By IKE FLORES

Associated Press Writer MIAMI (AP) - Veterans of the Bay of Pigs invasion, commemmorating the 15th anniversary this weekend of that brief, disastrous struggle, do not believe this country's latest tough stance against Cuba's Fidel Castro will last.

So the 1,200 members of Brigade 2506, living in exile in the United States, want the John F. Kennedy Library to return their invasion flag, presented to Kennedy at a giant rally in Miami after the invaders were

They are angry at "the longterm American policy of giving In to Castre," despite a recent toughening of the U.S. stance because of the use of Cuban troops in Africa.

The flag-return campaign is the exiles' latest show of displeasure over what they view as the stubborn refusal of this country to help them overthrow "the Caribbean tyrant."

U.S. officials carefully steer clear of any debate on exile activities and views. The American government has ignored efforts by the Brigade and other Cuban exile groups to involve this country in any confrontation between exiles and Partly to overcome waning interest in the cause of Cuba. fading memories and the passage of time, leaders of the Association of Veterans of Assault Brigade 2506 conceived the idea of demanding the return of the symbolic invasion flag.

When the flag was presented to President Kennedy at the Orange Bowl in December 1962, following the return of the brigade from 20 months' imprisonment, Kennedy promised to return it to "its valiant defenders in a Cuba free from the tyranny of communism."

But Juan Perez Franco, president of the brigade association, says Kennedy and successive administrations have become increasingly complacent about the Castro regime. Directors of the Kennedy Library at first refused to return the brigade banner, saying it was government property. But after the group retained an ottorney, U. S. officials agreed to return the flag if a majority of

Bases In Turkey Vital To U.S.

Watching the initial reaction of Congress to the new Turkish base agreement negotiated in Washington was like watching an instant replay of Congress summarily cut off American military aid to Turkey last year in the mistaken assumption that it would make Turkey more flexible it negotiations with Greece over the future of Cyprus. It did not. Turkey retaliated immediately by evicting Americans from 25 strategic bases that defend a critical flank of the North American Treaty Organization and electronically monitor Soviet military activities.

When Congress partially lifted the arms ban last october, Turkey responded immediately by reopening negotiations over bases. Those negotiations culminated with the new agreement signed recently in Washington by Turkish Foreign Minister Ihsan Caylayangil and U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, It would return Americans to the bases and extend $1 billion in military aid to Ankara over the next four years.

Rep. William S. Broomfield, the ranking Republican on the House International Relations Committee, declared that "there is no way the Congress will approve massive aid to Turkey." To which Rep. Wayne Hays added, "I can tell you without doubt that unless progress is made in Cyprus, the agreement will have very rough sledding." Additionally, the pro-Greek lobby, which assisted in the mangling of U.S.-Turkish relations last year, is again gathering its forces in Cyprus does remain a troublesome problem and Turkey, which is holding 40 per cent of the island by military force, has not acted honorably on the matter. Also, progress is resolving the issue has conference between Greeks and Turks which began Feb. 17 in Vienna.

Nevertheless, to attempt to tie Turkish concessions in Cyprus to American aid to Turkey is folly. Last year's experience exhibits that it simply won't work. The United States would again get the worst of both worlds -- no movement in Cyprus and no NATO bases in Turkey.

The erosion from pursuing that policy already is evident. Over the last 30 years Turkey has been among the most loyal allies of the United States and the most militant of anti-Soviet nations. It has remembers Stalin's claims to the Dardanelles and eastern Anatolia after World War II.

Yet about three months ago, Turkey did the unthinkable by signing a treaty of friendship and cooperation with the Soviet Union.

Unless the Congress comes to its senses over Turkey, the United States will see a lot more Turkish drift to the detriment of the entire Western alliance and peace in the world.

A Fair Plan

Proposals by the Ford administration to ease federal estate and gift taxes acknowledge that a family's wealth generally is the product of joint endeavor.

Under recommendations now before Congress, transfer of assets between husband and wife, while both are living, would be excluded from gift taxes. Presently only one-half the value is

In addition, the tax exemption rate on estates would be raised over a five year period and installment-payment provisions for paying the tax would be made more generous. The interest rate for extended payment would be reduced. The estimated loss in tax revenue, according to Treasury

Department officials, would be about $1.6 billion annually. But taxpayers would enjoy a like savings and many small businesses and farms would be saved from liquidation brought

The plan recognizes the distinction between "ours" and "his" or "hers" in assessing the ownership of property and

The first instance of unkindness that made an mpression was in Europe. In 1966, I bought a Swedish car and drove it to a state inspection station, which is a requirement in Germany just like in Florida.

Being of foreign manufacture, the car's perating instructions were written in Swedish. And couldn't understand one word of what they said. WORLD IN BRIEF

Lebanon Fighting Continues, Despite PLA Truce Efforts

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Firing in the Beirut area slowed down for a while Wednesday night after armored units of the Palestine Liberation Army moved in to try to enforce the 35th cease-fire in Lebanon's year-long civil war. But the lull did not last through the night. Police sources reported clashes in the capital, in the mountains east of the city, in the central Bekaa valley in eastern Lebanon and in the northern part of the country.

Aid Discussion Slated

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger plans to meet with leaders of Rhodesia's black majority and to outline a stepped-up U.S. aid program during his trip to Africa to demonstrate American support for the aspirations of blacks throughout the continent. U.S. sources said the meeting with leaders of the African National Council - ANC - will take place next Monday or Tuesday when he stops in Zambia.
