winners play Saturday at 9 p.m.

Braves Starters Uncertain

WEST PALM BEACH (UPI) — Aside from Phil Niekro and Larry McWilliams, it's too early to say who will be the starting pitchers for the Atlanta Braves, Manager Bobby Cox said Sunday, but he is encouraged by the prospects.

"All the pitchers' arms are healthy and I'm very pleased about that," Cox said following the second day of spring training. "Adrian Devine, Frank LaCorte and Rick Camp threw particularly well in batting practice today."

McArthur Top Wrestling Team

Hollywood McArthur wrestled the state high school wrestling meet last weekend at the Lyman High gym, placing three individuals in the finals and three others in the consolation bracket.

Lynwood McArthur and Lyman High were losers in preliminary rounds.

Is Salt Dangerous In Your Body Diet?

DEAR DR. LAMB - I know common salt can be dangerous and I have been reducing my use of it in cooking and on the table. However, what about sea salt? Is it dangerous, or would it be all right to use it? DEAR READER - Salt isn't necessarily dangerous. It depends upon whether or not you need it. If a person suffers from salt depletion, as a heavy laborer might with excessive sweating, then it might be useful to replace the body's normal salt content. We all have salt in our blood, and it is essential to our health. Without an adequate amount of it, we would go into chemical imbalance and die. Most people do use too much salt or certainly more than they need. There are a variety of medical problems, such as heart failure, that are associated with retention of fluid and are adversely affected by salt. Common salt, as we use it on the table, is sodium chloride. In that pure state, it has nothing else added. When pure salt is obtained from an area without anything else, trace amounts of iodine are added so people will not have iodine deficiencies. Impure salt may contain a variety of other elements besides iodine. That's true of sea salt. It is still sodium chloride, and if you had a medical condition that meant you should restrict salt intake, you certainly should not use it. If you're a normal, healthy person and want to use sea salt in reasonable amounts, then it should not harm you any more than the ordinary salt you buy at the grocery store. Don't expect any miracles from it because there are no real beneficial effects from sea salt that you should not be able to get from ordinary salt. To give you more information about problems with salt, I am sending you The Health Letter

Israel Nixes Parley

JERUSALEM (UPI) - The Israeli Cabinet today overwhelmingly decided to reject President Carter's invitation to Prime Minister Menachem Begin to attend a summit meeting this week because of a hardening of Egypt's position in the peace talks. Begin said he would be willing at any time to meet with Carter concerning relations between the United States and Israel. Begin said it was evident to the Cabinet that in the five days of ministerial level talks in Washington "no progress was made toward an Israeli-Egyptian agreement. On the contrary, a more extreme position was presented by the Egyptian delegation." The Cabinet voted 14-2 to reject the invitation temporarily because "it would be inappropriate for Begin to take part in the talks under the current conditions," the sources said. (In Washington, the White House delayed comment on Israel's refusal to send Begin to Camp David.) The sources said the Cabinet ministers were upset that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was not to participate in the meeting. The Cabinet decision was certain to anger Carter, who reportedly planned to convene the summit with Begin and Egyptian prime minister Mustafa Khalil as early as Thursday. Begin said Khalil insisted on the inclusion of the Egyptian proposal. "Under these circumstances, the Cabinet decided that the prime minister is not in a position to participate in the proposed meeting with Dr. Khalil," Begin said in a prepared statement. But the Cabinet left an opening for Begin to go to Washington immediately, if necessary, if Carter wanted to see him about its decision. "The prime minister is prepared at any time convenient to President Carter to leave for the United States to discuss matters related to the peace making process, original issues in the context of recent developments and questions concerning the bilateral relations between Israel and the United States," Begin said. He declined to answer reports.

COUNTY TRAFFIC AIDE MICHAEL REMON READIES SIGNS

POST-TIME! Fifty-two bus stop signs removed on the orders of the Sanford city manager will be back in place soon on the instructions of the city commission. The signs were taken down two weeks ago when City Manager Warren E. Knowles discovered a federal regulation he says prohibits the attachment of bus stops to highway signs. But the commission interpreted the law differently and overruled him. County Commissioner William Kirchhoff, who appeared before the city commission Monday asking the bus signs be allowed on the parking signs, said the measure would save taxpayers funds. "If we have to put up a separate pole for each bus stop sign when we may have a no parking sign at the same location, that will cost taxpayers more, because they will have to pay for a separate pole," said Kirchhoff. He also said bus stop signs are allowed on regulatory signs in Orange County. "That is not the law," responded Knowles. "The law says you cannot put a bus stop sign on a regulatory sign." "I would suggest that is not the law and that is only an interpretation," said Kirchhoff. Knowles said arrests for violating the provisions of the regulatory sign would be invalid if a bus stop sign was also attached to the same pole. "I think you're straining an ant to swallow a camel," quipped Mayor Lee P. Moore. Commissioner Eddie Keith agreed Knowles' objections seemed to be extraneous. "I can't see any reason we shouldn't put the signs up and leave them up until a court tells us to take them down," said Keith. Seminole County crews started putting up the signs Monday afternoon. The bus stop markers were paid for by Seminole County but placed on signs in Sanford right-of-way, thus giving Knowles the authority to remove them.

Todd Gets Transfer From Services Job; Health Reasons Cited

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County Director of Human Resources Troy Todd will take a "lower position" in county government March 13, but his "hard line" approach to social services will be maintained, according to County Administrator Roger Neiswender. Neiswender said Todd has asked for reassignment but Todd declined comment. "I don't know where you heard that," he said, prior to Neiswender's confirmation. "He has asked for reassignment because the pressure of the position has had an adverse effect on his health," Neiswender said today. "Todd feels he has accomplished what the county commission originally wanted accomplished in evaluating programs. The positions he has had to take hindered his effectiveness in dealing with personnel in operations," Neiswender said. "There are three or four vacancies in the system for which he may be considered. One of the areas initially discussed is in the manpower organization," Neiswender said. Despite Todd's departure, his "hardline" approach to social services is not likely to change, the county administrator said. "The board and I instructed Todd to dig into situations and give objective evaluations. He was not free lancing around at his own direction," Neiswender said. "The change in leadership will not mean the board is demoting financial and program responsibilities. The need for reasonable justification of programs and good sound management will continue. This will not change. Some times a hard line has been taken. The requirement that social agencies hard funds are properly administered and services actually delivered will remain. Some of the hard evaluations will continue. We are not interested in back-sliding in areas of accountability," Neiswender said. Since last summer, Todd has been at the center of two controversies. A poverty agency, Seminole Community Action, angrily charged Todd was insensitive to the needs of the poor and demanded his ouster. In August, the Seminole County Health Department medical director, Dr. Hamid Batilla, charged Todd with interfering with medical and social decisions affecting her department. She said he was not qualified to make medical decisions. Todd denied he was making medical decisions, but only

Sanford Joins Area Council To Plan For Growth Needs

By MAX ERKLETTAN Herald Staff Writer In an effort to anticipate future growth problems and have a voice in recommendations to the state and federal government, Sanford has decided to join the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council. The commission voted 4-1 to join the council, rejecting the opposition of Commissioner Julian Stenstrom and City Manager Warren E. Knowles. Both contended the city's participation was unnecessary and a waste of money. Stenstrom criticized the $2,500 initiation fee and $1,500 annual assessment and said the city does not need the services provided by the council. "I think we've gotten along pretty darn well without it," he said. Stenstrom said the city spends approximately $1,700 annually in dues and membership fees in various professional organizations for city administrators. Consequently, he said, he did not think membership in the planning council was necessary. However, other commissioners contended the commission would help Sanford anticipate future problems. "The regional planning council is making decisions that affect Central Florida and Sanford and those decisions are being made without our input, even though they affect Sanford," said Knowles. L.T. LYKENS

Lykens' request to the commission, "so there can be no question of fair treatment." Knowles suggested Lykens' request be denied, because it would mean the police department "would be operating unshowered for six months." Morris said he recommended the opposite, in consideration of Lykens' years of service in the police department.
